West of the share line, all the land now comprised within Hanover bounds was in 1654 spoken of in the Colony Records as being "out of the bounds of any township," and was that year granted by the Colony Court to Mr. Timothy Hatherly "to satisfy the partners at Conihasset," "sundry contentions and entanglements between Mr. Timothy Hatherly and some of the Inhabitants of Scituate" having arisen.

In 1656 the grant was given more definite bounds, as follows: "A tract of land to begin at Accord Pond on the southerly side, and to run three miles southerly towards Indian Head River Pond, and to be laid out three miles square on the west line of Scituate." Later, in 1671, to avoid running the north line across the colony line, the court ordered it to be run from the south side of the pond so far south of west as to avoid the patent line, as the line dividing the two colonies was then and is now called. This tract was divided into forty parts, twenty-seven of which were assigned to the "Conihasset Partners." In 1663, Mr. Hatherly repurchased ten shares, and then sold twenty-three shares for sixty-nine pounds to John Jacob, Edward Wilder, John Thaxter, and Matthew Cushing, of Hingham, and John Otis, of Scituate, who already owned seven and one-half shares. The remaining shares belonged to Thomas Andrews and others. A division was made in 1672 by these parties among themselves. The entire grant was divided into eastern, western, and middle shares by lines drawn parallel to the share line.

The eastern lot was two hundred and forty rods wide, and was assigned to Jacob & Co. In 1699 it was divided by east and west parallel lines into lots to hold in severalty. The southerly end was thus divided into five lots, each sixty-four rods wide, and the northerly end into five lots, each one hundred and twenty-eight rods wide. These divisions were called the "Drinkwater shares," before spoken of, probably from the stream running through them, which at its junction with the Indian Head is now sometimes called the Drinkwater River.

The middle division was divided by north and south lines, as Hobart supposes, to give each owner a portion of cedar swamp. These lots were called the small shares. The present limits of Hanover included all the Drinkwater shares and also a part of the small shares.

Immediately south of this grant to Hatherly two hundred acres of land west of the share line was granted, in 1665, to Cornet Robert Stetson, of Scituate. In 1667 it was laid out and bounded "on the east by the line of the Town of Scituate until it crosses a deep, still brook, and so again from the town's line, as Mr. Hatherly's land runs, westerly, until it crosses the said brook there again, with all the spots and holes of meadow that are within said bounds." Just south of this grant, in 1671, the Colony Court confirmed a sale made by their agents, Josiah Winslow and Constant Southworth, to Joseph Barstow and Joseph Sylvester. This grant is described as "a parcel of upland, be it more or less, lying and being on the westward side of Scituate bounds, and is bounded on the north with the bound-tree of Cornet Stetson, which is marked R. S., and the rocks by the brook that bounds the Cornet's land, and so ranging southerly until it meets with three black-oak trees and one stump marked J. B. J. S., and from thence west to the utmost extent of the land purchased by Cornet Stetson, and from the three trees southeast to the brook, only there is excepted out of the aforesaid sale fifty acres contained within the aforesaid bounds granted by the Court to William Barstow, deceased, for services done for the country."

Lying to the south of this latter tract was the land sold in 1671 to Joseph Barstow and Moses and Aaron Simmons, of Scituate, for the sum of eight pounds, "a parcel of upland, more or less, lying and being on the westward side of Scituate town bounds, and bounded north with the lands of Joseph Sylvester and Joseph Barstow, extending itself southerly to the utmost extent of the purchase made by Cornet Robert Stetson for the use of the Colony, and westerly to the utmost extent of said purchase." In another place this is described as running south from Barstow's other land on the west line of Scituate one mile and a half. The southeast corner of this grant is supposed to have stood near the lower tack-factory on Indian Head River, in Hanson.

Incorporation.—The earliest settlements made in Scituate were made near the shore and in the vicinity of the harbor. Later the attractions of the good lands near North River drew settlers up its course. The power furnished by the waters of the Indian Head and Drinkwater Rivers lured settlers farther and farther into the forest. Probably the earliest settlements in Hanover were therefore made at the "Corners." In 1704 to 1710 we find forges erected on the Indian Head. Gradually the population spread northwest, following at first the course of the Third Herring Brook, also a valuable stream for the power it gave, and then spreading backward into the interior. In 1727, the year of the incorporation, we find within the Hanover limits about three hundred souls.

At this time the colony law provided for a regular tax upon each and every tax-payer for the support of the ministry and the church. This tax was levied upon all, whether attendants upon church, or, as they would have said, "meeting-goers," or not. The burden of traveling so far to reach the meeting, for the support of which they paid their taxes, was so great that this probably as much as any other thing brought the settlers of this town to petition the General Court to establish a new town.

Scituate, from whose territory the greater portion of the town was carved, made no opposition, but Abington strove valiantly against losing the little strip of territory which before that time had belonged to her. They feared they would miss the taxes which the new town would now contribute to the support of a minister and church of their own. Their fears were well-grounded, for in the act of incorporation it is stipulated as a condition that the inhabitants of the said town of Hanover "do, within the space of two years from the publication of this act, erect and finish a suitable house for the Public Worship of God, and as soon as may be procure and settle a learned Orthodox Minister of good conversation, and make provision for his comfortable and honorable support, and that thereupon they be discharged from any further payment for the maintenance of the ministry, &c., in the towns of Scituate or Abington for any estate lying within the said town of Hanover."

Accordingly, in September, 1726, Lieut. William Reed, Matthew Pratt, Edward Bates, and Samuel Noyes were chosen "to draw up objections in answer to the Drinkwater people's petition to draw off from them." This remonstrance, presented the following spring, assigned as reasons for opposing the new town's incorporation,—

"1. Because of the fewness of our families in number, which is but about fifty-three, including the eight desiring to be set off; and of these five are newly married, and have neither house nor home but as they sojourn under the roof of others; and of the rest six are widows whose husbands have of late deceased, leaving their families much broken, and under low circumstances, which nineteen, taken from fifty-three, leaves but thirty-four, and even of these some are so poor that they are left out of the rates, and have need of support from the town, so that there will be but thirty families left to bear the public charges.

"2. The part of the town petitioning to be set off contains eleven polls and above one-fifth the ratable estate, and although there will still be left to Abington a considerable tract of land, yet but little part of it is capable of settlement except the easterly part, which is chiefly in gentlemen proprietors' hands who do neither sell nor settle their lands, they living in other towns and improving the same only as timber lots, and the inhabitants petitioning to be set off dwell on the easterly part of those great lots which run westerly nearly to the centre of Abington, which will hence be exempt from taxation here for the support of the ministry.

"3. That the eight petitioners for the separation, viz., Elijah Cushing, Jeremiah Hatch, Nathaniel Davis, Joseph Bryant, Nehemiah Cushing, Benjamin Loring, and Isaac Hatch, though they urged their distance from public worship, were but four miles from the meeting-house, and that if it was objected that the way was difficult and impassable, yet several responsible men had offered to make it good and passable for man and horse for £5 charge."

In the light of the present comparative sizes of the towns of Hanover and Abington, this remonstrance is a curiosity. To meet so pitiable an appeal the General Court appointed a committee to visit the territory in dispute. They reported in favor of the petitioners and against the remonstrants. But their representation of the unfortunate condition of Abington as to its taxable estate produced an act relieving the town of Abington by providing that all lands of non-residents lying within the limits of Abington should be liable for three years to a tax for the support of the ministry of one half-penny per acre. The Legislature also granted them a tract of land lying northeast of what is commonly called Waldo's farm.

The new town thus incorporated chose for its first town clerk William Witherell, who lived at the Four Corners.

CHAPTER II.

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

The Early Church—The Second Congregational Church—The Catholic Chapel—St. Andrew's Church—The Baptist Society—The Universalist Society.

IN the act incorporating the town we have already seen that the Legislature inserted a proviso that the inhabitants of the said town of Hanover do, within the space of two years from the publication of this act, erect and finish a suitable house for the public worship of God, and as soon as may be procure and settle a learned Orthodox minister. This was in strict accord with the prevailing ideas of the time when Church and State were hardly separated. The town was not slow to take action under this proviso. The publication of this act is dated July 11, 1727, and we find on record, July 17, 1727, that "Mr. Daniel Dwight was chosen to dispense the word of God for three months," and the sum of £7 19s. was appropriated to recompense him for this service. The meetings were held near the centre of the town, in some citizen's home, that of Mr. Samuel Stetson being first used, until in November of the year 1727 it was voted to erect a "meeting-house," these strict old Calvinists scorning to use the word "church," as savoring too much of the English Church ideas.

The building committee, Elijah Cushing, Joseph House, and Abner Dwelley, were instructed to build a house as cheaply as possible, and its dimensions were to be, length forty-eight feet, width thirty-eight feet, and height between joints nineteen feet, to be completed by Oct. 1, 1728.

Then came the momentous question of defraying the expense. The house when completed cost about three hundred pounds. It had neither steeple nor bell. The gable-roof shut down over a double row of small windows with diamond-shaped glass, probably set in lead. No fire ever occasioned the need of a chimney, and no plastering raised the question of whether frescoed or plain walls were better for true worship. There are now people living who remember the first introduction of stoves in church. They were objected to on the ground that they would occasion headache and drowsiness. The ladies of the congregation sometimes carried little tin boxes filled with glowing coals called foot-stoves or foot-warmers, but the greater part of the congregation were warmed only by their zeal. In this edifice, with its huge hardwood timbers creaking as the winter winds whistled through the edifice, sat the people of the congregation and listened to the preached word for nearly forty years, until its place was supplied by a more pretentious edifice upon the same spot in 1765.

I have spoken of the struggle necessary to raise the funds to build this church. At that time the circulating medium was scarce. Much of the trade between neighbors was conducted by barter, and but little money passed. Thus we find many people contributing lumber for the church; Thomas Buck gave the land; others gave other lands, which, the town owning the church, were surveyed off to the town and afterward sold. The parent town of Scituate having made no objection to the incorporation of this offshoot town, no hesitation was felt in asking aid from the old town, and with some success. Ninety pounds were subscribed, of which £66 1s. 6d. were collected. Besides these funds, lands in old Scituate were given by several residents of that town.

But little idea of the great labor necessary to build such an edifice can be formed by us of the present age. Every timber was hewn, and, with the boards and shingles and all other lumber entering into the building of the meeting-house, grew probably within the town limits. No commodious harbor near by received loads of lumber of all dimensions from the district of Maine or elsewhere. No factory with its hundred machines, spitting forth tons of nails, was anywhere in existence. Every nail in the church was hammered out by hand by some pious blacksmith. All the fine beading and moulding of the pulpit and the sounding-board were made on the spot. Surely a year was little time enough for the most skillful handlers of the broadaxe and the most cunning manipulators of the rabbit-plane to do this work.

At last the meeting-house was completed. Rev. Benjamin Bass, the first settled minister of Hanover, at a salary of one hundred and thirty pounds per annum, after the rate of silver money at sixteen shillings per ounce, was to be ordained. He was a graduate of Harvard College in 1715, and was at this time settled in what is now Quincy. After a day of fasting and prayer (December 4th), on the 11th day of December, 1728, "Benjamin Bass, A.M., was by prayer and fasting, with imposition of the hands of the Presbytery, ordained a pastor of the church. The Rev. Mr. Eells, of Scituate, Mr. Lewis, of Pembroke, Messrs. Hobart and Gay, of Hingham, and Mr. Checkley, of Boston, laid on hands; Mr. Gay began with prayer; Mr. Checkley preached; Mr. Eells gave the charge, and Mr. Lewis the right hand of fellowship."

The ministry of Mr. Bass was terminated only by his death, which occurred on May 23, 1756, and he, like several of his successors, lies buried in the Centre Cemetery. His ministry was uneventful. His successor, Rev. Samuel Baldwin, whose sister was wife of Col. Oliver Prescott, of Revolutionary fame, was offered as an inducement to settle, after he had rejected one or two offers, eighty pounds lawful money, and "to build him a dwelling house forty feet long, thirty feet wide, and seventeen feet between joints, with two stacks of chimneys, a plain roof, with a suitable number of windows with crown glass, and to be painted inside and outside such a color or colors as shall be agreeable to his mind; and to build and finish under the house a cellar thirty feet long and fourteen feet wide, pointed, etc.; and everything both inside and outside, both wood work, iron work, and joiners' work, with two Bofatts, and as many closets in said house as may be convenient, are to be done to the turning of a key, and to be under-pinned in a suitable manner to the acceptance of the said Mr. Baldwin." This offer he accepted, and he was ordained Dec. 1, 1756. His ministry was successful, filling the house every Sunday. His labors were interrupted by the Revolutionary war, which interfered with the payment of his salary to such an extent that in 1779 he asked a dismissal, which was granted. He had been with the society twenty-three years, three months, and three days, had added one hundred and seven persons to the church, and baptized six hundred and thirty-two. He was a zealous patriot, and a chaplain in the Revolutionary army. His utterances were fervid and eloquent. His mind was clouded by "partial derangement" during four years previous to his decease, which occurred at his house in Hanover, Dec. 1, 1784. This house still stands near the Centre, on Hanover Street, in a fine state of preservation.

The next settled minister over this parish was Rev. John Mellen, of Sterling, Mass. He was settled Feb. 11, 1784, and his ministry terminated in 1805. His ministry was marked by much of an eventful character. His opinions were subject to much comment in his society, undoubtedly leaning strongly toward Arminianism. For these opinions, declared in his sermons (several volumes of which were printed) and less formally in his conversations, he was brought before a council in 1773, but was acquitted. He seems to have been a man who left his mark upon his time. He is spoken of as being "liberally endowed by nature with a strong and energetic mind, which was highly improved by diligent and successful cultivation." He was much beloved by his parishioners generally, being of a sociable disposition, a pleasant, genial, companionable man, with a zealous, ardent temper in whatever he undertook. His son Prentiss was United States Senator from Maine.

On the 23d of July, 1806, Rev. Calvin Chaddock, remembered even to this day as "Parson Chaddock," was settled over this society. Here he remained for twelve years, a portion of the time eking out his salary by officiating as principal of the Hanover Academy, which was established by him during his residence here. Rev. Seth Chapin, the sixth pastor, was settled in 1819, and went away in 1824.

The seventh pastor, Rev. Ethan Smith, remained here but five years, and was followed by the Rev. Abel G. Duncan, who was installed Aug. 22, 1833. He represented the town for six years in the Legislature.

His successor was Rev. Joseph Freeman, who has recently died in York, Me. His ministry extended from April 18, 1855, to July 25, 1869. He was for several years, like Mr. Duncan, one of the school committee of the town, and was the last settled pastor, his successors not having been regularly installed, but serving merely as acting pastors.

Mr. Freeman was followed, in June, 1872, by Rev. Cyrus Williams Allen, who closed a ministry of seven years in East Jaffrey, N. H., to settle in Hanover. He was a son of John and Betsey (Crossman) Allen, and was born at Taunton, Mass., Oct. 28, 1806. He graduated from Brown University, in 1826, at the early age of nineteen, having entered college in the Sophomore class. Three years later he graduated from Andover Theological Seminary, and at once entered upon the duties of his chosen profession by going as a missionary to Illinois and Missouri as agent for the American Tract Society. The region he traversed (mostly on horseback) was then an almost trackless wilderness. Here he passed five years of his young life, devoting himself heart and soul to the duties which met him. Upon his return he was settled for seven years at Norton, Mass., and was for ten years one of the trustees of the Wheaton Female Seminary located at that place. His changes were then as follows: Pelham, N. H., for four years; Coleraine, Mass., for three years; Hubbardston, Mass., eight years; East Jaffrey, N. H., seven years; Hanover, Mass., for a little over eight years. During his Hanover pastorate nineteen united with the church. He married (June 6, 1837) Mary, a daughter of Gideon and Eunice (Macy) Folger, of Nantucket, a most estimable lady of great strength of character, who has been in truth a helpmate through their long wedded life. She is connected by blood with all the leading people on the island of Nantucket, that little "nursery of giant men" and women.

They have had eight children, four of whom are now living, viz.: Dr. George O. Allen and Henry F. Allen, both of West Rockbury, Mass.; Mary Abby, wife of George F. Sylvester, of Hanover; and Fanny Florence, wife of John F. Simmons, Esq., of Hanover.

Mr. Allen's life was a constant sermon. His most distinguishing characteristics were his very self-sacrificing disposition, his great love of children, and deep and all-abiding fervor in his chosen profession. His sermons were always strong and logical, and were delivered with a plain yet forceful simplicity, as if scorning any adventitious aid of fine oratorical or rhetorical effects.

He died of apoplexy, at his son's residence at West Roxbury, Mass., April 11, 1882, in the seventy-sixth year of his age, and lies at rest in the cemetery at Centre Hanover, where a very appropriate marble tablet marks his grave.

The successor of Mr. Allen, Rev. William H. Dowden, preached to this society but a short time. His ministry was marked by a great increase in the material prosperity of the society. Under his direction, and largely by his inspiration, a society of home-workers was formed, and they with others, aided largely by contributions, fairs, entertainments of all kinds, and other well-directed efforts, succeeded in painting the church, both inside and out, frescoing the interior, getting a new pulpit and new organ, and all without getting into debt.

The present incumbent of the preacher's desk is Rev. Samuel E. Evans, who was ordained to the ministry in 1867.

Some of the entries upon the old records of this church seem to be of interest. For example, this one of May 7, 1742: "The church took a vote to see if the society would sing in the new way, and it passed in the affirmative, nem. con. Then being desired to bring in their votes for a Tuner, Mr. Ezekiel Turner was chosen by a considerable majority." This marks the end of the old way of congregational singing, wherein the deacon read each line before it was sung, pitching the tune himself.

Another entry, Oct. 21, 1805, "Voted to repair the base viol," shows that still greater innovations on old practices had occurred.

The present building is the fourth church which has stood upon the same spot. The first has already been described. The second was built in 1764 or 1765. During Mr. Baldwin's ministry it was designed to cut the old church in two and put in a piece, but this plan was reconsidered, and a new church, sixty-two by forty-three feet, and twenty-two feet between joints, was built, with a steeple. Like the first church this building faced south, and on the east side the women's porch, and on the west the men's porch extended to the eaves. The men's porch was surmounted by a tapering spire and weather-vane, which were both removed when in 1784 a bell was placed in the front steeple.

During or just preceding Mr. Smith's ministry this second meeting-house gave place to a third of smaller dimensions, which faced to the east. Directly in its rear, within about six feet of the wall, stood the town hall, facing south. In 1861 a fire destroyed both town house and church. The present church edifice was immediately erected. It returned to the old style and faced south, and a vestry upon the ground floor, with furnaces for heating the building, were for the first time introduced.

Second Congregational Church.—The Second Congregational Church at Hanover was originally one with the Congregational Church situated at the centre of the town. A few persons believed it would be an accommodation to the inhabitants of Hanover, South Scituate, and adjoining towns to have a Congregational Society formed whose place of public worship should be near the Four Corners. Accordingly, March 10, 1854, thirty-two members (thirteen gentlemen and nineteen ladies) were dismissed by the First Church to be organized as a religious society or parish by the name of the Second Congregational Society in Hanover.

In the year 1854 the voters of the church petitioned Alexander Wood, Esq., one of the justices of the peace for the county of Plymouth, that a warrant be given them to warn the qualified voters to meet in their new meeting-house, lately erected on Back Street, for the purpose of choosing the necessary officers, and also to determine a way of calling parish meetings in the future. The warrant having been granted, the church took measures to procure a pastor. At a legal meeting in July of the same year thirteen new members were admitted to the church, and the church and parish united in extending a call to Rev. William Chapman to become their pastor. He accepted, and remained one year, resigning on account of ill health. The salary paid at that time was nearly eight hundred dollars. After his withdrawal, Rev. Joel Mann, of Kingston, R. I., accepted a call from the church, remaining from 1857 to November of the next year, at a salary of six hundred dollars. Mr. Mann has just died in New Haven, Conn., at the advanced age of ninety-nine years.

The church then voted that Rev. James Aiken should fill the vacancy, and he was installed as pastor on the 16th of July, 1859. During his pastorate four new members were admitted into the church. Mr. Aiken was a man greatly beloved by the people during his pastorate of twelve years.

He was succeeded by Rev. F. D. P. Stone, whose labors with the church began in October, 1873, and continued until October, 1875. Besides his duties as a clergyman, he was also principal of Hanover Academy while he remained in Hanover.

The Rev. Henry Perkins was next invited by the church to serve them as their minister. He accepted the call, occupying the pulpit from Jan. 1, 1876, to 1878.

After his removal the church had no settled pastor, but the pulpit was supplied by Rev. E. Porter Dyer, of South Abington. Mr. Dyer remained three years, when he was compelled to resign by sickness. His death took place recently at his home in South Abington.

After Mr. Dyer's resignation a call was extended to Rev. J. W. Brownville, who is the present pastor.

Catholic Chapel.—Nearly opposite one end of Spring Street, on Broadway, stands the "Chapel of our Lady of the Sacred Heart," the first Roman Catholic Church edifice in town. For twelve years or more monthly services of the Roman Catholic Church had been holden in this vicinity by the Reverend Fathers of St. Bridget's Church at Abington,—first at the house of Mr. John Bannican, in Pembroke, and later at Mr. Solomon Russell's house, near the rubber-works, in Hanover. In 1879, Rev. William P. McQuaid succeeded in purchasing this site and erecting this little chapel, where twice a month about one hundred Roman Catholics assemble in worship. The chapel is a plain building with a small steeple or cupola on the north or front end, and was built by Rawson & Higgins from plans made by J. H. Besarick. It is now a part of the parish of Rockland, and is under the charge of Rev. John B. Tiernay, of the Church of the Holy Family.

St. Andrew's Church.—This, the first Protestant Episcopal Church in Massachusetts to be consecrated by Bishop Griswold, and called St. Andrew's Church, was built in 1811, at a cost of about five thousand dollars. As the outcome of difficulties in the First Congregational Church in Hanover, some of its members left and joined St. Andrew's Church, the society then worshipping in its first church, which was located at Church Hill, in South Scituate. These newcomers desired a church in a location more convenient to them. Accordingly, it was voted, April 24, 1810, "that the Society are willing to attend public worship in Hanover, provided individuals will build a new church in said Hanover." The new church the second in which this society had worshiped, was built, and the society moved. This church edifice since 1811 has been twice remodeled. Once the spire was changed, and recently, after a new chance and other interior improvements had just been completed, a stroke of lightning burned and demolished the spire so much that a new one has been again erected. The present structure at the Four Corner is a good specimen of the church architecture of colonial times.

The records of this church previous to 1780 are lost. Enough is gained from the careful and scholarly "Historical Address," delivered at a service memorial of St. Andrew's Church, Scituate, Sept. 1, A.D. 1882, by the Rev. William Henry Brook S.T.D. (its present rector), to enable us to give with sufficient fullness the details of its earlier history.

Originally this church was attended by the fe

Church of England people in all the neighboring towns. Its services were conducted by missionaries of the "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," the oldest missionary society in the world, having received its charter June 16, 1701, from King William the Third of England.

Its first edifice was situated, as above stated, at Church Hill, and was opened Oct. 11, 1731, the Rev. Ebenezer Miller, S.T.D., officiating, and on that day baptizing eight children. It was a small wooden building, with a low spire and bell, and would accommodate about one hundred and fifty people. The three windows, with diamond glass on each side, were shaped at the top like a Gothic arch.

Dr. Miller was not the first missionary from this old society to officiate at the services of this church. As early as July 28, 1725, Rev. Dr. Cutler, at the request of several of the inhabitants of the town of Scituate, conducted divine service in the Episcopal form in the North meeting-house in Scituate, near the harbor. This service, attended by some ninety persons, created no small stir among the good Congregationalists of the colony. It was even noticed in the Boston News-Letter, as "showing the doctor's fervent zeal and indefatigable pains to make proselytes to the cause, and promote ceremonies by destroying substantialists in religion."

Dr. Miller died Sept. 11, 1763, having lived to see this society at Scituate for many years under a pastor of its own. The first settled minister was Rev. Ad-dington Davenport. He also was a missionary, sent out at a salary of sixty pounds per annum by this same Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. He must have been established here about 1733, and remained here about three years.

During Mr. Davenport's ministry the feeling of the colonists ran high against this form of worship. The government was in the hands of the Congregationalists. The greater portion by far of the inhabitants hereabout was decidedly opposed to the church, and at the end of Mr. Davenport's residence he states that there were but three recipients of the holy communion.

One of the greatest sources of trouble to the Episcopalians was the church taxes, which all were obliged by law to pay, regardless of their religious belief. Episcopalians were thus taxed to help support other churches. Frequent arrests of Episcopalians are noted for non-payment of this tax, followed in some cases by imprisonment. Later a yearly rebate of these taxes was made to Episcopalians.

Mr. Davenport's interest in this society was so strong that on his decease he gave to the "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," in trust forever, for the use of the ministers of St. Andrew's Church in Scituate, his residence here, consisting of seven acres of land, with dwelling-house, barn, and other buildings thereon. By authority of the Legislature this land was sold in 1817, and the sum of $466.69 was realized therefor. This fund was added to a fund for the support of religious worship in the Episcopal society of St. Andrew in Hanover, and was also increased by $183.82, realized by the sale of the old church building. This fund was then sold for $1274.20. Additional gifts of $1315.70 increased it to $2589.90, which was used in building a rectory, which was first occupied in 1849 (July 13th). This rectory is a plain, substantial dwelling-house, and is situated on the southwest side of Washington Street, in Hanover, nearly opposite the junction of Back Street.

Mr. Davenport's successors were as follows: Charles Brockwell, 1737; Ebenezer Thompson, 1762-75; Edward Winslow, 1775-76; Samuel Parker, 1780-83; William Willard Wheeler, 1783-1810.

During Mr. Thompson's ministry here the church edifice was enlarged. "It is said," in a letter from Henry Caner, D.D., to the secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, "that the death of the Society's faithful and very worthy Missionary, Mr. Thompson, of Scituate, was owing partly to bodily disorder, and partly to some uncivil treatment from the rebels in his neighborhood."

These were troublous times for the Church of England people in the colonies. Their litany taught them to pray morning and evening for the king and the royal family. The "rebels" were in a vast majority in this neighborhood. Feelings which prompted the colonists to such tremendous sacrifices as were endured by them in defending their rights and liberties, could not brook open sympathy with their arch oppressor. It is not, therefore, strange that the ministers who did not yield, and the people of their flocks who still maintained their adherence to the crown, should have been derided and persecuted. This all-controlling passion of patriotism is enough to explain the conduct of colonists toward their opponents in their midst.

The rectors of this parish since the removal of its church to Hanover, in 1811, were Joab G. Cooper, 1811-16; Calvin Wolcott, 1818-34; Samuel G. Appleton, 1835-38; Eleazer A. Greenleaf, 1839-41; Samuel Cutler, 1841-72 (this was Mr. Cutler's only pastorate,—he died July 17, 1880); William H. Brooks, 1872, who is its present rector.

Dr. Brooks came to Hanover April 14, 1872, from Webster, Mass. He graduated at the Theological Seminary of Virginia in 1852, and has since received the honorary degree of "S.T.D." His various charges have been in their order at Newark, Del., Lenox, Mass., Brockport, N. Y., Plymouth, Mass., Oxford, Mass., Webster, Mass., and Hanover. The latter has been his longest pastorate. He is highly respected and much beloved in his parish. He is deeply interested in matters historical pertaining to the church. His researches have succeeded in bringing to light one interesting document which illustrates the truth of the old adage we used to see in our copy-books, "Times change and men change with them." It is a subscription-paper, with a long list of names, the "sums set against" which are for the purpose of purchasing lottery tickets, the proceeds of which, if fortunate, are to go towards the support of the Gospel in St. Andrew's parish. Under Dr. Brooks St. Andrew's is flourishing, and is slowly but steadily gaining in numbers and strength.

The Baptist Society.—The Baptist is the only society in town still worshiping in its original church edifice. On Main Street, facing Walnut Street, stands this building. It was raised and a vestry placed under it in 1859, but has undergone no other substantial changes since it was built, in 1812. This is the First Baptist Church in Hanover. It is an offshoot of the Baptist society in Marshfield, and is now prosperous. The date of its establishment as a separate organization is 1806 (February 11th). Its first pastor was Rev. Barnabas Perkins. The list of its pastors is as follows after Mr. Perkins: William Curtis, 1807–9; John Butler, 1810–24. From 1824 to 1833 the church had no settled minister for much of the time. Darius Dunbar, 1833–35; Robert B. Dickie, 1834–36; Horace Seaver, 1836–38; Nathan Stetson, 1839–40; Thomas Conant, 1840–42; Nathan Chapman, 1845–46; B. N. Harris, 1846–49; William N. Slason, 1849–53; Caleb Benson, 1853–54; Thomas Conant, 1854–56; J. M. Mace, 1856–57; Jacob Tuck, 1857–61; W. H. Stewart, 1861–63 (entered the United States service as chaplain); Andrew Read, 1863–82; C. D. Swett, 1882–84.

In the minutes of the Old Colony Association of 1859, it is recorded of this church that it "has remodeled its house of worship by building underneath it a vestry and other commodious rooms, and has otherwise improved the whole structure." In 1867 a pipe organ was placed in the church. The spire was raised to the improvement of the building's architectural appearance.

Rev. Andrew Read's pastorate of nearly twenty years demands more than a passing notice, if for no other reason than its long continuance in the midst of so many of short duration. During his residence here he identified himself with the interests of the town in many ways, among others serving for many years on the school committee. One of his children (Grace) was for several years a faithful and efficient teacher in her own district, and was a girl of much intellectual ambition and activity.

Universalist Society.—The church of the Universalist society is situated about two rods northerly of the northerly line of the town in Assinippi village. While this edifice is outside of the town limits, so many of the society reside in Hanover that it is thought best to insert some history of this church here.

Its present, is its second church building upon this spot. It has been built a little more than half a century. During that time its interior has been remodeled. The pulpit was lowered, and a more modern one substituted. Its singers' seats also were lowered, and a fine organ added. Its pews were newly painted, and the entire interior handsomely frescoed. It stands upon an eminence, back some distance from Washington Street. Here stood also the old church. It had no steeple, and no plastering. Its interior was not warmed by a stove for many years. A gallery surrounded three sides of it, and its pulpit was large and lofty. The seats in the gallery were mere benches, while pews filled the floor. The roof pitched east and west. The front porch extended from the ground to the roof. Midway on each side of the building was a doorway. Here were often heard the voices of the old apostles of Universalism, Hosea Ballou and John Murray.

This society, one of the first of this denomination to be established in the county, did not enter upon its existence without a struggle. Its first petition to be set off as a separate parish came from the inhabitants of the northerly part of Hanover. This petition was renewed in 1767, and the town of Scituate opposed it by a committee especially chosen for the purpose. The petition was again presented unsuccessfully in 1771 and 1796, and it was not until 1812 that it was granted. The act of incorporation is dated June 18, 1812, and the members of the society whose names appear therein are Enoch Collamore, Peleg Simmons, Jr., Josiah Witherell, Seth Stoddard, Samuel Simmons, George Litchfield, John Jones, Elisha Gross, Reuben Sutton, Theophilus Corthell, Edward F. Jacobs, Elisha Barrell, Loring Jacobs, Elisha Barrell, Jr., Ichabod R. Jacobs, John Jones, Jr., Calvin Wilder, James H. Jacobs, Charles Totman, Charles Jones, Isaac N. Damon, Joshua Bowker, James Jacobs, Abel Sylvester, Stephen Jacobs, Charles Simmons, William Hyland, David Turner, Samuel Randall, Jr., Joshua Damon, Samuel Randall, Ebenezer Totman, Jonathan Turner, Enoch Collamore, Jr., Benjamin Bowker, John Gross, Edward Curtis.

Its ministers have been David Pickering, Samuel Baker, Abner Kneeland, Elias Smith, Joshua Flagg, Benjamin Whittemore, Robert L. Killam, 1829-38; H. W. Morse, 1838; John F. Dyer, 1839; J. E. Burnham, 1840; John S. Barry, 1841-44; M. E. Hawes, 1844-45; Horace P. Stevens, 1846-47; Robinson Breare, 1849-52.

Lewis L. Record, Henry E. Vose, 1856; Edward A. Perry, 1867; James B. Tabor, Augustus P. Rein, Jacob Baker, B. F. Eaton.

CHAPTER III.

THE BENCH AND BAR, AND MEDICAL PROFESSION.

The Bench and Bar in Hanover.—The first lawyer to settle in Hanover was Hon. Benjamin Whitman, born in 1768. He came here in 1792, and in 1806 followed the tendency which is supposed to be entirely modern, and moved to Boston, where he was justice (chief) of the Police Court for many years. He graduated at Brown University in the class of 1788, and settled in Pembroke, in this county. During his entire residence in Hanover, he lived at or near the Four Corners. In 1799 he built the elegant mansion now occupied by Horatio Bigelow, and formerly the residence of Seth Barker, near North River bridge, on the high ground overlooking the river. Barry, in his history of the town, speaks of him as an "able lawyer; a man of great business enterprise; an active politician." He seems to have been successful as a politician, for he was for years postmaster at Hanover, and, after moving to Boston, was representative from that city. Among his students was Barker Curtis, son of Simeon Curtis, of Hanover, who emigrated to Maine after having an office in Assinippi village, in the northeasterly part of the town, for a short time. John Winslow, a direct descendant of Gov. Josiah Winslow, and a graduate of Brown University in the class of 1795, settled in Hanover about 1810. He lived at the "Four Corners" until his death, in 1830. His practice is said to have been very extensive, and he was called a thorough lawyer.

Hanover at this time boasted two lawyers in the same village. Almost opposite the house which Mr. Winslow built for himself, and which was afterwards occu-ped by Capt. John Cushing, lived Jotham Cushman, Esq.

Isaiah Wing, another Hanover man, and a pupil at the academy, practiced law for a short time at Hanover before his removal to Ohio. He was a student of Mr. Winslow.

Hon. Aaron Hobart, the author of "An Historical Sketch of the Town of Abington," came to the Four Corners about 1812. He graduated at Brown University in 1805. In 1820, while living here, he went to the Massachusetts Senate from Plymouth County. He was in 1826-27 a member of Congress. Soon after his removal to East Bridgewater he was appointed judge of probate for Plymouth County, a position which he held until his death, in September, 1858, at the age of seventy-one. His public services were long-continued, and always carefully and uprightly performed. His little historical sketch of Abington is a classic in its way, and a gem among local histories.

Alexander Wood, Esq., came to Hanover from Middleboro', before 1830, and opened an office in Hanover at the Corners, which seems to have been the favorite part of the town for attorneys. He studied law at Middleboro', with Hon. Wilkes Wood, judge of probate, and father of Hon. William H. Wood, recently deceased, also judge of probate and insolvency of Plymouth County.

Alexander Wood practiced law but a short time. He became a store-keeper at the Corners, and died there some years since.

Hon. Perez Simmons, a native of Hanover, and graduate in 1833 of Brown University, is still living at Assinippi, in the practice of his profession. His biography appears elsewhere.

His son, John Franklin Simmons, born in June, 1851, lives with his father at Assinippi. He is a graduate of Harvard University, class of 1873, and was chosen by the class as their orator on class day of that year. After being at the Harvard Law School for a year and a half, in February, 1875, he was admitted to the bar at Plymouth. He went at once to Abington, in this county, where he opened an office with Hon. Jesse E. Keith, the present judge of probate and insolvency for this county. His partnership was dissolved in 1883, and Mr. Simmons immediately formed a new business connection with Harvey H. Pratt, Esq., of Abington, who had been a student in his office. In addition to his Abington office, Mr. Simmons has had much practice from and in Hanover, which his residence in the latter town has necessitated. He has been for the past six years a member of the board of school committee of the town.

Physicians in Town.—The first physician to settle within the limits of the town was Dr. Jeremiah Hall, who came here in 1749. Then we have records of Dr. Lemuel Cushing (who was a surgeon in the Revolution), Dr. Peter Hobart, Dr. Marsh, Dr. Melzar Dweley, Dr. Cartier, Dr. Joshua Studley, Dr. Ezekiel D. Cushing (a most distinguished man in his profession), Dr. Henry Wade, Dr. Jacob Richards, Dr. Calvin B. Pratt, Dr. Joseph B. Fobes, Dr. Benjamin Whitwell, Dr. Alfred C. Garratt, Dr. John O. French, Dr. Downes, Dr. Woodbridge R. Howes, and his son, Dr. Clarence L. Howes. Of these there are now living,—Dr. Fobes, at Bridgewater (a most successful physician), Dr. John O. French, and the two Drs. Howes, all three of whom are settled at Hanover Four Corners in active practice.

CHAPTER IV.

MILITARY HISTORY.

Early Wars—The Revolutionary War—War of 1812—The Civil War—The Soldiers' Monument—Grand Army of the Republic.

IN the early times, about the period when the territory of this town was first settled, it is probable that the settlers in common with the early pioneers everywhere throughout the colonies were of necessity skilled in the use of arms. The constant presence of unseen foes, the necessity for being perpetually on the alert, made soldiers of the farmers and fortresses of their houses. Even at the present day houses are standing whose wooden walls are filled with brick, which, while sufficiently accounted for by the added stability and warmth thereby acquired, tradition with its love for the romantic also attributes to the necessity of guarding against the bullets of the red man.

After the town of Hanover was incorporated the colonies passed through the constant series of border fights, dignified by the name of wars, the French and Indian wars, and the contests between France and England for supremacy upon the sod of the new continent.

In all these the town bore her part by furnishing soldiers. It usually kept a stock of powder of its own, which at one time was stored in the chamber of the first church over the women's gallery. This town powder, as years went by, bore an unfortunate existence. It was once the subject of an investigation, as modern fashion terms them, for we learn that on Oct. 30, 1744, Capt. Elijah Cushing was instructed "to inform his Excellency concerning Dea. Thos. Joselynn's making way with the Town stock of gunpowder." This Capt. Cushing did with so much credit that November 5th he himself was appointed "to take care of the Town's Powder and bullets." Later on (1795) the town's stock of powder was stolen, and the vote of the town to buy a new stock is recorded.

The first military expedition in which Hanover men participated was in the expedition to the West Indies, in 1740,—a most unfortunate scheme, in which over four hundred died.

Then came the contest which resulted in the dislodgment of the French from Canada, lasting from 1745 to 1763. Hanover men were constant participants in these contests. Barry states that "one or more" of the "Acadians," whose misfortunes are immortalized in Longfellow's "Evangeline," settled in Hanover after their removal from their homes, but cannot give their names.

Next came the mutterings of the approaching Revolution. Hanover's patriotism then, as ever, ran high, and during the whole of that long, desperate contest it never flagged, although the suffering patriots were beset with difficulties, whose severities no pen can picture, no imagination can paint. Yet even here Toryism dared to raise its head. The royalist compact known as the "Ruggles Covenant," pledging its signers to the support of the crown, crept stealthily about town in 1774 and obtained a few signers. It is a source of congratulation that most of its signers were those "Friends" or Quakers whose religion taught them to abhor all war. The rest were members of the Church of England, whose religion forbade them to rebel against the head of the church on earth. There are traditions of others in town whose sympathies led them to espouse what seemed to be the stronger cause, and who dreaded the approach of a patriot, especially if he carried a gun.

From the first Hanover sent delegates to every convention or congress whose object was redress for the colony's grievances. In 1768, Joseph Cushing, afterward judge of probate of this county, went to the convention called at Boston, September 21st, "to consult upon measures for the safety of the province." Afterward, in 1774, the same gentleman, with Joseph Ramsdell, Joshua Simmons, Capt. Robert L. Eells, and Dr. Lemuel Cushing as colleagues, attended a conference of delegates from every town in the county, for the consideration of means for the furtherance of the cause of freedom. Col. Cushing was here, and also in the Provincial Congress, an active and prominent participant, and the honor to which his name is entitled Hanover shares.

Our first record of militia or minute-men in town is in 1773. According to Col. J. B. Barstow, Hanover raised two companies. The road now called Hanover Street as far as the Centre, and thence westerly to the Drinkwater Forge and Abington line, marked the bounds of the two districts. The Southern Company was commanded by Capt. (afterwards Col.) Amos Turner and Lieut. Samuel Barstow. The captain of the Northern Company was Capt. Joseph Soper, and the lieutenant Samuel Curtis.

All through the war an extra body of men with special and large powers, called a Committee of Safety, was in existence, and was again resorted to in 1812. The members of these committees were usually the most prominent and substantial citizens of the community.

Hostilities actually commenced on the famous 19th of April, now doubly commemorative of the initiative battles of two great contests. After this we find Hanover men participating in most of the local military manœuvres.

They were with Col. John Bailey in his attack on the regulars sent by Gen. Gage to guard Marshfield's trembling Tories. One of the ancestors of the writer, who was present at the fiasco (for such it was), said that Col. Bailey, under one pretext or another, held back his men until the regulars had gone, when he began urging on his soldiers by shouting, "Come on, my brave boys, we'll have 'em yet!"

They went to Plymouth "to guard the sea-coast" in May, 1775, and they were at Boston under Gen. Washington, and participated in the midnight occupation of Dorchester Heights.

June 30, 1776, a meeting was held which showed the unhesitating loyalty of Hanover. The Declaration of Independence had not been promulgated, but was being seriously considered throughout the little strip of sea-coast settlements then constituting the rising nation. The citizens of Hanover spoke with no doubting voice, and they then "voted to instruct their Representative that, if said Congress should think it safest to declare them Independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain, they, the inhabitants [of Hanover], will support them in this measure."

But while zealously urging on the severing of the ties which bound them to the oppressive mother-land, they none the less carefully guarded their liberties and their rights. In 1778 a constitution had been prepared and submitted to the towns for their action. Most towns, Hanover among them, refused to accept it. The town chose a committee of fifteen to consider the matter, and they reported against it. At a subsequent meeting, June 8, 1778, the town "voted the plan null and void to a man."

Then came darker hours. Tired, poor, and disheartened, the currency depreciated, the cause apparently not gaining, food getting scarce and high, soldiers' families suffering, and soldiers enlisting only after bounties were offered, the patriots seemed about to become rebels by failure instead of patriots by success. Yet they still remembered their manhood and stood steadfast in their strength. The bounties were raised, supplies for the needy were forthcoming, taxes were levied for the care of soldiers' families, and recruits still offered themselves "for three years or the war." Such pluck, the truest sort of Anglo-Saxon perseverance, cannot fail. The war was a revolution and not a rebellion.

Military taste and love for military parade grow by being indulged in. The bitter taste of actual military life deadened this desire somewhat in Hanover, and from the end of the Revolutionary war to the beginning of the present century there existed but two short-lived military organizations, which have not even left their names behind.

The Hanover Artillery, the greatest and oldest of the Hanover military organizations, was organized about 1798, by Benjamin Whitman, Esq., then a lawyer at Hanover, who was its first captain. The first lieutenants were Dr. Melzar Bailey, first lieutenant, and Dr. Charles Turner, second lieutenant. One of its last commanders, Capt. Benjamin N. Curtis, at the present writing is still living, and is the postmaster at Assinippi village, a hale and hearty man.

The equipments of the members were blue coats, with red facings, brass buttons, and cord, inclosed by a red leather belt and brass breastplate. Buff pants and vests set off this brilliant uniform below, while above a chapeau de bras or cocked hat, surmounted by a black plume tipped with red, completed the outfit.

Their gun-house, at first located near Robert Sylvester's, was afterwards moved to the Centre, where it remained until its services were no longer required.

Later an "independent infantry company" was formed by Col. Jesse Reed, which lasted for some years.

Then, in 1816, we chronicle the existence of the Hanover Rifle Company. Its local habitation was finally removed to Hanson, and it ceased to be a Hanover institution.

The Hanover Artillery Company saw active service in the war of 1812. For sixty-eight days, July 1 to Sept. 6, 1814, under Lieut. Elisha Burrell, Jr., a detachment of it was at Scituate harbor, and from Sept. 19 to Oct. 19, 1814, the whole company was at Plymouth, under command of Capt. Edward F. Jacobs. The fort at the Gurnet, at the entrance to Plymouth harbor, was for a year under the command of Lieut. Ebenezer Simmons, of Hanover, then in the service of the United States. The Hon. Perez Simmons, his son, now living at Assinippi, remembers perfectly being held up as a child to see from a window of the barrack the engagement between the British vessels and that fort.

Hanover in the Civil War.—In the year 1860 about eighty-five per cent. of the votes of this town were cast for Abraham Lincoln. During the conflict which followed his election it promptly filled every quota, and, after providing for the last call of the President, it had a surplus of about twenty-five men in the service.

At a citizens' meeting, held in April, 1861, the first concerted action in town was taken. A committee was chosen to confer with citizens of other towns as to the proper course to be pursued in view of the hostilities then commenced.

Immediately thereafter, at a town-meeting called by the selectmen for the purpose, May 4th, it was voted to raise five hundred dollars "in aid of the families of volunteers that have or may enlist from this time;" two hundred and fifty dollars "to provide for uniforms for such volunteers," and five hundred dollars to pay them for drilling "before leaving for the seat of war."

A committee, consisting of the selectmen and Thomas Turner, Melzar Hatch, and Samuel S. Turner, was then chosen to carry these votes into effect. This committee was instructed to visit the volunteers' families and relieve such as were needy. At meetings held later, other sums were raised to aid the families of absent soldiers until the State made provision for them in the State aid laws.

The President's first call for three months' men, in April, 1861, was responded to by six men, and during the year thirty-six men enlisted for three years. Early in May, in the same year, Loammi B. Sylvester and others organized a company of Hanover men, with its headquarters at the Four Corners. About the same time a company was formed in Abington, which was largely composed of men from this town. The Hanover company became Company G of the Eighteenth Regiment, and that from Abington, Company G of the Twelfth Regiment. Both companies during the entire war were with the Army of the Potomac. The positions they occupied were dangerous, and their losses were severe. At Antietam, "of the three hundred and twenty-five men of the Twelfth Regiment who went into the battle, but one hundred and twelve came out unscathed." At the second battle of Bull Run the Eighteenth Regiment, with the same number of men, suffered a loss nearly as great, while at Fredericksburg it won the commendation of Gen. Schouler.

In July and August, 1862, of the President's call for six hundred thousand men, Hanover's proportion was forty-six, one-quarter of all its remaining able-bodied men. A single meeting was held, the situation explained, and fifty-two determined men at once enlisted,—thirty for nine months and twenty-two for three years. The former were mostly attached to the Third and the Forty-third Regiments, and the latter to Company K, Thirty-eighth Regiment. The latter company was sent to Louisiana, where the climate proved more fatal than fighting. During this year fifty-seven residents of Hanover enlisted on her quota, and fourteen recruits were obtained outside her borders.

In 1863 twenty-eight citizens enlisted on the quota of the town for three years, and twenty-seven for one year. The latter served mostly at Fort Warren, and the former joined old regiments in the field. Eleven recruits for three years were procured elsewhere. During this year, through the efforts of the municipalities interested and the co-operation of Governor Andrew, the government at Washington performed a long-delayed act of justice in giving credit for men who had enlisted in the navy. Hanover was thus credited with seventeen men, most of whom were its own citizens. This town had representatives on the "Kearsarge," the "Cumberland," and the "Congress" in the famous battles where they were engaged.

At the commencement of the war the number of available men in Hanover between eighteen and forty-five years of age was not over two hundred and seventy-five. Of this number one hundred and sixty-nine enlisted. Six of these were killed in battle, eighteen died in the service, and several others soon after their discharge. Levi C. Brooks was killed at the battle of Cain River, Benjamin Curtis at the battle of Antietam (in one month after his enlistment), Marcus M. Leavitt at Vicksburg, John W. Nelson at the battle of the Wilderness, John B. Wilder while on picket duty, and Joseph E. Wilder at Sabine Cross-Roads. Albert E. Bates, Joshua E. Bates, Spencer Binney, Hiram B. Bonney, Calvin S. Bailey, John H. Cary, William Church, Jr., Calvin E. Ellis, Winfield S. Gurney, George R. Josselyn, John Larkum, Arthur Shepherd, Loammi B. Sylvester, Francis A. Stoddard, Joseph D. Thomas, Ferrin Willis, and George Woodard died in the service. The ashes of those who never returned sanctify the soil of seven sister States.

All who enlisted previous to August, 1862, did so without town bounty. After that date a bounty was paid. The aggregate sum expended for bounties by the town was twenty-five thousand dollars, and during the war the sum of twelve thousand eight hundred and sixty dollars was paid in aid of families of volunteers. Of this latter sum the greater part was refunded by the State. Of this record Hanover is proud, for few towns filled their quotas as promptly, while the number of those furnishing as large a proportion of their own citizens is smaller yet.

Soldiers' Monument.—On the 30th day of May, 1877, one of the speakers at the services at the town hall alluded to the fact that no monument had up to that time been erected by the town of Hanover in honor of those of her citizens who died in the war of the Rebellion.

As was then suggested, a committee of one or more ladies in each school district was formed to organize and carry through a fair for the purpose of raising funds for such a monument. The most successful fair which the town has ever seen was the result. It was held at the town hall on Oct. 16–19, 1877, and gave a net result of twelve hundred and forty-eight dollars and twenty-two cents.

Early in the following summer the monument was placed in position on the green, on the easterly side of the First Congregational Church,—a short portion of Silver Street, which had crossed the green, having been discontinued by vote of the town. The total cost of the monument was sixteen hundred and sixty-four dollars and eighty-eight cents, of which the town itself paid eight hundred and sixteen dollars and twenty-four cents. Of the proceeds of the fair, about four hundred dollars were used in the expenses of the dedication of the monument, and the balance, eight hundred and forty-eight dollars and sixty-four cents, for the monument itself.

The monument, designed by J. Williams Beal, S.B., of Hanover, is of Concord granite, resting upon a foundation of Quincy granite, and is surrounded by a raised plot of green sward inclosed in a Quincy granite octagonal curbing. The monument itself is a pyramidal obelisk about twenty-five feet high, consisting of a base six feet square and two feet six inches high, upon which rests a sub-base decorated with a heavy moulding. On this sub-base rests the die of the pedestal, containing four sunken polished panels, one on each face.

From the die a large and graceful moulding projects, which receives the cap of the pedestal. This is ornamented with four projecting pediments, on which are carved in beautiful relief the shield of the United States, resting on a graceful branch of palm for a background. On this rests the main shaft, which is monolithic, the base being decorated with sunk channels and raised stars.

The shaft is crowned with a capital of unique design, which is decorated with four wreaths suspended from the sides. The whole is of a purely Grecian style of architecture.

On the south or front face is the following inscription :

“ Erected
By the People of Hanover, in grateful memory of her sons who died in the war for the preservation of the Union, 1878.”

On the other faces are the names of the deceased soldiers.

Previous to its dedication a leaden box was placed under the monument containing the following :

Proceedings of National Encampments, 1866 to 1878, inclusive.

Rules and Regulations.

Service-Book and Memorial Service.

One of each kind of blank used by the Grand Army of the Republic.

Roster of department, and complete file of General Orders, series of 1878.

A Grand Army of the Republic badge, No. 4330.

Alphabetical list of the battles of the war of the Rebellion.

Copy of United States army and navy pension laws.

The above were deposited by the Department of Massachusetts of the Grand Army of the Republic.

This box also contained :

Reports of selectmen and school committee of Hanover for 1877–78.

Acts and resolves of Massachusetts for 1878.

Manual of General Court of Massachusetts for 1878.

A copy of each of the Boston daily papers.

Copies of local papers.

Roll-Call, Nos. 1 and 2, the “ Monument Fair” paper.

Mrs. M. F. Allen's poem, written for the “ Monument Fair.”

Sermon by Rev. W. H. Brooks.

Also the following statement :

"The monument was dedicated on the seventeenth day of July, A.D. 1878.

"Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States.

"Alexander H. Rice, Governor of Massachusetts.

"Selectmen of Hanover, Jedediah Dwelley, Isaac G. Stetson, Samuel H. Church.

"Committee of arrangements, Rodolph C. Waterman, Jedediah Dwelley, Calvin T. Phillips.

"J. Williams Beal, architect.

"John G. Knight, chief marshal.

"The Rev. W. H. Brooks, S.T.D., president of the day."

The 17th of July, 1878, was the day fixed for the dedication. The ceremonies were long and impressive. The day was graced by the presence of the Governor of the commonwealth and his staff, the President of the State Senate and Speaker of the State House of Representatives, the Secretary of State, one past and the present commander of the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company of Boston, and many other distinguished guests.

The Governor and other invited guests arrived by special car at the Four Corners, and were then taken to breakfast at Academy Hall. There a procession was formed, consisting of the bands, local posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, who did escort duty, the Governor and other guests in carriages, and various local organizations. The line of march was up Washington and Hanover Streets to the monument, where the usual ceremonies of the unveiling and delivering up of the monument occurred, followed in the afternoon by a dinner in a large tent erected for the occasion in a neighboring field, and after the dinner, toasts and responses.

Grand Army of the Republic.—April 29, 1869, Post 83 of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Massachusetts, was organized at the town hall by Col. James L. Bates and Charles W. Hastings. In respect to the memory of a young citizen of Hanover, who left Amherst College to engage in the war of the Rebellion, and who served faithfully until killed at the battle of Sabine Cross-Roads, La., April 8, 1864, the post assumed the name of Joseph E. Wilder. At its organization the members of the post were George B. Oldham, Morton V. Bonney, John D. Gardner, John G. Knight, Rufus M. Sturtevant, Charles L. Tower, W. S. Sherman, Louis Josselyn, Libbeus Stockbridge, Peleg Sturtevant.

The post, now numbering thirty-five members, has had over sixty in all upon its rolls, and has lost but four by death. It boasts that it has distributed over six hundred dollars charitably to soldiers and their families, and has a similar amount now in its treasury. These sums have been mostly accumulated by means of fairs, two of which were held previous to the fair in aid of the monument, which is spoken of in the section on the soldiers' monument. The success of these fairs is of course due largely to the ladies. A Grand Army sewing circle has been organized by them. Its aid will undoubtedly be as valuable in the future as it has been in the past. During its existence the post has had the following commanders: George B. Oldham (now deceased), 1869-71; Morton V. Bonney, 1872-73; John G. Knight, 1874 and 1876; Rufus M. Sturtevant, 1875; Rodolphus C. Waterman, 1877-82; Woodbridge R. Howes, 1883-84.

Its present officers are Rodolphus C. Waterman, C.; Rufus M. Sturtevant, S. V. C.; Louis Josselyn, J. V. C.; Morton V. Bonney, Adjt.; Frank Corbin, Surg.; Henry Wright, Chap.; John G. Knight, Q.M.; Samuel Hollis, O. D.; Nathan Howard, O. G.; H. S. Tower, Sergt.-Maj.; Everett N. Mann, Q.M.-Sergt.

CHAPTER V.

EDUCATIONAL HISTORY.

High School—Hanover Academy—Assinippi Institute.

OUR forefathers felt and knew that in order to maintain that liberality and freedom in their institutions, both political and religious, for which they had emigrated from their mother-country, education was the greatest essential. The far-famed common-school system of Massachusetts and New England was, by a simple process of evolution, the result of their earliest endeavors. Its two principles, first, furnishing the people the opportunity of learning, and second, compelling their children's attendance, are seen as early as 1677 in the colony laws. An extract from them is illustrative of this: "Forasmuch as the maintenance of good literature doth much tend to the advancement of the weale and flourishing estate of societies and Republicques,—this court doth therefore order: That in whatsoever township in this Government consisting of fifty families or upwards; any meet man shall be obtained to teach a Gramer Scoole, such townshipp shall allow at least twelve pounds in currant marchantable pay to be raised by rate ou all the Inhabitants of such Towne, and those that have the more emediate benefitt thereof by their children's good and general good shall make up the residue necessarie to maintain the same, and that the profitts arising of the Cape Fishing, heretofore ordered to maintaine a Gramer Scoole in this Collonie, be destributed to such Townes as have such Gramer Scooles for the maintainance thereof; not exceeding five pounds per annum to any such Towne, unless the Court Treasurer or other appointed to manage that affaire see good cause to adde thereunto to any respective Towne not exceeding five pounds more per annum; and further, this Court orders that every such Towne as consists of seaventy families or upwards, and hath not a gramer scoole therein, shall allow and pay unto the next towne which hath such Gramer Schoole kept up amongst them the sum of five pounds p annum in current merchantable pay, to be levied on the Inhabitants of such defective townes by rate."

It was the effort of our early fathers to maintain in the colonial churches an educated clergy. Scituate, of which Hanover is proud to feel it once formed a part, was settled by men of great intelligence and superior education. Among its early clergymen was Charles Chauncey, one of the first presidents of Harvard College. Clergymen, then being the most educated men in their vicinity, were looked to for much outside of their sacred office. There were no physicians in the colony for years, and the clergymen had many of their duties to perform. Another duty usually devolving on them was that of being the educators of the young. Mr. Channcey, above referred to, prepared his own sons and the children of others for college, and "many young men for the ministry."

Mr. Chaddock, at the Centre, taught the academy for years, and Mr. Butler, of the Baptist Church, had a school in Curtis Street for one season only.

When Hanover came to be incorporated, the act of incorporation contained a provision for the establishment and support of a school. Accordingly, in March, 1727-28, it was "voted to keep a school this year at three places." These schools were taught in private houses, no school-house being built in town until after May 18, 1730. This first school-house was to be "at or near the meeting-house" in the centre of the town.

The first professional schoolmaster was a man of much note in his profession, Richard Fitzgerald. He came here from Scituate, where he had taught, fitting for college, among others, Hon. William Cushing, LL.D., who graduated from Harvard in the class of 1751. Mr. Fitzgerald remained in town until his death. He was a man of talent, well skilled in the languages, especially the Latin.

In June, 1748, a "new school-house," on what is now Circuit Street, is spoken of, the precursor of the building in what is now called the King Street District, or District No. 4.

Movable or moving schools are referred to in the records until 1784. The schoolmaster was sometimes hired to teach for a year, and taught three months in one neighborhood and then went on to the next, and so round. In 1772 the first approach toward districting the town appears, when, in March, a committee was chosen to divide the town into four quarters, and to determine where each school-house shall stand. Thus it appears that the original one school-house had at this time increased to four. The more earnest pupils were not satisfied with one quarter's instruction, and the habit very soon grew of following the schoolmaster. In 1784 it was voted that "one quarter shall not send their children into another school." Gradually these "quarters" were subdivided until, in 1804, we find seven districts, which the following year were numbered as follows:

- No. 1. The Meeting-House District at the Centre.
- No. 2. The Broad Oak District at the Four Corners.
- No. 3. Upper Forge District at South Hanover.
- No. 4. Drinkwater District at King Street.
- No. 5. Beechwood's District at Whiting Street.
- No. 6. Curtis Street District.
- No. 7. Snappet District at Assinippi, now at Rocky Swamp.

No. 6 was divided in 1831, becoming itself the North Main Street District, and the south part becoming No. 8, the South Main Street District.

These divisions remained the legal districts until the abolition by statute of the district system in Massachusetts. These divisions are still made use of for convenience of designation.

Among the distinguished early teachers should be named Joseph Cushing, afterward distinguished in the Revolution, and Luke Stetson. Both were probably students under Mr. Fitzgerald, and both were for several years teachers here.

Later came Priscilla Mann, known as "Marm Mann." Her acquirements, judged by modern standards, were not commensurate with her reputation. She was, however, the master of a remarkably handsome, round, old-fashioned chirography, and her pupils by their handwriting alone can be picked out on the pages of old records and amid the dimness of old deeds. In her day no "Payson, Dunton, and Scribner's" copy-books, with their engraved copies, could be had, and each schoolmaster and mistress must make not only their own copies, but their own pens as well.

The school-houses of the present time and those of the past. What more shows our advancement, both materially and æsthetically? The old straight-backed forms, dirty and unpainted, unadorned, save by the jack-knife of some rogue, have been the theme of many a song. The old fire-place, replenished by the big boys by turns, which so effectually heated "all out-doors" to the exclusion of the building intended to be warmed, is a thing of the past. Our present edifices are handsomely painted outside and in. Many have curtains, and all blinds but one, which does not admit of them. The town has not a single school-room now which has not a good blackboard, and good, and in two instances the best, furniture adorns the rooms. Three of the school-houses have within the last five years been re-seated with single seats,—No. 2 with detached chairs and desks, and Nos. 4 and 5 with combined desk and chair.

When the district system, so called, was first established, the school district became an entity in itself. The district owned the school-house, hired the teacher, and supported the school with the aid of the town. The appropriation made by the town was carefully divided out among the different districts. That it was properly done there can be little doubt, when no district could receive its apportionment except under the jealous scrutiny of seven sister districts. But in 1847, the power granted by the Legislature to the town of purchasing the school property from the district began to give rise to much friction. Quarrels became the rule rather than the exception. Law-suits sprang up, no less a legal light being engaged over one little fight in town than the great Rufus Choate. Even his learning and fame, however, failed of victory, and in the course of half a dozen years the town was uppermost, and the districts succumbed.

In 1849 a new school-house, the present airy and commodious structure, was built at Broad Oak. In 1854, the old and dilapidated edifice in the Assinippi, or Rocky Swamp District, No. 7, gave place to a new one, and the same year saw a new house for the use of District No. 8. No. 4 was remodeled and newly furnished in 1854, and again in 1883. In 1880, under the supervision of, and from plans made by, J. W. Beal, architect, the school-house on Whiting Street, in District No. 5 (the oldest and smallest school-house in town), was replaced by a new and very handsome building. The old house was in sad repair, and entirely without blackboard surface, although when it was erected it was the finest school structure in town, and had been once (1854) remodeled.

During the year 1854 the present building in No. 6 was also erected. The present building in No. 1 was erected in 1853.

The following table, using the district numbers, is believed to be substantially accurate:

House in No. 1, built in 1853; No. 2, in 1849; No. 3, —; No. 4, remodeled in 1854; No. 5, built in 1880; No. 6, in 1854; No. 7, in 1854; No. 8, in 1854.

From an inspection of the records we learn that the amount appropriated for the support of schools has increased from twenty-seven pounds (one hundred and five pounds old tenor), in 1728, to four thousand dollars in 1884. This is a fine illustration of the liberality and generous public spirit in educational matters, which the town of Hanover has always shown. The appropriation for the support of schools is always passed by an almost unanimous majority. The present large amount, the largest ever voted by the town, was increased from three thousand nine hundred dollars—the amount asked for by the committee—to four thousand dollars, at the motion of Mr. Joshua Studley, a public-spirited farmer, and one of the largest landholders in town.

High School.—When the town hall was burned, in 1863, a new site on the opposite side of the street from the old location was purchased of Mr. Henry M. Stetson. A new building was immediately begun and soon completed at an expense, including lot, of $4452.05. The building is surmounted by a cupola, and is an ornament to the village at the Centre. It was built two stories in height, to accommodate a high school if the town should ever desire to establish one. The town hall itself was at the time it was built one of the largest in this portion of the county, and was much sought for and used for balls and similar entertainments.

By a vote of the town at the annual meeting in 1868 the town voted to establish a high school, and appropriated the sum of seven hundred dollars for its support. The town was not of sufficient size to be compelled under the statute to keep and maintain a high school, and the vote by which the school was established was passed by a majority of only three or four. The liberal and progressive sentiment in town triumphed, however, and although the school had a precarious existence for several years, yet the town having taken this step forward has never fallen back. To-day this school is as firmly established in the good opinion of the town as any school we have.

The school committee of 1868, Rev. Andrew Read, Dr. Woodbridge R. Howes, and Hon. Jedediah Dwelley, in accordance with this vote in April, 1868, as a preliminary to opening the schools, held a public examination, at which any applicants for the position of teacher of the high school might be present. But three candidates presented themselves for examination,—Mr. John G. Knight, Mr. John F. Simmons, and a gentleman from out of the State. Mr. Knight was selected, and at once entered upon the duties of his position. This was no sinecure. The small majority favoring this school made it dangerous to ask for any more appropriation. Therefore no school seats and desks could be bought. A village carpenter, however, built some wide shelves or tables all around the walls of the lower hall. These, unpainted, served for desks and common settees for seats for the twenty-five or thirty scholars who attended here until 1871. Then, partly at the private expense of the teacher and partly by subscription, sufficient desks and chairs were purchased to seat the pupils.

In December, 1873, Mr. Knight resigned, and Mr. Charles F. Meserve, of Abington, succeeded him, teaching several terms with great success. Under his management the size of the school increased somewhat. He is at present teaching in Rockland, where, as in Hanover, his thoroughness, both as teacher and disciplinarian, and his enthusiastic interest in all that pertains to learning, make him a teacher popular both with parents and pupils.

Other teachers have been Mr. S. H. Libbey, Mr. George E. Wales, now and for several years past principal of the North Abington High School, Mr. H. A. Sturtevant, Mr. Frank T. Rusk, a graduate of Harvard University, and at present principal of the high school at St. Joseph, Mo. The present principal, Mr. Melvin Shaw Nash, was elected for the first time to teach the fall term, 1878, and has since continued. Under and during his principalship the school has attained its greatest usefulness and success. It now and for several terms past has numbered over fifty pupils. This is not wholly owing to Mr. Nash's success as a teacher, but while in part due to that cause is also in part the result of the new-graded course of study to be spoken of hereafter.

For two years the increased numbers, and consequently increased work, has necessitated the employment of an assistant teacher. Miss Ida J. Barker, of Hanson, was first employed, and Mrs. Sarah J. McKenney, of Abington, is the present very popular occupant of that position.

The school has just been re-seated with single seats and desks for sixty-four pupils.

From 1868 to 1879 the school-room had been used as a supper-room whenever a ball or other entertainment had needed it for that purpose. This gave much bad usage to the school furniture, and was very obnoxious to the school. Accordingly, in 1879, and later, in 1882, partitions were run through the lower hall, shutting the school-room into itself, and giving a convenient and much-needed assistants' recitation-room in the northwest corner. A new entrance to the school-room was cut in the east side of the building; thus the school-room and town hall are now entirely separate, much to the benefit of the school.

In the year 1878 the town elected a board of school committee, two of whom had never held that office. Mr. John E. Knight and John F. Simmons were the new men, and both had had experience as teachers. The third man, Mr. Morton V. Bonney, had served the town well as representative in the Legislature as selectman, and for several years as school committee. Mr. Knight had been, as we have seen, the first master of the high school, and as such had given much which money could not buy, in enthusiasm and self-sacrifice, to make the high school a thing of existence. He was a committeeman for one term to render the town still more his debtor. His was the master-mind in shaping and putting into practice for the first time in this town a course of graded study, which was perfected after he had left the board. To this course the present efficiency of the schools is largely due. The town should be deeply grateful to Mr. Knight for his labors and skill in this behalf.

The course, as at first contemplated and afterward carried out, was to divide all the pupils in town—now and for several years ranging from three hundred to three hundred and thirty in number—into a series of classes, commencing with the primer scholars and going up through the district schools. Then, after an examination and established competency, continuing in the high school to graduation. At first it was with difficulty that the new system could be adapted to existing circumstances. It needs must be very general and elastic in its nature and requirements. Gradually the strings were tightened until at length, after about four or five years of trial and continued change, the present system was reached. By its rules each class in town reaches a certain required point in its work at the end of each of the three terms into which the school year (now and for the last two years amounting to thirty-nine weeks) is divided. The admission to the high school (now officially known as the high and grammar school) was gradually raised, and the course lengthened to four years. At the end of the course public graduations are held, and a diploma awarded those obtaining the required degree of excellence on the final private examination.

Thrice yearly written examinations of every school in town are now held by the committee, and a strict record of each scholar's daily work in each study is kept. A pupil's course and the work he has done are thus in two ways kept account of, and full record made thereof from his entrance to our schools until he leaves them.

As a means of showing the advancement of the high school, the course as pursued the first year of its existence, and the course now in force, are here given :

I. Course First Adopted.

First term.—Arithmetic (Greenleaf's Practical), Algebra (Robinson's), Geography (Warren's Common School and Physical), Grammar (Green's and Analysis), Spelling, Writing, Latin (Viri Romæ).

Second term.—Arithmetic, Algebra, Geography, Grammar, Sargent's Fourth Reader and Selections, Spelling, Writing, Latin.

Third term.—Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, Geography (finished), Reading (Fourth Reader and Milton), Natural Philosophy, Book-keeping, No. 3 and No. 4 Writing-Books (finished), Grammar (Analysis).

II. Present Course.

First Year.—Arithmetic, Geography, History of United States, Grammar, Reading, and Spelling.

Second Year.—First Term : Arithmetic, English History, Grammar, Reading and Spelling, Book-keeping. Second Term : Algebra, English History, Grammar, Reading, Spelling, Book-keeping. Third Term : Algebra, English History, Grammar, Reading, Spelling, Book-keeping.

Third Year.—First Term : Algebra, Physiology, Latin, French, or German, English Literature, Chemistry. Second Term : Algebra, Physiology, Latin, French, or German, English Literature, Chemistry. Third Term : Geometry, Physiology, Latin, French, or German, English Literature, Physical Geography.

Fourth Year.—First Term : Geometry, Physics, Latin, French, or German, English Literature (alternating), Physical Geography and Rhetoric, Civil Government. Second Term : Geometry, English Literature (alternating), Latin, French, or German, and Rhetoric, Physics, Physical Geography, Civil Government. Third Term : Review of Mathematics, English Literature (alternating), Latin, French, or German, and Rhetoric, Civil Government, General Review.

Writing twice a week throughout the course. Exercises in rhetoric once a week throughout the first two years.

Text-Books.—What text-books were at first used is a matter of great uncertainty. The oldest citizens speak of the Psalter, the New England Primer, and the Testament as the principal reading-books. The Young Man's Companion and Pike's were most used of arithmetics. Noah Webster's spelling-book, but recently discarded, was introduced about a hundred years ago. Barry speaks of "a small geography."

Now our text-books are legion. The town has, for over three years, purchased all the reading-books and loaned them to the scholars. In 1883 three hundred dollars was appropriated to purchase all the text-books to loan to pupils instead of compelling scholars to purchase them. Last winter the Legislature passed a law making such a course as this obligatory on all cities and towns in the commonwealth. Hanover had anticipated the wisdom of the Legislature by just a year.

The text-books at present in use are Arithmetic, the Franklin and "Complete;" Grammar, Greene; Language Lessons, Swinton; Geography, Harper's and Warren's; United States History, Higginson; Algebra, Robinson; Latin Grammar, Harkness; German, Krauss'; French, Bôcher's Otto; Book-keeping, Mayhew's; Physiology, Hutchison; Physical Geography, Warren; Geometry, Science Primer; Philosophy, Steele; Readers, Appleton's, Franklin's, and others; Spelling, Swinton's.

Hanover Academy.—In 1808, through the efforts of Rev. Mr. Chaddock, pastor of the First Church, a two-story building was erected, with cupola and bell, a few rods west of the present church at the Centre. This was for an academy. "Parson" Chaddock was the preceptor, assisted by Mrs. Chaddock. They had a school of more than local celebrity, which fitted many for college.

After Mr. Chaddock left Hanover the school declined, and was in 1822 sold and removed to the Four Corners, where it is now used for an apothecary shop and post-office. This was the first Hanover academy.

The second building was built in 1828, a few rods north of the present building. It was built at an expense of about twelve hundred dollars, in shares of twenty-five dollars each, and the trustees were incorporated the following year. The list of the proprietors' names includes many of the leading citizens in this and the surrounding towns.

The preceptors who taught in this building were Zephaniah Bass, 1828; Horace H. Rolfe, 1829; Rev. Cyrus Holmes, 1830; Ethan Allen, 1830; Rev. Calvin Walcott, 1831; John P. Washburn, 1832; Dr. Ira Warren, 1833; Thomas F. White, 1834-35; Herman Bourne, 1837; Josiah Fuller, 1838-39; Rev. Cyrus Holmes, 1840; Charles Hitchcock, George Wolcott, M. P. McLauthlin.

Some ladies have been connected with the academy as teachers. We have not their names, except that of Mrs. Chaddock, already alluded to.

In 1851 the present building was built at a cost of about three thousand five hundred dollars, and was dedicated with appropriate services March 2, 1852. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Salmond, the latter only surviving, have been probably the most generous patrons of the academy. Mr. Salmond gave one thousand dollars toward the present structure. Mrs. Salmond gave the sweet-toned bell which surmounts it, and has since contributed in many quiet but none the less effectual ways towards its support.

The present building has seen, among others, the following teachers: M. P. McLauthlin, Charles A. Reed (now city solicitor of Taunton), Samuel G. Stone, Peleg T. Keene, Prince Thorndike, J. S. Woodbury, Rev. T. D. P. Stone (pastor of Second Congregational Society), John G. Knight, Frank W. Brett, of Hingham, the present preceptor.

The establishment of the high school in town has drawn heavily upon the academy. Its pupils are now drawn largely from out of town, and from numbering about fifty the pupils have now come to be scarcely half that number.

Assinippi Institute.—Twenty-four years ago, in the settlement of difficulties which had arisen between the trustees of the academy and Samuel G. Stone, the then principal, Mr. Stone, left the academy and went to Assinippi. Here, with the aid of Hon. Perez Simmons, Mr. Stone opened a private school in Assinippi Hall in September, 1861, with about thirty scholars. The desks were old ones, the seats were chairs. These were frequently removed as occasion demanded for balls, etc. Here Mr. Stone taught for about three years. He was succeeded by John S. Crosby, now of St. Joseph, Mo. Under his management the school grew in success until it numbered about sixty scholars, many coming from afar and boarding in the neighborhood. He was assisted by Daniel G. Thompson, now of Milton, who took the school after Mr. Crosby left Massachusetts for the West. During one term the school was taught by John Edwards Leonard, afterwards a member of the National House of Representatives from Louisiana, then passing a year of suspension from Harvard College at Assinippi. Mr. Crosby taught here for about three years, and Mr. Thompson for only about two terms. Then the school failed for a lack of patronage. It was known during its existence as "Assinippi Institute."

Mr. Stone was a man of remarkable thoroughness as a teacher, but an unfortunate irascibility of temper prevented him from being popular with his pupils.

Mr. Crosby was a man of great energy of character, whom his pupils adored. His magnetic presence always insured order in the school-room, and inspired his pupils with a love for the learning which he so much admired. He was thorough and progressive in his teaching, having the faculty of making his pupils work. Both in and out of school he was one of the boys with the boys, and yet thoroughly respected and as thoroughly admired. For twelve years he was the most successful master of the high school at St. Joseph, Mo.

CHAPTER VI.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES AND TRANSPORTATION.

THE early settlers were compelled to resort to water-power to drive their mills. Steam was not known, and had it been it would have been inaccessible. The first settlers therefore clung to the neighborhood of the rivers near their mills. It was here that their corn was ground, and the lumber for their houses was here sawed. Now a great change has come over manufactures. Along the Indian Head River, where there was formerly a water-mill, in every case the tall chimney-stack tells the tale of the supplementary steam-engine, which, lying dormant through the winter and spring freshets, springs to life again in the droughts of the summer and fall. Modern business brooks no delays, and is not content to await the winter rise. Water-wheels therefore cannot suffice, and the aid of steam, now much cheapened (so much so as to be almost as economical as water-power), is invoked. The first establishment to impede our progress up the Indian Head River is the old forge so many years known as Curtis Forge. Here Bardin's iron-works were erected in 1704. The power was used in the manufacture of anchors for many years, anchors of five tons' weight having been made there as tradition says. But at length Mr. George Curtis, the last owner bearing the name of Curtis, ceased to manufacture anchors there, and the old mill was idle, and for years lay a black, useless pile. Mr. Curtis left town and died at Nahant, and the mill some ten or fifteen years ago passed into the hands of Mr. Eugene H. Clapp, a native of South Scituate, but now a very energetic business man of Boston. They have since been used in the grinding and manufacture of rubber, and employ a large number of hands. The old forge building is replaced by a large and commodious manufactory well suited to its purpose. Steam is used as a supplementary power.

Ascending the stream, we next reach Project Dale, already alluded to. This dam and privilege was utilized in 1830 by Charles Dyer, who moved his tack business here from the dam a short distance above, now abandoned. This site was at one time occupied as a tack-shop by Edward Y. Perry, Esq., now the president of the Hanover Branch Railroad. It had been before this used for running a fulling-mill, a carding-mill, and also a grist-mill. The tack business of Mr. Perry in 1852 and 1853 was regarded as large. In comparison with the business of the present it seems almost puny. Here are some statistics of it then:

Hands employed.....	16
Shoe-nails made per day.....	300 lbs.
Tacks made per day.....	800,000
Tons of copper used per year.....	2 to 3
Tons of zinc used per year.....	25
Tons of iron used per year.....	75
Number of shoe-nail machines.....	3
Number of tack-machines.....	7

Nine years ago one establishment in the town of Hanover, according to the census of 1875, made fifty thousand dollars worth of tacks per annum.

The tack-works of Col. Jesse Reed were, as has been said, a short distance above the Project Dale works. Col. Reed was almost the father of the tack-manufacturing interest. A man of great versatility and originality, combined with great energy, he invented, after many failures, the first tack-machine to cut successfully the tack from a strip of metal and deliver it, all headed and pointed, a perfect tack, at the tail of the machine. He resided at Hanover when this machine was invented and patented. It stands to-day with but little alteration, running successfully all over the Union in all tack-shops, and is known as the Reed machine.

When reaching South Hanover, we find Barstow's forge, or, as it was afterwards called, Sylvester's forge, now occupied by the very enterprising and successful firm of E. Phillips & Sons, manufacturers of tacks and shoe-nails. A forge was first established here about 1720 by the Barstows, and used by members of that family until it was sold to the Salmonds, in 1795. It was used at different times for manufacturing anchors, bar-iron, tack-machines, tacks, and locomotive cranks. There is one anchor forge left in Hanover. It is now called Barstow's forge, and is located on King Street. It was erected in 1710, and was known as the Drinkwater Iron-Works. Cannon are said to have been cast here during the Revolution. Its present owners manufacture a small grade of anchor, and have steady work the year through.

The Third Herring Brook furnishes power for two tack-shops. One, the northerly one, near Winslow's bridge, is owned and run by Mr. James Tolman, where a small business is done. The lower mill, called "Tiffany Factory," from having been once owned by Recompense Tiffany, is the property of one of Hanover's wealthiest citizens, Mr. Edmund Q. Sylvester, who manufactures tacks under the firm-name of Samuel Salmond & Sons. This privilege is one of the oldest, having been established here "as early as 1677, by Charles Stockbridge."

The box-board and grist-mill and box manufactory of Lot Phillips & Co., at West Hanover, is a large and flourishing business institution of the town. It is one of the results of the Hanover Branch Railroad, and the enterprise of its president, E. Y. Perry, Esq., who is a member of the partnership. Here are made about one hundred and fifty thousand boxes annually, which are sent all about the surrounding country. About thirty-five men are employed, and the busy saws, run, as is all the mill's machinery, by a powerful steam-engine, cut up into boards about one million two hundred and fifty thousand feet of lumber annually, while the grist-mill grinds two hundred thousand bushels of grain for the firm. It is connected with Brockton and the rest of the world by the telephone line, which runs the whole length of the Hanover Branch Railroad. Truly this is an establishment of which Hanover may well be proud.

The various grist-mills which were formerly scattered through town have become practically useless by the changes which time brings. Our farmers rely for their grain on the supplies which the railway brings almost to their doors, and not on what their ancestral acres produce. It comes here now in bulk, and is ground by the large establishments, like that of Lot Phillips & Co., already described. There are mills on the Third Herring Brook at its head, at Jacob's mill, and at Gardner's, or, as it is now called, Church's mill. But their wheels are seldom asked to respond to the force of the descending water. Saw-mills are still heard on the wintry air, as the screaming pine logs yield to the whizzing force of the circular saw at Jacobs', Clapp's, Church's mills, on the Third Herring Brook, at Mann's, formerly Deacon John Brooks', mill, near Main Street, and at the West Hanover Mill, near the larger steam-mill already referred to.

It is said that a mill formerly stood near Ellis Bridge, called Drinkwater Mill, from there having been no spirits used at its raising. But this rests entirely on tradition.

Hanover claims to have been the residence too of the first patentee, if not the inventor, of iron plows. Here they were certainly first manufactured by David Prouty. His patent antedated all others, and he probably invented them. The old wooden mouldboards covered with strips and pieces of iron, like all established things, yielded with difficulty to innovations. Mr. Prouty's plow had the strongest tests to undergo before it became a success, and the rocky soil of the northern part of the town presented a test which it speaks well for the plow to say it stood well. The manufacturing of plows was, as the business increased, removed to Boston.

The greatest industry at present of the town is that of the manufacturing of boots and shoes. The census of 1875, now nine years old, gives the value of the total product of boots and shoes for that year as one hundred and forty-two thousand four hundred and eighty-eight dollars, an increase within the ten preceding years of about fifty thousand dollars.

Other statistics might be given, but it would be unwise in a history to encroach upon the province of the gazetteer.

The ship-yards of Hanover alone remain to be mentioned. The ship-builder's axe and the calker's maul have long ceased to awaken the echoes of the North River shore. The iron vessel has superseded the wooden one. Depleted forests and bad legislation have driven far from the town everything relating to ship-building except its memories. "The palmy days of ship-building in Hanover," says Barry, "were from 1800 to 1808. Then five or six yards were in active operation, and at least ten vessels were annually fitted for sea."

The Hanover Branch Railroad.—It is not surprising, in a population as enterprising as is and always has been that of Hanover, that they could not remain quiet as their neighbors progressed. Lying directly in the path of all intercolonial travel, for years they possessed better facilities for traveling and the transmission of the mails than did most of the surrounding towns. The road now known as Washington Street, at and until the opening of the Old Colony Railroad, was the oldest and most traveled avenue between Boston and Plymouth. It had been the main course of travel between the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies ever since the country was settled, taking the place of an old Indian trail over which Governor Winthrop and Judge Sewall, as their official duties called them to Plymouth Colony, had often been guided.

When the Old Colony Railroad projected its first line from Boston to Plymouth, the surveyors, seeking a location for their new iron road, followed this old intercolonial thoroughfare. The railroad route was surveyed as far south as what is now called Queen

Anne's Corner, about two miles north of the northern limit of Hanover. Insufficient encouragement or greater pecuniary inducements elsewhere determined that the course of the railroad should lie farther west, and Hanover was passed by. Its citizens, however, about 1845, nothing daunted by the magnitude of such an enterprise, began to consider the feasibility of a railroad of its own, and there being then no general railroad law, as now, petitioned the next Legislature for a charter for the Hanover Branch Railroad. April 6, 1846, a charter was granted to John Cushing, George Curtis, John Sylvester, and their associates. The railroad was to connect with the Old Colony at North Abington, and was to be located within one year. This time proving too short, April 23, 1847, the time for filing the location was extended one year and a half.

Several meetings of this new corporation were held, and Isaac M. Wilder was chosen clerk. The charter, however, expired by limitation without a rod of the road having been located. The project, however, was not dead, but sleeping. Just at this time a resident of Hanson, who had done much business and owned much property in Hanover, a man of almost indomitable energy and perseverance, to whom the inhabitants of Hanover owe more of the substantial material improvement of the town than they are willing to admit, Edward Y. Perry, took hold of the work. He and his partner, Ezra Phillips, one of Hanover's wealthiest and most sterling citizens, who united a most mature judgment with great strength of purpose and of will, manufactured tacks at the mill on the Indian Head River at South Hanover. Both saw the great importance of the railroad to themselves, to the town and its industries, and went to work. Enlisting the interest and aid of the old corporators and others, on the 20th of April, 1864, eighteen years after its first incorporation, they succeeded in getting from the Legislature a revival of the charter of the Hanover Branch Railroad. The new act gave them until May 1, 1866, in which to file the location of the road, and two years in which to organize. Now the hard work commenced. Mr. Perry led all in his zeal to raise, by subscription to its stock, the necessary funds to build the road. In several instances he even gave his own personal guaranty in writing that the road when built should pay a dividend of six per centum upon its stock, a promise which one man is said to have enforced when the dividend at one time amounted to but five per cent.

Yet in spite of these two years of hard work, and in spite of the substantial aid, both of interest and funds, which was given by the people of East Abington (now Rockland), through which the road was to run, the 19th of April, 1866, arrived and no organization had been effected. It looked as if this new revival was to end in another backsliding. Ezra Phillips decided its fate. His decision announced to his son, Calvin, "Calvin, I guess you had better go down and see Mr. Curtis and have a meeting called," saved the life of the Hanover Branch Railroad. A meeting was called to meet at the Hanover House, an organization was effected, one more grand effort was made, and the road was built.

At this meeting the following officers were elected: Directors, Edward Y. Perry, of Hanson; Jenkins Lane, of East Abington; George Curtis, of Hanover; Sumner Shaw, of East Abington; George F. Hatch, of Marshfield; Washington Reed, of East Abington; Edmund Q. Sylvester, of Hanover. The directors then chose Edward Y. Perry president. Jenkins Lane treasurer, and Calvin T. Phillips, of Hanover, clerk. Of these directors, Jenkins Lane, George Curtis, George F. Hatch, and Washington Reed have deceased. The present board of directors consists of Edward Y. Perry, president, now of Hanover; Albert Culver, treasurer, of Rockland; Richmond J. Lane, of Rockland; Edmund Q. Sylvester, of Hanover; and L. C. Waterman, of Hanover; Calvin T. Phillips, clerk, of Hanover.

The total amount of capital subscribed for on which the road was built was about one hundred and twenty-three thousand dollars. Joseph Smith, of Stoughton, Mass., was employed as engineer, and under his direction the road was surveyed and located, the grades established, and the road built. The contractors, J. B. Dacey & Co., completed the seven and two-thirds miles of road-bed in less than two years from commencing work, and in July, 1868, but a few months over two years after the precarious existence of the corporation had been determined, the cars were running regularly over the completed road. To-day it has three engines, six passenger, and twenty-one freight-cars (three of the latter, however, being owned and run by the president), over three miles of steel rails (fifty pounds to the yard), and usually pays a semi-annual dividend of three per cent. upon its stock.

Unlike every other branch of the Old Colony system, the Hanover Branch Railroad retains its identity. Every other branch has finally yielded, and has been swallowed by the greater corporation. The Hanover Branch alone still runs its own cars and engines over its own road, and compels the Old Colony to pull its cars in and out of Boston at its own fair prices. This and the general success of the road is due in a very large measure to the great business capacity and splendid organizing power of its president, who not only is president, but also superintendent, general ticket agent, general manager, and some times, when short of hands, even conductor himself.

The course of the road is generally as follows: Commencing at the Four Corners on Broadway nearly opposite the residence of John Cudworth, and southwest from the carriage-manufacturing shop of Thomas Turner, it does not take the shortest route to its junction with the Old Colony at North Abington but curves southward to pass the rubber-works (formerly Curtis' forge) and South Hanover. After leaving the depot at the Corners, it runs southwest along the easterly side of Broadway and Elm Street to the rubber-works, then follows westerly along the Indian Head River to "Project Dale," at the tannery-works of L. C. Waterman & Sons, reaching here its greatest grade of from eighty-five to one hundred feet per mile. It then bends northerly to South Hanover near the tack-works of E. Phillips & Sons, crossing Broadway, opposite the residence of Isaac G. Stetson and Cross Street, a few rods north of the house of William S. Sherman. It then curves still more to the north, crosses Centre and Circuit Streets, and reaches the village of West Hanover, at the junction of Circuit, Hanover, and Pleasant Streets, then deflecting slightly, it runs between the new Hanover and old Circuit Streets, crossing the latter at its last junction with the former, and finally leaves town at a point on the town line about sixty-five rods northwest of the late residence of Otis Ellis, deceased.

---

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

---

EZRA PHILLIPS.

Ezra Phillips was born in Pembroke (now Hanson) Oct. 10, 1810, on the old homestead, near the present South Hanson Railroad Station. His father, Ezra Sr., married, in 1809, Mehitable Allen, of East Bridgewater. Their first child was Ezra, the subject of this sketch. His mother died before he was two years old. He early developed the firmness and decision that was always so marked an element in his character, which was soon shown by his opposition to the use of alcoholic liquors and tobacco. At that time, when their use was so universal, and when they were moderately used in his own home, his taking this stand was remarkable, and showed the independence that always characterized him.

Not having a taste for the farmer's life that ha contented his ancestors, he left home when a lad and spent a short time in the employ of Lewis Keith, a grocer at East Bridgewater, and afterwards with Babcock & Cooledge, who kept a tavern and grocery on the Neck, on the single street that then connected Boston and Roxbury, at what is now the corner of Union Park and Washington Streets. His taste, however, was always for mechanical pursuits, and at about the age of eighteen he went to South Abington to learn the trade of a tack-maker of Mr. James Soule, in the factory of Mr. Benjamin Hobart. Before his engagement with Mr. Soule was ended Mr. Hobart offered him a place in his factory in Hanson. Here he remained until Mr. Hobart sold this factory, in 1848. At different times during this period, when the tack business was dull, he engaged in the manufacture of shoe-pegs and of soap,—in the last-named certainly, getting the reputation of making the very best quality.

Erwin Phillips

Nov. 27, 1834, he married Catherine H. Tilden, daughter of Dr. Calvin Tilden, of Hanson, and purchased the house near the factory that had been built and occupied by the Rev. George Barstow. This was his home for twenty years. They had four sons and a daughter, the daughter and one son dying in infancy. In 1848, Mr. Hobart sold the Hanson factory, and Mr. Phillips bought one-third of it and commenced the manufacture of tacks for himself.

In 1853, Mr. Phillips, Mr. E. Y. Perry, and Mr. Martin W. Stetson formed a partnership, under the name of E. Y. Perry & Co., for the purpose of carrying on the tack business, Mr. Perry having, like Mr. Phillips, previously been engaged in it in a small way,—Mr. Perry at Hanover and Mr. Phillips at Hanson. They purchased the privilege known as the Sylvester Forge at South Hanover. The financial panic of 1856 and 1857 soon overtaking them, and they having but small capital and a business reputation to make, Mr. Stetson became discouraged and withdrew from the firm, but Messrs. Perry & Phillips, with that energy and pluck that were prominent characteristics of their lives, determined to go on and trust to good management and hard work for success. The firm was admirably adapted to the business. Mr. Perry was an exceptionally good financier and general manager, clear-headed, a cool and accurate calculator.

Mr. Phillips was equally good in his line,—the mechanical department,—a good manager of workmen, and an excellent judge of the worth and merits of machinery. He not only thoroughly understood the working of every machine in the factory, but was capable of taking any machine they then had, or ever afterwards had, and running it so that he not only knew how all the work should be done, but could demonstrate that his theories were right by himself doing what he hired others to do. This practical knowledge was of great value to him in his oversight of the business. No piece of machinery was ever placed in their works that was not thoroughly understood and run by Mr. Phillips before being passed over to the hands of an employé. The work produced at the factory of E. Y. Perry & Co. soon became known as second to none in quality in their line of business, and their business grew rapidly. Increased facilities were added, including a mill for rolling zinc plates, and theirs soon became one of the leading concerns in their line of trade.

Mr. Phillips continued in business with Mr. Perry until 1874, when by mutual consent the old firm was dissolved, and a new firm, under the name of E. Phillips & Sons, was formed, Mr. Phillips associating his two oldest sons with him in the business. The secret of Mr. Phillips' success was his thorough knowledge of his business, his large mechanical ability, and his unsurpassed judgment of values and methods. Seeking to obtain the best results from mechanical operations was his study. Every exhibition of machinery attracted his attention, and it was a rare occurrence if he failed to gather some ideas that could be applied to some of the machinery at his own works. He was continually studying how to make steam or water do the work of hands. As a thorough practical mechanic he had few equals, and no man of his day had a better practical knowledge of all the different processes connected with the manufacture of tacks and tack machinery.

The following will serve as an illustration of his talent for anything pertaining to mechanics. A professional building-mover was employed by him to move a building to a new location; a soft, sandy spot intervened, and in this they got stuck and remained for several hours, try as they would they could not make fast their machinery in the sand, and they had given up in despair. Mr. Phillips came along, took in the situation at a glance, and suggested a plan of proceeding, which they reluctantly proceeded to put in execution, protesting at the same time that it would be of "no use." The plan succeeded perfectly the first trial. He invented several useful appliances in tack machinery; and had perhaps a more thorough knowledge of the minutia of the business in all that pertained to it than any other man. His recollection extended from the time when tacks were cut and headed by hand. During the latter part of his life he also carried on a saw-mill at Hanson where he first made tacks. In his religious belief he was a Unitarian, and was a Free-soiler and Republican in politics.

Since his death his two eldest sons continue the business without change of firm-name.

Mr. Phillips was strictly a business man, giving no attention to official honors or positions. The only town office he ever accepted was that of selectman of the town of Hanson, in 1853. He was one of the most highly-esteemed men of his day in the community where his life was spent; and all who knew him speak of his memory with reverent regard. He died at Hanover May 15, 1882.

E. Y. PERRY.

E. Y. Perry was born in that part of the town of Pembroke now Hanson, Mass., Nov. 4, 1812. The house in which he was born has been the home of his ancestors for many generations, and is now owned by him. It is situated a little more than a mile southeast of South Hanover, Mr. Perry's present residence. He is the son of Elijah and Chloe (Stetson) Perry, and grandson of Seth and Hannah Perry. Elijah was by trade an iron-moulder, but much of his time was spent in farming. He was in the war of 1812, and the exposure incident to campaign life sapped the fountains of his health, and eventually caused his death, two years later. Mrs. Perry had died when E. Y. was but six weeks old, and so upon the death of his father he was entirely orphaned at the tender age of two years. He was taken charge of by his paternal grandparents, both of whom lived to a great age, Mr. Perry being about ninety-five and Mrs. Perry ninety-nine years and nine months at time of death. The Perry ancestral stock belong to that class which, more than perhaps any other, have aided in making New England what it is,—the sturdy, honest yeomanry of the land. They were frugal, industrious, uncompromisingly honest, and noted for their steadfast devotion to the colonial cause. Seth Perry was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and acquitted himself with credit.

E. Y. Perry remained with his grandparents during his minority, and worked as farmer's boy, tilling the ancestral acres. Upon attaining his majority his first venture in business for himself was as country merchant at Hanson, where he continued several years. In the conduct of his business affairs he was successful, but, like many others have done before him, he indorsed paper for others, and lost all he had accumulated, and, what was worse yet, after yielding up to his creditors all he possessed, he still owed several thousand dollars, much of which he afterward paid from the earnings of subsequent years. Not despairing on account of his misfortunes, Mr. Perry began to cast about for some other method of earning a livelihood. With a judgment and foresight which has proved characteristic, he saw that the future of New England depended upon its manufactures, and that to brains, pluck, and energy a field was here opened for success. He resolved to enter the lists in what was then comparatively an infant industry. Accordingly, under the firm-name of Charles Dyer & Co., he, in company with Charles Dyer, engaged in the manufacture of tacks in the town of Hanover, at the place where the tack-factory of L. C. Waterman & Sons now stands. It may be mentioned as a remarkable fact that at the time these two gentlemen set up in business as manufacturers neither of them had a dollar in the world, and both had failed in business and were badly in debt. So much for Yankee grit and enterprise. They started by buying a hundred or two pounds of iron, working it up into tacks; and from the receipts of the sale of these they would replenish their stock, and thus, slowly, very slowly, they built up their business year by year, making all the time a little advancement, but at the end of fifteen years their progress had been so slow that the business was deemed too small for two partners, and they mutually agreed to dissolve, Mr. Perry purchasing the interest of Mr. Dyer, mostly on credit. He continued the business alone two or three years, when he purchased the property of the Hanover Forge Company, at South Hanover, and shortly afterwards associated with himself Mr. Ezra Phillips and Martin W. Stetson, under the firm-name of E. Y. Perry & Co.; and while Mr. Perry gave his personal attention to the old factory, Messrs. Phillips and Stetson made the necessary changes in the newly-acquired works to adapt the factory to tack-making instead of anchor-forging. As soon as the arrangements were completed the machinery was transferred from the old to the new works, and the manufacturing conducted there entirely. After a short time Mr. Stetson withdrew. The association of Messrs. Perry and Phillips proved to be a happy combination of talents and qualities, and it may not be out of place here to record Mr. Perry's testimony as to the honor, integrity, and ability of his deceased partner, Mr. Phillips. He says, "After an intimate business and social relationship with Mr. Phillips for more than thirty years, I consider him one of the grandest and best men I ever knew. Our association was the most harmonious that could be imagined. The routine of business was robbed of its monotony and vexation by the tact, geniality, pure methods, and manly way in which Mr. Phillips bore himself. It was simply pleasure to do business in connection with such a man." From the day of their association together their success was uniform and rapid. They continued a period of thirty years, and became one of the largest and most influential tuck-manufacturing concerns in the country. The partnership was dissolved by the withdrawal of Mr. Perry, whose outside interests had become so great and demanded so much of his time as to make any other business duties burdensome. During the business connection of Messrs. Perry and Phillips they did not confine themselves exclusively to tuck manufacturing, but made many outside investments. About 1870 they established a steam-mill—grist, lumber, and box business—at West Hanover. About the same time they, in connection with others, started the coal and grain business in Rockland and Hanover. They also established a leather- and findings-store in Boston, under the firm-name of Phinney & Phillips. Upon the dissolution of copartnership all of these outside interests fell into Mr. Perry's hands.

E. G. Perry

The mill at West Hanover is conducted under the firm-name of L. Phillips & Co., Mr. Lot Phillips being a partner. The grain business at Rockland is continued under the name of Culver, Phillips & Co. The leather-store in Boston was finally discontinued in 1882. It had proved a very successful venture. In 1883, Mr. Perry, in company with William A. Vanab and E. P. Sweeney, under the firm-name of Vanab, Sweeney & Co., purchased the property known as Winslow's mills, at Waldoboro', Me., and established themselves in the lumber, bark, wood, grain, flour, hay, and grocery trade.

In company with Charles E. Soule, of Pembroke, Mr. Perry is also engaged in buying and selling real estate, lumber, and wood. They do quite an extensive business. Some time prior to 1861 Mr. Perry became one of the prime movers in the agitation of the question of a railroad from North Abington to Hanover. The movement was met with the utmost indifference by the people, and but few could be induced to invest a dollar in the enterprise, and to the persistent, untiring, and aggressive efforts of Mr. Perry, more than to any or all other men, belongs the credit of its final achievement.

An old charter had been granted many years previously, but nothing had been done further. This charter was revived, and the matter was gotten on something like a firm footing when the civil war stopped operations. Immediately after the close of the war Mr. Perry renewed his efforts in that direction, and in July, 1868, had the satisfaction of seeing the road an accomplished fact. At the time of its completion there was a debt of sixty thousand dollars, which is now reduced to twenty thousand. In connection with the engineer, Mr. Perry had supervision of the building of the road, and has been its president and active manager from its inception to the present time. Not only does he superintend in a general way its business and traffic, but everything pertaining to its financial conduct passes through his hands.

Mr. Perry has been J. P. for more than twenty years; he has done much probate business. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1867. He was early identified with the anti-slavery movement, and belonged to the Garrisonian organization from its inception till the emancipation of the slaves. He is an earnest advocate of temperance in its strictest signification, and in this, as all other matters, his views are pronounced and outspoken. On the 1st of July, 1880, he stopped taking interest on any of his loans, and on many mortgages which he now holds he collects no interest. This he does, not as a matter of philanthropy, but because he believes the principle of exacting a rate per cent. for the use of money to be usury, unjust, and opposed to the spirit of progress, which has always been the leading element of his character. He is, and has been all his life, an earnest, thoughtful, active man, with clear perceptions, sound judgment, and very marked executive ability. E. Y. Perry is a man who in any walk in life he might have chosen would have been a conspicuous figure, and had his inclinations or fortune led him into a broader field and wider sphere of public life, he has qualities which would have commanded instant recognition, and which would have served to place his name high on the monument of his country's history. He has that dauntless spirit and indomitable will-power which will not succumb to defeat, and this, united with intelligent endeavor, usually attains success in whatever channel it may be directed.

As an instance of his love of progress and improvement for the community as well as himself, the following illustration will serve. There was a beautiful property in the centre of the village of South Abington, which for years had been in the hands of parties who refused either to improve it or sell it to others. This property Mr. Perry finally purchased a few years ago, established there a pleasant and commodious hotel, and erected on the rest of the estate handsome cottages and other improvements, which not only serve to bring him a revenue, but enhance the value of all other property in the village, by adding to its conveniences and attractions.

He married, July 8, 1834, a most estimable lady, Miss Mary B., daughter of David and Deborah B. Oldham, of Pembroke, Mass. They had but one child, Mary E., which died in earliest infancy. The fiftieth anniversary of their wedding occurred July 8th of the present year (1884), and they both bid fair to spend many more years pleasantly and harmoniously together.

JOHN SYLVESTER.

From the best information obtained from the various works treating of the ancestry of the Sylvester family, it appears that they are undoubtedly of French origin. This finds confirmation in the fact that the original coat of arms was a tree on a shield, "Sylvester," in French, signifying a tree. They probably came to England with William the Conqueror, as the name appears on the English records soon after the Norman conquest. The name is one of high respectability in that country, and many bearing the cognomen have attained a high position in various walks in life.

The first of the family in America was Richard Sylvester, who resided in Weymouth in 1633, and removed to Scituate about 1642. From him are descended many, if not all, of those bearing the name in New England. The line of descent from him to John Sylvester, whose portrait appears in this volume, is as follows: Richard<sup>1</sup>, Capt. Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Benjamin<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Joel<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>6</sup>. Capt. Joseph was a noted Indian fighter, whose warlike spirit prompted him to enlist as captain under Col. Church in the famous Canada expedition which proved so disastrous. He died while in the service.

John Sylvester was born in Hanover, Mass., July 8, 1798, and his education was obtained in the common schools of the town. When but a boy he went to work at anchor-forging, and followed this occupation for some years, when, his health failing, he abandoned it and entered the machine-shop of the "Old Mill-Dam Iron-Works," at Boston and Watertown, Mass. About 1824 he returned to Hanover, and in company with other parties, engaged in the manufacture of tacks. After a short time in this enterprise he was employed at the anchor works of Hobart & Salmon, who at that time had a contract with the United States government, and several anchors were made by them for seventy-four-gun ships, some of which, perhaps, were the largest ever forged.

In 1828, Mr. Salmon having retired, Mr. Sylvester formed a copartnership with Mr. Hobart, which continued till about 1837. Mr. Sylvester managed the works, which were very successful. He was a pioneer in the manufacture of locomotive cranks, having made, it is claimed, the first one in the country, this branch of the business being established in 1830. When the partnership between himself and Mr. Hobart terminated he formed the Hanover Forge Company. He continued to do business in Hanover till 1853, when he sold out all his interests there, and removed to Belmont, near Boston, where he resided till his death. About 1848 or 1850 he became one of the firm of John Taggard & Co., in the iron business, in Boston. This interest was continued until 1858, when he retired from the firm and purchased the Danvers Iron-Works, at Danvers Port. In 1864 he purchased the spike-works at Somerville, and this business he retained during the rest of his life, though he retired from the active supervision of it for several years prior to his death, which occurred March 18, 1882.

He was married, in Hanover, November, 1824, to Lucy J. Bonney, of Pembroke. They have six children living,—two sons and four daughters.

In politics he was one of the Free-soil party, and a Republican after the formation of that party. While he took a lively interest in the political questions of the day, nothing could induce him to offer himself as a candidate for an official position. He preferred to devote his whole attention to business, and leave the cares and honors of office to those whose inclinations or tastes led them in that direction.

Mr. Sylvester was of an active, earnest temperament. Whatever he undertook he gave his best energies to, and seldom failed to achieve success in what he attempted. His kindness of heart was proverbial, particularly to those less fortunate in life than himself, and his gentleness of manner and geniality of deportment invariably won the sincere respect and esteem of his associates and friends. In the closer relations of home-life his influence was peculiarly tender; and to his family and intimate friends his unselfish affection, and noble example in striving for everything high and pure, will ever be a precious memory.

He connected himself with the Orthodox Church early in life, and always continued an active member. He was a leading spirit without striving to be in whatever circle he moved, a worthy representative of an ancient and honorable family.

GEORGE CURTIS.

George Curtis was born in Hanover, Mass., Sept. 23, 1808. His parents were Consider and Mary

John Sylvester

Geob. Austin

(House) Curtis. His father was an anchor-smith and farmer, and owned and operated an old anchor forge, known as Curtis' Anchor Forge, on North River, in Hanover. This forge is quite historic. Among other work for celebrated vessels the anchors for the old ship "Constitution" were made there.

When George Curtis attained his majority he engaged in the lumber business in connection with anchor-forging, and continued in the lumber business several years, being quite successful. Upon his father's death he inherited one-fourth interest in his works, and in a very few years he purchased the entire interest. He then gave his undivided attention to the prosecution of the business, built up a large and lucrative trade, and became a very successful and influential man in his community. His principal business was forging anchors and ship-knees. He spent most of his life in the work, continuing in active business till 1870, and the year following he sold the works to Eugene and Frederick Clapp.

During the war of the Rebellion, Mr. Curtis did a great amount of work for the government, and amassed a large fortune.

Mr. Curtis was a typical business man, devoting himself assiduously and energetically to the supervision of his work in all its details. Refusing all positions of office and trust, he concentrated all his efforts to the building up and carrying on of the work he had chosen as his life's business.

It was largely owing to the financial support he gave the Hanover Branch Railroad project that Mr. E. Y. Perry was enabled to carry the road through to completion. He was a director in this road to the time of his death, and carried more of its stock than any other man.

After Mr. Curtis retired from business he moved to Boston, where the remainder of his life was spent. He married Nancy, daughter of Joel Bowker, of Salem, Mass., Nov. 11, 1834. They had no issue. He was orthodox in religious faith, a Whig and Republican in politics, and was a strong temperance and anti-slavery man. He was for many years warden of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Hanover, up to the time of his removal from the town.

He died Feb. 16, 1875, leaving a large estate, mostly devised—after Mrs. Curtis' decease—to various charitable associations, institutions of learning, etc. Mrs. Curtis is still living in Boston, Mass., and is much beloved for her kind disposition, and for the generous hand with which she bestows in charity all of her large income, save what is necessary for her own support.

LEMUEL CUSHING WATERMAN.

The subject of this brief sketch, the son of Samuel and Sarah Cushing Waterman, was born July 14, 1814, in that part of Scituate now known as South Scituate, set off as a separate town from the mother-town in 1849.

His father, a man remarkable for his great worth and equally great modesty, was much esteemed for his strict integrity and unblemished character. In 1800 he was appointed a coroner by Governor Strong, and held that position for many years. Twice he represented the town in the Legislature.

The son was educated at the Hanover Academy, completing his studies there in the eighteenth year of his age. As might properly be expected, he has always felt and manifested a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of this very useful institution, and for very many years has been a member of its board of directors. He began his business life in a wholesale dry-goods house in Boston, where he remained two years. Considerations of health constrained him to return to the old homestead. Later, he entered upon the profession of teaching, and for several years successfully taught in several districts near to his birthplace. At the age of twenty-five he married Miss Elizabeth B. Gooding, a very interesting and most estimable woman, the daughter of Mr. Henry Gooding, of Boston.

After his marriage he was employed in the tack and nail-factory of Mr. Samuel Salmond, who had conducted the works since 1838. These works are on the Third Herring Brook, and are on the site of the Charles Stockbridge Mill, erected as early as 1677.

Subsequently, when he had become fully acquainted with all the details of the business, he accepted the offer made to him by his appreciative employer of the united positions of superintendent of the works and selling and collecting agent of the concern.

These responsible positions he retained about seven years, discharging their duties with fidelity and efficiency. With the death of Mr. Salmond, which occurred in 1859, his connection with these works ceased.

Soon after the death of his former employer he commenced on his own account the manufacture of tacks and nails at the factory in that part of Hanover called "Project Dale."

This business he conducted successfully until 1875, when he retired from active connection with it, leaving it to the care of his three sons,—Rodolph Cushing, Iræneus Lloyd, and Frank Herbert,—all of them upright in every relation of life, by whom it has been materially enlarged, and is still continued.

The excellence of the manufactured products of this establishment, and the sterling integrity which has ever characterized the conduct of its business affairs, has brought the usual results of great prosperity to the concern. In 1875 his friend, Mr. George Curtis, of Boston (formerly engaged extensively in the forging of anchors, on the site of Bardin's iron-works, erected in 1704, on the Indian Head River, in Hanover), died, leaving a very large estate. Mr. Curtis indicated his confidence in the integrity and business capacity of his friend, Mr. Waterman, by providing that he should take the whole estate, in trust, into his hands, and should continue to act as trustee during the life of the widow of Mr. Curtis. The management of this estate confirms the high estimate placed on the character of his friend by Mr. Curtis.

Mr. Waterman in 1855 was appointed justice of the peace, and since that time has been continuously reappointed.

For several years he was a member of the school committee, for five years a member of the board of overseers of the poor, also for the same time on the board of assessors and selectmen, the latter part of the time being chairman of the board.

In 1858, the first year the State was divided into representative districts, he represented the towns of Hanover and South Scituate in the Legislature.

After the close of that session he publicly declined being in the future a candidate for any office.

In his ecclesiastical relations he is a Churchman, and has been since 1860, and is now in the highly-important and honorable office of senior Church warden of the ancient parish of St. Andrew's, Hanover.

For a number of years he has been a director of the Hanover Branch Railroad.

He continues to live in the old homestead, on the same spot purchased by his grandfather in 1761.

These "short and simple annals" contain nothing to startle and dazzle the reader, but may subserve the good purpose of showing how industry, integrity, perseverance, and the improvement of talents and opportunities will, in due season, bear abundant fruit.

Speaking humanly, Mr. Waterman has been the architect and builder of his own fortunes. In the language of one of his own Church prayers, may it be granted to him "in health and prosperity long to live!"

DANIEL BARSTOW.

Among the names prominent in the colonial history of New England, and which, through successive generations, to the present day have designated a noble and enterprising family of people, is that of Barstow. The records indicate that William Barstow was not the first) among the first settlers of what is the town of Hanover, in 1649.

The family is of English origin, and from the West Riding of Yorkshire, where the name still occurs. The William before mentioned came from England on the ship "Truelove," 1635, in company with three of his brothers. He became a noted man in the colony, and a large landholder. He built the first bridge in Hanover over North River, kept an "inn," and sold "refreshments."

The Barstows established a ship-yard on North River as early as 1690, and later they established ship-yards also in Rochester. Deacon Samuel Barstow, born 1709, was one of the earliest settlers in Hanover, on King Street. He had four sons. The youngest son, Capt. Daniel, remained on the farm, and built the house (1798) now occupied by Robert Church. His only son, Daniel, lived with him. This Daniel had two sons, Daniel and Samuel. The latter lived with his father, and the former built his house on the site where Deacon Samuel's house stood. They married sisters. Neither of them had children, and the branch of the Barstow family is now extinct.

Daniel Barstow (see portrait) was born Sept. 18, 1808. The line of descent from the original William is as follows: William<sup>1</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Deacon Samuel<sup>4</sup>, Capt. Daniel<sup>5</sup>, Daniel<sup>6</sup>.

He was educated at the common schools of the town, was a farmer by occupation, and also did much business in connection with his father and brother, carting for the forge and anchor-works near his residence, which was established by Capt. Joseph Barstow in 1720, and which for more than a century was owned and operated by the Barstow family. Daniel Barstow took much interest in military matters, and was a major of militia. He was a member of the First Orthodox Congregational Church, and was many years treasurer of the society, and contributed liberally to the support of the ministry. He was twice married, first to Betsey Estes, December, 1818, and second, to Mrs. Lucinda Packard, October, 1828. He died April 19, 1882.

L. C. Waterman

DANIEL BARSTOW.

HISTORY OF SCITUATE AND SOUTH SCITUATE.

BY DANIEL E. DAMON.

To compile the history of so ancient a town as Scituate and bring it within the limits prescribed for this work is not easy. Much must be omitted that might well form a part, and the labor of deciding what to admit and what to omit is perplexing. The compiler does not dare to hope that his decisions in this matter will be satisfactory, or always what they should be. In his opinion those matters which relate to the more ancient part of the town's history should receive the larger share of attention, as the modern will continue to be accessible. In a brief history like this the effort should be not so much to write an interesting essay as to pack together in the smallest possible space, in dry detail, the largest number of facts and descriptions possible.

In selecting the materials for record and preservation here, the object will be to gather together that which will be likely to prove most useful for reference. Abridgment of time and space compels the leaving unrecorded much of this even, and the duty of selection and omission, though embarrassing, is imperative, and the writer asks for the charitable criticism of the reader.

Geographical.—The town of Scituate lies in the northeast corner of the old Plymouth Colony. It comprised originally the two present towns of Scituate and South Scituate, and nearly the whole of the town of Hanover. In 1727 a portion of the westerly part of the town, with a small part of Abington, was set off and incorporated as a town by the name of Hanover. Scituate, though losing much valuable territory and many valuable citizens by this action, made no opposition.

In 1849, the southwesterly part of the town was incorporated as a town, and named South Scituate. Thus it will be seen the history of Scituate and South Scituate is one until within a very few years.

The original town before dismemberment in any way was bounded northwesterly by the line between the Plymouth and Massachusetts Colonies, northeasterly by Massachusetts Bay, southerly and southeasterly by the North River, which separated it from Marshfield and that part of Duxbury now constituting the towns of Pembroke and Hanson, and southwesterly by that part of Bridgewater afterwards incorporated as the town of Abington. The northwesterly bound or colony line remained for a long time unsettled, and was matter of much controversy. The contention was mainly in consequence of the great value then attached to the salt marshes, the uncleared condition of the upland rendering marsh hay highly prized, and well nigh indispensable for feeding to cattle.

The expanse of meadow, therefore, lying south-easterly of the "Gulph," which Scituate insisted was the true and natural boundary, attracted the attention of the Hingham people, and they claimed an interest therein. To establish their claim, if possible, Winthrop says, "We caused Charles River patent to be surveyed, and found it to come so far southward as to fetch in Scituate and more; but this was referred to a meeting between us." This last expression shows that the survey based upon the loose and general expressions in the patent proved too much.

To include all Scituate was absurd, and hence the reference. In 1637, Timothy Hatherly and Nathaniel Tilden, of the Plymouth Colony, and William Aspinwall and Joseph Andrews, of the Massachusetts Colony, were appointed commissioners to determine the line. They do not appear to have fulfilled their commissions.

It is more than probable that the reason of their failure was because these two Scituate commissioners (Hatherly and Tilden) were resolved not to sacrifice the interests of Scituate. In 1640, Governor William Bradford and Edward Winslow (neither of them Scituate men), for Plymouth Colony, and Governor John Endicott and Israel Stoughton, for Massachusetts, were appointed, met, and decided that the line should run "from the mouth of the brooke that runneth into Conihasset marshes in a straight line to the middle of Accord Pond," and that sixty acres of marsh on the Scituate side should belong to Hing-

ham. This decision could not be allowed to stand, as the Plymouth Colony Court soon found that these marshes had already been largely appropriated to Scituate men, and in response to their determined demand for justice, in 1656 another commission was appointed, and decided that the "Gulph shall stand as the boundary." It seems that this was not submitted to kindly, as in 1659, Maj. Josiah Winslow, Lieut. Southworth, and Cornet Robert Stetson were appointed "to join with such as the Bay Gov't may appoint to run the line betwixt the Bay Gov't and us." The "Bay Gov't" was tardy in its response, but in 1663 appointed Maj. Ebenezer Lusher, Capt. Royer Clap, and Lieut. Joseph Fisher. The titles of these commissioners give the board a military and warlike look, but their deliberations were peaceful and their conclusions harmonious, for in May, 1664, they made return finally, settling the line as it had been by the previous commissioners in 1656, by the natural boundary of the "Conihasset Gulph." Thus the pluck and persistency of the Scituate men triumphed after a struggle of thirty years. The conflict of jurisdiction at this point left ill feeling between Hingham and Scituate, and individual claims often overlapped and came in collision, and feeling grew to such an extent that in 1685 the people of Scituate in town-meeting assembled proclaimed non-intercourse with Hingham, and voted "to block up the highway leading from Scituate common lands to Hingham, to prevent the great trespasses by those of Hingham."

The town of Scituate is now bounded (1884) northwesterly by Cohasset, northeasterly by the bay, southeasterly by Marshfield, and southwesterly by South Scituate. South Scituate is bounded northwesterly by Hingham, northeasterly by Scituate, southeasterly by Marshfield and Pembroke, and southwesterly by Hanover and Rockland.

The Two Miles belonging to the ancient Scituate was a portion of what is now Marshfield, then and now known as the "Two Miles."

It is amusing to read that as early as 1636 there was not room in Scituate for the settlers. But in that year Mr. Hatherly made complaint to the colony court "that the place was too strait for them;" and that the next year Mr. Hatherly, Mr. Lothrop, and fifteen others complained to the court that they could not subsist upon the lands allotted to them, and were granted lands between North and South Rivers, "provided they make a township there." This proposed removal to Marshfield never took place. But in 1640 the grant of the "two miles" on the east side of the North River was made to Scituate. This tract lay two miles long on the river, extending back one mile therefrom, what is now the Pembroke line being the southern boundary; it extended two miles north down the river. Some of the early settlers here were Robert Sprout, Thomas Rose, Richard Sylvester. None of these remain there represented in their descendants.

The Hatch family settled there very early also, and may be said to have nearly peopled the "Two Miles" almost to the exclusion of others.

In 1788 the "Two Miles" was annexed to Marshfield, to which town it naturally belonged. It is surprising that this little territory across the river, with no bridge to connect it with the other side, should have remained a part of Scituate for one hundred and forty-eight years.

North River.—This fine stream, which forms the natural and southern boundary of the towns in its winding way of twenty miles through the green meadows from Ludden's Ford to the sea, is one of surpassing beauty.

In former days it was the scene of busy industry. The tide therein rose and fell many feet, the rise and fall thereof extending beyond Barstow's bridge. Its banks were lined with ship-yards, and more ship-building was carried on here than upon any other river in New England. But all is now changed. A sand-bar has closed the mouth of the river to that extent that the tide flows in but a short distance.

Its portals are closed to the passage of vessels; the ship-yards are all gone; where was once heard the sound of axe, adze, and hammer all is still; and the placid stream sleeps unbroken by any passing keel. Its beauty still remains, enhanced, perhaps, by the fact that the obstructions at its mouth keep it always bank full, but its former and great usefulness is gone.

The sources of this river are in the Indian Ponds, or Mattakeeset Ponds, so called, in Pembroke, and the Drinkwater Brook which flows from Abington. The four Indian Ponds are severally called Great Sandy Bottom Pond, Furnace Pond, Indian Head Pond, and Oldham Pond. The river in its early course between Hanson and Hanover is sometimes called Indian Head River. In its onward flow it gathers to its bosom the tributary waters of the three herring brooks in the Scituates, and the Two-Mile Brook and Rogers' Brook from Marshfield.

Near Barstow's bridge, called also North River Bridge, was a favorite location for ship-building. The slope of the banks here is said to be favorable, and ship-timber abounded in that region. James Barstow is said to have built one or more vessels above the bridge. Just below the old bridge, as early as about 1660 (more than two hundred and twenty years ago), William Barstow had a ship-yard in which he and his sons for several generations were busy building ships. After them Nathaniel Sylvester and Jonathan Sampson occupied the yard for the same purpose. In close proximity to the above yard, and below it, vessels are supposed to have been built by John Clark as early as 1736, and it is certain his sons, Nathaniel and Belcher, there carried on the business for a long time, or until near the close of that century. A little below this Isaac Perry was engaged for a short time in the same business, but later he built at Parge's yard, and also at least one vessel at a yard near the Third Herring Brook.

A short distance farther down was the yard of Thomas Barstow and Capt. Robert Lenthal Eells. This last-named gentleman was a descendant of Rev. Nathaniel Eells, of Scituate, and is described by Barry as "one of the wealthiest citizens of his day, a man whose chief greatness consisted in the greatness of his soul; of unbounded hospitality, charitable, kind to the poor and suffering, devoted to everything public-spirited; an able officer of the Revolution, and who opened his doors cheerfully and widely to all who were engaged in that struggle. This yard was subsequently for a time used by John B. and Deacon Elijah Barstow.

Parge's yard, occupied mostly by Deacon Isaac Perry, was next below. Next down the river was the yard occupied for a short time by Col. John Bailey, a distinguished officer of the Revolutionary army, and afterwards by Albert and Josiah Smith. Capt. Albert Smith was an able man, and at one time held the office of high sheriff of the county. In this yard and upon this river began the training of a young man for his after eminently useful career to this country. Rear-Admiral Joseph Smith, who died recently, full of years and honors, loved and revered by all who had the great privilege of knowing him, made himself, while a mere boy, familiar with ship-building. After his father had lost his fortune by the rascality of a trusted friend, young Smith became an officer in the navy, and was serving under Perry on Lake Erie. In some way he obtained permission to build a vessel on the lake, and did so with great speed. When done he had no crew to man it. The commodore could spare no men from his other ships. But the young hero was not to be foiled in that way. Resorting to the general in command of the land forces, he got from him permission to gather a crew from the insubordinates under arrest. They were a bad set of men apparently, but under Smith's training became a band of heroic patriots. Taking them on board his ship, and treating them with that kindness with which his great heart always overflowed, in a very short time his men were wholly welded to his will. The famous Lake battle began. Smith's vessel was soon in the hottest of it. One side was nearly torn away by the enemy's shot, and the guns there dismounted. Availing himself of what he had learned in North River navigation, in the carrying of his father's vessels over the shoals which had begun to obstruct that river, he sent out a boat's crew with the necessary appliances for the work to swing the wounded side of his ship to the enemy while he loaded the guns on the other side, and then swung that side towards them to deliver his fire. Thus he fought till the end. This was a part of his naval career.

The war of the Rebellion found him an old man, but still with all the vigor of youth providentially at the head of the Bureau of Docks and Yards. The great navy created during that war grew up under his vigorous management. He did more clerical work personally than any two men in his employ, besides having the care of the immense work of the bureau. The "Monitor," which saved the navy and perhaps the government, would not have been accepted but for his strenuous efforts in its behalf. It is among the saddest incidents of the war that this vessel arrived at Newport News one day too late to save the life of his gallant son. His son, Joseph Smith,—a man worthy of his name and of his noble sire,—was in command of the "Congress." In a visit to Washington, a short time before, he had urged his father to hurry up the "Monitor," in which he had so much confidence, because of the great danger they were in from the "Merrimac," and he parted from his parent with apparent foreboding of his coming fate. It was evident he looked upon it as a final parting. It is natural to suppose that parental affection added energy to the efforts for the speediest possible dispatch of the "Monitor" to the scenes of its great triumph.

It was Sunday. Secretary Welles drove round to the church where he knew Commodore Smith was always to be found on the Sabbath and called the old hero out. He said, "You know the dangerous position of our fleet in the Chesapeake in case the 'Merrimac' comes out?" "Yes," was the reply. "Well," said the secretary, "we have only partial particulars. The 'Merrimac' has come out, and all we know is that the 'Cumberland' has been sunk and the 'Congress' has surrendered." "Then Joe is dead," said the noble father, as he turned and walked back into the church. He knew the high spirit of his son so well that he was confident no surrender could occur while he was living. And so it proved. The first broadside from the "Merrimac" had killed him, and deprived the country of one of its best naval officers.

Capt. Albert Smith, the other son of the admiral, died during the war from the effects of what he suffered in passing up the Mississippi and at the battle of New Orleans, the vessel he commanded being in the hottest of the fight. He was the last of this heroic race. This may seem like digression, but it is a bit of history that grows out of ship-building on North River. A war vessel on Lake Erie and the "Monitor" saving the fleet at Fortress Monroe are closely associated therewith.

Edmund and Samuel Eells afterwards built at this yard, and then John B. and Elijah Barstow, and lastly Elijah Barstow, Jr.

The next yard was that of David Kingman. This was not in use so long as some others. Isaiah Wing built a vessel there, as did also Benjamin and Martin Stockbridge. All the above yards were within a distance of one-half mile from Barstow's Bridge, and are within what is now the territory of Hanover, but as when many of them were first established they were within what was then the town of Scituate, mention of them all seems to belong properly to the history of the old town and of this river.

On the Pembroke side of the river, opposite, were also ship-yards, occupied by George Turner, Thomas Turner, and Nathaniel Cushing.

Down the river, below the Third Herring Brook, is the yard of Elijah Barstow and Capt. Thomas Waterman. After Capt. Waterman died his son, Thomas B. Waterman, continued the business of ship-building at the same place with Mr. Barstow, and these enterprising gentlemen continued long after all others had abandoned the business, and built the last vessel on the river. They are still living, and to be, as they are, the last representatives of that strong race of business men who for so many generations made North River ship-building famous is no slight distinction.

Near their ship-yard, but not probably on the precise site, Nathaniel Church and John Palmer began building vessels before 1690. More than one generation of their families probably continued the business there. Michael Ford, who came into Scituate from Marshfield with his brother-in-law, William Copeland, afterwards did business at this yard. It is certain also that the sons of these two men, Michael Ford and William and Ebenezer Copeland, built ships there with much enterprise for many years. Mr. Michael Ford died about 1880, very aged. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, which war interrupted all ship-building on the river for a time, and made the ship-carpenters feel like fighting England or whoever they suspected was the cause of their misfortunes.

Some distance below was the famous Wauton ship-yard. Edward Wanton (a Quaker, whose family removed to Rhode Island and became very eminent there, his son, William Wanton, being Governor of Rhode Island) came to Scituate, and about 1660 bought of William Parker a farm of eighty acres at Till's Creek, now called Dwelley's Creek. Here, just below the creek, where the river sweeps grandly in to the upland, he began ship-building about 1660, one of the earliest on the river. He died in 1716, and was buried on his farm. His children having removed, his farm was sold to John Stetson, and ship-building appears to have been carried on by the Stetsons. In 1770, Benjamin Delano removed from Pembroke and settled on the ancient Dwelley place, at Till's Creek brook, recently the home of Maj. Samuel Foster, and now owned by the Delanos again. He succeeded to the business at the Wanton ship-yard, and there conducted the business for forty years. His son, William Delano, succeeded him, and carried on the business with great energy and enterprise. He built the imposing mansion on River Street, where his daughters still reside. This house, which has always been the home of the best culture and refinement of the old town, commands a fine view of the beautifully-winding river and some of the finest scenery in the world. Elisha Foster and Samuel Foster also built ships at this place. Joseph Clapp also carried on the business here, succeeding Mr. Foster. He was the last gentleman who had enterprise enough to build at this place, and is still living. The last ship built here by him was about the year 1835.

At this Wanton ship-yard more and larger vessels were built than at any other point. A half-mile or so farther down, about the year 1690, Job Randall engaged in the business. Here also the Proutys, Chittendens, and Torreys are reported to have built ships. Within the memory of those now living, Elijah Cudworth carried on ship-building at this yard, and with him the work there ceased. Another half-mile lower down was the block-house, garrisoned and suffering attack during King Philip's war.

Here also was another ship-yard, and here the posterity of Elder Nathaniel Tilden and Deacon John James carried on the business for over a hundred years. To this point the river had flowed in a course that was nearly due north from Barstow's bridge. Here it makes a turn nearly at a right angle, and thence flows east till near the beach, when it again turns and runs nearly south to its entrance into the sea. A little below the James ship-yard is Union bridge. Barstow's bridge had been erected above in 1656, and was a free bridge. In 1801 a corporation erected Union bridge. It was a toll-bridge until 1850, when it was made free. A ferry had previously existed at this point. As Elisha Bisbe was the ferryman in 1645, it was probably established about that time. The Oakman family, of Marshfield, usually managed this ferry, but John Tolman was the last ferryman, so far as can be learned. Farther down the river was another ferry, known as Doggett's Ferry. Here, in 1825, a toll-bridge, called Little's bridge, was built. This also was made a free bridge March 20, 1865.

About a mile below Union bridge was a ship-yard, where the first vessel on the river was reputed to have been built by Samuel House in 1650. After him Thomas Nichols built vessels there, and following him Israel Hobart. Jeremiah and Walter Hatch also occupied the yard. The Briggs family, for several generations, built vessels there. Here, about 1773, James Briggs built the ship "Columbia." It was the first American ship to visit what is now the Pacific coast of this great country. Capt. Kendrick sailed up the great river he found there and named it after his ship, the "Columbia," a name so appropriate that it has been retained. Thus a little ship, built on little North River, gave a name to the mightiest river that empties from this continent into the Pacific Ocean. The last builders at this ship-yard were Cushing Briggs and Henry Briggs, and thus the business ceased about 1840. At Little's bridge, vessels were built at one time on the Marshfield side. Below Little's bridge the river expands greatly in width, the salt meadows form a vast expanse, and the scenery takes on grand proportions of beauty. The view from the "High Hills" and from the Third and Fourth Cliffs is among the finest in New England. Nearly a mile from the mouth of the river a ferry was very early established by the colony court. This was in 1638, and Jonathan Brewster was the first ferryman. He probably disliked the business or distrusted its profits, for three years later he sold the privilege to John Barker and another. But it could not have been a profitable business, for, later, Ralph Chapman petitioned the court to excuse him, as it would bring him to extreme poverty. The court voted to relieve him from his contract, "except upon special occasions, as bringing over the magistrates who reside there."

This river near its mouth, between that and the Fourth Cliff, was sometimes called "New Harbor," to distinguish it from what is more properly known as Scituate harbor. It was recognized as a harbor as early as the incorporation of the town, and vessels wintered there, the mouth of the river then being deep enough to admit them. Commerce with the West Indies has been carried on from thence also. Such is its character, that if an entrance could be obtained it would furnish one of the finest harbors of refuge on the coast. It is by no means certain but that if the government should spend some money in dredging out the mouth of this river it would benefit commerce more largely and more cheaply than is often the case with its "River and Harbor" appropriations. Upon the sea-coast is Scituate harbor, a secure little gem of a harbor when vessels get safely into it, but rather difficult of access. Government has recently been at considerable expense in building a breakwater to protect and secure and improve it. This work was brought about largely through the exertions of Hon. George Lunt, who has recently become a resident of the town and greatly interested himself in its improvement. Vessels were built in Scituate at the harbor. William James began the business there about 1646. Whether the first vessel was built here by him or by Samuel House on North River is uncertain. Afterwards Job Otis conducted the business there. In modern times the Brothers Briggs built vessels there, but that industry has now wholly vanished from the town.

Briggs Harbor, or Strawberry Cove, or, as the Indians called it, Mushquashtuck, is a small cove formed by the projection of the Glades. Ship-building on a small scale was once carried on here, and it was quite a useful little cove to the fishermen. The name "Briggs Harbor" is from the name of the man who first settled there in 1651,—Walter Briggs, a valuable citizen. His will, dated 1684, contains this quaint provision: "To my wife Frances one-third of my estate during her life, also a gentle horse or mare, and Jemmy, the Negur, shall catch it for her." The Glades, so called, situated at the northernmost point of the town, is a beautiful promontory jutting out into the sea. The southerly part of it is rugged, rocky, and covered with red-cedar. These trees, of an old growth when the country was first settled, formed quite an article of merchandise, and were sent in large quantities to Boston. The north portion of the Glades is composed of some of the finest arable land in the county. It all has quite an elevation above the sea, and the view therefrom in all directions is very fine. It is now owned and occupied by a Boston club.

Natural Topography.—Though the general features of the land and its natural productions are the same throughout Plymouth County, each town, like each human being, has those features drawn in varying lines to that extent that no one exactly resembles another, but each ever preserves its own identity. What hand but that of a Divine Architect could thus design, draw, and create a world and its inhabitants in such a way? Surely chance would be unequal to the work. Work, and designed work, it must be. There is no town in the county whose face is so varied as this. High hills, deep valleys, a few level plains, many damp, dark swamps, extended fresh meadows, broad salt marshes, and brooks running in all directions, are features of its surface. Approaching from the sea the first objects to attract the voyager are the Four Cliffs, with their white sandy fronts lifting themselves above the sea. Just inside of these that strange upheaval or deposit, whichever it may be called, now Colman's Hills, barren and unsightly in themselves, contrasting sharply with the rich meadows skirting the base, and useless except for the grand and inspiring view they afford.

The land as a whole rises gradually as it recedes from the sea and river. The soil in the northerly part of the town, near Hingham and Cohasset, is good, but generally hard of cultivation, bowlders being scattered over it with lavish hand. Large spaces of easily tilled land, however, abound. In the north part of the town are Mann Hill, Hoopole Hill, Mast Hill, Black Pond Hill, Mount Blue, and Prospect Hill. The last lies partly in Hingham, rises to a great height, and its summit affords an immense field of vision. Boston may there be seen on a clear day. It is a region thickly strewn with bowlders, covers hundreds of acres of land, and affords rich pasturage for large herds of cattle. Its soil is favorable to the growth of the barberry, which here abounds. Walnut-Tree Hill, named so by the early settlers because black-walnut trees were found growing there, is near where Judge William Cushing, of the United States Supreme Court, resided. It is unfortunate that these valuable trees should have been all destroyed without any provision being made for a succession. The last of them, an ancient survivor of the primeval forest, its trunk three feet in diameter, fell before the woodman's axe in 1820. Farther southwest is Cordwood Hill. Up the river still farther, and above Till's Brook, is an extended elevation of great height, early called Randall Hill, but since Studley Hill. This is mostly a stony range partly covered with wood, and in part affords fine pasturage and some good tillage land. Wild-Cat Hill, a mile west of this, is so called because of the killing of animals of that kind there. Pincer's Hill, at the centre of the town, and Simon's Hill, at the west part, complete the catalogue of the principal elevations of land in the town. Although there are many ponds in the town, created for manufacturing purposes, only three natural ponds of any size exist. These are Mushquasheut Pond, near the shore in the Conihasset grant; Black Pond, a deep, dark, cold pond in the north part of the town, covering about four acres; and Accord Pond, at the west corner of the town. This pond derives its name from the fact that the commissioners appointed to settle the line between the Plymouth Colony and Massachusetts Colony came to an accord or agreement that the line should run through this pond. It lies within the limits of the three towns of South Scituate, Hingham, and Rockland. It is a fine sheet of water, clear and deep, covering about seventy acres, has recently been stocked with black bass, and supplies the towns of Hingham and Hull with water. With the exception of the cliffs, "Greenfield," the north point of the Glades, part of Belle House Neck, and other places along the line of the North River which had been cleared and planted by the Indians, the early settlers found the place an unbroken forest. With the exception of the black-walnut, all the varieties of trees then existent are still represented in the extensive forests of the town. All the varieties of oak known to a northern climate grow here,—the hickory, shell-bark, and pignut, the white- and black-ash, the beech, the willow, the graceful elm, the finest of all landscape or shade-trees, and largely utilized as such, the three kinds of birch (white, black, and yellow), sassafras, holly, iron-wood (hornbeam), hemlock, all these growing on the upland. The extensive swamps grow great quantities of white-cedar and maple, and among these grows the poisonous dogwood; and last, but not least, the white-pine grows in great vigor and abundance on both upland and swamp.

The white-pine is a very valuable wood for manufacturing purposes and of rapid growth. This has been of great value to the town from its early settlement, and has entered largely into the erection of its buildings and its manufactures. Saw-mills for cutting it into lumber have always abounded in all parts of the town. The acreage covered by white-pine is today as large as it has been at any time within the last century and a half.

To describe the several hundred species of plants growing there is here impossible. The most striking of the flowering shrubs is the laurel, which grows in wild and rich luxuriance in or near Valley Swamp. In early times wolves, wild-cats, beavers, and deer were found in the forests. That wolves were numerous is evident from the passage of laws requiring the town in 1642 to maintain four wolf-traps, and in 1665 two wolf-traps. By the colony laws it appears also that a bounty of four bushels of corn was given for every wolf killed, and for a wolf killed by an Indian "a coat of trading cloth." Foxes, woodchucks, rabbits, raccoons, and squirrels abounded in the woods. Bounties at different periods have been offered for the destruction of such of these as were injurious to the farming interests. Foxes, raccoons, squirrels, crows, blackbirds, and hawks were especially under the ban. The blue-jay, the robin redbreast ("red thrasher," so called), woodpecker, oriole, bobolink, and many others contributed to make the woods beautiful with plumage and vocal with music, and must have been welcomed back to their haunts in the spring with the keenest joy by the self-exiled planters of the colony. Laws should ever be in existence and in force to protect and perpetuate these feathered friends of mankind. Wild fruits are abundant. Grapes grow in the woods and pastures, and cranberries in the meadows. Whortleberries, blackberries, strawberries, and raspberries are also found in great abundance, and have been gathered in baskets and bark by all the generations. The geological formation in Scituate is syenitic.

Indians.—When the early settlers of Scituate first came there they found a condition of things similar to that of Plymouth when the Pilgrims landed. Pestilence had swept off the natives, and a depopulated land invited their occupation. There was proof enough that this was once a well-peopled region. But the cleared planting-grounds had been long abandoned. The Indian corn-hills were overgrown with grass to an extent that gave the name of Greenfield to one at least of those planting-places. The tribe to which this territory had belonged was the Mattakeesetts, and the remnant thereof was living about the Indian Ponds in Pembroke. Very likely this locality may have been always the headquarters of the tribe. A few scattered individuals of the race lingered about the burial-grounds of their fathers, and died there perhaps. Deane says a few families made a summer residence about Wigwam Neck as late as 1700. Members of the families of Opechus, Tantachi, and Attawan were there as late as 1740, and the Indian Simon, living near Simon's Hill, which still bears his name, was there later still, and the last of the race probably was Comsett, who enlisted in the Revolutionary army. The settlers might well have claimed that this abandoned territory could be taken possession of under a claim of right, and that their title would be an honest one. For this, however, they were far too conscientious, and as soon as the proper negotiations could be entered into proceeded to extinguish whatever Indian title might be said to exist by purchase from Josias Wampanuck, the chief of Mattakeesetts, within whose tribal territory Scituate was supposed once to lie. This Indian title deed to the township of Scituate reads as follows. Perhaps it should be added here that this deed is not the first one which was obtained about 1640, but was one substituted for it, with the evident object of including the "Two Miles." The Mattakeesetts were a friendly people :

"I, Josiah Wampanuck, do acknowledge and confess that I have sold two tracts of land unto Mr. Timothy Hatherly, Mr. James Cudworth, Mr. Joseph Tilden, Humphrey Turner, William Hatch, John Hoar, and James Torrey, for the proper use and behoof of the Town of Scituate, to be enjoyed by them according to the true intents of the English grants. The one parcel of such land is bounded from the mouth of the North River, as that River goeth to the Indian Head River; from thence, as that River goeth unto the Pond at the head of that River, and from the pond at the head of the Indian Head River upon a straight line unto the middle of Accord Pond; from Accord Pond, by the line set by the Commissioners as the bounds betwixt the two jurisdictions, untill it meet with the line of the land sold by me unto the sharers of Conihassot, as that line runs between the Town and the sharers, until it cometh to the sea; and so along by the sea unto the mouth of the North River aforesaid. The other parcell of land, lying on the easterly side of the North River, begins at a lot which was some time the land of John Ford, and so to run two miles southerly as the River runs, and a mile in breadth towards the east, for which parcell of land, I do acknowledge to have received of the men, whose names are before mentioned, fourteen pounds in full satisfaction, in behalf of the inhabitants of the town of Scituate as aforesaid; and I do hereby promise and engage to give such further evidence before the Governor as the Town of Scituate shall think meet, when I am thereunto required. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand in presence of

"NATHANIEL MORTON.

EDWARD HAWES.

SAMUEL NASH.

"} "JOSIAS WAMPATUCK.
his mark.

"At the same time when Josias made acknowledgment, as above mentioned, there was a Deed brought into Court which he owned to be the Deed which he gave to them whose names are above specified for the said lands, and that he had not given them another; which deed was burnt in presence of the Court.

"NATHANIEL MORTON, Secretary."

Settlement and Growth.—Scituate, though lying within the territorial limits of the Pilgrim Colony of Plymouth, can scarcely be said to have been settled by the Pilgrim people of that colony, and neither was it wholly settled by the Puritan element of the Massachusetts Colony. In Scituate the confluent streams of settlement by way of Plymouth and of Boston seemed to have met and mingled. The first inhabitants came in by way of Plymouth. It is probable that the settlers at Plymouth explored the coast at Scituate, and made grants of lands there to persons before any settlements were made at the place. The cliffs were cleared "planting lands," and were sought for and title to them obtained from the colony government by non-residents. This will explain those transactions which have led to the supposition that Scituate had one or two English settlers before 1628, and claimed as early as 1626. It is not probable that Scituate was the residence of any white man until 1630. Henry Merritt is conjectured to have lived there before 1628, and he may have done so, but the mere fact that he conveyed "planting lands" in 1628, which he bought of Goodman Bird, to Nathaniel Tilden, is not conclusive evidence that he lived there. The fact that Bird does not appear among the list of freemen, and that Henry Merritt was not admitted as a freeman, until 1638 is against the theory that they established homes there before 1630.

They may have been there on business, cultivating their "planting lands" in the Third Cliff, but their homes were most likely elsewhere. And against the theory that they resided there before 1630 is this almost controlling fact that Rev. Mr. Lothrop, first minister at Scituate, appears to have left a manuscript in which he undertakes to give the names of all the "Planters of Scituate" who had houses at Scituate after his arrival there,—“about the end of Sept. 1634.” Of the nine houses he mentions, there is none either of Henry Merritt or Thomas Bird. It is not conceivable that he could overlook or omit any.

Anthony Annable came to Plymouth in 1623, and had lands assigned him there. He became interested in land in Scituate apparently, and selling his house and land in Plymouth, in 1630, must soon have removed to Scituate, but whether much before 1633 is uncertain. In April, 1633, the land at the Second Cliff was divided between Anthony Annable, William Gilson, Edward Foster, and Henry Rowley. Whether houses were built there is uncertain; there may have been. According to Mr. Lothrop, who came in January, 1634, after his arrival in September, 1634, Mr. Hatherly, Mr. Cudworth, Mr. Gilson, Mr. Annable, Mr. Rowley, Mr. Turner, Mr. Cobb, Mr. Hewes, and Mr. Foster had houses. As the same authority says that Henry Rowley did not build on his lot on Kent Street until after that, and that James Cudworth, Henry Cobb, and John Hewes did not build on their lots till 1636, it is not unlikely that Mr. Rowley, and perhaps others, had houses on their lands at the cliff, and it is very probable that Mr. Gilson may have been there also, although there are some reasons for believing that his house and Edward Foster's were on what was afterwards called Kent Street, and that their lots were assigned them with reference thereto.

There can be no doubt that Mr. Cudworth's house was across the brook northerly from Mr. Foster's and in the Conihasset grant, while Mr. Hatherly's house was probably either farther north or on one of the cliffs. These houses were of a slight and temporary character, not log houses, but, as Mr. Lothrop describes them, "small plaine pallisade houses." As these houses were somewhat scattered, it indicates that they felt a sense of security, which, however, they did not allow to make them neglect proper precaution in subsequently arranging the plan of their town. The nine gentlemen mentioned by Mr. Lothrop as having houses there in 1634 may be properly regarded as the first settlers of the town. The order in which they arrived there can never be known. They preserved the memory of their English home in the name given to the street first laid out and permanently built upon. "Men of Kent" they were called, because of their emigration from that county in England. Aug. 2, 1633, may be regarded as the day when they took permanent possession for purposes of settlement, as that day they proceeded to lay out a street (allowing to each house-lot not more than four acres) with a view to building their village in such a way as would be favorable for defense against their enemies. Thus Kent Street, named for their native county in Old England, was there located, and lots bounding only eight rods on said street, but running back eighty rods into the woods, were laid out.

That street still exists just where the fathers located it, and made their homes in this then wilderness of America. The descendants of a few of them still live on these first Scituate homesteads, and look across the same green meadows to the same fertile cliffs and shingle beach and boundless blue ocean beyond that their fathers looked upon in their lonely exile, as with grim resolve they sat down there to help begin the building of a great and new nation with its "new departure" for civil and religious freedom. Kent Street follows the winding shore of the salt marsh; and may the curving beauty of the lines of this ancient highway never be destroyed by the evil spirit of straight lines which has taken such full possession of selectmen and county commissioners, and has led them to destroy the beauty, without materially enlarging the utility, of so many of our old roads. It was originally well located for the purposes proposed. It started a little southeasterly of Satuit Brook, at the corner of a way then or shortly after used for travel westerly into the woods and on the border of the salt marsh the lines of which it followed, running a southeasterly course. In front stretched away a large expanse of salt marsh, an open plain, to the second cliff and the beach that separated it from the ocean. No foe could approach from that direction without being greatly exposed and surely observed, and the same way they might seek the beach and ocean. Thus by clearing the land in the rear of their houses only they could place themselves in as good position for defense as could well be provided in a new country. The first lot nearest the brook was assigned to Edward Foster, and the second to William Gilson, and it seems not improbable that their houses previously erected may have been on these lots. The third lot was assigned to Henry Rowley, the fourth to Humphrey Turner, the fifth to Henry Cobb, the sixth to Anthony Annable. These men, and John Hewes, evidently of Pilgrim immigration by way of Plymouth, built houses on these lots. Mr. Humphrey Turner had previously built a house on the southeast side of Colman's Hills, adjacent to the broader marshes of North River, on the fine farming land there. He and Henry Cobb built houses on their lots on Kent Street in 1636, and Henry Rowley and Anthony Annable earlier than that.

It is singular that of these six only two left any descendants resident in Scituate. William Gilson was a very enterprising man, erecting a wind-mill for grinding corn (the first in the county, no doubt) upon his land on the Second Cliff. He seems to have been an able and educated man, and was an assistant in the government for several years. He died about 1619, leaving no children, his nephew, John Damon, being his heir.

Edward Foster was an educated lawyer, but there was not much scope for the practice of his profession in those early days. He left one son, Timothy, from whom descended a numerous posterity, and one largely influential in the affairs of this town. The Foster family has always been prominent, enterprising, and influential.

Humphrey Turner, one of the most enterprising of these first settlers, has had a large posterity, and one which has been much more largely represented in the population of the town than the Fosters. It has ever been an active and public-spirited family. Hon. Charles Turner, one of his descendants, was representative to Congress in 1812. Of the others, Henry Rowley disappeared early, Elder Henry Cobb removed to Barnstable, and his descendants are numerous in Plymouth and other southern towns in Plymouth County, but have never appeared in Scituate, and Anthony Annable also removed to Barnstable.

Of these first six only Edward Foster and Humphrey Turner left descendants in Scituate.

A few months later, Rev. Mr. Lothrop, with thirty of his people, came to Boston, and thence to Scituate.

This was the first contingent furnished by the Massachusetts Colony to the settlement of Scituate. Among those who came with him were evidently Richard Foxwell, Samuel House, and Henry Bourne. Richard Foxwell built a house on his lot on Kent Street, between 1634 and 1636. It is quite probable that Henry Bourne succeeded him in the ownership thereof when he removed to Barnstable, and that Bourne may not have removed to that place, or that if he did, he returned to Scituate.

In February, 1674, there was a further allotment of land made necessary by Rev. Mr. Lothrop's arrival, with those of his church. These came mostly from London, but the same winter others of their Kentish friends also came among them. Their house-lots, assigned in February and April, were laid out on Kent Street to the southward of a way that came to be known as Meeting-house Lane, because it led to that "overlooking hill" back of and above their village, where the first meeting-house was built. Beginning at Meeting-house Lane, lots on Kent Street, of the same size as the preceding, were assigned to George Lewis, John Hewes, Walter Woodworth, Richard Foxwell, and Isaac Chittenden. These lots extended as far as "Greenfield," a tract of cleared land apparently planted by Indians, in which lots on the same street were laid out to Samuel Fuller, Barnard Lombard, and Goodman Hoyt. From the number of lots assigned in this field, some idea can be obtained of the dimensions of this Indian planting-ground. Crossing "Greenfield Lane," lots of five acres each on Kent Street were assigned to William Hatch, Samuel Hinkley, and Nathaniel Tilden. Then crossing a way called the "Driftway," lots were set off to Isaac Stedman, George Kendrick, Daniel Standlake, John Lewis, and George Lewis. These lots are all on Kent Street, and extended from near Satuit Brook southerly to the southwesterly side of that remarkable upheaval of sand and gravel called then the "High Hills," now "Colman's Hills." A majority of these earliest settlers made but a temporary impression upon the settlement and character of this plantation. The assignment of lots to George Lewis near the High Hills, next to his brother, John, evidently shows that these brothers wished to live side by side. But not long. George Lewis removed to Barnstable in 1640, and John disappears early from Scituate. So far as learned, none of their name and posterity remain in Scituate, though the descendants of George are numerous in other parts of Plymouth County, and perhaps in Barnstable. George Lewis, John Lewis, Barnard Lombard, Richard Foxwell, and Samuel Fuller were "men of Kent." Lombard, Fox-well, and Fuller also removed to Barnstable in 1640, or about that time, and leave no posterity in Scituate. John Hewes, "the Welshman," left no descendants there. Thomas Hinckley came with Mr. Lothrop, and went with him on his removal to Barnstable, in 1639 or 1640. Isaac Stedman removed to Boston about 1650. No evidence that Hoyt remained in Scituate after 1640 can be found. George Kendrick, who came from Plymouth in 1633, remained in Scituate but a few years, and appears to have been living in Boston in 1645. In regard to Daniel Standlake, it is probable that none of his posterity survive, unless it be in the Pincin and Sylvester families.

Thus it appears that of the first settlers on Kent Street only Nathaniel Tilden, Edward Foster, Humphrey Turner, Walter Woodworth, Isaac Chittenden, and William Hatch were influential in the permanent settlement of the town. Of these, Isaac Chittenden remained, and two of his sons, Isaac and Benjamin, were killed in the Indian wars. The name disappeared from the town generations ago, but as his daughter Sarah married Capt. Anthony Collamore, a large posterity has followed him in this line. Towards the close of the eighteenth century the last of the male Chittendens removed. It would be an interesting inquiry whether the settlement of Chittenden County in Vermont can in any way be connected with this family.

Walter Woodworth had many descendants in Scituate, but those in the male line one after another removed until few if any of the name remained in the nineteenth century. Samuel Woodworth, of New York, the poet, and author of the "Old Oaken Bucket," was of his descendants, a native of Scituate, and the "wide-spreading pond and the mill that stood by it" are still there,—the "Stockbridge Mill,"—and the well where the bucket hung is still in use on the Northey place. Walter Woodworth had two daughters,—Mary and Martha. Mary married Aaron Simons, and Martha married Lieut. Zachary Damon, and in these two lines a numerous posterity still remains in the town. Later on females of the Woodworth family intermarried with the Merritt and Sylvester families, so that in those large families also the blood survives. Nathaniel Tilden, the ruling elder of the first church, is said to have come from Tenterden, in Kent County.

He has been followed in the old town, upon whose settlement and history he early exerted so large an influence, by a race worthy of their ancestor. The Tilden family has been distinguished and influential in Scituate in all its generations. Of this family is the distinguished Samuel J. Tilden, a former Governor of the great State of New York, and the perhaps elected President of the United States in 1876. Of these first settlers, perhaps William Hatch has in all the succeeding generations been most largely represented among the inhabitants of Scituate. As a family it has clung closely to the old town, and in all its numerous branches has been a thrifty and respectable race. Before this allotment of lands on Kent Street, on the southerly side of Colman Hills, Humphrey Turner owned a farm and had built his house. Next westerly of him, the minister, Mr. John Lothrop, lived, it is supposed, in a house built after 1634, on his farm during the few years of his service in that place, and westerly of him, his land extending nearly to the Herring Brook, came Isaac Robinson. Still farther to the southward Isaac Stedman probably had a house, while pushing out still farther to the south and up the river, William Vassal, Thomas King, and Resolve White had erected houses on the Neck, and John Stockbridge at the harbor. It is not certainly known that the settled parts of the plantation reached much farther previous to its incorporation.

Previous to 1636 the plantation was governed by Plymouth. It was an outlying ward of that town. It probably had only one duly-elected and qualified officer at that time, and that was a constable. He was then evidently a very important officer. In the Old Colony Records it thus appears: "At a General Court, held Jan. 1, 1633, in the ninth year of Charles, the King, Thomas Prence was elected Governor, . . . Anthony Annable chosen constable for the Ward of Scituate, and to serve the King in that office for the space of one whole year, and to enter upon the same with the Governor elect."

In 1636 the town was incorporated, settlers had been coming rapidly in, and this plantation was pushing ahead. The broad marshes on the coast, and running up the North River for many miles had, by the abundance of forage they afforded, been one of the attractions to settlers.

It naturally happened, therefore, that farms were laid out with reference to these marshes, and the town was first settled along the banks of this charming river. Earlier even than these first homes on Kent Street was the coming of Henry Merritt, for some purpose, into the place. How he had acquired his title is a mystery. He says from Thomas Bird. But his title and Bird's was doubtless only a squatter title, and in 1628 he is found conveying planting lands on the Third Cliff to Nathaniel Tilden. It was easy to conclude he had been in the place for a year or more before that, and erroneously supposed he was the first settler. It could not be. His house was at the corner of Greenfield Lane and the Driftway, and built after 1636. He evidently knew how to take care of himself in a new country, and secured large grants of marsh lands, and was one of the Conihasset partners. A large proportion of the inhabitants of Scituate can trace their lineage from this worthy founder of the town. He is evidently one of the first who made a permanent settlement in this town, and died there.

We have seen that William Vassall, a talented and educated gentleman who came to Scituate, where he seemed to find congenial fellowship and built his house near North River, from which the whole neck of land where it was erected (leading down to Little's bridge) was called "Belle House Neck."

Elder Henry Cobb, though he had a house on Kent Street, apparently had a farm of eighty acres at that point on North River where it makes a sharp curve from its northerly course and turns easterly towards the sea, and where a block-house was erected for defense in the Indian wars. Whether he ever lived on this farm is uncertain, as he removed to Barnstable in 1640. Samuel House seems to have settled southerly of Colman's Hills, where he built a house before 1636.

Cornet Robert Stetson pushed his adventurous way in 1634 far up the river into the wilderness, miles above any other settler, building his house on a plain near the river, and by a valuable spring, which supplied him with water. "Cornet's Rocks," on the river, mark the site of his farm. Deane speaks of him as "an enterprising and valuable man of considerable wealth, a Deputy to Court, a Cornet of the first light-horse troop raised in the Colony, a member of the Council of war, a Colony Commissioner for settling the patent lines,—in short, he lived long, and left a good name at last." His posterity in the old town is a large one, and it has spread all over the land. His expedition into the Indian country, in an effort to communicate with King Philip, and avoid a war if possible, shows his remarkable courage and willingness to undertake the most dangerous and responsible duties for the good of the colony.

William Barstow and Joseph Sylvester settled early in the south part of the town, and have transmitted their energy and ability through a long line of worthy descendants. John Palmer settled still farther south about 1650, between Church Hill and the Third Herring Brook, over which he built a bridge called Palmer bridge. In the female line his descendants are numerous in the old town, but those bearing the name have gone to other places, where it is a famous and honored name. In 1640 William Randall settled near the river and Till Creek. He was said to be a very enterprising man, but it is not improbable that his tendency to dispute with his neighbors and get into legal controversy was the reason why the General Court was called upon to lay out a footpath for Cornet Stetson to go over to meeting. This is the more likely from the fact that he (Randall) contended also that it was wrong to pay religious teachers. Turning back to the harbor, we find John Williams located very early, perhaps as early as 1634, on his farm northerly of the harbor, and adjoining it. He left no children, and by his will this farm, one of the best in the country, passed to the Barker family, in which it has ever since remained.

That part of Scituate called the "Conihasset Grant" was settled very early. It extended from Satuit Hook northerly to the Massachusetts line, and extending westerly "three miles up into the woods, from the high-water mark in the brook." This was granted to Timothy Hatherly and others. Mr. Hatherly purchased the whole tract from his associates. Upon this territory many persons had located themselves, John Williams among the number, and much controversy arose between the grantees and the squatters. Mr. Hatherly, with that largeness and liberality of mind for which he was noted, having decided to make Scituate his home, divided this whole grant into thirty shares, reserving one fourth to himself, and sold it to a company called the "Conihasset partners." This company included the squatters, and brought about a peaceable settlement of all their claims. The partners were Charles Chauncey, Thomas Chambers, John Williams, James Cudworth, Joseph Tilden, Henry Merritt, Thomas Rawlins, Thomas Tarte, John Hoar, Richard Sealis, Thomas Ensign, Thomas Chittenden, John Stockbridge, John Allen, Thomas Riland, John Whitcomb, John Woodfield, Edward Jenkins, John Hallett, Ann Vinal, William Holmes, John Whiston, Gowin White, John Damon, Rodolphus Ellmes, and Richard Mann.

Many of these were early settlers on the Conihasset lands, but the date of their settlement can only be approximately ascertained by reference to the time when they were admitted as freemen or took the oath of fidelity.

John Williams, James Cudworth, John Hoar, Richard Sealis, Edward Jenkins, Ann Vinal, Rodolphus Ellms, and Richard Mann were there very early, and located on this grant. Of these Gen. James Cudworth became a very distinguished citizen of the colony. His home was near Little Musquashcut Pond, after selling his house at Satuit Brook to Thomas Ensign. He was deputy from Scituate to the Colony Court for many years, also an assistant in the government, and a commissioner of the colonies in 1657. While serving in this capacity he strenuously resisted the persecution of the Quakers. In this he showed himself a man superior to the prejudices of his times. He refused to sanction the severe laws against that turbulent sect,—for the Quakers of that day were wholly unlike those of later years,—and as a consequence he was for many years excluded from any share in the government and in public affairs. In 1659, Scituate elected him as a deputy, but the court at Plymouth, under the influence, probably, of the bigoted Governor Prence, excluded him, and in 1660 disfranchised him. It is not unusual for men who too faithfully serve the public to be thus treated. In this local history repeats itself from time to time. But times of peril came; the Indian wars arose, and Gen. Cudworth was asked to take command of the Plymouth Colony forces. With his native nobility of character and lofty patriotism, he put aside all memory of his wrongs, and accepted the perilous and responsible service. His career was one of eminent usefulness to the colony and town. His descendants still live in Scituate. Richard Sealis has no descendants in town. The name died with him.

John Hoar is said to have been a lawyer. His farm adjoined Gen. Cudworth's. He removed to Concord about 1660, and Hon. E. R. Hoar, late judge of the Supreme Court and ex-Attorney-General of the United States, and Hon. George F. Hoar, United States senator, are among his descendants. Thomas Ensign settled north of the brook. He had but one child, John, who fell with Capt. Peirce in 1676, one of the heroes of the Rehoboth battle. One daughter survived him, who married Stephen Otis. From her descended the generations of physicians who successively doctored the people of this town. Capt. John Allen was a man of some military note in the Indian wars. He left one son, who left no descendants. John Whitcomb was in Scituate but a few years and removed to Lancaster. John Woodfield, whose house was north of Thomas Ensign's, left no descendants. Edward Jenkins, though one of the Conihasset partners, did not live on that territory, but on the north part of Edward Foster's lot on Kent Street. Those of his name and lineage have always lived in the town. John Hallett was a large landholder, and, it may be, spent much of his life in this town; but his descendants are in Barnstable County and other places, to which they migrated from that county. Ann or Anna Vinal must have been a wonderful woman. She came to this wilderness in 1636 with three children, the youngest only six years old, and here established a home, built her house on the brook north of Stockbridge's mill-pond in 1637, and met with merited success. Her descendants in every generation have been worthy citizens of the town, and the family is still numerous.

William Holmes was a short time in Scituate, then removing to Marshfield.

John Whitcomb was in Scituate in 1636, and died in 1660. He left one son, who removed.

Gowin White may have lived a short time on the Conihasset lands, but in 1650 he purchased a large farm south of Till's Creek, and probably lived there, a neighbor of William Randall and Robert Stetson.

John Damon, a boy at that time, came to Scituate before 1633, with his uncle, William Gilson. He was one of the Conihasset partners, but as he inherited his uncle's estate on Kent Street, it is probable that he always resided there. He was an influential man, and seems to have been much employed in public affairs, and was repeatedly chosen a deputy to the General Court. His sons, John and Lieut. Zachary, were active in King Philip's war. His posterity is a large one, and many of the name have always lived in Scituate. The farm of Rhodolphus Ellms was near Mann Hill, between that and the farm of Gowin White. His descendants have always lived upon, and still occupy, their ancestral farm. They are a very respectable race, and always exercised a favorable influence upon the prosperity of the town. Richard Mann is the only member of the "Mayflower" company that settled in Scituate. His farm was north of John Hoar's, of Mann's Hill, so named from him, and ever known as such. His descendants have always been present in all parts of the old town, a thriving, respected race of men and women. How much farther north the settlement extended in the first half of that century it is not easy to discover. The northern boundary of this grant and of the town was a matter of long and bitter controversy between the two colonies, resulting finally in making Bound Brook the northern boundary at the shore, and here, in 1700, came Mordecai Lincoln, and built a large house, the most northerly in the town, and the mill known as Lincoln Mills. He was the ancestor of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President. Among the other earlier settlers was John Lowell. He was in Scituate from 1658 to about 1665. He was the ancestor of Judge Lowell, of Boston, and other distinguished men of the name. Scituate lost many of her early settlers by their removal with Mr. Lothrop to Barnstable. But when Lawrence Litchfield came from Barnstable to Scituate, a few years later, the loss was largely compensated for. His descendants have probably been more numerous in the town than that of any other family, and have always been honored, influential, and public-spirited citizens, impressing themselves strongly in the religious and educational interests of the town.

John Stockbridge was in Scituate as early as 1638. His first house was near the harbor, but before 1660 he built the Stockbridge mansion, near the pond bearing his name. This house was garrisoned during the Indian war, and was the original hive from which swarmed the stalwart Stockbridge race, which so strongly impressed itself upon the early history of this region. In its ancient home the name is dying out, but in distant parts of the land it still survives in its old and strong characteristics. The names of most of the early settlers who may be said to have left their mark upon the old town have been given. In compiling a town history no apology is needed for calling attention to the men and the kind of men who started that town into being and impressed its character upon the plantations. These were largely men of more than ordinary culture and education, and many of them of extraordinary mental power and capacity for affairs, and these characteristics have descended through some of the first generations at least to their descendants. Settled by such men, it is not strange that this town made rapid progress. The old town of Plymouth early lost many of its strongest men. Brewster, Standish, and Alden removed to Duxbury, Bradford to Kingston, and Winslow to Marshfield. Perhaps this hindered its progress. At any rate, the record shows that less than fifty years after the landing of the Pilgrims, in 1667, the valuation of Scituate for taxable purposes was nearly double that of Plymouth.

The following table of amount of taxes levied on the several towns in the colony at that time may be interesting :

	£	s.	d.
Plymouth.....	25	18	00
Duxburrow.....	23	11	09
Scituate.....	42	07	00
Sandwich.....	23	11	04
Taunton.....	23	11	04
Yarmouth.....	21	13	04
Barnstable.....	25	18	00
Marshfield.....	21	13	04
Rehoboth.....	25	07	00
Eastham.....	18	18	00
Gowanus.....	10	10	00
Dartmouth.....	14	00	00
	286	18	08

This rate lasted in the same proportion substantially for about twenty years.

In this levy of taxes in 1681 there was an apportionment of two pounds upon " Accord Pond shares."

This must have been a part of Scituate. These shares were taxed separately only from 1681 to 1686.

In the contribution of soldiers to the defense of the colony in the Indian wars, the relative importance and superiority of Scituate also appears. In 1675, at the outbreak of hostilities, Scituate was ordered to furnish twenty-three men and Plymouth only fifteen, thus indicating the relative population of the two towns a half-century after settlement.

Military Matters.—In military affairs, in that early time, Scituate occupied a prominent position. Before Scituate was settled Standish had in some personal encounters punished a few refractory savages, and in the Pequot war of 1637 the Plymouth Colony was not largely involved. Scituate sent three volunteers into that fight, however. For thirty-eight years after that war peace had prevailed with the Indians. But for some years before Philip commenced open hostilities it became evident that the colonies should put themselves in a state of preparation for attack by enrollment and drilling in companies. In 1652, Scituate had a "military discipline" established, with James Cudworth as captain. In 1653 a council of war became a permanent institution for the colony. It consisted of eleven men, and Scituate usually furnished a large part. In 1665 five of the eleven were from that town,—namely, Cornet Robert Stetson, Sergt. John Damon, Isaac Chittenden, Edward Jenkins, and Lieut. Isaac Buck. But there was sometimes conflict between this live town and the Colony Court. In 1666 the company elected James Cudworth captain, and Michael Peirce lieutenant, sending their names to the court for approval. These two men subsequently greatly distinguished themselves. They were snubbed as follows: "As to Mr. Cudworth it is directly against the advice of the Court, and as to Mr. Peirce he is a stranger to us; therefore Sergt. John Damon is directed to take the command until further orders." Yet a few years later they anxiously sought to give Gen. James Cudworth the command of all the colony forces. Just fifty years from the time when Goodman Bird and Henry Merritt are supposed to have first set foot in Scituate, and just one hundred years before the opening of the Revolutionary struggle, came perilous times, checking the prosperity of the town. Philip had aroused the Indian tribes to war, and it happened that Scituate felt the force of the conflict more than any other town in the colony. It proved to be specially exposed to danger. Garrisons were established at Capt. John Williams' in the Conihassett grant, at the "block-house" on North River, and what was regarded as the principal garrison at the Stockbridge mansion, and another garrison of twelve men at Mr. Joseph Barstow's, near what is now called Hanover "Four Corners."

To garrison these forts called many men to arms. Scituate sent twenty men into the fight at the Narragansett fort, Dec. 19, 1675. At the storming of this fort Sergt. Theophilus Witherell was wounded and crippled for life. Joseph Turner, John Vinal, and William Perry also suffered in the same fight, their wounds not proving quite so severe.

But a heavy calamity was impending. The Narragansetts began ravaging Rhode Island in the spring of 1676, and Capt. Michael Peirce, with a company of fifty white men and twenty friendly Indians, was ordered to march against them. Eighteen of the fifty were from Scituate.

On the 25th of March, with a few of his men, he had an encounter with the enemy, in which he thought they suffered some, while no damage was done to his force. The next day he marched out with his whole company, and probably one or two Rehoboth men as guides, to find and attack the enemy. Coming to the river he discovered the enemy, and crossed to attack, when he found himself in the presence of Canonchet, who had massed there the whole fighting force of his still powerful tribe. With such an overwhelming force in front and the river in his rear the situation was desperate indeed. The Indians also crossed over a large party to cut off all possible retreat across the river. Nothing was left for this brave band but to sell their lives as dearly as possible. Forming his company so as to meet the attack both in front and rear, they fought till nearly every man had fallen. A few of the friendly Indians escaped and one white man, Thomas Mann, of Scituate, who was sorely wounded. The former escaped only because of their being better able to conceal their identity.

The fidelity, bravery, and cool ingenuity shown by these friendly Indians was wonderful, and should be noted to redeem their race from the popular and too easily received opinion that the Indian is incapable of elevation, and is necessarily cruel, ignoble, and to be treated like a wild beast of prey. Of the Scituates slain, the following fifteen names are known: Capt. Michael Peirce, Samuel Russell, Benjamin Chittenden, John Lothrop, Gershom Dodson, Samuel Pratt, Thomas Savary, Joseph Wade, William Wilcom, Jeremiah Barstow, John Ensign, Joseph Cowen, Joseph Perry, John Perry, John Rose. Thomas Mann escaped, wounded, thus leaving two of the eighteen unaccounted for. They were no doubt killed, making the loss of Scituate seventeen.

The others killed in this battle were from the following towns: Marshfield, nine; Duxbury, four;

Sandwich, five; Barnstable, six; Yarmouth, five; and Eastham, four.

This was a severe blow to the colony, and especially to Scituate. More than half the slain were heads of families. We can have no conception of the terror and suffering of those times. Their fathers killed, rumors of marauding bands of savages approaching, the cunning and mystery of their movements, the nameless horrors of Indian warfare, all tended to intensify their unintermitting anxiety and alarm. Every movement from place to place, from neighbor to neighbor, was fraught with danger, as any tree or shrub might hide a lurking foe. These were not vain fears. On the 21st of April the first attack was made upon the town, but the vigilant and courageous people repulsed and drove them off for that time. So far as known, William Blackmore was the only man killed in this raid.

On the 20th of May they made a more comprehensive attack upon the town. A strong force, passing through Hingham, killing John Jacob and burning several houses, came into Scituate by the "Indian path," committing their first depredations at what is now the Hanover line, on the Third Herring Brook, there burning the "Coronet's mill." Passing rapidly on, they burned the house of Joseph Sylvester, situated northerly from Church Hill and a mile north of the Barstow house garrison. This garrison they did not care to delay themselves with. If their attack had a plan, it was apparently to burn all the houses on their way down, to attack the garrisons below, and, having wiped them out of existence, they could easily dispose of the twelve men at Barstow's on their return. That their force was strong and had no fears of this little garrison is shown by the boldness of their subsequent movements. They pressed rapidly forward down the river and towards the stronger fortresses below, "burning as they went." The helpless condition of the little garrison behind them can be easily seen, with all the settlement between them and the principal part of the town, in ashes. On their way from the Third Herring Brook to the Stockbridge fortress and about there as many as thirteen dwelling-houses were burned and quite as many barns. From the location of their houses it is probable that those of Nicholas Albeson (the Swede), William Parker, Edward Wright, Thomas Woodworth, William Wills, Daniel Standlake, Abraham Sutcliffe, John Buck, James Torrey, Widow Torrey, Henry Ewell, John Northey, John Curtis, John Bompasse, Widow Blackmore, George and Samuel Russell, and Thomas King, Jr., were burned.

But these were not all. The house of John James, near the block-house, was probably burned, though he may have successfully defended it, as he was wounded, and died of his wounds a few days after. It is noteworthy that his farm, located on the river at a place of romantic beauty and historic interest, should, through his only son, have descended and still remained in the family. Deacon Elisha James, of fragrant memory, died a few years since, and was the last of the name to inherit, but his daughter, the wife of Judge Parmenter, of Boston, still owns the old place, consecrated by the blood shed of her first ancestor in its defense.

In this burning and ravaging of the town it does not appear that any of the women and children perished. Such was the vigilance of the inhabitants that probably all succeeded in taking refuge in the fortified places. The men in these places, with their wives and little ones to defend, might well prove themselves to be heroes, as they did. The block-house was attacked, but successfully defended. Its position seemed to have been a strong one.

Having by this attack admonished this garrison to stay where it was, the crafty foe swept on his desolating way towards the more strongly garrisoned but less favorably located fortress below. If they could carry this, the whole town could be destroyed. As the garrison in the block-house marked their progress by the successive columns of smoke that rose above the trees from their burning houses, it must have been a torturing question as to what their duty was. Should they abandon their families under slight guard in the block-house, and march after them to the help of their brethren below, with the chances against their making successful attack, or remain where they were? The situation was a desperate one, and the imagination may attempt to paint, but can little realize the anxious consultations in that little fort. That they sent a message up the river to Cornet Stetson, then sixty-four years of age, or that he got intelligence from above, is probable. At any rate, this veteran, a tower of strength to the town, descended the river with some men, augmenting their number here no doubt, and took a part in the fight about the Stockbridge mills before it closed, and the savages were driven off. The preservation of these mills was of much consequence to the town. Therefore the mansion was stockaded on three sides, the pond being considered a sufficient natural defense on that side. Here one of the hardest battles of the war was fought. The Indians fought bravely and suffered heavily. For several hours they made desperate efforts to fire the mills and capture the house. Lieut. Isaac Buck was apparently in command at this place, and gathered in all the available force below, and later in the day, being reinforced by Cornet Stetson from above, near nightfall the enemy was defeated and driven off.

Courage and skill won the day against greatly superior numbers, and saved not only Scituate, but perhaps the whole colony south from further extended ravages. And yet that same week Governor Winslow could complain of "the inactivity of the inhabitants of Scituate about this time." Strange ignorance of facts, or stranger injustice in view of them! At the same time he praises forty men from the three towns of Plymouth, Duxbury, and Marshfield, who ventured as far as Bridgewater, and saw but did not fight a small straggling party of the enemy. What was Scituate doing at the same point of time, with a large part of the town in flames, and the main part of the enemy attacking its hard-pressed garrisons? At that very time Capt. Williams, with thirty Scituate men, was ranging the woods beyond Plymouth towards Middleboro', while those other three towns combined only sent forty men into the woods. Amazing injustice, to censure the "inactivity" of this heroic town. It was in fact bearing nearly the whole brunt of that cruel war.

Among the incidents attending the attack of the mill was one illustrating the narrow escapes and great courage of the women of the period. The house of Henry Ewell was situated about sixty rods from the fortress. Mrs. Ewell, who was a daughter of Anthony Annable, was at home alone with an infant grandchild, John Northy. The first intimation she had of any danger was seeing the savages rushing down the hill to the house. With the first impulse for safety or to alarm the garrison she fled there, forgetting the babe. After the battle was joined, and while it was occupying all parties, by some path known better to her than to the foe, she made her way back to the house determined to learn the fate of the sleeping babe. She found it slumbering as she had left it, and carried it safely away. To this woman's wary courage many of the excellent family of Northy owe their existence. The injustice of the Governor's strictures, and that he realized it, is indicated in the fact that the men of Scituate were called to take the lead in offensive operations against the savages.

As before alluded to, James Cudworth, long slighted and excluded from a rightful share in the government, was now appealed to by the Colony Court to take command of their forces with the rank of general. As Deane says, "The long persecuted Cudworth, with a magnanimity rarely equaled, though waxing old, accepted the chief command of the colony forces, and continued in that command until Philip was subdued."

Lieut. Isaac Buck and Corbet John Buck were in constant service with their men till the close of the war. Cornet Stetson was seldom out of the saddle, making excursions with the troops, encouraging the home-guard, and attending the council of war. His services were invaluable.

Capt. John Williams, with a Scituate company, held an important command in the force which surrounded and killed King Philip at Mount Hope, thus virtually closing hostilities. Surely, it may be claimed for Scituate that she did and suffered more for the salvation of the colony than any, than perhaps all, of the other towns therein. As a native of that ancient town, as a descendant of those heroic Indian fighters, the compiler of these pages can do no less than claim for them the credit due to them for their great services in this dark and perilous period of colonial history.

The progress and prosperity of the town had received a hard blow by the Indian war, so much of its property had been destroyed and so many of its most enterprising citizens slain. Still it continued increasing in population and manifesting much enterprise. In the wars intervening between this and the Revolutionary war, it did not suffer largely. To the expedition under Col. Church, in 1689, Scituate furnished six men and two officers. A year later, in the expedition against Canada, under Sir Wm. Phipps, sixteen men and three officers,—Capt. Joseph Sylvester, Lieut. Isaac Chittenden, and Ensign John Stetson,—went forth from Scituate, many of the nineteen never to return. It is certain that John Stetson, Nathaniel Parker, Matthew Stetson, Moses Simons, Lazarus Turner, Samuel Bryant, Samuel Dwelley, and Robert Sproat perished in the expedition. A few years later, it is stated that the Scituate militia company contained about two hundred men.

In the French war the town must have done its full duty in the way of furnishing men. Mr. Deane gives the following list, saying, "It must be far from a complete one:"

Capt. John Clap.	Edmund Bowker.
Capt. Benjamin Briggs.	Reuben Bates.
Lieut. Elisha Turner.	David Dunbar.
Sergt. Barnabas Barker.	Benjamin Bowker.
William Carlisle.	John Foster.
James Cushing.	Benjamin Palmer.
Samuel Bowker.	Elisha Burrell.
Consider Cole.	Colburn Burrell.
Stephen Lapham.	Samuel Brooks.
Elisha Palmer.	Nehemiah Palmer.
Samuel Ramsdell.	George Stetson.
Peleg Turner.	Jedediah Dwelley.

Benjamin Lapham.	Henry Lambert.
John Caswell.	Simeon Nash.
Edward Corlew.	Reuben Damon.
David Marvel.	Zachariah Lambert.
Zaccheus Nash.	Daniel Lambert.
Thomas Peirce.	John Corlew.
Gideon Rose.	Thomas Corlew.
Luther Wade.	Edward Corlew, Jr.
James Briggs.	William Corlew.
Samuel Randall.	Elisha Litchfield.
Isaac Torrey.	Wiborn Holloway.
Stanton James.	Benjamin Collamore.
Nehemiah Randall.	Dr. Ephraim Otis.
Lieut. Viney Turner.	Joseph Bowker.
Lieut. Joh Tyrrel.	Luke Lambert.
William Hayden.	James Woodworth.
Ezekiel Hayden.	Oliver Winslow.
William Perry.	William Gould.
Nehemiah Sylvester.	James Orian.
Seth Sylvester.	Thomas Peirce.
Richard Silvester.	Thomas Vicars.
Elisha Stoddard.	Michael Vicars.
Nathaniel Ellmes.	Joseph Randall.
Josiah Litchfield.	Ezekiel Sprague.
James Tower.	William Westcott.
John Gross.	Dr. James Otis.
Edmund Gross.	Eighty men.
Isaac Lapham.

The French war was a good training-school for the war of the Revolution, which was approaching. Canada had been added to the British possessions by the prowess of the British colonies, and those colonies began to feel that their services demanded recognition and reward to the extent, at least, of a decent regard for their rights. Scituate was early aroused to patriotic action.

In March, 1774, in town-meeting, a committee was appointed to draft and present resolutions "touching the difficulties of the times." May 23, 1774, report was made recommending the creation of a permanent committee with larger powers. This recommendation was adopted by the town, and a committee including most of the previous one, was appointed. They were John Cushing, Jr., Nathan Cushing, Charles Turner, Israel Vinal, Nathaniel Waterman, James Otis, William Turner, Joseph Tolman, Joseph Stetson, Increase Clapp, Gideon Vinal, Eli Curt, Samuel Clapp, Abiel Turner, Barnabas Little, Joel Palmer, Galen Clap, Anthony Waterman, Noah Otis, Barnabas Barker, George Martin, Ignatius Otis, Thomas Mann, Samuel Jenkins, Paul Bailey, Calvin Perrin, Amasa Bailey, Joseph Bailey, Constant Clap, John Jacob, and James Briggs. A committee of correspondence was also chosen, consisting of Joel Cushing, Jr., Nathan Cushing, Joseph Tolman, Barnabas Little, Israel Vinal, Jr., Galen Clapp, Abiel Turner, Noah Otis, Nathaniel Waterman, Joseph Bailey, and Eli Curtis. This was Oct. 9, 1774.

January, 1775, this committee interviewed two Tories, Charles Curtis and Frederick Henderson, who plainly declared their intention not to adhere to the Continental Congress. These two men were probably the only declared royalists in Scituate. Many others were suspected, but most of the twenty-five suspected relieved themselves of this suspicion, and June 19, 1777, there remained for trial Elijah Curtis, Job Otis, James Curtis, Benjamin Jacobs, Elisha Turner, John Stetson, Joseph Jacob, and Joseph Heyden. But none of these were active enough to make their influence unfavorably felt upon the patriot cause. Severe measures were taken in those days against the enemies of freedom, but the patriots were engaged in a desperate struggle with one of the mightiest nations on earth, and they rightly reasoned that to harbor traitors in their midst might paralyze all their efforts.

But, as always in times of strong excitement, great injustice was in danger of resulting. Some were suspected simply because they belonged to the Church of England, and this placed Dr. Benjamin Stockbridge and Dr. Charles Stockbridge under suspicion. Added to this, Dr. Benjamin Stockbridge, in passing through Boston, was detained awhile by Gen. Gage, and his son, Dr. Charles Stockbridge, having been found walking on the beach, as if in waiting for some one, in consequence the town authorities sent Dr. Benjamin to Plymouth under guard, and Dr. Charles and some of his associates to the headquarters of the American army at Cambridge. Both were soon released, however, the suspicions proving groundless. William Cushing, the patriot judge, did not escape suspicion. Most men bearing the king's commission were Tories, but Judge Cushing adhered to the patriot cause, and after the war attained by successive promotions to the appointment by Washington of chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. His fellow-townsmen soon became satisfied of his patriotism, and June 4, 1776, just one month before the declaration of independence, they "chose a committee to draft instructions for our Representatives in General Court, viz.: William Cushing, Esq., Major William Turner, Capt. Joseph Tolman, Capt. Israel Vinal, Jr., and Mr. Anthony Waterman." The instructions were drawn at once by William Cushing, and reported at the same meeting and adopted.

As they yield no uncertain sound, and show clearly the unflinching attitude and pure patriotism of the people of Scituate in that critical period, they are given here in full:

"The inhabitants of this Town being called together on the recommendation of our General Assembly, to signify their minds on the great point of Independence of Great Britain, think fit to instruct you on that head. The Ministry of that Kingdom having formed the design of subjecting the Colonies to a distant, external and absolute power in all cases whatsoever, wherein the Colonies have not, and in the nature of things, cannot have any share by representation, have, for a course of years past exerted their utmost endeavors to put the same plan, so destructive to both countries, into execution; but finding it (through the noble and virtuous opposition of the sons of freedom) impracticable, they have had, at length, a fatal recourse to that which is still more repugnant to a free Government, viz., a standing army,—to fire and sword, to blood and devastation,—calling in the aid of foreign troops, as well as endeavoring to stir up the Savages of the wilderness, being determined to exercise their barbarities upon us, and, to all appearance, to extirpate if practicable, the Americans from the face of the earth, and they will tamely resign the rights of humanity, and to repeople this once happy Country with the ready sons of Vassalage.

"We, therefore, apprehending that such subjection will be inconsistent with the just rights and blessings of society, unaniously instruct you to endeavor that our Delegates in Congress be informed (in case that Representative Body shall think fit to declare the Colonies independent of Great Britain) of our readiness and determination to assist with our lives and fortunes, in support of that necessary measure. Touching other matters, we trust in your fidelity, discretion, and zeal for the publick welfare, to propose and forward all such measures as you shall apprehend may contribute to our necessary defence in the present threatening respect of affairs, or to the promoting of the internal peace, order, and good Government of this Colony."

The military record of the men of Scituate was a full redemption of their pledge. It is not supposed that the following lists contain the names of all who served in the war for independence, but they are enough to show the full measure of the patriotism of that people.

The following is the pay-roll of the company of minute-men under Capt. John Clapp, in the regiment commanded by Col. John Bailey, of Hanover, who marched April 19, 1775, on the Lexington alarm. They served at that time fifteen days:

Capt. John Clapp.	Isaac Sylvester.
Lieut. Nathaniel Winslow.	David Jordan.
Lieut. John Jacobs.	E. Jacobs.
Sergt. Enoch Collamore.	Ebenezer Copeland.
Sergt. Nathaniel Chittenden.	Ephraim Stetson.
	Noah Barrell.
Sergt. Lazarus Bowker.	Colburn Barrell.
Sergt. Stephen Palmer.	Joseph Brown.
Corp. John Bowker.	James Gray.
Corp. Thomas Totman.	Christopher Stetson.
Corp. James Lincoln.	James Barrell.
Corp. James Stockbridge.	Benjamin Collamore.
Samuel Clapp.	John Damon.
Barnabas Barker.	Eells Damon.
Edward Bowker.	Daniel Edwards.
Daniel Damon.	William Ryland.
Ebenezer Eddy.	Charles Otis.
Samuel Damon.	Simeon Prouty.
Gershom Bowker.	Joshua Prouty.
Bartlett Bowker.	James Prouty.
Stephen Damon.	John Wright.

George Torrey.
Micah Hinds.
Matthew Stetson.
Thomas Sylvester.
Stephen Totman.

Benjamin Tower.
Ebenezer Totman.
Nehemiah House.
Consider Turner.

The following is the roll of Capt. William Turner's company, of Scituate, and attached to Col. Thomas' regiment, which also marched on the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775, and was paid for four days service :

Capt. William Turner.
Lieut. Benjamin Stetson.
Ens. Jonathan Turner.
Sergt. Joseph Benson.
Sergt. James Nash.
Sergt. Lawrence Litchfield.
Sergt. Benjamin Vassall.
Clerk Joshua Clapp.
Corp. Benjamin Holmes.
Corp. Thomas Webb.
Drum. Nathaniel Cushing.
Fifer Bela Clapp.
Fifer Reuben Damon.
Samuel Curtis.
Gideon Jenkins.
James Jenkins.
David Bowker.
Thomas Holmes.
Calvin Jenkins.
Nathaniel Eells.
Luke Bowker.
Nehemiah Merritt.
Sylvanus Damon.
Jabez Standley.
John King.
John Ellms.

Joseph Briggs.
David Merritt.
Charles Curtis.
Simeon Pincin.
Anthony Collamore.
Isaac Stetson.
Daniel Merritt.
Stephen Wade.
John Merritt.
Caleb Nichols.
Joseph Nash.
Gamaliel Curtis.
Abednego Wade.
Gera Jenkins.
Zaccheus Lambert.
Noah Nichols.
Lothrop Litchfield.
David Dunbar.
William Pincin.
James Litchfield.
Joseph Ellms.
Zaccheus Merritt.
Benjamin Curtis.
Dearing Jones.
Calogus Vinal.
Anthony Collamore, Jr.
M. Sutton.

In Capt. Crocker's company, which served from May to August, 1775, about three months, appear the following Scituate men :

Capt. Elijah Crocker.
Sergt. Benjamin Hatch.
Barnabas Barker.
Guy Bates.
David Bowker.
George Cole.
James Cushing.
Benjamin Collamore.
William Damon.
Stephen Fish.
Michael Frazier.

John Henley.
William Henley.
Ezekiel Jones.
Ephraim Litchfield.
Isaac Litchfield.
Nathaniel Lapham.
Lemuel Lapham.
John Mitchell.
Eliphalet Northey.
Theophilus Southworth.
Laban Sprague.

These same men appear to have been again in service in October, 1775.

The pay-roll of Capt. Samuel Stockbridge's company in Col. Thomas' regiment, serving from May 10 to August 1, 1775, is as follows :

Capt. Samuel Stockbridge.
Lieut. Atwood Mott.
Ens. Caleb Nichols.
Sergt. Thomas Webb.
Sergt. Benjamin Peakes.
Sergt. Isaac Stetson.

Sergt. Ira Bryant.
Corp. Noah Litchfield.
Corp. Samuel Curtis.
Corp. Consider Merritt.
Corp. Gathebus Cowing.
Corp. S. Peirce.

Samuel Brown.
Abner Briggs.
Zeno Bryant.
Elijah Bryant.
Luther Chittenden.
Charles Curtis.
Isaac Colyer.
Gamaliel Curtis.
Israel Cowing.
Abner Dwelley.
Amos Dunbar.
Ezekiel Dunbar.
William Curtis.
David Dunbar.
William Dwelley.
Charles Fish.
Elisha Grose.
Joshua Grose.
Benjamin Gannett.
Beza Hayden.
William Hayden.
Josiah Holbrook.
David Hammond.
Nathaniel Hollowell.

Thomas Holmes.
Joseph Hayden.
Benjamin Hyland.
Benjamin Hammond.
Edward Jenkins.
Nathaniel Jenkins.
Charles Litchfield.
Nathan Litchfield.
Elisha Litchfield.
Samuel Litchfield.
Josiah Mann.
Lemuel Mayhew.
John Manson.
Job Neal.
Samuel Nichols.
Noah Nash.
Augustus Pierce.
Edward Ramsdelt.
Lemuel Sylvester.
Asa Turner.
Benjamin Wade.
John Wade.
Benjamin Woodworth.

The same company was in the service again Oct. 7, 1775.

Capt. Nathaniel Winslow's company, in Col. Thomas' regiment, served from May 3, 1775, to Aug. 1, 1775, and was constituted as follows :

Capt. Nathaniel Winslow.
Lieut. — Barstow.
Ens. Nathaniel Chittenden.
Sergt. Jacob Turner.
Sergt. Ephraim Palmer.
Sergt. C. Barrell.
Sergt. Benjamin Vinal.
Corp. James Lincoln.
Corp. Joseph Brown.
Corp. Samuel Young.
Corp. Samuel Gray.
Drum. Christ. Stetson.
Fifer Bela Clapp.
James Barrell.
William Barrell.
John Bowker.
Joshua Bowker.
Benjamin Collamore.
David Clapp.
Nathaniel Cushing.
D. Costo.
Stephen Damon.
John Damon.
Bells Damon.
Edward Damon.
Hosea Dunbar.
Daniel Edwards.
William Hyland.
Nathaniel House.

Elisha Joy.
William Jones.
James Jeffreys.
John King.
John Lincoln.
William Mayhew.
Joshua Merritt.
Daniel Merritt.
Noah Nicholson.
Charles Otis.
Simeon Prouty.
James Prouty.
Simeon Pincin.
John Prouty.
John Wright.
Laban Rose.
Samuel Stetson.
Peter Sears.
Samuel Simmons.
Barnabas Simmons.
Amos Stetson.
Amos Stetson.
Thomas Totman.
Benjamin Tower.
Ebenezer Totman.
Consider Turner.
Nathan Thomas.
Nathan Tower.
Ebenezer Wing.

This company again went into service Oct. 6, 1775.

Capt. Nathaniel Winslow also commanded a company that served two months and eleven days in 1776, in which company were the following Scituate men :

Capt. Nathaniel Winalow.
 Sergt. Colburn Barrell.
 Sergt. John Sutton.
 Fifer Silvanus Pero.
 Elijah Delano.
 Abijah Clapp.
 E. Dingley.
 Abner Curtis.
 Joel Silvester.
 Israel Turner.
 Elisha Stetson.
 Barnabas Simmons.
 Barnabas Webb.
 Joshua Merritt.
 Adam Cushing.
 Stephen Tower.
 Lemuel Lapham.
 James Lapham.
 Peleg House.
 Charles Litchfield.
 Stephen Vinal.
 Abner House.
 Joshua Sprague.

Benjamin Woodworth.
 Josiah Litchfield.
 Ezra Hayden.
 Ezekiel Jones.
 Daniel Dunbar.
 Noah Stoddard.
 Laban Sprague.
 Calvin Bowker.
 Ebenezer Bates.
 Seth Bates.
 Warren Torrey.
 Nathaniel Tower.
 Josiah Hatch.
 William Ford.
 David Ford.
 Nathan Stetson.
 Benjamin Studley.
 Elijah Sylvester.
 Samuel Ramsdell.
 Issachar Wade.
 Elisha Hayden.
 Abner Litchfield.
 Reuben Curtis.

On the expedition to Bristol, R. I., March, 1777, the company of Capt. Hayward Peirce was called out of Col. John Cushing's regiment, and served about fifteen days. On the pay-roll for this service are the following Scituate men :

Capt. Hayward Peirce.	Lot Litchfield.
Lieut. Calvin Peirce.	Isaac Collier.
Lieut. Israel Litchfield.	Jonathan Collier.
Clerk James Jenkins.	Joseph Venal, Jr.
Sergt. Benjamin Bailey.	John Damon.
Sergt. Micah Mott.	Joseph Damon.
Corp. Eleazer Peakes.	Levi Newell.
Corp. Zadock Damon.	Seth Merritt.
Drummer Wm. Studley.	Matthew Peirce.
Fifer Abner Sutton.	Elisha Hyland.
Thomas Curtis.	Melzar Merritt.
Paul Bailey.	Nehemiah Merritt.
Abner Bailey.	Joshua Merritt.
Elisha Litchfield.	Gideon Jenkins.
Thomas Litchfield.	Calvin Jenkins.
Daniel Litchfield.	Abner Briggs.
Barnabas Litchfield.	Robert Vinal.
Charles Litchfield.	John Studley.
John Litchfield.	Daniel Briggs.
Eleazer Litchfield.	John Cushing.
Amos Litchfield.

In Capt. Edward Sparrow's company of Col. Tyler's regiment, which served three and one-half months, were the following Scituate men :

Oliver Delano.	Isaac Lapham.
James Lapham.	Asa Lapham.
Daniel Hayden.	Prince Witherell.
Jesse Sutton.	Richard Witherell.

The following served in 1780, though in what organization cannot be stated :

Thomas Church.	James Cushing.
William Lincoln.	Nehemiah Manson.
Asher Freeman.	George Merritt.
Samuel Stoddard.	Nehemiah Sampson.
Nathaniel Jones.	Ezra Hayden.

The pay-roll of Capt. Joseph Stetson's company shows the following soldiers, who marched from Scituate to Hingham on an alarm March 24, 1776, in consequence of the taking possession of Dorchester Heights :

Capt. Joseph Stetson.	Stephen Damon.
Lieut. Jacob Turner.	Daniel Edwards.
Lieut. Elisha Curtis.	Samuel Damon.
Ensign Francis Cushing.	Simon Damon.
Sergt. Benjamin Holmes.	Joseph Briggs.
Sergt. Elisha Foster.	Nathaniel Turner.
Sergt. Lawrence Litchfield.	Nathaniel Brooks.
Sergt. James Nash.	Levi Wade.
Corp. William Brooka.	Laban Sprague.
Corp. Cousider Merritt.	Calvin Damon.
Corp. Gathebus Cowing.	William Studley.
Corp. Benjamin Vassall.	Josiah Damon.
Drummer John Doroty.	Joseph Sylvester.
Fifer Nathaniel Barstow.	Elijah Clapp.
Noah Nichols.	Seth Merritt.
Isaac Torrey.	John Wade.
B. Simmons.	Jonathan Brown.
Samuel Simmons.	Stephon Wade.
John Whitecomb.	Ensign Brown.
Ebenezer Totman.	Josiah Wade.
David Barnes.	Thomas Lapham.
Thomas Ruggles.	Thomas Grose.
James Stockbridge.	Benjamin Curtis.
Elijah Stoddard.	Levi Nash.
Benjamin Delano.	Theophilus Corthell.
James Clapp.	Thomas Farrar.
Gideon Jenkins.	Amos Dunbar.
Joshua Merritt.	J. Prouty.
Silvanus Clapp.	Josiah Litchfield.
Peleg Curtis.	Eleazer Peakes.
Charles Totman.	Jonathan Mann.
Richard Ford.	Jabez Standley.
George Torrey.

These were in service five days at that time. In November, 1776, the same company was called out again.

In Capt. Edward Sparrow's company of Col. Dyke's regiment of new levies from Massachusetts for service in Rhode Island, December, 1777 (length of service one month and three days) were these Scituate men :

Israel Cowen.	Luther Brooks.
Knight Brown.	George Merritt.
Daniel Hayden.	Jonathan Brown.
Jesse Sutton.

Serving in Capt. Joseph Stetson's company, Col. Dike's regiment, from Dec. 1, 1776, to February, 1777, were Scituate men as follows :

Capt. Joseph Stetson.	John Gibbs.
William Brooks.	Calvin Jenkins.
Israel Nash.	Gamaliel Curtis.
Thomas Lapham.	Michael Clapp.
Charles Turner.	Benjamin Briggs.
Amiel Studley.	H. Stoddard.
Thomas Church.	Benjamin Curtis.
Abiah Clapp.	Theophilus Corthell.
Caleb Litchfield.	Abijah Turner.

Frederick Hammond.	Abner Dwelley.
Isaiah Stoddard.	John Brown.
— Hayden.	Isaac Brown.
John Whitcomb.	Robert Erskine.
Issachar Wade.	Thomas Grace.
George Torrey.	Abijah Clapp.

Following are the names of Scituate men who enlisted for six months in 1780 to reinforce the Continental army :

Ezra Hayden.	William Lincoln.
Samuel Stoddard.	Nehemiah Sampson.
Asher Freeman.	George Merritt.
Nathaniel Jordan.	Nehemiah Manson.
James Cushing.	Thomas Church.

Among the Scituate men enlisted for three years in the Continental army were the following :

Benjamin Collamore.	Daniel Corlew.
James Litchfield.	William Studley.
Gideon Stetson.	William Nicholson.
William Mayhew.	Winsor Baker.
Anthony Collamore.	Asaph Jacobs.
John Wright.	Peleg Hayden.
William Mann.	John Gibbs.
Benjamin Woodworth.	Seth Orentt.
Abial Turner.	Frederick Hammond.
Consider Turner.	Elisha Gross.
Joshua Gannett.

The most of these appear to have served in Capt. Jacob Wales' company in the Tenth Massachusetts Regiment, and to have received the United States bounty of three hundred dollars, namely :

John Wright.	Seth Orentt.
William Mayhew.	William Nicholson.
Anthony Collamore.	Consider Turner.
Frederick Hammond.	Peleg Hayden.
Winsor Baker.	Benjamin Woodworth.
Daniel Corlew.	Ebenezer Totman.
William Mann.	William Studley.

These were enlisted in 1777, 1778, and 1779, and served until some time in 1780 or later. Simeon Granderson, Noah Barrell, Edward Humphrey, Lynde Tower, and Robert Cook also served in that war. Capt. John Jacob and Capt. John Clapp both became colonels during the war for independence.

Under the resolve of the General Assembly of June 9, 1779, calling for nine months' men for the Continental army, the quota assigned to Scituate to raise was thirteen, and was filled by the enlistment of the following men, viz. :

Calogue Vinal.	William McNevin.
Amasa Hyland.	Thomas Church.
Josiah Lorand.	Samuel Hyland.
Elisha Dunbar.	Calvin Damon.
Joshua Compeett (an Indian).	Benjamin Turner.
Daniel Corlew.	James Cushing.
	William Hyland.

For three years' service in the same army, under resolve of General Assembly, Dec. 2, 1780, the quota of Scituate was thirty-four men, and was filled : follows, namely :

William Perry.	Israel Mabew.
John Russell.	Elisha Hayden.
James Barrell, Jr.	James Stetson.
Nathaniel Cook.	Benjamin Jones.
Simeon Stoddard.	Ezra Hayden.
Asher Freeman.	Matthew Peirce.
James Barrell.	Amos Perry.
Isaac J. Woodworth.	Ziba Sutton.
Warren Little.	Calla Brown.
Samuel Sprague.	John M. Gill.
Levi Bowker.	Eli Litchfield.
Roger Clapp.	George Mann.
Nathaniel Jordan.	Ezekiel Merritt.
James Cushing.	Nehemiah Manson.
Jonathan Brown.	Thomas Nichols.
Bela Brown.	William Lincoln.
Charles Church.	Signor Layong.

There is probably no better conclusion to be found for this sketch of the part Scituate took in the Revolution than in the following instructions given the town to its representatives in 1787. It lays down good, sound political doctrines, some of which are not obsolete yet :

"At this critical and alarming period it may not be unwe come to you that your Constituents communicate to you the sentiments. While our Constitution remains unchanged, ordained by the People in the civil Compact, it is the indispen sible duty of every citizen to support it. At the same time there are grievances, as we conceive, under which the people of this Commonwealth labour, which we would instruct you at the next Session of General Court to endeavor to redress. At a time when the people feel themselves heavily pressed with public debt, wisdom, policy, and justice demand that every possible means consistent with justice and reputation be devised for their relief. You will therefore endeavor to reduce the salaries of all public officers suitable to the abilities of the people. It cannot be supposed that infant States, however fair and promising their prospects, should launch into the expence and pomp of old and affluent Nations, but that such state must rise to respect by a conduct suitable to its situation, circumstances, and abilities. You will therefore, on investigation, endeavor that such retrenchments be made and such regulations be adopted as the reputation of our Republican Government, connected with present circumstances, renders necessary. And in order to ease the people as much as possible from direct taxation, we think proper to instruct you to use your endeavor that excises may be laid on superfluities and articles of foreign luxury, and such domestic articles as are not necessaries, and especially on those unnecessary articles of foreign produce that lure to luxury and dissipation.

"And whereas, we believe there are some people in this Commonwealth so blind to the common good as to use their endeavor that a paper currency be emitted by this Government, believing, as we do, that a more fatal Engine of injustice and mischief (in our present circumstances) could not be devised you will remember that you are instructed by your Constituents to oppose it.

"And as without the establishment of publick credit and confidence a Nation must soon fall to contempt and ruin, you are to endeavor to the utmost of your power for their recovery and re-establishment by maintaining public honor, honesty, and justice.

"You are also to use your endeavor that a law may be made by this General Court empowering towns to raise money by taxing polls and estates, for the purpose of encouraging men to enlist in the State or Continental service whenever called for by the Government, and providing that military officers shall not detach men from the companies in such Towns as will seasonably procure their proportion of men in a more equitable way by encouraging them to enlist."

War of 1812.—The declaration of war against England in 1812 caused intense political excitement. It was considered by the people of Scituate as greatly detrimental to their interests, and they would rather overlook the aggressions of England than suffer the hardships of a state of war. It interrupted business generally, stopped their ship-building, drove their vessels into the harbor, raised the price of all the necessaries of life,—flour being eighteen dollars a barrel, corn over two dollars a bushel, and other provisions in like proportion. For these reasons not many soldiers enlisted for distant service, but they had something to do at home. A British man-of-war cruising off the coast landed some men and burned the vessels in the harbor, by which ten coasters and fishing vessels were lost to the town. This was in 1814. In consequence of this, and of the frequent presence of English vessels off the coast, the militia was mustered and marched to the shore, and men drafted for duty on the coast-guard. In this way many served for weeks and months, as the shore and river was constantly guarded from the time of burning the shipping till the close of the war a few months after. For these services, for which some were drafted and some volunteered, many men of Scituate and their widows have received bounty land. The feeling against those who might be held in any way responsible for this war was very strong, and showed itself in the almost fiercely cool treatment received by Col. Charles Turner on his return from Washington. He was member of Congress from that district, and was the only Massachusetts member who voted for the war. It raised such a furor of indignation that his townsmen of Scituate avoided all intercourse with him, and upon his going to Plymouth he was mobbed in the streets of that old seaport. Such was the violence of the assault upon him that several persons, some prominent in business there, were arrested for the offense. Of those who served in this war occur the names of Capt. Edward F. Jacobs, John Clapp, Nathaniel Farrar, Lewis Gross, John Jones, Jr., John Gross, Benjamin Bowker, and Allen Clapp. These were members of the Hanover Artillery, Capt. E. F. Jacobs, and served with that company at Plymouth, Sept. 19 to Oct. 19, 1814. Col. Samuel Tolman did duty on the river.

The War for the Union.—The war for the preservation of the Union, which began in 1861, proved that the patriotism of the present generation was worthy of their Revolutionary sires. The events of that war are too recent to require any record here, and it is sufficient to bring together for permanent record the names of soldiers from Scituate serving in the war of 1861, as they appear upon the rolls of the adjutant-general's office:

2d Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Harvey Conlyn, Thomas Jones, John Moore, Thomas Murphy
Philip Rogan, Henry Wilson.

7th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. K, Nelson V. Hutchinson, William Litchfield, Edward H. Sylvester, corps.; Thomas T. Bailey, Charles W. Clapp, William A. Cook, Joseph F. Crane, William Dunbar, Oliver F. Hayes, George W. Hodgdon, Edward James, Francis H. Litchfield, Galen Litchfield, Galen W. Litchfield, William G. Litchfield, Joseph O. Marsh, William O. Merritt, John B. Newcomb, Ashael T. Nott, Charles H. Nott, Hosea D. Nott, George W. Rich, David P. Robinson, Charles F. Sylvester, John Welch, Charles D. Young.

12th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. B, Nathan A. Rogers; Co. H, John F. Cunningham.

15th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. F, Owen Clapp, sergt.

18th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. G, William R. Damon.

24th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. F, Nicholas Wherity.

26th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. E, Richard Walsh.

28th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. A, Elias H. Richardson; Co. E, Michael Buckley, Francis B. Burton, George W. Rowe.

32d Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Charles N. Gardner, 2d lieut.; Co. A, Albert L. Pierce, corp.; Co. E, Luke G. Fitts, John Tirrell (killed at Petersburg, Va.); Co. F, Edward L. Hyland (corp.), Elisha Brown, Joseph Brown, Edward L. Hyland, George B. Litchfield, William Litchfield.

35th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. A, James T. Andrews, Reuben L. H. Andrews, William B. D. Andrews (killed at Petersburg, Va.), William Dunbar.

38th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. D, Billings Merritt (sergt.), John Studley (corp.), Henry Brown, Anderw M. Hyland; Co. G, Hubert G. Bates (1st sergt.), Henry O. Cole (sergt.), George W. Merritt (sergt.), Charles Young (sergt.), George W. Lee (corp.), Sumner O. Litchfield (corp.), Elias O. Nichols (corp.), D. Otis Totman (corp.), Seth K. Bailey, Charles E. Bates, James Berry, John Berry, James L. Brown, Samuel W. Cook, Caleb M. Jenkins, Warren S. Litchfield, Benjamin E. Stetson, Charles A. Taylor, David C. Witherell, John W. Young.

39th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. C, Benjamin F. Merritt, Lemuel Webh; Co. G, Lorenzo Bates, Charles E. Bates, Andrew J. Damon, Henry W. Leavitt, George W. White.

54th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. G, Jason Prince.

56th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. I, Matthew Blair, Rufus W. Porter; Co. K, George Knighton.

58th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. H, Thomas C. Brown; Co. I, George W. Perry (sergt.), Benjamin Brown, Jr.

59th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. E, Riley Danforth, Martin Dumphy (killed in action).

62d Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. A, Oliver F. Hayes (corp.), Edward E. Brown.

1st Iowa Cavalry.

Thomas S. James.

The reference made to the patriotism exhibited by the people of Scituate in the war for the suppression of the Rebellion against the life of the nation applies equally well to South Scituate. There is not space in the limits necessarily assigned to this compilation to do even approximate justice to their devotion to their country. Their names, as they appear on the adjutant-general's rolls, are, however, entitled to a permanent record here, and, as those rolls show, the soldiers from South Scituate serving in the war of 1861 were as follows:

2d Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

William A. Howard.

11th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. F, Daniel Caffrey, Michael Dunn.

16th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. B, Thomas Martin.

18th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

James N. Sparrell, 1st lieut.; Co. E, Henry Peole; Co. G, Joseph B. Bowker, John D. Damon (corp.), George F. Stetson (corp.), George O. Torry (corp.), Henry A. Torry (corp.), Joseph B. Bowker, George H. Clapp, Stephen Clapp, William R. Damon, Charles H. Damon, Edward Dover, Henry A. Farrar, Charles N. Gardner, Henry H. Gardner, John D. Gardner, Sidney Gardner, Joseph B. Goodrich, Henry W. Harlow, Joseph Harvey, George B. Hayden, Samuel A. Henderson, George W. Jackman, Samuel Keene, Elisha W. Lapham, John Lewis, Orlando C. Prouty, Edward Southworth, Abner L. Stetson, George F. Stetson, Charles L. Stoddard, Joseph E. Stoddard, William T. Sylvester, Charles Tolman, Edward P. Tolman, James W. Warner, Nathaniel W. Winslow.

19th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. B, Octave Paris; Co. C, Bernard Conway, Christopher Conrad.

20th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. A, John D. Grese, corp.

26th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. D, Dennis Cronan.

28th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. B, James Byrnes; Co. C, James Donovan, Charles Farr, Patrick Monehan, Paval Mikalical (unassigned recruit

32d Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. A, David Bassford, Charles H. Clapp (killed at Laurel Hill Va.), Elisha F. Coleman.

35th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. B, Charles H. Hawley.

39th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

John H. Prouty, 2d lieut.; Co. G, John M. Penniman (sergt. John H. Prouty (sergt.), Alpheus Thomas (sergt.), Charles Young (corp.), Timothy B. Chapman, Caleb W. Clapp, John Gorthell, Daniel R. Elwell, Benjamin W. French, Franklin K. Hanson, Benjamin W. Prouty, Isaac Prout, William Prouty, Jr., Calvin F. Sherman, Thomas Simmon, William O. Thomas.

54th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. G, Benjamin F. Lee; Co. H, Warren F. Freeman, William H. Freeman, Henry T. Winslow, Richard S. Winslow.

58th Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. C, Napoleon B. Powell; Co. F, Clifton H. Vose, 1st sergt. Co. I, Lemuel Freeman, sergt., Addison F. Nichols, corp. (killed at Petersburg, Va.), Dennis Cronan.

61st Regiment Inf., Mass. Vols.

Co. G, John Stokes.

Municipal and Government Affairs.—From the signing of the compact in the "Mayflower" to 1631 the laws of the colony were made and executed by the Governor and his assistants. These were elected by the freemen in annual assemblage at Plymouth in March. It must have been a burdensome journey to the place of election at that season of the year for the Scituate men who had taken the oath of freemen. These assistants appear to be occasionally called the "Council." From Scituate, William Gibson was assistant from 1632 to 1634; Timothy Hatherly from 1635 to 1655. Oct. 5, 1636, the court ordered that four for Plymouth, two for Scituate, and two for Duxbury should, "as a committee for the whole, be added to the Gov. and assistants" to revise the laws. The "two for Scituate" were James Cudworth and Anthony Annable. In one very important law enacted when this body met Nov. 15, 1636, the hand of these "men of Kent" is evident. The law of entail prevailed in England, by which real estate descended to the oldest son, to the exclusion from the inheritance of the younger children. But in the county of Kent there prevailed a local law called the custom of Greenwich, by virtue of which lands descended to and were divided among all the children. These Scituate men who came from that county in England knew of this law and its just and beneficial effect.

Is it too much to assume that their influence upon this court procured the enactment of the following law, which in its ultimate reach and influence has become the law of the whole nation, and divides real estate equally among the ancestor's heirs? The enactment is very brief, but had immense germinant influence:

"Land after Greenwich hold. The inheritance to descend according to the commendable custom of Engl. and hold of Est. Greenwich."

William Gilson and Edward Foster were appointed the extra assistants the next year, 1677; Timothy Hatherly and James Cudworth assistants from 1655 to 1658. From that time to 1674—sixteen years—these gentlemen were excluded from being assistants because of their opposition to the persecution of the Quakers, and Scituate was not represented on the board of assistants. From 1674 to 1680, James Cudworth was again an assistant.

During the Andros usurpation there were no assistants from Scituate, but from 1689 to 1691, John Cushing was assistant.

In 1639 it was provided by law that each town choose two deputies to the Colony Court, and Plymouth choose four. Without giving their terms of office, the following appear to be the names of the deputies from Scituate, in about the order of time in which they first entered upon office: Anthony Annable, Edward Foster, Humphrey Turner, Richard Sealis, John Williams, Thomas Chambers, Edmund Edenden, George Kenrick, John Lewis, James Cudworth, Thomas Clapp, Robert Stetson, Edward Jenkins, John Bryant, Isaac Chittenden, James Torrey, Isaac Buck, Thomas King, John Cushing, John Damon, Jeremiah Hatch, Samuel Clap, Joseph Sylvester, and Benjamin Stetson, who was deputy in 1691 when the colonies were united. The assistants and deputies transacted their business as one body, though really constituting two as much as Senate and House.

After the union of the colonies the following from Scituate were elected members of the Governor's Council, Senate, and House of Representatives in the order of their first election:

COUNCILORS.

John Cushing. Edward F. Jacobs.
Nathan Cushing.

SENATORS.

Charles Turner. Caleb W. Prouty.
Nathan Cushing. Elijah Jenkins.
Cushing Otis. Horatio N. Gardner.
Samuel A. Turner. E. T. Fogg, of South Scituate.
John B. Turner.
William James.

REPRESENTATIVES.

John Cushing.	William Peakes.
Samuel Clapp.	John B. Turner.
Benjamin Stetson.	Samuel Deane.
Nathaniel Clapp.	Samuel Tolman, Jr.
Samuel Clapp.	Ebenezzer F. Fogg.
John Cushing, Jr.	John Collamore.
Samuel Clapp.	Peleg Jenkins.
John Barker.	Cushing Otis.
Joseph Otis.	Abiel Cudworth.
Thomas Turner.	Samuel Waterman.
Stephen Clapp.	Thomas T. Bailey.
James Cushing.	Moses P. Rich.
Thomas Bryant.	Samuel A. Turner.
Amos Turner.	John Beal.
Nicholas Littlefield.	William James.
Thomas Clapp.	Ebenezzer Stetson.
Caleb Torrey.	Paul Litchfield.
Ensign Otis.	Thomas Vinal.
Joseph Cushing.	Elijah Jenkins, Jr.
Gideon Vinal.	Charles Curtis.
Nathan Cushing.	William Cook.
Barnabas Little.	Erastus A. Young.
William Turner.	Thomas Conant.
Israel Litchfield.	George M. Allen.
William Turner.	George C. Lee.
Charles Turner.	Ahel Sylvester.
Daniel Damon.	Billings P. Merritt.
Israel Vinal.	John Manson.
Enoch Collamore.	Andrew J. Waterman.
Daniel Litchfield.	Moses R. Colman.
Joseph Tolman.	James L. Merritt.
Hayward Peirce.	George W. Merritt.
Elijah Turner.	Amos W. Merritt.
Edward F. Jacob.	Thomas F. Bailey.
Jesse Dunbar.	Charles E. Brown.
Micah Stetson.

Since the incorporation of the town of South Scituate, Feb. 14, 1849, she has sent the following representatives to the General Court, viz.:

James Southworth.	Samuel Tolman, Jr.
Samuel C. Cudworth.	Edward Stowell.
A. Everett Stetson.	Thomas B. Waterman.
Henry J. Curtis.	George H. Torrey.
Horatio N. Gardner.	Joseph T. Hartt.
Lemuel C. Waterman.	William C. Litchfield.
Isaac Totman, Jr.	Alpheus Thomas.
Seth H. Vinal.

A mere mention of the names of persons who have served these towns in legislative halls is all the space allotted will allow, without any review of the character and value of the services there rendered by them. That the town was always well, honestly, and creditably represented may be noted in passing.

The character of the earliest municipal management, and who were the first town officers, is involved in some obscurity. It has been inferred and stated that the earliest records are lost, but this is hardly probable. Some records are in a fine state of preservation as far back as the incorporation of the town, or near that time, and nothing is to be inferred from the fact that no records are extant of town-meetings previous to 1665. The population was small, the public wants not large, and there was not much to call the freemen together except the election of deputies to the court at Plymouth. It was in 1645 that the office of town clerk was created by this enactment: "It is enacted by the Court that there shall be in every town within this Government a Clerk or some one appointed and ordained to keep a Register of the day and yeare of the marriage, byrth, and buriall of every man, weoman, and child within their Township." This seemed to define and limit his duties, and he was not required and would not be likely to make any record of town-meetings. It does not appear that the duties of town clerk were enlarged or further defined until 1658, when the form of oath for that officer was prescribed by law, and assumes that certain other duties were to be performed by him, some of which, perhaps, had been previously undertaken.

"The oath to be administered to a Town Clarke is as followeth :

"You shall faithfully serve in the office of a town Clarke in the town of — for this present yeare, and soe long as by mutual consent the towne and you shall agree; during which time you shall carefully and faithfully keep all such Records as you shall be intrusted withal, and shall record all town actes and orders and shall enter all towne grants and conveyances. You shall record all birthes, marriages, and burialls that shall be brought unto you within your towne, and shall publish all contracts of marriages you shall be required to do according to order of Court bearing date the twentieth day of October, 1646. Soe heelp you God, whoe is the God of truth and punisher of falsehood."

It may be therefore that previous to 1658 no duty of recording elections of town officers had been imposed on the town clerk, and very likely for a few years later it may not have been considered within the requirements of his office to record the necessarily meagre proceedings to those early town-meetings. Six years later the record of these proceedings in election of officers begins. At the first the constable was evidently the principal man in the town, and some of the ablest and best-educated men held the office.

Anthony Annable, Humphrey Turner, and James Cudworth were successively constables until 1640. The office of constable was an important one. He was to act as surveyor of highways (until 1640), to collect the taxes, warn town-meetings, "looke after such as sleep or play about the meeting-house in times of the public worship of God on the Lord's day," to appoint a deputy to serve in his place whenever absent from town (it being deemed of the utmost importance that no town should even for one day be without the presence of an acting constable), to have a staff of office, to apprehend Quakers, etc. In 1658 provision was made for the choice of overseers of the poor and a sealer of measures. These were apparently the next town officers created by law. By whom the affairs of the town had been previously managed is uncertain. As all political power was in the hands of the freemen and as down to the year 1660 there was probably no more than twenty or thirty at any one time resident in the town who had taken the oath of freemen, they could transact their limited business with almost the ease and informality of a copartnership. It was not until 1662, apparently, that any legal provision was made for the election of selectmen. Then the following law was passed, and is here given in full, in the belief that it may be interesting to some persons to see what the powers and duties of these officers were originally:

"It is enacted by the Court, That in every town of this Jurisdiction there be three or five Selectmen chosen by the Townsmen out of the freemen, such as shall be approved by the Court, for the better managing of the affairs of the respective townships; and that the Selectmen in every towne, or the major pte of them, are hereby empowered to heare and determine all debtes and differences arising between pson and pson within their respective townships not exceeding forty shillings; as also they are hereby empowered to heare and determine all differences betwixt any Indians and the English in their respective townships about damage done in corne by the coves, swine, or any other beastes belonging to the Inhabitant of the said respective townships; and the determination of the aforesaid differences not being satisfied as was agreed, the pt wronged to repair to some Magistrate for a warrant to receive such award by distraint. It is further enacted by the Court that the said Selectmen in every townships, approved by the Court or any of them, shall have power to give forth sumons in his Majesty's name to require any psons complained of to attend the hearing of the case and to summon witnesses to give testimony on that account, and to determine of the Controversys according to legal evidence; and that the psons complaining shs serve the summonns themselves upon the psons complained against, and in case of their non-appearance to proceed notwithstanding in the hearing and determination of such controversy as comes before them, and to have twelvecence apiece for every award they agree upon."

They were made a court of inferior jurisdiction and the compensation fixed for their services was certainly not excessive. This was in 1662. How soon afterwards Scituate elected selectmen is unknown but probably in 1663 and 1664. But, if so, what they were is unknown. In 1665 the record of the election of selectmen begins, and it appears in that year, July 12th, Isaac Buck was elected town clerk and that, Nov. 23, 1665, "The town did agree to choose selectmen; the men chosen are Cornet Robt Stetson, Thomas King, Isaac Chittenden." The phraseology of this vote suggests a doubt whether this was not the first choice of selectmen made in Scituate, and that very likely the town the two p vicious years refused to adopt the innovation. Robert Stetson and Isaac Chittenden appear to have held the office many years, the former serving till 1674 and later. Some of the early town clerks were Richard Garrett (the first one), James Torrey, Isaac Buck, James Cushing, John Cushing, Thomas Clap, James Briggs, Charles Turner, Augustus Clap, Ebenezer Bailey.

Ecclesiastical.—The early history of Scituate, like that of many of the early settlements in New England, is largely associated with religious enterprise and controversy. It was the religious idea that prompted to the planting of the old Plymouth Colony. Considering the hard conditions of their enterprise and the strenuous struggle for very existence, it would seem as if harmony would have been a necessity and a compelled condition of their religious life. This was far from being the case.

Their first religious teacher appears to have been a Mr. Saxton. There seems to be every reason for accepting Mr. Deane's theory that this was Mr. Giles Saxton, referred to by Mr. Mather as a "Yorkshire man," and a learned Hebrew scholar. If it was Mr. Giles Saxton, as he was a freeman in Massachusetts Colony in 1631, his ministrations at Scituate must have occurred between 1631 and 1634, probably in 1633. There is reason to believe that he was a devout and fearless Christian, and a faithful preacher of the Word, but disliked Christian strife, for Mather says, "Some unhappy contention in the plantation where he lived put him upon removing from Scituate, first to Boston, and so unto England in his reduced age." Such is all the record we have of the preaching and departure of the first minister in Scituate. What the "contention" was can be only matter of conjecture. It was probably some trifling matter. Religious people have a fatal facility for growing great quarrels from small provocation. They take the parable of the mustard-seed to typify their work. No church was organized until after the arrival of Rev. John Lothrop. This eminently good man had been a clergyman of the Church of England, settled in Egerton, in the county of Kent, in England, and it is not unlikely that he came to Scituate because the "men of Kent," who settled first in that plantation, were among his old friends and neighbors and, perhaps, parishioners. Having renounced his orders in the Established Church, he removed to London in 1623, and for several years preached privately to a Congregational Church in Southwark, in London. Discovered in 1632, he was arrested, with forty-two of his people, and imprisoned. He remained in prison about two years, his wife dying during that time. Upon his release he sailed for Boston, with about thirty of his people, and came thence to Scituate, where they arrived in January, 1634. At the same time Anthony Annable and several others were dismissed from the church at Plymouth, "in case they join in a body at Scituate." On Jan. 8, 1634, the church was organized, and Mr. Lothrop became its pastor. Mr. Lothrop, in describing this event, says that Jan. 8, 1634, they observed a day of humiliation, fasting, and prayer, and "Joined in covenant together, so many of us as had been in covenant before, to wit :

"2. Mr. Gibson and wife.

4. Goodman Annaball and his wife.

6. Goodman Rowly and his wife.

8. Goodman Cobb and his wife.

9. Goodman Turner.

10. Edward Foster.

11. Myself.

12. Goodman Foxwell.

13. Samuel House.

15. Mr. Hatherly and wife, Jan. 11, 1634.

17. Mr. Cudworth and wife, Jan. 18, 1634.

18. Henry Bourn, Jan. 25, 1634."

This was the First Church as organized in Scituate in January, 1634, old style.

Their number was eighteen, and their names, more fully written, were William Gilson, Frances Gilson, Anthony Annable, Mrs. Annable, Henry Rowley, Mrs. Rowley, Henry Cobb, Patience Cobb, Humphrey Turner, Edward Foster, John Lothrop, Richard Foxwell, Samuel House, Timothy Hatherly, Mrs. Hatherly, James Cudworth, Mary Cudworth, Henry Bourn.

From all that can be learned of Mr. Lothrop he was a learned man, educated at Oxford, of humble piety, great zeal, "studious of peace," and wholly devoted to his work,—an excellent type of what a Christian minister should be. It was a misfortune of this church and settlement that the demon of discord drove this godly man away. It does not appear that any hostility to him existed, but controversies of some kind, perhaps relating to the form of baptism, and other dissensions among them so agitated and divided his little flock that, "studious of peace," he removed, with more than half his church, to Barnstable in 1639-40. There is evidence that others would have gone with him but for the ruin it would have wrought to their investments in Scituate. Fortunate indeed it was for the interests of that place that some of the strongest and wealthiest and most influential settlers were thus detained. Anthony Annable, one of the most valuable men in the town and deputy from Scituate to the Colony Court, went with them.

This departure greatly weakened the church and town, but did not promote harmony, as had been hoped by good Mr. Lothrop. Seven male church members who remained he covenanted anew and organized into a church, as well as he could, on leaving them. Yet the regularity and legality of this action and organization was subsequently questioned and denied by Mr. Chauncey, the man who had accepted its call to be Mr. Lothrop's successor. Of the church left behind in Scituate, a majority appear to have been what would now be called Baptists. In 1641 they succeeded in calling Mr. Charles Chauncey, who would baptize only by immersion. He was distinguished for his learning, a graduate of Trinity College in Cambridge, England, by turns Professor of Hebrew and of Greek in the same college, and afterwards a popular preacher at Ware. While preaching there he incurred the displeasure of Archbishop Laud, and yielded to the demand for a public recantation. This act of moral cowardice seemed to trouble his conscience ever afterwards, and was often referred to by him with sorrow. Why his own weakness should not have taught him toleration and charity for others is surprising. But he was too decided and pronounced in his religious views to remain comfortably or even safely in England at that time, and he came to Plymouth in 1637, where he remained, assisting Mr. Rayner, until he was called to Scituate. He was ardent, arbitrary, and passionate by nature, and had the materials of which his church was composed been of a more plastic character he would have moulded the entire community to his will. But Mr. William Vassall, the leader of the church minority, was not only a learned man, but palpably the superior of Mr. Chauncey in argument. Mr. Vassall and his associates, who had been notified by Mr. Chauncey that they were not members of the church at all, retorted by claiming that they were the original church, and his body were seceders from them. Church membership was of much consequence, because it involved among other things the right to take part in the civil government. Appeals and arguments were presented by Mr. Chauncey on the one side, and Mr. Vassall on the other, to the ministers, elders, and churches of the Plymouth Colony and the Massachusetts Colony. On the whole, Mr. Chauncey may be said to have been favored and sustained by the Plymouth Churches and pastors, and Mr. Vassall by those of Massachusetts. For obvious reasons, the ministers would have liked to sustain one of their own order, but Mr. Chauncey's absurd literalism in insisting upon celebrating the Lord's Supper every Lord's Day, and only in the evening, did not please them, and his views upon baptism, immersing both adults and infants, was contrary to currently-received opinions. His rash and violent accusations against his opponents were answered in such a masterly manner by Mr. Vassall that the latter "plucked the rose of safety from the nettle of danger."

Mr. Vassall and his party appear to have won at last a substantial victory. Though admonished to desist from their purpose by the Plymouth and other churches, they went inflexibly forward, and Sept. 2, 1645, installed Rev. William Witherell as their pastor. Though Mr. Vassall went to England in 1648, and seems not to have returned, and though overtures for reconciliation were made by Mr. Witherell and members of his church from time to time, and though there is evidence that Mr. Chauncey's feelings had softened, no full fellowship between these two churches was secured while Mr. Chauncey remained in Scituate. The following is Mr. Deane's account in part of the reconciliation:

"In the autumn of 1654, Mr. Chauncey retired from Scituate, and we find no further traces of these ecclesiastical troubles until 1674, when we find on a record a formal reconciliation, as follows:

"To the Rev. Elders and brethren of our neighbor church of Christ in Scituate grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied.

SCITUATE, April 1, 1675.

REV. AND BELOVED IN OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR.

"We received a letter from you dated Feb. 18, 1674,—a very loving and christian expression of your minds, inclined to remove any just grounds of offence given in a former letter, and to desire love and fellowship with us in the holy things of God, according to the will and mind of Christ,—which we have perused and considered, with thankfulness to God and due respect unto yourselves, and accepted as a pledge of future mercy from God both to yourselves and to us; and we do hereby certify you that we are thereby fully satisfied, and do willingly and gladly lay aside all former offences taken up or ancient disagreements and differences betwixt us; we desire God to forgive you and us whatsoever may have been displeasing to him. And in that you desire fellowship with us in the gospel, that we may have communion one with another as the churches of Christ, we do cordially embrace your motion, etc.

"NICHOLAS BAKER, } in the name and with
 "THOMAS CLAP, } the consent of the "JOHN DAMON, } Church."

"Thus happily terminated an ecclesiastical controversy of thirty-three years."

Mr. Chauncey became dissatisfied with his position in Scituate, and having received a call to return to his former people in Ware, went with his family to Boston to take passage for England. Here he was providentially intercepted by the overseers of Harvard College, who offered him the presidency of that institution, a position for which his great learning, studious character, love of hard work, and former experience as professor in an English college admirably fitted him. He accepted, and entered upon a course of distinguished usefulness. He died Feb. 19, 1671, at the age of eighty-one. The preacher of his funeral sermon, in alluding to his hasty temper, said, "The mention thereof is to be wrapped up in Elijah's mantle." Much trouble as it may cause the owners thereof, the men of hasty tempers have always been the most largely useful in the world. They are in earnest. Mr. Chauncey was as dogmatic and persistent while in Scituate in insisting upon immersion in baptism, as if he had discovered the Tischendorf manuscript, with its statement that converts were plunged in the water, and yet when he accepted the presidency of Harvard College he promised to say no more about immersion, and faithfully kept his word during his seventeen years there, and after he left it the church at Scituate also and forever gave up the practice of immersion. Such fierce controversy over matters which the parties thereto finally confess by word and act to be immaterial, tends to inspire doubt in the whole system of revealed religion. The mind involuntarily asks what is essential truth, and denials and doubts are largely chargeable to the church. Dogmatist or doubter, which is right, after all? No one knows or can know till "coldness wraps this suffering clay," and then the knowledge is useless.

Mr. Timothy Hatherly was a very liberal member of this church, and its great benefactor. He gave it large grants of land, the sales of which subsequently established a handsome fund for the society. Mr. Deane thinks the first meeting-house was built before 1633, and before Mr. Lothrop arrived. Into this error he was evidently led by the way in which the meeting-house was mentioned in laying out of lots in 1633. It was meant probably a lot on which to erect one. It is not reasonable to suppose they would erect such a building almost before their own houses were built, and when any one of their houses would hold the few worshipers who assembled together on the Sabbath. But the proof is positive that the meeting-house was built in 1636. Rev. John Lothrop seems to have left behind him a manuscript in which he gives an account of the houses erected during the first years of his ministry, and says, under the heading of 1636, that the meeting-house was erected "Aug. ye 2d & 3d days," and again "Exercised in November 10 & 11, 1636," from which it might reasonably be claimed that the "erected" means began to be built in August, and that in November it was occupied for preaching, "exercised in." This house seems to have afforded accommodation for the church for nearly fifty years. In it the Rev. Messrs. Lothrop, Chauncey, Dunster, and Baker officiated.

Rev. Henry Dunster, who came to America in 1640, was a ripe scholar and an amiable and devout man. He was the first president of Harvard College, serving in that capacity from Aug. 27, 1640, to October, 1654, when he resigned, exchanging places with Mr. Chauncey. Mr. Dunster has been unjustly represented as persecuting the Quakers. This is a mistake, and what Gen. James Cudworth has left on record is sufficient to disprove the statement. The Scituate churches and their pastors were conspicuous, in fact, as standing alone in their opposition to the persecution of this troublesome sect. Mr. Dunster preached to the church at Scituate from 1654 to some time in 1659, when he died. It is remarkable that the first two presidents of Harvard College, Mr. Dunster and Mr. Chauncey, should both be ministers at Scituate.

The pastors of this church up to this period of time had been remarkable for their learning. Their successor, Rev. Nicholas Baker, being spoken of by Cotton Mather as a man who "had but a private education," or we may infer, perhaps, he was not so learned as his predecessors, yet his piety, prudence, good sense, and zeal were so conspicuous that his ministry of eighteen years—from 1660 to 1678—was a most creditable one to himself and a decided blessing to the church. During that period the sore trials of the Indian war occurred. During his ministry, also, return to the practice of infant baptism by sprinkling occurred, and he also aided to bring about the reconciliation with the South Church in Scituate. After Mr. Baker's death an attempt was made and repeated to unite the two churches and erect a new meeting-house on Woodworth Hill, but the project failed; and shortly after his death, probably as early as 1682, a new meeting-house was erected on the old site. For several years subsequent to the death of Mr. Baker this church would seem to have been without a settled minister.

In 1691, Rev. Jeremiah Cushing was installed as pastor, on a salary of sixty pounds per annum. His predecessors in this ministry had all been natives of England. He was born in Hingham. Little is recorded of his ministry, though it lasted fourteen years, and until he died, March 22, 1705.

Rev. Nathaniel Pitcher, a native of Dorchester, succeeded Mr. Cushing in 1707, and continued there until he died, Sept. 27, 1723, only thirty-eight years of age. He appears to have been a popular and talented preacher, loving peace,—and "blessed are the peacemakers." His relations with the other church and its pastor, Mr. Eells, were particularly cordial and friendly. During his ministry, and about the year 1709, after much controversy, a new meeting-house was erected on the old site.

In December, 1724, Rev. Sheerjashub Bourn was installed pastor. His ministry was a most acceptable one, but he was compelled by impaired health to resign in August, 1761, and died in Roxbury, Aug. 14, 1768. During his ministry, in the year 1737, a new meeting-house was erected near where the present one stands, the people at the west end having grown strong enough to accomplish this long-sought result.

The successor of Mr. Bourn was the Rev. Ebenezer Grosvenor, a native of Pomfret, Conn., and was ordained April, 1763. His ministry, which lasted seventeen years, could scarcely be called a happy one, but it was from no fault of his. He was a good, even eloquent, preacher and a benevolent, large-hearted gentleman. But religious controversy was bitter, and beat about him, and the hardships and poverty of the Revolutionary war increased his misfortunes. He died in 1788, eight years after his removal from Scituate, aged only forty-nine.

For seven years after Mr. Grosvenor's resignation the church was unable to settle a pastor. In November, 1787, Rev. Ebenezer Dawes was installed. His ministry was a short and trying but successful one. He died Sept. 29, 1791.

The Rev. Nehemiah Thomas was the next in this succession, being ordained November, 1792. During his ministry grew up that controversy in the churches which resulted in the division of the Congregational Churches into two branches,—the Unitarian and the Trinitarian. Mr. Thomas is supposed to have taken the Unitarian view, and the majority of his parish and a minority of his church, which was, however, nearly equally divided, held to the same. Mr. Thomas was a very able man, and sustained himself under circumstances of peculiar difficulty through a long pastorate of thirty-nine years.

It is a remarkable fact that of all the ministers of this parish not one has left any descendants bearing the name in that town. The names and valuable services of the ministers who have succeeded Mr. Thomas are known to people now living, and it will be sufficient here to give their names and period of service.

Rev. Edmund Q. Sewall, who succeeded Mr. Thomas, was installed Dec. 21, 1831, and continued in the ministry there until March 20, 1848. Those living who know him cherish his memory with great affection. Rev. Ephraim Nute, Jr., was minister of this parish from June, 1848, to September, 1851. Rev. Fisk Barrett accepted a call Oct. 21, 1852, and remained until March 12, 1859. Rev. William G. Babcock accepted a call to become minister of this parish Aug. 23, 1860, and resigned March 15, 1865. Rev. William S. Hayward was their minister from Oct. 3, 1865, to Sept. 23, 1867. Rev. H. L. Cargill, from April 19, 1869, to March 4, 1870. Rev. N. P. Gilman accepted a call Aug. 19, 1872, and continued in the line of this ancient pastorate till May 31, 1875. Rev. S. L. Clark was the minister during parts of the years 1875 and 1876. Rev. A. J. Jennings was next pastor, closing his work about 1879. Rev. Nathaniel Seaver became pastor in 1882, and is still discharging its duties with great success and popularity. The old meeting-house, which was an interesting specimen of the architecture of its day, and dearly cherished because of its sacred associations, was unfortunately burned in 1879. A new, elegant, and commodious church has been since erected on or near the old site, and was dedicated in May, 1881.

The South Church.—Leaving out the consideration of the mooted and fairly debatable question raised by Mr. Vassall as to whether the church formed by him and those who agreed with him should be called the First or Second Church, and designating it as the South Church, its history will now be traced.

As we have seen, the persistent efforts of Mr. Vassall and his associates for recognition and justice were at last successful, and the South Church entered upon organized existence, with Rev. William Witherell for its pastor. Their first meeting-house was erected on the southeast side of the highway, on a hill a short distance northeast of Stony Brook. The lot was doubtless given to the church by either James Torrey or Thomas Robinson, who were very active and influential in the movements leading to the establishment of this church. This meeting-house lasted during the entire thirty-nine years of Mr. Witherell's ministry, or from 1645 to 1684. As Mr. Witherell is said to have been born in the first year of that century, he had attained the mature age of forty-five when he entered upon his ministry at Scituate, and continued in active and eminently useful service until more than eighty years of age. His ministry was evidently a very successful one. That his mother was the daughter of John Rogers, the martyr, is a matter of well-preserved and not improbable tradition.

It is stated by Mr. Deane that Mr. Witherell was a schoolmaster in Charlestown in 1635, and in Cambridge in 1636 and 1637, removing to Duxbury in 1638, where he resided until his removal to Scituate, seven years later.

Mr. Witherell resided in his own house on Wilson Hill during his life in Scituate. He was evidently a learned man, tolerant of the opinions of others, not allowing slight differences to interrupt or hinder Christian fellowship with real believers, plain, practical, and fearless in the administration of his office. He exacted from his people strict attention to religious duties, for when Mr. John Bryant—who was afterwards a deacon of the church, and married Mr. Witherell's daughter, Elizabeth—entered church late he was thus reproved by the pastor: "Neighbor Bryant, it is to your reproach that you have disturbed this worship by entering late, living as you do within a mile of this place, and especially so, since here is Goody Barstow, who has milked seven cows, made a cheese, and walked five miles to this house of God in good season." He was a man of some literary attainments, although his poetry was not such as to give him high rank as a poet. His elegy on the death of Governor Josiah Winslow, written when the author was eighty years of age, affords good evidence of his scholarship being good for his time, and the following extract therefrom is certainly good poetry:

"Slight grief has tears in troops, that ready stand
To sally forth, and but expect command;
But deep ingulfing sorrow strikes men dumb
As frosty winters do their joints benumb."

Mr. Deane said he was unable to trace him into England, but it now appears that he lived in Maidstone, England, and was a schoolmaster, and came over in the "Hercules" with his wife, three children, and one servant. His children were Samuel, John, Theophilus, Daniel, Mary (wife of Thomas Oldham), Elizabeth, Sarah (wife of Israel Hobart), and Hannah. Descendants of his still live in the town, but none bearing the name.

His ministry, which began in the midst of sharp controversy with a neighboring church, covered the perilous period of the Indian wars (and during which his people suffered much), and was in the last part thereof one of well-earned repose and prosperity. It is probable that he did not preach much after 1680, as in September of that year Rev. Thomas Mighill was associated with him, and the church "voted to allow £60 a year for a minister, and £10 to our Pastor, Mr. Witherell." Mr. Mighill preached to them, but was not ordained until Oct. 15, 1684, after Mr. Witherell's death. His ministry was not a long one, his death occurring in 1689, when his family removed.

The experience of the North River Church with their next pastor, Rev. Deodate Lawson, was apparently a peculiar one. He was probably ordained in 1694. Of his ministry very little is known, except the circumstances leading to the installation of his successor. It seems that after two years of his ministry had elapsed he left his people, and after two years of unexplained and evidently unjustifiable absence they obtained the advice of the churches of Weymouth, Braintree, Newton, Hull, Milton, Dorchester, Dedham, and Medfield, and, in accordance with that advice, sought out and called Rev. Nathaniel Eells for their minister. This eminently successful minister was born in 1678, graduated from Harvard College in 1699, and was ordained as minister of the North River Church June 14, 1704. He was married, Oct. 12, 1704, to Hannah North. "She was the aunt of Frederick, Lord North, Prime Minister of England, during the American Revolution." From Mr. Deane, who had excellent facilities for learning Mr. Eells' personal characteristics, and from other sources, it is apparent that he was a tall, large man, of imposing appearance, and who strongly impressed men by the dignity of his character and bearing. His influence over his people was deservedly great. While not devoid of humor his mental characteristics were solid rather than brilliant, his preaching useful rather than sensational. His well-poised intellect made him always a safe leader. Possessing the judicial capacity of carefully weighing and correctly deciding all matters submitted to him, he naturally became authority in matters of ecclesiastical law, and his assistance was sought and his influence largely felt in the ecclesiastical councils of his day. His life and ministry of eminent usefulness terminated Aug. 25, 1750, his age being seventy-two.

In the early part of his ministry was built the third meeting-house of this church. It had even then outgrown its old home. The Second Church, which stood and was large enough to accommodate the worshipers only during the short ministry of Mr. Mighill and Mr. Lawson, was erected, about the time of Mr. Witherell's death, on the east side of the highway, a short distance northeasterly from the entrance of the Union Bridge road. But under the auspicious ministry of Mr. Eells a larger building was needed, and after much difficulty and some delay in fixing upon and obtaining a suitable location, another westward move was made. The new house of worship—fifty feet in length and forty feet in width—was erected on the common lands on the hill near the junction of the two roads. This was their place of worship during the ministry of Mr. Eells, Mr. Darby, and part of Mr. Barnes. Near the same place the next and also the present meeting-house of this parish was erected.

Rev. Jonathan Darby was ordained Nov. 13, 1751. He was a young man of great promise, and he made himself very acceptable to his people, but he died April 22, 1754, at the early age of twenty-eight, and in the third year of his ministry.

On the 27th day of November, A.D. 1754, began the long pastorate of Rev. David Barnes. His ministry lasted fifty-seven years, closing with his life, April 26, 1811. Few ministers have been so fortunate as Dr. Barnes. He must have been a man of extraordinary powers of mind, which he used so well and with such wisdom and circumspection that although his ministry embraced that period of great suffering to himself and people, the eight years of the Revolutionary war and the fierce theological controversies attendant upon the establishment of Unitarian Churches, he passed through it all without losing in any degree his hold upon the affection and esteem of his people.

When ordained, in 1754, there can be no doubt but what he and his people were Trinitarians and Calvinists in belief, but before his ministry closed they and he had substantially changed their faith and became in fact, if not in name, Unitarians. This complete and harmonious transfer of the faith of so large and prosperous a church could have been accomplished under the ministry of no man who did not possess unusual excellence of personal character and great powers of mind.

Mr. Deane's eulogy upon him could not have been overdrawn. Of his descendants none seem to have resided in Scituate. He had three children,—Rachel, who married Josiah Cotton, clerk of the courts at Plymouth; Hon. David L. Barnes, who became judge of the United States District Court for Rhode Island; and Anna, who married William Jackson, of Plymouth.

The next pastor of this church was Rev. Samuel Deane, who was ordained Feb. 14, 1810, and enjoyed a most successful pastorate of over twenty-four years, and until his death, in the summer of 1834. In 1831 he published a history of Scituate, which has always been regarded as among the best works of its kind. It was among the first of our town histories, and showed an amount of hard and discriminating work and historical ability rarely bestowed upon works of that kind in his day. The more it is studied the greater the surprise at the accuracy of its statements, and the amount of labor it must have involved. Those who can trace their lineage to this old town can never be grateful enough to Mr. Deane for having, as he did and when he did, preserved in such permanent form the record of so much which, but for his work then, would have eluded all search. This pulpit, which was singularly fortunate in the number of marked men who occupied it, was next filled by Rev. Samuel J. May, the eminent philanthropist and anti-slavery advocate. The power for good which he exerted in that community was very great. His labors in the temperance cause were wonderfully potential for good and widely felt, but in that place he so impressed the idea of total abstinence upon the people that the influence may still be recognized. He took great interest in education, and his presence in the school-room in his visits as school committee was a benediction. Few men ever possessed so fully the power of attracting the affections of both young and old as this good and genial pastor. On his removal to Syracuse he was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Mosely for a few years. The next pastor was the Rev. Caleb Stetson, a man of a large brain and large heart. He was a descendant of Cornet Robert Stetson, who, in the early days of the colony, was a pillar both in Church and State. After a successful pastorate of many years, the advance of old age led him to retire to the beautiful town of Lexington, where he closed his greatly useful career. His successor was the Rev. William Fish, a learned preacher, to whom his people are greatly attached, and whose useful pastorate they devoutly hope and trust may endure for many long years to come.

The Universalist Society.—It might have been reasonably expected of the South Parish that, remembering its early history, it would have pursued a liberal course towards the people of West Scituate when they sought to form a separate organization. But the exactly opposite course was taken.

In 1767 South Parish voted against their request for preaching occasionally in their part of the town. Meantime the people at the west end appear to have built a house of worship, but the intolerant spirit of the majority crops out in the following vote in 1770: "It was put to vote whether the Rev. Mr. Barnes should preach in the Meeting-House, near Joshua Jacobs, while our new house is building, and passed in the negative." They would neither allow them to form a new parish nor let Mr. Barnes preach in that part of the town, although at that time they were without a meeting-house. In 1771, Joshua Jacobs and others petitioned the General Court for incorporation, but the efforts of the committee appointed by the South Parish to oppose them were effectual. In 1792, Mr. Barnes was consulted in reference to his willingness to preach a part of the year at the West meeting-house, to which this great-hearted man replied that he should be glad to gratify them. It was accordingly voted that he should preach there one Sabbath in each month from April 1st to December 1st. But the next year (1793) the parish by vote withdrew this privilege. Up to this time there was no difference in doctrinal belief separating the two sections. If their just request had been granted at this time, a Congregational Church would have been formed at West Scituate that would like its parent have become a Unitarian Congregational Church or have remained a Trinitarian Congregational Church. But the treatment they had received did not tend to augment their regard for their old church and its faith, and having a meeting-house they used it, though compelled to pay taxes for preaching elsewhere. Under these circumstances they were not confined to the teachings of regularly recognized ministers. Their minds were open to the reception of new ideas. Universalism was beginning to be preached in this county. Rev. Mr. Ballou and others, Universalist preachers, readily found access to this unappropriated pulpit. As a result, in 1812, they petitioned the General Court for incorporation as a "Universalist Society," and their petition was granted. This society had in it first-rate material for making the enterprise successful, and its early history was one of great prosperity.

Its ministers have been Rev. Messrs. David Pickering, Samuel Baker, Joshua Flagg, Benjamin Whittemore, Robert L. Killam (who enjoyed a long pastorate, and made his home among that people for the remainder of his honored and useful life,—he was a good man), H. W. Morse, John F. Dyer, J. E. Burnham, John Stetson Barry (the historian), M. E. Hawes, Horace P. Stevens, Robinson Breare, — Reesord, Henry C. Vose, — Perry.

The names of the original members of this society were Enoch Collamore, Loring Jacobs, Ichabod R. Jacobs, John Jones, Jr., Calvin Wilder, James H. Jacobs, Charles Totman, Charles Jones, Isaac N. Damon, Joshua Bowker, James Jacobs, Abel Sylvester, Charles Simmons, William Hyland, David Turner, Samuel Randall, Samuel Randall, Jr., Joshua Damon, Ebenezer Totman, Jonathan Turner, Enoch Collamore, Jr., Benjamin Bowker, John Gross, Josiah Witherell, Samuel Simmons, John Jones, Peleg Simmons, Seth Stoddard, George Litchfield, Elisha Gross, Reuben Sutton, T. Corttrell, Edward F. Jacobs, Elisha Barrell, Stephen Jacobs, Edward Curtis, and E. Barrell, Jr.

Episcopal Church.—Mr. Deane and others state that the first Episcopal services in Scituate thus originated: "Rev. Timothy Cutler, of Christ Church, Boston, came to Scituate during an absence of Rev. Mr. Bourn, minister of the North Parish, by the invitation of Lieut. Damon (then at variance with Mr. Bourn) and another gentleman of large estate, and performed divine service in the Church form at the North Meeting-house."

This may be true, but that Lieut. Zachary Damon, then seventy-three years of age, should actively interest himself in having services which he did not believe in performed in that house is hardly credible.

Certain it is that Episcopacy never got any foothold in the North Parish of Scituate. But in the extreme south part of the town, near Hanover, where Mr. Miller, of Braintree, seems to have preached from time to time, it received some favor, and in 1731 a church edifice was erected on what has ever since been known as Church Hill. This building was enlarged in 1753.

The Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts sent out a man from England as rector for this church, who served them as such from 1733 to 1736. Rev. Mr. Brockwell was rector from 1737 to 1739.

In 1743 the society in England appointed Rev. Ebenezer Thompson as their missionary rector to this church, and he remained in that office until his death, in 1775, a period of thirty-two years. His ministry was evidently a popular one.

During the Revolutionary war this church had no rector. Up to this time this church had apparently been supported as a missionary church by the society in England. In 1783, Rev. William W. Wheeler became rector. He was the last rector who officiated in the church at Scituate, as he died in 1810, the same year the church voted to remove to Hanover and build a church there. This was done in 1811, before the settlement of the next rector, and the history of this church in Scituate ceased.

The Baptist Church.—"At a meeting of persons favorable to the formation of a Baptist Church held July 8, 1825, it was voted to call a council for organization and recognition, to be held August 10th. Accordingly, on that day, the council convened with Rev. Daniel Sharp, D.D., of Boston, moderator, and Rev. Willard Kimball, of Abington, scribe. The church was formally recognized with the following constituent members: Rev. Amos Lefavor, Henrietta Lefavor, Abiel Cudworth, Joanna Cudworth, Joseph Gannett, Betsey Gannett, Judith Briggs (Gannett), Nehemiah Curtis, Mercy L. Curtis (Jenkins), Jaazaniah Bates, Nathaniel Damon, Anna Bates, Rachel White (Brown), Sally Jenkins (Daniels), Nancy Jenkins, Betsey Otis, Cynthia Nichols, Hannah Collier, Hannah W. Bailey, Mehitable Hyland, Lucy Briggs, Sophia Briggs (Prince), Hannah James, Hannah Briggs (Otis), Rachel Litchfield, Lettice Vinal, Lucy Collier (Jenkins), Thankful Rich, Betsey Collier (Barrelle), Xoa Clapp (Litchfield).

Abiel Cudworth and Nathaniel Damon were chosen as deacons, Aug. 12, 1825.

The only surviving members are Mrs. Sophia Pierce, of North Scituate, aged ninety-three; her sister, Miss Lucy Briggs, aged eighty-five; and Mrs. Xoa Litchfield, of South Scituate, seventy-nine years.

Pastors.—Rev. Amos Lefavor continued as pastor until May 14, 1826. He was followed by Rev. Adoniram Judson (father of the distinguished missionary of that name), who, after about nine months' services, died in Scituate, Nov. 26, 1826. Forty-three years before, being then a Congregational minister, he had preached as a candidate to the Congregational Church there, and had received a call, which for some reason he did not accept. He was for many years pastor of the Congregational Church in Plymouth. He was a man of catholic, Christian spirit, and in dying requested that his funeral might take place from the Congregational Church, and that Congregationalist as well as a Baptist minister might officiate. It is not recorded whether his request was complied with.

Rev. Asa Niles settled Aug. 5, 1827; dismissed 1829. In January, 1830, Rev. Edward Seagrave became pastor; dismissed 1835. Rev. John Holbrook came October, 1836; dismissed April, 1838. Rev. Warren Cooper, June 2, 1838, left in November of the same year. Rev. Caleb Brown became pastor June 1, 1839; dismissed May, 1841. A young man, Franklin Damon, labored with the church several months, and Oct. 15, 1842, was ordained as an evangelist, and the next year left to pursue further study. In September, 1843, Rev. Thomas Conant became pastor, and continued until July 10, 1853. He died at his home in Scituate Oct. 23, 1870. Rev. Stephen Cutler, July, 1853; dismissed June 5, 1854. Rev. George Carpenter settled July, 1854; dismissed May, 1857. Rev. Timothy C. Tingley settled June, 1857; dismissed 1864. Rev. Lewis Holmes settled September, 1864; dismissed December, 1867. Rev. William H. Kelton, July, 1858; died April 4, 1871. Rev. Thomas L. Rogers settled December, 1871; dismissed April, 1874. Rev. C. W. R. Meacham, September, 1874; dismissed April, 1879. Rev. William A. Spinney settled March, 1880; dismissed September, 1882. Rev. T. W. Sheppard settled in January, 1883, is present pastor.

Deacons.—Howard White was chosen, April 2, 1842, successor to Nathaniel Damon; removed to Marshfield. Sept. 1, 1855, George W. Bailey was appointed successor to Deacon White (deceased), and in February, 1864, Charles E. Bailey was chosen successor to Deacon Cudworth (deceased). The old meeting-house at the Centre needing extensive repairs, and the membership of the church having increased more north of that location than south of it, it was decided to build a new edifice on a site farther north. Oct. 6, 1870, a commodious church, with vestries and anterooms, was dedicated free of debt. A parsonage was also built, the total expenditure being about seventeen thousand dollars. The present membership of the church is one hundred and eighty-seven. Membership of the Sunday-school is one hundred and fifty-six.

The Congregational Church.—In 1824, during the ministry of Rev. Nehemiah Thomas, considerable dissatisfaction arose in his church, and an effort was made by a majority of the church to have adopted and observed a covenant and confession of faith, and secure a stricter observance of what they deemed essential church requisites. In this movement the pastor did not co-operate, and held himself aloof from a series of church meetings, in the course of which the old covenant of the church was reaffirmed and adopted. This was done by a decided majority of the church. These proceedings created a breach which continually widened between the church and pastor, the majority adverse to him apparently diminishing so that when it finally culminated April 29, 1826, in a vote of what they claimed was a majority of the church, that the relation between the church and its pastor, Mr. Thomas, be dissolved. This action was taken by advice of an ex parte council, which had been called by this majority, as they claimed to be, of the church. Mr. Thomas, who was sustained by a part of the church and a great majority of the parish, and held possession of the records of the old church, never recognized this action of what he called a minority of the church. The records of the church thus constituted assume that, being the majority, they remained the First Church,—the church over which Chauncey and his successors were settled. As twelve members of the church thus stood by themselves and only ten adhered to Mr. Thomas, as it claimed the question is more interesting than practical, as to which held the organization called the First Church. Rev. Paul Jewett was installed as pastor Nov. 16, 1826, and remained as such until 1833. Rev. Luke A. Spofford was installed May 20, 1835, and resigned on account of ill health, March 12, 1836. Rev. Phineas Smith was installed Sept. 2, 1840, and remained only one year. Rev. Daniel Wight, Jr., was installed Sept. 28, 1842, and continued in the pastorate of that church until 1858. He was an able preacher, of decided literary taste and ability, won the respect and love of his people, and had a successful ministry. Rev. Alexander J. Sessions was installed June 25, 1863, and was pastor until Oct. 3, 1869. He was an able and faithful minister of the gospel. Rev. T. S. Robie preached to this people in 1870 and 1871; Rev. W. B. Greene from 1872 to 1877; Rev. William C. Wood, an able, positive, and live preacher, from 1878 to 1883; and Rev. Mr. Page in 1884. The last four ministers, it is said, were not installed over the church. The names of the twelve members of this church who called Rev. Paul Jewett to be their pastor in 1826 were Deacon Israel Litchfield, Calvin Jenkins, Ward Litchfield, Eleazer Peakes, Rowland Litchfield, James Jenkins, Levi Vinal, Jacob Vinal, Charles Curtis, Augustus Cole, James Turner, Stephen Mott. The deacons since 1826 have been Israel Litchfield, Ward Litchfield, Calvin Jenkins, Israel Cudworth, John H. Young, and Russell Cook. This church erected a meeting-house in 1826 at the centre of the town, still in use.

Methodist Church.—About 1825 a Methodist Church was organized and has had a prosperous career. Among some of the earliest preachers there were Revs. Messrs. Taylor, Avery, Barker, and Keith. The discipline of this church provides for such frequent changes in the pastors that there is great difficulty in getting a full and accurate list of all who have served this church, and it will not be attempted.

Roman Catholic Church.—A large number of Roman Catholics having settled near the harbor, in this town, since 1850, with the commendable religious zeal and enterprise which everywhere distinguishes them, they have erected a church and hold services.

Methodist Church in South Scituate.—At Church Hill, about 1845, a Methodist Church was formed, and has had a very prosperous life. They have a fine meeting-house.

Quakers.—No Quaker Church was ever built in this town, but near North River, in Pembroke, one has stood for generations. Some Scituate people in all the generations have been Quakers until the present. There are no Quakers now left in the town. The last residents there were Daniel Otis and wife, in South Scituate. In the early history of the town Quakers were numerous and among the most useful citizens. Edward Wanton, one of the best and most enterprising men in the place, was a Quaker. The Plymouth Colony has the deserved credit of not falling into the foolish and wicked witchcraft delusion and persecutions, and of not persecuting the Quakers so furiously as the Massachusetts Colony. But Scituate stands alone and in grand contrast with all the other communities in these two colonies in her opposition to that persecution. In fact, she suffered persecution for her opposition to persecution, for her deputies, Mr. Hatherly and Mr. Cudworth, were refused admission to the Colony Court, and suffered much from the tyranny and bigotry of the government. And this simply because they protested against persecution. The people of Scituate sustained Mr. Hatherly and Mr. Cudworth, and a letter, written by Mr. Cudworth, is here given to show not only his feeling and opinion, but also to show that the community he represented agreed with him. The letter also refutes the charge that his pastor, Mr. Dunster, was a persecutor. For these reasons it is here inserted:

“As to the state and condition of things amongst us, it is sad, and so like to continue. The anti-christian, persecuting spirit is very active, and that in the powers of this world. He that will not lash, persecute, and punish men that differ in matters of religion must not sit on the bench, nor sustain any office in the Commonwealth. Last Election Mr. Hatherly and myself were left off the bench, and myself discharged of my Captainship because I had entertained some of the Quakers at my house, thereby that I might be the better acquainted with their principles. I thought it better to do so than with the blind world to censure, condemn, rail at, and revile them, when they neither saw their persons nor knew any of their principles. But the Quakers and myself cannot close in diverse things, and so I signified to the Court; but told them, withal, that as I was no Quaker, so I would be no persecutor.

“This spirit did work those two years that I was of the Magistracy, during which time I was on sundry occasions forced to declare my dissent in sundry actings of that nature: which altho’ done with all moderation of expression, together with due respect unto the rest, yet it wrought great disaffection and prejudice in them against me: so that they themselves set others to frame a petition against me, so that they may have a seeming ground (though first moved by themselves) to lay me under reproach. The petition was with nineteen hands: it will be too long to make rehearsal. It wrought such a disturbance in our town, and in our military Company, that when the act of Court was read at the head of the Company, had I not been present and made a speech to them, I fear their would have been such actings as would have been of sad consequence. The Court was again followed with another petition (counter) of fifty-four hands: and the Court returned the petitioners an answer, with much plausibleness of speech, carrying with it great show of respect to them, readily acknowledging, with the petitioners, my parts and gifts, and how useful I had been in my place, professing that they had nothing against me, only in that thing of my giving entertainment to the Quakers.”

(Here follow extracts of the laws against the Quakers, etc.)

“All these carnal and anti-christian ways, being not of God’s appointment, effect nothing to the hindering of them in their course. It is only the word and the Spirit of the Lord that is able to convince gainsayers. They have many meetings and many adherents,—almost the whole town of Sandwich. And give me leave to acquaint you a little with their sufferings, which is grievous, and saddens the hearts of most of the precious saints of God: it lies down and rises up with them, and they cannot put it out of their minds when they see poor families deprived of their comforts, and brought into penury and want. As for the means by which they are impoverished,—they were, in the first place, scrupulous of an oath; why, then, we must put in force an old law: they must all take the oath of fidelity. This being tendered, they will not take it; then they must pay five pounds, or depart the Colony in such a time; when the time comes, the Marshall goes and fetcheth away their cows and other cattle; another court comes, they are required again to take the oath,—they cannot,—then five pounds more. A poor weaver that had 7 or 8 small children had but two cows, and both were taken from him. The Marshall asked him what he would do, and the man said that 'God, who gave him them, he doubted not, would still provide for him.'

"The last Court of Assistants was pleased to determine fines on Sandwich men for meetings, one hundred and fifty pounds, whereof W. Newland is twenty-four pounds for himself and wife, at ten shillings a meeting; W. Allen, forty-six pounds; the poor weaver afore spoken of, twenty pounds. Brother Cook told me one of the brethren of Barnstable was in the weaver's house when cruel Barloe (Sandwich Marshall) came to demand the sum, and said he was fully informed of all the poor man had, and thought it not worth ten pounds. What will be the end of such courses and practises the Lord only knows. I am informed of three or fourscore last Court presented for not coming to publick meetings, and let me tell you how they brought this about. You may remember a law once made, called Thomas Hinckley's law, 'that if any neglect the worship of God in the place where he lives, and set up a worship contrary to God and the allowance of this Government, to the publick profanation of God's Holy Day and ordinances, he shall pay 10 shillings.' This law would not reach what then was aimed at, because he must do all things therein expressed, or else break not the law. In March last a Court of Deputies was called, and some acts touching Quakers were made, and then they contrived to make this law serviceable to them by putting out the word 'and' and putting in the word 'or,' which is a disjunctive, and makes every branch to become a law; yet they left it dated June 6, 1651, and so it stands as an act of the Gen. Court, they to be the authors of it seven years before it was in being; and so yourselves have a share in it, if the Record lie not.

"We are wrapped up in a labyrinth of confused laws, that the freeman's power is quite gone, and it was said last June Court by one that he knew nothing the freemen had there to do. Sandwich men may not go to the Bay lest they be taken up for Quakers,—warrants lie in ambush, to apprehend and bring them before a Magistrate, to give an account of their business. Some of the Quakers in R. I. came to bring them goods, and that on far more reasonable terms than the professing and oppressing Merchants of the County; but that will not be suffered. And truly it moves howels of compassion in all sorts, except those in place, who carry it with a high hand towards them. Through mercy, we have yet among us the worthy Mr. Dunster, whom the Lord hath made boldly to bear testimony against the spirit of persecution.

"Our bench now is Thomas Prince, Gov., Mr. Collier, Capt. Willet, Capt. Winslow, Mr. Alden, Lieut. Southworth, W. Bradford, Thomas Hinckley. Mr. Collier, last June, would not sit on the bench if I sat there, and now will not sit the next year unless he may have thirty pounds to sit by him. Our Court and Deputies last June made Capt. Winslow Major. Surely we are all mercenary soldiers that must have a Major imposed upon us. Doubtless, the next Court, they may choose us a Governor, and Assistants also; a freeman shall need to do nothing but bear such burdens as are laid upon him. Mr. Al hath deceived the expectations of many, and indeed lost affections of such as I judge were his cordial Christian friend who is very active in such ways as I pray God may not charged upon him to be oppressions of a high nature.

"JAMES CUDWORTH."

Lawyers.—Edward Foster was the first lawyer Scituate. He was one of the earliest settlers, being the first to whom a lot was assigned on Kent Street and one of the original members of Mr. Lothrop church. He and John Hoar, who removed to Concord in 1659, had practiced that profession in England, but it is not likely they found it lucrative here.

Their presence in the new settlement insured the correct transaction of much important business, as they were invaluable citizens.

John Saffin was the next lawyer. He was in Scituate in 1653. In 1660 he bought the farm of John Hoar which adjoined his other lands. He removed to Boston, and was elected representative in 1684, a Speaker of the House in 1686. Afterwards he moved to Bristol County, where he was judge of probate for a few years, and in 1701 was appointed judge of the Superior Court for Massachusetts.

John Barker, who was a soldier and wounded in King Philip's war, is spoken of as a lawyer in Scituate in 1674 and practiced there subsequently.

Thomas Turner began practice about 1690, a man of an eminent lawyer. Among his descendants were Hon. Charles Turner, M.C., and Hon. Samuel Turner, now over ninety years of age, a man of large mental powers still in almost unimpaired vigor.

John Cushing began his legal career about 1688. He was justice of the Inferior Court for Plymouth County from 1702 to 1728, and judge of the Superior Court from 1728 to 1737.

John Cushing, son of the above, commenced practice about 1725; was judge of probate about eight years, and judge of the Superior Court from 1747 to 1771, when he resigned and was succeeded by his distinguished son, William Cushing, upon whom the degree of LL.D. was worthily bestowed.

William Cushing began practice about 1754 in Maine, then a part of Massachusetts, and was afterwards judge of probate for Lincoln County, and appointed judge of the Superior Court for Massachusetts in 1772, and must soon after have moved back to Scituate, as we find him taking part in town affairs in 1776, drafting patriotic resolutions. In this was singularly patriotic, being the only member of that Court which adhered to the patriot cause. The other judges had received their appointments under royal authority, and should not be censured too severely their allegiance to the crown. But all the brighter shines the exalted love of country in William Cushing, who could break over all obstacles, surrender official position if necessary, and cast in his fortunes and risk his life for the cause of freedom. He had more to sacrifice and more to risk than others. It was a desperate struggle against one of the great powers of earth. If it miscarried he would lose all and would be a marked object of the royal displeasure because of his great ability and the office he had held under the king. When the Superior Court was reorganized under the State government he naturally became chief justice of that Court. When the Supreme Court of the United States came into existence he was appointed by Washington one of its justices. He presided over that court during the absence of Chief Justice Jay, and when Jay resigned, was appointed and unanimously confirmed for chief justice in 1796, but on account of infirm health he declined the honor. He continued on the bench, however, until he resigned in 1810. Mr. Deane, to whom he was personally known, thus describes him :

“In person he was of middling stature, erect and graceful, of form slight, of complexion fair, of blue and brilliant eyes and aquiline nose. His oratory was ready and flowing, but not of that overawing description with which some native orators of more fiery mould would have transported audiences; but its excellence consisted in cool, deliberate judgment and logical and lucid argumentation, which gave him eventually an advantage over those of more ardent temperament. As a judge, he was eminently qualified by his learning, and not less by his unshaken integrity and deliberate temper. The writer of this notice first saw him on the bench in 1801, when his zenith brightness had probably abated, but he still remembers how forcibly his youthful mind was affected by the order and perspicuity with which he performed the duties of his high office, and the mild though commanding dignity with which he guided the bar. In private life he was all that was amiable. He was a learned theologian, an exemplary Christian, irreproachable as a public character.” The foregoing description of this distinguished jurist by Rev. Mr. Deane may be depended upon as reliable. Judge Cushing was childless. His house was on the southerly side of Walnut-Tree Hill, or the northerly side of the road from South Scituate to Scituate harbor. It is to be regretted that this venerable mansion with such associations was destroyed by fire a few years ago.

David Little was in practice in 1708, but of him, as a lawyer, we can learn little.

George Little, of Marshfield, was a lawyer in Scituate a hundred years later, from 1807 to 1811.

John Thaxter, of Hingham, a lawyer of brilliant talents, was in Scituate in 1817, and died there in 1825.

Ebenezer T. Fogg, from Braintree, was a lawyer in Scituate from 1821 to his death, in 1860.

Seth Webb, Jr., of Scituate, was a lawyer of brilliant promise and greatly respected. He was in practice in Boston and in Scituate for many years, and yet too few, dying in 1861, a comparatively young man.

Daniel E. Damon, a native of Scituate, was admitted to the bar in 1858, and removed to Plymouth in 1859, where he was register of probate from 1859 to 1884, a longer period of time than that office was held by any other person. He is still in practice of law in Plymouth.

Hon. George Lunt, Oramel S. Senter, and Edward O. Cooke are the able and estimable members of the bar now resident and practicing in the town of Scituate. Mr. Lunt is eminent in the literary world as well as in law. Mr. Cooke has also an office in Boston, where he enjoys an extensive practice. It is believed that the foregoing list includes all who have practiced law in Scituate.

Physicians.—It is a little more difficult giving a sketch of the physicians than of the lawyers.

At the first the clergymen ministered to the bodies as well as the souls of their parishioners.

Dr. Isaac Otis was the first regular physician that settled in the town, and so highly did the town appreciate the advantages of having the services of such a skilled professional man they “voted a settlement of £100 to encourage him to remain in town.” In these days the doctors need to be offered no such inducements. This vote was in 1719, and indicates the time when he commenced practice.

Dr. Benjamin Stockbridge commenced practice about 1730, and was a man of high reputation in his profession, traveling as consulting physician in difficult cases as far even as Worcester. Such journeys in those days were no trifles. A physician could go to New York for consultation now easier than to Worcester then.

Dr. James Otis, son of Dr. Isaac Otis, began practice about 1760.

Dr. Ephraim Otis, after practicing in Taunton, settled in the west part of Scituate, where he continued in practice until near the time of his death, in 1814.

Dr. Charles Stockbridge, son of Dr. Benjamin Stockbridge, began practice about 1765. The mantle of his father seemed to fall upon shoulders fully worthy of wearing it.

Dr. Cushing Otis, son of Dr. James Otis, commenced practice in 1792, and is well remembered by many of the Scituate people now living as a famous doctor. It is a little remarkable that for nearly a century the families of Otis and Stockbridge enjoyed the monopoly of physicking the people of Scituate.

Dr. Samuel Barker was in Scituate in 1787, but subsequently he removed to Pembroke.

Dr. Freeman Foster began the practice of his profession in 1802, and continued until near the time of his death, a very long period, adhering to the last to the old practice of riding on horseback to visit his patients. He was the last of the saddlebag doctors.

Dr. David Bailey commenced about 1796. This kindly old doctor is gratefully remembered.

Dr. Peleg Ford was in practice about seven years, —1805 to 1812.

Dr. Elisha James commenced in 1808.

Dr. Milton Fuller in 1826.

Dr. Charles Stockbridge, after first practicing in Boston, came to Scituate for a time.

Dr. T. H. Dearing began practice about 1850, and is now in practice in Braintree.

Dr. A. E. Stetson began practice about 1848, subsequently removed to Dorchester, where he died.

Dr. H. C. Vose practiced in the west part of the town somewhat for a few years, about 1860.

Dr. Shurtleff was also at West Scituate a short time.

Dr. Francis Thomas, who began practice about 1830, was a popular physician in Scituate for many years, dying there a few years ago.

Dr. Vinal and Dr. Brownell are now in the full tide of successful practice in Scituate and South Scituate at the present time. Scituate has always been well served by well-read and skillful physicians.

Character of the People.—An examination of what remains of the literary efforts and public documents of the earliest settlers of Scituate furnishes evidences that they were men of good education, cultivated tastes, and vigorous thought. Deane says of them, "Many of the fathers of Scituate were men of good education and easy fortune, who had left homes altogether enviable, save in the single circumstance of the abridgment of their religious liberty. In 1639 this town contained more men of distinguished talents and fair features than it has contained at any period since. They were 'the men of Kent,' celebrated in English history as men of gallantry, loyalty, and courtly manners. Gilson, Vassall, Hatherly, Cudworth, Tilden, Hoar, Foster, Stedman, Saffin, Hinckley, and others, had been accustomed to the elegance of life in England."

The sons had not the advantages of the fathers education, but mental culture was by no means neglected. The minister was the schoolmaster. M. Chauncey had been a professor in college in England and he taught the youth of Scituate. Mr. Wither had been a schoolmaster in Maidstone, in England and it duplicated his usefulness to his people here.

That many of these planters were men of son wealth and much enterprise is shown in what they undertook. To erect mills and bring machinery, they must, from England for their equipment were then large enterprises. Within twenty-five years the first settlement five mills had been built,—William Gilson's, in 1636; Isaac Stedman's, 1640; James Torrey's, 1653; John Stockbridge's, 1650; Robert Stetson's, 1656.

We have shown what rapid advancement Scituate made in wealth and population during its first year and the question naturally arises why this advance has not been continued in the later generations. The obvious answer is, that the enterprise of the town and its pushing business men, entered upon lines of business wherein the elements and old ocean fought against them, closed the entrance to the harbor and river, to the virtual exclusion of navigation, and so the skill and enterprise of the town to more favorable locations for that kind of business. We must recall in this connection also the fact that the fathers, having the means to do so, became the owners of slave property. Also that human slavery left a larger stain upon the town of Scituate than perhaps upon any other town in this region. Nearly all the families of wealth appear to have owned slaves. At the first these were Indians captured in war, or for some alleged ill conduct reduced to slavery. They captured these human chattels. Later, Africans were introduced, and the freed descendants are numerous in the two towns today. In 1764 there were one hundred and seventy African slaves owned in Scituate, and only thirty Indian slaves. But the spirit which led to the peopling of New England was one that could not survive in connection with this crime against humanity, and was too strong for human selfishness even. It triumphed in the liberation of slaves here, and now the whole broad land is free.

Much attention has always been paid to education and for moral worth and intellectual culture it may fairly be claimed that the people of Scituate need no fear comparison in any of their generations with the people of any other community.

Agriculture.—The early settlers, like all dwell in a new land, depended largely upon the products of the soil for their support. Much of the land is too rocky or too wet for cultivation, but the greater part is excellent farming land. This is especially true of the land near the harbor, that lying between Colman Hills and the salt marshes, all the land bordering on the North River, from its sources to its mouth, the westerly part of the town, the Conihasset tract, and the cliffs. The Indian planting-fields were doubtless first utilized. But farming was then carried on very differently from what it is in modern times. Herds of cattle were small, and forage for them was mostly gathered on the extensive salt marshes which lined the back side of the beach, and stretched away, mile after mile, up the river, and across from the High Hills to the Marshfield shore. From the regulations regarding them, it is evident that swine soon became abundant and cattle multiplied. Indian corn was largely cultivated, and rye, oats, and beans. It is not probable that much attention has ever been given to wheat or barley. The fruits were not neglected. How early the pear, cherry, quince, currant, and peach began to be cultivated we have no means of learning, but it must have been quite early. Large orchards of apple-trees were always a feature of farm culture. A peculiarly sweet and delicious apple, ripening in the early part of September or last of August, called the "High-Top-Sweeting," was a fruit of much local celebrity, and was always raised in Scituate. No native of that town can ever forget the delicious dishes of baked apples and milk which these apples enabled him to enjoy. But the survivors of those "high-top trees" are growing annually more scarce; no attention is being paid to their perpetuation, and this luscious fruit is in danger of being numbered among the things that were. Farming has been carried on with a considerable degree of enterprise by the people of Scituate in all the generations.

From the sea-shore they draw immense supplies of fertilizers, cast up by the storms, and great attention in later years has been given to the raising of onions, cabbages, squashes, and other market-garden vegetables. Among the most enterprising farmers of the present day may be mentioned Mr. Charles O. Elms, Mr. James W. Sampson, Mr. David S. Jenkins, and many others, for whose names there is not room, but who are entitled to like mention.

Fisheries.—These largely engaged the attention of the Scituate people. Alewives came up the North River and up the three herring brooks every spring, and were taken in immense numbers. It is said that in early times they ascended the Second Herring Brook as far as Black Pond for spawning purposes, and the Third Herring Brook as far as Valley Swamp, upon the borders of Hingham. But the mill-dams erected at different points across these streams have excluded them from their old breeding-haunts, and the fisheries in these streams have gradually dwindled to insignificant proportions.

In the North River it was the habit of this fish, in its vernal visits, to ascend as far as the Indian Ponds. They still reach that point, being transported from below the obstructions on the streams, and the herring-fishery on the North River is still an important industry.

Mackerel-fishing has been a large business in Scituate. Its first beginnings were probably as early as 1633, when a fishing-station was there set up. Though cod-fishing was its main purpose, it seems scarcely possible that the mackerel were altogether neglected. At any rate, mackerel were so largely taken within the colony at unseasonable times that in 1670 the government found it necessary to interfere by statute for their protection. In 1680, Cornet Robert Stetson, of Scituate, and Nathaniel Thomas, of Marshfield, leased the privilege of the Cape Cod fishery. Mackerel-fishing was included in this. This fish was very abundant in the bay. Probably as early as 1700 this began to be a considerable business, and it grew to such proportions that in 1770 thirty vessels were fitted out for that business from the little harbor of Scituate. Some large catches were made. Vessels have been known to pack out a thousand barrels in a single season. Deane says that in 1828 more than fifteen thousand barrels were taken by the Scituate fishermen. In less than thirty years from that date the business had entirely ceased.

The extinction of this business and of ship-building greatly affected the growth and prosperity of the old town. During the first ten years of the present century as many as ten vessels were annually built upon North River. With the loss of this business and of fishing departed the mechanics of the ship-yards and the sailors of the harbor. A new industry, the gathering of moss on the shore, has within a few years grown up along the cliffs and rocks, and gives that locality an air of business.

Mills and Brooks.—The first mill in Scituate was a windmill, erected on the Second Cliff by the enterprising William Gilson for grinding corn. As nearly all the mills that have ever been in use in the two towns of Scituate and South Scituate are water-mills, it will economize space to describe the streams and their mills in the same connection.

The First Herring Brook rises in Town Swamp and Bushy Hill Swamp, in the central part of the town, and falls into North River. On this stream, in 1646, a saw-mill was erected by Isaac Stedman, and is supposed to be the first saw-mill in the county. In 1656, Mr. Stedman sold this mill-privilege and saw-mill to John Stockbridge and George Russell, who built a grist-mill on the same dam. Mr. Stockbridge afterwards became the sole owner, and the mills were long known as Stockbridge Mills. A half-mile above, James Torrey built a "clothing mill" in 1653, and subsequently Samuel Clapp had a grist-mill and fulling-mill at the same point.

The Second Herring Brook rises in Black Pond, and drains also Dead Swamp and another swamp between Black Pond and Dead Swamp, and empties into North River a short distance above Union bridge and near the old James mansion, and where the block-house stood. About half a mile from the river on this brook John Bryant built a saw-mill in 1690, and afterwards a grist-mill. Long afterwards, some distance up the stream, another grist-mill was built. A saw-mill was also erected there at a still later day. This mill until very recently was owned and operated by the late David Torrey in connection with his steam-mill on River Street.

The Third Herring Brook rises in Valley Swamp near Hingham, and runs about five miles, emptying into North River about three miles above the Second Herring Brook. From Jacobs' mill-pond to the river it forms the boundary line between Hanover and South Scituate. Robert Stetson erected a saw-mill on this brook near where Samuel Tolman, Esq., now resides, in 1656. This mill was burned by the Indians in 1676, and was not rebuilt. The large tract of land flowed by it is now fresh meadow, and is known as "Old Pond" meadow. Benjamin Curtis built a saw-mill up the same stream above "Old Pond," and afterwards a grist-mill was added. Mills were needed for little else than grinding grain and sawing timber. This mill has been in the Curtis and Clapp families ever since.

The Jacobs family erected mills—saw-mill and grist-mill—in the westerly part of the town, at a place called Assinippi. The highway passes over the dam which forms the road-bed. These are still "Jacobs' mills," and are still owned by the Jacobs family.

Charles Stockbridge erected a grist-mill on the Third Herring Brook, about one-half mile below the "Cornet's old dam," 1674,—in consideration for doing which he was granted thirty acres of land. Jonah Stetson afterwards owned this mill, in consequence of which it acquired the name of "Jonah's mills." This mill had several owners, becoming at length the property of Samuel Salmund, who carried on the business of making tacks there extensively. It is now the mill of Edmund Q. Sylvester, who has recently introduced steam-power, and is doing a large business. A little farther up the stream was once a saw-mill, but it has been burned, and the place abandoned as a mill site. Farther up, and but just below the "Cornet's old dam," is the tack-mill and shingle-mill of Samuel Tolman, and where several generations of Tolman have done business.

Bound Brook is so named because for a part of its course it marked the boundary between the Plymouth and Massachusetts Colonies. Merritt's Brook and Groundsel Brook flow into it. On this brook, or the "Gulph," which forms a part of it, a mill was probably erected about 1787, and another about 179

Mushquashcut Brook flows from the pond of the same name to Bound Brook into the "Gulph," so called.

Satuit Brook, from which the town takes its name, is only about one mile in length, and flows into the harbor, where there is a tide-mill, at which much business is transacted. This mill was built by Jesse Dunbar about 1802.

Marget's Brook rises in the swamp between Ot Hill and Simon's Hill, and runs into Wildcat Brook, and that brook flows into the Third Herring Brook near where the old Indian trail crosses it. About 1795, Elijah Turner built a grist-mill on Marget Brook, but since the death of his son, Elijah Bailey Turner, it has fallen into disuse.

On Groundsel Brook, in the north part of the town and which falls into Bound Brook, there are mills belonging to the Stockbridge family.

A wind-mill was erected near the South Meeting House, but by whom has not been learned, and was in use for many years in grinding corn.

John Jones and his son, John H. Jones, for many years carried on the business of trunk-making in the westerly part of the town, on Cushing Hill.

John E. Grose also built a steam-mill in the westerly part of the town, and carried on the business of trunk-making there for many years, and until his mill was burned.

David Torrey built a steam-mill on what is now called River Street, and there carried on the business of trunk-making with great enterprise until his lamented death the present year,—1884.

Shoe business is carried on in Scituate by George W. Merritt and others, in South Scituate by Curtis Brothers and by Charles Grose at their several factories.

If the Scituates are not advancing greatly in bu-ness enterprise, they are far from retrograding. Population is gradually increasing, and both towns may be called prosperous. The beauty of the shore scenery is attracting that class of people who seek a summer residence away from the haunts of trade, and the land near the ocean is being built upon.

The Centennial House, at Farm Neck, the South Shore House, at the harbor, and the Humarock House, on the beach between Fourth Cliff and the mouth of North River, are hotels having a large and deserved patronage in summer. The Humarock House, with the ocean in front and North River behind it, is indeed beautiful for location, and is conducted in a way calculated to attract and please those who are seeking rest and comfort.

Burial-Grounds.—On Meeting-House Lane, near where the first meeting-house stood, is the oldest burial-place in Scituate. Here, in unmarked graves, lie buried men who left property enough to have provided for the erection of some monument to their memory. The later generations must always regret that this first generation paid so little respect to the resting-places of the fathers. This neglect was not peculiar to Scituate. Somewhere amid the undistinguishable dust of Duxbury lies the dust of the sainted William Brewster, of the brave military leader Miles Standish, and of the gallant John Alden. What sacred shrines these graves would be if known! To return to the Burial Hill of Scituate. Here sleep, no doubt, the fathers of the town,—William Gilson, Humphrey Turner, Nathaniel Tilden, Henry Merritt, John Stockbridge, Edward Foster, and others,—“Alike without their monumental stone.” But later generations have not fared much better. Head-stones were erected in many cases, but they are now weather-beaten, moss-grown, and illegible, and a rank growth of bushes nearly conceals them. And so eventually it will be with the costliest monuments that human affection or human pride can place above the dead. A generation will at length come which will care nothing for them. “Time’s effacing fingers” will be relentlessly busy, until inscription and monument are gone or have lost all significance.

Near the first meeting-house of the Second Parish a burying-ground began to be used about 1644, and here the first generation of the Cushings, Hatches, Kings, Robinsons, and Torreys found repose. Here, too, in an unknown grave, rest the ashes of Mr. Witherell, the first pastor of this parish. It is a place of unknown graves. In 1680 this parish buried their dead about their new church in Union Bridge neighborhood. This, too, is a deserted burial-ground, with its graves overgrown with briars and bushes and its stones with moss. Removal of the church farther west led to the laying out a new burying-ground, in 1725, on Herring Brook Hill, which is now a beautiful, well-kept cemetery.

Near the old burial-ground at the harbor, and west of it, is a fine cemetery, now used. This parish did not seem to remove its burial-place with its meeting-house.

In 1725 ten acres was laid out at what is now called Church Hill, in the south part of the town, as a burial-ground and training-field. This is still used. There is also a cemetery in the north part of the town.

The cemetery used by the people of West Scituate is within the limits of Hanover.

It may be of use to transcribe here the list of landmarks as recorded by Deane.

ANCIENT LANDMARKS.

- Asp hill (or Mast hill), in the beach woods near Johnson’s swamp.
- Belle house neck, near Little’s bridge, now Cushing neck.
- Bound brook, falls into the gulph at Lincoln’s mills.
- Bound rock, the landmark of the patent line, near Lincoln’s mills.
- Bound brook neck, northeast of Lincoln’s mills.
- Black swamp, on Bound brook, above the mills.
- Buck’s rock, near the gulph meadows.
- Booth’s hill, near junction of the roads, one mile south of Lincoln’s mills.
- Brushy hill, three-fourths mile southeast from the north Meeting-house.
- Brigg’s harbour, within the glades (or Strawberry cove).
- Bumpus’s bridge, over north branch of second Herring brook, above Dead swamp.
- Burnt Plain, one mile northwest of Hoop-pole hill, and southwest of Mount Blue.
- Bryant’s bridge, over the second Herring brook.
- Brook hall field, north side of Belle house neck.
- Buck’s corner, southeast old Parsonage.
- Barston’s bill, on the Plymouth road, at Snappet.
- Black pond and hill, one and a half mile west of Town-house.
- Block-house, on North river, half-mile above Union bridge.
- Barstow’s bridge, in 1650 and later, now North river bridge.
- Blue bridge and island, between Hoop-pole Hill and burnt plain.
- Beaver dams, on Satint brook; on first Herring brook, at the ancient fulling-mill; on second Herring brook, at the south of Dead swamp; on third Herring brook, below old pond; also at Valley swamp, above Jacob’s mills; also a half-mile west of Nathaniel Brooks’.
- Cedar point, north of the harbour at the Light-house.
- Crow point, on the south of the harbour.
- Clay pits, in 1650, half-mile east of the “stepping stones.”
- Cold Spring swamp, 1650, on Merritt’s brook.
- Cleft rock, back of John Pierce’s, north of Conihassett burying-ground.
- Castle rock, the point at the gulph mill.
- Cushing hill (rather modern), half-mile east of Jacob’s mill.
- Country road, in 1646, leading to Cohasset, in 1670 the Plymouth road.
- Cordwood hill, one mile southwest of the south Meeting-house.

- Clay pit cartway, southwest of Cordwood hill, and earlier southeast of old Church hill.
- Comet's rocks, in the north river, opposite the Two-mile mills.
- Comet's mill, 1656, at the Indian path below old pond (Major Winslow's).
- Chamberlain plain, northeast of Beaver dam or Dead Swamp.
- Candlewood plain, between Hanover Meeting-house and Drinkwater.
- Criquet hole, in 1640, west of Jonah's mill (now called) or Buttonwood swamp.
- Cedar swamp cartway, 1660, from Booth hill to Merritt's brook.
- Capt. Jacob's cartway, 1720, over Beaver dam, at Valley Swamp.
- Drinkwater, on the west branch of Indian head river, south of Hanover.
- Daman's Island, 1649, in the gulph marshes.
- Eagle's nest swamp, the great swamp southeast of Beach woods.
- Flat swamp, between Mount Blue and Mount Ararat.
- Fox hill, one mile southwest of Wild cat hill.
- Farm neck, or Great neck, north of the harbour to the glades.
- Fane Island, 1646, in the marshes at Farm neck.
- Great Swamp. (See Eagle's nest.)
- Gillman plain, on Plymouth road, south of Valley swamp.
- Greenfield, in 1633, etc., south half-mile of second cliff.
- Gravelly beach, on North river, east side, two miles above Union bridge.
- Gray's hill, half-mile south of Cordwood hill.
- Great neck. (See Farm neck.)
- George Moore's swamp and bridge, south branch of first Herring brook.
- Groundsell brook, falls into Bound brook, west of Mount Hope.
- Groundsell hill, east part of Bell house neck.
- Gulph Island, at the mouth of first Herring brook.
- Dead swamp, on second Herring brook, one mile from its mouth.
- Dry Cedar swamp, on Merritt's brook, near ancient Studley place.
- Hammer's brook, west of Hanover Meeting-house.
- Hugh's cross and brook, south branch, third Herring brook, at Curtis' mill.
- Hicke's swamp, east of Brushy hill.
- Hoope-pole hill, one mile west of the south Meeting-house.
- Hoop-pole neck, near Great or Farm neck, west of stepping-stones.
- Hoop-pole Cedar swamp, west of Hoop-pole hill.
- Halifax hill and swamp, one mile southwest mount Blue.
- Horse Island, a marsh island near Farm neck.
- Hatchet rock, a mile south of the stepping-stones.
- Herring brook hill, on which south Meeting-house stands.
- Hobart's landing, on North river, a mile above Little's bridge.
- Dogget's ferry, now Little's bridge.
- Iron mine, or Indian head river brook, half-mile southwest Hanover corners.
- Indian path, over third Herring brook, foot of Old pond.
- Job's landing, east side North river, below the brick-kilns.
- Jenkins' meadow, east side of Valley swamp.
- Johnson's swamp, west of Beach woods and mount Hope.
- King's landing, half-mile below Union bridge.
- Long marsh, on first Herring brook, above the mills, 1640.
- Little marsh, east of the harbour, in 1636.
- Log bridge, in 1650, over third Herring brook at Elijah Barstow's.
- Meeting-house lane, old burying-ground southeast of the harbour, 1633.
- Merritt's brook, falls into Bound brook above the mills.
- Musquashent pond, at Farm neck, 1637.
- Man hill, 1648, east of Musquashent pond.
- Mast hill, or Asp, in the Beach woods.
- Mount Hope, on the west of the Town, near Hingham and Cohasset corners.
- Mount Blue, one mile southeast of mount Hope.
- Mount Ararat, one mile northeast of mount Blue.
- New found marsh, on Spring brook, west of Dead swamp one half mile.
- New harbour marshes, from Little's bridge to the cliffs.
- New saw-mill, in 1678, above Old pond, at Curtis'.
- Old brick-yard, in 1647, southeast of Episcopal Church hill.
- Old saw-mill, in 1653, at Stockbridge's, on first Herring brook.
- Old saw-mill, in 1676, on third Herring brook, at Indian path (at Winslow's).
- Old bridge, in 1670, at the east foot of Curtis' hill, or buttonwood hill.
- Prouty's dam, 1686, at the road north of Hoop-pole hill.
- Prospect hill, at Hingham line, on the Hersey road.
- Pine Island, below Little's bridge, also near Cohasset harbour.
- Planting Island, Southwest of Great or Farm neck.
- Penguin rock, East of Farm neck.
- Project dale, west part of Hanover.
- Rocky swamp, south of third Herring brook, below Jacob's mill.
- Ridge hill, mile southeast the Town-house; also on Plymouth road.
- Rotten marsh, between Stockbridge's mill and Little's bridge.
- Rotten marsh swamp, south of Rotten marsh.
- Satint brook, falls into the creek at the harbour.
- Savage lot, east of mount Blue, formerly property of Thomas Savage, Esq., Boston.
- Spring swamp, south of Plymouth road, in Hanover.
- Spring brook, west branch of second Herring brook.
- Slab brook, southwest White Oak plain, now Margaret's brook.
- Great Spring swamp, near North river, below Comet's rocks.
- Stepping-stones, from the Cohasset road to Hoop-pole neck.
- Strawberry cove, or Briggs' harbour, within the glades.
- Sweet Swamp, near Cohasset road, a half-mile north of north meeting-house.
- Stony brook, east branch of Merritt's brook.
- Stony Cove, on North river, near King's landing.
- Schewsan's neck, northeast of Belle house neck.
- Stockbridge's old way, from Stockbridge's mill to Town-house etc.
- Sand hill, on Stockbridge's old way, one mile southwest of the Town-house.
- Symon's hill, near Burnt plain on southwest.
- Pinein hill, half-mile northeast from the Town-house.
- Round head swamp, south of Eagle's nest swamp.
- Rattlesnake hill and rock, half-mile west from Wildcat hill.
- Till's creek, 1640, now Dwelley's creek, opposite Grovell beach.
- Taunton Dean bridge (1680) and brook, southwest of Halifax hill.
- Valley swamp, above Jacob's mill, on second Herring brook.
- White oak plain, one mile west of the south Meeting-house.
- White oak plain bridge, on southeast White oak plain.
- Wild Cat hill, 1640, north side of old pond, and south of Cordwood hill one mile and a half.
- Wolf Trap, near Iron mine brook, in Hanover.
- Wigwam neck, near the gulph and Hoop-pole neck.
- Wouton's brook, east of Hoop-pole hill.
- William's rock, northwest of the light-house.
- Walnut Tree hill, half-mile south of Stockbridge's mill.
- Walnut hill, west of Beaver dam, on second Herring brook.
- Will's Island, a marsh island near Little's bridge.
- Walter Woodworth's hill, northeast part of Walnut Tree hill.

engraved by Samuel Sarason

B. F. Delano

Fresh marsh, 1690, near Plymouth road.
 Buttonwood swamp, above Jonah's mill, southwest of Church hill.
 Spruce swamp, south of Cordwood hill and second Herring brook.
 Digged hill (1670), where William James' house stood.
 Torrey's bridge (1690), near late Walter Jacob's.
 Bardin's forge (1704), now Curtis' anchor-shop, in Hanover.
 Stony Brook swamp, southwest of Booth hill.
 Henchman's dam (1700), near Halifax hill.
 Pickell's hole, half-mile southeast of Black pond hill.
 Hickee's hole, east side of Great swamp.
 Briggs' neck, at Burnt plain swamp.
 Jacobs' frame swamp, west of Symon's hill.
 Cold west hill, fourth of mile southeast of Buttonwood or Curtis' hill (1680).
 Wolf swamp (see Dead swamp), 1673.
 Ben's hill, half-mile south of Symon's hill.
 Church's hill, on Plymouth road, half-mile west of Hugh's cross brook (Hanover).
 Wampee's swamp, southwest of Hanover Meeting-house.
 Nichols' hill, mile south of the harbour.
 Turkey plain, near Indian head river, in Hanover.
 Beach neck, Curtis Street, in Hanover.
 Little Cedar swamp, near Indian head river.
 Collamore's ledge, midway between Cedar point and the glades.
 Egypt, a tract of land adjoining Man hill and Musqushcut pond.
 Queen Anne's corner, on the Plymouth road, at Hingham line, so called from Ann Whiton, who kept a tavern at that place (from 1730) many years.
 Ludden's Ford, on North river bridge, on Plymouth road.<sup>1</sup>

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

BENJAMIN F. DELANO.

The name Delano is a corruption of the French De La Noye. The first of the name who came to America was Philip De La Noye, or Delano, who was born of French Protestant parents, 1602; was baptized in the "Walloon" Church, and was one of the Huguenots who fled to Holland, joined the Pilgrims at Leyden, and came to America in the ship "Fortune," landing at Plymouth in 1621. He was admitted a freeman, in 1632; settled in Duxburrow (now Duxbury), and married, 1634, Hester Dewsbury. He was a useful man in the new colony; was appointed surveyor of lands, and held other offices. He was one of the original proprietors of land in Bridgewater. Later in life he removed to Middleboro', where he died in 1681.

<sup>1</sup> Governor Winthrop, in his pedestrian journey to Plymouth in 1632 (Winthrop i. 92), named it Luddam's Ford, "from Mr. Luddam, their guide," who carried over the Governor and Rev. Mr. Wilson on his back. We have no doubt that James Ludden, an early settler in Weymouth, was this guide, who had the honor to carry his Excellency a-pick-back.

Benjamin F. Delano, whose portrait appears in connection with this sketch, was born in South Scituate, Mass., Sept. 17, 1809. He was the son of William and Sarah (Hartt) Delano, and grandson of Benjamin Delano, who was a prominent ship-builder for forty years. Benjamin F. was educated chiefly under the tutelage of Rev. Mr. Deane, a prominent minister and teacher in Scituate for many years. Young Delano early evinced a marked talent and desire for ship-building, and in order that he might become thoroughly versed in the mysteries of the craft, he was placed in the draughting-office of the Brooklyn navy-yard, where he remained several years, until he had attained his majority. He then returned home, and, in company with his oldest brother, built a vessel on the North River, where his father had previously built and launched one of five hundred tons, the largest that had ever sailed down the river. At that time ship-building was the principal business of the town, an industry that is now extinct on account of the sand-bar which formed across the river.

About this time Stephen White and others formed what was known as the Grand Island Company. They purchased Grand Island, on Niagara River, then a dense forest of giant-oaks. They engaged Mr. Delano to convert this timber into vessels, so, in company with his two brothers and with twenty picked men from his native town, he proceeded by stage and canal—then the only mode of conveyance—to the island, where he got out all the timbers for a vessel and sent them to East Boston, where the vessel was constructed. It proved a success. The next year he received a similar commission, and with his younger brother and almost the same crew of men he built another vessel. May 10, 1836, he launched the "Milwaukie," a beautiful vessel of nearly three hundred tons, which he built at White Haven. It would be beyond the scope of this brief sketch to enumerate the many vessels he constructed; suffice it to say, he was master of his craft, and one of the most skillful ship-builders of his day. He built the first steam vessel that plied between East Boston and Boston.

Aug. 9, 1847, he received an appointment as naval constructor. In this capacity he was stationed at Portsmouth a few years, and was then ordered to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he remained until his retirement from service, June 11, 1873. During the war he was one of the most efficient constructors the government had, and built some of their most famous and valuable vessels. His cares and labors during this period were unceasing, and his usefulness and success unquestioned. His energies and powers were taxed to their utmost, but night or day he was never found wanting when duty called.

Upon his retirement from service,—in compliance with the law that all naval officers should retire at the age of sixty-two,—Mr. Delano was waited upon at his home by a committee composed of the foremen of the different shops formerly under his supervision, and presented with one of the most elegant and appropriate testimonials of regard that could be designed. It consisted of a series of exquisitely engraved resolutions in a massive and artistically-carved frame fully eight feet in height; the design representing a Grecian temple, the architrave of the graceful pendulous columns being a scroll inscribed with the designation of the national government, and surmounted by an eagle guarding the national shield, while anchors, depending from the columns, support another scroll on which is emblazoned the name of "Benj. F. Delano, Esq." Vessels in various stages of construction, cannon, and other appropriate emblems are displayed in various parts of the picture, and the whole is guarded by two heavier columns, around which are wreathed sinuous scrolls bearing appropriate inscriptions. But few men who have had command of others ever enjoyed so fully the esteem, confidence, and love of their subordinates in a like degree with Mr. Delano.

After his duties as naval constructor were terminated, he did not spend his remaining years in idleness. His temperament was too active, and the habits of a lifetime too strong upon him for him to lapse into a state of inactivity. He gave much attention to the cultivation and improvement of the home of childhood, and held many positions of trust. Possessing talents of a very high order, a cultivated mind, a generous, liberal spirit, coupled with a deep moral sense, he was truly a noble specimen of a grand and true manhood. As a public man he was wise and decisive in counsel, and so fertile in suggestion that he was always listened to with reverent heed. His charities were open-handed wherever there was need of help. His home and family attachments were very strong, and the love he bore his mother runs through his whole life like a silver thread. In a letter written a short time prior to his death he says, "I often think of the good lessons my mother taught me, they are precious to me now." He married Jane, daughter of Seth Foster, of Scituate. He has but one child living,—Alfred Otis. Mr. Delano died at his home, in Brooklyn, N. Y., April 30, 1882.

EDWARD HARTT DELANO.

Edward H. Delano, son of William and Sarah (Hartt) Delano, and youngest brother of Benjamin F., was born at the ancestral home in South Scituate, Aug. 12, 1811. He received his early education at the same private school his brother attended (Mr. Deane's), and, like him, spent many years in the draughting-office of the Brooklyn Navy-Yard. From his early childhood he manifested a remarkable aptitude for and love of drawing, and at a very early age he draughted several large maps. When he was only twelve years of age a French gentleman employed him to execute a very difficult piece of drawing, which he did to the entire satisfaction of the parties for which it was intended, and for which he would take no recompense. A long time afterward they sent him a valuable cane with a richly-engraved gold head as a testimonial for the service he had rendered. His was an earnest, active, studious temperament, and when a boy he used to walk two miles from his home to Hanover, return after school hours, do his chores, attend to his mother's wants, and then walk back to Hanover to attend an evening class in astronomy, a study with which he was much fascinated. His ruling talent made itself manifest here, for he drew on a plane surface a map from a globe, with all the constellations drawn and painted, quite a wonderful production for one of his years. He was an ardent lover of nature, and apparently his happiest hours were spent in communion with her. From his childhood he was always planting trees, and flowers about his home, and seeking out curiosities and gathering specimens of minerals, thus "finding sermons in stones." His time spent at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard proved of great service to him, and he became one of the most efficient draughtsmen in the naval service. About 1848 he was sent for to be examined at Washington for the office of naval constructor. There were ten applicants for the position, and but two to be chosen. Among the applicants were two sons of naval constructors, whose fathers had posted them as fully as possible as to the probable course of examination, and Mr. Delano's chance for favorable consideration seemed poor indeed, as he had neither influence nor money to operate in his favor, but only his qualifications for the post and an unblemished character on which to rely. The examination was a rigid one, and, to the credit of the committee of examiners, was conducted on the merits of the candidates. He braved the ordeal well, and on June 19, 1848, he was commissioned naval constructor, and ordered to Pensacola, where he superintended the building of the United States floating dock and basin. He built

Engraved by Sumner Sartorius

Edw. Delano

Elisha Jacobs

there and at Norfolk and Charlestown, where he was subsequently stationed, many of the best vessels the government ever possessed, among which may be mentioned the United States steam frigate "Merrimac" and the "Hartford," which was sent to Russia and various ports of the world to be exhibited, and which was chosen by Admiral Farragut as his flagship. Mr. Delano brought to the discharge of his duties as naval constructor not only a thorough knowledge of his business, but a geniality of disposition and a cordial heartiness of manner which endeared him to all with whom he associated. When ordered from Pensacola the men were so warm in their manifestation of love for him, and regret at his leaving, that they actually held him in their arms and implored him not to go.

They presented him with a large silver pitcher as a souvenir of their regard. While there and at other stations he led the choir in music, for which he had a passionate love and remarkable talent.

He married Mary R., daughter of William James, of Scituate, by whom he had two children,—William E. (deceased) and Edward Franklin. Upon the decease of his first wife he married Avoline S. Frost, of South Berwick, Me., June 16, 1858. He died at Charlestown, Mass., April 9, 1859, while in charge of that station. Remarking on the event of his death, Commodore Stringham said, "He was the greatest loss the navy could have had at that time. Though his life was short, he had a practical genius and inspiration for his calling which led him to accomplish much, to the satisfaction of the department of the navy and the gratification of friends." He met with many disturbing changes in his official life by being changed from station to station, much to the discomfort and annoyance of himself and family; but he made a host of friends wherever he went, and the breaking up of old ties was but the signal for the forming of new. He had a love for his profession, and a high ambition to excel, and that he did excel in whatever he undertook is conceded by all who are familiar with his life's work. And his labors bear witness how much of value may be accomplished even during a comparatively short life by an honest, earnest, active man. In fact, the noble traits of character which he possessed in such an eminent degree seem to be characteristic of the family from which he sprung.

Mr. Delano has three sisters living at the old family homestead, and the reverent love and esteem in which they so sacredly hold the memories of their deceased brothers show them to be possessed of the same gentle, generous, unselfish dispositions which so distinguished their brothers, and which has ever made the family beloved and respected through the generations.

ELISHA JACOBS.

Elisha Jacobs, Esq., was a descendant in direct line from Nicholas Jacobs, the ancestor of nearly all of that family name in this part of Plymouth County.

Nicholas Jacobs was one of the earliest settlers of Hingham. One of his sons, John Jacobs, shared the tragic fate of so many of the New England pioneers, and was killed by the Indians. His grandson, David, came to Scituate about 1688, and settled near what has since been known as Stockbridge's mill.

Three of David's sons, David, Joshua, and Dr. Joseph, settled in that part of the town called Assinippi, and were all leading citizens and large landholders. They all bore the title of "Master," probably owing to their having had slaves.

Among the sons of Dr. Joseph was Elisha, born Aug. 29, 1735. He was the first of three generations of Jacobs who owned and operated "Jacobs' brick-yard." His son, Hon. Edward F., took his father's business. Edward F. was a leading man in this part of the county. He was a man of great natural ability, and was trusted and respected by his neighbors. This is evidenced by the many offices and positions of trust which he filled. For years he was one of the selectmen of his native town, also a representative to the General Court, and in 1836 and 1837 he was one of the Governor's Council. He married Priscilla Clapp, of Scituate, Jan. 5, 1802, and had seven children.

Elisha, the subject of this sketch, was his third child. He was born March 12, 1808, at Scituate, in the house where, March 18, 1879, he died. In early life the common schools gave him such education as their facilities then afforded, and, desirous of a mercantile career, he left home at the age of seventeen for a position as clerk in the linen-store of Palmer & Jacobs, in Boston. A few years after he went to New York, but returned to Boston after a lapse of two or three years, and spent there the remainder of his business life. His younger brother, Frederick, and himself for many years were associated as partners in a cutlery and fancy goods business. Later he became a commission merchant, and at that he remained until in 1860 failing health compelled him to relinquish business cares altogether. He returned to his boyhood's home, and here spent his remaining years in retirement. Not by any means was he idle, however. He carried on the farm his father had left with a good degree of success, performed for a term or two the duties of the school committee of South Scituate, and for one term held a commission from the Governor as justice of the peace. While in Boston he became a member of the order of Odd-Fellows, being a member of, and holding at one time the highest office in, Suffolk Lodge.

Increasing years brought increasing ill health, and at the age of seventy-one years and six days he quietly breathed his last, falling a victim to heart-disease.

Mr. Jacobs was always a strong Republican in politics, following the Federalist traditions of his family. Like his family, too, he was a Universalist in religion, although during his residence in Boston he attended a Unitarian Church. As a citizen he was eminently public-spirited, and, as far as his circumstances permitted, a remarkably liberal man.

In April, 1842, Mr. Jacobs married Delia T., daughter of Luke Fay, of Boston. His children are (1) Elisha Augustus, who married Emma Cushing, and is now in business in Washington, D. C. He was a soldier in the Rebellion. (2) Edward Foster, book-keeper with Farley, Harvey & Co., who married Mary Highritter, of Fulton, N. Y. (3) Evie Whiting, wife of Alfred L. Farrar, who lives at West Scituate, and has three children; and (4) Hattie Fay, now living with her mother at the old homestead, at Assinippi.

JOHN BRYANT TURNER.

John Bryant Turner was born at Scituate, Dec. 8, 1786. He was the son of Job Turner and Abiel Bryant and a descendant of Humphrey Turner, a tanner, who came from Kent, England, arriving at Plymouth in 1628, and in the next year settled in Scituate, on Kent Street, on the easterly side of Coleman's Hills. He was also possessor of a tract of land on North River, both of which pieces of property are, we believe, still in possession of the Turners.

Humphrey Turner erected a tannery about 1636. He seems to have been a settler of enterprise, as he was often called to fill offices, both in the church and town. He died in 1673, leaving eight children, six sons and two daughters, and, what seems singular, two sons of the same name,—John and "young son John," and from the latter John Bryant Turner was a descendant. He received his early education of Mr. Eleazer Peaks, and fitted for college under the tuition of Mr. Timothy Flint, of Cohasset, a brother of Parson Flint; but for some reason he never entered college.

His early life was spent on his father's farm, occupying a portion of Farm Neck and embracing the farm and house-lot of Mr. Timothy Hatherly, who might properly be called the father of Scituate.

In 1813 he married Hannah Nichols, of Cohasset, and the constant cruising of the British fleet along the coast at that time, and the frequent foraging expeditions of their crews, rendered the early portion of their married life somewhat uncomfortable. Frequent meetings of the coast-guard were held at his house for drill.

When quite a young man he was chosen moderator at the town-meeting, and from that time till his death was in constant public service. He was generally known as "Squire Bry." He represented the district for many years in the General Court, both in the House and Senate.

As a leader in the Old Colony politics he was an untiring worker, honest and firm in his convictions and unswerving in his determination to do right, characteristics which won him a popular name throughout the county. He was also one of the founders of the anti-slavery party, and an earnest believer in and supporter of the cause of temperance, which was then in its infancy.

In 1830 he was greatly surprised by the official notification of his nomination on the Democratic-Republican ticket as representative to the Twenty-second Congress, and notwithstanding many were at variance with his political views, his nomination was unanimous.

But, unwilling to accept, he withdrew in favor of John Quincy Adams, for whom he held a deep respect and friendship.

In county affairs he was engaged for many years as commissioner, in which capacity he, with his associates, directed the construction of many public works of considerable magnitude, among others the locating of the first railroads. His military life began in the coast-guard in the war of 1812, and ended as colonel of the Second Infantry, from which office he resigned, owing to pressure of other duties. His religious views were of the Unitarian order, he being a member of the First Church. His liberal ideas, as shown by some of his writings, prove that he must have been a diligent student of theology. In all enterprises and progressive movements affecting the good of the town he seems to have been the leading spirit. His sound judgment caused him to be continually sought after by his townspeople in all matters of arbitration, and in the various complications which arose he would cheerfully aid in untangling them to the satisfaction of all, rich or poor. His private life seemed to be one of rare enjoyment. Blessed as he was with a genial disposition, the perplexities of life did not disturb him. Progressive in all his ideas, he always spoke or wrote with a firmness mingled with gentleness, and with profound respect for the opinions and feelings of others. He died Feb. 16, 1849, in the height of his public career.

John B. Duvernay

George M. Allen

---

GEORGE MINOT ALLEN.

George Minot Allen was born in Pembroke, Mass., Feb. 19, 1802. He was the oldest of ten children of Rev. Morrill Allen. During his minority he remained at home, and was trained to farm labor, meanwhile acquiring such education as was given in the common schools of the time.

In the winter of 1826 he taught school in Scituate, and the following winter in Duxbury.

In May, 1828, he was married to Hannah E., second daughter of Ensign Otis, Jr., of Scituate. Of five children born to them, two daughters and one son survive.

Soon after his marriage, he opened a store of general merchandise in Scituate, and also engaged with others in shipping business, having a number of merchant vessels built and employed in commerce. In Scituate, also, he employed much of his time and strength on his farm, to which he retired from business in 1854.

In politics, Mr. Allen was an ardent supporter of the Whig party, and afterwards of the Union or Republican party. In the year 1858 he was elected representative to the General Court. In religious faith he was a Unitarian, and for many years took an active part in the interests of the society at Scituate.

During most of the active years of his life, Mr. Allen served his town as a member in the principal offices of trust. He died July 1, 1878.

HISTORY OF CARVER.

CHAPTER I.

CIVIL HISTORY.

ACT OF INCORPORATION.

AN ACT for Incorporating the southerly Part of the Town of Plympton, in the County of Plymouth, into a Town by the Name of Carver.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled and by the authority of the same, That the lands hereafter described, to wit: Beginning at the west line of the town of Kingston, thence running west so as to strike the head of Anesnapet Brook so called; thence continuing the same course to the line of the town of Middleborough, it being the dividing line between the north and south precincts in the said town of Plympton; thence on the line of the said town of Middleborough till it comes to the line of the town of Wareham; thence on the line of the said town of Wareham till it comes to the line of the town of Plymouth; thence on the line of the said town of Plymouth till it comes to the line of the town of Kingston aforesaid; thence on the said Kingston line to the first mentioned bound, with all the inhabitants dwelling on the lands above described, be and they are hereby incorporated into a town by the name of Carver; and the said town is hereby invested with all the powers, privileges, and immunities to which towns within this Commonwealth are or may be entitled, agreeable to the Constitution and Laws of this Commonwealth.

Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the inhabitants of the said town of CARVER shall pay all the arrears of taxes which have been assessed upon them and their proportionable part of the tax granted in March last, together with their proportion of all debts that are now due from the said town of Plympton, and shall support any poor person or persons of that part of Plympton which is now Carver, and shall not have obtained a legal settlement elsewhere (when they may become chargeable), and such poor person or persons may be returned to the town of Carver, in the same way and manner that paupers may by law be returned to the town or district to which they belong.

Be it further enacted, That the inhabitants of the said town of Carver shall be entitled to receive their proportion of all debts and monies due to the said town of Plympton, and also their proportionable part of all laboratory stores and common and undivided lands belonging to the said town of Plympton, agreeably to the last State tax assessed upon the said town.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That Ephraim Spooner, Esq., be and he is hereby empowered to issue his warrant directed to some principal inhabitant, requiring him to warn and give notice to the inhabitants of the said town of Carver to assemble and meet at some suitable place in the said town, as soon as conveniently may be, to choose all such officers as towns are required to choose at their annual town-meetings in the months of March or April annually."

This act passed June 9, 1790.

The First Town-Meeting and other Public Acts.
—Pursuant to the authority granted by and the directions embraced in the foregoing act of incorporation, the legal voters of the town of Carver were duly notified to assemble and meet together on Monday, the 5th day of July, 1790, and being thus met the exercises were commenced by a prayer of Rev. John Howland, pastor of what had been the Second Congregational Church in Plympton, but now First Church of Carver. Then proceeded to the choice of town officers, with results as follows: Francis Shurtleff, Esq., moderator; Capt. Nehemiah Cobb, town clerk; Deacon Thomas Savery, Capt. William Atwood, and Samuel Lucas, Jr., selectmen; Benjamin White, Samuel Lucas, Jr., and Barnabas Cobb, assessors; Francis Shurtleff, Esq., treasurer; Jonathan Tilson and Caleb Atwood, constables and tax collectors; Timothy Cobb, tithing-man. The moderator, town clerk, and selectmen were chosen a committee to settle with the town of Plympton. Voted to allow collectors eight pence per pound for collecting the town taxes. Nathaniel Atwood was made grand-juryman, and James Vaughn agreed with to support a town pauper for 1s. 4d. per week.

In 1791 six surveyors of highways were elected; Consider Chase and Samuel Lucas, Jr., chosen surveyors of leather; Joseph Vaughan, Isaac Cushman, and Abijah Lucas made a committee to take care of the fish called alewives; Meletiah Cobb and Joseph Ransom elected hog-reeves, and a vote passed that swine may run at large, being yoked and ringed according to law; also voted to pay from the town treasury eight pence for the head of each crow brought to the selectmen before the 1st of June. Voted also to instruct the selectmen to lay out a road from the head of John Atwood's lane to Rochester road, and from the line of Middleboro' to Ebenezer Blossom's, and from Lakenham road by David Ransom's and Edward Stephens', and so on to Deacon Dunham's, always provided that the owners of land through which these proposed new roads would pass should in each and every instance make a free gift to the town of the land those roads would occupy. Voted, that the support of the poor be set up at auction and disposed of to the lowest bidder.

1792. Voted to pay Robert Waterman two pounds and eleven shillings to build a pound for the impounding of cattle, and also voted that for the future one-third of the town-meetings should be held in the South meeting-house. Voted, that the pound shall be built near the centre of the town, and not long after Joseph Vaughan was chosen pound-keeper.

In 1795, voted, that Maj. Nehemiah Cobb dispose of the town's part of the old paper money in the treasury of Plympton as best he can, and raise eight pounds nine shillings for the committee of settlement with Plympton, twenty pounds to pay Plympton, and twelve shillings to Samuel Lucas for services as treasurer.

1798. Chose Isaac Cushman, Lieut. Caleb Atwood, and Lieut. Joseph Shaw inspectors of alewives in Weweantic River, and voted that hogs should not run at large.

1800. Voted to appropriate four hundred dollars for the repairs of the public highways, and to pay each man for a day's work on the road three shillings and sixpence, and also the same for a yoke of oxen, and each cart and plow to be allowed one shilling. Asaph Bisbee chosen inspector of nails. Voted swine may run at large, being ringed and yoked, and voted not to act on the article in the warrant concerning the support of the gospel by a town tax.

1801. The town elected a committee, consisting of seven persons, to act concerning the settlement of a colleague with Rev. John Howland, and voted that both swine and cattle might run at large.

1805. The town chose a committee consisting of Deacon Thomas Savery, Capt. Abijah Lucas, John Maxim, Capt. Nathaniel Sherman, and Capt. William Atwood, to hire a minister to preach six months, one-half at the North and the other half at the South meeting-houses alternately. Also voted to appropriate two hundred dollars for the support of the gospel the present year, and a short time after voted to settle Rev. Lothrop Thompson, at a salary of four hundred dollars per year.

1809. Voted that one-half the town-meetings shall be held in the South meeting-house, and that the town pay a bounty for killing birds, viz.: crows, crow black-birds, red-wings, and blue-jays, and soon after red-birds were added.

1813. Services at town-meeting commenced with prayer.

1816. Chose a committee to hire a minister.

1819. On the question, Shall Halifax be made the shire of the county? the vote stood one in favor to one hundred and forty-seven against.

1824. Voted to instruct the selectmen to use their influence and exertions to suppress the evil of intemperance in this town.

1827. Chose a committee to enforce the laws respecting Tavernors and retailers of spiritous liquors.

1829. Voted to recommend to all persons who may be called upon to officiate at funerals to abstain entirely from the use of spiritous liquors on such occasions.

1832. Voted that the selectmen post up the names of all such persons who misspend their time and property by the excessive use of intoxicating liquors.

1833. Voted to hold the town-meeting in the Centre meeting-house.

1837. Voted to receive this town's proportion of surplus revenue moneys, and that the selectmen be authorized to receive the same and give bond according to law; also that it be put on interest, and the income be appropriated to the support of schools in addition to the present appropriation. This was afterward reconsidered, and a vote passed to appropriate the income to town expenses.

Also, Resolved, That the inhabitants of the town of Carver reject and disapprove of the action of the members of the last Legislature in passing an act for each member to receive two dollars and fifty cents per day.

Also, Resolved, To instruct the member from Carver to use his influence to the end that each member shall receive as a compensation but two dollars per day.

1843. Voted to disapprove of any one selling ardent spirits in or around the meeting-house on town-meeting day.

1844. Voted not to choose tithingmen.

These several acts of the inhabitants of the town are not cited because deemed to be of the greatest importance of all during these periods found noticed upon the public records, but those best calculated to show the advances of thought, progress of opinions, and conclusions of the body politic at the several dates when passed, as it is no less proverbial than practically true that the movements of loose straws show which way the wind is blowing, and so do events somewhat trivial not unfrequently reveal the existence of great and important causes.

TOWN CLERKS.

1790-91. Maj. Nehemiah Cobb.	1798-99. Maj. Nehemiah Cobb.
1791-93. Samuel Lucas, Jr.	1799-1802. Barnabas Cobb.

1802-11. Ephraim Pratt.
 1811-14. Stephen Shurtleff.
 1814-30. Samuel Shaw.
 1830-42. Isaac Vaughn.
 1842-46. David Pratt.
 1846-59. Thomas Vaughn.

1859-65. Ansel B. Maxim.
 1865-67. Thos. M. Southworth.
 1867-70. William Hammond.
 1870-72. Nelson Barrows.
 1872-79. Peleg McFarlin.
 1879. Albert T. Shurtleff.

SELECTMEN.

1790.—Deacon Thomas Savory, Capt. William Atwood, Samuel Lucas.
 1791.—Deacon Thomas Savory, Capt. William Atwood, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1792.—Deacon Thomas Savory, Capt. William Atwood, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1793.—Bartlett Murdoch, Jr., Capt. John Sherman, and Samuel Lucas.
 1794.—Bartlett Murdoch, Jr., Capt. John Sherman, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1795.—Capt. Nathaniel Sherman, Samuel Lucas, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1796.—Capt. Nathaniel Sherman, Samuel Lucas, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1797.—Capt. Nathaniel Sherman, Capt. William Atwood, Capt. Benjamin Ward.
 1798.—Capt. Nathaniel Sherman, Samuel Lucas, Capt. Benjamin Ward.
 1799.—Nehemiah Cobb, Esq., Ensign Abijah Lucas, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1800.—Nehemiah Cobb, Esq., Ensign Abijah Lucas, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1801.—Benjamin White, Ensign Abijah Lucas, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1802.—Benjamin White, Lieut. Abijah Lucas, Benjamin Shurtleff.
 1803.—Capt. William Atwood, Capt. Abijah Lucas, Edward Stevens.
 1804.—Capt. William Atwood, Capt. Abijah Lucas, Edward Stephens.
 1805.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, Capt. Abijah Lucas, and Capt. Elisha Murdock.
 1806.—Benjamin Ellis, Capt. Abijah Lucas, Thomas Hammond.
 1807.—Ensign Benjamin Ellis, Capt. Abijah Lucas, Thomas Hammond.
 1808.—James Vaughn, Capt. Abijah Lucas, Peleg Savory.
 1809.—Capt. Nathaniel Sherman, Capt. Abijah Lucas, Ensign Caleb Atwood.
 1810.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, James Vaughn, Ensign Caleb Atwood.
 1811.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, James Vaughn, Cornelius Dunham.
 1812.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, Maj. Benjamin Ellis, Hezekiah Cole.
 1813.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, Jesse Murdock, Hezekiah Cole.
 1814.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, Jesse Murdock, Hezekiah Cole.
 1815.—Capt. Gideon Shurtleff, Jesse Murdock, Hezekiah Cole.
 1816.—Capt. Bartlett Murdock, James Vaughn, Jonathan Atwood.
 1817.—James Vaughn, Thomas Cobb, Jonathan Atwood.
 1818.—Jesse Murdock, Hezekiah Cole, Asaph Atwood.
 1819.—Jesse Murdock, Thomas Cobb, Asaph Atwood.
 1820.—Hewit McFarlin, Thomas Cobb, Asaph Atwood.
 1821.—Hewit McFarlin, Thomas Cobb, Asaph Atwood.
 1822.—Maj. Benjamin Ward, Thomas Cobb, Asaph Atwood.
 1823.—Lieut.-Col. Benjamin Ward, Thomas Cobb, Asaph Atwood.
 1824.—Lieut.-Col. Benjamin Ward, Thomas Cobb, Capt. Joseph Shaw.
 1825.—Lieut.-Col. Benjamin Ward, Thomas Cobb, Capt. Joseph Shaw.
 1826.—Col. Benjamin Ward, Thomas Cobb, John Savory, Esq.
 1827.—Lewis Pratt, Thomas Cobb, John Savory, Esq.
 1828.—Lewis Pratt, Capt. Samuel Shaw, John Savory, Esq.
 1829.—Lewis Pratt, Capt. Samuel Shaw, Joseph Barrows.
 1830.—Capt. Benjamin Ransom, Jonathan Atwood, Joseph Barrows.
 1831.—Capt. Benjamin Ransom, David Pratt, Capt. Joseph Shaw.
 1832.—Levi Sherman, David Pratt, Capt. Joseph Shaw.
 1833.—Levi Sherman, David Pratt, Capt. Joseph Shaw.
 1834.—Levi Sherman, David Pratt, Dr. William Barrows.
 1825.—John Bent (2d), Joseph Barrows, Dr. William Barrows.
 1836.—John Bent (2d), Joseph Barrows, Timothy Cobb.
 1837.—Daniel Shaw, Joseph Barrows, Timothy Cobb.
 1838.—Daniel Shaw, Thomas Hammond, Benjamin Ransom.
 1839.—Capt. Benjamin Ransom, Thomas Hammond, Henry Sherman.
 1840.—Charles Rider, Timothy Cobb, Henry Sherman.
 1841.—Charles Rider, Timothy Cobb, David Pratt.
 1842.—Charles Rider, Timothy Cobb, Charles Barrows.
 1843.—William S. Savory, John Savory, Charles Barrows.
 1844.—William S. Savory, Elisha Ward, Charles Barrows.
 1845.—Joseph Barrows, Henry Sherman, Daniel Shaw.
 1846.—Joseph Barrows, William Barrows, Daniel Shaw.
 1847.—Samuel A. Shurtleff, Timothy Cobb, Daniel Shaw.
 1848.—Samuel A. Shurtleff, Timothy Cobb, Daniel Shaw.
 1849.—Thomas Southworth, Timothy Cobb, Daniel Shaw.
 1850.—Thomas Southworth, Timothy Cobb, Daniel Shaw.
 1851.—Thomas Southworth, Daniel Shaw, Thomas Cobb.
 1852.—Joseph Barrows, Thomas Vaughn, Frederick Cobb.
 1853.—Joseph Barrows, Thomas Vaughn, Frederick Cobb.
 1854.—Joseph Barrows, Thomas Vaughn, Frederick Cobb.
 1855.—Thomas Southworth, Thomas Vaughn, Horatio A. Lucas.
 1856.—Thomas Southworth, Thomas Vaughn, Stillman Ward.
 1857.—Thomas Southworth, Thomas Vaughn, Stillman Ward.
 1858.—Thomas Southworth, Thomas Vaughn, Benj. Ransom.
 1859.—Freeman G. Tillson, Alvin Perkins, Benjamin Ransom.
 1860.—Thomas B. Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Benjamin Ransom.
 1861.—Thomas B. Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Horatio A. Lucas.
 1862.—Thomas B. Griffeth, Thomas Vaughn, Alvin Perkins.
 1863.—Joseph Barrows, Thomas Vaughn, Alvin Perkins.
 1864.—Andrew Griffeth, Thomas Vaughn, Alvin Perkins.
 1865.—Andrew Griffeth, Thomas Vaughn, Frederick Cobb.
 1866.—Andrew Griffeth, Thomas Vaughn, Frederick Cobb.
 1867.—Andrew Griffeth, Thomas Vaughn, Frederick Cobb.
 1868.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Frederick Cobb.
 1869.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Frederick Cobb.
 1870.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, E. S. Lucas.
 1871.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, E. S. Lucas.
 1872.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Horatio A. Lucas.
 1873.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Horatio A. Lucas.
 1874.—Andrew Griffeth, Alvin Perkins, Horatio A. Lucas.
 1875.—Andrew Griffeth, Horatio A. Lucas, Ebenezer D. Shaw.
 1876.—Andrew Griffeth, Horatio A. Lucas, Ebenezer D. Shaw.
 1877.—Andrew Griffeth, Horatio A. Lucas, Ebenezer D. Shaw.
 1878.—Andrew Griffeth, Horatio A. Lucas, Ebenezer D. Shaw.
 1879.—Gustavus Atwood, Horatio A. Lucas, Frederick Cobb.
 1880.—Gustavus Atwood, Horatio A. Lucas, Frederick Cobb.
 1881.—Gustavus Atwood, Horatio A. Lucas, Frederick Cobb.
 1882.—Andrew Griffeth, Nelson Sherman, Albert T. Shurtleff.
 1883.—Andrew Griffeth, Nelson Sherman, Albert T. Shurtleff.

The following is a list of the names of those gentlemen who from time to time have represented the town of Carver in the House of Representatives of the Massachusetts State Legislature, together with the dates at which those sessions of the Legislature commenced. It will be observed that for quite a long term of time after Carver was incorporated as a town it was not usual to send a representative every year, and hence the numerous omissions in enumerating dates that herein appear:

REPRESENTATIVES.

1800. Capt. Nathaniel Sherman.	1839. Joseph Barrows.
1810. Capt. Benjamin Ellis.	1840. Joseph Barrows.
1811. Capt. Benjamin Ellis.	1841. Timothy Cobb, Esq.
1816. Maj. Benjamin Ellis.	1842. Henry Sherman, Esq.
1820. Maj. Benjamin Ellis.	1843. John Savary, Esq.
1822. Maj. Benjamin Ellis.	1844. John Savary, Esq.
1827. John Savary, Esq.	1845. William S. Savary, Esq.
1828. John Savary, Esq.	1847. Hon. Jesse Murdock.
1829. Hon. Benjamin Ellis.	1848. Timothy Cobb, Esq.
1830. Hon. Benjamin Ellis.	1851. Matthias Ellis.
1831. Lewis Pratt.	1852. Capt. Matthias Ellis.
1832. Thomas Cobb, Esq.	1853. Capt. Matthias Ellis.
1833. Benjamin Ransom.	1854. George P. Bowers.
1834. Jesse Murdock, Jr.	1855. James B. Tillson, Esq.
1835. Jesse Murdock, Jr.	1858. Rufus C. Freeman.
1838. Jesse Murdock.	1867. Elisha M. Dunham.
	1881. Peleg McFarlin.

The town of Carver has several times had the honor to furnish one of the members of the State Senate. The names of Carver gentlemen who served in the State Senate, together with the dates at which the sessions commenced, were as follows:

SENATE.

- Maj. Benjamin Ellis, May, 1825, and January, 1832.
- Jesse Murdock, January, 1844, and January, 1845.
- Lieut.-Col. Matthias Ellis, January, 1854.
- Peleg McFarlin, January, 1882 and 1883.

MEMBER OF THE GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL.

- Jesse Murdock, from January, 1847, to January, 1849.

The members of Constitutional Conventions, with the dates at which each convention commenced its session, have been as follows:

- Maj. Benjamin Ellis, Wednesday, Nov. 15, 1820.
- Joseph Barrows, Esq., Wednesday, May 4, 1853.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

- Thomas Southworth, Jr.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.<sup>1</sup>

	Dates of First Appointment.
Francis Shurtleff.....	April 16, 1790.
Nehemiah Cobb.....	Feb. 5, 1795.
Benjamin Ellis.....	1808.
John Savary.....	Feb. 17, 1824.
Samuel Shaw.....	Feb. 7, 1837.

<sup>1</sup> The commission of a justice of the peace continued in force for the term of seven years from the date of appointment; doubtless several of these commissions were renewed to the holders.

Dates of First Appointment.

Thomas Cobb.....	Feb. 7, 1837.
Lewis Pratt.....	Feb. 18, 1838.
Timothy Cobb.....	May 22, 1841.
Henry Sherman.....	Jan. 4, 1842.
William S. Savary.....	Jan. 4, 1842.
William Barrows.....	March 14, 1843.
Jesse Murdock.....	Feb. 1, 1847.
James Cole.....	Dec. 2, 1851.
Joseph Barrows.....	May 3, 1853.
Thomas Southworth.....	April 20, 1855.
James B. Tillson.....	April 26, 1855.
Thomas Vaughan.....	April 7, 1868.
Benjamin Ransom.....	Nov. 15, 1873.
John Bent.....	Oct. 10, 1875.
George P. Bowers.....	Jan. 24, 1879.
Albert T. Savary.....	April 11, 1879.

Post-Offices and Postmasters in Carver.—The first or earliest post-office in the town of Carver was established in or about the year 1811, with John Shaw as postmaster, who was succeeded in that position in or about 1813 by James Ellis, and an apparently well-authenticated tradition says that for a time Mr. William Ainsworth Coombs, late of Lakeville deceased, but then, as he used to relate, “a barefooted boy on horseback,” supplied the Carver post-office both from toward Middleboro’ and toward Plymouth by a “pony post” with its mails. The several successive persons who have since held the position of postmaster at this office have been and are as follows: Eliab Ward, from 1839; Daniel Shaw, from 1854; Edward W. Shaw.

Besides this, two other post-offices have been kept in the town of Carver, and officially designated and known as “North Carver” and “South Carver” post-offices. Of the post-office at North Carver the successive postmasters have been as follows: Rev. Plummer Chase, William Barrows, Alvan C. Harlow, Benjamin Ransom, Jr. The postmasters of the South Carver office have been Hon. Jesse Murdock, Jr.; Maj. Thomas B. Griffith, from 1849; Hon. Peleg McFarlin.

CHAPTER II.

MILITARY HISTORY.

THE names of the Minute-men of Plympton, or those who responded to their country’s “first call” in the war of the American Revolution, April 19, 1775. As Carver, at the date of the “Lexington Alarm,” so called, was a part of the town of Plympton, the list of those brave men is given entire lest in the effort to divide those who then resided within the geographical limits of Carver some might be omitted:

Commissioned Officers.

- Nathaniel Shaw, captain; Jonathan Tillson, first lieutenant;
- Francis Shurtleff, second lieutenant.

Non-commissioned Officers.

Joshua Perkins, Joseph Cole, Ebenezer Crocker, and Elisha Lucas, sergeants; Consider Chase, Samuel Cobb, Ebenezer Record, Jr., and Joseph Crocker, corporals.

Musicians.

Ebenezer Ransom and Isaiah Tillson, drummers.

Privates.

Samuel Lucas.	John Sherman.
Lemuel Crocker.	John Atwood.
John Lucas.	Benjamin Shurtleff, Jr.
David Wood.	Edward Stephens.
James Doten.	Edward Stephens, Jr.
John Dunham.	William Stephens.
Ebenezer Robbins.	Lemuel Stephens.
Noah Pratt.	John Stephens.
Silvanus Dunham.	Amaziah Doten.
Simeon Dunham.	Joseph Ransom.
Silas Dunham.	Jeshua Totman.
Elijah Dunham.	Stoddard Totman.
Daniel Vaughan.	John Shurtleff.
Daniel Vaughan, Jr.	George Hammond.
William Cobb.	Ambrose Shaw.
Joseph Vaughan.	Benjamin Shaw.
Abiel Shurtleff.	Benjamin Shaw, Jr.
Thomas Savary.	Caleb Atwood.
Andrew Barrows.	Jonathan Shaw.
Hezekiah Cole.	Nehemiah Lucas.
Nathan Cobb.	Elijah Lucas.
Daniel Faunce.	Isaac S. Lucas.
John Rickard.	Ebenezer Record.
William Stertevant.	Abner Record.
Issachar Fuller.	Elijah Record.
Barnabas Lucas.	Joseph Bordman.

The services of the people residing in what is now Carver, performed in the war of the American Revolution, may be properly and justly claimed as making a part of the history of Plympton, as that war was begun and ended before Carver was detached and set off from Plympton, and yet its details properly belong to the history of the locality then part of Plympton, now the township of Carver; and to those who object to this as a part of the history of Carver, we will present the same as the history of that locality now Carver.

Rhode Island Expedition, December, 1776.—The following-named officers and soldiers performed each fourteen days' service at Rhode Island in December, 1776:

Commissioned Officers.

Francis Shurtleff, lieutenant; Joseph Cole, ensign.

Non-commissioned Officers.

Timothy Cobb, Samuel Lucas, Consider Chase, and Samuel Vaughn, sergeants; John Lucas, corporal.

Musicians.

Ebenezer Ransom, drummer; Silvanus Stevens, fifer.

Privates.

Hezekiah Cole.	Samuel Cobb.
Nehemiah Cobb.	Asa Dunham.

Noah Fuller.
Isaac Shaw Lucas.
Abijah Luocas.
Ebenezer Robbins.
Joseph Ransom.

David Ransom, Jr.
Benjamin Shurtleff, Jr.
Thomas Savary.
Isaac Lucas.

War of the Rebellion.—The Minute-men of 1861, who promptly responded at the first call of the country in the late war of the great Rebellion, and performed a tour of three months' service at and near Fortress Monroe, in Virginia, in Company K, of the Third Regiment of Massachusetts Infantry, under Col. David W. Wardrop, of New Bedford, in the brigade commanded by Brig.-Gen. Ebenezer W. Peirce, of Freetown:

Commissioned Officers.

William S. McFarlin, captain; John Dunham, lieutenant.

Non-commissioned Officers.

Hiram O. Tillson, Robert P. Morse, Linas A. Shaw, sergeants.

Privates.

George E. Bates.	Jonathan W. Shaw.
Joseph Bent.	James H. Stringer.
John M. Cobb.	Joseph Stringer.
Josiah W. Coggsball.	Hiram B. Tillson.
John D. Sanbern.	Isaac B. Vales.
George H. Shaw.	Henry White.

COMPANY B, 3D REGT. INFANTRY (NINE MONTHS' SERVICE).

Commissioned Officers.

Thomas B. Griffith, captain.

Non-commissioned Officers.

Charles W. Griffith, sergeant; George H. Shaw, John M. Cobb, and Andrew De Merit, corporals.

Musicians.

John Murdock and James B. Bates.

Wagoner.

Lorenzo N. Shaw.

Privates.

Elbridge E. Atwood.	Henry A. Dunham.
Stephen T. Atwood.	William Irwin.
Josiah W. Atwood.	Alonzo D. Shaw.
Nathaniel B. Bates.	Edward W. Shaw.
Charles H. Chase.	Nathaniel Shaw, Jr.
John B. Chandler.	Jesse M. Shaw.
William B. Chandler.	Andrew Stringer.
Joseph F. Cobb.	George W. Tillson.
Sidney O. Cobb.	Ansel B. Ward.
William H. Connell.	Joseph G. Washburn.
Ellis D. Dunham.	Robert M. Dempsey.

COMPANY H, 11TH REGT. INFANTRY.

Private.

James A. Stewart.

COMPANY F, 11TH REGT. (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Private.

George Clark.

COMPANY C, 18TH REGT. INFANTRY (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Commissioned Officer.
William S. McFarlin, captain.

Non-commissioned Officers.

Bartlett Shaw, Micah G. Shurtleff, Pelham W. Barrows, Albert W. Perkins, Linus A. Shaw, Henry White, sergeants; Samuel B. Barrows, Wilson McFarlin, Levi Shurtleff, James H. Stringer, Joseph Stringer, corporals.

Privates.

Allen S. Atwood.	John B. McFarlin.
Isaiah F. Atwood.	Charles F. Pratt.
Thomas Atwood.	Elbridge A. Shaw.
Josiah W. Coggsball.	Isaac Shaw.
Benjamin W. Dunham.	Henry S. Shurtleff.
Daniel Dunham.	James F. Shurtleff.
Thomas S. Dunham.	Isaac B. Vail.
Harvey H. Finney.	Marshall A. Washburn.
John M. Maxim.	Peleg B. Washburn.

COMPANY E, 23D REGT. INFANTRY.

Corp. Edward L. Carnes. Wag. Benjamin F. Fuller.

COMPANY E, 29TH REGT. INFANTRY.

Columbus Adams. Charles F. Adams.
William R. Middleton.

2D REGT. INFANTRY.

Lieut. William H. Barrows. Sergt. Luman T. Hammond.

COMPANY E, 38TH REGT. (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Sergt. Josiah E. Atwood.

Privates.

George E. Bates.	James McSherey.
John Breaneb.	William W. Piersons.
Job C. Chandler, Jr.	George H. Pratt.
John B. Hatch.	Benjamin H. Savary.
Jesse F. Lucas.	Perez T. Shurtleff.

COMPANY C, 58TH REGT. (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Austin Ward.

COMPANY F.

Wagoner Henry T. Ward.

COMPANY G, 1ST REGT. CAVALRY (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Nathan B. Maxim.

COMPANY G, 2D REGT. CAVALRY (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Joho Ray.

1ST REGT. HEAVY ARTILLERY (THREE YEARS' SERVICE).

Samuel Langley. John Reardon.

SERVED IN THE NAVY.

Ensign Everett T. Maunter. Ensign Stillman Ward, Jr.

ROLL OF HONOR,

or names of Carver people who laid down their lives to sustain the liberties and laws of their country in the late war of the "Great Rebellion."

"Long after-years the tale shall tell,

* In words of light revealed,

Who bravely fought, who nobly fell."

James H. Stringer, died at Yorktown, Va., April 29, 1862.

Elbridge A. Shaw, died at Gaicoes' Mills, Va., June 14, 1862.

Joseph F. Stringer, killed at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 29, 1862.
Sergt. Bartlett Shaw, killed at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 30, 1862.
Corp. Wilson McFarlin, killed at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 30, 1862.
Lucian T. Hammond, died at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 30, 1862.
Harry Finney, mortally wounded at Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.
John S. Robbins, mortally wounded at Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.
Corp. Levi Shurtleff, Jr., died at New York Oct. 7, 1862.
Benjamin W. Dunham, died at Alexandria, Va., Oct. 26, 1862.
Corp. Eli Atwood, Jr., killed at Fredericksburg December, 1862.
Archibald Stringer, died at Fortress Monroe, Va., Jan. 13, 1863.
James McSherey, died at Fortress Monroe, Va., Jan. 13, 1863.
Alonzo D. Shaw, died at Newberne, N. C., April 18, 1863.
John Branch, died at New Orleans, La., May 11, 1863.
George E. Bates, died at Baton Rouge, La., May 21, 1863.
William H. Barrows, killed at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863.
Josiah E. Atwood, died at Brashear City, La., July 11, 1863.
William H. O. Connell, died Sept. 30, 1863.
Lucius E. Griffith, died at Washington, D. C., Nov. 6, 1863.
George H. Pratt, mortally wounded Oct. 23, 1864.

Local Militia.—From the date of the incorporation of Carver as a town, June 9, 1790, until 1812, the local militia that had been during all that period organized as two companies, constituted a part of the First Regiment in the Plymouth County Brigade.

Beside the train-bands at Carver that First Regiment also embraced the local militia of the towns of Duxbury, Kingston, Halifax, and Plympton, and all the companies of the town of Plymouth, save the Artillery Company that in 1794 was with the Abington Artillery, made a battalion of artillery.

The field-officers of a regiment at the period of time now under consideration consisted of a lieutenant-colonel, commandant, a senior major and a junior major, who were elected by the votes of the commissioned officers of the several companies composing the regiment, and commissioned by the Governor.

Of that First Regiment, Nehemiah Cobb, Esq., of Carver, was commissioned junior major, to take rank from Sept. 23, 1790, promoted to senior major Sept. 3, 1793, and honorably discharged in 1796. John Sampson, of Kingston, and John Torrey, of Plymouth, successively commanded the regiment, while Maj. Cobb was in commission as a field-officer.

Nov. 30, 1796, John Shaw, of Carver, was promoted to junior major, and held that position until 1803; John Thomas, of Kingston, then being the lieutenant-colonel commandant.

In 1812 the four militia companies in Rochester, two companies in Wareham, the company at South Carver, and that at South Middleboro' were formed into a regiment, to be known as the Third Regiment in Second Brigade, of Sixteenth Division, of which Third Regiment on the 20th day of April, 1812, Benjamin Ellis, of Carver, was commissioned major; Noah Dexter, of Rochester, being lieutenant-colonel commandant. This order of things was of brief duration, when the Third Regiment being disbanded, those companies of which it was composed were returned to those regiments from whence taken.

Soon after this the rank of the field-officers of a regiment in the militia of Massachusetts was changed from that of a lieutenant-colonel commandant, a senior and a junior major to colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major.

March 16, 1818, Capt. Bartlett Murdock was promoted to major of the First Regiment, raised to lieutenant-colonel Aug. 23, 1819, and colonel Jan. 22, 1823, and honorably discharged in 1826.

Capt. Benjamin Ward, of Carver, was promoted to major of First Regiment Sept. 23, 1821, lieutenant-colonel Jan. 22, 1823, colonel Sept. 18, 1826, and honorably discharged in 1830.

In 1826 a new regiment was formed, known as the Fifth Regiment, and made up of companies detached from the First and Fourth Regiments of Plymouth County Brigade.

Of that Fifth Regiment Capt. Stillman Shaw, of Carver, was commissioned major, to rank from Aug. 27, 1829, honorably discharged 1830. The Fifth Regiment was disbanded by general orders of May 13, 1831, and from that time until the final abolition of the old system, April 24, 1840, the militia of Carver constituted a part of the First Regiment in Plymouth County Brigade, which was known as the First Brigade of the Fifth Division.

The following are the names of the commissioned officers of the local militia in Carver, with dates when commissioned and discharged :

NORTH COMPANY.

Captains.

Nathaniel Shaw, com. 1762.
Francis Shurtleff, com. July 1, 1781.
Nehemiah Cobb, com. 178-; disch. Sept. 23, 1790.
John Sherman, com. Oct. 4, 1790.
Barnabas Cobb, com. April 4, 1796.
Abijah Lucas, com. July 19, 1802.
Joshua Cole, com. Sept. 1, 1806.
Thomas Cobb, com. May 31, 1815.
Levi Vaughn, com. May 4, 1818.
Israel Dunham, com. Sept. 24, 1822.
Charles Cobb, com. May 26, 1827.
Benjamin Ransom, com. Aug. 31, 1829.
Anthony Sherman, com. April 23, 1833.

Lieutenants.

Nehemiah Cobb, com. July 1, 1781.
Isaac S. Lucas, com. Oct. 4, 1790.
Lemuel Cole, com. April 4, 1796.

Joshua Cole, com. July 19, 1802.
Isaiah Tillson, com. Sept. 1, 1806.
Levi Vaughn, com. May 31, 1815, to May 4, 1818.
Benjamin Lucas, com. May 4, 1818.
Israel Dunham, com. July 10, 1821; disch. Sept. 24, 1822.
John Lucas, com. Sept. 24, 1822.
Benjamin Ransom, com. May 26, 1827; disch. Aug. 31, 1829.
Asa Barrows, com. Aug. 31, 1829; disch. Feb. 27, 1833.
Lewis Holmes, com. April 23, 1833.

Ensigns.

Francis Shurtleff, com. 1762.
Joseph Shaw, com. July 1, 1781.
Barnabas Cobb, com. Oct. 4, 1790.
Abijah Lucas, com. April 4, 1796.
Nathaniel Vaughan, com. July 19, 1802.
Thomas Cobb, com. Sept. 1, 1806; disch. May 31, 1815.
Benjamin Lucas, com. May 31, 1815; disch. May 4, 1818.
Israel Dunham, com. May 4, 1818; disch. July 10, 1821.
John Lucas, com. July 10, 1821; disch. Sept. 24, 1822.
Asa Burrows, com. July 26, 1827; disch. Aug. 31, 1829.
Anthony Sherman, com. Aug. 31, 1829; disch. April 23, 1833.
Thomas Vaughan, com. April 23, 1833.

SOUTH COMPANY.

Captains.

Benjamin Ward, com. May 30, 1787.
John Shaw, com. July 15, 1793; disch. Nov. 30, 1796.
Ichahod Leonard, com. Jan. 16, 1797.
Gideon Shurtleff, com. June 9, 1800.
Elisha Murdock, com. Oct. 4, 1804.
Benjamin Ellis, com. May 16, 1808; disch. April 20, 1812.
Samuel Shaw, com. June 24, 1812; disch. April 20, 1815.
Bartlett Murdock, com. May 30, 1815; disch. March 16, 1818.
Joseph Shaw, com. May 18, 1818; disch. March 16, 1819.
Benjamin Ward, com. Sept. 13, 1819; disch. Sept. 23, 1821.
Lothrop Barrows, com. Aug. 17, 1822.
Stillman Shaw, com. July 21, 1827; disch. August, 1829.
Stephen Griffeth, com. Oct. 2, 1829.

Lieutenants.

Samuel Shaw, com. Oct. 4, 1809; disch. June 24, 1812.
Luke Perkins, com. June 24, 1812; disch. April 20, 1815.
Joseph Shaw, com. May 30, 1815; disch. May 18, 1818.
Benjamin Ward, com. May 18, 1818; disch. Sept. 13, 1819.
Ira Murdock, com. Sept. 13, 1819.
Stillman Shaw, com. Sept. 18, 1824; disch. July 21, 1827.
Stephen Griffeth, com. July 21, 1827; disch. Oct. 2, 1829.
Daniel Shaw, com. Oct. 2, 1829.

Ensigns.

Benjamin Ellis, com. Oct. 4, 1804; disch. May 16, 1808.
Samuel Shaw, com. May 16, 1808; disch. Oct. 4, 1809.
Luke Perkins, com. Oct. 4, 1809; disch. June 24, 1812.
Bartlett Murdock, com. June 24, 1812; disch. May 30, 1815.
Benjamin Ward, com. May 30, 1815; disch. May 18, 1818.
Ira Murdock, com. May 18, 1818; disch. Sept. 13, 1819.
William Murdock, com. Sept. 13, 1819.
Daniel Shaw, com. Oct. 13, 1828; disch. Oct. 2, 1829.
Orrin Atwood, com. Oct. 2, 1829; disch. 1832.
Silas Bumpus, com. July 24, 1832.

The Bay State Light Infantry Company.—This company was raised pursuant to the following order from the Governor of Massachusetts, issued under date of June 22, 1852:

"WHEREAS, Thomas B. Griffith and forty-seven others have petitioned His Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, for leave to organize a Company of Light Infantry in the town of Carver and vicinity,

"His Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, grants the prayers thereof, and directs that orders be issued immediately for an election of officers, the notification thereof being addressed to Mr. Thomas B. Griffith, of Carver; and the Commander-in-Chief further orders that, when said Company is duly organized, it be known by the letter K, and incorporated into the 3rd Regt. of Light Infantry, 2d Brigade, 1st Division."

The election above ordered came off upon the 10th day of July, 1852, when Matthias Ellis was chosen captain, Seneca R. Thomas first lieutenant, William S. McFarlin second lieutenant, Benjamin Ward third lieutenant, and Joseph W. Sherman fourth lieutenant, all being residents of Carver save the first lieutenant, whose home was in Middleboro'. The company at the same time voted to take the name of "Bay State Light Infantry."

The ladies of Carver, headed by Miss Waitstill Murdock, being one hundred and thirty-three in number, contributed the sum of one hundred and thirty dollars, with which was purchased an elegant banner, and also two small flags for markers, which banner and flags on the occasion of the first annual May inspection were presented to the company by a committee of ladies in behalf of the donors, and which committee consisted of Miss Waitstill Murdock and Mrs. Thomas B. Griffith, of Carver, and Mrs. Nathaniel S. Cushing, of Middleboro'.

The first time that this company was called into service was upon the occasion of a brigade muster in the town of East Bridgewater, 1852, when the roll exhibited the following names of active members:

Commissioned Officers.

Matthias Ellis, captain; Seneca R. Thomas, William S. McFarlin, Benjamin Ward, and Joseph W. Sherman, lieutenants.

Non-commissioned Officers.

Solomon F. McFarlin, John F. Shaw, Thomas B. Griffith, Austin Ward, and Philip W. Bump, sergeants; Alvin C. Harlow, Ira B. Shaw, Augustus F. Tillson, and Thomas W. Wrightington, corporals.

Privates.

Robert W. Andrew.	Charles H. Cole.
Samuel S. Atwood.	Thomas C. Cole.
Joseph Atwood.	Charles H. Chase.
Simeon H. Barrows.	Joseph S. Chandler.
Pelham W. Barrows.	Ebenezer Duaham.
Charles Bennett.	Elisba M. Dunham.
David M. Bates.	Henry A. Dunham.
J. Henry Bump.	Charles W. Griffith.
George Cobb.	Andrew Griffith.
Marcus E. Cobb.	Rufus Hathaway.
Martin F. Cobb.	Ephraim T. Harlow.
Erastus W. Cobb.	John B. Hatch.
John S. Cartee.	Wilson McFarlin.
Nathaniel S. Cushing.	Elisba Murdock.

John Murdock.	William F. Shurtleff.
Abisha S. Perry.	Andrew G. Shurtleff.
Enoch Pratt.	Levi Shurtleff, Jr.
John M. Maxim.	Marcus M. Tillson.
Josiah Robbins.	Hiram Tillson.
John Shaw (3d).	Hiram Otis Tillson.
Bartlett Shaw.	Alvin S. Perkins.
Gilbert Shaw.	Thompson P. Thomas.
Cephas Shaw, Jr.	Andrew S. Tibbets.
Oliver Shaw (2d).	Adoniram W. Vails.
Abiel Shurtleff.	James Waterman.
Joseph F. Shurtleff.	Isaac C. Vaughan.
Perez F. Shurtleff.	John Witlizin..

Capt. Matthias Ellis was, in January, 1854, promoted to the office of an aide-de-camp to his Excellency Emory Washburn, then Governor, captain-general, and commander-in-chief of the State of Massachusetts, which office of aide-de-camp conferred the rank of a lieutenant-colonel.

The position of captain of the Bay State Light Infantry Company, thus made vacant by the promotion of Matthias Ellis, was filled, April 17, 1854, by the promotion of Lieut. Seneca R. Thomas, of Middleboro', to captain, the other lieutenants being at the same time promoted in their regular order, and Sergt. Solomon F. McFarlin raised to fourth lieutenant.

Capt. Thomas resigned, and on the 30th day of October, 1858, received an honorable discharge, and on the 17th of December, 1858, First Lieut. William S. McFarlin, of Carver, was promoted to captain. His subaltern officers were Charles W. Griffith, of Middleboro', first lieutenant, and Solomon F. McFarlin, of Carver, second lieutenant. These subalterns resigned, and on the 11th of August, 1860, George F. Cobb was elected first lieutenant, Thomas B. Griffith second lieutenant, and John Dunham third lieutenant. Bartlett Shaw was at the same time chosen fourth lieutenant, but refused to accept. For further particulars concerning the history of this company, see "Minute-Men of 1861," in that part devoted to the story of what Carver has done for the country in the several wars in which the nation has been engaged.

CHAPTER III.

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

To present the full, as well as minute and true, story of ecclesiastical affairs in what is now the township of Carver requires that we go back not only to that period of time when Carver was a part of the town of Plympton, but also to that still earlier and more remote date when Plympton was a part of the town of Plymouth, when, as early as 1698, the Rev. Isaac Cushman, a son of the venerable Elder Cushman, of the Plymouth Church, had gathered a religious congregation that was organized as a church, over which the Rev. Isaac Cushman was ordained as pastor.

About three years earlier that part of the old township of Plymouth that subsequently became Plympton, including the present town of Carver, was, by legislative enactment, incorporated as a precinct "for the setting up of the worship of God and support of a learned and orthodox ministry," soon followed by the commencement of the ministerial labors of Rev. Isaac Cushman, whose preaching was indeed the voice of one crying in a wilderness. Rev. Isaac Cushman remained with this flock, of which he had been made the spiritual leader and shepherd, until his death, that occurred Oct. 21, 1732, he then being in the eighty-fourth year of his age, and the smiting by death of the shepherd doubtless had an influence to divide, if not to scatter, the flock, as another church was soon after formed, consisting mainly, if not entirely, of communicants residing in what was then the southerly part of Plympton, but now the township of Carver

Of that second church in Plympton, Rev. Othniel Campbell, a native of Bridgewater, and a graduate of Harvard College, was, in 1734, ordained pastor, and for the greater convenience of rendering a proper support of the gospel in that part of the town wherein the new church was gathered, legislative action was asked for in incorporating a precinct, and responded to as follows:

"Nov. 15, 1732, Symonds Epes, Esq., brought down the Petition of Jonathan Shaw, John Doten, and others of the Southerly part of Plympton, praying for a Precinct, as entered the 29th of June last, and referred, with the Report of the Committee of both Houses thereon. Pass<sup>d</sup> in Council, viz. In Council, Novemb. 8th, 1732.

"Read and Orderd That this Report be accepted, and that the Petitioners, with their Families and Estates, be set off a Separate Precinct by the following boundaries, Viz.: beginning at the Line of Plymouth or Kingston, where a West Line from thence will strike the head of Annesnappet Brook, and thence in a straight Line to the North side of the Land of Jacob Eddy, where he now dwells, and from thence, in the same range, to the Line of Middleborough, and so home to Rochester, and that the Inhabitants of the said Precinct be vested with all the Powers, Privileges, and Immunities that other Precincts within this Province do or by Law ought to enjoy.

"Sent down for Concurrence.

"Read and Concur<sup>d</sup> with the Amendments, viz.: Provided that Edmund Tilson and the other Petitioners with him, viz.: Elisha Wyton, Eleazer Cushman, Eleazer Riekard, and Ephraim Tilson, be and remain in the old Precinct, according to their Petition, till the further Order of this Court, and also that the Ministerial Lands belonging to the said old Precinct shall still Solely remain to them, and the new Precinct to have none of the Issues or Profits thereof.

"Sent up for Concurrence."

Of that body of thus organized worshipers, then the Second Church and Second Precinct of Plympton, but afterward the First Church and First Precinct of Carver, the succession of pastors were as follows: Othniel Campbell, from 1734-43; John Howland, from 1746-1804; John Shaw, from 1807-15; Luther Wright, from 1821-25; Plummer Chase, from 1828-35; Paul Jewett, from 1836-39; Jonathan King, from 1839-46; Ebenezer Gay, from 1846-51; Stillman Pratt, from 1851-54; William C. Whitcomb, Henry L. Chase.

This body of worshipers erected a church edifice in the northerly part of the precinct incorporated in 1732, as at that date probably most of the inhabitants of that precinct were settled in the northerly part thereof, but a few years later, when the southern part became more largely populated, a demand was made that the house or place of worship should be removed to the geographical centre of the parish, which being refused, a part withdrew and erected what came to be known as the South Church.

The proceedings of the body who erected the South Church formed an official record as follows:

"PLYMPTON, July y<sup>e</sup> 21, 1772.

"We, The Subscribers, Being met together, Do agree to Build a Meeting House, and For to sett Sd House on the hill to the North of Mr. Peleg Barrows House for to Stand on the Rode that leads from Rochester to Plimonth, at the same time we, the subscribers, do chose a Committee of Five Persons to oversee and carry on the Building s<sup>d</sup> House, which are as followeth:

"Joshua Benson, John Shaw, Bartlett Murdock, Benjamin Ward, Joseph Barrows."

"Subscribers Names and sums.

	£	s.	d.
"Barnabas Atwood.....	13	6	8
Peleg Barrows.....	13	6	8
Joshua Benson.....	13	6	8
Bartlett Murdock.....	13	6	8
Obediah Lyon.....	2	13	4
Francis Sturtevant.....	3	0	0
Salathiel Bumpus.....	4	13	4
Joseph Barrows.....	10	13	4
John Bridgham.....	13	6	8
Seth Barrows.....	0	8	0
John Muxom.....	3	6	8
Joseph Atwood.....	6	13	4
William Washburn.....	4	0	0
Peleg Barrows, Jr.....	6	13	4
Bartlett Murdock, Jr.....	6	13	4
Elkanah Lucas.....	3	6	8
Jonathan Barrows.....	6	13	4
Simmons Barrows.....	5	6	8
Elathan Benson.....	0	13	4
Edmund Muxom.....	1	6	8
Jabez Muxom.....	0	13	4
John Shaw, Jr.....	10	0	0
James Murdock.....	13	6	8
Benjamin Ward.....	6	13	4
Samuel Lucas, Jr.....	5	6	8

	£.	s.	d.
Benjamin Barrows.....	1	0	0
Gideon Perkins, 3 Days work.....	0	0	0
William Morrison.....	1	6	8
Ephraim Griffith.....	3	6	8
Samuel Atwood.....	2	13	4
Joshua Benson, Jr.....	5	6	8

“November ye 18, A.D. 1772.

“By a meeting of the Subscribers we did then, at Mr. Peleg Barrows, agree how large to build s<sup>d</sup> House, Namely, 42 By 37.”

“November ye 23, A.D. 1772.

“Voted to give the Carpenters for Gitting Timber for s<sup>d</sup> House three Shillings three Farthings pr Day.”

“Voted to give the Narrow ax men two Shillings & four pence three Farthings pr Day.”

“Voted to give for oake Timber Five Shillings and fore pence pr Tun.”

“Voted to give for Teamin Six Shillings and Eight pence pr Day.”

“Voted to give for merchantable Boards one Pound Seven-teen Shillings & fore pence.”

“Voted to give for Intch & Quarter Boards two pound Six Shillings and Eight pence.”

“Feb. ye 1, A.D. 1773.

“Voted for Benjamin Ward to set up s<sup>d</sup> Meeting-House and Finish the out side.”

“June 21, A.D. 1773.

“Voted to Build s<sup>d</sup> House by the Pews For them men that Subscribed to have credit Toward their Pews if they Please to have any.”

“Voted to Chose 50 men to Raise s<sup>d</sup> Meeting-House & to Provide for s<sup>d</sup> men a good Dinner and Drinks Sufficient for them.”

“Voted to give Spectators that come to Raising s<sup>d</sup> House Licker Sufficient for them.”

“Voted to Git two Barrells of Rum for Raising s<sup>d</sup> House.”

“Voted to Raise s<sup>d</sup> meeting-House as soon as it is Framed.”

“October ye 12, A.D. 1774.

“Chose Mr. John Bridgham Vandue Master for to Vandue s<sup>d</sup> Pews in s<sup>d</sup> meeting-House.”

“Voted if the s<sup>d</sup> Pews sell for more than s<sup>d</sup> House shall cost when it is Done for to Reduct out of Each Pew, Eaqually, in Proportion, according to the Valley of them, and, Likewise, if s<sup>d</sup> House cost more than the Pews sell for to ad on to s<sup>d</sup> Pews the sums Equal Proportion.”

Pew No.		£	s.	d.
1.	Sold to Mr. Peleg Barrows for.....	27	6	8
“ 2.	“ Mr. John Muxom for.....	13	6	8
“ 3.	“ Mr. Joseph Barrows for.....	16	0	0
“ 4.	“ Joshua Benson, Jr., for.....	16	0	0
“ 5.	“ Francis Sturtevant for.....	16	10	8
“ 6.	“ Mr. John Shaw for.....	18	0	0
“ 8.	“ Mr. Bartlett Murdock for.....	21	6	8
“ 9.	“ Mr. Benjamin Ward for.....	14	18	8
“ 10.	“ Mr. William Morrison for.....	14	13	4
“ 11.	“ Salathiel Bumpus for.....	7	6	8
“ 12.	“ Joseph Atwood for.....	8	2	8
“ 13.	“ Mr. Seth Barrows for.....	13	6	8
“ 14.	“ Mr. James Murdock for.....	24	13	4
“ 15.	“ Mr. Elkanah Lucas for.....	15	12	0
“ 16.	“ Mr. Johc Bridgham for.....	27	6	8
“ 17.	“ Mr. Bartlett Murdock for.....	17	6	8
“ 18.	“ Mr. Bartlett Murdock for.....	18	0	0
“ 19.	“ Mr. Obediah Lyon for.....	17	6	8
“ 20.	“ Mr. Joshua Benson for.....	24	18	8
“ 21.	“ Mr. Simmons Barrows for.....	8	14	8
“ 22.	“ Mr. Peleg Barrows for.....	8	13	4
“ “	“ Mr. Samuel Lucas for.....	8	13	4

“PLEMPTON, March ye 23, 1779.

“Voted, for Mr. Peleg Barrows to take care of the Meeting-house for one year to open and shut the Doors and Sweep s<sup>d</sup> house for two Dollars.”

“CARVER, May ye 17, A. Domne 1792.

“Voted, to Finish the meeting-House as soone as the Pews that we Sell will Do it.”

“Sot up the Pew No. 14 on the Lower Floor to be Vandued, & it was Bid of by Joseph Ellis & Elisha Murdock In partnership For Eleven pounds Six Shillings.”

“Sot up the Pew No. 4. It was Bid of by Lev<sup>t</sup> Ichabod Benson For nine Pounds five Shillings.”

“Sot up the half Pew No. 19 on the Lower Floor, and it was Struck of to Bartlett Murdock For Fore Pounds.”

“Sot up a Pew in the Gallery, No. 1. It struck to Lev<sup>t</sup> John Shaw for fore Pounds.”

Meetings of the proprietors continued to be held for several years, and votes passed to build additional pews, that were sold to raise funds to finish the house, and at a meeting in January, 1820,

“Voted, to give up this meeting-house, and Build one in the Centre of the Town, providing the North End of the town will Join in Building s<sup>d</sup> house.”

Nov. 22, 1823. “Voted, to Rase three hundred Dollars to Repair the meeting-house.”

April 6, 1824. “Voted, to Repair the outside of the meeting-house;” and that “the Assessors should prise the pews and make the taxes in four weeks from this Date.”

May 17, 1824. “Voted, that the Commity Lay out the money that is assessed.”

Aug. 24, 1824. “Voted, to Raise one Hundred Dollars, in addition to the above money Raised, to make out the Repairs of the Meeting-House.”

Dec. 20, 1824. “Voted, to plaster and under-pin the meeting-house.”

Jan. 10, 1825. “Voted, to Paint the inside of the Meeting-House.”

“Voted, to build 5 new Pews, one at the place where the east door entered and 4 in front of the front Pews.”

The records contain the following concerning the new underpinning :

“Underpinning Joh. The Front & West end to be underpined with hewn stone 12 Inches deep.”

“Upper Front Door-Step to be thirty Inches wide and Inches thick, in Length to extend to the outside of the Door-Cases, Under Step, same length, four inches thick, fifteen inches wide.

“West door-step, Top Stone, twenty-four Inches wide, under step, fifteen Inches wide four Inches thick.”

April 5, 1825, “Voted to Sell the New Pew where the East Door Stood, together with all the Boards, Nails, etc., remaining on hand.

“New Pew Sold to John Bent.

“Voted to Paint the Pulpit Mahogany Colour, Breastwork White.

“Pews White, Tops Mahogany.

“Posts, Braces, & Window-Cases, White.

“Gallery Pews tops only painted.”

June 6, 1825, “Voted to alter the pulpit and repair flore.

“Voted that Lt. J. Murdock Shall Keep the Kee of s<sup>d</sup> House Sweep it and put in the Glass, and have the use of the Minister's pew for his Trouble.”

April 16, 1840, “Voted to repair the roof by shingling the front-side and patching the back-side, repair the Glass, Floors, and such other repairs as the Committee think necessary.”

The two religious assemblies, already noticed, were considered to be of the order denominated “Trinitarian Congregationalists," although the meeting-house of the Second Church and society appears to have been occupied by the "Calvinistic Baptists" much of the time for many years.

Calvinistic Baptist Church.—Among the earliest Dissenting ministers, who were sometimes termed "New Lights," that visited and preached in that section of the country now Carver was Richard Lee, who, in 1782, was by a mob forcibly taken from a religious meeting in Hingham, shamefully abused, clothes torn, carried out of that town, and life threatened should he ever return. And, obedient to the command, if persecuted in one city flee to another, so that which the people of Hingham were not then in a condition to receive was dispensed to the inhabitants of Carver by Richard Lee, while fleeing from a dragon persecution, and some of those converts to the doctrines he taught subsequently became Baptists.

The first Baptist minister who preached in Carver was Rev. Abraham Cummings, whose labors here were brief, and the principles of this denomination appear to have been of slow growth, for it was not until July 13, 1791, that a Baptist Church was formed that at first consisted of only twelve members.

Of this Baptist Church Rev. John Tripp was, on the 28th of September, 1791, ordained pastor, and upon the 3d of October, in that year, Rowland Hammond and B. Bryant were chosen deacons.

In 1793 came a "revival," from the effects of which the membership of this church was increased to fifty-two persons.

Rev. Mr. Tripp remained as pastor until 1799, when he was dismissed to become the pastor of a church in Hebron, Me. He sustained the reputation of being a man of talents, piety, and devotion, and was greatly beloved by his people. In 1802, Jacob Shaw was chosen deacon.

In 1804, Ezra Kendall temporarily supplied the pulpit with unusually fruitful results, as twenty-four were added by baptism to the church, and in June, 1806, David Bursell was ordained pastor, and he continued as such until 1810. During his ministrations (viz., in 1808) Joseph Robbins was made deacon.

One of the articles of this church's faith was that "No force or compulsion is to be used in moving any" to the support of the ministry, and to relieve themselves from taxes assessed upon them by the Congregationalists this Baptist society, in 1811, obtained from the State Legislature an act of incorporation. March 1, 1820, Ebenezer Shurtleff was elected deacon.

In 1823 this church and society (that had long worshipped in the South meeting-house) united their efforts with some members of the Congregational society and erected the Centre Church, that was occupied by both denominations, sometimes together and sometimes separately.

Samuel Glover preached to this Baptist Church in years 1838 and 1839, and at the last date Ebenezer Atwood was chosen deacon.

Rev. John B. Parris was ordained pastor in 1848, but remained only one year. He was a native of that part of Middleboro' now Lakeville, and resides in Westport, having given up preaching and engaged in medical practice.

Ephraim Dunham chosen deacon in 1850, and this year and the next Caleb Benson preached half of the time.

In 1852 or 1853, J. M. Mace became their pastor, which office he retained three years, during which time twenty persons were added to the church.

For a time the pulpit was not regularly supplied, after which Rev. William Leach became the pastor.

Mr. Lot Shurtleff, formerly of Carver, in his "last will and testament," bequeathed to this Baptist Church the sum of five thousand dollars, to be made a fund for the support of a preached gospel.

The Central Church.—In 1823 was commenced the building of a church edifice at or near the geographical centre of the town, which enterprise was undertaken by the united efforts of Congregationalists and Baptists, with the understanding that when completed each denomination should occupy it for public religious worship one-half of the time, which for a while was practiced, but in a few years the Baptists came to use the church edifice three-fourths, and finally nearly or quite all the time. This place of public worship was deemed an elegant structure at the date of its erection, some of the best mechanics of that time being employed in the labor of building, which was prolonged into the next year after that of its commencement.

The Methodist Church.—May 1, 1831, a class was formed in Carver, with Charles Rider as class-leader, and not long after Charles Rider, Thomas Maxim, Jr., Sumner Atwood, Sullivan Gammons, Anna Rider, Mary Atwood, Susanah S. Maxim, Patience Maxim, Sylvia Shurtleff, and Alice Bumpus were embodied as a "Reformed Methodist" Church.

Their meeting-house was commenced in May, 1843, and dedicated in the month of October of the next year, the sermon on that occasion being delivered by Rev. William Tozer

The pulpit has been occupied by the following ministers: L. D. Johnson, Nathan Clark, Presbury Clark, Pliny Brett, William Tozer, John McLeish, T. M. Hall, S. Y. Wallace, Joseph Eldridge, R. H. Dorr, and Elijah W. Barrows.

This church, as early as about the year 1836, took to itself the name of "Protestant Methodists," and it so continued until about 1866, or a period of some thirty years, since which the preachers have been supplied by the "Episcopal Methodist" Conference in the persons of the following-named clergymen: Charles Carter, — Tirrell, E. M. Dunham, E. Williams, A. B. Bessee, W. J. Ward, H. W. Hamblin, J. B. Hamblin, Jr., Charles Smith, and Ephraim Hunt, the present pastor. This church now numbers fifty-two members.

The Advent Church.—Meetings by the people of this faith were held in Carver from about the year 1844, but no church formed until Nov. 4, 1870, when a church organization was effected, that took upon itself the name of the "Advent Christian Church." The following are the names of its first or earliest members: Levi Ransom, Eliel Benson, Winslow Pratt, William Ennis Hatheway, Atwood Shaw, James Breach, Lucy Ransom, Louisa Ransom, Betsey S. Hammond, Lucy P. Hatheway, Lucinda E. Morse, Sarah A. Hammond, Chloc Shaw, Abby T. Wade, Eunice Vaughn, Sally D. Dunham, and Lucy Chace.

The pastors have been William Ennis Hatheway, J. J. Leslie, J. R. Boynton, W. F. Smith, and C. W. Sweet, who now supplies the pulpit.

The church now numbers about fifty members, and has a comfortable and convenient chapel at North Carver, Sunday services being quite fully attended.

The Union Society.—This religious body erected a church edifice, concerning the construction of which its records contain the following:

"Commenced Stone Work for new church Monday, 15th August, 1854, by Seth S. Maxim, of Carver, by whom it was executed and completed.

"Commenced Framing new church Monday, 21st Aug., 1854.

"Raised the frame of new church, 14th Sept., 1854, and the carpenter's work was finished Jan. 15, 1855.

"The church was all completed, ready for occupation and delivery to the proprietors on the 12th day of May, 1855.

"On Friday, the 20th day of July, 1855, a Bell weighing 1175 lbs. cast by H. Wilton & Co., Boston, was put in the church Tower, and a Church Bell was for the first time sounded or rung in the Town of Carver since its organization, and the only one at present in the Town; also a Reed Organ was placed in the Organ Gallery. The above Bell and Organ were presented to the church by Jesse Murdock, Esq., and William Savery, Esq.

"Saturday, July 28th, 1855, According to arrangements made by the Committee, the Church was Dedicated to the Public Worship of God, services as follows:

"1. Voluntary by the Choir.

"2. Reading of the Scriptures by Prof. J. W. P. Jenks, of Peirce Academy, Middleborough, Baptist.

3. Introductory Prayer by Rev. Nathaniel Coggswell, of North Carver, Orthodox

"4. Sermon by Rev. A. A. Miner, of Boston, Universalist.

"5. Consecrating Prayer by Rev. Isaac Kendall, D.D., of Plymouth, Unitarian.

"6. Address to Society & Benediction, Rev. W<sup>m</sup> Tozer, South Carver, Methodist.

"The day was fine and a larger number of people present than the Church could contain, and every thing passed off harmoniously and pleasantly and to universal satisfaction.

"On the following Sabbath, Rev. Hosea Ballou, D.D., of Somerville, officiated A.M. & P.M.

"Saturday, P.M., August 4th, 1855.

"Met agreeably to notice.

"On motion of S. F. Jenkins, it was seconded and carried that this Society be known and distinguished as the Union Society of South Carver."

The pulpit was occupied during the season between the date of dedication and the last of November, 1855, as follows: July 29th, Rev. Hosea Ballou, Universalist; August 5th, Rev. William Spencer, Baptist; August 12th, Rev. William Tozer, Methodist; August 19th, Rev. Samuel Nott, Congregationalist; August 26th, Rev. H. V. Dean, Methodist; September 2d, Rev. James Kendall, D.D., Unitarian; September 9th, Rev. R. Tomlinson, Universalist; September 16th, Rev. William Tozer, Methodist; September 23d, John W. P. Jenks, Baptist; September 30th, — Vose, Universalist; October 7th, Rev. William Tozer, Methodist; October 14th, Rev. — Nott, Episcopalian; October 21st, Rev. N. Coggswell, Congregationalist; October 28th, Rev. — Gilbert, Congregationalist; November 4th, Rev. R. Tomlinson, Universalist; November 11th, Rev. — Richards, Methodist; November 18th, Rev. William Tozer, Methodist; November 25th, Rev. J. C. Ball, Unitarian.

The same liberality in religious sentiment by the foregoing shown to have been put in practice at the commencement has continued to characterize the conduct of this Union Society until the present time. Jesse Murdock, a valuable member, who died a few years since, left five thousand dollars, the interest of which to be appropriated to the support of public worship carried on here, and five thousand dollars more, the income of which to be devoted to improving the cemetery grounds.

CHAPTER IV.

EDUCATIONAL.

At a town-meeting in Carver, held in the autumn of 1790, voted to appropriate thirty pounds for the support of schools, and also made choice of "Capt.

Benjamin Crocker, Consider Chase, Samuel Lucas (3d), Capt. William Atwood, Mr. Benjamin White, and Mr. Caleb Atwood as a committee to Moddle the School Districts and to proportion the Money to each district, and provide a school in each district."

In March, 1791, the town voted to raise forty pounds for the support of schools, and in November of that year voted to divide the territory of the town into, or to provide for schools in, six districts. Forty pounds for the same purpose was voted in 1792, and fifty pounds in 1793.

At March meeting in 1794, the appropriation was sixty pounds, and six school agents were chosen to proportion the money.

In 1795 the appropriation was only forty pounds, but the next year raised to sixty pounds, and thus it seems to have continued to and including the year 1803.

In 1804 voted two hundred dollars for schools, and this sum was probably the yearly appropriation until 1818, when the sum was increased to two hundred and fifty dollars, and in 1834 to three hundred dollars.

In 1837 voted to receive this town's proportion of the "surplus revenue" money, and that it be put on interest and the income appropriated to the support of schools in addition to the present appropriation, but this was afterwards reconsidered. The appropriation was in 1838 increased to three hundred and seventy-five dollars, in 1840 to four hundred dollars, in 1842 to four hundred and sixty dollars, and in 1845 to six hundred dollars.

The town in 1856 voted to appropriate eight hundred dollars for the support of schools, and in open town-meeting, March 7, 1859, voted an appropriation of one thousand dollars for schools, at which time William Savery, Esq., proposed to make the gift of one hundred dollars per year toward the support of schools to be kept in the town of Carver, which gift shall continue yearly to be made as long as the giver shall feel able and willing, and he to give to the town due notice of his intention to suspend further or longer provision, said sum of one hundred dollars each and every year to be placed in the hands of the school committee.

The town voted thus to accept the gift and passed a vote of thanks to the giver, and it was determined upon that one-third of the school money should be divided upon the schools, and two-thirds upon the scholars, and the several school districts authorized each to choose its own school agent.

William Savery, Esq., showed his liberality and public spirit on another occasion in the generous gift of forty volumes to each school district in town, in consideration of which testament the voters in open town-meeting passed the following: "Resolved that we cordially accept of these libraries, and direct the superintending school committee that they see the same placed in the several school-houses, and that the design and wishes of the donor be fully carried out."

The appropriation for the support of schools was in 1871 twelve hundred dollars, and in 1874 increased to eighteen hundred dollars.

CHAPTER V.

INDUSTRIAL HISTORY.

AT a comparatively early date in its English settlement, and perhaps even before that settlement was begun, that tract of country now the township of Carver was found to abound with valuable ores, chief, and the most readily available, of which was that of iron.

This iron ore was found imbedded in the ground, so near the earth's surface that neither prolonged nor very arduous effort nor costly machinery were required in its procurement, added to which the bottom of Sampson's Pond, so called, was found to teem with the crude metal, that could be had for the labor of scraping it together.

To extract from this iron ore the pure metal the only means then probably known, or at any rate the only method put in successful practice, was to place it when heated under the strokes of a heavy trip-hammer, and thus divest it of dross, and finally drawing it into merchantable bars, that in some parts of this country were for a time declared a "legal tender" in paying a specified proportion of debts.

Carver not only abounded with this valuable ore, but it was also equally and as readily supplied with fuel to heat the crude material, and water-power to put in motion the heavy trip-hammer, so essential in giving the finishing strokes to the enterprise. Indeed, it is doubtful whether the far-famed "milk and honey" of ancient Canaan, with its "corn and wine," were more effectual in causing its settlement by the "children of Israel" than was the rich iron ore, the abounding wood, and never-failing water of Carver in securing as its occupants the "sons and daughters of the Pilgrims."

There has not, even to the present time, been any signs of exhaustion in the iron ore, or failing in Carver's numerous streams of living waters, but in the fuel there is not now a supply equal to the demand of "blooming" or "smelting" iron, thus showing that "these three were" in demand essentially "one" in that early industry of manufacturing iron from the raw material. The quantity of heated ore placed at one time under a trip-hammer was called a "bloom," the act of thus working the ore designated as "blooming," the building where done known as a "bloomery," and the operator a "bloomer." In later years the place was called a "forge," and the operator a "forgerman." Succeeding the bloomery, or forge, was the blast-furnace. Smelting being deemed an improvement upon blooming, and the furnace business probably greatly exceeded in the amount of labor done at Carver all that had preceded it in the bloomery or forge enterprise, for while at the bloomery iron ore was only made into "merchantable bars," the blast-furnace brought the ore into "pigs," and then converted the "pig-iron" into pots and kettles, spiders and skillets, with various other articles of domestic use, under the then general and comprehensive name of "hollow-ware." It is a fact worthy of notice that in the early years of the furnace business at Carver it was expressly understood that manufactured articles should at least in part be received by the workmen engaged in payment for their labors performed and services rendered, and the latter were not unfrequently compelled to turn peddlers of hollow-ware before they could realize the fruits of their labors as furnacemen in the form of "clean cash."

Fuel becoming comparatively scarce, the old blast-furnace was succeeded and supplanted by the cupola-furnace, that could not smelt the iron ore, but instead melted the pigs made by the smelting process, and furnished castings of as many and perhaps even more kinds than had been produced by the blast-furnace.

With the abandonment of the old blast-furnaces, of course had to be given up the use of iron ore found in Carver, and pig-iron brought from afar made to take its place.

Blast-Furnaces.—The "Federal Furnace," says one and apparently reliable authority, "was erected in 1794," while tradition has claimed for it an origin or beginning coeval with the commencement of the war of the American Revolution, but the first authority cited is probably the nearest true. Drs. Thacher and Hayward, of Plymouth, are said to have been principal among its earliest proprietors and managers, to whom was ere long added Maj.-Gen. Nathaniel Goodwin, also of Plymouth, who had served as an officer in the patriot army in the war of the American Revolution, and is thought to have been referred to in the lines of the original "Yankee Doodle:"

"Father and I went down to camp
Along with Captain Goodwin,
Where we see the boys and girls
As thick as hasty pudding."

Succeeding the proprietors already named in the agency and management was Mr. Friend White, whose immediate successor was Brig.-Gen. Sylvanus Lazell, of Bridgewater, founder of the iron-works at Bridgewater, so long carried on under the name of Lazell, Perkins & Co. Sylvanus Lazell, as a brigadier-general, commanded all the local militia of the county of Plymouth (save the town of Hingham) during all the years of the "last war with England," being, as he was, the immediate successor of Israel Feaning, of Wareham, in that office, and being succeeded, in 1816, by Abiel Washburn, of Middleboro'.

The next in charge of the management of the Federal Furnace was Col. Bartlett Murdock, Mr. Nathaniel Bounney, Mr. John Bent, and Capt. Timothy Savery; and while the last war with England was progressing, in addition to casting hollow-ware, quite a large contract with the United States government was filled in the making of cannon-balls, to which circumstance last named was attributed the incendiary attempt to destroy this furnace by fire while a British fleet was lying off the coast near Plymouth. Their blast furnace was succeeded by a cupola furnace that was operated by the firm of Holmes & Allen, of Plymouth, who were succeeded by Bowers & Pratt, until in November, 1841, when the dam broke, and this put an end to the enterprise.

The Ellis Furnace, or Ellis Foundry, was built by Bartlett Murdock and Benjamin Shurtleff, and by them for a time operated. In 1804 the management passed into the hands of Benjamin Ellis & Bartlett Murdock, Jr., and the latter was succeeded by Nathaniel Staudish, John Savery, and Jesse Murdock. It is now owned by Miss Susannah Murdock and operated by the Ellis Foundry Company.

It is by Carver people claimed that here is where the first iron tea-kettle was cast in America. Quite a number of different patterns of stoves have been made here. The firm of Bent, Griffith & Co. commenced manufacturing at Carver in 1854. The firm consisted of George W. Bent, Thomas B. Griffith, Jesse Murdock, and Matthias Ellis, and cast parlor grates, registers, mantel-pieces, fenders, etc. In 1858 the name was changed to that of Murdock & Co., and the partners made to consist of Jesse Murdock, Thomas B. Griffith, Matthias Ellis, and Samuel Shaw, and thus continued until the death of Jesse Murdock, that occurred in 1875, since which time it has been a stock company, with Maj. Thomas B. Griffith as president and Samuel Shaw as treasurer, having their sales-rooms at No. 18 Beacon Street, Boston. The concern gives employment to about sixty men, and in addition to iron castings, now produce also the same in brass, in bronze, and in copper, and, beside the strictly useful, now manufacture much of the ornamental.

A furnace was for a time run in that part of Carver known as "Pope's Point," and among the operators were Mr. John Bent, who was succeeded by Mr. Eddy, of Middleboro'. From the running of Pope's Point Furnace, Mr. John Bent appears to have transferred his labors to what has already been considered under the name of the "Federal Furnace," where, for a time, he had a partner in the person of Capt. Timothy Savery.

Col. Benjamin Ward, in or near the year 1825, erected a furnace in Carver that subsequently came to be operated by Mr. Lewis Pratt, Jr. The site is now occupied by the facing-mill of Thomas & Swift.

Wenham Furnace was erected by Mr. Lewis Pratt, about 1830, and it was run by him till destroyed by fire, and then rebuilt by Lewis Pratt, Jr. Near by have been two other furnaces, one put up by David Pratt and the other by Benjamin Cobb.

Slug Furnace, so called, was built on "Slug Brook," in or about 1814. Lewis Pratt was the builder, proprietor, and operator.

Concerning forges, the evidence appears that where Mr. W. S. Cushing's mill stood was, at an early date, located a "bloomery," known as "Benson's Forge," and this at one time was operated by Mr. John Bent. He left to run the Pope's Point Furnace, and was succeeded as operator of the forge by a Mr. Weston, of Middleboro'. It was at the site of this forge that the first cut nails were manufactured in Carver. These nails were cut in one machine and headed in another. Mr. Joshua Leach was the successor of Mr. Weston. Mr. Leach put on quite extensive repairs, but he left it about a half-century, perhaps more, ago.

The water-power here has long been used for a box-board mill.

Upon the stream that operated the wheel of the "Federal Furnace" have been located a grist-mill, saw-mill, shingle-mill, stave-mill, and a shoe-string factory.

Herring Fishery.—In March, 1791, the town made choice of "Joseph Vaughan, Isaac Cushman, and Abijah Lucas, who were sworn as a committee to take care of the fish called Alewives for the ensuing year."

At the March meeting in 1793, "Made choice, Bartlett Murdock, Ensign Barnabas Cobb, and Ensign Caleb Atwood as a committee to join with the committees of Rochester and Wareham to take care of fish called Alewives." Also at or near the same date chose Francis Shurtleff, Esq., John Sherman, and Nebemiah Cobb to be a committee to petition the General Court for the privilege of disposing of the fish called Alewives for the use of the town, and subsequently voted to join with the towns of Rochester and Wareham for that purpose.

In 1796, "Nathaniel Atwood, Jr., John Lucas, and Joseph Ellis, chosen to join a committee of Rochester and Wareham to make regulations with reference to the fish called Alewives, and take care that none take them contrary to regulations."

1798. "Chose Mr. Isaac Cushman, Lieut. Caleb Atwood, and Lieut. Joseph Shaw, inspectors of Alewives in Weweantic River."

1802. "Voted to join with Rochester in petitioning for an amendment to fishing laws."

At a somewhat later date Ezra Thompson, John Savory, Esq., and Joseph Barrows were by the town of Carver chosen to confer with committees of Rochester and Wareham, to see what measures were necessary to be taken to "preserve" the fish called Alewives in Weweantic River, and soon after Ezra Thompson, Seth Morton, and Dr. Samuel Shaw were empowered to employ counsel to protect the rights of Carver in that fishery.

Temperance Reformation.—At a town-meeting holden in March, 1825, voted to instruct the selectmen of this town to use their influence and exertions in their official capacity to suppress the evil of intemperance as the law directs.

In 1827 the town made choice of Ezra Thompson, Samuel Shaw, and Thomas Adams, a committee to enforce in behalf of the town the statute laws of this Commonwealth respecting taverners and retailers, so far as the same may apply to the taverners and retailers of Carver. That committee subsequently favored the legal voters of Carver with a written report in which they said, "We have viewed with grief the increased progress of dissipation in the town of Carver, and feel anxious that some arrangement might be made which will come within the limits of the authority of the town to check the progress of that evil, which in our opinion is the principal cause of the multiplied crime and poverty which the inhabitants of this town are becoming noted for, and your committee are of the opinion that these evils are promoted by a want of due observance of the laws by the licensed houses and stores in town."

Jesse Murdock

In 1829 the town elected a committee to confer together with reference to what persons should be put under guardianship on account of common drunkenness, and not long after voted to recommend to all persons who may be called upon to officiate at funerals to abstain entirely from the use of spirituous liquors on such occasions.

In 1832 voted to instruct the selectmen to post up the names of all such persons as mispend their time and property by the excessive use of intoxicating liquors.

In 1843 voted to disapprove of any one selling ardent spirits in or around the meeting-house on town-meeting day.

Among the celebrities of this town it is proper to mention John Maxim, who was born Jan. 24, 1795, and died in the same house in which he was born Aug. 24, 1883; this habitation of his long life having afforded human shelter one hundred and seventeen years, and was erected by his father, whose Christian name he bore. This house stands in what one would be led to think anything else than a poetic locality, as that part of Carver has long been familiarly known as "Huckleberry Corner," and yet here it is where were composed and written by our John Maxim, the author, those very popular and far-famed political songs that so electrified the public mind from one end of our great country to the other in the noted "Harrison Campaign" of 1840; and Maxim's "Log-Cabin Songster," put forth in book-form and subscribed to by him in the nom de plume of "Bemis," was not among the least of those potent influences which contributed to effect that great political revolution, and secured the wonderful victory then achieved by "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." Maxim was not only a poet but considerable of a musician, for he could make songs and set to music the songs he had made, and then discourse both to the public with thrilling effect. Few people can sing their poetic compositions, and a still smaller number can compose the music of their songs and sing the same,—these three faculties being really quite distinct,—and yet in "Bemis" the three were made one, and wrought wonders accordingly.

John Maxim was four times married, and the parent of ten children. He gave practical heed to the pious exhortation, "Turn ye, oh, turn ye, for why will you die;" for in religious matters he turned and turned and kept continually turning, being at different periods of his life an Orthodox Congregationalist, a Universalist, a Methodist, and an Adventist; and to those who rallied or joked him concerning his instability and changeableness, he replied that "a wise man sometimes changes his mind, but a fool never does."

Over the signature of "Bemis," he corresponded quite extensively for the local newspapers.

---

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

---

HON. JESSE MURDOCK.

Jesse Murdock, only son of Jesse and Susannah (Ellis) Murdock, was born in Carver, Mass., Sept. 11, 1806. He received a common-school education, and at the age of sixteen years entered the service of his uncle, Bartlett Murdock, of Wareham, as clerk, where he remained about five years. He then returned to Carver, and entered into partnership, in 1827, with Benjamin Ellis, Esq., in the iron foundry business, and so continued for a period of about twenty years under the firm-name of B. Ellis & Co. In October, 1840, he married the daughter (Harriet) of his partner, Mr. Ellis. She died without issue, May 23, 1849. He never again married. Matthias Ellis succeeded his father, Benjamin, before the latter's decease, and Mr. Murdock remained a partner in the firm until 1863, when he retired from the foundry business, but retained his interest in the parlor-grate business, which manufactory he, in connection with others, had established in 1853, and in which he continued until his decease, Feb. 16, 1875. From 1835 to 1850, Mr. Murdock was much in public life, having served several terms as representative in the Legislature from his native town, as a senator from his county, and as councilor from his district, and always in the interest and to the satisfaction of his constituents. He was director a great many years in the Wareham National Bank, and was president of the Wareham Savings-Bank at the time of his decease. He was also for many years a justice of the peace.

Hon. Jesse Murdock was in many respects a remarkable man. In good common sense and sound judgment he was almost peerless. He had a very clear and accurate perception of character, and a just estimate of ability and worth. His counsel and advice were much sought and justly rewarded. He was a keen observer of men and events, and could dissect and discount the logic of events with great precision. In business he was diligent and indefatigable; success crowned his efforts, and he accumulated a large fortune, being at the time of his death the largest landholder in Plymouth County.

About 1845 he built a plain, neat, commodious dwelling and other buildings near the site of the old homestead where he was born, and resided there until the time of his death. Miss Susan E. Murdock, his only sister, now occupies it. He never entered into or encouraged any wild or doubtful schemes of speculation, but confined himself strictly to the legitimate channels of business enterprise, and always inculcated by his advice and example a wholesome and correct tone of morals in both business and social life. For the vain and pretentious, unsustained by character and merit, the blatant politician, the palaver of the flatterer, he had a most profound contempt, which he never restrained in either word or deed. In personal appearance he was remarkably imposing; calm, dignified, almost sedate in his intercourse with the general public, yet with his personal friends and intimate associates he was exceedingly genial, jocular, and jovial. If in business any one betrayed or wronged him, he abandoned all further intercourse with them; but if, upon the other hand, any one under pecuniary obligations to him was debarred by misfortune from meeting that obligation, no one could be more lenient or forgiving, and he always sustained with a helping hand such as proved worthy. He arrogated to himself nothing on account of wealth or position, but associated in the kindest way with even the poorest and humblest around him, if they were honorable and honest. He belonged to no church, but in his religious views was broad and liberal, sympathizing most largely with the Unitarian and Universalist faiths. In politics he was a Democrat. In his manner of living he was frugal and unostentatious, and even after he had acquired great wealth his tastes and habits remained the same. In his death Carver sustained the loss not only of one of its most prominent business men, but of one of its best, most useful, and highly-respected citizens.

---

GEORGE P. BOWERS.

George P. Bowers, son of John and Nancy (Carter) Bowers, was born at Leominster, Mass., Sept. 24, 1813. His maternal grandfather, Maj. Josiah Carter, of Lancaster, Mass., was an officer in the war of the Revolution.

When a mere lad he came to Carver, and became a member of the family of Benjamin Ellis, one of the prominent citizens of the town, and the managing owner of the Charlotte Furnace. Here he learned the business of iron founder, and acquired such rudiments of an education as could be furnished by the district school of a small country town at that day, supplemented by a short attendance at the academy in the neighboring town of Middleboro'.

Early in life he, with Joseph Pratt, a young man of the same town, commenced business at the Federal Furnace in Carver, as manufacturers of hollow-ware, under the firm-name of Bowers & Pratt. The Federal Furnace was the oldest foundry in the United States.

The need of greater facilities, induced by the growing business of the firm, caused the removal of the establishment in a few years to Roxbury, adjoining Boston, where the business was successfully conducted for a number of years, when he withdrew from active participation in it. He had always loved to regard Carver as his home, and he now took up his permanent abode there in a house which he had erected on the shore of Sampson's Pond, among the familiar scenes of his youth.

His active temperament, however, rendered a life of idleness impossible to him, and he soon found employment in establishing and carrying on an extensive braid-factory in Carver, and another in the town of Plympton. The depression in this class of business during and after the war having rendered it unprofitable, he abandoned it and started a foundry in Woburn, Mass., which he conducted until his decease.

In his later years he devoted much time and thought to cranberry culture in Carver, laying his plans upon a scale of unprecedented magnitude, involving the clearing and cultivation of hundreds of acres of what had always been regarded as useless bog and swamp. The enterprise was not fully developed at the time of his death, but sufficient progress had been made to warrant the expectation that it will prove a success and a material benefit to the town and vicinity.

He was married Oct. 14, 1844, to Waitstill A., youngest daughter of John and Polly (Atwood) Savery. Two children of this marriage, Polly S. and Nancy C., are still living. Mrs. Bowers died Jan. 13, 1866, and on Dec. 8, 1870, he married Eliza A., daughter of Stillman and Eliza (Cole) Shaw, who survives him. He died Jan. 24, 1884.

Mr. Bowers made no religious profession. He was what would be called a liberal Christian, interested in religious thought and open to such new light and new views as his reason approved. His character was a rare combination of strong and sterling qualities. Enterprising, energetic, and self-reliant, he was always considerate of the feelings and welfare of others, and no small part of his enjoyment of successful business pursuits arose from the knowledge that those in his employ, and the community in which he lived, shared the benefit with him.

Geo. P. Bowers
          "          "

Mr. Savory.

Warm-hearted and full of a healthy human sympathy, he won and retained the respect and friendship of all with whom he came in close contact. In politics his tendencies were Democratic, but he was too independent a man to belong to any party, or to follow any party leaders farther than he thought was right.

In public matters he relied on his own judgment and his own conscience. He represented his town in the State Legislature, but his business occupied him too fully to permit his engaging in anything like public life, even had his taste led in that direction. An ardent lover of nature and a keen sportsman, he enjoyed the forest more than the city, the grassy bank of a trout-stream more than a seat in the State-House, and the cry of the hounds in full chase more than political eloquence. To fulfill his duty as a citizen and neighbor was his ambition. His good deeds were but known to the members of the rural community in which he lived, and their grief at his death, and the love and esteem in which they hold his memory, are his fitting eulogy and monument.

WILLIAM SAVERY.

William Savery, son of John and Polly (Atwood) Savery, was born in Carver, Mass., Oct. 26, 1815. He received a common-school education in his native town, supplemented by an attendance of two terms at Bridgewater Academy (1832), and one term at Peirce Academy, at Middleboro' (1833). At this period of his life it was his intention to study medicine, and give special attention to surgery; and had Mr. Savery fulfilled those intentions and chosen a proper field for the exercise of his qualifications, his name would undoubtedly have ranked high among the surgeons of America, for he certainly has, in a high degree, many of the requisite qualities for advancement in that profession. Sympathetic by nature, yet he has a Spartan-like control of his emotions; of strong will-power and high ambition to excel in whatever he undertakes, coupled with a love for reading and research, he would have kept pace with the progress of the age, and would doubtless have achieved distinction in his profession. But "trifles light as air" sometimes decide the destiny of men and nations. While at Middleboro' Mr. Savery was tendered a position as clerk in an iron establishment at Albany, N. Y., which at the expiration of his term he accepted, and remained there five years, the last year of which time he was a partner in the firm where he had been employed. He then dissolved his business connections in Albany and went to the city of New York, where, with his father as partner, he conducted an iron-foundry until his father's decease (1853), and in connection with other parties until 1877, when he retired from the firm, and has since devoted his attention to the conduct of his private affairs, to the care of his father's estate, the administration of numerous other estates, the executorship of wills, the guardianship of many minor children, and as trustee of several public bequests.

In politics he is a Democrat, and was elected to the State Legislature on that ticket for the term of 1878-79. This was on account of his personal popularity rather than his political creed, as the district is largely Republican. He has received the nomination of his party as candidate for the Senate a number of times, but as the Democratic party is so far in the minority in that district he has, of course, not been elected. Mr. Savery has never been an office-seeker, however, and whatever positions of office or trust he may have held have invariably sought him, not he them.

Such is the trust and confidence in the ability, honor, and integrity of Mr. Savery by those who know him, that he is, and has been, the custodian of many trusts, both public and private, and none can be found who will say he has in any sense proved himself incapable or unworthy. He settled the large estate of Hon. Jesse Murdock, being the executor named in the will, and is at present the financial agent and confidential adviser of Miss Susan E. Murdock, the only sister, heir, and residuary legatee under the will. He has been justice of the peace about thirty years, was a director of Plymouth National Bank about twelve years, and is one of the auditors of the Old Colony Railroad. Mr. Savery is a man who is whole-souled and ardent in whatever he undertakes. Cautious and critical in his investigations, once his judgment is convinced and his course marked out, he pursues that course regardless of opposition or adverse opinions of others. Such is his native force of character that he at once impresses even a stranger with his earnestness and honesty, and independence of thought and action. He belongs to no church, but has charity for and believes there is good in all. In his religious opinions he is broad and liberal to a degree that is considered by some heretical. For a period of more than ten years he devoted all of his income, beyond ordinary expenses, to charity, mostly to schools, school libraries, churches, etc. Having met with some reverses through duplicity and infidelity of others, he was compelled to restrict his donations, but still gives with a liberal hand all that his means will allow.

He married Sept. 10, 1840, Mary Page Van Schaack, daughter of Stephen and Harriet (Dunnell) Van Schaack, of Albany, N. Y. They have three children living, one son and two daughters. The son succeeded his father in the iron business in New York City. Mr. Savery is an ardent sportsman, and spends many happy hours with dog and gun, rod and reel. He has a beautiful home on the banks of a pleasant little lake in his native town, a well-chosen library, and a family who honor and love him. Such has been his life, and such are the surroundings of his declining years.

MAJ. THOMAS B. GRIFFITH.

Maj. Thomas B. Griffith was born in Middleboro', Mass., May 17, 1823. He is the son of Ellis and Lucy M. (Bent) Griffith, and grandson of Obed and Rebecca (Maxim) Griffith. Obed Griffith was a farmer, and a native of Rochester, Mass., his father being one of the early settlers of that town, where he lived a long and useful life, attaining the great age of ninety years. Maj. Griffith's maternal great-grandfather was Bartlett Murdock. His maternal grandfather, John Bent, was one of the oldest manufacturers of the town of Carver, commencing business at what was known as Benson's Forge, making wrought-iron bars, drawing them out with a hammer. This was not far from 1792. In 1798 or 1799 he went to Pope's Point and ran a blast-furnace until about 1817, when he sold out, and in company with Timothy Savery he purchased the Federal Furnace, and had charge of that works till about 1830, making hollow-ware, such as pots, kettles, etc.

Maj. Griffith was brought up on a farm till he was seventeen years of age, when he went on a whaling and merchant voyage to South America. Returning, he was employed as a clerk in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1842-43, when he came home to Massachusetts, and being somewhat out of health he embarked on another whaling voyage, from the town of Wareham, in the bark "Montezuma," this time to the Indian Ocean, cruising most of the time along the eastern coast of Africa, calling at the different villages along the coast, which were mostly inhabited by Arabs and Hottentots. During this voyage they stopped at the Isle of St. Helena, and Maj. Griffith visited the tomb of Napoleon. He also assisted at the burial of Mrs. Judson, one of the India missionaries. This lady, with her husband and two children, had taken passage to India on the ship "Sophia Walker," commanded by Capt. Codman, son of Rev. Mr. Codman, of Dorchester.

Upon Maj. Griffith's return from this voyage he was offered a clerkship in New York City, which he accepted for a short time, when he returned to Carver and took a similar position with Benjamin Ellis & Co., where he continued eight years. In 1852 he headed an enlistment roll for a military company, which was chartered as Company K, Third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers. Matthias Ellis was captain, and his father, Benjamin Ellis, exhibited much interest in this, as he did in all things tending to improvement or progress in his town. Maj. Griffith was still a militiaman when the war broke out, and in 1861 he started to Fortress Monroe, but was ordered back as a recruiting officer to fill the Third Regiment. In 1862 he was mustered into this regiment as captain of Company B, nine months' volunteers. He served his time in North Carolina, stationed much of the time at Newberne, was in the battles of Kingston, Whitehall, Goldsboro', and Blount Creek, and did such other duty as the regiment was called on to perform. The regiment was mustered out in 1863, at the expiration of their term of enlistment, and Maj. Griffith returned to Carver and again devoted himself to manufacturing, having in 1853, in company with George W. Bent, Jesse Murdock, and Matthias Ellis, under the firm-name of Bent, Griffith & Co., engaged in the manufacture of parlor grates. This partnership continued till 1868, when Bent retired, and the firm was called Murdock & Co. This copartnership was terminated in 1875 by Mr. Murdock's death. A stock company was then formed, with Maj. Griffith president and Samuel Shaw treasurer. Maj. Griffith gave his personal supervision to the manufacturing department, getting up such patterns as were required, and furnishing designs and supervising construction. Changes were frequent and radical in the style of goods, which embraced everything in the line of iron goods for furnishing dwelling-houses, hotels, stores, and any institution where stoves, fireplaces, or other iron furnishings were required. He gave much of his time to fixing and setting grates and fireplaces where the best results were desired in the way of heat and draught. When France, England, and Germany began putting on the market brass goods to supply the place of those formerly made of iron, Maj. Griffith was one of the first in the United States to give attention to that branch of manufacturing. In 1877, before much progress had been made in the matter, he went to Europe, inspected and familiarized himself with the various processes, and gained such information as was likely to prove beneficial to the business of the firm. Upon his return to the States he at once applied the knowledge he had gained, and it is not saying too much when we assign to this establishment a front rank in the vanguard of progress in their specialties. It is their aim not only to keep pace with the requirements of the advanced taste of the age, but to lead and cultivate the popular taste to a still more advanced standard, in combining the beautiful and artistic with the useful in the furnishing and ornamentation of their homes. A visit to their beautiful salesrooms in Boston will justify in the mind of the beholder the most extravagant praise we could bestow on their wonderful handiwork.

Thos. B. Griffith

Maj. Griffith's military record did not end with his service in the war. In 1868 he was commissioned captain of what was denominated the Eighty-sixth Unattached Company. In the fall of that year they were placed in the Third Regiment, and in 1870, Capt. Griffith was elected major of the regiment. He held this position till 1875, when he resigned. In his political views Maj. Griffith has not suffered himself to be the blind adherent of any party name or alliance, but has endeavored always to vote for the men and measures he deemed purest and best. His first vote was for Gen. Taylor for President. He then voted for Bell and Everett, but when the Stars and Stripes were fired on at Fort Sumter, he entered the contest a defender of the banner that his forefathers had reared and sustained. Prior to this he had, in unison with other generous-minded men of the North, advocated the idea of a governmental emancipation of the slaves with a reasonable compensation to their owners. Since the war he has affiliated with the Republican party in most elections, provided the candidates were men he could indorse. In religious belief he is a convert to the doctrine denominated Spiritualism, having, as he believes, received proofs which he cannot ignore that there is a medium of communication existing, however imperfectly developed at present, between the spirits of those who have crossed the dark river and those remaining on the shores of time. He accepts this as to him the most reasonable explanation of that wonderful phenomena of life and death, which has baffled the wisdom of sage and scientist alike.

Maj. Griffith has been selectman and assessor in the town of Carver, and is a director in the Standard Navigation Company. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1870, and has held various minor positions. He married Hannah M. Dunham, daughter of Isaac L. Dunham, of Carver, Dec. 22, 1852. She was born Dec. 15, 1827. They have but one child living, Hannah B., born Nov. 14, 1855.

HISTORY OF ABINGTON.

BY CHARLES F. MESERVE, A.M.

THE first grant of lands in this town was made by the Plymouth Colony, in 1654, to Nathaniel Souther, who was the first secretary of the colony; afterwards grants were made to various persons, among whom was Peregrine White, the first person born in the colony. The first settlements commenced about the year 1668. Its Indian name was Manamooskeagin, which signifies many beavers.<sup>1</sup>

The first settlement in town is said to have been in the north part. The colony granted to Nathaniel Souther two hundred acres of land on the west side of Hatherly grant, running in Hatherly range two hundred rods nearly south and one hundred and sixty rods nearly west. James Lovell, of Weymouth, for himself and Andrew Ford, purchased Souther's title to this grant of land, and subsequently (1679) Lovell conveyed to Ford his part of this grant, which was at the time of conveyance, and always had been, in the possession of said Ford, and was known and called by the name of Ford's farm.

In Lovell's conveyance to Ford this land is described as lying "by the road that goeth from Weymouth to Bridgewater." It seems that this conveyance was thirty years after the first purchase of the title from Souther. At that time there were other inhabitants on the Ford farm, for in 1692 the inhabitants on Ford's farm were taxed fifteen shillings by the colony. This tract of land was situated westerly from Deacon J. Cleverly's. The ancient house of the Fords, or one of them, was near a broken pile of rocks, a little westerly from a brook which runs by said Cleverly's house.

Abington is very pleasantly situated on the highest lands between Narragansett Bay and Boston harbor. The centre of the town is about equidistant from Boston, Plymouth, and Taunton, a little over eighteen miles from each, eight miles from Weymouth Landing, twelve from Hingham harbor, and seven from North River, in Hanover. There are in this town two large intervalles, of about five hundred acres each, surrounded by high lands, mostly covered with water in the winter and beautifully green in the summer; around them, and overlooking them, are many of the principal settlements. At the easterly part there is a range of elevated lands, comprising over two thousand acres, called Beach Hill, a beautiful tract of land, susceptible of great improvement. From this hill the waters flow northeast and southwest. No large rivers water the town, though Beaver Brook, Streame's and Hersey's River and French's stream afford good mill privileges. A part of Accord Pond is in this town; the remainder of it is in Hingham and Scituate.

The soil of the town is strong, and good for production, though rocky and hard of cultivation. It is generally better for grazing than tillage. The surface is rough and broken. The meadow land abounds in peat. Some bog-iron ore has also been found in it. The blue-slate stone prevails on some parts of the upland.

The population of the town in 1790 was one thousand four hundred and fifty-three; it was in 1880 ascertained to be over three thousand six hundred and ninety-seven, and is rapidly increasing.

The Old Colony Railroad passes through the whole length of the town, over six miles, running north and south, which was completed and in full operation in January, 1846. This road brings Boston or Plymouth within less than one hour's ride of Abington.

East Abington is a very flourishing part of the town recently built up; its location is very central and inviting, the centre of which will be but a little over a mile from the railroad.

There are ten school districts in town. The number of scholars from four to sixteen years of age is about nine hundred. Two thousand seven hundred dollars is annually appropriated for public schools, and nearly one thousand dollars is expended in private schools, including an academy or high school, established by a private company, they having erected an elegant building for that purpose.

<sup>1</sup> From Hayward's "Gazetteer of Massachusetts," in 1846.
464

The population of Abington is strictly of the Pilgrim family, as there is scarcely an inhabitant in the town of any other race or nation. Perhaps no other town in the vicinity of Boston holds out greater inducements for country-seats and settlements, for men of business or leisure who wish for quiet retirement or a summer residence.

As early as July 4, 1700, an order was passed requiring "the proprietors, purchasers, and inhabitants" to ascertain what they were willing and able to pay annually "for the support of an able, learned, and orthodox minister." In 1710 the erection of a meeting-house was effected, and "on the 8th of December, 1711, Mr. Samuel Brown came to Abington, by a unanimous call from the people there, to settle." He was ordained Nov. 17, 1714.

This town has been celebrated for introducing several important iron manufactures. Meeting-house bells were cast here as early as 1769. A deserter from the British army, a bell-founder, was employed by Col. Aaron Hobart in this business, which was continued by him for years. The bell now in Centre Abington meeting-house was cast by him. When he gave up the business he sent one of his sons and a blacksmith, and taught the late Col. Paul Revere, of Boston, to mould and cast the first bell which he ever made. The copper company in Boston is named after this individual.

In the year 1775-76, Col. Aaron Hobart contracted with the State to make cannon and shot, and the State furnished him with a large amount of materials to begin with, as pig-iron and coal; this was a bold undertaking. Col. Hobart had no knowledge of the business. He cast bells, it is true, and was the owner of a blast-furnace for casting hollow-ware, etc., but the exigency of the times required a powerful effort. The Revolutionary war had just commenced, and there were but a very few cannon in the country; hundreds of merchant ships were in want of cannon to go out as privateers. The first attempts (and they were the first that were ever made in the country) proved very unsuccessful. In proving the cannon, they split; the iron could not be kept sufficiently hot; it chilled too quickly. So disastrous was the experiment that all the stock provided by the State was expended, and his own fortune besides. This disappointment was severely felt by him and by the public. But, providentially, at this dark hour, the cause of his failure was discovered. A Frenchman, in passing through the town and stopping at a public-house, hearing of the colonel's want of success, inquired the cause, and being told, he said there was no difficulty in keeping the iron sufficiently hot. On inquiry he stated that he had worked in a cannon-foundry in France. He was instantly invited to inspect the furnace, and stated at once the cause of the failure, which was that the flue or draft of the chimney was made large and the chimney above small. He said the reverse ought to be the case,—the flue small, and the chimney large above. No time was lost in making the change, and the success was complete, the contract with the State was fulfilled, and individuals were supplied extensively. About three years after this the concern was disposed of to the State, under the care of the late Col. Hugh Orr, of Bridgewater, and removed to that town.

Another important manufacture took its rise early in this town,—the manufacture of cut tacks and brads. In this manufacture a large capital is invested, and from seventy-five to one hundred hands are employed. It is computed that about three hundred tons of iron are annually wrought.

To show the necessity of protection on American inventions and domestic industry, we give a brief history of the manufacture of these useful and indispensable articles.

The making of tacks by hand commenced very early. The first attempt was to cut up old iron hoops into points, by a very imperfect kind of shears, and take them up, one by one, and place them in a common vise, and screw up and unscrew for the purpose of heading each tack with a hammer. From this process they were called "cut tacks;" but the mode of making by hand was much improved by movable dies, placed in an iron frame, in the shape of an ox-bow, the two ends, in which were placed the dies, being brought together by a lever pressed by the foot. In the first process a man might make a thousand tacks per day; in the latter, eight thousand per day. This was a great improvement, and the inventor, Mr. Ezekiel Reed, was entitled to a patent. He made some attempts to conceal the operation, but it was so simple and so easily applied that others soon got it, and it came into general use.

With machines, or "tack tools," as they were called, thus improved, from three to four hundred men and boys were employed making tacks in this town and vicinity.

In 1815 and 1816 a machine was invented by Mr. Jesse Reed, son of Ezekiel Reed, to make tacks at one operation. Mr. Melvil Otis, of Bridgewater, claimed and received a considerable share in the invention. Soon afterwards the machines were much improved by the inventions of Messrs. Thomas Blanchard, of Springfield, and Samuel Rogers, of East Bridgewater. For the exclusive patent-rights of these inventions, Elihu and Benjamin Hobart, Esqs., paid thirty thousand dollars, in the first instance, to commence the business of making tacks. The price of tacks was reduced over fifty per cent. immediately, and one man could make more tacks in a day on one of the patent machines than fifteen could by hand, even in the last improved mode, by movable dies. One machine has turned out over two hundred and fifty thousand in a day.

When they had just got their machines into operation they learned, with astonishment, that a large consignment of tacks had been received in this country from England. On inquiry they found that a model of their "patent tack-machine" had been taken from this country and patented and the tacks sent here for sale. One or two individuals went from this country to England for that purpose. The effect of this was to stop the manufacture of this article here entirely and ruin the proprietors of the patent.

Under these circumstances they were led at once to look to our government for relief and protection. It was asked, "Shall the British take our inventions and our market without paying for them to the ruin of our own citizens?" They referred to their models in the Patent Office, and stated that the price of tacks was already reduced fifty per cent., and that machines could be easily multiplied, not only to supply the United States, but all Europe.

A bill was immediately passed fixing the duty on importation of tacks at five cents per thousand, up to sixteen ounces to the thousand; after that at five cents per pound, and also including brads and spars.

Without this tariff the business must have been given up in this country. Iron and labor were lower in England than in this country, and the English had nothing to pay for patents, and, having silenced competition here, they would have charged their own prices. It would have been difficult to have revived the business. Indeed, it never would have succeeded without protection in its infancy.

The boot and shoe manufacture is the most extensive business done in the town. By a statistical account lately made it is found that over one million two hundred and fifty thousand pairs of boots and shoes are made annually, of the value of one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and that eighteen hundred and fifty persons are employed in this business, including women and children. There are other extensive manufactures in the town, such as brads, tacks, sprigs, shoe-nails, leather, boxes, etc. The value of the whole manufactures in the town amounts to at least one and a half millions of dollars annually. The amount paid for the transportation of goods and passengers to and from Abington is estimated to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars annually.

Old French War.—This war was waged between England and France, continued seven years, and was terminated in 1763. Massachusetts contributed largely to carry on this war for the defense of the colonies and the conquest of the dominions of France on this continent and in the West Indies. She had, in 1758, six thousand nine hundred and twenty-five men in the field actually engaged in this war, and about the same number through the whole period of its continuance, besides a large number of artificers and seamen. This force was about one-third of the whole effective force of the province. The State expended in this war over four millions of dollars, and received, by way of reimbursement from the mother-country, about three millions.

The provinces were stimulated in their great exertions by opposition to the French. On the ocean they were our rivals, in the fisheries on the coasts and on the Great Banks, whilst our settlements, from Nova Scotia around to the lakes, were subject to alarms through their influence, by which the Indians were excited to war, murder, and continual depredations. There were, too, deep-rooted prejudices against them on account of their religion.

Abington contributed largely of her strength to carry on this war. The following persons were in the service, and died therein or on their way home: Abraham and Humphries, sons of Capt. John Burrell; Joseph Clark; Peleg Cain; David (colored), son of Anthony Dwight; Noah, son of Jacob Ford; James, grandfather of the late Col. D. Gloyd; Jacob, son of Capt. Elijah Hearsey, drowned near Cape Sable harbor; Nathaniel Joy; Noah, son of Gideon Parkman; Asa, son of Deacon Samuel Pool, died at Halifax, 1762; Ichabod, son of Capt. Ebenezer Reed; Ezekiel, son of John Reed; Samuel, son of William Sprague; Job, son of Samuel Tirrell, killed by the Indians while crossing Lake Ontario in a bateau; Jonathan Torrey, Jr.; Robert Townsend, Jr., died of a wound received in the Crown Point expedition; Jacob White.

The following persons survived the service: Christopher Askins, Jr.; George Askins; Jeremiah Campbell, at St. Johns, N. S., 1759; Caleb Chard; Jonathan Chubbuck, at Newfoundland, 1762; Greenwood Cushing, at Halifax and Newfoundland; Elisha Hersey, captain of a company in the Western expeditions; Edmund Jackson, Jr.; Abraham Josselyn; Peter Nash; Samuel Noyes; Jacob Pool, at the taking of Fort Frontenac, under Col. Bradstreet, 1758, and at St. Johns, N. S.; Samuel Pool; Joseph Richards; Isaac Stetson, under Gen. Wolfe at the taking of Quebec; Jacob Tirrell, at Halifax, 1759; Prince Stetson; Ezekiel Townsend; Robert Townsend, ensign of Capt. Benjamin Pratt's company, at the westward; Jeremiah White.

This list is very incomplete, as will appear by the following, extracted from the journal of the House of Representatives:

"Dec. 28, 1763. There was presented a petition of Elisha Hersey and sixty others, all of Abington, who had been in his Majesty's service in the late wars, praying for a grant of land for a township, eastward of the Penobscot River, in consideration of their services rendered."

Slavery.<sup>1</sup>—Slavery once existed in this town. There were slaves here before the Revolutionary war under the British colonial government. My grandfather, Isaac Hobart, had several. My father inherited two of them; they were made free soon after and left; but in a few months returned and requested to be taken back, saying they could find no employment and no place that looked like their old home. They (Jack and Bilhah, man and wife) were permitted to take up their old quarters, and occupied them for many years. They lived to a great age, over ninety years each. They were maintained by the family many years after they were past labor. They had several children, none of whom are now known to be living.

Mr. Brown, the first minister settled in town, had five slaves; their names were Tony, Cuff, Kate, Flora, and Betty. They all lived to be very old. Tony's age, at his death, is put down at one hundred years, and all the rest are supposed to have lived over eighty years each. There was Pompey, in the south part of the town, once a slave of Mr. House; Moses, at the centre, a slave of Mr. Nash; Jack Bailey, who lived on Beech Hill, once a slave of Mr. Bailey, of Hanover. The late Dr. Gridley Thaxter had one (Frank) who was formerly owned by Gen. Lincoln, of Hingham, of revolutionary memory. Frank came into Dr. Thaxter's care and keeping by means of his wife, who was the daughter of the general. He having been a slave in the family before her marriage, was much attached to her, and called her his daughter. He was very aged,—well-nigh one hundred years.

A Mr. Cary, of North Bridgewater, had a female slave, named Patience, whose age exceeded one hundred years.

After receiving their freedom these colored persons lived in small buildings of their own, but most of them with the descendants, the children and grandchildren of their old masters. Not one of these, to my knowledge, was ever supported by the town. In my early days I knew many of these once slaves. They were, with one exception, quiet and peaceful, and some of them were smart and active. There were probably from fifty to seventy-five slaves in town previous to the State Constitution. Those named above were all of African descent, and of unmixed color.

There are several anecdotes told of some of these slaves that may be amusing to such as have not heard them. They relate principally to two of the slaves once held by Mr. Brown, and particularly to Tony (sometimes called Antony Dwight) and Cuff. It is not always certain to which of these a particular anecdote relates.

As introductory to what I am to record of them, I will give some account of their owner, who was a very respectable gentleman, whose name was Josiah Torrey, familiarly called "Old Squire Torrey." Mr. Torrey lived in that part of the town called Locust, on the site where the late Philip Pratt used to live. From the inscription on his tombstone it is ascertained that he descended from an ancient and respectable family in Weymouth, and was born Nov. 5, 1718. When he came to this town is not known. He was educated at Cambridge University, studied divinity, and was a preacher for a number of years, but finally left the profession and retired to private life. He was quite a land-owner, and cultivated a large farm. He married in succession the widows of the two first ministers settled in this town,—Mr. Brown and Mr. Dodge. By his first wife he came into possession of the slaves named above. They were not freed until after his (Mr. Torrey's) decease, which was in 1783, at the age of sixty-five years. Mr. Torrey had no children. He devised his large estate to one of his sisters, who married a Mr. Pratt, a nephew whom he brought up, the late Deacon Josiah Torrey, who lived in the southeasterly part of the town, and one of his nieces, who married Eliab Noyes. His remains were disinterred within a few years, and, with the remains of other ministers of former years, deposited in Mount Vernon Cemetery.

The two slaves referred to, after their freedom, took care of themselves. Tony had a small house near the Thicket road.

Of Tony it is recorded by Mr. Brown that he and one of the female slaves (Flora), in 1742, were admitted members of his church.

<sup>1</sup> Hobart's "History of Abington."

One of the anecdotes told of Tony's strength and agility is that at the raising of a forty-foot barn belonging to Samuel Norton, Esq., he jumped from beam to beam, the whole length of the building. This has always been a mooted question, and it seems almost impossible that it could have been done. There must have been five beams and four spaces of ten feet each, and to accomplish the feat it would be necessary to stand on a beam fifteen or sixteen feet from the ground, to jump over each of the four spaces, and come to a stand on the last beam. The two greatest difficulties would be to leap from the first beam over the first space, and to come to a stand on the last beam. That Tony jumped over all these spaces I have no doubt. Such a tradition is not likely to have been fabricated. It is stated in Hobart's "Sketches of Abington," without any query or comment. My solution is that Tony did his jumping while the frame of the barn lay on the ground, put together preparatory to raising, and that by starting at a distance and running he might do it, passing on from the last beam to the ground without stopping.

It is also told of Tony, when he complained of having to pick bones, and Mr. Torrey said to him, "The nearer the bone the sweeter the meat," that he tied Mr. Torrey's horse, after a hard day's work, all night to a stake near a large rock, where, of course, he got hardly anything to eat. In the morning, when inquired of why he did so, he answered his master, "The nearer the bone the sweeter the meat;" "the nearer the rock the sweeter the grass."

His master complained of his wearing out his shoes too fast, and got him a pair shod with iron, telling him he thought they would last longer. Tony put them on and danced all night on a flat rock, and wore them entirely out. In the morning he carried them to Mr. Torrey, and said he had had a dance last night and wore them all up; iron bottoms did not last so long as leather ones.

Mr. Torrey always required of Tony to remember the text at meeting, which he could never do correctly; but on one occasion he came home from meeting and said to Mr. Torrey, "I've got him; I remember the text." Mr. Torrey said, "Well, what was it?" The text was these words in Daniel, "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin." The interpretation of one word, tekel, is, "Thou art weighed in the balance and art found wanting." Tony said, "A teakettle was weighed, and it wasn't heavy enough."

Cuff, his other slave, was a very bad fellow,—malicious and crafty. He used to drive Mr. Torrey's team, carting planks and lumber to Weymouth Landing. He was frequently taken up and fined for criminal acts. On one occasion he was sentenced to be whipped with a certain number of stripes at the whipping-post. After the clerk of the town had put them on, Mr. Torrey, who stood by, requested him to add three more for him, for he was an ugly fellow. The clerk refused, saying he had done his duty according to the sentence of the justice. Mr. Torrey took the lash and added three severe strokes more. Cuff, after being released, walked away muttering, and saying, "Massa shall lose three of his oxen for these three strokes;" and so he did. One ox was overheated by him in going to Weymouth, driven into the river and foundered, and died in consequence. He broke the leg of another by throwing a stone at him. A third was killed in the woods, by "some accident done on purpose."

He was so obstinate and unmanageable that Mr. Torrey put an iron collar around his neck, with a hook riveted to it, hanging down in front. When the collar around his neck was riveted together, Cuff shed tears, which he was never known to do before. When inquired of, out of town, about the collar, he said it was put on by his master to prevent him having the "throat-ail," which was very common in Abington. The hook he would conceal under his waistcoat.

On one occasion—not to mention any more—he was taken up for breaking the Sabbath, tried before Justice Joseph Greenleaf, and fined. After he had paid the fine, he asked for a receipt of the justice. The justice asked him for what purpose he wanted a receipt? Cuff answered, "By-and-by you die, and go to the bad place, and after a time Cuff die, and go and knock at the good gate, and they say, 'What do you want, Cuff?' I say, 'I want to come in.' They say I can't, because I broke the Sabbath at such a time. I say, 'I paid for it.' They will say, 'Where is your receipt?' Now, Mr. Judge, I shall have to go away down to the bad place and get a receipt of you, that I mended him, before I can enter the good gate."

I received most of these traditional statements about the slaves from Mr. Bela Dyer, to whom they were communicated by his grandmother, the aged Widow Dyer, who gave the account of the first settlers in South Abington. The account of Cuff's trial before Justice Greenleaf I had from my brother, Nathaniel Hobart, who was contemporary with those times, and who died many years since, in the eightieth year of his age.

Revolutionary War.<sup>1</sup>—It will not be necessary

<sup>1</sup> Hobart's "History of Abington."

to go into an extended account of this war. The history is written and well known, portions of it appear in thousands of publications, it is read in all our families, colleges, academies, and schools. A few items only will be named that relate to this town, some of the doings of which have been noticed before.

The officers from Abington in the Continental service were Jacob Poole, captain; Luke Bicknell, captain; John Ford, lieutenant; David Jones, Jr., surgeon.

Among those who died in the service are the following: George Bennett; Nathaniel Bicknell, Jr.; James Clark; Gershom, son of Benjamin Farrow; Samuel Green; David, son of Benjamin Gardiner; Thomas Hunt, Jr.; Solomon, son of Samuel Nash; David, son of Peter Nash; Jacob Noyes, Jr.; Moses, son of Deacon John Noyes; Prince Palmer; Abner Porter, Jr.; Nathaniel, son of Whitcomb Pratt; Abel, son of James Reed; Cuff Rozarer (colored); Jesse Stoddard; Thomas White; Jonathan, son of Thomas Whitmarsh.

Almost every man in town capable of bearing arms was in the service for a longer or shorter period. The part taken by the inhabitants of this town in this contest was spirited and patriotic. They expended largely to encourage enlistments, and for the support of the war. To show the spirit and zeal of the town, I will quote some votes or resolves passed by the town at a meeting appointed for that purpose March 10, 1770. The names of the committee who reported the resolves are Daniel Noyes, Samuel Pool, Aaron Hobart, David Jones, Jr., Joseph Greenleaf, and Thomas Wilkes. They were published in the Boston Gazette, by which they were pronounced "noble resolves." They were drawn up by Joseph Greenleaf, Esq.:

"1st. Voted, As the opinion of this town that all nations of men that dwell upon the face of the whole earth, and each individual of them, are naturally free, and while in a state of nature have a right to do themselves justice, when their natural rights are invaded.

"2nd. Voted, That mankind while in their natural state always had and now have a right to enter into compacts and form societies and erect such kind of government as the majority of them shall judge most for the public good.

"3rd. Voted, That Great Britain had an undoubted right to erect a monarchical government or any other mode of government, had they thought proper, appoint a king and subject him to laws of their own ordaining; and always had, and now have, upon just occasions, a right to alter the royal succession.

"4th. Voted, That the right of Sovereignty over the inhabitants of this Province, claimed by any former British King, or by his present majesty by succession, was derived to him by the recognition of the forefathers of this country of his then majesty as their sovereign, upon the plan of the British Constitution, who accordingly plighted his royal faith, that himself, his heirs, and successors had, and would grant, establish, and ordain, that all and every of his subjects who should go to and inhabit this province, and every of their children who should happen to be born here or on the sea in going hither or in returning from thence, should have and enjoy all liberties and immunities of free and natural subjects within any of their dominions, to all intents, construction, and purposes whatsoever, as if they and every of them were born in the realm of England.

"5th. Voted, That the late acts of the Parliament of Great Britain, imposing duties on American subjects for the sole purposes of raising a revenue, are an infringement of our national and constitutional liberty, and contrary to the spirit and letter of the above mentioned royal grant, ordination and establishment of having and enjoying all the liberties and immunities of free and natural born subjects.

"6th. Voted, That no acts passed in either the parliaments of France, Spain, or England, for the aforesaid purpose of raising a revenue are binding on us, and that the obedience due from us to his present majesty is no other in kind or degree than such as he has a constitutional right to from our fellow-subjects in Great Britain.

"7th. Voted, That therefore the above mentioned acts are in themselves a mere nullity, and that he who, vi et armis, seizes the property of an American subject for not paying the duties imposed upon him by said acts, ought to be deemed no better than a highwayman, and should be proceeded against in due course of law.

"8th. Voted, That the sending of troops (may they not more properly be called murderers) to Boston by Lord Hillsborough, at the request of Gov. Bernard, to aid and protect the Commissioners of the Customs in levying the taxes imposed on us by the said acts, amounts to an open declaration of war against the liberties of America, and an unjust invasion of them; and as we are refused any legal redress or grievances we are in this instance reduced to a state of nature, whereby our natural rights of opposing force is again devolved upon us.

"9th. Voted, That the agreement of the merchants and traders of Boston, relative to the non-importation, has a natural and righteous tendency to frustrate the schemes of the enemies of the Constitution, and to render ineffectual the said unconstitutional and unrighteous acts, and is a superlative instance of self-denial and public virtue which we hope will be handed down to posterity, even to the latest generation, to their immortal honor.

"10th. Voted, That those persons who have always persisted in the scheme of importation, and those also who have acceded to the agreement of non-importation, and have violated their promises, and, as it were, stolen their own goods and sold them to purchase chains and fetters, ought to be by us held in the utmost contempt, and that we will have no sort of commercial connection with them, or any that deal with them; and their names shall stand recorded in the town books, and be posted up in all public places in town as enemies of their country.

"11th. Voted, That we are in duty bound not to use or consume any articles from Great Britain, subject to duties on the foregoing plan; and that we will not knowingly purchase of any person whatever, any such articles until said acts are repealed: neither will we use or suffer willingly to be used in our families any bohea tea, cases of sickness excepted.

"12th. Voted, That a respectable letter of thanks be addressed to the merchants and traders of the town of Boston, for the noble and disinterested and very expensive opposition made by them to the later attempts to enslave America; and whereas it appears probable to us that the goods of the infamous importers, both in this and the neighboring governments, are vended among us by peddlers, therefore,

"13th. Voted, That we will not purchase anything of them, or suffer any person under us to trade with them, but that we will, as much as in us lies, discourage them, and endeavor to have the law executed against them and all such innholders as entertain them contrary to law.

"14th. Voted, That a committee be chosen to inquire who among us act contrary to the foregoing votes, and return their names to the town clerk, to be entered in the town books and published in Messrs. Eder's & Gill's paper, as persons confederating with the importers to the ruin of their country; and, whereas, the ears of our earthly sovereign, by the intervention of his wicked ministers, are rendered deaf to the cries of his oppressive American subjects, and as we apprehend we have a righteous cause, and as we are assured the ears of the King of kings are always opened to the cries of the oppressed; therefore,

"15th. Voted, That we will unitedly petition the throne of grace for protection against encroaching power, whereby our civil liberties are so violently attacked and our religious liberties endangered, and that Thursday, the 3d day of May next, be set apart by this town for said purpose; and the Selectmen be a Committee to wait upon our Rev. Pastor, desiring him to lead in the exercises of the day, and that by an advertisement they invite the neighboring towns to join with us in similar exercises on said day.

"16th. Voted, That the foregoing votes be recorded, and a copy thereof be forthwith transmitted to the committee of inspection in Boston, together with our letter of thanks to the merchants and traders there."

Prominent People in Earlier Days.<sup>1</sup>—Isaac Hobart was my grandfather. He is not, however, to be noticed on account of that relation, but on account of a noted work which he undertook in his day (1745). This was making a tunnel under ground nearly fifteen rods in length, with deep-cuts at the entrance and at the outlet, some portions of it being about twenty feet deep from the surface of the ground. It was walled on the side, and covered over at the top with large flat stones; the width at the bottom was five feet, at the top four; the height was from five to six feet. A canal, one mile long, conveying the water to this tunnel, was dug, and by means of it two streams were united to enlarge a mill privilege. The inhabitants agreed, as an inducement, to allow him to take three quarts of corn as toll for grinding a bushel instead of two, as provided by law. This monopoly continued over thirty years, until my father, Aaron Hobart, who inherited the mills and privilege, relinquished it in the Revolutionary war, as stated before.

This work, for that day, was a great undertaking, and its accomplishment by a farmer, with limited means, shows great energy and perseverance of character. This tunnel, so far as I know, was the first dug in this country, and it has been continued to be used to this day with but very little repairs. There have been important results from the construction of this tunnel. Except for the union of the two streams the present extensive works for making tacks, brads, shoe-nails, and many other useful articles would probably never have been established. My honored grandfather, who emigrated to this town over one hundred and forty years ago, little thought when he was doing this work that he was laying the foundation of so great an establishment in the days of one of his grandsons, the writer of this article.

Another one of the same name, Col. Aaron Hobart, my honored father, requires some notice, not, as I have said above (of my grandfather), because he was my father, but because he was a noted man in his day, and did honor to the town. It has already been stated in a previous chapter that he was the first, or one of the first, who cast meeting-house bells in this country. About the year 1769, in an advertisement of his in a Boston newspaper, he offered his services in casting bells at his furnace in Abington. The editor of the paper in a note remarked, "that it was a very fortunate circumstance that bells could now be cast in this country, and that we need not be obliged to send to England for them."

Another important manufacture of his was the casting of cannon in this town. He was the first person who cast them in this country. This honor has been claimed for the town of Bridgewater before its division. William Allen, Esq., who has been a representative from the town of East Bridgewater, claimed this in a statement in a public paper, but it was satisfactorily answered in the same paper that he was mistaken. Col. Aaron Hobart, of Abington, was the first person who cast them in this country.

After continuing the business for a number of years very successfully and profitably, he sold the establishment to the State, and the late Col. Hugh Orr, of Bridgewater (now East Bridgewater), was employed to continue the business in that town. This probably caused Mr. Allen's mistake. His effort to prove that the first cannon was cast at Bridgewater shows, however, that he considered such an event an honor to a town.

Col. Hobart in his day was a very active business man. He was the owner of several forges for making bar-iron and iron shapes, and a blast furnace for casting hollow-ware and cannon-balls. He was also the owner of land in Maine (eighteen thousand acres), on which he settled two of his sons (Nathaniel and Isaac), and built two saw-mills and a grist-mill. The town is now called "Edmund," after the given name of his ancestor, Edmund Hobart, who settled in Hingham in 1634. The town is situated in Washington County. His descendants are quite numerous, among whom the mills, which he built nearly one hundred years ago, are still owned.

<sup>1</sup> Hobart's "History of Abington."

Woodbridge Brown, Esq., a descendant of the Rev. Samuel Brown, the first minister settled in town, was a very noted character, and held many offices of honor and trust, as stated in previous chapters. He represented the town in the State Legislature fifteen years, from 1759 to 1776. He was a member of the Plymouth County Congress in 1774, delegate to the Convention at Boston in 1768, to the Provincial Congress at Salem in 1774, to the Second Provincial Congress at Cambridge in 1775, and to the Third, held at Watertown, July 31, 1775. He held the office of town clerk and treasurer twenty-one years, from 1756 to 1777. He was one of the selectmen eleven years, from 1775.

Jacob Smith was a noted character in his day; he lived in East Abington; was one of the selectmen eleven years, from 1780; represented the town in the State Legislature five years in succession, from 1787, and took a very active part in town affairs. He left several children. Three of his sons—James, Theodore, and Zenas—were noted men in the town. James was an active man in East Abington, and deacon of the Congregational Church there. Theodore lived, also, in that section, on the place which was his father's; he was a patriot in politics. Zenas lived in North Abington; he was for a number of years captain of the artillery company. There were several daughters also, who were quite distinguished for their personal appearance, manners, and education.

Daniel Lane, Jr., was a very efficient man in town affairs; he lived in East Abington; was one of the selectmen thirteen years, from 1794; was moderator in town meetings for many years, and held the commission of a justice of the peace. He left several children, and his descendants are quite numerous.

Josiah Torrey, who held the office of a deacon in the Second Congregational Society for many years, was a very worthy character. He resided in the easterly part of South Abington.

Nathan Gurney, Jr., was a very useful man in all town affairs. In his early days he taught in the public schools for a number of years. He served as one of the selectmen, from 1799, twenty-four years, twenty-two of them in succession; was moderator in town-meetings for a great number of years; represented the town in the State Legislature ten years. He was one of the delegates from this town, Nov. 15, 1820, to revise the Constitution of the commonwealth. Mr. Gurney removed to Boston before 1830; was a member of the Board of Aldermen, and was a member of the Senate for the county of Suffolk.

The following extracts of some of the votes passed by the town in former times are given as specimens of the extreme care which the inhabitants took in all matters that affected their interests, not even omitting to notice fashions and dress, and in some cases assuming the powers of legislation, and passing by-laws for the enforcement of their votes, with fines for neglect to obey and rewards for obedience:

5th March, 1716. Voted, "That every man sixteen years old and upwards shall kill twelve blackbirds, or pay two shillings to the town charge more than their part."

2d March, 1724. Voted, "That the Drinkwater people shall have liberty to make a Pound upon their own cost, and Isaac Hatch was chosen keeper of said Pound."

5th Sept., 1726. "Lieut. William Reed, Matthew Pratt, Edward Bates, and Samuel Noyes were chosen a committee to draw up objections in answer to the Drinkwater people's petition to draw off from them." And it was voted that "Matthew Pratt and Samuel Noyes should carry the answer to the court."

17th Nov., 1735. Voted, "To send a petition to the General Court, that we may be eased upon the Province taxes." The petition was presented and a resolve passed thereon.

13th Jan., 1736. "That the sum of £32 16s. be granted and paid out of the public treasury to the Selectmen of Abington, to reimburse the like sum they had paid as a fine for not sending a Representative, anno, 1734, and what they were overcharged in the Province tax."

7th March, 1737. Voted, "That any person that shall kill any grown wild-cat this year within our town shall have 20s."

26th May, 1746. The town voted off "a part of their township to a number of petitioners." The part taken off was at the south end of the town. It was annexed to the corners of four of the neighboring towns, to form what was for many years called Tunk Parish, in Pembroke, now Hanson.

25th May, 1775. Voted, "That it was an indecent way that the female sex do sit in their hats and bonnets, to worship God in his house," and offensive to many of the good people of this town.

11th Feb., 1777. The currency of the country being in a state of rapid depreciation, the town agreed on the prices of labor, provisions, and various articles of merchandise. A list is on record.

29th May, 1780. The town voted their acceptance of the constitution agreed on by the convention, but were for so modifying the third article in the bill of rights as to allow every one to pay his money for the support of public worship where he attended. They were also for limiting the number of counselors and senators to thirty-four.

9th June, 1788. Voted, "That no person shall set up any cake or cakes, or anything in imitation of cakes, or throw any stones or sticks at them, within half a mile of the meeting-house each way on the public road, or on the green near the meeting-house. Any person so offending shall pay a fine of 5s. for the use of the town."

14th Jan., 1793. Mr. Niles, Col. Hobart, and Mr. Jacob Dyer were appointed a committee to prepare instructions to the representative against the repeal of the then law against theatrical exhibitions.

1st April, 1793. Voted, "That all persons that suffer their dog or dogs to go to meeting, at the meeting-house, when the people assemble for public worship, shall pay the same fine as is provided for breach of the Sabbath."

11th March, 1805. Voted, "To divide the town of Abington into two separate towns." Sixty-eight in favor of a division and forty-seven against it. At the same time a committee of five were appointed to run the dividing line.

6th April, 1807. The town refused to "vote off Aaron Hobart and others as a separate religious society in the south part of the town," and appointed Daniel Lane, Jr., and John King, Esq., agents to attend the Legislature and oppose their petition to be set off.

15th of Sept., 1812. The town adopted a preamble and resolves, reported by a committee, relative to the war then recently declared against Great Britain. In these the war, which had been waged against "paper blockades," in derogation of our rights as a neutral nation, and against the British claim of a right to impress her own seamen out of American vessels on the ocean, and her practice, under that claim, of impressing naturalized and native American citizens, was declared to be both just and necessary. The town pledged their support in carrying it on, inculcated obedience to the Constitution and to the laws of the land, deprecated all opposition to the war in the shape of mobs, and all measures that tended in any way to destroy the union of the States.

9th March, 1835. Voted, "To build a house to hold future town meetings in." Subsequently it was agreed to build the house on a half acre of land, given by Capt. Thomas Hunt, and situated on the northerly side of the road, near Jesse Dunham's. The cost of the house was about three thousand dollars.

Physicians in Abington from the Earliest Times.<sup>1</sup>—The first who practiced medicine in this town was the Rev. Samuel Brown, who came here in the year 1713, and, as was usual at that time, dispensed to the spiritual and physical wants of his parishioners. He lived in a small house about six or eight rods east from the old brick tavern building at Centre Abington. He died Sept. 12, 1749, aged sixty-two.

Dr. David Jones came here probably about the year 1750. He lived in what was called the old Moses Reed house. It is not known where he originated nor precisely when he settled here. He was chosen one of the selectmen in 1760, and served in that capacity for six years. In that year (1760) he was chosen by the town to purchase a bell of about six hundred pounds weight. In 1774 he was chosen a delegate from this town to attend a county congress, which met at Plympton, Sept. 26, 1774, where all the towns in the county were represented. At that convention he was chosen one of the committee to report resolves on the oppressive acts of the British Parliament and the rights of the colony. These resolves have been highly spoken of as timely, able, and spirited. He was chosen also a delegate to the First Provincial Congress at Salem, Oct. 5, 1774; and also to the Third at Watertown, July 31, 1775. He was a delegate to the convention at Cambridge, in September, 1779, to form a State Constitution. Besides these he held other important offices.

Dr. David Jones, Jr., son of the above-named Dr. Jones, practiced in town for a year or two, about 1775. He had a hospital for smallpox patients. He lived in the old Maj. John Cushing house, about one-half mile south of the North Abington meeting-house. He afterwards moved to North Yarmouth, Me. He served for a time as a surgeon in the Revolutionary war.

Dr. Adams resided in Abington in or about the year 1778 or 1779.

Dr. Richard Briggs resided in Abington, and practiced as a physician about 1780. He was a surgeon on board a public ship in the war of independence. He was in quite extensive practice in this town for nearly thirty years, and removed to the town of Chesterfield, county of Hampshire, about 1812. He was a man well informed, had great conversational powers, and his friends and supporters were very much attached to him, and he to them. He was contemporary with Dr. Gridley Thaxter during almost his whole residence in town. He was chosen town clerk in 1799.

Dr. Gridley Thaxter, son of Samuel and Abigail Smith Thaxter, born in Hingham, April 9, 1756, at the age of twenty years engaged as surgeon in the privateer "Speedwell," Capt. Jonathan Greeley, and sailed from Boston in the year 1776. He continued in her till 1778.

In 1779 he sailed with Capt. David Ropes, of Salem, in the brig "Wild Cat," taking a number of prizes, the last a schooner of fourteen guns, in the harbor of Halifax. They were unable to retain the schooner, the enemy having sent from town a schooner, brig, and two sloops, which recaptured her. The following night they were taken prisoners by the frigate "Surprise," and Dr. Thaxter remained on the prison-ship about three months. He was then taken to Halifax, where he remained about a month, when he was exchanged and came to Boston. In the spring of 1780 he sailed with Capt. William Patten, Jr., of Salem, in the brig "Warrior," fourteen guns, and was taken in the month of May by the sloop-of-war "Captain Ingalls," carried to New York, kept aboard the prison-ship three weeks, and the remainder of the time, while prisoner, was boarded in the town of Jamaica. When released, he came to Boston with Maj. Hopkins, and without returning to his native place, or seeing his friends, he engaged on board the State ship "Mars," Capt. Simeon Sampson, and remained as surgeon till the year 1781. He married a daughter of Gen. Benjamin Lincoln, of Hingham, who served in the Revolutionary war.

<sup>1</sup> F. F. Forsaith, M.D., of Weymouth, has assisted in the preparation of this list.

He moved from Hingham to Abington in the year 1783, hired a part of Rev. Samuel Niles' house, and afterwards bought the Dr. Jones farm. About the year 1797 he bought a farm of Mr. Jonathan Nash, and built a house the following year, which he occupied till his decease, Feb. 13, 1845.

"Dr. Ezekiel Thaxter, son of the above Dr. Gridley Thaxter, was born in Abington, July 22, 1787. He was fitted for college at Hingham Academy. After completing his collegiate course he studied medicine under the instruction of John C. Warren, of Boston. He received his medical diploma in 1815, and immediately commenced practice with his father in Abington. He was very successful as a physician, and at the present day is remembered with affection by a large number of the residents of the town. For the last two or three years of his life he was able to practice but little, having suffered from paralysis. In 1821 he was chosen town clerk, and held the office until 1832. He was a kind and affectionate father, a worthy and estimable citizen. He died Oct. 11, 1856, aged sixty-nine years.

"Dr. Richards came to town about the year 1806, and in addition to his practice was engaged in manufacturing cloths, in 1812, in company with a Mr. Tirrell, of Boston.

"Dr. John Champney came to Abington in the year 1827. He was introduced by Dr. Sawin, of East Bridgewater, and purchased the situation owned by Dr. Sawin just before his death, in 1821. When he removed to Abington, in 1827, he occupied the house on South Avenue once owned by Aaron Hobart, Jr., Esq. He was in the United States service in the war of 1812, and died in 1857.

"Dr. Alonzo Chapin came to East Abington about 1840, and continued in practice there for nearly ten years.

"Dr. John S. Curtis came to South Abington in the summer of 1844, and remained in practice there for two years.

"Dr. Edmund Edmonston succeeded him in the same part of the town, and remained about the same length of time.

"Dr. Albion P. Chase came to South Abington in 1848. After boarding for a time, he was married to Deborah, daughter of Rev. F. P. Howland, and resided in a house on South Avenue. In the spring of 1855 he sold out and removed to Portland, Me.

"Dr. Charles A. King came to Centre Abington in the autumn of 1848, and continued in practice there till his death, Sept. 19, 1852.

"Dr. F. A. Jewett came to North Abington in the spring of 1850. In the autumn of the same year he moved to Centre Abington, and remained in practice there till May, 1859, when he removed to Shrewsbury.

"Dr. J. M. Underwood came to East Abington in the year 1848, and continued in practice until Jan. 30, 1871, when he suddenly died.

"Dr. D. W. Briggs, homœopathic physician, came to Abington in the autumn of 1849. He continued in practice till the spring of 1858, when he relinquished his practice to Dr. J. L. Hunt, who remained but a short time. Dr. Briggs, with his family, removed to Gardner, Me.

"Dr. Asa Millet came to Centre Abington from East Bridgewater, Dec. 22, 1854, and later returned again to East Bridgewater, where he now continues in practice.

"Dr. Nelson B. Tanner came to East Abington May 9, 1854, and remained there till August of the same year, when he removed to North Abington, where he still remains.

"Dr. F. F. Forsaith succeeded Dr. A. P. Chase in his practice April 9, 1858, and is now located in Weymouth Landing.

"Dr. Charles H. Haskell commenced practice in South Abington April 19, 1858, where he remained until his death.

"Dr. J. F. Harris, homœopathist, succeeded Dr. Hunt in May, 1859."

Dr. C. F. Robinson succeeded Dr. Forsaith in South Abington Feb. 3, 1862, and shortly after removed to East Boston, where he died.

Dr. Henry W. Dudley came to Centre Abington, in April, 1864, and succeeded Dr. Asa Millet in practice.

Dr. Nelson B. Tanner, Jr., opened an office in South Abington in 1864, and was in practice a short time only.

Dr. Benjamin F. Hastings opened an office in East Abington in 1865, and soon removed to South Abington, where he still resides.

The physicians now practicing in Abington are Edward P. Adams, Silas B. Dickerman, and Henry W. Dudley in Centre Abington, and Nelson B. Tanner and George F. Wheatley in North Abington.

Civil History.—The town has now been incorporated about one hundred and seventy-five years. The first town-meeting was held March 3, 1713, at which meeting the following town officers were chosen: "William Hersey, moderator; William Hersey, William Tirrell, and William Reed, selectmen; William Reed, town clerk; James Nash, town treasurer; Joseph Josselyn, constable; Edmund Jackson and Nicholas Porter, surveyors of highways;

Ebenezer Whitmarsh and Edward Bates, fence-viewers."

The selectmen were generally, if not without exception, assessors. To avoid repetition their names are given the first year they were chosen and the number of years they served, without noticing the yearly changes :

	Years.		Years.
1713. William Hersey.....	2	1786. Edward Cobb.....	1
1713. William Tirrell.....	2	1790. Josiah Torrey.....	4
1713. William Reed.....	10	1792. Benjamin Thaxter... 1
1714. Samuel Porter.....	3	1793. Nathaniel Hewe.....	1
1714. Edmund Jackson....	1	1794. Ephraim Noyes.....	6
1715. Andrew Ford.....	1	1794. David Lane, Jr.....	13
1715. Edward Bates.....	10	1798. Samnel Norton.....	12
1716. Samuel French.....	7	1799. Noah Ford.....	1
1716. James Nash.....	2	1799. Nathan Gurney, Jr. 24
1718. Nicholas Noyes.....	1	1806. William Wales.....	10
1718. Samuel Pool.....	6	1813. Micah Pool.....	11
1719. Joseph Jesselyn.....	1	1816. James Bates.....	12
1719. Samuel Noyes.....	1	1819. Jared Whitman.....	9
1720. Joseph Lincoln.....	2	1821. John Cushing.....	9
1720. Hezekiah Ford.....	1	1824. David Beal.....	17
1721. Edmund Jackson....	3	1830. Asaph Dunbar.....	1
1723. James Nash.....	1	1833. Joseph Cleverly.....	9
1728. Matthew Pratt.....	1	1833. Spencer Vining.....	7
1728. Jacob Reed.....	8	1840. Nathan Beal.....	2
1729. Joshua Shaw.....	11	1842. Isaac Hersey.....	9
1729. Samuel Jackson....	3	1842. William W. Cushing. 1
1730. Samuel Reed.....	2	1843. William Benney.....	1
1730. Thomas Tirrell.....	1	1844. Joshua Whitmarsh... 1
1733. Christopher Dyer....	4	1844. Goddard Reed.....	1
1734. Nicholas Shaw.....	3	1845. Zenas Jenkins (2d)... 6
1735. Ebenezer Bates.....	1	1845. Lysander Cushing... 1
1735. Obadiah Reed.....	8	1846. Stetson Vaughn.....	1
1736. Jacob Perter.....	3	1847. Davis Gurney.....	3
1737. Joseph Hersey.....	4	1850. William P. Corthell. 6
1739. Jehn Noyes.....	12	1851. Samnel Reed, Jr.....	1
1740. Ephraim Spooner... 8		1852. Nathan S. Jenkins... 4
1744. Daniel Reed.....	15	1852. Jehn N. Noyes.....	3
1752. Nathaniel Pratt.....	1	1855. Sylvanns Nash.....	1
1755. Weedbridge Brewn. 11		1856. Marcus Reed.....	9
1756. Samuel Nerten.....	8	1856. Joseph Wilkes.....	1
1758. Samnel Pool.....	6	1856. Micah H. Pool.....	2
1760. David Jenes.....	6	1857. Henry A. Noyes.....	5
1763. Jesiah Torrey.....	10	1858. Samuel V. Leud.....	2
1771. William Reed, Jr... 4		1860. Zenas Jenkins.....	5
1772. Samuel Brown.....	5	1860. William Brown.....	1
1775. Joshua Howe.....	5	1861. Samuel B. Thaxter... 2
1775. Benjamin Bates, Jr. 3		1861. Marcus Reed.....	15
1775. Joshua Shaw.....	3	1861. William Brown.....	1
1778. Daniel Reed.....	2	1862. William Thaxter... 2
1780. Daniel Shaw.....	2	1862. Zenas Jenkins.....	6
1780. Jacob Smith.....	11	1864. Henry A. Noyes.....	25
1783. Jacob Pool.....	10	1868. Brainard Cushing... 1
1785. Luke Bieknell.....	1	1869. Charles W. Soule.... 3
1786. Jacob Dyer.....	1	1872. E. R. Studley.....	1
1786. Thomas Reed.....	1	1875. Jenathan Arnold.... 1

The following is a list of the present town officers :

George A. Beal, clerk and treasurer ; Henry A. Noyes, Joseph L. Greenwood, George M. Nash, selectmen ; Henry A. Noyes, Augustus H. Wright, George B. Merrill, road commissioners ; Dr. Silus B. Diekerman, Elbridge Sprague, Otis W. Soule, school committee ; Rev. Horace W. Wright, Albert Chamberlain, Mrs. Helen A. Gleason, Mrs. Alice A. Richardson, Webster S. Wales, George A. Beal, Hon. Henry B. Pierce, Miss Mary A. Wright, Mrs. Georgiana S. Reed, trustees of Public Library ; Josiah Cushman, Harvey B. Russell, John A. Floyd, Thomas E. Keon, Seth W. Bennett, Jr., Elliot W. Ford, constables.

Roads.—Before the incorporation of the town two county roads were laid out through the territory composing it, one leading from Middleboro' through Bridgewater (now East Bridgewater), Washington Street in Abington, passing by the South and Centre meeting-houses in Abington to Weymouth,—to meet a road leading to Boston. This was in 1690. The other from Plymouth, through Pembroke (now Hanson) by the Indian Head River Pond into Abington by Plymouth Street (formerly called Back Street), passing by the way that leads to Little Comfort (now South Abington) about a mile to the eastward of Hersey's saw-mill, which stood near the present location of the Old Colony Railroad Depot, to Weymouth. This was in 1707. In 1845, when the Old Colony Railway was built, roads were constructed extending to the stations, and as the population increased new roads were made to connect with these until we have the present system of highways, many of which have level sidewalks, shaded by beautiful trees. The streets of Abington and Rockland are proverbial for their smoothness and hardness, and invariably call forth words of commendation from strangers and visitors. Abington has at the present time about forty miles of highway.

Population.—The population of Abington, according to the best means of ascertaining it, was, in 1726 (fourteen years after its incorporation), 371 ; but we have no reliable means of ascertaining it every ten years, that I know of, until the United States census in 1790. It was then 1453 ; in 1800, 1625 ; 1810, 1704 ; 1820, 1920 ; 1830, 2423 ; 1840, 3144 ; 1850, 5269 ; 1855 (five years), 6936. From this it appears that for the sixty-four years, from 1726 to 1790, the increase of the population of this town was 1082 ; from 1790 to 1800, 176 ; 1800 to 1810, 81 ; 1810 to 1820, 216 ; 1820 to 1830, 503 ; 1830 to 1840, 721 ; 1840 to 1850, 2125 ; 1850 to 1855 (five years), 1667. In 1860 the population was 8527 ; in 1870 it was 9308, and at the present time is 4000.

By the above we see a very slow increase of the population of the town for sixty-four years, 1726 to 1790,—only 1082,—17 yearly, and 165 for every ten years ; and also from 1790 to 1820 (thirty years), 467 ; averaging 16 yearly, and 150 every ten years ; less yearly than the sixty-four previous. The increase the next ten years, from 1820 to 1830, was more than the thirty years previous, it being 503. The increase the next ten years, from 1830 to 1840, was truly surprising, it being 721 ; the increase from 1840 to 1850 was much more so, viz., 2125 ; but from 1850 to 1855 (five years) it almost exceeded belief, being 1667. The population of the towns comprising the original town of Abington is 12,500. It will be observed that the population has nearly doubled since 1855.

Valuation.—Without going farther back than 1825 (and we have no date beyond that to compare), which was one hundred and eleven years after its incorporation, the town's valuation stood $414,916; in 1831, $453,289; in 1835, $488,549; 1839, $529,714; 1845, $1,223,931; 1850, $1,767,163; 1855, $2,942,382; 1858, $3,186,579; in 1860, $3,279,465; in 1870, $4,207,102; and in 1883, $1,849,350. The valuation at the present time of the three towns constituting the original town of Abington is $6,274,030. It will be observed that the valuation has increased at a considerably greater ratio than the population, and this would indicate, what is doubtless true, that the people of the day earn more money, have better food, wear better clothing, live in more comfortable houses, and have more of the necessities and luxuries of life than in 1855.

Polls.—The increase in the number of polls until the town was divided has kept pace in accordance with the increase of population and valuation. In 1825 there were 406; in 1831, 578; 1835, 703; 1839, 789; 1845, 1040; 1850, 1489; 1855, 1835; 1858, 2097; 1860, 2210; 1865, 2279; in 1870, 2619; and in 1884, 1136. The number of polls in 1870 were 2587; at present, 1136; in the three towns, 3511.

Schools.—In 1732 the first school-house in town was built. It stood near the Centre meeting-house, and was the only one in town until 1755, twenty-three years after the first one was built. Previous to this, in 1724, Mr. Samuel Porter was paid twenty dollars for keeping school. It must have been in some private room, and probably such a school was continued until the first school-house was built, and after that in the first school-house, and otherwise; for it was frequently kept in different parts of the town, to equalize the travel, until the town was divided into five districts, in 1755. There was a law passed in 1789, requiring towns of two hundred families to keep a grammar school twelve months in each year, in which the Latin and Greek languages should be taught by a master, qualified for the purpose. This school was kept alternately in each of the five districts three months in each year. How the law was answered or evaded in keeping three months in a year instead of twelve I am not aware. It was considered as an arbitrary law. Its object was to prepare students for entering college at the public expense. It was kept as the winter schools usually were, only the master must be qualified to teach the languages, but few were prepared for entering college in this way; but it helped the common schools, as it furnished better teachers.

In 1794, thirty-nine years after the first districting

(in 1755), the districts were increased to eight, with some provision to aid families in the outskirts of the town, by granting to them a portion of the money raised for schooling. In 1822 eleven districts were made by bounds on the roads. In 1847 the eleven school districts were defined by lines, with metes and bounds, making some slight alterations from 1822. This was done to make definite the bounds of districts for the convenience of local taxation. In 1853 the district system in this town was abolished; the regulation and superintendence of all the schools were assumed by the town; new school-houses were built, the district school-houses being paid for by the town.

The following sums have been raised at different times for schooling, and divided among the districts. Sometimes each district had an equal part, and at other times a part according to the number of polls, or the taxes paid by the inhabitants of the districts; sometimes by one-half being divided equally among the districts, and the other half according to the number of scholars in each; changing almost every year, and often very unequally divided. In 1755, when the town was divided into five districts, the sum raised for schooling was only eighty-nine dollars; this, if divided equally among the districts, would give to each only $17.80. This continued to be the amount raised until 1765 (ten years), when the amount was increased to $133.33, and this continued so for twenty years,—being $26.66 to each district. In 1785 the amount was $286.66; to each district $57.35. This was the rate for ten years, until 1795, when it stood at $466.66. Without naming the division, it will only be necessary to name the sum raised at each change, for the same sum was continued to be raised from one change to another. In 1805 it was $833.33; in 1859, $7000. The amount expended the last year in the three towns was nearly twenty-five thousand dollars.

Jonathan Arnold, Samuel Dyer, and Lewis E. Noyes have done much in years past for the schools within the limits of the old town. Mr. Arnold in his early life taught many years in Abington and Kingston. Hon. B. W. Harris, Judge Keith, and Mr. Arnold were engaged in teaching in Kingston at the same time. He was a member of the school board of Abington for some years, and did much to improve the schools. He recommended that the town establish one high school, four grammar schools, ten intermediate, and as many primary as might be necessary. To his surprise the recommendation was carried out, and this marked the dawn of a new era in the school history of the town. Besides acting in other official capacities in his native town, Mr. Arnold has served in the Legislature.

Mr. Samuel Dyer has been on the school board of Abington and South Abington for twenty-four years, and is still acting in that capacity.

Mr. Lewis E. Noyes was a member for six years, and, like James H. Gleason, who has done much for the schools of the town, brought to the office those valuable qualities that result from the practical work of the live teacher in the school-room.

The schools of Abington will compare favorably with those of other towns in the county, Hingham alone excepted, which is the "banner" town of Plymouth County so far as public schools are concerned. The schools of Abington, especially in the lower grades, have been much improved during the past few years, but there is still a wide margin for improvement. Skilled supervision, and a deeper professional enthusiasm on the part of the teachers, are the two elements specially needed at the present time. What has been said concerning the schools of Abington is equally applicable to Rockland and South Abington.

The high-school house-lot at North Abington is the finest in town. The circumstances concerning its purchase are worth recording.

During the fall and winter of 1865 it became evident that additional school accommodations must be provided for North Abington, and a recommendation was made by the school committee to the town in March, 1866, that land be purchased and a new building erected. The town voted according to the recommendation. The only lot which could be had of sufficient size was the lot owned by Elbridge Sprague, Esq. After a protracted negotiation he offered to sell for five hundred dollars. Two days later he thought the sum was too small, and wanted fifty dollars additional. The committee, knowing that it would be a splendid bargain for the town, even at that additional price, accepted his final offer at once, and the lot became the property of the town.

The following is a list of the present school committee and teachers:

Elbridge Sprague, Otis W. Soule, Silas B. Dickerman, committee; George L. Richardson, George E. Wales, Abbie H. Jones, Anna Tolman, Amy L. Edgerly, Maurice J. O'Brien, Isabelle Holbrook, Emma A. Randall, Eliza F. Dolan, Mary A. King, Abbie M. Kelley, Helen D. Hayward, Mary F. Hayward, Louie H. Ridgway, Julia A. Haynes, Susan A. O'Brien, Sarah A. King, Hattie L. Davis, Lurana Ford, teachers.

The Boot and Shoe Business in this town took its rise in the early part of the present century. The following census returns of 1860 are given, so that the reader may make a comparison with the business done at the present time, as given under Rockland, Abington, and South Abington:

J. Cleverly & Co., boots, calf and grain, and brogans..	$27,700
Willey & Floyd, boots, congress, lace, and Oxford shoes ..	7,436
Henry Dunham, shoes, light brogans, cloth and Oxford ties.....	15,000
Jeremiah Towle, women's shoes and buckskin, etc....	5,500
Gilbert & Hunt, boots and shoes.....	4,000
J. F. Bigelow, boots, congress, Oxford ties, and strap shoes.....	75,000
W. S. Wales, boots, grain and calf.....	36,000
S. Vining & Son, brogans.....	14,735
C. L. Dunham, hoots, shoes, and brogans.....	45,000
L. T. Harden, shoes, calf .....	8,000
Fuller & Blanchard, boots and shoes.....	30,000
Abner Curtis, shoa and brogans.....	100,000
Turner Reed, shoes, boys', youtbs', and children's.....	7,500
Josiah Soule, Jr., shoes.....	20,000
C. L. Brown, boots and shoes, congress, Oxford ties, etc.....	17,000
L. Faxon & Co., boots and shoes, men's, women's, and boys'.....	62,000
George Studley, boots and shoes.....	25,000
George C. Reynolds, shoes, congress, English lace, and Oxford ties.....	16,327
Samuel Norton, hoots and shoes.....	31,250
Sammel Reed, Jr., congress and Oxford .....	25,000
Isaac Pollard, brogans and Oxford ties.....	8,000
Hovey, Arnold & Co., boots and shoes, congress and Oxford tiea.....	74,742
Levi Reed, hoots and shoes, congress, hunters', Oxford, etc.....	20,000
Whitmarsh Bros., boots and shoes.....	50,000
Beal & Francis, boots and shoes, congress, brogans, and Oxford.....	89,940
L. G. Damon, Thomas & Co., boots and shoa, congress, etc.....	14,100
M. & G. T. Nash, boots and shoa, congress, hunters', etc.....	30,723
I. & N. S. Jenkins, boots, Oxford ties and brogans.....	26,617
Jenkins & Tirrell, boots, congress and Scotch, Oxford ties and strap.....	11,757
Albert Chamberlain, shoes and moccasins .....	30,325
Brown & Goodwin, gaiter boots and Oxford ties.....	35,568
Franklin Smith, boots, brogans, and Oxford ties.....	7,983
Leander Curtis, congress, boots, and brogans.....	7,200
Melvin Shaw, boots and shoes.....	33,075
E. R. Rand, brogans, men's, boys', and youths'.....	8,000
J. L. Hobart, boots and shoes, men's, boys', youths', etc.....	30,454
William L. Reed, boots and shoes.....	75,000
T. & J. B. Clement, boots and shoes, congress, Oxford ties and strap.....	90,000
Joseph Dill, boots and shoes, congress, Oxford, brogans, etc.....	91,000
George W. Pratt, boots, calf, etc.....	5,200
J. Vaughn & Hersey, brogans.....	52,000
Jacob Whiting, congress boots, Oxford ties, and lace shoes.....	22,000
James Whitmarsh, hunters' boots.....	7,500
E. G. Sharp, congress boots .....	4,100
C. W. Forbush & Co., congress boots, Oxford ties, and brogans .....	40,000
B. L. Hunt, boots, hunters' and congress Scotch ties, etc.....	40,000
William P. Corthell, shoes.....	6,000
Sumner Shaw, congress boots and shoa.....	42,560
I. F. Lowell, congress boots and shoes.....	16,500
Nathaniel Beal, congress boots, hunters', and brogans	39,435
Hunt & Lane, long boots, congress, lace, and shoes...	111,250
Jenkins, Lane & Son, shoes of all kinds.....	225,000
Alden S. Loud, long boots, congress, lace, Oxford ties, etc.....	26,372
Ira Noyes, calf boots.....	8,700
Henry Cushing, California boots.....	25,000
H. G. Cushing, calf boots.....	13,500
Luke B. Noyes, shoa, brogans, boys', youths', etc.....	15,000
Charles H. Dill, congress boots and Oxford ties.....	17,040

Charles W. Torrey, congress and lace boots, and Oxford ties.....	$7,200
E. V. & L. F. Wheeler, congress, lace, and Oxford ties	8,600
Gridley Hunt, lace boots, Oxford ties, and brogans....	3,750
Daniel W. Beal, Oxford ties and brogans.....	12,000
Winslow Jackson, calf boots.....	5,570
Jacob Shaw, boots.....	7,800
S. Coles, Jr., shoes.....	16,000
Albert Whitmarsh, boots and shoes.....	40,000
Joshua Curtis, boots and shoes.....	4,800
Eliab M. Noyes, long boots and brogans.....	12,100
Davis H. Cook, shoes.....	3,625
A. L. Mayhew, long boots and shoes.....	24,755
Nahum Reed, boots and shoes.....	46,500
Davis Gurney, long and congress boots.....	67,040
A. & A. Alden, brogans and boots.....	14,689
William H. Capen, boots and shoes.....	6,285
John Wilkes, shoes.....	4,210
John Burrell, congress boots.....	10,800
John Curtis, Jr., congress boots, Oxford ties, and brogans.....	12,150
Jesse Reed, Jr., shoes, mens', boys', and youths', etc..	10,000
Bates & Bosworth, ladies' shoes.....	8,769
David F. Hunt, shoes.....	3,840
Micah H. Pool, Scotch and congress boots and Oxford ties.....	24,347
S. R. Wales, boots and shoes.....	85,000

Moccasin Manufacture.—The moccasin or overshoe business has quite an interesting history. We are indebted largely to Deacon Albert Chamberlin for the facts furnished.

The overshoe business was first commenced in this town by Maj. Joseph Hunt, in 1839 or 1840. Mr. John Chamberlin was employed by him to prepare the patterns and make the first overshoes from the buffalo-skin. They were rather rude-looking things, being cut somewhat like a short-legged boot, and sewed up with the hair inside, without any sole-leather sole. They proved to be very comfortable for riding, but were not very serviceable. They very soon began to put on leather foxings and a substantial sole-leather sole. They were made on iron-bottomed lasts, and nailed with copper nails, and then proved to be quite serviceable as well as comfortable in the coldest weather. The demand for them then began to increase very rapidly from year to year, so that it became almost impossible to supply it, the business then being carried on principally by Col. Thomas J. Hunt, a brother of Major Hunt. Mr. John Chamberlin was employed by him to take the stock and make the goods by contract, there being made at this time about thirty thousand pairs per year. The cutting and making was principally done by himself and sons. Mr. Chamberlin's sons soon made improvements in the goods and commenced the manufacture on a more extensive scale, giving employment to a large number of hands. In 1852, Mr. Albert Chamberlin made still further improvements by machine sewing, which had previously all been done by hand. In 1853 he received the highest premium at the fair of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics' Association held in Boston in that year.

A medal and a diploma were also awarded for the greatest improvement made, and for the best fur-lined boots, shoes, and overshoes.

The demand for these goods still increased, and many new firms went into the business in this and neighboring towns, using a great many thousand buffalo robes annually. The price for these robes had usually been two to four dollars apiece. The price then went up to fifteen dollars. In consequence of the great rise in robes the goods became too costly, and the demand fell off. The rubber arctic, which had formerly been much higher, could then be bought at a lower price than the buffalo overshoes. Besides, they looked much neater and were water-proof. So that at the present time, they almost entirely take the place of the old-fashioned moccasin.

Deacon Chamberlin has not been actively engaged in business for a dozen years or more. He has been a deacon in the Rockland Baptist Church for thirteen years, superintendent of the Sunday-school for sixteen years, is a trustee of the Abington Savings-Bank and Public Library, and served in the Legislature in 1869 and 1870, and is a native of Abington, where he has always resided.

Messrs. Cobb & Thompson began business June 10, 1865. It has increased until, at the present time, the value of the annual product amounts to two hundred and twenty thousand dollars. One hundred and sixty hands are employed. The factory is two hundred feet long by twenty-eight feet wide, with two wings.

Charles S. Loud commenced manufacturing boots and shoes in 1860, and continued until the spring of 1881, and employed from thirty to forty persons.

Thompson Brothers commenced business May 1, 1880. The annual product amounts to forty thousand dollars, and employs twenty hands.

S. C. Noyes employs fifteen hands, and the value of the annual production of boots and shoes is twenty-three thousand dollars.

S. S. Knapp employs about fifty hands.

Randall Richards employs thirty-five persons, and the value of the annual product amounts to fifty thousand dollars.

Lasts were first manufactured in Abington on a small scale in 1850, by Leonard P. Arnold and Capt. Bela Smith, who, not having machinery of their own, had their blocks turned at Chandler Sprague's last factory, North Bridgewater; but their business was brought to an abrupt close after a short life by those manufacturers who owned turning-machines entering into a combination with the patentee,—a Mr. Blanchard, of Boston,—whereby the manufacturers agreed not to turn any blocks and Mr. Blanchard not to sell any machines to outside parties, thus controlling the entire last business themselves. In 1856 one of the last manufacturers, having left the combination and moved his machines to Nova Scotia, began turning lasts for any one who wanted them; and taking advantage of this, Mr. A. P. Richardson began the business of again making lasts in Abington, and about Jan. 1, 1857, he sold out to Jesse H. Giles, and gave up the business. Mr. Giles, hiring Leonard P. Arnold as foreman, continued the business for two years, buying all his blocks already turned in Nova Scotia, but at the end of that time—some time in 1859—he succeeded in buying a turning-machine, the combination having broken, and from that time turned his own blocks. In 1860 he bought another machine, thus doubling his capacity for making lasts, and in 1865, his business having increased, he bought a third machine, which he kept running all the time until 1870, at which time he added another machine, making four turning-lathes in all. He manufactured upwards of thirty thousand pairs of lasts per year.

In the year 1876 the style of Jesse H. Giles was changed to J. H. Giles & Co., Leonard P. Arnold and Nathaniel W. Arnold entering the partnership, from which time business continued good, no change being made until April 1, 1881, when Jesse H. Giles retired from business, Leonard P. Arnold and Nathaniel W. Arnold continuing under the style of Arnold Brothers to the present, at which time they are now manufacturing about twenty thousand pairs of lasts each year, and give employment to eleven men, doing business on the same spot where it started in the factory then owned by D. B. Gurney, where they first hired one room in the second story, but now belonging to the J. H. Giles estate, Arnold Brothers occupying the whole of the first floor.

Abington Tack and Machine Association.—This business was started in 1874 by John Hyslop, Jr. In the year of 1876 the present company was formed under the name of the Abington Tack and Machine Association, with a capital of fifteen thousand dollars. It gives employment to thirty to forty hands.

The value of goods produced for the last year was about eighty thousand dollars. The goods are mostly those manufactured under the Hyslop patents, being fancy-head tacks and nails of all kinds, also all of the common kinds of tacks and shoe-nails.

The Insurance Business of the town of Abington dates back nearly half a century, the first business of this kind being done by Mr. John Nash, who was also town clerk and treasurer, and lived with his maiden sisters on Washington Street, near Hathery Hall, on the lot where now stands the mansion of the late Baxter Cobb, Esq. Mr. Nash was agent for the Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and also represented one or two other mutual companies; but beyond the insurance of the dwelling-houses very little was done. Mr. Nash was a man of careful habits and much respected by all who had any business relations with him, but in 1851 his failing health compelled him to seek recuperation in rest and change of climate.

In 1849, Rev. Freeman P. Howland, having been obliged by bronchial disability to relinquish preaching, removed from Hanson to Abington, and Mr. Nash secured his services to attend to his town and insurance business while he went on a journey, hoping change of air and scene might be beneficial to him. Mr. Nash, however, did not live to return, and Mr. Howland succeeded him in his business and official position, retaining the office of town clerk and treasurer for quite a number of years, and for more than a third of a century retaining (in connection with his sons, C. W. and I. C.) nearly the whole insurance business of the old town of Abington.

The Abington Mutual Fire Insurance Company was organized under the following circumstances: The Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, by its charter,—in which the greater part of the houses in Abington were insured,—was authorized to insure dwelling-houses, barns, and other buildings and household furniture, but did not insure stock in trade, hay, grain, farm produce, or merchandise contained in the buildings it insured. This company, in which nearly all desired to be insured, declined to write on more risks in the villages, as in case of a sweeping conflagration their loss must be very great, for the villages had become quite thickly settled. Hence the convenience and necessity of another insurance company were apparent.

The subject was presented to some of the business men of the town, and at a meeting of some of the citizens it was decided to apply to the Legislature for a charter for a company in Abington in which they could obtain insurance on buildings and their contents, including live-stock and personal property in general. The act of incorporation was secured and became a law May 30, 1856, chapter cex. of the acts of that year reading as follows :

“ Be it enacted, etc.

“SECTION 1. Asaph Dunbar, Joshua L. Nash, William Brown, and their associates and successors are hereby made a corporation by the name of the Abington Mutual Fire Insurance Company, to be established in the town of Abington, for the term of twenty-eight years, for the purpose of insuring dwelling-houses and other buildings and personal property against loss or damage by fire; with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties, liabilities, and restrictions set forth in the thirty-seventh and forty-fourth chapters of the Revised Statutes, and all other laws of this Commonwealth, made or to be made, relating to such corporations.

"SECTION 2. This act shall take effect from and after its passage."

Business was commenced in April, 1857, Baxter Cobb being elected president, and John Newton Noyes, secretary. The first board of directors consisted of Asaph Dunbar, Thomas J. Hunt, William Brown, Zophar D. Ramsdell, Baxter Cobb, Jenkins Lane, Washington Reed, Joseph Cleverly, and William P. Corthell.

Mr. Cobb was president of the company from the time it commenced business until his death, which occurred Jan. 28, 1877, and by his conservative management aided much in establishing the company as a successful organization. Upon his decease, Mr. Joseph Vaughn was elected his successor, and has ever since ably filled his position as presiding officer.

Mr. Noyes resigned his office as secretary and treasurer of the company July 25, 1862, and removed to Lawrence, Kansas, where he resided until his death, in 1883.

Rev. Mr. Howland was secured as his successor, and during his management of the company, from 1862 to 1882, the growth of the company may be judged from the following :

Amount at risk, 1862, $306,834; in 1882, $2,236,832.

Annual premium, 1862, $556; in 1882, $10,861.

Cash assets, 1862, $9.75; in 1882, $42,943.

Consecutive No. of policy, 1862, 817; in 1882, 12,197.

The business of the company was much benefited by its association with the agency of Mr. Howland, the greater part of its risks during his life being secured in that connection, people having confidence in a home institution managed by men whom they knew and respected, and in "Father" Howland, as quite a number had found themselves obliged to pay assessments in companies in which they had been induced to insure by traveling agents, who insured large amounts at low rates.

Mr. Howland remained its secretary and treasurer until his death, Aug. 10, 1882, at the advanced age of eighty-five years, having faithfully and successfully fulfilled the duties of his position until a few days before his decease.

Mr. Howland is succeeded in his duties in the company by his youngest son, Isaac C. Howland, Esq., who brings to the company's service a valuable experience in the insurance business, having been engaged in business with his father and brother in the firm of F. P. Howland & Sons for several years.

Associated with him as assistant secretary is Carlos P. Faunce, Esq., a young man whose efficient services as clerk in the insurance office of F. P. Howland & Sons for several years, and whose integrity of character are highly appreciated by the directors and all having business transactions with the company.

The present board of directors are Joseph Vaughn, William Brown, Joshua L. Nash, Z. N. Whitmarsh, Henry B. Peirce, J. N. Farrar, Albert Chamberlin, James F. Cox, William P. Corthell, Lyman Clark, Jedediah Dwelley, Charles W. Howland, and Isaac C. Howland.

The company has paid a dividend on every expiring policy, having passed successfully through the trying times of the several great conflagrations which crippled and swamped so many companies, and never has called for an assessment on its members, and now stands in the front rank as one of our best Mutual Fire Insurance Companies.

The Fire and Life Insurance Agency of F. P. Howland & Sons is continued by his sons, Charles W. Howland, whose real estate and insurance rooms are in "Standard Building," over the post-office in Rockland, and by Isaac C. Howland in the rooms of the Abington Mutual Fire Insurance Company in their new and elegant apartments in the Savings-Bank building in Abington Centre.

The East Abington Children's Progressive Lyceum was organized Oct. 10, 1869. Its membership was composed of Spiritualists and what is denominated the liberal element in religious thought of East Abington (now Rockland) and vicinity. While its fundamental idea was the Spiritualistic one, it asked no one to subscribe to a faith, and it sought to teach the utmost freedom of thought and expression upon all religious and theological questions.

For several years it succeeded in attracting a large membership. The first year the average number of scholars was one hundred and twenty-four, and the necessary officers and leaders, with quite a numerous audience of spectators and friends usually in attendance. The hard times which began in 1873, with other causes, greatly reduced the numbers and the contributions. It continued, however, with varying fortunes and success, to hold its regular meetings until the summer of 1883, when it suspended.

The Abington Bank was incorporated April 8, 1850, and the first meeting of its first stockholders was held August 5th of the same year, when an organization was effected, and a board of nine directors chosen. Subsequently, Asaph Dunbar, of Abington, was elected president, and J. N. Farrar, of Boston, cashier. The capital of the bank was one hundred thousand dollars, but in 1853 it was by vote of the stockholders increased to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. In July, 1865, it ceased to do business under the State laws, and reorganized under the United States laws, and became the Abington National Bank.

After serving as president nine years, Mr. Dunbar declined a re-election, and in 1859 Baxter Cobb, Esq., of Abington, was chosen president, and continued to hold that office until his death, in 1877, when Mr. Richmond J. Lane, of Rockland, was elected his successor, and has been annually re-elected since that time.

Mr. J. N. Farrar still occupies the position of cashier,—a position held by him ever since the organization of the bank in 1850. For a few years after its organization the bank occupied rooms in the building on the southwest corner of Washington and Bank Streets, now occupied by Mr. Yeaton as a dry-goods store. In 1853, finding more accommodation needed, the directors voted to erect a building on the east side of Washington Street suitable for banking purposes, with a tenement annexed for the cashier. In 1884 the Abington Savings-Bank having erected an elegant and commodious brick building on the corner of Washington Street and Centre Avenue with fire- and burglar-proof vaults and better accommodations for its increasing business, the National Bank removed to this location on July 4th.

The bank has a surplus of thirty thousand dollars, and its average deposits are about one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

The officers of the bank for 1884 are as follows: Richmond J. Lane, of Rockland, president; M. S. Stetson, of South Abington, Joseph Vaughn, of Abington, Z. N. Whitmarsh, of Abington, James F. Cox, of Abington, directors; J. N. Farrar, cashier; G. R. Farrar, teller.

The Abington Savings-Bank was organized April 18, 1853, with Ezekiel Thaxter, M.D., president, Zibeon Packard vice-president, and J. N. Farrar treasurer; and a board of fifteen trustees.

Dr. Thaxter remained in office until his death. In April, 1856, Jenkins Lane, Esq., of East Abington (now Rockland), was chosen president, and Asaph Dunbar vice-president. Mr. Lane died in 1870, whereupon Z. N. Whitmarsh, Esq., of Abington, was elected president, and Jesse H. Giles vice-president.

The officers for 1884 are as follows: Z. N. Whitmarsh, president; William Brown, vice-president; Trustees, William Brown, George A. Beal, William P. Corthell (of South Abington), James F. Cox, Samuel Dyer (of South Abington), Joseph L. Greenwood, Joshua L. Nash, Bela T. Nash, Henry A. Noyes, Otis W. Soule, Albert Chamberlin, Joseph Vaughn, Adoniram Vaughn, Z. N. Whitmarsh, John F. Wheeler; George A. Beal, clerk and treasurer.

This institution has paid regular semi-annual dividends from the commencement of its business, varying from four and a half per cent. per annum to six per cent. The present amount of deposits is one million two hundred thousand dollars, and the number of depositors two thousand nine hundred. Until the present year the savings-bank has occupied rooms in conjunction with the Abington National Bank, but finding need of greater facilities and more room for the transaction of its business, have now erected a substantial brick building upon the corner of Washington Street and Centre Avenue, to which place they removed July 4th.

The Press in Abington.—Prior to 1853 an attempt was made to establish a weekly paper in the town, but the effort proved futile, as only a few numbers were printed. During that year the Abington Standard was started at the Centre by C. G. Esterbrook, and continued there till 1865, when it was sold to Thomas S. Pratt, and removed to East Abington (now Rockland), where it is still published, under the title of the Rockland Standard. Mr. Pratt sold out to Edgar Merchant in December, 1867, and he in turn to J. S. Smith, the present proprietor, in the following March. Mr. Smith has taken special pains to make it a newsy local paper, to give all parties a fair hearing, and yet avoid burning controversies, and so by caution, care, and skillful judgment has been able to bring the paper to more than double its former circulation, which is now extended into all the surrounding towns.

In the fall of 1882 a department called the "North Abington Public" was started under the editorship of Rev. Jesse H. Jones and Linwood S. Pratt, of that village, which has been an important feature of the paper ever since. After a year Mr. Pratt retired, having been called to a lucrative position as teacher in the western part of the State.

In 1873 the Abington Journal was started at Abington by George F. Andrews, of Plymouth, and which still continues, after quite a checkered career, as the Plymouth County Journal. From Mr. Andrews it passed into the hands of Arthur P. Ford, who changed its name to the present form. From him it was taken by C. Franklin Davis. He in turn yielded it up to F. W. Rollins, from whom it went to Rev. L. B. Hatch. Under the management of Mr. Hatch it has had a good degree of prosperity, and still continues.

The South Abington Times was started about 1874 by J. W. McDonald, who some two years after sold out to Arthur A. Sherman. He in turn sold to Rev. L. B. Hatch, who now publishes it at the same office with the Plymouth County Journal, though the two are kept distinct.

For something less than a year—in 1878–79—Harvey H. Pratt published a paper at Abington called the Weekly News. Though a keen, bright, incisive paper, it failed for want of adequate support.

In the month of July, 1884, Mr. F. W. Rollins is starting a paper in South Abington and Abington.

Pilgrim Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F., was instituted by dispensation granted by the grand officers June 13, 1845. Aug. 7, 1845, a charter was granted to the following petitioners: Samuel D. Jones, L. Teague, J. B. Hutchinson, Asa Cook, Jr., Samuel Phinney, J. H. Case, H. Foster, J. S. Curtis, Absalom Osbourne, Samuel G. Capen. The lodge was located in a new hall on Temple Street, South Abington. In 1848 the lodge removed to Centre Abington, in a hall owned by James Whitmarsh, nearly opposite the Abington Bank. In 1859, between January and July, about fifty of the members took their withdrawal-cards. In August, 1859, the Noble Grand of the lodge, William R. Gilson, surrendered its charter, books, and papers to the Grand Master. During this time the lodge paid out about six hundred dollars for benefits and buried one member.

Feb. 2, 1871, a petition was presented to the Grand Lodge asking the return of the old charter of Pilgrim Lodge. This petition was granted, and on March 6, 1871, the grand officers reinstated Pilgrim Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F. The charter members were William R. Gilson, Samuel G. Capen, William Tribou, Lorenzo C. Gilson, and Cornelius Penniman. On the same evening three of the members of the old lodge, five from Mattakeset Lodge, No. 110, deposited their cards, and ten were initiated and took their degrees into the new lodge. The officers were: N. G., William R. Gilson; V. G., C. Penniman; Sec., William Vance; Treas., Charles Bennett. The lodge met in a hall owned by S. B. Thaxter, now the office of the Plymouth County Journal. Since then—in 1873—the lodge has purchased the old high school building, on Bank Street, and fitted it up as a nice hall. In February, 1877, about fourteen of the members took their cards and formed a new lodge in Rockland. In February, 1878, about eight took cards and formed a new lodge in Bridgewater. In February, 1883, about twenty-two took cards and formed a new lodge in South Abington.

Young Men's Catholic Lyceum Association.—At the invitation of Rev. M. J. Phelan several of the Abington Catholic young men assembled together on the afternoon of Feb. 10, 1878, to consider the matter of forming a literary association. Societies of this character had been established in St. Bridget's parish in previous years, but they had "flourished but to fade."

On the 24th of February, 1878, the Young Men's Catholic Lyceum Association was organized with the following board of officers: President, Patrick Jackson; Vice-President, John B. Smith; Secretary, John M. Hayes; Treasurer, T. F. Donahoe; Librarian, Francis E. Smith; Spiritual Director, Rev. M. J. Phelan. The hall opposite the Catholic Church was secured, and on February 27th the first literary exercises by the society were given. Two evenings in the week were set apart for debates, readings, and the transaction of the business of the association. The lyceum soon had a membership of forty, and was in a prosperous condition, which condition was mainly due to the untiring efforts of the spiritual director. After a time, hall-room becoming limited, the question of securing new headquarters was agitated. In April, 1880, a fair was held which netted one thousand and nine dollars to the association. On the 22d of the following July the society was incorporated. The first officers under the charter were: President, Matthew G. Smith; Vice-President, Francis E. Smith; Clerk, James H. O'Donnell; Treasurer, William J. Coughlan; Librarian, John M. Hayes. The "town house" was purchased, and fitted up at a great expense. In the upper part is Lyceum Hall, which is neatly furnished, and has fine acoustic properties. Beneath are the supper halls, the society room, and a gymnasium. The property is valued at sixty-five hundred dollars. The society is in a flourishing condition, having at the present day a membership of fifty-five. Connected with the association is the Lyceum Orchestra, one of the best orchestras in town.

Mount Vernon Cemetery.—This cemetery, containing about forty acres, is probably unsurpassed in natural advantages by any cemetery in the commonwealth. It was established in 1852, the first annual meeting being held October 25th of that year.

The first president was Stetson Vaughn, Esq., and the first secretary and treasurer was Rev. N. Gunnison, both since deceased. The present president is Joseph Vaughn, Esq., and Henry A. Noyes, secretary and treasurer. It may be remarked in this connection that Mr. Noyes is serving for the twenty-fifth year on the board of selectmen.

State Police.—Mr. George C. Pratt, who had previously been a member of the firm of J. M. Culver & Co., was appointed on the State police force in 1866, and, with the exception of one year, has served continuously ever since. This is especially worthy of note, inasmuch as the office is a political one. There is now no one on the force that was a member when Mr. Pratt was appointed. He has met with great success in detective work. He conducted the investigations in the Andrews murder case at Kingston, the Sturtevant murder case at Halifax, and the Gunn murder case at Bridgewater. He is a native of South Weymouth, but has resided many years in North Abington.

Island Grove Park.—This park, formerly known as Island Grove, contains about fourteen acres. It was purchased by the town for a park in 1882, and remains in its natural state, very little having been expended for improvements. Beneath the shelter of its grand old trees there have been held many notable gatherings in the interest of the anti-slavery and temperance reforms. Here young and old in almost countless numbers have resorted for amusement, recreation, and instruction. The eloquence and stirring words of Webster, Garrison, Sumner, Phillips, Andrew, and many others less widely known, have made the park a place of historic interest. Its natural beauty is further enhanced by a pond which almost surrounds a portion of its area. The present park commissioners are Hon. Henry B. Peirce, Capt. M. N. Arnold, and Horace A. Chamberlin.

Ecclesiastical History—The First Church and Society in Abington.—The precise date when the First Church of Abington was formed can never be known, as the first records that are at hand bear the date of 1724, while it is definitely known that, "In answer to a unanimous call, the Rev. Samuel Brown came to Abington to preach Dec. 8, 1711, and was ordained Nov. 17, 1714. The church was probably organized at the time of Mr. Brown's ordination. It was founded by eight male members,—the Rev. Samuel Brown, William Hersey, Andrew Ford, William Tirrell, Ebenezer Whitmarsh, Joseph Josselyn, William Reed, and Joseph Lincoln. The names of the female members are not recorded; but in the year 1724, the first date of definite record, the church consisted of forty-six members,—twenty-one males and twenty-five females. The church was formed without declaring any definite articles of religious faith, the Westminster Catechism being accepted and used as authority upon this matter; and its solemn compart of covenant was the same in spirit, and much the same in form, as that still continued. The following is a verbatim copy, which we desire inserted as an evidence in history that the mother-church of Abington and neighboring towns has not changed her essential faith:

"The Church Covenant, agreed upon and entered into and signed by a number of Brethren at the first founding of the Church of Christ in Abington, and afterward signed by the other Brethren as they joined in Communion here.

"We, whose names are undersigned, apprehending ourselves called of God to unite together in the bonds of Gospel communion and fellowship, and to enter into covenant with God and with one another for our mutual comfort and edification in the Lord Jesus Christ: Therefore, under a soul-humbling sense of our being in Covenant with God, and our insufficiency to keep covenant with him without the assistance of Divine presence and assistance, humbly relying upon free grace for help, and in humble confidence of acceptance, We do, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and with all possible solemnity, Explicitly and Expressly Covenant and bind ourselves in manner and form following: that is to say, We do give up ourselves and our offspring unto the God alone whose name is Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; cleaving unto God our Father as our chiefest good; and unto our Lord Jesus Christ as our only Prophet, Priest, and King, and only Mediator of the new Covenant of Grace; and unto the Holy Spirit as our Comforter and Sanctifier; and we do give up ourselves one unto another in the Lord, covenanting to walk together as a Church of Christ in all ways of his own instituting, agreeable to the proscriptions of his Holy Word; Promising that, with all tenderness and brotherly love, we will faithfully watch over one another's souls, and that we will freely yield ourselves to the discipline and power of Christ in his Church, and attend those seals and censures, and whatsoever ordinances Christ hath appointed according to the rules and order of the Gospel; and wherein we fail and come short in duty, to wait upon God through Christ for pardon and remission, beseeching him to make our spirits steadfast in his covenant, and to own us as his Church and covenant people forever. AMEN."

The church has had but eleven pastors during its history of one hundred and seventy years. The first three were ordained to and died in their service at Abington. Their united pastorate covered—within less than a year's time—the first century of the church's history.

Twenty deacons have been chosen, of whom four—Joseph Cleverly, John A. King, Joshua L. Nash, and Henry A. Noyes—retain that office at this date. The following are the names of the pastors and deacons:

Pastors.—Rev. Samuel Brown, ordained Nov. 17, 1714, died Sept. 19, 1749; Rev. Ezekiel Dodge, ordained May 23, 1750, died June 5, 1770; Rev. Samuel Niles, ordained Sept. 25, 1771, died Jan. 16, 1814; Rev. Holland Weeks, installed Aug. 9, 1815, dismissed July 27, 1820; Rev. Samuel Spring, ordained Jan. 2, 1822, dismissed Dec. 20, 1826; Rev. William Shedd, installed July 1, 1829, dismissed

April 8, 1830; Rev. Melancthon G. Wheeler, installed Oct. 13, 1831, dismissed September, 1833; Rev. James W. Ward, ordained May 21, 1834, dismissed Nov. 23, 1856; Rev. F. R. Abbe, ordained Sept. 3, 1857, dismissed June 14, 1870; Rev. George E. Freeman, installed Dec. 26, 1871, dismissed June 25, 1880; Rev. Robert W. Haskins, installed Nov. 2, 1881.

Deacons.—Ebenezer Whitmarsh, chosen Dec. 18, 1714; Joseph Lincoln, Feb. 17, 1717; Samuel French, —, 1722; Edward Bates, March 25, 1727; Jacob Shaw, Dec. 30, 1735; Samuel Pool, Aug. 16, 1750; John Noyes, Aug. 16, 1750; Daniel Shaw, between 1777 and 1779; Eleazer Williams, between 1777 and 1779; Jacob Tirrell, before 1820; David Torrey, before 1820; Edward Cobb, Nov. 25, 1823; Richard Vining, Nov. 25, 1823; Joshua King, April 1, 1840; Jacob Cobb, April 1, 1840; Joseph Cleverly, April 1, 1840; Zadok Nash, June 1, 1855; John A. King, March 9, 1858; Joshua L. Nash, March 9, 1858; Henry A. Noyes, Dec. 30, 1864.

Among the marked men in the catalogue of its pastors, men who put the stamp of an individual character upon the church and the town, and indeed extended an influence to the Legislature of the commonwealth, may be mentioned Rev. Samuel Niles and Rev. James W. Ward.

For nearly a century this was the only church for the families over the entire area now known as Abington, South Abington, and Rockland.

The whole number of persons uniting with the church can never be known, on account of defective records. Three colonies have gone from this to form other churches,—the first at South Abington, in 1808; second at East Abington (Rockland), in 1813; and third at North Abington, in 1839. At the formation of the last (North Abington) about fifty members were set off.

Notwithstanding this repeated drain from its membership, the church has held its place in numbers and power among the first of the surrounding towns.

The church has held with a firm and yet Christian grasp to its original Bible faith, even in times of peculiar and strong influences to draw it away, as in 1820, when the fourth pastor, Rev. Holland Weeks, drifted into the system of belief taught by Emanuel Swedenborg, and began to teach the same from the pulpit, when "he was requested by the church and society to ask a dismissal." This request resulted in the call of a mutual council, the result of which was a peaceable but positive advice that the relationship between the pastor and people be dissolved. In a few months the church was harmoniously united under the pastorate of the Rev. Samuel Spring, and scarce a ripple of false doctrine left upon the surface of the society.

For intelligence, wealth, and business integrity Centre Abington has an historic reputation in this section of Massachusetts, and it is enough for this history simply to note the fact that when the town was forming this character it was under the direct moral and religious influence of the Mother Christian Church of the original township.

"The first parish was composed of the whole town until 1808, and all parish business was transacted at town-meetings, with other town business. The first meeting as a separate parish was called March 22, 1808, by a warrant from Luke Bicknell, Esq., justice of the peace, and was notified by John King. Since that time the parish records have been kept separate."

The first meeting-house stood on Washington Street, in front of the old burying-ground, near where the residence of Mr. Otis Soule, Esq., now stands. It was a small house, without steeple, bell, or pews, benches being used for seats. This house was taken down in 1751, and a new one, seventy feet long, fifty wide, and twenty-six feet posts, was built some four or five rods southwesterly from where Hatherly Hall now stands. The third house (now Hatherly Hall) was built in 1819, and was used until the present house was dedicated, Aug. 31, 1849.

In 1869 the present house was enlarged, and spacious lecture- and Sunday-school rooms finished beneath. At that time, also, it was determined by vote of the society to purchase and hold the pews, and reseat the house. The above repairs and purchase of pews involved the society in very large expenditures and obligations, leaving a debt of something more than eight thousand dollars, but about one-half of which had been canceled at the settlement of the present pastor. Since that time the remaining four thousand of the debt has been paid, and extensive repairs begun, with the fixed determination that these shall proceed only as funds are secured. And upon this principle some four hundred dollars have already been appropriated. The present membership of the church is one hundred and sixty-six.

Never has the prospect of the First Church and Society of Abington been brighter for making worthy history for her sons to write in continuation of these pages.

The North Parish in Abington was formed April 8, 1839, and commenced building a house for public worship immediately. This was ready to be occupied in October. On the third of that month a church, known as the Fourth Congregational Church, in Abington, was formed, with forty-nine members. Rev. Willard Peirce, of Foxboro', was called to the pastorate, and was installed April 8, 1840. During the year there was a revival of religion, and fifteen persons were added to the church. Another revival followed in 1842, when some twenty-five more were added. May 1, 1850, Mr. Peirce was dismissed, at his own request, on account of ill health, but continued to reside there till his death, some ten years later.

The next pastor, Rev. J. C. White, was ordained Oct. 23, 1850, and continued until Feb. 21, 1860. During his ministry forty-six were added to the church. After this Rev. William Leonard supplied for upwards of a year. Then for some five years there were transient supplies, one of which was Rev. Martin Moore, who supplied for six months, during which eight were added to the church. Also during this period Rev. David Brigham acted as pastor for a season.

June 5, 1866, Rev. Benjamin Dodge was installed as pastor, and remained until June 22, 1870. During this time eleven persons were added to the church.

From July 1, 1870, to April 1, 1872, Rev. David Brigham was again acting pastor, during which period he came to the fiftieth anniversary of his entering the ministry.

During 1872 the meeting-house was remodeled at an expense of some seven thousand dollars, the chief movers in the matter being Mr. James H. Gleason and Mr. David Beals. By this means the house was made a model of beauty and delicate good, not surpassed, if indeed it is equaled, by anything in the region. This work being finished, Rev. Dennis Powers preached for a few months from May, 1873.

Jan. 1, 1874, Rev. Jesse H. Jones became acting pastor, and so continued until the first Sabbath in May, 1880. During this period thirteen were added to the membership.

Following him directly Rev. Robert F. True supplied for a year, and was ordained in December. Eight united with the church under his labors.

After casual supplies for a year, Rev. Jesse H. Jones was recalled, and began to preach the first Sabbath in May, 1882, and so continues.

The First Society of the New Jerusalem in Abington dates its origin back to the work and labor of the Rev. Holland Weeks, the fourth minister of the First Religious (now the Congregational) Society of Abington. Mr. Weeks was a graduate of Dartmouth College, class of 1795, and installed as pastor Aug. 9, 1815. After having his attention at sundry times accidentally called to the doctrines of the New Jerusalem Church, he began to read them systematically, Oct. 10, 1818, and soon began to preach them to his society, to whom the teaching continued to be acceptable until 1820. In that year he was requested by his church and society to ask a dismissal on account of the change he had undergone as to doctrinal views. His connection with the society was terminated in that year, and Mr. Weeks removed from Abington in 1821.

His preaching had left a permanent impression upon five or six persons. Others soon gathered about them, and some young persons became interested in 1824. In the year 1827 the receivers first began to hold meetings for public worship on the Sabbath in the westerly part of the town. In 1830 the receivers were legally organized as a distinct religious society. It is notable that not one lady was among these early organizers, and the twelve persons forming the original legal body were three brothers each of four different families, viz.: Elisha, Lucius, and Calvin Faxon; Isaiah, Daniel, and Ira Noyes; Edward, Austin, and Luther Cobb; and, lastly, Bartlett, Isaac, and Ebenezer Robbins. These were legally organized by Ezekiel Thaxter, a justice of the peace, under the name of the "First Society of the New Jerusalem in Abington." The same year the meetings for public worship were changed to the centre of the town, and were held for several years in the former residence of the Rev. Holland Weeks, now the parsonage of the present society. In the winter of 1833-34 the society, with the assistance of others who were interested in the doctrines, erected a building called the "New Church Hall," in which meetings for public worship were held for twenty-two years.

In 1835 the society was organized to conform with the recommendations of the general body, represented by the "General Convention of the New Church," and after appropriate services, was received into that body through representatives from Boston. In 1855-56 a new building was erected corner of Centre and Dunbar Streets. In this temple meetings for public worship have been continuously held since its dedication, June 19, 1856.

Preaching was maintained more or less regularly between the years of 1827 and 1838. From 1827 to 1832, Rev. Eleazer Smith and Rev. Samuel Worcester preached occasionally for the society. During 1833 and in the spring of 1834 the Rev. Henry A. Worcester ministered unto them, and in August, 1834, the Rev. Warren Goddard, of North Bridgewater (now Brockton), commenced preaching for the society, and continued for the most of the time until January, 1838. In July of the same year Mr.

Joseph Pettee was ordained and installed its pastor, and continued in his office until 1873, when he was called to become the presiding minister (now called the general pastor) of the Massachusetts Association of the New Church. The Rev. Horace W. Wright was the minister of the society from 1873 until 1878. In 1879, until April, 1880, the Rev. D. Vincent Bowen preached for the society. Since the last date the Rev. Jacob E. Werren, who was installed its pastor in March, 1882, has officiated for the society.

The society is practically free from debt, and owns beside the tasteful temple a parsonage on Bedford Street, corner of Brockton Avenue. The church has a seating capacity of two hundred and fifty. The average attendance at the regular Sabbath morning service is about eighty. The whole number of communicants is about eighty. Beside the morning worship, courses of Sunday evening lectures are maintained part of the year. The Sabbath-school is under a superintendent with a corps of teachers. It has a membership of from forty to fifty children, and a class of adults.

The Abington Society is a member of the Massachusetts Association, and through it is connected with and reports to the General Convention, which is the national body of the New Jerusalem Church of America and Canada.

The church has no formulated creed, although it requires for admission into membership the assent to the following principles of the faith of the New Church :

“There is One God, in whom is a Divine Trinity, and He is the Lord God, the Saviour, Jesus Christ.

“Saving Faith is to believe in Him as the Redeemer, Regenerator, and Saviour from sin.

“The Word of God is Divine Truth, revealed to us as a means by which we may distinguish between good and evil, be delivered from the influence of evil spirits, and be associated with angels and conjoined with the Lord.

“We are to shun evil, because it is of the devil and from the devil; and do good because it is of God and from God.

“In abstaining from evil and doing good we are to act as of ourselves; at the same time believing and acknowledging that the will, the understanding, and the power to do so, are of the Lord alone.”

The foregoing sketch is based upon Hobart's “History of the Town of Abington:” Boston, Carter & Son, 1866, the records of the society, publications of the Massachusetts Association, and the information from original and early members.

Universalist Church.—Universalist services having been occasionally held for several years in the Pine Wood school-house, on what was then known as Back Street, now Plymouth Street, on April 6, 1836, “the friends of Universalism”—so runs the record—“met agreeable to previous notice,” and after the choice of a standing committee “to supply the desk” the ensuing year, chose “a committee of five—Reuben Loud, William W. Cushing, Jesse Dunham, Daniel Hall, and Thomas Hunt—to consider the expediency of forming a society.” At an adjourned meeting, April 20th, the above committee “reported in favor of forming a society, which report was adopted.” A committee “to draft a constitution” was also chosen, and a constitution was reported and adopted.

During the ensuing year the sum of one hundred and sixty-five dollars was raised “for the support of preaching, &c.” The preachers were Revs. Thomas Whittemore, Benjamin Whittemore, and Thompson Barron; it having been “agreed with Thompson Barron, June 26th, to supply till the money was expended.”

Till April, 1838, services were continued in the school-house. Then it was voted to hold meetings in the town house, and this continued till Dec. 22, 1841, when, a “meeting-house” having been erected on Washington Street, opposite Chapel Street, it was dedicated, and thereafter occupied.

The following have been pastors of this parish: From 1839 to 1844, Rev. Elmer Hewett; from May, 1845, to May, 1846, Rev. Z. H. Howe; from August, 1846, to May, 1848, Rev. L. Hussey; from June, 1848, to October, 1849, Rev. James Whittier; from May, 1850, to May, 1854, Rev. N. Gunnison; from May, 1855, to May, 1856, Rev. E. S. Foster; from May, 1856, to May, 1860, Rev. Varnum Lincoln; from July, 1860, to November, 1866, Rev. Joseph Crehore; from July, 1867, to May, 1869, Rev. James Marsden; from September, 1870, to May, 1871, Rev. Charles Sawyer; from July, 1872, to May, 1875, Rev. E. W. Preble; from May, 1877, to May, 1878, Rev. C. Elwood Nash; from May, 1879, to May, 1881, Rev. James E. Smith. The present pastor, Rev. B. F. Bowles, began his pastorate May, 1882.

From its organization, in 1836 to 1870 (thirty-four years), its average growth was steady. Since then it has suffered severe losses by death and removal from the town. The division of the town, tending to develop special local interests away from the old centre, served also to deplete its strength. But from the first until now a fair proportion of the wealth, intelligence, and moral and social influence of the town has been represented in its membership.

Practically it has built two church edifices, the "remodeling" of the first at a cost of about ten thousand dollars having resulted in a new structure much larger, more elegant and imposing than the first. This has recently been repainted and is in excellent repair. The ladies' sewing circle of the parish also own a large and commodious parsonage. And though there have been periods in which its current expenses were greater than now, they were never more easily or promptly met, and absolute harmony and prosperity prevail in all departments.

Its pastors, without exception, have been public-spirited citizens, manifesting a sympathy in and a readiness to promote all the interests of the town and all the reforms of their day. As an example of this worthy of mention, and the remembrance of all Abingtonians, Rev. N. Gunnison gave the first, or at least largely shared in giving the first, impulse to the movement resulting in the present beautiful cemetery, of which the town may well be proud. Appropriately his remains lie there. The first pastor, Rev. Elmer Hewett, far advanced in life's journey now, and for many years a resident and honored citizen of South Weymouth, has always been an ardent apostle of temperance, and till the great emancipation, of anti-slavery.

Rev. Joseph Crehore is entitled to honorable mention for his zeal and devotion during a pastorate of six years, not only to all the interests of the parish, but, especially during the war, to the interest of the country. It was during his pastorate, and largely from his endeavors, that the church edifice was rebuilt.

The present pastor, Rev. B. F. Bowles, brought to this field the experience of several large city parishes, and very deservedly holds a warm place in the hearts of his people.

The Roman Catholic Church.—It was in 1862 that the Rev. A. L. Roche, then Catholic pastor of Randolph, purchased of Joseph Hunt the estate situated on the northwest corner of Plymouth and Central Streets, Abington. He soon after began the erection of a Catholic Church on the lot on Central Street, near the railroad. He had previously attended Abington as a mission from Randolph, and services were held in the town hall, or what is now the hall of the Young Men's Catholic Lyceum Association.

On the completion of the church, Father Roche became resident pastor of Abington, a successor having been appointed to the Randolph parish.

Before Father Roche's time the few Catholics then residing in the Abingtons had been occasionally visited by the Rev. Mr. Roddan, Catholic pastor of West Quincy, where had been built the first Catholic Church this side of Boston. The Rev. Mr. Roddan purchased, in 1858, the land of the present Catholic cemetery on Central Street, Rockland, with the intention of building on it a Catholic Church. He died, however, without being able to carry out his design. The Rev. Mr. Roche, who succeeded to this portion of his mission, thought the location of the cemetery lot not sufficiently central for a church, and so purchased the property on which stands the present St. Bridget's Church.

The congregation was composed of the Catholics living in East Abington (now Rockland), North, Centre, and South Abington, and Hanover.

Father Roche died Jan. 21, 1869, and was succeeded by Rev. M. Moran, who labored zealously and successfully among the people, increasing very materially the regular Sunday attendance of the congregation as well as the attendance of the children at the Sunday-school, and who managed by strenuous efforts to clear the entire indebtedness of the church. On his removal to St. Stephen's Church, Boston, in 1872, he was succeeded by Rev. J. C. Murphy, who purchased the hotel property on Union Street, Rockland, for the purpose of building a church to better accommodate the large number who attended St. Bridget's from that important section of the parish. In August, 1876, Father Murphy was appointed to the new parish of Plymouth, where he had previously built a church.

He was succeeded by Rev. W. P. McQuaid, the present pastor of St. Bridget's Church. Father McQuaid built the Catholic Church in Rockland in 1882; also, in 1880, one in South Abington, and another in Hanover. In June, 1883, Rockland was made a separate Catholic parish, with Hanover and Pembroke attached, and the Rev. J. D. Tierney was appointed its first pastor.

The present Catholic parish of Abington includes North, Centre, and South Abington, with two churches,—St. Bridget's, Centre Abington, and the Church of the Holy Ghost, South Abington, attended by two clergymen,—Rev. Mr. McQuaid and Rev. J. J. Nilum. The estimated Catholic population is: North Abington, 400; Centre Abington, 800; South Abington, 500.

College Graduates.—The following is a nearly complete list of such natives of the town as have received a collegiate education, with the time and the place of their graduation:

John Porter, 1736.....	Harvard.
Edward Bates, 1738.....	Harvard.
Solomon Reed, 1739.....	Harvard.
Josiah Brown, 1761.....	Harvard.
Adams Porter, 1761.....	Harvard.
Elias Jones, 1767.....	Princeton.
Jesse Reed, 1769.....	Princeton.
Samuel Nash, 1770.....	Brown.
William Reed, 1782.....	Harvard.
Nathaniel Hobart, 1784.....	Harvard.
Jesse Remington, 1784.....	Harvard.
Jacob Norton, 1786.....	Harvard.
Jarius Remington, 1794.....	Brown.
James Gurney, 1795.....	Brown.
Ahel Richmond, 1797.....	Brown.
Enoch Brown, 1801.....	Brown.
Moses Noyes, 1801.....	Brown.
William Norton, 1802.....	Brown.
John King, 1802.....	Harvard.
Jacob Porter, 1803.....	Yale.
Benjamin Hobart, 1804.....	Brown.
John Shaw, 1805.....	Brown.
Jared Whitman, 1805.....	Brown.
Aaron Hobart, 1805.....	Brown.
James Richards, 1809.....	Williams.
Ezekiel Thaxter, 1812.....	Harvard.
Daniel Noyes, 1812.....	Yale.
Asahel Cobb.....	Hamilton.
Ebenezer P. Dyer, 1833.....	Brown.
F. H. Perry, 1835.....	Colby.
Benjamin Wormelle, 1860.....	Amherst.
Bradford M. Fullerton, 1861.....	Amherst.
Byron Grace, 1867.....	Tufts.
Andrew E. Ford, 1871.....	Amherst.
George M. Nash, 1877.....	Harvard.
Charles F. Meserve, 1877.....	Colby.
Jerome B. Poole, 1866.....	Harvard.

Isaac C. White was born in Abington Feb. 24, 1822. He received the degree of Bachelor of Arts at Oberlin College in 1845, and of Bachelor of Divinity at Andover Theological Seminary in 1849; was ordained and installed pastor of the church in North Abington in 1850, and remained pastor until 1860. He was acting pastor of the Congregational Church in Nantucket from 1861 to 1862; resided in Roxbury from 1862 to 1865, supplying vacant churches.

He came to Newmarket, N. H., in 1865, and has been pastor of the Congregational Church in Newmarket, N. H., since 1865.

Henry F. Lane graduated at Brown University in 1850.

The following is a list of graduates from the State Normal School, Bridgewater, Mass. :

Susan G. Noyes, Abington.....	1847
E. H. Beals, Abington.....	1850
Harriet A. Blake, Abington.....	1854
Simeon S. Sanborn, Abington.....	1857
Anna L. Noyes, Abington.....	1874
Abbie P. Churchill, Abington.....	1881
Robert L. O'Brien, Abington.....	1884
Sophia Reed, East Abington.....	1863
Alonzo Meserve, North Abington.....	1868
Emma A. Randall, North Abington.....	1870
George E. Wales, North Abington.....	1874
Louis A. Pratt, North Abington.....	1875
Sarah L. Arnold, North Abington.....	1878
John F. Mackey, North Abington.....	1883
Lillian G. Pratt, North Abington.....	1884
Edward O. Dyer, South Abington.....	1872
Hattie A. Corthell, South Abington.....	1877

Graduates from Franningham Normal School have been as follows :

Irene A. Poole, Abington.....	1863
Lydia M. Reed, Abington.....	1866

Aged People.—The oldest person in town is Obadiah Reed, who was ninety years of age last January.

Mr. Seth Reed, who is still actively at work every day, was born in Abington, May 1, 1804. He has lived on the site of his present residence, on Washington Street, for half a century, and is among the wealthiest men in town, being the heaviest owner of real estate. When Mr. Reed was asked to what he owed his success in life, he replied, "By working hard when a young man at fifty cents a day (a dollar a day in the haying season, from sunrise to sunset), and putting my money where it would earn me something."

There has been a great change in the price of land in Mr. Reed's day. When he was a young man he purchased half an acre of land at what is now the intersection of North Avenue and Adams Street, north-east corner, for $12.50. He wanted a whole acre, but thinking the price too high, he purchased the amount stated. This half-acre of land is now included in the elegant grounds of Mr. S. N. Reed, and is estimated by competent judges to be worth at the rate of four thousand dollars per acre.

Capt. George W. Pratt, who was commissioned by Governor John Davis in 1834, must be classed among the oldest residents, having been born in Abington, May 27, 1809.

Mr. Ezekiel Townsend was eighty-one years of age last November. He is still vigorous, and may be found daily at his work in Capt. Arnold's factory.

The oldest person in the north part of the town is Deacon Joseph Cleverly, who was born in Quincy in 1797, and came in 1820 to this town, where he has resided ever since. For some years he was engaged in the tanning and currying business south of his present residence. He was actively engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes until 1862, when he retired from business. A member of the Board of Selectmen for nine years, and frequently serving as moderator in town-meetings, Mr. Cleverly has been closely identified with the interests of the town a larger part of the present century. He has a well-nigh perfect recollection of people, events, and dates, and is authority for the statement that in 1835 each member of the Board of Selectmen carried in a bill of twenty-seven dollars each for services for the year, whereat a prominent citizen arose in town-meeting, and exclaimed in surprise, "What have our selectmen done the past year to earn twenty-seven dollars each?" It is worth recording, also, upon his authority, that there was located in the early part of the century a small tannery upon the brook, near the present residence of Seth Reed.

The following is believed to be a pretty accurate list of present voters, who have been voters for a half-century or more:

Benjamin Beal.	Joseph Randall.
Seth W. Bennett.	Ezekiel Reed.
William Brown.	Lucius Reed.
Bela Brown.	Seth Reed.
William Britton.	Obadiah Reed.
Joseph Cleverly.	Israel Reed.
Lucius Faxon.	James M. Reed.
Luther Jackson.	Jacob S. Remington.
Charles Meserve.	Daniel Shaw.
William Gurney.	James Sharp.
Daniel Gloyd.	Bela Smith.
Josiah P. Hunt.	Charles Stetson.
Elisha V. Oreutt.	Americus V. Tirrell.
Lewis Oreutt.	Ezekiel Townsend.
Zibeon Packard.	Richard Vining.
Lewis B. Penniman.	John F. Wheeler.
George W. Pratt.

The Grand Army of the Republic.—McPherson Post, No. 73, Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, was the third post organized in Plymouth County; date of organization, Dec. 23, 1868, and is named for Maj.-Gen. James Birdseye McPherson, who graduated first in his class at West Point in 1853. He rendered notable service in the war of the Rebellion, and had the left of the line in the battle before Atlanta. While superintending an advance of the skirmish line he was ambushed and shot. The charter members of the post were F. P. Harlow, Charles F. Allen, E. P. Reed, W. B. White, T. S. Atwood, F. Foster, Jr., S. W. Bennett, Jr., Josiah Soule, Jr., H. L. Cushing, and Henry B. Peirce, and from this nucleus the posts at Rockland and South Abington were formed. The roll of members contains one hundred and eighty-one names, representing sixty-seven distinct military organizations and twelve ships of war. There are but one hundred members at the present time. Twenty have been removed by death, and the rest have moved away from the town.

Meetings are held weekly on Wednesday evenings, except during June, July, and August, when they are held on the first and third Wednesday only.

Memorial exercises have been held each memorial day since the organization of the post, the town appropriating annually the sum of one hundred dollars toward defraying the expenses thereof. Memorial addresses have been delivered by Gen. A. B. Underwood, of Newton, in 1869; William Ralph Emerson, of Boston, in 1870; Rev. Henderson Virgin, of Abington, in 1871; Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, of Melrose, in 1872; Rev. E. W. Preble, of Abington, in 1873; J. Mason Everett, Esq., of Canton, in 1874; Col. George T. Childs, of St. Albans, Vt., in 1875; Rev. George E. Freeman, of Abington, in 1876; Maj. George S. Merrill, of Lawrence, in 1877; Rev. C. Ellwood Nash, of Abington, in 1878; Gen. W. W. Blackmar, of Boston, in 1879; Hon. B. W. Harris, of East Bridgewater, in 1880; Col. T. W. Higginson, of Cambridge, in 1881; Rev. B. F. Bowles, of Abington, in 1882; Col. George W. Williams, of Plymouth, in 1883; and Henry Cabot Lodge, Esq., of Nahant, in 1884; and the services thus rendered have been gratuitous in each case.

The Mount Vernon Cemetery corporation voted to allow the post to select, free of cost, a lot for its use, and by this generous act a resting-place in a beautiful locality is secured for all soldiers who are not otherwise provided for.

The post has expended thousands of dollars for the relief of disabled soldiers and the families of deceased soldiers, from funds raised by holding fairs and in various other ways. Its meetings are held in Grand Army Hall, in a room appropriately decorated with pictures and the paraphernalia of the order. The post has been aided in this, as in many other ways, by the Grand Army Sewing Circle, an auxiliary association of ladies.

This post was the first to inaugurate "camping-out," going into camp by itself at Brant Rock for two or three days at a time, prior to the organization of the Plymouth County posts into a division.

War Record (1861-65).—During the late Rebellion Abington sent more than a full regiment to the front, and her sons were found in naval contests, and on every field, in the thickest of the fight, bearing their part nobly and well, even unto death. At the close of the war the noble veterans, who had survived many a hard-fought field and had been spared to return to home and loved ones, were tendered a reception by the town at Island Grove.

The following is believed to be the most accurate list of the soldiers and sailors from Abington who participated in the late war that has yet appeared. It was prepared at a great expense of time and labor by Judge Kelley, of Rockland:

3<sup>D</sup> REGT. INF., M. V. M. (3 months).

Company B.

Atwood, T. B., April 23, 1861.	Prior, E. O., April 23, 1861.
Atwood, T. S., April, 1861.	Raymond, H. A., May 6, 1861.
Lucas, Daniel, May 6, 1861.

Company C.

Green, John, April 23, 1861.	Kavanaugh, Wm., April 23, 1861.
------------------------------	---------------------------------

Company H.

Baldwin, G. W., April 23, 1861.
 Benson, C., April 23, 1861.
 Dwyer, Daniel, April 23, 1861.
 Foy, Wm., April 23, 1861.
 French, F. M., April 23, 1861.
 Herrin, P. S., April 23, 1861.
 Loud, L. J., April 23, 1861.
 Meserve, Sol., April 23, 1861.
 Reed, Seth D., April 23, 1861.
 Shean, M., April 23, 1861.
 Thompson, Saml. G., April 23, 1861.
 Tirrell, Maj., April 23, 1861.
 Towle, J. A., April 23, 1861.
 Turner, Alonzo, April 23, 1861.
 Willis, J. F., April 23, 1861.

4TH REGT. INFT., M. V. M. (3 months).

Company E.

Allen, C. F., April 22, 1861.
 Soule, Lewis, April 22, 1861.
 Mitchell, J. W., April 22, 1861.
 Caswell, B. T., April 22, 1861.
 Holbrook, N. O., Apr. 22, 1861.
 Humble, H., April 22, 1861.
 Peterson, B. F., Apr. 22, 1861.
 Bryant, J. T., April 22, 1861.
 Reed, Tim., April 22, 1861.
 Marne, W. H., April 22, 1861.
 Harding, M. E., April 22, 1861.
 Barrett, B. K., April 22, 1861.
 Barber, J. A., April 22, 1861.
 Bates, J. E., May 6, 1861.
 Bickford, J. E., April 22, 1861.
 Caton, J. W., April 22, 1861.
 Cook (2d), J., April 22, 1861.
 Cook, T. H., April 22, 1861.
 Corwin, Wm., April 22, 1861.
 Dunham, A. J., April 22, 1861.
 Dunbar, H. F., April 22, 1861.
 Fuller, Thos., April 22, 1861.
 Gurney, A. A., April 22, 1861.
 Gurney, S. P., April 22, 1861.
 Hall, I. G., April 22, 1861.
 Harden, G. M., April 22, 1861.
 Hobart, Thos., April 22, 1861.
 Howard, Elijah, May 6, 1861.
 Howe, C. M., April 22, 1861.
 Howland, C., April 22, 1861.
 Josselyn, J. E., May 6, 1861.
 Knowles, W. W., May 6, 1861.
 Leach, J. A., April 22, 1861.
 Lincoln, W. B., May 6, 1861.
 Loveradge, I., April 22, 1861.
 Packard, H. F., May 6, 1861.
 Penney, L. F., April 22, 1861.
 Phinney, B. F., April 22, 1861.
 Ramsdell, Nathaniel F., April 22, 1861.
 Ramsdell, Philemon W., April 22, 1861.
 Reed, H. H., April 22, 1861.
 Reed, S. W., April 22, 1861.
 Reed, S. W., April 22, 1861.
 Rowe, Z., April 22, 1861.
 Rundle, J. T., April 22, 1861.
 Steingardt, Joseph A., April 22, 1861.
 Stetson, A. J., May 6, 1861.
 Stewart, N. M., April 22, 1861.
 Tuttle, E. G., April 22, 1861.
 Washburne, J., April 22, 1861.
 Witherell, James H., April 22, 1861.
 Witherell, Eben A., April 22, 1861.
 Witherell, Otis F., April 22, 1861.

3D BATT. RIFLEMEN, M. V. M. (3 months).

Company D.

Newton, Harrison O. F., May 19, 1861.

6TH REGT. INF., M. V. M. (100 days).

Company A.

Hersey, Isaac E., July 15, 1864.

Company F.

Thomas, George A., July 16, 1864.

6TH REGT. INF., M. V. M. (100 days).

Company A.

Soule, Jr., Josiah, capt., July 18, 1864.
 Warne, Jos. P., July 18, 1864.
 Cushing, B., July 18, 1864.
 Merritt, Jos. B., July 18, 1864.
 Blaisdell, A., July 18, 1864.
 Burrell, J. H., July 18, 1864.
 Burrell, C. M., July 18, 1864.
 Harvell, E., July 18, 1864.
 Burrell, B. A., July 18, 1864.
 Shaw, Otis R., July 18, 1864.
 Baldwin, Elza, July 18, 1864.
 Groce, Wm. R., July 18, 1864.
 Hunt, Geo. H., July 18, 1864.
 Turner, Jos. S., July 18, 1864.
 Baker, H. A., July 18, 1864.
 Fairbanks, W., July 18, 1864.
 Whitney, S., July 18, 1864.
 Beal, N. A., July 18, 1864.
 Blanchard, J., July 18, 1864.

Burrell, E. A., July 18, 1864.
 Chubbuck, Francis H., July 18, 1864.
 Churchill, I. F., July 18, 1864.
 Clark, L. F., July 18, 1864.
 Cobbett, Philip, July 18, 1864.
 Cobbett, Jr., P., July 18, 1864.
 Coin, E. E., July 18, 1864.
 Curtis, George, July 18, 1864.
 Curtis, Geo. E., July 18, 1864.
 Doane, Wilson, July 18, 1864.
 Donovan, P., July 18, 1864.
 Driscoll, M., July 18, 1864.
 Dunn, J. S., July 18, 1864.
 Eaton, S. F., July 18, 1864.
 Ellis, D. S., July 18, 1864.
 Fenno, J. A., July 18, 1864.
 Foster, Thos., July 18, 1864.
 Gurney, N. A., July 18, 1864.
 Gurney, W. H., July 18, 1864.
 Gurney, W., July 18, 1864.
 Harrington, Isaac N., July 18, 1864.
 Hebbard, W. H., July 18, 1864.
 Hewett, H. A., July 18, 1864.
 Holbrook, D., July 18, 1864.
 Holbrook, Q., July 19, 1864.
 Hunt, E. G., July 19, 1864.
 Jacobs, Jr., D., July 18, 1864.
 Jenkins, L., July 18, 1864.
 Jenkins, N. S., July 18, 1864.
 Kenney, E. F., July 18, 1864.
 Kennedy, H., July 18, 1864.
 Kidder, F. H., July 18, 1864.
 Loud, H. M., July 18, 1864.
 Lowell, E. B., July 18, 1864.
 Mann, A. G., July 18, 1864.
 McDonald, Daniel F., July 19, 1864.
 Mead, P., July 18, 1864.
 Mitchell, S. W., July 18, 1864.
 Mitchell, Wm., July 18, 1864.
 Morris, J. W., July 18, 1864.
 Phillips, D. T., July 18, 1864.
 Phillips, G. B., July 18, 1864.
 Pool, Chas. H., July 18, 1864.
 Poole, E. C., July 18, 1864.
 Read, T. H., July 18, 1864.
 Rochefort, Henry T., July 18, 1864.
 Rose, J. S., July 18, 1864.
 Seavey, W. B., July 18, 1864.
 Sisk, Wm., July 18, 1864.
 Smith, A. D., July 19, 1864.
 Spaulding, Alfred S., July 18, 1864.
 Studley, W. B., July 18, 1864.
 Sullivan, Corn., July 18, 1864.
 Thompson, Wm. T., July 18, 1864.
 Tirrell, Jr., Edwin S., July 18, 1864.
 Turner, John, July 18, 1864.
 Valedge, B., July 18, 1864.
 Washburn, H. W., July 18, 1864.
 Watts, S. M., July 18, 1864.
 Whiting, G. D., July 18, 1864.
 Whiting, P. A., July 18, 1864.
 Whitman, T. W., July 18, 1864.
 Young, H., July 18, 1864.

20TH UNATTACHED CO. INF., M. V. M. (100 days).

Soule, Lewis, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Vining, W. R., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Sharp, Alfred, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Reed, Seth D., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Brown, Gilbert, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Reed, C. W., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Poole, Nahum, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Allen, Jr., B., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Bearse, H. D., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Blake, S. N., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Cook, D. M., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Cook, Lucius, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Conroy, James, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Conroy, Luke, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Dunham (2), H., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Fairbanks, Albert F., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Fuller, T. G., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Hersey, J. B., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Hill, Isaac, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Holbrook, J. A., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Kingsley, E., Aug. 11, 1864.
 McConney, James F., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Orcutt, Calvin, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Peterson, J. W., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Poole, Julian, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Poole, Wm. W., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Reed, S. W., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Sampson, W. W., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Sharp, E. S., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Shaw, H. N., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Sprague, L. A., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Sylvester, N., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Thorp, Joshua, Aug. 11, 1864.
 Whitmarsh, Thomas A., Aug. 11, 1864.
 Wright, G. H., Aug. 11, 1864.

20TH UNATTACHED CO., M. V. (1 year).

Soule, Lewis, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Washburn, J., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Vining, W. R., Nov. 19, 1864.
 French, I. R., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Morse, J. J., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Brown, Gilbert, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Fisher, E. I., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Bisbee, Jos. F., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Harding, N. T., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Fuller, T. G., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Wright, G. H., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Page, Sam'l A., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Whitmarsh, Thos. A., Nov. 19, 1864.

Alden, Jr., B., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Aherne, John, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Beary, James, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Beary, John, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Briggs, W. C., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Chamberlain, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Chamberlain, Francis B., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Courroy, John, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Costello, J., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Ford, John, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Ford, Thomas, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Gould, Henry, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Greene, John, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Gurney, J. F., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Hallett, Jr., Charles G., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Harding, C. W., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Harding, H. C., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Harding, J. A., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Hayes, Robert, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Lindsey, M. A., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Lincoln, R. W., Nov. 19, 1864.
 McCarthy, C., Nov. 19, 1864.
 McCarthy, J., Nov. 19, 1864.

24TH UNATTACHED CO. INF., M. V. (1 year).

Cook, Bartlett, Dec. 16, 1864.

4TH REGT. INF., M. V. M. (9 months).

Howland, Charles W., Sept. 23, 1862.

Company E.

Soule, Lewis, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Humble, H., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Maloy, John, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Harding, M. E., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Vining, W. R., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Cook, Isaac, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Howland, C. W., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Hutchinson, John B., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Sharp, Alfred, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Bates, Jacob P., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Corthell, W. G., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Leavitt, P. M., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Wheeler, H. A., Oct. 29, 1862.
 Alden, Jared, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Alden, John, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Atwood, S. S., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Bates, Solon, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Beals, Josiah, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Brown, H. L., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Clark, Michael, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Conant, Albion, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Courroy, B., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Conroy, James, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Conroy, Luke, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Daley, Daniel, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Dunbar, V. H., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Duncan, Jason, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Ford, Wilson, Sept. 26, 1862.
 French, F. M., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Galvian, T., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Glover, C. J., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Green, H. S., Sept. 26, 1862.

O'Brian, J., Nov. 19, 1864.
 O'Mara, F., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Phillips, T., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Poole, Hiram, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Randall, John, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Raymond, W., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Rowe, Zaccheus, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Sharp, O. M., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Soule, S. P., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Sprague, L. A., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Stewart, Jr., John E., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Stetson, Oliver, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Wade, H. M., Nov. 19, 1864.
 West, John M., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Whiting, Charles H. W., Nov. 19, 1864.
 White, Francis, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Wilder, Jas., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Wilt, Clark, Nov. 19, 1864.
 Witherell, Eben A., Nov. 19, 1864.
 Witherell, Otis F., Nov. 19, 1864.

Gurney, Wm., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Harding, G. G., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Harding, W. H., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Hayes, Edward, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Howard, C. M., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Hunt, Ward, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Jones, William, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Keran, James, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Lincoln, J. P., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Lincoln, W. W., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Longley, Geo., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Luddy, M., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Millett, C. A., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Morse, G. A., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Noyes, Merritt, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Parmenter, J., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Pearson, G. H., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Penniman, Lewis P., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Reed, A. Alden, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Reed, C. W., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Reed, Cyrus, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Robbins, W. H., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Ryan, William, Sept. 26, 1862.
 Shaw (2d), C., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Sproul, J. W., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Sullivan, John, Sept. 26, 1862.
 West, Henry M., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Wheeler, G. W., Oct. 29, 1862.
 Whitmarsh, Thomas A., Sept. 26, 1862.
 Wright, G. H., Sept. 26, 1862.

42D REGT. INF., M. V. M. (9 months).

Company D.

Williams, Henry O., Oct. 29, 1862.

43D REGT. INF., M. V. M. (9 months).

Lane, Everett, Oct. 25, 1862.

Company A.

Bly, Charles F., Oct. 11, 1862.

Considine, M., Oct. 11, 1862.

Hobson, Robert, Oct. 29, 1862.

Company B.

Corkery, P., Oct. 15, 1862.

Foley, Patrick, Oct. 11, 1862.

Green, Patrick, Oct. 28, 1862.

Tangney, D., Oct. 11, 1862.

Company E.

Donovan, Patrick, Sept. 20, 1862.

Company F.

Beal, W. M., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hobart, A. C., Sept. 12, 1862.

Company G.

Lane, Everett, Sept. 12, 1862.

Soule, Jr., J., Oct. 22, 1862.

Soule, J., Sept. 12, 1862.

Poole, Lysander, Oct. 22, 1862.

Poole, L., Sept. 12, 1862.

Warne, J. B., Oct. 22, 1862.

Warne, J. B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Cushing, B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Merritt, J. B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Randall, A. R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Whiting, A. V., Sept. 12, 1862.

Blaisdell, A., Sept. 12, 1862.

Burrell (2d), J., Sept. 12, 1862.

Burbank, E. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Eaton, S. F., Sept. 12, 1862.

Gray, J. S., Sept. 12, 1862.

Studley, J. B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Wheeler, D. G., Sept. 12, 1862.

Walker, W. M., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hunt, Edw. G., Sept. 12, 1862.

Lane, G. E., Sept. 12, 1862.

Curtis, S. G., Sept. 12, 1862.

Arnold, W. D., Sept. 12, 1862.

Baldwin, Elza, Sept. 12, 1862.

Beal, David, Sept. 12, 1862.

Beal, Franklin, Sept. 12, 1862.

Beal, N. A., Sept. 12, 1862.

Bibbee, Z. M., Sept. 12, 1862.

Briggs, J. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Briggs, N. B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Burrell, B. A., Sept. 12, 1862.

Burrell, C. M., Sept. 12, 1862.

Burrell, J. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Caplice, Morris, Sept. 12, 1862.

Carney, R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Chubbuck, C. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Chubbuck, H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Coulan, Edw., Sept. 12, 1862.

Crowell, Joel, Sept. 12, 1862.

Crook, Patrick, Sept. 12, 1862.

Curtis, E. B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Curtis, G. E., Sept. 12, 1862.

Curtis, W. C., Sept. 12, 1862.

Cushing, U. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Damon, Piam, Sept. 12, 1862.

Damon, W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Davis, J. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Doane, S. K., Sept. 12, 1862.

Donovan, D. O., Sept. 12, 1862.

Elmes, Wm., Sept. 12, 1862.

Fenno, J. A., Sept. 12, 1862.

Foster, L. D., Sept. 12, 1862.

Fuller, H. E., Sept. 12, 1862.

Gammon, H. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Groce, Wm. R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Gurney, J. S., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hallett, C. G., Sept. 12, 1862.

Harvell, Elisha, Sept. 12, 1862.

Hobart, J. T., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hook, C. O., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hughes, R. J., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hunt, J. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Hurley, P., Sept. 12, 1862.

Joyce, L. R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Kenney, E. F., Sept. 12, 1862.

Kennedy, H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Lane, C. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Lane, J. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Lewis, G. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Lowell, H. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Loud, S. M., Sept. 12, 1862.

Mansur, A. J., Sept. 12, 1862.

McMorrow, J., Sept. 12, 1862.

McMorrow, M., Sept. 12, 1862.

Mitchell, R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Mullally, J., Sept. 12, 1862.

O'Connell, C., Sept. 12, 1862.

O'Connell, J., Sept. 12, 1862.

Payue, E., Sept. 12, 1862.

Phillips, G. B., Sept. 12, 1862.

Poole, W. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Rogers, A., Sept. 12, 1862.

Rush, J., Sept. 12, 1862.

Shaw, M. R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Shaw, O. R., Sept. 12, 1862.

Shurtleff, S. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Smith, L., Sept. 12, 1862.

Stoddard, D., Sept. 12, 1862.

Stoddard, G. W., Sept. 12, 1862.

Studley, A. H., Sept. 12, 1862.

Studley, G. S., Sept. 12, 1862. | Turner, L., Sept. 12, 1862.
 Sullivan, D. F., Sept. 12, 1862. | Warner, H., Sept. 12, 1862.
 Sullivan, E., Sept. 12, 1862. | Wetherhee, J. M., Sept. 12, 1862.
 Tangney, J., Sept. 12, 1862. | Wheeler, E. H., Sept. 12, 1862.
 Tower, J. A., Sept. 12, 1862.

1ST BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Ellis, O. H., Sept. 6, 1864. | Smith, J. H., Sept. 9, 1864.

2ND BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Curtis, E. B., Sept. 3, 1864. | Thomas, D., Sept. 3, 1864.

3RD BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Stetson, Henry, Jan. 4, 1864.

5TH BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Gurney, Wm., Jan. 2, 1864. | Stetson, Henry, Jan. 4, 1864.

6TH BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Curtis, E. B., Sept. 3, 1864. | Thomas, David, Sept. 6, 1864.

9TH BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Ellis, Obad H., Sept. 6, 1864. | Nash, Sylv. M., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Galivan, Thomas, Oct. 6, 1864. | Nash, Wm. H., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Gurney, Jas. B., Sept. 6, 1864. | Shaw, F. M., Dec. 27, 1864.
 Lincoln, W. W., Sept. 6, 1864. | Smith, John H., Sept. 9, 1864.

10TH BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Birmingham, Michael, Sept. 8, 1864. | Herlehy, Timothy, Oct. 3, 1864.
 Folley, Patrick, Sept. 8, 1864. | Lee, James, Sept. 8, 1864.

13TH BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Miller, George, April 27, 1864. | Hesson, Michael, April 25, 1864.
 Hayes, John, April 25, 1864. | Shee, John, April 19, 1864.
 Hopkins, Geo., April 25, 1864.

16TH BATT. LIGHT ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Ford, Benj. F., March 11, 1864. | Oldham, W. S., March 11, 1864.

1ST REGT. HEAVY ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Alden, John, Dec. 12, 1863. | Foster, John A., Dec. 12, 1863.
 Bressenhan, John W., Dec. 12, 1863. | Leach, C. H., Dec. 12, 1863.
 1863. | Reed, Geo. B., Dec. 8, 1863.

Company B.

Daniel, W. H., Dec. 8, 1864. | Penniman, Jas., Dec. 14, 1864.

Company D.

Lincoln, James P., Dec. 14, 1863. | Orcutt, Lowell M., Dec. 1, 1863.
 1863. | Turner, Geo. W., Dec. 1, 1863.

Company E.

Brown, Jas. H., Aug. 6, 1862. | Hooker, Jos. E., Dec. 1, 1862.
 Farrar, Lucian W., Aug. 6, 1862. | Hunt, Jr., Seth, Aug. 6, 1862.
 1862. | Sprague, Seth C., Aug. 6, 1862.
 Folsom, Geo. W., Aug. 6, 1862. | Sprague, Seth C., Dec. 31, 1862.

Company L.

Stetson, Oliver, March 10, 1862. | Willie, Reuben, Jan. 29, 1862.

2D REGT. HEAVY ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Bates, James C., Sept. 9, 1864.

Company C.

Campbell, Peter, June 22, 1864. | Toomey, And. C., Sept. 6, 1864.

Company D.

Gloyd, Spencer, Aug. 29, 1864.

Company E.

Beal, James P., Sept. 6, 1864. | Prouty, H. H., Aug. 29, 1864.
 Blanchard, Jos., Sept. 6, 1864. | Russell, Jerem., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Burrell 2d, John, Sept. 2, 1864. | Snell, Nath. B., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Burbank, W. E., Sept. 2, 1864. | Studley, Jas. B., Sept. 2, 1864.
 Kenan, James, Sept. 13, 1864. | Studley, Nathan F., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Laue, Josiah W., Sept. 7, 1864. | Studley, Wm. A., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Murphy, James, Sept. 6, 1864.

Company F.

Judkins, Jas. O., Sept. 7, 1864. | Shaw, Brackley W., Sept. 7, 1864.
 Lane, Gustav. E., Oct. 8, 1863.

Company G.

Gurney, Wesley, Sept. 2, 1864. | Reed, Frederick, Sept. 2, 1864.
 Phillips, Nath'l, Sept. 2, 1864. | Sampson, P. W., Sept. 2, 1864.

Company H.

Donovan, Chas., Sept. 2, 1864. | Hobart, J. F., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Donovan, H. D., Sept. 2, 1864. | Pool, Jos. W., Sept. 6, 1864.

Company I.

Condon, J. H., Sept. 2, 1864. | Loochy, Jere., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Donovan, D. O., Sept. 6, 1864. | O'Connell, Jas., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Elmer, Uru, Sept. 6, 1864. | Reed, Edw. S., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Hall, A. H., Dec. 11, 1863. | Reed, N. A., Sept. 9, 1864.
 Hall, I. G., Dec. 11, 1863. | Shea, Jeremiah, Sept. 6, 1864.
 Llewellyn, Wm., Sept. 6, 1864. | Young, F. L., Sept. 6, 1864.

Unassigned Recruits.

Curtis, E. B., Sept. 3, 1864. | Walker, W. T., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Murphy, Jas., Sept. 6, 1864.

3D REGT. HEAVY ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Nash, F. A., May 23, 1864. | Pool, Ludo A., Sept. 6, 1864.

Company A.

(3d Unattached Company.)

Bicknell, W. H., Sept. 10, 1864. | Keene, Sam. P., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Arnold, W. D., Sept. 6, 1864. | Mackin, Jas., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Birmingham, M., Sept. 6, 1864. | Mackin, John, Sept. 6, 1864.
 Chandler, E. E., Sept. 8, 1864. | McMorrow, J., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Chandler, J. B., Sept. 8, 1864. | McQueeny, J., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Churchill, J. S., Sept. 6, 1864. | Murphy, Jas., Sept. 23, 1864.
 Curtis, C. H., Sept. 6, 1864. | Simons, J. J., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Cushing, U. W., Sept. 6, 1864. | Smith, Albert, Sept. 6, 1864.
 English, John, Sept. 23, 1864. | Studley, G. S., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Estes, Elijah, Sept. 6, 1864. | Studley, R. W., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Eustice, T. F., Sept. 6, 1864. | Thompson, G. D., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Forbes, Wm., Sept. 6, 1864. | Turner, L. W., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Hatch, J. H., Sept. 6, 1864. | Vining, Jno. Q., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Hebbard, J. C., Sept. 6, 1864. | Vining, Jos., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Hunt, H. M., Sept. 6, 1864. | Wheeler, G. F., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Hutchins, C. F., Sept. 6, 1864. | Wheeler, H. A., Sept. 6, 1864.

Company D.

(8th Unattached Company H. A.)

Corkery, Dan., Aug. 14, 1863. | Corkery, Pat., Sept. 8, 1863.
 Roach, John, Sept. 8, 1863. | O'Brien, John, Aug. 14, 1863.
 Conn, Daniel, Aug. 14, 1863.

Company F.

(10th Unattached Company H. A.)

Johnson, J. B., Sept. 16, 1863. | Johnson, Jr., J., Sept. 16, 1863.

4TH REGT. HEAVY ARTILLERY, M. V. (1 year).

(23d Unattached Co. H. A.)

Company G.

Colson, C. E., Aug. 26, 1864. | Hollis, E. F., Aug. 26, 1864.

29th Unattached Co. H, A. M. V. (1 year).

Lewis, John F., Sept. 1, 1864.

1ST BATT. HEAVY ARTILLERY, M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Bates, O. W., March 5, 1864. | Bates, O. W., Feb. 27, 1862.

Company B.

Cushing, S. T., Oct. 29, 1862. | Smith, C. E., Aug. 27, 1863.

Company C.

Claten, Henry, April 22, 1863.

*Company E.*Damon, W., Aug. 12, 1864. | Grover, A. F., Aug. 10, 1864.
Wheeler, D. G., Aug. 12, 1864. | Wheeler, J. H., Aug. 10, 1864.

1ST REGT. CAVALRY, M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Baldwin, George W., Aug. 9, 1862.

Company B.

Dunham, A. J., Aug. 15, 1862. | Reed, W. T., Aug. 9, 1862.

*Company I.*Jacobs, D. W., Sept. 14, 1861. | Studley, J. A., Sept. 14, 1861.
Tucker, J. H., Sept. 14, 1861.*Company K.*Baker, R. L., Sept. 14, 1861. | Gilman, C. K., Sept. 17, 1861.
Smith, A. B., March 22, 1861.

2D REGT. CAVALRY, M. V. (3 years).

*Company G.*Brewster, S. T., Aug. 19, 1864. | McDermott, T., April 18, 1864.
Moisson, Aug., April 19, 1864.*Company I.*Gay, John H., Aug. 25, 1864. | Maher, Philip, April 25, 1864.
Jehnston, Jas. R., April 19, 1864. | Stevens, J. B., April 23, 1864.
1864. | Taylor, T. J., April 22, 1864.Unassigned Recruits.

Bassett, A. J., March 5, 1864. | Boey, Arch., April 25, 1864.

3D REGT. CAVALRY, M. V. (3 years).

Company B.

Russell, Jr., Benj., Jan. 5, 1864.

Company C.

Stoddard, David, Jan. 5, 1864.

*Company K.*Bennett, Seth W., Aug. 9, 1862. | Tirrell, Jr., Americus, Aug. 6, 1862.
Snell, Sam'l L., Jan. 4, 1864.Company M.

Stoddard, John F., Jan. 5, 1864.

Unassigned Recruits.

English, John, Sept. 23, 1864. | Murphy, Jas., Sept. 23, 1864.

4TH REGT. CAVALRY, M. V. (3 years).

Company C.

Jones, Christopher B., Jan. 6, 1864.

Company E.

Quigley, John L., Jan. 27, 1864.

Company F.

Blanchard, Wm. B., Jan. 27, 1864. | Stetson, Charles E., Jan. 27, 1864.

*Company H.*Arnold, Wm. B., Feb. 8, 1864. | Johnson, J. A., Feb. 8, 1864.
Damon, Piam, Feb. 8, 1864. | Mullaly, James, Feb. 8, 1864.*Company I.*Studley, John A., Jan. 1, 1864. | Lewis, Geo. H., Feb. 18, 1864.
Chubbuck, C. H., Feb. 18, 1864. | Rand, Wm. H., Feb. 18, 1864.
Jacobs, D. W., Sept. 14, 1861. | Studley, J. A., Sept. 14, 1861.Company K.

Baker, Reuben L., Sept. 14, 1861.

*Company L.*Baldwin, J. S., Feb. 18, 1864. | Wigginton, J. C., Feb. 18, 1864.
Churchill, W. T., Feb. 18, 1864.Company M.

Green, Henry S., Dec. 1, 1864. | Stevens, C. L., March 1, 1864.

5TH REGT. CAVALRY, M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Brown, Charles, Jan. 9, 1864.

Company B.

Bennett, Charles, Feb. 26, 1864.

Company D.

Jordan, Gadlin, Jan. 29, 1864. | Ward, Randall, Jan. 29, 1864.

2D REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company E.

McCauley, Henry, April 23, 1864.

Company G.

Patterson, Robert, April 20, 1864.

Company H.

Lyon, John P., Oct. 23, 1861.

Company I.

Davis, Lorenzo, May 25, 1861.

Company K.

Snook, John F., May 25, 1861. | Snook, John F., Dec. 31, 1863.

*Unassigned Recruits.*Haller, Geo., April 19, 1864. | Lange, John, April 22, 1864.
Isaacs, Joseph, April 22, 1864. | McKeefrey, J., April 21, 1864.
Jones, Harry, April 20, 1864. | Morse, Harry, April 21, 1864.
Kelly, Wm., April 20, 1864.

7TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Harlow, F. P., Oct. 25, 1862. | Bisbee, Wright, Dec. 20, 1862.
Harlow, F. P., Aug. 1, 1861. | Mayhew, A. L., June 15, 1861.
Harlow, F. P., June 15, 1861. | Gurney, W. H., June 15, 1861.
Reed, Geo. W., Aug. 1, 1861. | Bisbee, Wright, July 21, 1862.
Gurney, W. H., Nov. 1, 1862. | Bosworth, John C., March 26, 1863.
Packard, Daniel, Dec. 7, 1862. | Noyes, Luke B., June 18, 1863.
Gurney, W. H., July 12, 1862.Non-Commissioned Officers.

Noyes, Luke B., June 15, 1861. | Packard, Daniel, Q.M., June 15, 1861.

Band.

Bowles, William A., June 15, 1861.

Company A.

Lincoln, W. A., Aug. 27, 1861. | Witherell, E. A., June 15, 1861.
Rowe, Zaccheus, Aug. 27, 1861.

Company B.

Atwood, F., March 4, 1862. | Hayes, S., March 3, 1862.

Company C.

Cushing, Henry J., Feb. 19, 1862.

Company G.

Locke, P., June 15, 1861. | Quinlan, Dan'l, June 15, 1861.
McDonald, J., June 15, 1861. | Shaw, Charles, June 15, 1861.

Company H.

Gerrish, John B., Aug. 13, 1862.

Company I.

Collins, Joseph, Aug. 24, 1861.

Company K.

Gurney, William H., June 15, 1861.
Alden, E. C., June 15, 1861.
Bain, Ed. M., June 15, 1861.
Bisbee, Wright, June 15, 1861.
Bosworth, J. C., June 15, 1861.
Hutchinson, B. F., June 15, 1861.
Leach, John A., Aug. 24, 1861.
Noyes, Jr., Luke B., June 15, 1861.
Penniman, James M., June 15, 1861.
Raymond, Hansel L., June 15, 1861.
Sherman, T. B., June 15, 1861.
Sherman, T. B., Dec. 27, 1863.
Winslow, J. F., June 15, 1861.
Woodsum, E., June 15, 1861.
Hobart, E. F., June 15, 1861.
Hutchinson, E. D., June 15, 1861.
Cole, Jr., Levi, June 15, 1861.
Bates, Jas. C., June 15, 1861.
Beebe, H. W., June 15, 1861.
Bowdry, J. R., Jan. 20, 1862.
Bradley, J. F., Feb. 6, 1862.
Brown, J. W., June 15, 1861.
Chamberlain, Isaac, June 15, 1861.
Chambers, John L., June 15, 1861.
Cole, O. M., June 15, 1861.
Considine, M., June 15, 1861.
Cook, Fred., June 15, 1861.
Cook, G. W., June 15, 1861.
Cook, T. H., Jan. 29, 1862.
Corthell, S. N., June 15, 1861.
Dunbar, L. E., June 15, 1861.
Erskine, Frank, June 15, 1861.
Fullerton, A., June 15, 1861.
Graver, G. F., June 15, 1861.
Harding, J. W., June 15, 1861.
Hatch, J. T., Feb. 12, 1862.
Hervey, Jos., June 15, 1861.
Hinckley, D., June 15, 1861.
Hinckley, A., June 15, 1861.
Howe, A. M., June 15, 1861.
Howland, Wm. F., June 15, 1861.
Josselyn, W. F., Aug. 24, 1861.
Joyce, I. T., June 15, 1861.
Leavitt, M. M., June 15, 1861.
Lufkin, A., June 15, 1861.
McMakin, John H., June 15, 1861.
Orcutt, Ed., June 15, 1861.
Powers, R. T., Feb. 23, 1862.
Powers, S. A., June 15, 1861.
Reed, C. W., June 15, 1861.
Reed, Cyrus, June 15, 1861.
Reed, H. W., June 15, 1861.
Reed, N. A., June 15, 1861.
Reed, Wm. E., Jan. 27, 1862.
Rich, Moses, June 15, 1861.
Robbins, Jr., Rufus, June 15, 1861.
Snell, Jr., Sam'l L., June 15, 1861.
Sproul, M. L., June 15, 1861.
Stevens, Orso, June 15, 1861.
Taggard, D. P., June 15, 1861.
Thorp, J., June 15, 1861.
Tirrell, Thos., June 15, 1861.
Whiting, A. F., June 15, 1861.
Williamson, L., June 15, 1861.
Wilder, Wm., June 15, 1861.

9TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company B.

Cullinan, J. W., June 11, 1861. | Cullinan, John (Boston), Aug. 18, 1862.
Busse, Wm., Aug. 20, 1863. | Sheehan, M., June 11, 1861.

Company C.

Cushing, A. J., Aug. 21, 1863. | Healey, John, June 11, 1861.

Company E.

Barker, James, June 11, 1861. | Condon, James, June 11, 1861.
Carroll, John, June 11, 1861. | Donovan, Jno., June 11, 1861.

Company G.

Cleary, James, Feb. 5, 1862. | Sanborn, J. D., June 11, 1861.
Ryan, Andrew, June 11, 1861.

Company H.

Clifford, John, June 11, 1861. | Mullin, Thos., June 11, 1861.

Company I.

Donovan, Patrick, June 11, 1861.
11TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Saunders, Edward A., Aug. 8, 1862.

Company C.

Buckley, M., June 13, 1861. | Leoftiss, Martin, Dec. 29, 1863.
Kiernan, F., June 13, 1861. | Welch, M., June 13, 1861.
Leoftiss, Martin, June 13, 1861.

Company H.

Leveaux, F., April 23, 1864. | Nash, Jas. E., Aug. 11, 1862.

Company I.

Connor, John, April 23, 1864.

Company K.

Cassidy, Wm., Aug. 14, 1863. | McGregor, S., Aug. 14, 1863.

Unassigned Recruits.

Boudey, Aug., April 23, 1864. | Manley, Oliver, April 23, 1864.
Centre, Wm., April 19, 1864. | O'Loughleir, M., May 2, 1864.

12TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Reed, E. P., May 6, 1864. | Smith, J. G., May 26, 1864.
Blanchard, Ira, June 26, 1861. | Cushing (2d), L. F., June 26, 1861.
Reed, E. P., June 25, 1862. | Loud, M. M., June 25, 1862.
Reed, E. P., June 26, 1861. | Arnold, M. N., June 26, 1861.
Cushing, L. F., June 25, 1862.

Company G.

Damon, Henry, June 26, 1861. | Foster, S., July 5, 1861.
Smith, Jas. G., Feb. 26, 1864. | Freeman, H. P., June 26, 1861.
Arnold, M. N., June 26, 1861. | Gammon, R. T., Aug. 5, 1861.
Bexton, A. O., June 26, 1861. | Gilman, G. H., June 26, 1861.
Foster, S. B., June 26, 1861. | Gloyd, S., June 26, 1861.
Leavitt, H. C., June 26, 1861. | Hansoun, R. M., June 26, 1861.
McGill, F., June 26, 1861. | Harper, J. H., June 26, 1861.
Reed, Lewis, July 8, 1861. | Hooker, E. B., June 26, 1861.
Glasure, J. L., June 26, 1861. | House, A., June 26, 1861.
Parker, C. A., July 5, 1861. | Hunt, G. H., Sept. 2, 1862.
Abbott, Wm., June 26, 1861. | Hutter, John, June 26, 1861.
Atwood, Chas., June 26, 1861. | Hutter, John, Jan. 6, 1864.
Baldwin, E., June 26, 1861. | Jacobs, W. F., June 26, 1861.
Birmingham, Michael, June 26, 1861. | Keene, M., June 26, 1861.
Chandler, J. B., June 26, 1861. | Llewellyn, J., June 26, 1861.
Conlan, E., June 26, 1861. | Loud, J. M., Aug. 19, 1862.
Damon, T. W., June 26, 1861. | Loud, M. M., June 26, 1861.
Davis, C. H., June 26, 1861. | Lynch, James, July 5, 1861.
Davis, W. R., June 26, 1861. | Maxwell, C. W., June 26, 1861.
Ewell, W. T., June 26, 1861. | Meserve, J., June 26, 1861.
Fish, Lee B., June 26, 1861. | Newton, T. J., June 26, 1861.
Flynn, D., June 26, 1861. | Phillips, N., June 26, 1861.
Foley, M., July 5, 1861. | Pool, E. G., June 26, 1861.
Ford, E. W., July 20, 1861. | Pool, F. W., June 26, 1861.
Porter, R., June 26, 1861.

- Pratt, S. L., June 26, 1861. | Smith, Thomas, July 5, 1861.
 Quinn, J. A., June 26, 1861. | Snell, N. B., June 26, 1861.
 Rand, L. D., June 26, 1861. | Spurr, W. R., June 26, 1861.
 Randall, S. D., June 26, 1861. | Studley, W. A., June 26, 1861.
 Revere, N. L., June 26, 1861. | Walker, W. T., July 20, 1861.
 Shehan, M., June 26, 1861. | Williamson, Frank S., June
 Smith, Dexter, June 26, 1861. | 26, 1861.
 Smith, Jas. G., June 26, 1861.
- Company H.*
 McMakin, John, Aug. 22, 1862.
- Company I.*
 Ferris, Daniel, June 26, 1861.
- Company K.*
 McGrath, Wm., June 26, 1861.
- 13TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Company C.
 Muller, Charles, Aug. 4, 1863.
- Company E.*
 Burns, John, July 16, 1861. | Ryan, Daniel, July 16, 1861.
- 15TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Company E.
 Jones (2d), C. A., July 31, | Konch, H., Aug. 4, 1863.
 1863.
- Company H.*
 Ray, James, Aug. 5, 1863.
- Unassigned Recruits.*
 Mallony, R., April 30, 1864. | Smith, Geo., April 20, 1864.
- 16TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Company E.
 Joy, Henry, Oct. 30, 1861.
- Company G.*
 Harrington, John, July 12, 1861.
- Company H.*
 Frost, B. F., July 18, 1863.
- 17TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Company A.
 O'Connell, J., Sept. 6, 1864.
- Company D.*
 Condon, John, Sept. 2, 1864. | Meany, T., March 12, 1862.
 Donovan, D. O., Sept. 6, 1864. | Meany, T., March 31, 1864.
 Judkins, J. O., Sept. 7, 1864. | Shea, J., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Llewellyn, Wm., Sept. 6, 1864. | Studley, J. B., Sept. 2, 1864.
 Looby, J., Sept. 6, 1864.
- Company E.*
 Campbell, P., Sept. 2, 1864. | Toomey, A. C., Sept. 6, 1864.
 Murphy, J., Sept. 6, 1864.
- Company F.*
 Beal, J. P., Sept. 6, 1864. | Sampson, P. W., Sept. 7, 1864.
 Phillips, N., Sept. 2, 1864.
- Company G.*
 Kirnan, J., Sept. 13, 1864. | Prouty, H. H., Aug. 29, 1864.
- Company H.*
 Bates, John C., Sept. 9, 1864.
- 18TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
 White, W. B., Oct. 15, 1863. | White, W. B., Aug. 20, 1861.
 White, W. B., May 1, 1863.
- Company E.*
 Meiggs, W. S., Aug. 24, 1861. | Meiggs, Wm. S., Jan. 1, 1864.
 Cook, J. A., Aug. 24, 1861.
- Company G.*
 Coughlin, Michael, Aug. 24, 1861.
- Company H.*
 Fuller, Thos., Jan. 2, 1864. | Fuller, Thos., Aug. 24, 1861.
 Howland, C., Aug. 24, 1861. | Howe, F. M., Aug. 24, 1861.
 Phinney, B. F., Aug. 24, 1861. | Poole, Hiram, Aug. 24, 1861.
 Dwyer, Daniel, Aug. 24, 1861. | Towle, J. A., Aug. 24, 1861.
- Company K.*
 Caswell, B. F., Aug. 24, 1861. | Conry, John, Aug. 24, 1861.
 Howard, E., Aug. 24, 1861.
- 19TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Band.
 Poole, Ludo A., Sept. 9, 1861. | Turner, N., Sept. 19, 1861.
- Company A.*
 Hubbard, C., April 22, 1864. | Ludlow, J., March 28, 1864.
 Jones, Geo. W., Aug. 28, 1861.
- Company E.*
 Maida, John, July 26, 1861.
- Company I.*
 Roberts, Sylv., Aug. 28, 1861. | Cook, Bartlett, July 26, 1861.
- 20TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Band.
 Bass, Alden, Sept. 4, 1861. | Foster, A., Sept. 14, 1861.
 Fairbanks, W. A., Sept. 14, | Gurney, J. S., Sept. 14, 1861.
 1861.
- Company A.*
 Beal, B. W. (Dover, Me.), Aug. 31, 1861. | Beal, B. W. (Abington), Feb.
 23, 1864.
- Company C.*
 Sherman, T. B., Dec. 25, 1863.
- Company E.*
 Rush, John, Aug. 15, 1861. | Smith, Geo., April 22, 1864.
- Company F.*
 Berkley, John, Aug. 7, 1863. | Thompson, J., July 18, 1861.
- Company G.*
 Mallony, Robt., April 30, 1864. | Whiting, Hiram L., Sept. 4,
 Ray, James, Aug. 5, 1863. | 1861.
- Company H.*
 Long, Edward, Aug. 7, 1863. | Ford, John C., Dec. 31, 1861.
 Foley, Daniel, Aug. 1, 1861.
- Company K.*
 Morris, Joseph, July 23, 1861.
- Unassigned Recruits.*
 Bren, Peter, April 22, 1864. | Marmswanee, Joseph, April
 Clipper, Adam, April 21, | 19, 1864.
 1864. | Smith, Charles, Aug. 3, 1863.
- 21st REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).
Company F.
 Murch, Joseph, Aug. 19, 1861.

22d REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company K.

Benedict, Newton, Sept. 6, 1861. | Meady, Richard H., Sept. 6, 1861.

23d REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Peirce, H. B., Sept. 20, 1864. | Atwood, T. B., Oct. 8, 1861.
Peirce, H. B., Sept. 1, 1863. | Atwood, T. S., June 2, 1865.

Non-Commissioned Officer.

Peirce, Henry B., Oct. 14, 1861.

Company E.

Atwood, T. S., Dec. 3, 1863. | Leavitt, C. I., Dec. 3, 1863.
Sewall, J. M., Sept. 28, 1861. | Pearson, B. F., Oct. 7, 1861.
Towle, James S., Sept. 28, 1861. | Peirce, H. B., Oct. 14, 1861.
Atwood, T. S., Aug. 6, 1862. | Pratt, Henry, Sept. 28, 1861.
Cook, Joshua, Aug. 1, 1862. | Raymond, Harvey A., Aug. 2, 1862.
Gould, O. E., Dec. 21, 1863. | Searles, Wm. H., Sept. 28, 1861.
Leavitt, B. F., Dec. 24, 1863. | Sewall, Dummer, Sept. 28, 1861.
Leavitt, C. I., Nov. 6, 1861.

Company B.

Burgess, Charles B., Sept. 21, 1861.

Company C.

Willis, Samuel, Oct. 16, 1861. | Willis, Samuel, Jan. 4, 1864.

Company D.

Fuller, Isaac A., Jan. 4, 1864. | Scott, Wm. H., Nov. 28, 1861.
Metcalf, C. E., Jan. 4, 1864. | Young, C. B., Jan. 4, 1864.

Unassigned Recruit.

Towle, John A., Jan. 4, 1864.

26th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company C.

Hargrave, John, April 21, 1864.

Company D.

McGahan, Daniel, Jan. 1, 1864.

Unassigned Recruits.

Foster, William, April 20, 1864.

27th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company C.

Douglas, John C., Jan. 19, 1863.

28th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Childs, G., Aug. 11, 1863. | Sullivan, M., April 19, 1864.
Sanborn, O., April 19, 1864. | Sullivan, P., April 19, 1863.
Shanahan, J., Jan. 2, 1864.

Company B.

Kirley, M., Aug. 10, 1863. | Maglas, J., April 23, 1864.
Kirley, M., May 22, 1864.

Company C.

Cossett, J., April 21, 1864. | English, G., Aug. 11, 1863.

Company D.

Conner, P., Jan. 2, 1864. | Smith, J., April 20, 1864.
Leroux, L., Aug. 23, 1864.

Company E.

Conn, D., Dec. 13, 1861. | Simpson, J., Aug. 11, 1863.
Neville, T., Dec. 13, 1861.

Company F.

Meyers, J., Aug. 10, 1863. | Miller (1st), A., Aug. 11, 1863.

Company K.

Condon, Morris, Dec. 13, 1861.

Unassigned Recruits.

Carpenter, P., April 25, 1864. | Marsh, J., April 18, 1864.
Griffin, R. H., April 22, 1864. | Meaget, B., April 22, 1864.
Gunsalus, H., April 20, 1864. | Murphy, W., April 25, 1864.
Kelley, J., April 22, 1864.

29th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company B.

Cark, John, May 14, 1861.

30th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company E.

Harding, G. W., Oct. 23, 1861. | Matthews, H. O., Oct. 11, 1861.
Ripley, G. W., Oct. 7, 1861.

32d REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company A.

Clark, B. A., Aug. 16, 1862. | Clark, B. A., Jan. 5, 1864.

Company E.

Stoddard, Benjamin B., Sept. 14, 1863.

Company F.

Cleary, James, Feb. 5, 1862. | Gurney, Francis M., Jan. 5, 1864.
Gurney, F. M., Feb. 19, 1862.

Company G.

Keen, Chas. J., June 23, 1862. | Keen, Chas. J., Jan. 5, 1864.

Company H.

Brooks, Edwin M., Sept. 14, 1863.

Company M.

Brown, Woodbridge, Sept. 2, 1863.

Unassigned Recruits.

Meiggs, William S., Jan. 1, 1864.

33d REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company B.

Bennett, Charles, Feb. 26, 1864.

Company K.

Bennett, Jr., Seth W., Aug. 6, 1862.

37th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company E.

Sherman, Thomas B., Dec. 26, 1863.

Unassigned Recruits.

Leach, John A., Aug. 24, 1861.

38th REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Allen, Chas. F., July 16, 1863. | Bates, Jas. E., June 17, 1865.
Allen, Chas. F., Aug. 14, 1862. | Nash (2d), F. A., Aug. 14, 1862.
Reed, Timothy, Nov. 1, 1862. | Washburn, Jerome, March 8, 1863.
Reed, Timothy, Aug. 14, 1862. |
Nash, F. A., March 3, 1863. | Caton, Jos. W., Oct. 26, 1864.

Company C.

Bates, Jas. E., Aug. 20, 1862. | Washburn, J., Aug. 20, 1862.
Bickford, J. E., Aug. 20, 1862. | Alden, E. C., Aug. 20, 1862.
Caton, Jos. W., Aug. 20, 1862. | Cole, E. T., Aug. 20, 1862.
Ewell, Wm. T., Aug. 20, 1862. | Holbrook, N. O., Aug. 20, 1862.
Powers, H. W., Aug. 20, 1862. | Nash, Chas. D., Aug. 20, 1862.
Tuttle, E. G., Aug. 20, 1862. | Newton, H.O.F., Aug. 20, 1862.

Osborne, J. A., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Pierce, H. G., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Ripley, Edwin, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Sampson, Niles, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Teague, L., Aug. 20, 1861.
 Bicknell, W. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Healey, J. A., Aug. 20, 1862.
 McKinney, Samuel H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Allen, C. W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bailey, James, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Baldwin, C. L., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Baldwin, I. B., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Barrett, B. K., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bany, David F., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bates, Charles, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bates, David B., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bates, Edwin, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Beal, Daniel W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Beal, George E., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bicknell, Allison, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Bushnell, C., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Capen, S. G., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Carney, Frank, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Cook, Josiah G., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Corthell, D. M., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Corthell, J. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Donovan, F., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Downey, Brino, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Dyer, E. L., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Edson, J. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Ellis, Calvin C., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Ellis, Jason, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Elmes, George, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Finnigan, J., Aug. 20, 1862.

Foster, Hiram, Aug. 20, 1862.
 French, C. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Gurney, A. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Hopkins, Isaac, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Howe, G. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Knowles, W. W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Lovewell, G. B., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Manchester, George W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 McGill, Darius, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Merrows, J., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Morris, E. G., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Millett, H. C., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Nash, E. E., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Perry, J., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Powers, D. W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Prior, E. O., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Ramsdell, P. W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Randall, J. W., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Rice, Alvin, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Ripley, Joseph, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Sampson, John, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Sharpe, G., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Stewart, N. M., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Sullivan, J. N., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Swain, Levi A., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Talbot, Peter, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Thorpe, T. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Truet, Joseph, Aug. 20, 1862.
 Walker, C. H., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Washburn, Jr., Ezra E., Aug. 20, 1862.
 Willey, J. H., Aug. 20, 1862.

Company D.

Haverstock, John H., Aug. 20, 1862.

Company I.

Farry, James, April 30, 1864.

Company K.

Estes, Daniel B., Aug. 20, 1862.

39TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company D.

Curtis, Albert, Aug. 13, 1862.

Company E.

Hutter, John, Jan. 5, 1864.

Company H.

Gammon, Randall T., Aug. 3, 1863.

54TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Reed, Lewis, June 19, 1865. | Reed, Lewis, July 9, 1863.
 Reed, Lewis, Feb. 4, 1864.

Company I.

Means, Ernsley B., Oct. 10, 1863.

56TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Randall, A. B., May 17, 1864. | Randall, A. B., Nov. 21, 1863.

Company D.

Coy, George W., Dec. 29, 1863. | Mann, E. M., Dec. 29, 1863.
 Barry, Michael, Dec. 29, 1863. | Mullen (2d), Michael, Dec. 29, 1863.
 Everson, D. H., Dec. 29, 1863. | Whiting, W. L., Dec. 29, 1863.
 Lawless, James, Dec. 29, 1863. | Wood, Benj. F., Dec. 29, 1863.
 Loud, Sam'l M., Dec. 29, 1863.

Company F.

Downey, Dennis, Jan. 12, 1864.

57TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company G.

Hayes, James, March 4, 1864. | Leyden, Daniel, March 4, 1864.
 Kennedy, Jr., Patrick, March 4, 1864. | McCarthy, D., Feb. 20, 1864.
 4, 1864. | Miller, W. T., March 10, 1864.

58TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company B.

Reed, S. Bryant, Feb. 8, 1864.

Company F.

Caswell, George A., March 12, 1864.

Company H.

Fernald, B. W., April 18, 1864. | Willis, Benj., April 18, 1864.

Company I.

Graham, Wm., May 13, 1864. | Reed, Nath. L., May 13, 1864.

59TH REGT. INF., M. V. (3 years).

Company G.

Connor, Thos., March 4, 1864. | Kennedy, P. J., March 4, 1864.
 Hayes, James, March 4, 1864. | Leyden, Daniel, March 4, 1864.
 Willard, M., March 4, 1864. | McCarthy, D., March 4, 1864.

Company K.

Smith, Henry B., April 21, 1864.

62D REGT. INF., M. V. (1 year).

Seavey, William B., March 13, 1865.

Company A.

Sharp, Alfred, April 10, 1865. | Sharp, E. S., April 10, 1865.
 Sharp, E. G., April 10, 1865. | Stetson, C. F., April 10, 1865.

Company C.

Bebee, Chas. W., April 12, 1865. | White, Henry M., April 12, 1865.
 Swain, H. F., April 12, 1865.

REGULAR ARMY.

Additon, Otis R., March 22, 1864. | Morse, Job L., March 22, 1864.
 Bates, Watson, March 22, 1864. | Murray, C. D., Jan. 1, 1864.
 Beale, F., March 31, 1864. | Nelson, Cyrus, Feb. 20, 1864.
 Blanchard, Benj. S., March 18, 1864. | Noyes, E. L., March 22, 1864.
 1864. | Packard, Chas. W., March 22, 1864.
 Brown, G. A., March 22, 1864. | Packard, H. P., Jan. 4, 1864.
 Brown, H. H., March 22, 1864. | Poole, H. E., March 22, 1864.
 Brown, J. W., Jan. 21, 1864. | Pratt, S. L., March 22, 1864.
 Cobb, David, Feb. 18, 1864. | Raymond, Walter A., March 22, 1864.
 Crocker, T. W., March 26, 1864. | Robbins, L., March 22, 1864.
 1864. | Robbins, T. P., March 29, 1864.
 Cushing, W. H., Feb. 18, 1864. | Sanborn, James H., March 22, 1864.
 Everson, L. T., March 26, 1864. | Sturtevant, George E., Oct. 26, 1864.
 Harding, Edw. C., March 22, 1864. | Hathaway, Thomas H., March 22, 1864.
 1864. | Sullivan, J., March 22, 1864.
 Holbrook, N. O., March 29, 1864. | Turner, Nathan, Jan. 4, 1864.

OTHER STATE ORGANIZATIONS.

Bly, Charles F., Jan. 20, 1864. | Wheeler, E. H., Jan. 16, 1864.

James W. Ward.

LIST OF VOLUNTEERS AND NAVAL MEN MENTIONED IN HOBART'S "HISTORY OF ABINGTON," BUT NOT FOUND IN THE "RECORD."

Freeman, Harvey P.	Pettee, Lemuel.
Jewett, John.	Flynn, Thomas.
Henis, Richard R.	Jones, William A.
Burke, James.	Jones, Samuel W.
Cronan, Dennis.	Thayer, Franklin P.
Galliber, Owen.	Jones, Charles H.
Donovan, John F.	Smith, George W.
Lyden, Martin.	Smith, Charles.
Flynn, James.	Fleming, Peter.
Grady, John O.	Friary, Peter.
Lahay, Thomas.	Lee, James.
Lyden, Morton.	Murphy, Dennis.
Rendergrass, John.	McIlvaine, Hugh.
Mahoney, Thomas.	O'Connell, Jeremiah.
Leavitt, Thomas.	O'Donnell, Hugh.
Dugan, Michael.	Cavanaugh, William.
Stetson, Oliver.	Penniman, George.
Riley, Michael.	Cushing, Samuel F.
Campbell, William M.	Farrar, Calvin.
Caswell, Benjamin.	Churchill, Robert.
Rider, Edmund.	Hooker, Edward.
Mead, John.	Josselyn, James E.
Madin, John.	Joyce, Thomas.
Pettee, Michael.	Randall, Osias.
Smith, George H.	Witherell, Ebenezer A.
French, Charles L.	Baldwin, Henry.
Mellon, Joel B.	Cronin, Daniel.
Dugan, John.	Cooney, Patrick.
Naval, Thomas.	Cassidy, Thomas.
O'Connell, James.	Chandler, J. B.
Mathews, Warren.	Davis, John T.
Randall, George P.	Downey, Dennis.
Tirrell, Jr., Americus V.	Foster, S. Boardman.
Tirrell, Major.	Hatch, George.
Quinlan, James.	Maxwell, Charles W.
Fish, Isaac H.	McGill, Floreenc.
Cassaland, James W.	Manary, Frank.
Cushman, Isaiab.	McGrath, William.
Henry, Philander.	O'Brine, Daniel.
Bourk, John.	Ryerson, Simeon.
Wales, William.	Ring, Osgood.
Moore, Horace D.	Lane, Andrew.
Hallihan, Dennis.	Leavitt, Peter M.
Gurney, Francis M.	Harris, John H.
Lealey, Patrick.	Hall, Ichabod G.
Cushing, Henry G.	Hall, Alonzo.
Merritt, Quincy.	Hayes, John.
Clark, John.	Birmingham, Richard.
Cobb, Henry.	Hatch, John T.
Swain, Theron L.	Snell, Jr., Samuel L.
Corthell, Elmer L.	Churchill, Millard F.
Breck, M. V. B.	Ford, Charles E.
Bowden, Dennis.	Snooks, John G.
Damon, Edwin H.	Fay, William.
Driscoll, Patrick.	Griffin, Michael.
Holbrook, William.	McGill, Alexander.
Webster, William.	Waters, James.
Campbell, John.	Whitney, Hiram L.
Callihan, Daniel.	Foley, Cornelius.
Briggs, Geo. W.	Foster, Alonzo T.
Gurney, Silas.	Meserve, Solomon.
Gurney, Winfield S.	Claton, Henry.
Dolan, Michael.	Sheean, Michael.

Gurney, Francis M.	Millett, George L.
Nash, Francis H.	Thomas, David.
Kelly, Thomas.	Hobart, John T.
Coran, Michael.	Bates, Napoleon P.
Foley, Edward.	Pease, William H.
Wheeler, Charles H.	Driscoll, Timothy.
McCarthy, Felix.	Roles, George.
Holland, John.	Wilder, James.
Leronx, Lewis.	Washburn, Jerome.

NAVAL MEN.

Barry, David F.	McQuire, James.
Beal, George E.	Nash, Elmer H.
Bennett, Jr., Seth W.	Nash, Francis A.
Bennett, Benjamin V.	Noyes, Ephraim L.
Campbell, James.	Ripley, Joseph.
Cushing, William H.	Ripley, Edwin.
Claxton, Robert.	Robbins, Loring.
Driscoll, Timothy.	Russell, George H.
Hathaway, George.	Saunders, Edward.
Hathaway, Thomas.	Thorillett, Peter.
Jackson, Henry O.	Trott, Thomas.
Lawless, James.	Washburn, —.
Lynch, James.

NAMES NOT FOUND IN "RECORD" (CONTINUED).

Allen, Calvin W.	Mitchell, Seth W.
Alden, Edward C.	Phillips, David T.
Brown, James H.	Pool, Peregrine W.
Bates, Edwin.	Perkins, Joshua L.
Capen, A. Augustus.	Robbins, Edwin R.
Cushing, Henry L.	Sprague, Jr., Seth C.
Cole, Ephraim T.	Steingardt, Benjamin.
Farrar, Lucian W.	Soper, Henry A.
Folsom, George W.	Townsend, Newton.
Fish, Andrew W.	Teague, Lysander.
Foster, William E.	Taylor, John G.
Hunt, Seth, Jr.	Witherell, Robert E.
Hudson, John.	Whiting, Thomas F.
Howland, Nathaniel T.	Conlan, Edward.
Hill, Morton E.	O'Connell, James.
Lond, Lemuel J.	Randall, Anson B.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

REV. JAMES W. WARD.

The Rev. James Wilson Ward was one of the influential men and marked characters of Plymouth County, and distinguished for his learning, his energy, and his public spirit. He was born in Alna, Me., May 21, 1803, where his father, the Rev. Jonathan Ward, long known in the churches of New Hampshire as "Father Ward," was then preaching. His grandfather, the Rev. Nathan Ward, was one of the original settlers of Plymouth, N. H., and the minister of the colony. Young Wilson spent his boyhood in Plymouth, N. H., whither his father returned from Alna, serving for a number of years as minister of the church there. He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1826, where he stood at or next to the head of his class. After teaching for a few years in the academies at South Berwick, Me., and Ipswich, Mass., and studying theology at Andover and New Haven, he settled, in 1834, as pastor of the First Congregational Church in Abington, where he remained for nearly a quarter of a century.

Mr. Ward was a remarkably clear thinker, a man of great will-force and moral power. It is not strange that he soon became one of the leading ministers in the county at a time when the influence of the ministry was not small. It was in the early days of the anti-slavery movement that he came to Abington, and he was soon found to be an abolitionist. He preached and spoke freely against slavery, and in 1835, when the English abolitionist, George Thompson, was visiting this country, he invited him to occupy his pulpit on Sunday. Public sentiment did not support the innovation, and the church was battered with stones, and the mob outside was threatening. Mr. Thompson left the meeting-house protected on one side by Mr. Ward's young wife, and on the other by Mr. Ward's aged father, and from the nearest house Mr. Ward took Mr. Thompson through the fields to his own home. The next Sunday he preached a sermon against mobs. It was in great part due to Mr. Ward's active influence that Abington was one of the first towns to welcome anti-slavery sentiment, and to cast an anti-slavery vote.

Mr. Ward was deeply interested in education. He was always active in the cause of the public schools, and it was chiefly due to his influence actively exerted in earnest discussions in town-meetings that the old system of district schools was replaced by the system of graded schools. He was the father of the present system, and carried it against great opposition. A fine scholar himself, versed in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, French, and German, he sought out promising boys in the schools and persuaded them to take a college course. His own children he educated chiefly himself, carrying both boys and girls through a full course of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. He was a number of times invited to take a professorship or presidency in a college or theological seminary, but declined, preferring the quiet of a pastorate in Abington.

As a pastor he was active and faithful, as the growth of the church and the swarming of another church from it showed. His interest in public affairs, however, forced him somewhat in public life, and for a number of years he represented the town in the State House of Representatives, and the county in the Senate. In both of these capacities he served with more than usual success. In the State Legislature he took especial interest in questions of education and in laws giving equal property rights to women. He was deeply interested in the organization of the Liberty party and afterwards of the Free-Soil party, and, later still, of the Republican party.

During his pastorate in Abington Mr. Ward was a faithful student of the theological questions of the day, ranking with the more liberal wing in the Congregational body. He was for some time one of the corresponding editors of the Congregationalist, and contributed some of its ablest articles to the "Bibliotheca Sacra."

His voice failing him in 1856, he left Abington and spent a few years in Madison, Wis., and Davenport, Iowa, but after marrying again, in 1862, he returned to Plymouth County, and made his home for the last ten years of his life in Lakeville, Mass., where he supplied the pulpit of the Congregational Church, though without formally assuming the full responsibilities of a pastor.

Mr. Ward was married, in 1834, to Miss Hetta Lord Hayes, daughter of Judge William A. Hayes, of South Berwick, Me. She died Dec. 11, 1842, leaving behind her five young children. Of the care and education of these children Mr. Ward assumed the charge, not marrying again until they had left his home. In 1862 he was married to Mrs. Caroline L. Ward, of Lakeville, Mass., who survived him. For some years they spent the winters in New York, and it was while there that he met with an accident, in getting from a street car on a very icy street, which caused his death three days later, Jan. 30, 1873, in the seventieth year of his age. He was buried from the church of which he was so long pastor, and followed to the grave by multitudes who desired to honor his memory.

---

MOSES N. ARNOLD.

The family of Arnold is of great antiquity, having its origin among the ancient princes of Wales. According to a pedigree recorded in the College of Arms they trace from Ynir, king of Gwentland, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century, and who was paternally descended from Ynir, the second son of Cadwaladr, king of the Britons, which Cadwaladr built Abergavenny in the county of Monmouth, and its castle, which was afterwards rebuilt by Hamlet ap Hamlet, ap Sir Druce, of Balladou, in France, and

Eng'd by A. H. Ritchie

W. N. Arnold

portions of the wall still remain. This family has produced in England many eminent men, notably that great teacher Dr. Arnold, of Rugby; the celebrated lecturer, poet, and critic, Matthew Arnold; Edwin Arnold, author of "Light of Asia," etc. The first American ancestor of Moses N. Arnold was Thomas, whose descendants were among the early settlers of Watertown. His great-grandfather, Thomas, was a resident of Abington (Rockland). His grandfather, Jonathan, born about 1794, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and one of the constituent members of the First Universalist Church of Abington, in 1836. His father, Jonathan Arnold, Jr., was born in Abington, April 5, 1818. From early youth he worked at his trade, shoemaking, receiving his education at common schools, where he became qualified for teaching, and when twenty years old, began teaching winter terms of school, and for twenty years followed this avocation in district and grammar schools. He has served fifteen years on school committee, ten years—from 1847 to 1857—consecutively, and in 1875 and 1876 was selectman, which office then included assessor and overseer of the poor. In 1865 and 1866 he represented Abington in the State Legislature as a Republican, and as a labor reformer in 1870. He married Aug. 3, 1841, Abigail, daughter of Moses and Lucy E. (Bennett) Noyes. They have had fifteen children.

MOSES N. ARNOLD, son of Jonathan and Abigail (Noyes) Arnold, was born in Abington, Jan. 31, 1844. He attended the schools of his native town, but while yet a lad commenced to work at shoemaking. He was only about seventeen years old when the civil war broke out, and, like many of the patriotic youth of our loyal Massachusetts, left home and joined the army of the brave and gallant many who jeopardized their lives for their country, enlisting April 19, 1861, in Company G, Twelfth (Webster) Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, for three years. He served in the Army of the Potomac, and was engaged with his regiment in all the bloody, destructive, and historic battles in which that grand army participated, except the Peninsular campaign. From a position in the ranks, by his gallantry and attention to duty, he advanced step by step until when, after thirty-eight months' service, his regiment was mustered out, July 8, 1864, he was in command of his company, with commission of captain. He was wounded in the battle of Antietam by a ball through the neck.

Returning to Abington, he worked "on the bench" about one year, and then in a small way engaged in manufacturing. This was in 1865. By his thrift, energy, and business qualities Mr. Arnold has rapidly placed his name and factory among the leading institutions of the kind in this great centre of shoe manufacturing. He now employs about five hundred operatives. Although strongly Republican in political principles, Mr. Arnold has had no time to meddle in politics, as his largely-increasing business has absorbed his entire attention and given solid financial results. He has taken Masonic degrees to Knights Templar, and is a member of McPherson Post, G. A. R., of which he has been commander.

He married, Sept. 17, 1867, Martha, daughter of Deacon James and Deborah (Jones) Ford. They have six children,—Abbie, Agnes, James, Ethel, Percy, and Helen.

As an evidence of the harmonious relations existing between Mr. Arnold and his employés and the way he pushes business, we quote from the Plymouth County Journal of Aug. 1, 1884:

"A HAPPY FAMILY.—It would be hard in all Plymouth County, or in any other county, to find a happier, jollier, more contented, or better paid army of working people than the four hundred and fifty, more or less, men and women in the great brick shoe-factory of Moses N. Arnold, at North Abington. From the basement to the fifth story the hum of men and machinery reminds one of a veritable hive of industry.

"From humble beginnings Mr. Arnold's factory has grown to be one of the leading factories in the State. Increasing business has led to constant additions to his building, the latest being the erection of a brick addition on the south side of the centre, five stories high, thirty-five by twenty-five feet. Its purpose was to get the main stairways out of the main building. These the addition now contains, and besides them it contains the elevator and a large room on each floor. The first is a stock-room; the second, office; the third, office of the bottoming department; the fourth and fifth are occupied by cutters. These four hundred and fifty employés are now turning out about one hundred cases of fall goods per day. Thus far this season there has been no slacking up, and Mr. Arnold thinks there will be none. This is one of the factories which will pull through without even a temporary shut down."

Mr. Arnold is a man of sterling integrity, honest, and sincere. As a citizen, he is public-spirited, energetic, industrious, and progressive, and has always favored and earnestly supported whatever tended to the advancement and the best interests of his community. As a soldier, he did his full duty. All in all, Mr. Arnold is one of the live, enterprising men of the day, and a specimen of a class of which Massachusetts is justly proud,—her self-made men.

Capt. M. N. Arnold entered upon the manufacture of boots and shoes in October, 1865. He worked at the bench as a shoemaker for Mr. M. C. Wales about a year after he was discharged from the United States service, and then began business for himself. At this time he cut his own sole-leather, and, as he had no rolling machine, he was accustomed to take the leather to the shop of a neighboring shoemaker and roll it by hand. In 1867 he moved to the factory that had been occupied in former years by S. R. Wales. Here his business greatly increased until 1870, when he was obliged to have more room. He then moved into the south part of the steam-mill of Amos Reed, which had been specially fitted up for him. The business was prosecuted here successfully for five years, at the end of which time it demanded still larger accommodations, and the present factory was built.

The building was originally one hundred and twenty-five by forty feet, and four stories high. Seventy-five feet have since been added to the length, and a south wing, thirty-five by twenty-five feet and five stories high, has just been completed. This factory is fully equipped with modern machinery, embracing the most recent results of man's inventive genius, and is well-nigh perfect in all its appointments. The chimney-stack, which may well be termed a landmark, is one hundred and ten feet high.

Capt. Arnold carries on the largest boot and shoe business in Plymouth County. The grade of goods produced is very high, and prominent manufacturers inform me that there is no firm in the United States manufacturing so fine a quality of goods that is doing so large a business. It may be well to state, in order to give some idea of the extent of the business, that there are eighty-four employés in the stitching department alone. The total number of employés is five hundred, and the sum paid for wages for the year ending July 1, 1884, was two hundred and forty thousand dollars. For the same period there were produced twenty-three thousand cases of boots and shoes, aggregating two hundred and seventy-six thousand pairs, at a market value of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The business has had a steady growth, and is in a sound and healthy condition. Since 1867, Mr. Arnold has had a mutual interest in the firm of Potter, White & Baylie, Summer Street, Boston.

WILLIAM E. LYON.

Next to Capt. Arnold, Mr. William E. Lyon carries on the largest manufacturing business in the north part of the town. He began manufacturing shoes Jan. 1, 1866, and took as a partner Henry C. Buck, under the firm-name of Buck & Lyon, each contributing five hundred dollars. The value of their manufactures the first year was only about five thousand dollars, which gave employment to only three employés besides themselves. At the expiration of the first year Mr. Lyon bought out his partner, and has since conducted the business himself, increasing a little each year, until about five years ago, when he began to manufacture lawn-tennis and base-ball canvas shoes. Since then his trade has rapidly increased, and he now owns a large factory thoroughly equipped with power and all the modern machinery, and gives employment to one hundred persons. The product of the factory last year was six thousand three hundred cases, or one hundred and fifty-one thousand two hundred pairs. The value of the production was one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Mr. Lyon is, like Capt. Arnold, a public-spirited citizen, and throws his influence on the side of every good cause. He is a ready public speaker whenever occasion demands. Educated in the public schools of Abington, his native town, he was ambitious to pursue his studies further, and so spent some time at the academies then existing at South Braintree and Middleboro'. Both Mr. Lyon and Capt. Arnold are striking examples of what young men may become, even though born in the so-called humbler walks of life, provided they are endowed with that very essential gift known as common sense, and are correct in their habits of life, and have received the quickening mental impulse afforded by the common schools.

HENRY B. PEIRCE.

Henry B. Peirce was born in Duxbury, Aug. 6, 1841, but has resided in Abington for the past thirty-eight years. He is a lineal descendant of one of the early heroes of the Old Colony. His ancestor, Capt. Michael Peirce, of Scituate, was sent out by the Governor and Council of Plymouth, in 1676, to stay the ravages of the Narragansett Indians and drive them back to Rhode Island. Capt. Peirce was a man of the most resolute and undaunted courage, and when his command, which consisted of fifty Englishmen and twenty friendly Indians, encountered a large force of the Narragansetts at Attleboro' Gore, they maintained their ground with invincible courage and patriotic devotion until Capt. Peirce and nearly every one of his men were slain, "being called," as the early historian quaintly expressed it, "to imitate Samson, who was content to die with his enemies that he might overthrow them thereby."

The subject of this sketch was educated in the public schools of Abington, and at the Mercantile Academy in Boston, and for a short time was employed in a shoe-factory, first at the bench and subsequently as a book-keeper. When he was only twenty years of age (Oct. 14, 1861) he enlisted for the defense of the Union as a private in Company E, Twenty-third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, and served with honor and credit continuously until the triumphant close of the war. He shared the fortunes and privations of his regiment during its campaigns as a portion of the Burnside expedition, and while subsequently attached to the department of the South, the department of Virginia and North Carolina, the Army of the James, and the Army of the Potomac.

He was appointed commissary-sergeant Dec. 9, 1862; commissioned first lieutenant Sept. 1, 1863; appointed regimental quartermaster Jan. 3, 1864, and commissioned captain Sept. 20, 1864. He was appointed acting commissary of subsistence upon Gen. Harland's staff in April, 1865, and was discharged with his regiment at the close of the war, July 10, 1865. After his return home he was for a short time engaged in the business of insurance, but he was soon called to service by his former comrades-in-arms. Always, from the organization, an active member of the Grand Army of the Republic, he was selected from time to time to serve in various official positions in that order, and in August, 1870, he was appointed by Gen. James L. Bates, then department commander, to the position of assistant adjutant-general of the department of Massachusetts. He discharged the duties of the office with such admirable system and fidelity that he was annually reappointed by each succeeding department commander until he was elected secretary of the commonwealth, in 1875.

He has always been the warmest, sympathetic, and practical friend of the deserving soldier. In 1870 he was appointed a member of the commission for the care of disabled soldiers, and, as its secretary and treasurer, the active portion of its work fell to his share.

The aid distributed by that commission afforded relief to a large number of cases, the merits and necessities of which he had personally investigated. He is a public-spirited member of the community in which he resides, as has been frequently manifested by his inaugurating and aiding measures for the social, intellectual, and moral improvement of its citizens, and he is ever ready to embrace any opportunity to advance the individual or collective interests of his townsmen, or to contribute to their entertainment and pleasure. He is prominent in many local organizations and enterprises, and is a trustee of the Abington Public Library, a director of the Abington Mutual Insurance Company, and one of the park commissioners.

His administration of the important and responsible office of secretary of the commonwealth has been governed by the principles which guide the successful business man in the conduct of his private affairs. His systematic methods have simplified the public business, and rendered its transaction more expeditious; his careful economy has resulted in a large reduction of the expenses of the office; and his personal cordiality and courtesy to all who have occasion to visit the department have made him a very popular official, and caused the secretary's office to be regarded as a model public department; that the citizens of the commonwealth appreciate his valuable and faithful services is shown by his re-election to the office for the ninth time and by the very flattering popular vote which he has each time received, that of 1880 being the largest ever received by any candidate for any office in Massachusetts.

---

JOSEPH PETTEE.

Joseph Pettee was born in Salisbury, Conn., March 14, 1809; graduated at Yale College, class of 1833; after graduation entered the Theological School at New Haven; became a member of the Orthodox Church quite early in life, and was much interested in spiritual subjects; was interested in and benefited by the advanced views of Dr. Taylor and other teachers of that class; became attached to the writings of Swedenborg, particularly by his doctrine of the sole divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, which doctrine is that the whole Trinity is embodied in Him. The adoption of the doctrine of the New Church made him undecided as to whether he should carry out his intention of becoming a preacher. On this account he did not continue his connection with the Theological School, and spent several years in teaching, continuing, in connection, his reading of New Church theology. In the latter part of 1836, or early in 1837, by the advice of judicious friends, he decided to prepare for the ministry of the New Church. In the latter part of 1837 he received a license to preach, and officiated at Portland, Bath, and Gardiner, Me., about three months. While at Gardiner received an invitation to preach for the society in Abington as a candidate for settlement. After a candidacy of six months, from January to July, 1838, was elected pastor, and was ordained the 25th of the latter month. Continued in this relation till July, 1875, thirty-seven years. The connection was dissolved for the reason that the Massachusetts Association, consisting of some eighteen or twenty societies, desired his services as its presiding minister, and later as its general pastor.

He continues to reside in the parsonage at Abington, but has his office and headquarters at the New Church Rooms, 169 Tremont Street, Boston.

He was married, Feb. 24, 1835, to Mary Pierce, of Salisbury, and has six children, five of whom are married, and, including four who have passed into the spiritual world, has had twenty-three grandchildren.

Mr. Pettee is one of the leading Swedenborgians in the United States.

HISTORY OF SOUTH ABINGTON.

BY CHARLES F. MESERVE, A.M.

THIS is one of the most enterprising towns in the county. It was formerly a part of Abington and East Bridgewater, and was incorporated into a town March 4, 1875. The history of South Abington, like that of Rockland, will be largely found in the article on Abington. There is here a spirit of push and enterprise that is seldom met with, and there is a greater variety of manufactures than in any other part of the town of which it formerly constituted a part. Coffins, caskets, steel shanks, packing-boxes, boots and shoes, tacks, and nails are some of the articles manufactured. South Abington is a pioneer in the tack and nail business, which is still carried on to a great extent by Messrs. Dunbar, Hobart & Whidden, and by D. B. Gurney, Esq. H. H. Brigham, now deceased, was for many years also extensively engaged in this business.

Benjamin Hobart, A.M., engaged in the tack business early in the present century, and has contributed much to the prosperity of this town. Mr. Hobart was a lawyer by profession, and a liberal-hearted, public-spirited gentleman of culture. He will long be remembered as the author of Hobart's "History of Abington."

Probably no town in Plymouth County has grown more rapidly during the past five years than the beautiful town of South Abington.

Six large and elegant new factories have been erected, and are running to their full capacity. New avenues and sidewalks have been laid out and finished; a large park has been laid out in the centre of the town; water has been introduced into all the principal streets; a water-tower, built of iron, has been erected, which has a pressure of sufficient power to throw water over the highest building.

The tower can be seen miles away, and is a great ornament to the town.

A fire department has been organized, with four elegant hose-carriages under command of Maj. Allen.

Two fine hotels have been built and supplied with all the improvements of a city hotel, and are well patronized. Many large and elegant houses have been erected, and several blocks of stores are now under contract.

Among them is the fine block being built by a former citizen of the town, who takes great pleasure in seeing his native place in such a flourishing condition, and no resident has taken a deeper interest in the improvement of South Abington than Jacob P. Bates, Esq. His new block will not only be an ornament to the town, but will reflect credit upon his good taste and judgment. Plans and specifications have been made by Mr. John R. Hall, architect, of Boston, and the building will be built under his immediate supervision.

The block will have a frontage of sixty-five feet on Washington Street, and a depth of seventy-five feet, and will be three stories high, and divided into three large stores well lighted and high studded. The second story will be devoted to offices; the third story will be used for a hall with large anterooms and closets attached, all dadoed and finished in the best manner. The building will be supplied with all the modern improvements.

The outside will be built of pressed brick, iron columns and Long Meadow brownstone from the Ohio quarries, with one large projection in the centre. There will be five windows on each story, with carved caps and finishing above the roof, with gable and ornamented pilasters, and under the gable four large round panels, with carved heads in stone, representing different animals. Each end will be finished with projections, with large windows in the centre and a circular arch turned in fancy brickwork above, and finished at top with stone pedestals and panels between them.

The store fronts will be finished in cherry, and the glass in store-windows will be in one large light of French white plate.

The building will be built both inside and outside of the best materials. The contractors are Peasley & Bonney, carpenters, of South Abington, and Faunce Brothers, masons, of Wollaston. The stores are all let, and will be occupied about October 1st.

Incorporation of Town.—The first movement made towards a separation from the old town was early in the spring of 1874, after the incorporation of Rockland, by the following persons: H. F. Whidden, S. N. Dyer, S. Dyer, C. F. Allen, William L. Reed, D. B. Gurney, G. A. Litchfield, F. P. Harlow, J. L. Corthell, C. H. Bonney, John Thompson, Horace Reed, A. Davis, and H. F. Copeland. At a citizens' meeting, May 2, 1874, these same gentlemen, with the addition of A. S. Stetson, W. R. Vining, E. S. Powers, A. C. Brigham, Jacob Bates, Daniel Reed, J. E. Bates, O. G. Healey, D. S. Jenkins, Edwin Edes, C. D. Nash, J. H. Witherell, H. A. Bates, L. B. Noyes, Jr., Nathaniel Pratt, H. H. Brigham, J. Donovan, and J. S. Harding, were chosen a permanent committee. This committee organized May 5th, with George A. Litchfield, chairman; Samuel N. Dyer, secretary; and Charles F. Allen, treasurer, and was so active and energetic that they secured the incorporation of the town. The bill of incorporation was signed by Governor Gaston at twenty minutes past twelve o'clock March 4, 1875. The first town-meeting was held in Village Hall March 18th, under a warrant issued by William P. Corthell, justice of the peace, on petition of Hon. William L. Reed. At this meeting, William P. Corthell was chosen moderator, and Samuel Foster, town clerk. Jacob Bates, Cyrus White, and William P. Corthell were chosen selectmen. At the last annual meeting George H. Pearson was chosen town clerk, and William P. Corthell, William H. Reed, and Edward Keating, selectmen, assessors, and overseers of the poor.

The past year water has been introduced at an expense of about fifty thousand dollars, for which interest-bearing bonds have been issued. A fire department has been established. The town is generous in appropriating money for schools, roads, and library, and indeed for every worthy object.

The following is a list of the town officers for the first year (1875):

Town Clerk, Samuel Foster; Treasurer and Collector, Albert Davis; Selectmen, Assessors, and Overseers of the Poor, Jacob Bates (William P. Corthell), Cyrus White; School Committee, B. F. Hastings (for three years), George A. Litchfield (for two years), E. L. Hyde (for one year); Road Commissioners, Enoch Powers (for three years), Lebbeus Gurney (for two years), E. B. French (for one year); Auditors, Samuel Dyer, William R. Vining; Constables, George E. Luzarder, James L. Corthell, Quincy T. Harding; Pound Keeper, Spencer Vining; Field Drivers, Reuben Churchill, Hiram Pool, Calvin Porter; Fence Viewers, James L. Corthell, Samuel Dyer, Nathan P. Gurney; Surveyors of Lumber, Gladden Bonney, Charles H. Bonney, Quincy T. Harding; Measurer of Wood and Bark, Benjamin S. Atwood; Representatives (Twelfth District), George W. Reed, Jesse H. Jones.

The manufacture of fine calf boots, which has been and now is the life of that part of South Abington known as Auburnville, was commenced by M. S. Reed in 1865, in a building which forms a part of the present factory. The annual product of the factory at that time was one hundred thousand dollars, giving employment to about sixty hands. As the goods became known the amount produced annually increased, until the business had increased threefold in six years.

In 1876 it became necessary to enlarge the factory to meet the increasing demands for the goods, and employment was furnished for one hundred and eighty-five persons, and the business of the factory amounted to four hundred thousand dollars.

In 1879, with a growing business, Mr. Reed took in a partner, and again enlarged the factory, employed two hundred and twenty persons, and produced goods to the value of five hundred thousand dollars.

In 1882 he sold the buildings and business to his partner, who ran the factory one year, and then sold to Messrs. Stetson & Coombs, the present occupants, who are running it successfully, giving employment to one hundred and eighty-five persons, yielding products to the amount of four hundred thousand dollars annually.

Atwood Brothers, manufacturers of boot-, shoe-, and packing-boxes. This business amounts to about sixty thousand dollars per year, and employs from forty to fifty men.

Cook & Paine commenced business March 1, 1883, and employ about one hundred and fifty workmen, and the value of goods (boots and shoes) manufactured for their first year was about two hundred thousand dollars.

Jenkins Brothers & Co. commenced the manufacture of steel shanks in November, 1872, making about one hundred and fifty gross per day, and their sales amounted to about fifty thousand dollars per year. In 1876 they commenced the manufacture of caskets and coffins. They are now making from seventy thousand to eighty thousand pairs of shanks per day, being the largest manufacturers in that line. Annual sales on shanks and caskets amount to about two hundred thousand dollars.

Davis Gurney & Co., manufacturers of boots and shoes, employ one hundred and fifty persons, and the annual value of goods manufactured amounts to three hundred thousand dollars.

Smith, Stoughton & Payne commenced manufacturing men's fine and medium grade boots and shoes in this town March 1, 1884. About one hundred and fifty men and thirty-five girls are employed. Cases manufactured for the past four months, four thousand; pairs, forty-eight thousand; value of goods manufactured annually, one hundred and forty thousand dollars. This business was removed from Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Commonwealth Shoe and Leather Company (formerly C. H. Jones & Co.) manufacture twenty thousand cases per year, and the value of the annual product is from six hundred and fifty to seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The factory of Dunbar, Hobart & Whidden, manufacturers of tacks, brads, and small nails of all descriptions, is one of the largest establishments of the kind in the country. Its founder, Mr. Benjamin Hobart, began the manufacture of tacks in 1810, when the old hand process was still in vogue, but upon the appearance of the invention known as the Reed and Blanchard machines, he was the first to put it into extensive operation, and by its aid his business rapidly increased. In 1849 his son became associated with him, under the firm-name of Benjamin Hobart & Son, the partnership continuing until 1857, when the senior partner retired from active participation, and was succeeded by Messrs. Dunbar & Hobart, who carried on the business under the firm-name of B. Hobart & Son until the formation of the present firm, in 1865.

The manufacturing plant located on the Plymouth Division of the Old Colony Railroad, from which a branch track runs directly past the factory, covers an area of several acres, upon which the present works were erected, in 1864, at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars.

Another feature of this business is the manufacture of heel- and toe-plates for boots and shoes of all descriptions.

Owing to the immense quantity of boxes consumed in the shipment of their goods, the firm decided to include their manufacture in their already extensive business, and in 1870, at the cost of about fifteen thousand dollars, erected on the site of the old tack-factory, which was destroyed by fire in 1859, a substantial frame building as a box-factory. Here are not only manufactured all the boxes requisite for this firm's business, but large quantities are furnished the shoe manufacturers and others in the vicinity.

The trade of the house extends to every section of the United States, including large shipments to the Pacific coast, and their goods are also in demand in Canada, England, South America, British Colonies, Australia, New Zealand, etc.

The individual members of the firm are Messrs. William H. Dunbar, Henry Hobart, and H. F. Whidden. The senior member has been for many years identified with the boot and shoe trade, and the two last-named gentlemen have had an experience of fifty and forty years respectively in the tack-making business, Mr. Whidden having also patented many inventions which have contributed largely to the excellent reputation of the articles manufactured.

The South Abington Water-Works were built in 1883. The water is pumped from the Hobart Pond into an iron tank or reservoir twenty feet in diameter and one hundred and five feet high, surmounted with a wrought-iron top thirty-five feet high, making a total height of one hundred and forty feet above the foundation, and when full contains two hundred and forty thousand gallons of water.

The reservoir is located on one of the highest points, and nearly in the centre of the town. The average head of water is about one hundred and thirty-five feet. There have been laid about eight miles of pipe made of wrought iron coated inside and out with asphaltum, and lined both inside and out with cement. The iron plates used in building the reservoir are made of the best refined iron, and guaranteed to stand four thousand pounds tensile strength to the square inch. The bottom and first twenty-five feet are made of iron five-eighths of an inch in thickness; second twenty-five feet of one-half inch; third twenty-five feet, three-eighths; and fourth, one-fourth inch. Sixty-six hydrants have been set, which cover all the thickly-settled portions of the town, also much of the outskirts. The average head of water through the town gives sufficient force to throw hydrant-streams over any of the largest buildings.

The town pays twenty-five dollars for the use of each hydrant. The whole cost of the works is fifty thousand dollars.

The South Abington Fire Department was organized about the 1st of January, 1884, by the appointment of seven engineers, viz.: C. F. Allen, Rufus Cass, B. C. Reed, B. S. Atwood, D. A. Walker, E. B. French, M. C. French. The above-named engineers organized three hose companies of fifteen men each, and one hook-and-ladder company of twenty-five men. The above companies are organized as follows: Foreman, first and second assistant foremen, clerk, and steward to each company.

The town has built three houses, with a fifty-foot hose-tower in each, for the storage of their fire department equipage, with a fine room furnished in the second story for the convenience of the firemen.

In each of the houses they have placed a light hose-carriage fully equipped with all the appurtenances and six hundred feet of hose. In the house of Hose No. 1 (centre of the town) they have placed a hook-and-ladder truck fully equipped.

Public Library.—Immediately on securing a separate municipal existence the people of South Abington began to work for a public library. In 1879 the friends of the movement secured an appropriation of five hundred dollars. By gifts of books and purchase a collection of fourteen hundred volumes was obtained, with which the library was opened in August of that year. In 1880 the town gave to that object seven hundred dollars. Since then it has received without opposition an annual appropriation of one thousand dollars.

At this date (July 1, 1884) the library contains about five thousand volumes, with an annual circulation of more than twenty thousand volumes. Its great need now is a suitable building and a reading-room.

The public school teachers in South Abington are as follows: High School, Horace E. Henderson, principal; Mrs. Henrietta B. Blake, assistant; Grammar, Miss Deborah A. Partridge, Miss Florence Blanchard, Miss Emma R. Nash, Miss Joanna F. Fullerton, Miss Flora M. Shurtleff, Miss Maria F. Eddy; Primary, Miss Emily B. Peterson, Miss Emma R. Maloy, Miss Effie M. Edes, Miss Lizzie B. Bosworth, Miss Grace E. Cooper.

Webster Lodge, No. 113, I. O. O. F., was instituted on Friday evening, Oct. 6, 1882. The following charter members were present and obligated: Lewis Goulding, Edward B. Peterson, Clarence A. Randall, Andrew N. Bates, Roland W. Chase, Benjamin F. Churchill, James C. Wood, Christopher B. Capen, John G. Higgins, E. Willard Shaw, David A. Walker, Samuel G. Capen, Francis A. Gurney, Rufus F. Wright, Stephen Griggs, J. Thomas Doten, William H. Dudley, Benjamin F. Peterson. It has lost one member by death.

Names of persons who have been voters fifty years or more: Charles Bates, Cyrus Bates, David Bates, Robert Cook, Sherebiah Corthell, Samuel Dyer, Daniel M. Fullerton, Davis Gurney, Lebbeus Gurney, Walter S. Harding, Reuben Churchill, Luke B. Noyes, John Noyes, James W. Osborne, Marcus Reed, Aaron Reed, Melvin Reed, Gibbens Sharp, Martin S. Stetson, Orange Wilkes, Horatio Williams.

Massasoit Lodge, No. 684, Knights of Honor, was organized July 5, 1877, a charter having been granted by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts to the following persons: L. D. Robbins, C. D. Nash, C. W. Bradbury, J. E. Bickford, Joseph Pettee, Jr., Josiah Churchill, E. H. Atwood, Edward Keating, A. W. Bates, A. C. Brigham, E. S. Shepherd, Bela Alden, M. E. Brown.

The lodge was instituted on that date, and held its meetings in Grand Army Hall until April, 1881, when it removed to American (now Odd-Fellows') Hall, where it still holds its regular meetings.

The first application for membership was received from B. S. Atwood, who was initiated Dec. 3, 1877.

The first death, which occurred Nov. 27, 1879, was that of Millard E. Brown. Brother Brown was the first reporter of the lodge, which position he filled in a very acceptable manner, and his loss was a serious one to the lodge as well as to the community.

May 22, 1884, seven members, resident in East Bridgewater, withdrew by card and became charter members of Sachem's Rock Lodge, No. 3093.

Massasoit Lodge has initiated and received by card over fifty members, in addition to the original charter members, and is in a healthy condition.

The following members became Past Dictators by virtue of office: L. D. Robbins, C. D. Nash, C. W. Bradbury, B. S. Atwood, and M. L. Harlow.

Brothers Robbins and Nash served each one term; Brothers Bradbury and Atwood two terms each, and Brother Harlow four terms. The present reporter, Brother Ferguson, has served the lodge in that capacity since January, 1880.

Officers for the year 1884 are Past Dictator, M. L. Harlow; Dictator, J. E. Jenney; Vice-Dictator, E. V. Clift; Assistant Dictator, B. F. Winslow; Reporter, H. C. Ferguson; F. R., Edward Keating; Treas., H. A. Whiting; Chaplain, H. M. Soule; Guide, C. P. Reed; Guardian, W. W. Josselyn; Sentinel, C. S. Churchill.

Lawyers.—There are two lawyers in this town,—Charles H. Edson and Edgar O. Achron.

Physicians.—The present physicians are H. F. Copeland, A. A. MacKeen, and B. F. Hastings.

Post-Offices.—Previous to 1844 there was no post-office at South Abington. Elihu Hobart, at that time postmaster at Abington, used to bring the mail for the residents of this locality daily. In 1844 "South Abington" post-office was established, and William Bonney appointed postmaster. He held the office until his death, in 1847. Cyrus A. Dyer was appointed his successor, and was postmaster until 1861, when George W. Reed was appointed, holding the office two years. Albert Davis was then commissioned, and is the present incumbent. He was reappointed Jan. 18, 1882, for four years. In 1863 the office paid four hundred dollars; business however increased until, in 1878, the salary became twelve hundred dollars. In the same year "South Abington Station" post-office was established; Joseph Pettee, Jr., postmaster, with a salary of five hundred dollars. He is postmaster at the present time.

Ecclesiastical History.—The Congregational Church was organized Aug. 19, 1807. The church was formed by sixteen members leaving the Third Church in Bridgewater (now East Bridgewater). Rev. Daniel Thomas was the first pastor, and was ordained the same day of the dedication of the new house of worship, June 1, 1808. Mr. Thomas ministered to this people about thirty-five years, and resigned in 1842. He died Jan. 5, 1847, aged sixty-eight years. Rev. Dennis Powers succeeded Mr. Thomas in 1842. The following-named ministers have been pastors of this church in the order named: Rev. Alden Haynes, Alfred Goldsmith, Henry L. Edwards, W. F. Ober, John Thomson, F. P. Tompkins, B. M. Frink. Present membership, two hundred and thirty-four.

The South Abington Methodist Episcopal Church was not the outgrowth of a purely sectarian policy. It was suggested spontaneously to many minds dwelling in that part of the town where the church is located. It grew out of the conscious moral needs of that part of the community, and it was thought by persons members of other churches in the town that a Methodist Episcopal Church would do better than any other not represented in the town because of its aggressive spirit, its adaptability to all classes of society, and its well-tested polity as especially exemplified in its method of ministerial supply. A few persons thus encouraged established a Methodist preaching service in Union Hall in the year 1874, the first sermon being delivered on Sunday, January 4th. From this time to the meeting of the Providence (now New England Northern) Conference, in March of the same year, the preaching was by students from the School of Theology of Boston University.

At the meeting of the Annual Conference, Rev. E. L. Hyde, a member of the Conference, was appointed, March 30, 1874, to take charge of the new "enterprise" at South Abington. Mr. Hyde was cordially received by the people, and immediately set about the organization of the movement into a Methodist Episcopal Church, the first Quarterly Conference being held by the presiding elder, Rev. W. V. Morrison, on the 8th of May, 1879, the young society having at that time a membership of twelve. Mr. Hyde was reappointed in the spring of 1875, and felt that the time had come for building a church edifice for the young and growing society. To this end a lot was donated by the well-known tack firm of Dunbar, Hobart & Whidden in a convenient locality on South Avenue, and subscriptions were solicited for a building fund. In addition to contributions by people in South Abington, money was contributed by persons and churches in Brockton, East Bridgewater, New Bedford, Providence, and many other places. As none of these gifts were large, and, in addition to the subscriptions in the place, Mr. Hyde, by personal visitation and otherwise, obtained contributions from sixteen cities and towns, in three different States, some idea can be obtained of the financial labors of the first pastor. In fact, Mr. Hyde was the man for the place; for not merely did he attend to the gathering of small sums of fifty cents and upwards until it aggregated nearly four thousand dollars, but, being a practical architect, he drew the plans and specifications for the proposed edifice.

The ground was broken July 27, 1876, and the building was dedicated Feb. 24, 1877, Bishop Randolph S. Foster, of the same denomination, preaching at the morning service. The structure is of Gothic architecture, and will seat two hundred and fifty persons, and, with three other rooms beside the main audience-room, is well adapted to the present wants of the society, and tasty within and without.

According to the law of limitation in the Methodist Episcopal Church, a pastor is only appointed to a church for one year, but may be reappointed the two successive years. The full extent of his stay at one time in any church is therefore three years. Mr. Hyde remained at South Abington three years.

At the end of his three years the Rev. W. H. Starr was appointed pastor, April 16, 1877. Various improvements were made during Mr. Starr's pastorate. The second year of his term was marked by great spiritual prosperity, a large number of persons being affected by the spiritual power which went out from the church. The moral tone of the whole community was directly influenced, and this in the minds of many was a sufficient justification for the establishment of the church.

On the 13th of April, 1880, Rev. J. G. Switzer, a probationer in the Conference, was appointed to South Abington. Mr. Switzer's health was not firm, and he was compelled to resign the succeeding year (July, 1881), but during his term of office the church continued to go forward in all that a church should. Mr. Switzer's second year was completed by G. A.

Reeder, Jr., a theological student in Boston University.

In April, 1882, the present incumbent, Rev. S. H. Day, was appointed to take charge of the South Abington Methodist Episcopal Church.

Although the church at the present writing (1884) only dates back ten years as an organization, its history already has been one of healthy growth. Its characteristics thus far have been Christian unity, aggressiveness, and steady attention to the true work of an Evangelical church. At the present rate of growth, another decade will bring it to a point of efficiency undreamed of by any of its most sanguine organizers.

Its class-leaders, who in the economy of Methodism are sub-pastors, are, at the date of this writing, Lucius Cook and T. E. Tenny.

Its stewards, who have charge of the temporal concerns,—Ambrose Bosworth, T. F. Bosworth, T. E. Tenny, Lucius Cook, Horatio N. Winslow, W. F. Stacy, T. G. Higgins, A. T. Le Baron. Its trustees, who hold the church property in trust for the uses of the Methodist Episcopal Church (one-third of whom are not required to be members of the church), are T. Frank Bosworth, A. Bosworth, L. Cook, T. F. Thayer, Joseph D. Beuson, T. E. Tenny, T. G. Higgins.

First Baptist Church.—This church was organized Oct. 30, 1822. The delegates to the council were Rev. Thomas Baldwin, D.D., from Second Church in Boston; Rev. Daniel Sharp, from Third Church in Boston; Rev. John Butler, from Hanover Church; Rev. Thomas Conant, from Marshfield Church; Rev. Joseph Torrey, from Pembroke and Hanson Church. Rev. Dr. Baldwin was chosen moderator; Rev. J. Torrey, scribe. The following persons, who were present, were invited to join the council: Rev. Joel Briggs, Deacon Heman Lincoln, Deacon Levi Farwell, Deacon William Eames, and Ezra Chamberlain. The following record in the church book presents a brief account of the action taken on that occasion: "The brethren present wishing to unite together as a church read and adopted their articles of faith and practice, and solemnly covenanted together as a church of our Lord Jesus Christ, much to the satisfaction of the council. Whereupon the council resolved unanimously publicly to recognize them this afternoon as a sister church of our Lord Jesus Christ, by the name of the First Baptist Church of Christ in Abington."

The first house of worship was situated on the site occupied by the present one, the land having been purchased of Levi Shaw for thirty dollars. It measured twenty-seven by twenty-four feet on the ground, and contained thirty-six pews, capable of seating two hundred persons. It cost about one thousand dollars, and was secured by the untiring exertions of Deacon Ransford, who largely met the expense by his own munificent liberality. Deacon Ransford was the committee and Ebenezer Porter the builder.

The pastors have been as follows: Revs. Thomas Conant, May 22, 1823; Willard Kimball, May 9, 1824; Davis Curtiss, July 26, 1826; Silas Hall, Aug. 21, 1830; W. H. Dalrymple, April 29, 1835; Edward C. Missinger, May, 1837; William F. Stubbart, April 16, 1846; Nathaniel Colver, April 1, 1852; Horace T. Love, Nov. 1, 1853; F. A. Willard, Nov. 4, 1854; N. Judson Clark, Dec. 11, 1860; George R. Darrow, April 3, 1864; Rev. James E. Wilson, Oct. 1, 1868; Charles A. Snow, Nov. 1, 1870.

The successors of Rev. Mr. Snow have been Rev. L. B. Hatch, Rev. Luther G. Barrett, and Rev. N. Newton Glazier.

There have been revivals during several of the pastorates. The most extensive was during the pastorate of Mr. Hatch, when fifty were added to the church.

The present house of worship, which was dedicated Jan. 1, 1833, is about being remodeled and refurnished, twelve thousand dollars having been raised for this purpose. The present membership is two hundred and fifty; of the Sunday-school, one hundred and ninety-two. The salary paid the first pastor was one hundred and fifty dollars, and that of the last, twelve hundred dollars. The amount of money raised for all purposes the past year was two thousand three hundred and fifty-one dollars. This is the strongest Baptist Church, with one exception, in Plymouth County. George A. Reed is treasurer; J. L. Corthell, clerk; and D. B. Gurney, J. L. Corthell, and Obed Ellis, deacons.

Population of the town, 3500; valuation, $2,187,830; number of polls, 1028.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

BENJAMIN HOBART.

The historian pauses from the narration of events to record a little tribute to one who did much in various ways to entitle him to more than a passing notice, as one of the distinguished sons of old Abington, and who by the uprightness of his character, his personal

Benj. Hobart
At the Age of 84 Years

Daniels, Pr Boston

ability, and his large business interests, did much for its advancement and improvement.

Benjamin Hobart, son of Col. Aaron Hobart and his second wife, Thankful Adams, was born on the homestead of several generations of his forefathers in South Abington (then Abington), Oct. 24, 1781. He was a descendant in the sixth generation of Edmund Hobart, the emigrant, who came from England in 1633, settled first in Charlestown, second in Hingham, where he was prominent in public matters, and was the ancestor of most of those bearing the name in New England. The line of descent is Edmund<sup>1</sup>, Thomas<sup>2</sup>, Aaron<sup>3</sup>, Isaac<sup>4</sup>, Col. Aaron<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>6</sup>.

The Hobart family has been from its first settlement in Abington identified in much more than an ordinary degree with the interests, growth, and history of the town. Isaac Hobart<sup>4</sup> was a farmer of great energy, strength of mind, and perseverance of character. In 1745 he made a mill-privilege by means of a canal a mile long and a tunnel fifteen rods in length, and for this the inhabitants agreed to allow him three quarts of corn instead of two quarts, the legal amount, as toll for grinding a bushel. Important results have followed the construction of this tunnel. As Mr. Hobart well says, in his "History in Abington," "Except for the union of the two streams, the present extensive works for making tacks, brads, shoe-nails, and many other useful articles, would never have been established." This was no doubt the means of originating the entire manufacturing interest now so extensive in South Abington. Col. Aaron Hobart<sup>5</sup> was a noted man in his day, and did honor to his town. He was representative in the State Legislature for fourteen consecutive years (1792-1807), and was the owner of several forges for making bar-iron and iron "sbapes," and a blast-furnace for casting hollow-ware and cannon-balls. He was among the first, if not the very first, to cast church-bells in the country. He cast a bell for the first religious society in Abington, as early as 1769, and after that for numerous other places in this State and elsewhere. In 1769 he advertised in a Boston newspaper that he would do "bell-casting at his furnace in Abington," and the editor remarked "that we need not be obliged to send to England for bells, as they could now be cast in this country." He was the first person to cast cannon in America. We condense from Hayward's "Gazetteer of Massachusetts:" "In the year 1775-76, Col. Aaron Hobart contracted with the State to make cannon and shot, and the State furnished him with a large amount of material to begin with, as pig-iron and coal. This was a bold undertaking. Col. Hobart had no knowledge of the business, but the Revolutionary war had just commenced, and there were but very few cannon in the country, hundreds of merchant ships demanded them to fit for privateers. The first attempts were very unsuccessful,—the cannon burst in proving. All the stock provided by the State was expended, and his own fortune besides. Providentially, in this dark hour, a Frenchman, accustomed to this work, passed through the town, and hearing of the failure to obtain perfect cannon, inquired the cause, and pointed out to Col. Hobart the remedy. No time was lost in making the necessary change, and the success was complete. The contract with the State was filled, and individuals supplied extensively. About three years after this the concern was disposed of to the State, and removed to Bridgewater." Col. Hobart was very active in the war of the Revolution, and always identified with the best interests of his town, and distinguished for his enterprise, perseverance, unsullied character, and deep religious principle, he possessed the confidence, esteem, and warm personal affections of the best people of this section of the State.

Benjamin Hobart<sup>6</sup> received a liberal education, and was graduated at Brown University in 1804. He was admitted to practice as a lawyer in 1808, but never followed that profession. He married, first, Lucy, daughter of Gen. Sylvanus Lazell, of East Bridgewater; second, Deborah, daughter of Edmund Lazell, of Cummington. They had twelve children. Mr. Hobart was connected during most of his active life with the progress and development of one of Abington's most important manufacturing interests, that of cut tacks. We take from Hayward's "Gazetteer:" In 1815-16 a machine was invented by Mr. Jesse Reed to make tacks at one operation. Mr. Melville Otis, of Bridgewater, claimed and received a considerable share of the invention. Soon after, the machines were much improved by Thomas Blanchard, of Millbury, Mass., and Samuel Rogers, of East Bridgewater. For the exclusive patent-right of these inventions Benjamin and Elihu Hobart paid thirty thousand dollars. When they had just got their machine into operation they learned that a large consignment of tacks had been received from England. On inquiry they found that a model of their "patent tack-machine" had been taken to England and patented, and the tacks sent here for sale. The tendency of this was to stop the American manufacture entirely, and ruin the proprietors of the patent. On showing this to Congress, a bill was passed immediately placing a protective duty on imported tacks. The protective manufacture was then continued, although, strange to say, instead of combining their interests, Elihu and Benjamin carried on separate establishments. Benjamin built the first tack-factory in the town, and followed the business for nearly fifty years through its many, and not always, profitable changes. Mr. Hobart inherited the strong constitution of a long line of robust ancestors, and preserved his powers of mind and body to a great age. A strong proof of this is evidenced by his writing a comprehensive and extended "History of the Town of Abington," of four hundred and fifty pages, when a very old man, the most of it being written after he was eighty years old, and which for definiteness, accuracy, and completeness of statement cannot be excelled. He was largely interested in agriculture, being president of the Plymouth County Agricultural Society in 1854 and 1855, and by the trustees of that society chosen a member of the State Board of Agriculture. He held positive ideas and expressed them fearlessly. He was in harmony with everything that would make the people of his town, State, and nation wiser, wealthier, and better. Although tenacious of his own opinions he respected the right of private judgment, and never permitted differences in regard to them to separate him from his friends and supporters, or interrupt cordial and friendly intercourse. He had all the honesty and inflexibility of the Puritan stock from whence he sprang, many of its virtues and some of its faults. A stern Puritanic exterior covered a heart warm and loyal in its affections, and throughout his long and useful life and its varied relations—family, neighborhood, and business—he was loved, trusted, esteemed, and honored. He was one of the constituent members of the first society of the New Jerusalem Church in Abington, and the first to sign the creed adopted by it, June 28, 1835. He was a fluent writer and speaker. His ideas were clear in his own mind and conveyed understandingly to others. He represented Abington in the State Legislature of 1828, and when the Old Colony Railroad was locating its route to Plymouth, had the credit of establishing the line where it now is by making surveys, looking up documents, and his labors and arguments before the committee who made the decision. When the Cape Cod Railroad was in its incipiency he was strongly in favor of an extension from Plymouth to Sandwich, as he thought it would be of great benefit to Abington. He was candidate for representative on this issue, but failed of an election by one vote. He says, in his "History," "I have often thought that if I had been favored with that one vote the result would have been different and that cars would now be running through this town to the Cape." The following extract from the introduction to the "History of Abington" expresses concisely and unobtrusively his connection with the town: "I am too much identified with past events in this town to be hid in noticing them. I have been a voter over fifty years, and have taken quite an active part in public transactions; have been in active business over fifty years, and have paid away for labor over (as I estimate) one million dollars. . . . I have had a good deal to say in town-meetings, and have always intended to be found on the side of law and order."

Mr. Hobart was spared to see his children and his children's children filling honorable and useful positions, and, honored with the esteem and veneration of the entire community, he passed away from earth Jan. 25, 1877, at the age of ninety-five years and three months.

WILLIAM H. DUNBAR.

William Harrison Dunbar, son of Asaph and Nancy (Ford) Dunbar, was born in Abington, Mass., Nov. 26, 1816.

We extract from Hobart's "History of Abington" concerning the family as follows: "The earliest known settler of this name in New England was Robert Dunbar, of Hingham, who had a son born there in 1657, and bought land of Richard Dwelle in 1659. Some circumstances indicate that this person was one of the Scotch prisoners sent to the Massachusetts Colony in 1652 by Cromwell after the battles of Dunbar and Worcester, although his name is not found on the imperfect list of prisoners which still exists." This Robert Dunbar, Scotchman, was the ancestor of the present family of Abington and vicinity. William H. is his direct descendant in the sixth generation, the line being Robert<sup>1</sup>, Peter<sup>2</sup>, Elisha<sup>3</sup>, Peter<sup>4</sup>, Asaph<sup>5</sup>, William H.<sup>6</sup> The family has always shown the characteristics which have so favorably distinguished the Scotch people from other nationalities. They are good, law-abiding citizens, with a frugal thrift and industry, a careful economy, and cautious and discriminating judgment in all the affairs of life.

Lieut. Peter Dunbar, grandfather of William H., was active in the colonial army of the Revolution, and worthily filled the duties of the commission which he carried. He died in 1817, aged seventy-six years. He married Relief, daughter of Capt. Theophilus Curtis, of Stoughton. She died in 1839, at the age of ninety-six.

Asaph Dunbar was born June 8, 1789, at Stoughton, Mass., a farmer's son, and with only the meagre opportunities which the schools of that day afforded for education. He left home early in life, learned, and for some years followed, the carpenters' trade, becoming a contractor and builder, in which business he went to Charleston, S. C., and was actively and profitably engaged until the breaking out of the war of 1812. In 1812 he returned to Massachusetts, married Nancy, daughter of Capt. Noah Ford (a man of high social standing and prominence in Abington), and settled in Wrentham, from which place he removed to Abington in 1815, where he ever after resided. In the same year he began his long-continued and successful business operations by engaging as a merchant. He developed qualities which proved him to be in no small degree fitted for mercantile, manufacturing, and financial affairs. He was among the first to enter into the manufacture of boots and shoes in Abington, and, in company with Joshua Whitmarsh, as Dunbar & Whitmarsh, became extensively and creditably known. In connection with manufacturing, the firm established mercantile houses in the South to supply the large demands from that section. Mr. Dunbar went first to Charleston, where he was in trade two years; then, as the New Orleans market offered greater inducements, he removed thither, and for several years was busily and profitably engaged in disposing of his own productions and those of other manufacturers. He closed this business in 1832, returned to Abington, purchased the interest of Mr. Whitmarsh in the manufactory, and continued alone as a manufacturer on a greatly enlarged and improved scale until 1838, when he relinquished the business to his sons, Alden F. and William H.

Wm. H. Oakes

Mr. Asaph Dunbar was one of the incorporators of the Abington Bank. He was chosen its first president, and was continued in that office, and in the same position in its successor,—the Abington National Bank,—until his resignation, some years previous to his death, when the approach of old age demanded a relinquishment of business cares. He was a man highly valued in the community; from his careful, conservative, yet skillful conducting of his business, he acquired large wealth for those days; he occupied a commanding position in all local affairs from his judgment, elevated motives, and positive actions in favor of the improvement of the condition of his town. Had he allowed himself to enter politics, he would have won honor in that field, but he devoted himself to his business, and won his success there. He was an earnest Swedenborgian in religion, one of the constituent members of the "First Society of the New Jerusalem" in Abington, of which he was an active and generous representative. He died Dec. 19, 1867.

William H. Dunbar was educated at the town schools of Abington, from which he was taken when sixteen to become his father's book-keeper and assistant. Under the instruction of, and in confidential association with, such a successful financier as Asaph Dunbar, he early became familiarized with the abstruse principles underlying commercial success and the practical application of the same. From such instructions, impressed upon a nature ready to receive them, we would naturally expect to find, as a result, clear and accurate business foresight, attention to minute details, systematic arrangement of each department, and a just confidence in one's own abilities, and William's keen and active nature rapidly developed into one of commercial strength. In 1838 he became associated with his brother, Alden F., in manufacturing boots and shoes, as successors to the extensive business of their father. They established a large store in New Orleans, where Alden F. for many years resided, William H. attending to the business in Boston and Abington. For fourteen years, until 1852, they carried on the manufacture of boots and shoes. Then, ceasing manufacturing, Mr. Dunbar, with his acute discernment of the possibilities of the field, became one of the pioneers of the boot and shoe business of California, establishing a house in San Francisco. With this he was connected until 1869, when he sold to B. Hobart, Jr. This firm, after making several partners wealthy, now exists as Hobart, Wood & Co. The influence of Mr. Dunbar upon the material prosperity of Abington and South Abington has been most largely given by his connection with tack manufacturing.

In 1858 he purchased of Mr. Benjamin Hobart the pioneer tack-factory of the town and county, and formed a partnership with Benjamin Hobart's nephew, Henry Hobart, to conduct the tack business under the firm-name of B. Hobart & Son. At the time of its transfer the main factory was over one hundred feet long, averaging thirty feet wide, two stories high, with spacious basement and attic the whole length; its motive-power was both steam and water, which could operate sixty tack-machines. Under the same roof, at one end, there was a board-, shingle-, and saw-mill, and also a grist-mill. Just as the new firm was getting under headway, Aug. 19, 1859, the factory was destroyed by fire, a total loss of over fifty thousand dollars. Within ten days a lease was secured of the brick-factory in East Bridgewater, new machinery introduced, and active operations resumed within a month. Mr. Dunbar built the present works at South Abington, which were completed in 1864, and consisted of a two-story building, facing the road, one hundred and eighty-three by forty-eight feet, and another one of one story, three hundred and thirty-four by sixty-seven feet. This building Mr. Dunbar leased to the new firm of Dunbar, Hobart & Whidden, which was formed in 1865, on the removal of the business from East Bridgewater. (Dunbar, Hobart & Whidden subsequently became the purchasers of the works.) The business of this house is now so extensive as to necessitate the erection of a new building (in 1884) one hundred and seventy-five by thirty-five feet, of which forty by thirty-five feet is two stories, and one hundred and thirty-four by thirty-five feet, one story in height. Mr. Dunbar married, June 24, 1840, Amelia, daughter of Hon. Benjamin and Deborah (Lazell) Hobart, of Abington. (See biography of Benjamin Hobart.) They had three children,—Emily, Amelia H., and Lucy C.

Mr. Dunbar has ever given a generous encouragement to enterprises tending to build up the town, and is liberal in contributing to them. He is the senior member of the firm of Dunbar & Rhodes, formed, in 1870, for the manufacture of eyelets. He was one of the incorporators (in 1847) and is a director in the National Exchange Bank, Boston, and is now the only surviving member of its first board of directors.

Like all engaged in large operations, Mr. Dunbar has at times made money rapidly, and at others lost large amounts. But both successes and reverses have been received with the same unruffled philosophy, and he has maintained in all critical periods that unvarying coolness which carries to success, and he stands to-day high in financial circles. For quite a number of years his state of health has not permitted him to actively participate in labor, but his advice and counsel are still as wise and valuable as ever.

Unassuming by nature, earnest in character, faithful to all his personal, political, and religious attachments, of generous, kindly, and courteous disposition, he has a large circle of true and devoted friends, and deserves the warm encomiums bestowed upon him by the best people of his native town. He is a Republican in politics, and Swedenborgian in religious faith.

HON. WILLIAM LINCOLN REED.

The first ancestor of the numerous family of Reed was Brianus, a noted man of Lincolnshire, England, who in 1139 was registered as "Brianus de Reed." He left two sons, who were respectively named Robert of Reed and Thomas of Reed-dale. This new Reed family occupied nearly the same locality for several centuries. From it descended William Rede, an eminent mathematician, who in 1369 was made Bishop of Chichester. William Reed, born 1450, was a great-grandson of the bishop, and had this lineal descent: William, born 1490; William, born 1510; William, born 1545; William, born 1572. This last-named William had two sons,—William, born 1596, and John, born 1598. These brothers became participants in the great Massachusetts land patent of which Governor Winthrop (connected with the Reads by intermarriage) was the leader, and in 1630 came with Winthrop's expedition from near Boston, England, to the place which they named Boston also. William removed to Weymouth in 1635, and was one of the most active men of the colony.

William Lincoln Reed, a descendant in the sixth generation from William, of Weymouth (the line being William<sup>1</sup>, Thomas<sup>2</sup>, Daniel<sup>3</sup>, Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Isaac<sup>5</sup>, William L<sup>6</sup>), and son of Deacon Isaac and Nancy (Lincoln) Reed, was born in Abington, Mass., Oct. 5, 1825. His father, Isaac Reed, was a farmer, a useful member of society, and an excellent and worthy citizen. He died in 1847. His mother was the daughter of Caleb Lincoln, of Taunton (the Lincoln family were among the early and prominent settlers of Taunton and Hingham). She died in 1874. Thomas Reed, grandfather of William L., is remembered as a man of large frame, over six feet in height, of great physical endurance and energy of character. He possessed large landed estates.

William L. received his education in the public schools of Abington. He also assisted his father in the farm-work. Agriculture, however, was not to his taste, and he learned the shoemakers' trade, which he prosecuted for several years. In 1853 he commenced shoe manufacturing in a shop connected with his house, cutting out his own stock and putting it out to be made. In 1855, Mr. Reed's increasing business demanded more commodious quarters, which he found over the store of Randall Cook, where he remained for the next five years. Business continued to prosper, and in 1860 he built what was then regarded as a large factory near the South Abington Station. Results showed the wisdom of his enterprise, and predicted the coming necessity of still further enlargement. In 1866 he entered into copartnership with Joseph Bunage, of Abington, and jointly conducted business for the ensuing six years under the firm-name of Bunage & Reed. In 1872 his business connection was dissolved by the death of Mr. Bunage. He then entered into partnership with David B.

William L. Reed

Mr. Reed's portrait engraved by the Boston Engraving Co., Boston.

Closson, of Boston, name of firm being Reed & Closson. Soon after his association with Mr. Closson the rapidly-increasing demands of trade imperatively required enlargement of manufacturing facilities, which were at once provided. In 1879 a further addition was necessitated. The factory was lengthened by the erection of eighty-two feet, so that its dimensions were fixed at two hundred and thirty-two feet in length by thirty-five in width, and four stories in height. The annual value of the goods manufactured by about two hundred employes exceeded four hundred and fifty thousand dollars. July 1, 1883, this extensive manufactory, filled with costly machinery and a large stock of material, was entirely destroyed by fire. Since that time Mr. Reed has not been in active business.

Mr. Reed married, June 6, 1847, Deborah, daughter of Ziba Chessman, of Weymouth. Their children are William Bradford (deceased), Anna Gertrude, Sarah Chessman, and Walter Lincoln.

Mr. Reed has been called upon to fill many official positions. Republican in politics, he represented his town in the lower branch of the State Legislature in 1858 and 1859. In 1859 he served as a member of the Joint Committee on Towns. In 1865 he was elected to the State Senate, to represent the Second Plymouth District, and served on the Standing Committee on Leave of Absence, the Joint Committee on Prisons, and on the Joint Special Committee on the Annexation of Roxbury to Boston. Again returned to the Senate in 1866, he served as chairman of the Joint Committee on Prisons and as a member of the Joint Special Committee on the Cost of State Aid. In 1867 he was elected to the Senate for the third time, occupied his former chairmanship, and was a member of the Committee on the Hoosac Tunnel and Troy and Greenfield Railroad. He was a member of Governor Clafin's Council (from the Second Councilor's District) for 1870 and 1871, and served on the Committees on the Hoosac Tunnel and Troy and Greenfield Railroad, Military Affairs, and the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad.

He is a prominent member of the order of Free and Accepted Masons. Dec. 30, 1860, he received the degree of Entered Apprentice in the John Cutler Lodge at Abington, and on the same day the degree of Fellow-Craftsman; that of Master Mason Jan. 28, 1861. March 25, 1861, was elected a member of the John Cutler Lodge, and Aug. 8, 1870, withdrew from it in order to connect himself with the Puritan Lodge of South Abington, which was then constituted and dedicated, and of which he was one of the charter members. Feb. 9, 1863, he received the degree of Mark Master Mason; March 6, 1863, that of Past Master and also of Most Excellent Master in the Pilgrim Lodge; April 3, 1863, he was raised to the dignity of Royal Arch Mason, and October 2d of the same year became a member of the Pilgrim Chapter of Royal Arch Masons. Dec. 11, 1863, he received the order of the Red Cross; March 15, 1864, the order of the Temple and the order of Malta. He is also a charter member of the Old Commandery of Knights Templar. In the Boston Council of Select and Royal Masters he received the degrees of Select Master, Royal Master, and Super Excellent Master in succession. Subsequently withdrawing from the Boston Council, he and others (as charter members) were constituted and dedicated as the Abington Council of Select and Royal Masters.

Mr. Reed is genial, attractive in manners, and actively interested in all local improvements. He is a liberal contributor to the cause of Christianity. Endowed with a high and keen sense of honor, always actuated by sound ethical principles, he has acquired unusual personal popularity, even from political opponents. His singularly accurate judgment has almost always preserved him from mistake, and in the guidance of his remarkable energies has raised him to his present altitude of social success.

As an evidence of the esteem in which he is held, we mention that after the burning of Mr. Reed's manufactory a citizens' meeting was called at South Abington, to give public expression of sympathy for his loss and show the estimation with which he was regarded by the leading citizens of this section, in whose prosperity he had been a solid factor for so many years. The attendance was large, and the spirit shown deep and heartfelt. Many prominent men of neighboring towns took part with cordiality and earnestness. This meeting was an unselfish tribute of respect such as few men have while living.

From the resolutions adopted at this meeting we extract the following:

Resolved, That to our fellow-citizen, Hon. William L. Reed, the senior member of said firm, we tender our warmest sympathy, and sincerely trust that he realizes how fully we appreciate his life-long devotion to the best interests of his native town,—how heartfelt is our grief over his great loss,—and how great is our reliance that he will meet the disaster which has overtaken him with the same courage and ability which has marked an active and energetic life, and made his name and that of his firm honored and respected wherever known."

Numerous speakers gave expression to their sympathy and regard for the energy, industry, perseverance, thrift, and benevolence of Mr. Reed, and we fittingly close this brief sketch by this extract from the speech of Hon. B. W. Harris:

"I came over from my home to express my deep sympathy for my friend, Hon. William L. Reed. I have known Mr. Reed for more than thirty years. He began life as a mechanic, at the bottom of the ladder, and by untiring industry, strict economy, and unvarying integrity, has won his way up to his present high position as a successful business man in the community. He is entitled to active and helpful sympathy. My acquaintance with him has been largely in the social and public relations. In public trusts as well as business relations he has made an honorable and enduring record. During his long public service I have yet to hear of his lacking anything of strict integrity and honorable purpose. In his business life he has attained an equally enviable reputation."

DAVID B. GURNEY.

The American Gurneys are descended from the ancient race of Gournay, which, in early European history, is recorded to have accompanied Rollo into Neustria, now Normandy, and became Lords of Gournay, whence their name. Gournay-en-Brai is a town in the arrondissement of Neufchâtel. At the battle of Hastings, in 1066 (when William the Conqueror defeated Harold, the last Saxon king of England, and thereby acquired the English crown and territory, which he divided among his chieftains), there were two Hugh de Gournays; the father (an old man) leading on his vassals of Bray. Both Hughs had grants from William, the caput baronæ being in Norfolk, still the stronghold of the name, and their blood, became mingled with that of the Conqueror himself by the marriage of Gerard de Gournay with Edith, daughter of William the Conqueror. He joined the first crusade (1096), and subsequently died on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. From Walter de Gournay, who flourished under Stephen, and whose son, William, still held a portion of the fief of Bray, "came a long line of country gentlemen in Norfolk, who seem never to have risen above or fallen below that honorable status."

John Gurney, an early inhabitant of Braintree, born Sept. 29, 1615, died 1663, came probably from Southwark, England, near London Bridge. His children settled in Weymouth, and John and Richard were early residents of that town. This John was no doubt the John Gurney who came from Weymouth about 1690, and settled in South Abington (then Bridgewater). He died in 1715. His son, Nathan, had numerous children, among them Noah, born May, 1735. He married a daughter of Samuel Pool, Esq., and had six sons and one daughter. Asa, the oldest, married Mary, daughter of Joseph Hersey. Their only son, David Gurney (born 1782, died 1862), possessed a strong vitality, was an industrious and useful citizen, of fine mechanical skill, and when tacks were made only by hand, worked years in making them in that way. He and Charles Dyer put in order and set in operation one of the first tack-machines in the United States, and for ten or twelve years Mr. Gurney employed horses to give the power. Afterwards a shop was erected on a stream affording water privilege in Abington, and the manufacturing steadily advanced in proportion. Mr. Gurney combined farming with his tack-making, and by thrift and enterprise acquired wealth, and laid the foundation of one of the leading manufactories in Abington proving himself worthy in many ways to be remembered as one of the most honest and valuable residents of his town. He married Anna Ellis. Their children were Ruth (Mrs. Orange Wilkes), Mehitabel (Mrs. S. D. Wilkes), Davis, David B., Mary (Mrs. James Corthell), Rosanda (Mrs. Thomas Drake). He was a man of strong religious convictions, a member for many years of the Baptist Church, in which he was much interested, and to whose progress he contributed liberally both of time and money.

DAVID BRAINARD GURNEY, son of David and Anna (Ellis) Gurney, was born in South Abington Mass., Sept. 10, 1815. His education was confined to the limited opportunities afforded by the town schools, but these laid the foundation for a clear and accurate knowledge of practical business. He added strength to a naturally robust constitution by farm work, until he was about eighteen, when he entered the tack-works, and carefully learned the details of the business, under the oversight of his father, and he has ever since been connected with tack manufacturing, and, when his father retired (about 1854), succeeded him as proprietor. About this time an added impetus was given to the business, large buildings were erected, steam-power added to that of water, and tacks, shoe-nails, heel-plates, as well as lumber and shingles, were manufactured, affording labor to numerous workmen.

About 1875, Mr. Gurney removed his business from Centre to South Abington, where he erected commodious buildings, in accordance with the most modern improvements, intended in every way to facilitate the increased development of this industry. Everything is arranged with system; neatness, order and taste are everywhere shown, and all this Mr. Gurney has accomplished by his personal industry, financial ability, and enterprise. He has loved his field of labor, and he is still found attending to the many requirements of his extensive business, which has far outgrown the expectations, if not the ambition of its founder, and is now one of the leading factors of the life of the town.

David B Grinnell

A Whitman

Mr. Gurney married, Sept. 6, 1837, Cementia, daughter of Eli and Deborah (Harden) Blanchard, of East Bridgewater. Their children are Ann (Mrs. Charles Phillips), Myra (Mrs. L. B. Hatch), David A., all now residents of this town.

Mr. Gurney is unassuming and unostentatious. He has strong convictions, and can give logical and cogent reasons for his belief. He has stood in the van of the temperance cause, with which he has been identified for many years, and favors, as the best means of advancing that cause, the entire prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating drinks. He has been several times the candidate of the Prohibition party of Massachusetts for Secretary of State, having such associates on the ticket as Wendell Phillips, Rev. Dr. Miner, etc. He was heartily in accord with them, and from devotion to principle would prefer to cast his vote with a small minority he believed to be right rather than with a majority voting wrong. He has a quick sense of injustice, and was a persistent enemy of slavery, and on the organization of the Republican party strongly supported its war policy and struggles for the perpetuity of the Union. He is one of the deacons of the Baptist Church of South Abington, of which he has been a consistent, liberal, and leading member for twenty years. In all matters of public improvement or private benevolence, Mr. Gurney has ever been among the first to respond, and he has well earned by a straightforward life of industry and integrity, and his calm, cool, and clear judgment, the high place he occupies in the community, which justly classes him among its most valuable and valued citizens.

AUGUSTUS WHITMAN.

Augustus Whitman, son of Jared and Susanna Whitman, was born in South Abington, Mass., March 16, 1821. (For ancestral history, see biography of Jared Whitman in chapter of Bench and Bar.) His childhood and early youth passed happily. Active, impulsive, generous,—a thorough boy,—he was also reliable and faithful to every required duty. After a fair improvement of such advantages as could be had in the public and private schools of his native town, in his fifteenth year he entered that celebrated training-school, Phillips' Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., then under the care of the venerable Dr. Abbott, where he remained a year and a half. As was shown by his letters home and the official reports, he was diligent and made highly commendable progress in his studies, especially selecting what would be of practical use in after-life. The next year he passed at home. In his eighteenth year (1838) he entered the hardware-store of Peter Grinnell & Sons, Providence, R. I., to whose interests he devoted himself most faithfully and intelligently. His social life widened. In the Franklin Society he met a class of young men eager for improvement, the fire company found him an active member, and the artillery company, which he joined, was called out in the Dorr rebellion. The dangers he then shared in the cause of law and order may have intensified his sympathy in the struggle for the right and for the maintenance of the Union in the great civil war, and possibly the exposures of this part of his life may have laid the foundation of the infirmities of his later years. In 1848, a few years after leaving Providence, he became associated in the same business with Mr. Calvin Foster, of Worcester, where he remained for some years, making many valued friends. In 1856 he removed to Fitchburg, and entered into the manufacturing business, making a specialty of mowing-machine knives. The business increased so rapidly as to necessitate the establishment of a branch, which was done at Akron, Ohio. These various branches were formed finally into the Whitman & Barnes Manufacturing Company, of which he was the first president. He was also interested in and took an active part in the management of the manufacturing enterprises in Fitchburg and vicinity. He was president of the Worcester North Savings Institution, of Fitchburg, for ten years, and its financial adviser until his death. In 1874, after a severe illness, Mr. Whitman purchased a place at Leominster, in which he took much interest and pleasure. This country life had a beneficial effect upon his health, and he took pride in making a model stock farm. He imported many valuable animals from Europe, and his herds of "short-horns" and other blooded cattle gave his farm a wide reputation. About 1878, Mr. Whitman retired from active business, removed to Worcester, and purchased the farm formerly occupied by his brother, Jared Whitman. Here he was indulging his taste in many improvements, and had planned to complete a beautiful estate on which to pass his days, when, Oct. 2, 1880, he was thrown from his carriage in his orchard, and was instantly killed.

Concerning Mr. Whitman's character and ability, the following extracts from memorials given by those who were intimately connected with him will speak better than any words of ours. He did a man's work well in the face of difficulties which would have appalled many.

From trustees of the Worcester North Savings Institution:

"As members of this corporation, of which Mr. Whitman was president for ten years and its financial adviser from its inception, in 1868, until his death, we have been witnesses to his earnest and efficient performance of the trusts reposed in him, to his patient attendance upon the meetings of trustees under great physical infirmity, to his uniform courtesy and kindness, and to the eminent public spirit that animated him in the discharge of his official duty, and we hereby record our belief that all interested in the great trust in the execution of which his example is a rich legacy have occasion for generous gratitude to his memory, as the friend of this institution and a leading contributor to its success."

From the directors of the Rollstone National Bank of Fitchburg:

"Mr. Whitman was possessed of marked traits of character, which rendered his life more than an ordinary one. His career gives an example of what may be achieved by thorough uprightness of character, honesty of purpose, a just regard for the rights and happiness of others, and an indomitable will, which in his case triumphed over physical infirmities, such as a weaker nature would have succumbed to. He was kindly in disposition, and always courteous in his intercourse with his fellow-men. Though tenacious of his own opinions, he thoroughly respected those of others. He was just and exact in all his dealings, and required equal justice and exactness in return. He was outspoken in his views, and had a repugnance amounting almost to contempt for hypocrisy, insincerity, or double-dealing in any one. He was generous, and his contributions to both public and private enterprises were bestowed with a liberal hand. He took much interest in worthy young men struggling amid the vicissitudes of life, and many a one has cause to bless his memory for the material assistance and valuable counsel he so freely bestowed. We recognize his long service as a director of this institution, and accord full credit for his share in a management which has brought so much of success. Let us emulate his virtue and cherish his memory."

The directors of the Whitman & Barnes Manufacturing Company, Syracuse, N. Y.:

"Bear our witness to the thorough integrity of character, earnestness of purpose, and kindly fellowship of our departed associate and friend. He was our senior in years and in business, and we bear testimony to his wise and able counsels in the formation of our company, and to his steadfast helpfulness and ready assistance always at our command in the management of our business."

Rev. H. L. Edwards, a former pastor of South Abington Congregational Church, pays this tribute to his worth:

"I never was with him but to admire. He seemed so guileless, so pure in his nature and character, so considerate for others, so self-forgetful, notwithstanding his cares, his pains, and his infirmities. I am sure I should have been stupid not to have seen all this, or seeing not to have admired. How a man so quiet and so undemonstrative could achieve so much was always to me a mystery. That he had rare ability and could be conscious of it, without being the least ostentatious, I do not doubt. And who that believes in a 'better country' can doubt that he is an inhabitant. If not he, then who?"

The citizens of his native town of South Abington hold him affectionately in memory, not only for his sterling personal qualities, but also for his generosity in presenting the town with a valuable piece of land comprising eleven acres, to be made a public park, and which bears his name. In coming years this will be counted a benefaction of inestimable value. He also remembered the Congregational society munificently in his will.

MARTIN S. STETSON.

Of the old representative families of Plymouth Colony the Stetsons rank among the first for business ability and worth. They are all direct descendants of Cornet Robert Stetson, one of the earliest settlers, and the only one known to have emigrated to the colony (see biography of Nahum Stetson, Bridgewater). Among the most prominent business men who have had large mercantile interests during the last half-century or more may be mentioned Martin Sumner Stetson, son of Barnabas and Lucy (Barstow) Stetson, born June 1, 1809, at East Abington (now Rockland). The line of descent is Cornet Robert<sup>1</sup>, Robert<sup>2</sup>, Isaac<sup>3</sup>, Peleg<sup>4</sup>, Ephraim<sup>5</sup>, Barnabas<sup>6</sup>, Martin<sup>7</sup>. His great-grandfather, Peleg<sup>4</sup>, was the first Stetson to settle in Abington, 1738. His grandfather, Ephraim<sup>5</sup>, third son of Peleg, married Ruth Ford. He was deacon of the Third Congregational Church from its organization until the infirmities of age induced him to resign the office. He lived to the great age of ninety-six years with unimpaired faculties. His children were Mary, Barnabas, Lydia, Ephraim, Jr., and Ruth. Barnabas, born April 27, 1775, married, Oct. 10, 1802, Lucy, daughter of Daniel and Betsey (Tilden) Barstow, of Hanover. (The families of Tilden and Barstow are old and valued New England families, and prominent men are to be found in their number, among them Samuel J. Tilden. The Barstows are large ship-builders, and also extensively engaged in manufactures and merchandising.) Their children were Amos (died suddenly, aged twenty), Lucy B., Martin S., Julia A. (Mrs. Samuel Blake, Jr.), Barnabas (deceased), and Lydia B. Mr. Barnabas Stetson was largely interested in various branches of business,—merchandise, farming, and manufacturing brick. He was associated with his younger brother, Ephraim, with the firm-name of B. & E. Stetson, and carried on a large mercantile business, having one store at East Abington (now Rockland), the other at Hanover Four Corners. He was an active, energetic business man through life; honest himself, he placed too much confidence in the honesty of his fellow-men for his own pecuniary interests.

Martin's scholastic education was acquired at the district school of his native town, supplemented by six months at an academy at Bolton, Mass. When twelve years old he entered the store of his uncle at Hanover, and stayed there some years, until, upon the death of an older brother, his services were required at home by his father, where he remained until he was twenty-one. During this time, however, he taught school several winter terms at East Abington and Hanover. In 1835 he commenced the manufacture of boots and shoes in company with Samuel Blake, Jr. (his brother-in-law), with the firm-name of Stetson & Blake. The manufacture of boots and shoes, which originated in Abington, was then in its infancy, and this was one of the few first firms. They commenced their commercial career by manufacturing for Amasa Walker & Co., one of the oldest established firms in Boston, and whose successors still continue the business. After a few years the firm of Stetson & Blake dissolved, and Mr. Stetson continued alone. In 1836-37 occurred the great financial crisis, and there were many failures of large firms; nearly all the banks suspended specie payment, and a general demoralization and overthrow of business was the result. During this time a number of manufacturers established houses at the South (New Orleans, Charleston, and Mobile, etc.) for the purpose of disposing of their goods. Mr. Stetson started a store in Mobile in 1840, and his brother was placed in charge. In November, 1842, however, Mr. Stetson went South and spent the winter, continuing his manufacturing at the North and also selling on commission a large amount of goods from other manufacturers, and soon succeeded in building up an extensive business, the largest of the kind in Mobile. From that time for nineteen years (until the Rebellion) he passed eight months of every year in the South, having his family with him, returning North for the summer. We quote Mr. Stetson's own words as to the feeling of the business men at the North: "Up to the time of the attack on Fort Sumter the business men of the North firmly believed that some compromise would be effected between the two sections, that war would not ensue. Acting on this belief, merchandise was shipped freely after many of the States had seceded. When the attack occurred it was too late to remedy the mistake." Before the commencement of hostilities, Mr. Stetson came North and passed most of the time during the war at South Abington, where he had a pleasant home, purchased some few years previously, and where he still resides, leaving his partner, Mr. James B. Studley, of Hanover, Mass., who was associated with him in business in 1850, with firm-name of M. S. Stetson & Co., to care for the business.

Martin S. Stetson
"

Mr. Studley had been first clerk for him from the commencement of his business, in 1842, and managed all affairs during his absence at the North, and was a most reliable, competent, and worthy man.

At this time the assets of the company were four hundred thousand dollars. There was no possibility of taking any of the money away, as all intercourse was suspended, and fifty thousand dollar bonds were required that not one dollar should be sent out of the Confederacy and no debt could be collected. Some three years after coming North, Mr. Stetson received the first news of his business in Mobile from a friend who had escaped from the South, who informed him of the death of his partner from fever caused by imprisonment at a sickly season of the year in a filthy prison, for refusing to enlist in a military company when not liable to do military duty. Judge Jones, acting under the Confederacy, confiscated the property and appointed a receiver to take charge of it. Immediately on Lee's surrender, Mr. Stetson returned to Mobile, reaching there in ten days, to find his property gone and the Confederacy a thing of the past.

During his life in Mobile, Mr. Stetson attained a high rank in commercial circles, his business, wholesale exclusively, extending to every hamlet in three or four of the Southern States, and his name was known to every merchant as a tower of financial strength and commercial honor. Although everything was changed at the South, and there still existed great animosity against Northerners, yet as Mr. Stetson and his family had been associated for so many years intimately with the best elements of society, and he had always liberally contributed of his means to sustain every worthy object, and for years had been an elder of the Presbyterian Church,—the Southerners acknowledging his unblemished character, freely admitted him into the old confidential relations (for nothing but his New England birth and disbelief in slavery could ever be brought against him) when he, at the close of the war, engaged in trade in Mobile. He opened a large stock of goods, which, as the country was almost entirely destitute, was in large demand, and brought rich returns, his sales averaging three hundred thousand dollars per annum. In 1869 he transferred his business to his son, retiring from active life. In 1861, Mr. Stetson had established a branch store in St. Paul, Minn., but closed his interest there in 1865.

Mr. Stetson married, Nov. 14, 1836, Eliza A., daughter of John Thomas, of Troy, N. Y., where her father held the office of city chamberlain. Their children were John T. (deceased), Amos Sumner, Helen E. (Mrs. Alonzo Lane), Julia B. (deceased), and Virginia A. (deceased).

Mr. Stetson has been a great traveler in America, preferring to see first American rather than European scenery. On the completion of the Union Pacific Railroad (1870) he joined the first organized excursion—that of the Boston Board of Trade—to California, Yosemite, etc. This was one of the pleasantest and most successful trips of the kind ever made. He is a director of the Abington National Bank; never has entertained a desire for political office, or to be connected with society organizations or clubs. He has been strictly a temperance man from youth, and was president of the first young men's temperance society organized in Plymouth County.

Mr. Stetson retains the erect bearing, courteous grace, and dignified appearance which have characterized him through life. An able business man, a genial companion, and a kind husband and father, he has given and derived much enjoyment during his diversified life. He has cheerfully given wherever charity was needed, and always heartily co-operated with matters of public interest. His social nature has made many friends. He is now enjoying the evening of an honorable and useful career in his pleasant home in South Abington, with his children and grandchildren near him.

---

OLIVER G. HEALY.

Oliver G. Healy was a native of Pembroke, Mass., where he was born Oct. 17, 1813. His early life was passed with an uncle, a farmer in Pembroke. When about sixteen he came with a brother to South Abington to learn the carpenter's trade, after which he engaged in business as carpenter and builder, which he followed until his death, July 2, 1876, from fever contracted at Philadelphia while attending the Centennial Exhibition. He married, July 17, 1834, Phebe, daughter of Philip and Mary (Taylor) Reed, who was a native of South Abington.

Mr. Healy was a man of quiet and reserved manners, of good shrewd judgment in business, and an honest and conscientious workman. The quick growth and prosperity of the village of South Abington was largely owing to his energy and enterprise. He purchased land, laid out streets, and built numerous houses which he sold on easy terms to those who desired to acquire the ownership of a home. Any honest, industrious workman could be sure of Mr. Healy's sympathy and aid in this direction, and, while at the same time advancing his own interests and prosperity of the town, he was still the benefactor of the poor man. In compliment to him for the development he has made, this elevated tract of land has been changed from "Mount Zion" to "Mount Olives." His business sagacity and industry were rewarded by a substantial financial prosperity which he was ever ready to share with any deserving case of charity or benevolent objects.

Mr. Healy was deeply imbued with religion. Indeed, that seemed a vital part of his character. He was a valued member of the Congregational Church, a popular Sabbath-school teacher, and heartily gave his personal assistance and monetary aid to its charities and support. He was especially interested in missionary work, and above every other object was he disposed to aid this important cause, bequeathing to this grand work the valuable property he had acquired after the faithful wife—the loved companion and colaborer of years—should no longer need its use. During his life Mr. Healy made numerous friends who were drawn to him by the many good qualities of his nature, and his life affords a good example to many a poor and struggling youth. With limited education, by honest integrity and industry he raised himself from humble circumstances to a comfortable position in society, and was enabled to do more for the advancement of his town than most others, and his memory is cherished by a large number. In all his enterprises and charities he was heartily seconded by Mrs. Healy, who is now engaged in carrying out such benevolent work as would meet his approbation.

---

JACOB P. BATES.

Jacob Pratt Bates, son of David and Almeria Bates, was born in South Abington, Mass., April 7, 1843.

The surname Bates is derived from the old French name Bartholomew. The first American resident was Clement Bates, who came from Kent, England, in the ship "Elizabeth," in 1635, and settled in Hingham, Mass. He is the ancestor of the numerous family bearing his name in this section of New England.

Eleazer Bates, great-grandfather of Jacob P. Bates, was born probably in Abington before 1750. He was a blacksmith by trade, and one of those New Englanders, of Puritan stock, possessed of robust bodies and old-fashioned virtues, which have been transmitted to their descendants. He had numerous children, among them four sons,—Robert, Seth, Eleazer, and

Oliver G. Hoaly

Jacob P. Bates

John. All were of marked physical development, and all over six feet in height except John, who was short of stature. John was born in Abington about 1776. He married Milly Pratt, of Weymouth, and had but one child,—David. He died in 1841.

David Bates was born March 12, 1805, in Abington, and has followed the making of boots and shoes from boyhood. His specialty has been fine custom-work, in which he has displayed much skill and taken great pride. He has now (1884) a pair of boots, which he made for his own use about 1854. They have been worn every year since and are good boots yet, needing no repair. He married, September, 1828, Almeria, daughter of Jacob and Hannah Loring Pratt, of South Weymouth. They have seven children, all sons,—David B., Edwin W., James E., Henry A., Charles, Jacob P., and Andrew,—all stalwart six-footers. This family has a remarkable war record: five of these boys served the Union in the great civil war. As Mr. Bates would humorously say, "I have thirty feet of boys in the army." David, Edwin, James, and Charles served in the Thirty-eighth Massachusetts Volunteers for three years. Edwin was nearly starved in Libby Prison, where he was incarcerated for six months, and Charles was slightly wounded by a spent ball. These were their only casualties during the long and active service, and all are now well and strong. Mr. Bates is tall, erect, and vigorous, even at his advanced age. He is a social companion, and has a lively fund of humor. He is orthodox in religious belief, and Republican in politics.

Jacob received his education in the public schools, and learned the shoemaker's trade of his father, with whom he worked most of the time until he was about eighteen years of age. In 1862 he enlisted in Company E, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, for nine months. This regiment went to New Orleans, serving in Banks' expedition, at Brashear City, and Port Hudson. At Brashear City he was detailed as commissary's clerk, and while there was captured by the rebels, but at once paroled, and soon exchanged. He returned home in 1863, after serving nearly a year. The same year he went to Boston unaided and alone, with only twenty dollars in his pocket, to seek employment. He commenced working for C. D. Cobb & Brothers, receiving at first but one dollar per day. He identified himself with his employers' interests, and, having good health, was enabled to perform more than ordinary service. Before he had been in the employ of the firm three years he received, much to his surprise, an offer of an interest in the business. Mr. Bates remained with this firm as partner until 1870, when, severing his connection with it, he became one of the founders of the well-known house of Cobb, Bates & Yerxa. This firm began in a small way, with but little capital. Their business has steadily and rapidly increased, until they now are the largest grocery house in New England, transacting a business of about three million dollars per annum, their main store, on Washington Street, occupying an entire block of five stores five stories in height, with branch stores at Fall River, Taunton, and Chelsea. Active, energetic, and in the prime of life, much of the direction of the business falls on Mr. Bates, and he is apparently possessed of vitality enough for many years of active labor. Mr. Bates married in September, 1867, Helen A., daughter of Hon. Horace Reed, of South Abington. They have had five children, only two of whom are living,—Carrie A. and Mabel F. Mr. Bates is a member of Park Street Church, Boston; is Republican in politics, and belongs to three Masonic bodies, Puritan Lodge, South Abington, Pilgrim Chapter, Abington, and Boston Commandery, Boston, and is a director in the National Bank of the Republic, Boston.

Although a resident of Brookline, Mr. Bates takes a great interest in his native town, and has considerable money invested there. He is now constructing a brick block of stores; is the owner of Hotel Bates, and a generous contributor to all that promotes the progress and welfare of the town. He is in the full vigor of life, and with the prospect of many years of commercial activity before him, is a good type of the pushing, successful business man of the nineteenth century.

BENJAMIN S. ATWOOD.

Centuries ago, when men had but one name, they were usually distinguished from each other by the place where they lived, or by some characteristic. The name "At the Wood" was given to one John (?), who lived where there was much land, and he was called John "At the Wood." After a time it was condensed to "Attwood," which spelling some hold until the present writing; some branches of the family have dropped one "t," and spell it "Atwood," while many others retain only the last syllable, and are called "Wood."

John Wood, or Attwood, the first American ancestor of the numerous family of Atwood, came from England to America not long after the landing of the Pilgrims, and settled in Plymouth. Tradition has it that he had four sons; one settled at Cape Cod, one took the name of Wood, one died at Plymouth, and the other, whose name was Nathaniel Atwood, settled in that part of Plymouth which in 1707 was set off and incorporated as the town of Plympton. But in 1790 this same land, once part of Plymouth, then Plympton, was again set off and named, for the third and last time, Carver. This land, occupied then by an Atwood, is still owned and occupied by those bearing the name.

Nathaniel Atwood<sup>2</sup> was a deacon of a church in Plymouth, and married Mary, daughter of Jonathan Morey. They had four sons,—John, Nathaniel, Barnabas, and Isaac. The following incident will give an idea of the primitive state of the country at that time: "Before they had almanacs, and teams were scarce, the deacon lost the run of time, and went eight miles with a grist on his shoulders to mill on Sunday, and when he found out it was Sunday he carried the bag of grain to the meeting-house."

Lieut. Nathaniel<sup>3</sup> married, first, Mary Adams, of Kingston, Mass.; second, Mrs. Abigail (Shaw) Lucas. They had a large family of children. Nathaniel was a lieutenant in the militia.

Ichabod<sup>4</sup> was born in Plympton (now Carver), 1744; married Hannah Shaw, daughter of Capt. Nathaniel Shaw, a descendant in the fourth generation from Jonathan Shaw, the emigrant. (Her brother was Lieut. Joseph Shaw, of the militia. He carried the same sword in his military service which his grandfather used in the French war, and his father also used in the Revolution.) They had twelve children, all of whom lived to middle age.

Nathaniel<sup>5</sup>, son of Ichabod and Mary (Shaw) Atwood, was born April 28, 1782, at Middleboro'; married Zilpah, daughter of Francis Shurtleff, Esq., of Carver. They had three children attaining maturity,—Flora (Mrs. Elijah Hackett), Ichabod F., and Renel. (Ichabod F. Atwood, of Middleboro', to whose courtesy we are indebted for the foregoing ancestral history, was born March 13, 1820; he has served in various military, town, and church offices, and been a justice of the peace over thirty years. He married Abigail T., daughter of Harvey C. and Hannah C. Thomas. Abigail's great-grandfather, Cobb, lived to be one hundred and seven years and eight months old.)

Renel<sup>6</sup> married Abigail Tillson. Their children are Renel G., Lucy C. (Mrs. Nelson Thomas), Flora M. (Mrs. Charles Cole), Zilpah S. (Mrs. Lorenzo Curtis), Benjamin S., Elijah H., and Lafayette, who is employed in his brother's business.

Benjamin S. Atwood, seventh generation from John Atwood, the first of the family to settle in Plymouth, son of Renel and Abigail (Tillson) Atwood, was born in Carver, Mass., June 25, 1840. He received a common-school education, and at the age of fifteen went to work in a lumber-mill in Middleboro', afterwards in Plympton, from which town he enlisted, April 17, 1861, in Company H, Third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, under President Lincoln's call for seventy-five thousand men for ninety days. He re-enlisted for nine months in Company B, same regiment. His regiment was engaged in burning Gosport Navy Yard, and his company was on picket the night of the famous Big Bethel repulse. He was mustered out with his company, and returned to Plympton, where he remained until 1866. He then, with his brother, Elijah H., under the firm-name of "Atwood Brothers," engaged in the manufacture of wooden boxes at North Abington, which business they removed to South Abington in 1872. In 1879, Elijah retired from the firm, and Benjamin S. still carries on business under the old firm-name.

Mr. Atwood married, Sept. 20, 1862, Angelina F., daughter of Lewis and Mary Weston, of Plympton. They have three children,—Winthrop F. (a student at Harvard University), Bertrand W., and Mabel F. Mr. Atwood is Republican in politics, and active in political work; has been for several years a member of and now is chairman of the Republican town committee. He is a member of Puritan Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, South Abington; Pilgrim Royal Arch Chapter, Abington; and Old Colony Commandery of Knights Templar. He has been elected to all the offices of his post, No. 73, G. A. R., Abington, filling them acceptably, and has just been honored for the third time with an election as commander of Plymouth County Division, G. A. R.

Mr. Atwood is a progressive and energetic man, interests himself in all the public affairs of the town, and warmly advocates all measures tending to the growth and improvement of his chosen place of residence, and gives liberally of his time to forward them. He has been an ardent advocate for the introduction of water into the town; has been chairman of the committee on water-works from its organization; and the speedy and satisfactory progress and completion of the works is in no small measure due to him. He is an industrious, persevering, and successful manufacturer, a loyal and patriotic citizen, a generous, warm-hearted, and genial companion and friend; deserves and enjoys a large circle of appreciative acquaintance, and ranks worthily among the representative and self-made men of this prosperous and thriving town.

B. S. Atwood
" "

J. H. Copeland

HORATIO F. COPELAND, M.D.

Horatio F. Copeland, M.D., son of Horatio and Delia (Nye) Copeland, was born in Easton, Mass., Nov. 15, 1842. He is a direct descendant of Lawrence Copeland, the emigrant, who came to this country from England in early colonial days, married Lydia Townsend, and died in 1699, at a hale old age, which is said to have been one hundred and ten years. The line to Dr. Copeland is Lawrence<sup>1</sup>, William<sup>2</sup> (married Mary Webb), Jonathan<sup>3</sup> (married Betty Snell, settled in East Bridgewater, and died at ninety years), Elijah<sup>4</sup> (married Rhoda Snell and resided in Easton), Josiah<sup>5</sup> (married Susannah Hayward, of West Bridgewater), Horatio<sup>6</sup> (married Mrs. Thomas Howard, née Nye), Horatio F.<sup>7</sup>

Horatio Copeland was a merchant and manufacturer, and a stirring man of business. He was connected with cotton-manufacturing both in Easton, Mass., and in North Carolina, in which State he was probably the first man to put in operation a cotton-gin.

Dr. Copeland was fitted for college at Thetford (Vt.) Academy, and, after studying medicine with that justly celebrated physician, Dr. Caleb Swan, of Easton, attended Harvard Medical College, where he was graduated in 1865. His country needing his services as an assistant surgeon, he received his degree in advance of the regular graduation, and at once (January, 1865) took the position of acting assistant surgeon in the United States service, and was placed in charge of the post hospital at Bermuda Hundred, and also of the large smallpox hospital located at that post. Acquiring valuable experience, and doing faithful service, he remained until June of the same year, when he returned to Massachusetts, and located in the practice of his profession at South Abington, in which he has been constantly and successfully engaged. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and a diligent student and thoughtful observer of whatever transpires in the realm of medicine, keeping his knowledge fully to the front of the latest and approved medical discoveries, and thoroughly and patiently investigating the pathology of various cases coming under his personal observation, and comparing his conclusions with others. He has devoted himself to his profession, and stands high in the esteem of his medical brethren.

Dr. Copeland has taken much interest in Freemasonry. He was admitted to the order in Rising Star Lodge of Stoughton, but is now connected with Puritan Lodge, South Abington; Pilgrim Chapter, Abington; Old Colony Commandery, Abington; and Abington Council. Of this last-named organization he was one of the constituent members, its second officer for three years, and its presiding officer four years. He is also a member of David A. Russell Post, No. 78, G. A. R. of South Abington; and a Republican in politics.

Dr. Copeland is in accord with the progressive element of society; has social qualities, and a winning geniality which attracts many friends, whom he retains by his outspoken frankness and sincerity, his broad and charitable opinions, and the strength of his adherence to his principles. Although young in years, he has built up a fine and lucrative practice, and is one of South Abington's most popular citizens.

REV. E. PORTER DYER.

Rev. E. Porter Dyer, formerly for many years pastor of the Congregational Church at Shrewsbury, died at South Abington Tuesday, Aug. 22, 1882. He was born at South Abington Aug. 15, 1813, graduated at Brown University in 1833, in the class with Senator Anthony, of Rhode Island, and afterwards pursued a theological course at Andover. In 1835 he began preaching at Stow, Middlesex Co., and established a Congregational Church there, which became the parent of two others in the neighborhood. He left the pastorate at Stow in 1846, and for a year was engaged in city missionary work at Boston. Under the auspices of the Home Missionary Society he then went to Hingham, where he established a Congregational Church, and secured the funds for building the meeting-house at Hingham Centre. He remained at Hingham sixteen years, where he greatly endeared himself to the people of the town. In the mean while he was instrumental in establishing a Congregational Church at Beachwood, in Scituate. In 1864 he resigned the pastorate, and again undertook pioneer work at Winter Hill, in Somerville, where he founded the Broadway Congregational Church. Thus he was directly the founder of three Congregational Churches, and indirectly of three more. From Somerville he was called to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Shrewsbury, where he remained seven or eight years, then leaving the pastoral work to return to his ancestral home, at South Abington. He did not abandon pulpit service, however, and until the summer of 1881 he supplied one of the churches at Hanover, when his work was interrupted by a stroke of paralysis, which permanently disabled him. For the few months preceding his death he was confined to his room, though he retained his mental faculties unclouded to the end. During his early ministry he was often actively engaged in revival work, and in most of the towns of Plymouth and Norfolk Counties many Christian people have cause to remember him with gratitude. His life was one of hard and unremitting toil for his Master, and he has gone to find the reward of a faithful servant. Of his children who reached adult life, two have gone before him,—Mrs. Helen A. Lee, who, after a term of service among the freedmen of the South during the war, and immediately after her marriage, was lost at sea, and Mrs. Sarah E. Pierson, a missionary of the American Board, who died last winter at Pao-ting-fu, North China. The surviving children are Edward N. Dyer, engaged in educational and missionary work in the Sandwich Islands; Mrs. Henry M. Wyatt, of West Medford; Mrs. J. F. Thomas, of Boston; Mrs. Martha L. Ford, of West Medford; and E. Porter Dyer, of Springfield. A descendant of a Pilgrim family, and brought up in conformity to the religious thought and life of the Old Colony, Mr. Dyer was a forcible preacher of the old school and very familiar with the Bible, which was always his chief religious teacher and guide. In middle life he was a frequent contributor to religious and other journals. He was also the author of two or three books for children and young people, and a metrical version of "Pilgrim's Progress," published by Lee & Shepard, in 1869.

WILLIAM P. CORTHELL.

A history of South Abington, however brief, would be far from complete if no mention were made of Mr. William P. Corthell. He has served on the board of selectmen, with one exception, every year since the incorporation of the town. In Abington he acted as a singularly able and impartial moderator at nearly all the regular and special town-meetings from May 5, 1848, to Dec. 8, 1874. From 1850 to 1855 he was on the boards of selectmen and assessors, and a member of the House of Representatives in 1850 and 1853. As a special county commissioner he served one year, and as a county commissioner, fifteen years. Such a period of service is almost without parallel, and shows the high degree of confidence that his fellow-citizens have placed in him.

HON. HORACE REED.

The senator from the Second Plymouth District for the present legislative year (1883-84) is Hon. Horace Reed, of this town. He is a brother of Hon. William L. Reed, and was born in Abington. Mr. Reed was a member of the lower branch of the General Court in 1863-64; has served on the board of school committee of Abington, and was clerk in his brother's factory for twenty years. He was a member of the Committees on Drainage, Insurance, and Prisons during the last session of the Legislature.

HISTORY OF ROCKLAND.

BY CHARLES F. MESERVE, A.M.

ROCKLAND, formerly a part of Abington, was incorporated March 9, 1874. Having had a corporate existence for only a decade, her history must necessarily be brief. Rockland is a busy manufacturing town. The streets are neat and well kept, and have beautifully-shaded sidewalks, and the dwellings convey to the stranger the pleasing impression of comfort and neatness. There is a well-organized fire department, and a liberally patronized public library.

The following were the town officers for the first year: Town Clerk, E. R. Studley; Treasurer and Collector, E. R. Studley; Selectmen, Assessors, and Overseers of the Poor, E. R. Studley, J. C. Heberd, J. W. Beal; School Committee, J. C. Gleason (three years), Martha Reed (two years), George H. Bates (one year); Auditors, Washington Reed, Zenas M. Lane, Isaiah Jenkins; Highway Surveyors, J. C. Heberd, J. W. Beal, Joseph French; Constables, George F. Wheeler, Owen Maguire, Joshua Crooker, David B. Torrey, J. W. Beal, Ferdinand H. Pool, Samuel P. Keen, Willis Taylor; Field-Drivers, Michael Shannahan, Luther W. Turner, John Llewellyn, George P. Shaw; Sealer of Weights and Measures, Samuel T. Bliss; Measurer of Wood and Bark, H. C. Totman; Surveyor of Lumber, Albert Culver; Fence-Viewers, George B. Clapp, Washington Reed, Richmond J. Lane; Truant Officers, David Thomas, H. C. Totman; Keeper of Lock-up, George F. Wheeler; Chief Engineer of Fire Department, Joseph Merritt; Representatives (Twelfth District), Dexter Grose, George W. Reed, of Abington.

The business conducted by Messrs. French & Hall was established in 1881 by the present proprietors. Mr. French, twenty years previous to that, was engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes. The special line of trade for which this house is celebrated is the manufacture of fine- and medium-grade hand- and machine-sewed calf boots and shoes, a department in which it stands second to none for excellence and durability of this class of goods. The business premises occupied by Messrs. French & Hall cover a spacious area of twelve thousand square feet of flooring, the building being a four-story structure, of which they occupy the second, third, and fourth floors. On the first-mentioned floor is the office and packing-room; the third floor is required for the cutting and stitching, and sole-leather department, while the fourth is devoted to bottoming. Seventy-five people, some of whom are expert workmen, find employment here, their production averaging over two hundred and fifty pairs per day. The machinery with which the establishment is supplied is of a high degree of excellence, being of the latest improved pattern, and adds greatly to the perfection of the goods produced. In charge of the establishment is Mr. Joseph E. French, whose acquirements in his vocation are such as to insure the satisfactory transaction of all matters in his charge. Mr. Hall attends to all the selling of the goods, and is well known among the trade, having had some eight years' experience in this line. The number of cases of boots and shoes manufactured last year was two thousand six hundred, at the value of one hundred thousand dollars.

Messrs. French & Hall have been identified with their vocation in Rockland for a number of years, during which time they have not only acquired a thorough and minute knowledge of their business, but have secured and maintained the respect and esteem of the community. Of the individual members of the firm, we may say that Mr. Joseph E. French is a native of Rockland, where he was born in 1838; while Mr. George W. Hall is originally from Rochester, in this State, his birth occurring in 1847, and resides at Abington. Their Boston office is located at No. 135 Summer Street.

The affluence of invention characteristic of the present age supplies in abundance new machines, new processes, and new materials as rapidly as the never-ceasing demands for increased production, superior style and quality, and lessened cost of manufactured articles necessitates them. To those outside a department of industry who have merely noticed the fact that the goods produced in it are more abundant, stylish, and convenient than formerly, an acquaintance with the intricate machinery, methodical processes, and systematic division of labor now employed comes as a startling revelation. The production of any one of the most familiar objects of every-day use involves the assistance of numerous mechanical contrivances of which the grandparents of the present generation were wholly ignorant. The manufacture of paper boxes, for example, is an industry which has assumed immense proportions with the development of production in innumerable varieties of goods to which this form of package is appropriate. Among those manufacturers in this department who add greatly to the impetus of the trade we find the house of Messrs. F. E. Nesmith & Co. The business was established in 1883, by C. Littlefield & Co., who were succeeded a short time ago by the present proprietors. The premises occupied by them are situated on Church Street, and cover an area of one hundred and forty-five by forty-five feet, being a four-story structure, of which they occupy the first floor, where they carry on the manufacture of paper boxes of all descriptions. The machinery with which the establishment is equipped embraces every improvement or novel advantage known to the trade, and adds greatly to the perfection of the goods produced as well as the rapidity with which they are made. Employment is given to about forty skilled operatives, who turn out about five thousand boxes per day, or one million two hundred thousand per year. Messrs. F. E. Nesmith & Co. entered into the arena of trade competition after a long application to, and a thorough practical knowledge of, the art. Possessing as they do a most eligible location, combined with practical knowledge and business capacity, the trade is sure to increase and attain such a position as they so well deserve.

Promoting the industrial thrift of Rockland by the employment of numerous artisans and others, and fostering a trade which extends throughout the country, the house of Messrs. R. J. Lane & Pratt is certainly entitled to mention in this work. Established in 1880, the firm was originally Lane & Chipman, who began about that time the manufacture of boots and shoes, which title was succeeded by R. J. Lane & Pratt in August, 1883, which from that period has (under the caption title) been composed of R. J. Lane, formerly senior partner in the house of J. Lane & Son, and A. H. Pratt, who was connected with the old house of Lane & Chipman from its foundation in 1880. The plant now covers an area of one hundred and forty-four by forty-five feet, flanked with an L measuring seventy by thirty-five feet, being a four-story structure, of which they occupy the second, third, and fourth floors of the main building. Here we find the office, packing-room, and also the cutting department on the second floor. On the third floor a large number of mechanics are employed in bottoming, and on the fourth floor skilled operatives are attending the stitching. One steam-engine of about twenty-five horse-power furnishes the necessary motive-power. This manufactory contains the latest improved machinery, and employment is given to some one hundred people during the whole year, their annual output amounting to one hundred thousand pairs, which, for quality and excellence, bear a high reputation among the trade. It is not surprising then that this well-known and firmly-established house should have attained the success it enjoys, and which the long experience of the proprietors in the business and their general liberal policy and integrity fully warrants a lengthened continuance. The individual members of the firm are both natives of Abington. Mr. Richmond J. Lane was born in 1826, and Mr. Ashton H. Pratt in 1857. They have uniformly made it a rule to employ none but skilled workmen, use nothing but the best stock, and the trade may depend confidently upon securing from their establishment exactly what they desire. Their salesroom is at No. 127 Summer Street, Boston. The firm last year turned out four thousand twelve-pair cases, at a market value of one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

In mentioning the boot and shoe trade of Rockland we would not willingly omit reference to the house of Messrs. Arnold & Leatherbee, which has done no little to promote the prosperity and industrial thrift of the community. This house was established in 1879, by Messrs. Arnold & Leatherbee, under the above title, both partners having had a previous experience in the manufacturing business of a comprehensive character. The premises consist of a four-story structure, measuring thirty-two by sixty feet in dimensions, the first floor being retained for office and sole-leather; the second floor required as finishing-room and packing department; on the third we find a force of skilled mechanics employed in cutting, fitting, and stitching; and the fourth is used for bottoming. Here one hundred hands are employed, who manufacture about two hundred pairs per day. In the hands, and under the able management of this house, the business has been greatly enlarged during the period which they have controlled it, a trade having been established throughout the United States, which is annually on the increase. The manufacture of hand- and machine-sewed men's fine calf boots and shoes is under the immediate supervision of Mr. H. B. Arnold, the senior member of the firm, who, with an experience of many years, is known throughout the entire trade as an expert in his vocation. Mr. H. B. Arnold is a native of Rockland, and has reached the age of fifty-five years, while Mr. J. D. Leatherbee is a native of Boston, where he was born in 1846. Their sales-room is located at No. 57 Lincoln Street, Boston. Messrs. Arnold & Leatherbee were, for twelve years previous to their establishing themselves in business, in the employ of Mr. George B. Clapp, shoe manufacturer, the former as superintendent, and the latter as book-keeper. They employ one hundred hands, and manufacture three hundred pairs per day.

An important business was established in 1870 by Messrs. Torrey & Gurney, a title which was supplanted in 1879 by E. P. Torrey & Co., and in 1883 changed to the present style, Torrey, Gurney & Co. The premises cover an area of fifty by thirty feet, flanked with an L measuring thirty-four by fifteen feet in dimensions, being three stories in height. The first floor contains the office, packing-room, and stock of sole-leather, also the dressing and stitching department; the second floor is devoted to cutting and stitching, and the third floor is reserved for treeing and finishing. One ten horse-power engine and fifteen horse-power boiler are required to move the machinery, which is of the latest and most improved style, while one hundred skilled operatives are given employment, who manufacture some two hundred pairs per day. The goods manufactured and turned out by Messrs. Torrey, Gurney & Co. hold the highest reputation in the market for quality and durability. The growth and prosperity of this house, though rapid, is only commensurate with the energy, good judgment, and superior advantages possessed by this firm, all of which are sedulously employed in maintaining the character of their goods. The individual members of the firm are too well and widely known in this town, and by the general trade over the country, to demand personal mention at our hands. Messrs. E. P. Torrey and E. S. Tirrell are natives of Abington, the former being fifty, and the latter fifty-four years of age. Mr. J. C. Gurney is a native of Hartford, Me., where he was born in 1833. Their sample- and sales-room is located at No. 107 Summer Street, Boston.

In reviewing the several firms and individuals in the boot and shoe industry, we require no apology for referring to the firm of Messrs. W. E. Putnam & Co. as being clearly entitled to recognition in this history. This house was organized in 1863, by the association of Messrs. W. E. Putnam and H. S. Jenkins, who entered into the manufacture of fine calf boots and shoes. The factory, a three-story structure, occupies an area of two hundred and five by forty feet, the same being supplied with a twenty-five horse-power steam-engine which operates the machinery, all of which is particularly effective and ingenious. Some two hundred skillful mechanics find occupation in this establishment, who turn out over five hundred pairs per day. This factory is equal in extent to any similar concern in the State, and has become the centre from which radiates a trade extending from Maine to the Pacific slope, and from St. Paul to New Orleans. The first floor of this well-equipped factory is used as office- and packing-room, while a large force of artisans is attending to the finishing and dressing. On the second floor is a number of operatives conducting the fitting, cutting, and bottoming, and on the third floor bottoming and cutting is done. The factory is under the superintendence of Mr. W. H. Bates, and the goods made are mainly the finest hand-sewed, equaling in style the best Newark goods.

Messrs. W. E. Putnam & Co. also have a large manufactory at Campello. Always pursuing a policy embracing the cardinal elements of success,—the highest possible standard of goods produced at the lowest possible price,—strict adherence to sound business principles, and an indefatigable activity to ascertain the wants of the trade, the house of W. E. Putnam & Co. has created a demand for their manufactures throughout the country, and is regarded as one of the most reliable and liberal manufacturing concerns. Mr. W. E. Putnam is a native of Danvers, Mass., where he was born in 1837, and Mr. H. S. Jenkins claims Boston his native city, and has reached the age of forty-five years. As a firm, it is not too much to say of them, that in all attributes that lead to success and universal consideration, Messrs. Putnam & Jenkins have been endowed to a remarkable degree. The location of their sample-room is at 122 Summer Street, Boston.

To successfully achieve the desired result of turning out the best description of work, it is essential that the manufacturer should avail himself of such improvements as will more easily tend to accomplish his object. This more particularly applies to the manufacturer of boots and shoes, as the large amount of rivalry and competition displayed by the different houses affords at once a market for any improvement that may tend to lessen the cost or better the production. In this connection we make mention of the establishment of Mr. Jason Smith, of Rockland, manufacturer of Smith's patent sole-fitting and channeling machine. This is one of the best labor-saving machines ever introduced. Some of the advantages claimed for this machine are that the cost of labor in stock-fitting is reduced from fifty to seventy-five per cent., as one man can do the work of from two to four men. An active workman can round, channel, and groove in one day two thousand pairs. One great advantage in this machine is the saving of dies, which in one year alone will pay the cost of the machine.

A prominent manufacturer states that this machine has "saved more than three-fourths the expense of dies," and that they "find iron patterns more convenient to handle and easier to change."

This house was established in 1878 by Messrs. C. T. Stetson and J. Smith, under which title it was known till 1879, when by the retirement of Mr. C. T. Stetson the style and status changed to that at present employed. The premises occupied by Mr. Smith consist of a three-story structure, covering an area of fifty-five by twenty-seven feet, of which he occupies two floors, which are equipped with the most perfect machinery and mechanical appliances.

A native of Maine, where he was born in 1842, Mr. Smith has been prominent in promoting the industrial and commercial interests of Rockland, and occupies an esteemed position in the consideration of this community.

In reference to the boot and shoe business transacted in Rockland we have particular occasion to note the house of Z. M. & E. Lane as being more than usually prominent for the enterprise and energy with which its operations are conducted. When Mr. J. Lane established his business, in 1834, his capital was small, and his resources consequently limited. Being a practical mechanic, however, and perfectly familiar with his work in every department, he made it his object to excel, and the superiority of his work became so well known as to lead to a trade which gradually increased from year to year. In 1855 he admitted his two sons, R. J. and Z. M. Lane, to an interest in the concern, and the business was carried on under the style of J. Lane & Sons till 1879, when the present firm succeeded to the plant. To the manufacture of fine boots and shoes the attention of the firm is mainly directed, and the facilities enjoyed for the production of this class of goods are simply unrivaled. The factory is a large four-story building, covering an area of one hundred and fifty-eight by one hundred and ten feet, supplied with all the modern mechanical appliances requisite for the perfection of first-class work. Two hundred and twenty-five experienced mechanics are employed in the several departments, who turn out some seventy-five cases per day. In point of durability, style, and finish, these goods compare most favorably with the similar products of other makers, and have a steady and widely-extended demand. Both members of the firm are natives of Rockland, and were born in that town,—Mr. Zenas M. Lane in 1828, and Mr. Everett Lane in 1836,—both having been actively identified here with the interests and industries of this community. This firm produces annually about nine thousand cases, at a value of three hundred thousand dollars.

Among the many houses engaged in the trade in Rockland that are worthy of mention is the house of Mr. C. W. Torrey. He is a manufacturer of fine calf boots and shoes, of which he makes as fine an assortment as can be obtained in any similar concern. This establishment was originated by C. W. Torrey and T. P. Young in 1858. They conducted the business until 1860, when the latter retired, and the title of the firm changed to its present title. The premises consist of a four-story structure, covering an area of thirty-five by one hundred and seventeen feet. Here, in various departments of the works, are employed one hundred and fifty hands, many of whom are expert mechanics, all being adroit in their respective duties, who turn out fifty dozen pairs per day. All the latest and most improved machinery, propelled by a fifteen horse-power steam-engine, are to be found here. In all respects this establishment occupies a leading position in the market, not only with regard to the superiority of its goods, but is also equally conspicuous for the enterprise of its policy and the liberality and promptness with which all its dealings are conducted. Mr. C. W. Torrey is a native of Rockland, where he was born in 1831, and bears a high reputation among his many friends and customers.

In describing the various manufacturers of Rockland we are not likely to overlook the establishment of Mr. C. H. Warfield, which is deserving of more than limited consideration. For many years Mr. Warfield has been well and favorably known in Rockland as a practical and skillful machinist, and the work turned out from his establishment has long been recognized by the trade as first-class in every respect. This house was established in 1881 by Mr. Warfield, and during this period he has been continually engaged in mechanical pursuits, until his name and reputation as a machinist have become widespread throughout this State. The premises consist of a four-story structure, of which he occupies part of the first floor, well equipped throughout, including two turning-lathes, two polishing-lathes, and a forge. The business done by Mr. Warfield is varied and extensive, embracing many specialties. He is a manufacturer of shoe machinery, together with all kinds of repairs and general machine work to order, etc. He employs assistants, who are also skillful mechanics, and is prepared to execute all work in his line not only promptly, but with that intelligent apprehension that makes his service so highly appreciated. Mr. C. H. Warfield is a native of Blackstone, this State, where he was born in 1842.

We have already commented at such length upon the important place that the boot and shoe manufacture holds in New England, and especially in Massachusetts, that any such remarks in connection with the house to which we invite the reader's attention in this article might well be deemed superfluous. The house of Mr. E. T. Harvell was established in 1874, and he has been identified with Rockland and its industries for a number of years. All the latest and most improved machinery is to be found here to facilitate the work of seventy-five skilled artisans, who manufacture about one hundred pairs per day. All goods are gotten up for comfort and durability, the stock being the best and the workmanship all that can be desired. Mr. E. T. Harvell is a native of South Weymouth, where he was born, in 1842, and has had an experience of fifteen years in this industry. In the liveliest season Mr. Harvell employs eighty hands, and last year shipped two thousand five hundred cases.

T. Donovan commenced the manufacture of boots and shoes in Rockland in 1877, and employs from twelve to twenty hands.

The business of Burrell, Houghton & Co. was established by L. J. Loud and B. A. Burrell, in December, 1872, under the firm-name of Loud & Burrell. At the end of two and a half years Burrell purchased of Mr. Loud his interest in the business, when the style was changed to B. A. Burrell & Co. Under this style it continued until July, 1878, when it took the present style of Burrell, Houghton & Co. Value of annual product, three hundred thousand dollars.

J. S. Turner. This business was established in September, 1865, under the firm-name of Studley & Turner. In 1873, Mr. Studley met his death by a sad accident. Since 1873 the business has been conducted under the firm-name of J. S. Turner. The number of hands employed when running full is from two hundred to two hundred and fifty. Value of annual product, three hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

J. H. Locke & Co. commenced business in Wheeling, W. Va., in the summer of 1874, and subsequently removed to Rockland. They employ about a dozen hands. They do a business of about sixty-five thousand dollars annually.

A. W. Perry manufactures boots and shoes amounting to one hundred and thirty thousand dollars annually.

E. T. Wright, on Webster Street, and C. E. Lane, on Linden Street, have also built up a considerable business in the manufacturing of boots and shoes.

M. McDevitt's bakery is a representative institution of the town. It employs about thirty persons, and the value of the annual product amounts to about eighty thousand dollars.

The business done by Messrs. Culver, Phillips & Co. is so large that it is deserving of mention. It was established in 1871 under the firm-name of A. Culver & Co., and so continued until 1879, when the firm assumed the present name. Last year the sales of coal amounted to eight thousand tons, and the aggregate sales of coal, lumber, grain, flour, hay, etc., for the same period of time, footed up two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. A business of eighty thousand dollars was done the first year it was established. Mr. Culver was for many years book-keeper for Jenkins Lane & Son, and is at present treasurer of the Hanover Branch Railway Company.

In addition to the above there are also other minor manufacturing establishments in this town, constituting in all an industrial centre of no inconsiderable importance.

The following are the names of present voters who have lived in Abington and Rockland a half-century or more :

Jacob S. Ames.	Joshua Curtis.
Briggs Arnold.	Leander Curtis.
Ezra Arnold.	Brainard Cushing.
Ezra D. Arnold.	Davis Cushing.
Henry B. Arnold.	Urban W. Cushing.
William D. Arnold.	William S. Cushing.
Horatio Baker.	Zattu Cushing.
Robert Bass.	Charles H. Dill.
David Beal.	Joseph Dill.
Franklin Beal.	Josiah K. Fuller.
Nathan A. Beal.	James C. Gardner.
Nathaniel Beal.	Washington Gardner.
Benjamin F. Brooks.	William H. Gurney.
Bradford T. Brooks.	David Hammond.
Alfred Brown.	Albert Hobart.
Adna Burrell.	John Hobart.
Benjamin Burrell.	David Holbrook.
Charles M. Burrell.	Dexter Holbrook.
Elias A. Burrell.	Quiney Holbrook.
Harvey C. Burrell.	Quiney Holbrook (2d).
John Burrell.	Richard Holbrook.
John Burrell (2d).	Turner R. Holbrook.
Lucius A. Burrell.	David Hunt.
Seth Chandler.	David F. Hunt.
Edmund B. Curtis.	Gilbert Hunt.

Reuben Hunt.
William Hunt.
David Jacobs.
Zenas Jenkins.
Albert Lane.
Elbridge Lane.
Marshall Lane.
Richmond J. Lane.
Silas Lane.
Theron Lane.
Thomas Lane.
Warren Lane.
Zenas M. Lane.
Reuben Loud.
Samuel V. Loud.
George Lovewell.
Daniel Lovewell.
Gustavus Mann.
Josiah Mann.
Lewis A. Nash.
Stephen Payne.
Gideon B. Phillips.
Cyrus Pool.
David S. Pool.
John C. Pool.
Ludo A. Pool.
Lysander Pool.
William Pool.
James N. Pratt.
Henry H. Prouty.
Amos S. Reed.
Dexter Reed.

Theodore Reed.
William T. Reed.
Brackley Shaw.
Augustus E. Shaw.
Elijah Shaw.
Jefferson Shaw.
Melvin Shaw.
Dana Smith.
Franklin Smith.
Nathaniel R. Smith.
Samuel W. Somers.
Josiah Soule.
Stephen Standish.
Austin Studley.
Reuben Studley.
William A. Studley.
David Thomas.
Arioch Thompson.
Samuel V. Thompson.
Edwin S. Tirrell.
Charles W. Torrey.
David Torrey.
Edward P. Torrey.
Noah B. Turner.
Elbridge V. Wheeler.
George F. Wheeler.
John W. Wheeler.
Leonard Whiting.
Stephen Whiting.
John Wilkes.
Warren Wilkes.

Mary D. Crowell.
Sarah A. Donham.*
Mary D. Dunbar.*
Emma Dawes.
Fidelia A. Estes.
Ellen M. French.
Amanda M. Gardner.*
Angelina G. Gardner.
Anna G. Gardner.
Sarah E. Harper.*
Betsey A. Hicks.*
Isabella B. Hill.*
Emily R. Holbrook.
Lydia J. Holbrook.*
Mariesta D. Howland.
Julia Holbrook.*
Mary R. Jenkins.*
Hulda B. Loud.*
Maria F. Lowell.
Sarah F. Meader.*
Abbie M. Meserve.*
Malina Moore.*
Charlotte H. Mann.*
Rosmond S. Poole.
Hannah J. Packard.
Emma F. Poole.*
Julia Payne.
Martha Reed.*
Anna Reed.*
Arabella Torrey.*
Emeline D. Tirrell.*
Harriet Turner.*
Mary A. Woodsum.*
Susan Wheeler.*
Mary L. Smith.
Sarah Shaw.
Betsey C. Shaw.*
Mary P. Shaw.*

Those marked with an asterisk (*) voted at the last election for school committee.

Hartsuff Post, No. 74, G. A. R., was chartered Jan. 11, 1869, upon application of Charles L. Rice, Josiah Soule, Jr., Wesley Gurney, B. V. Bennett, Nelson Lowell, Elijah Thompson, George H. Hunt, Nathan A. Beal, Josiah W. Lane, and Joel Crowell, they being authorized by department headquarters to form an encampment.

At the first meeting a large number made application for admission to membership, and there has been a steady increase until there have been mustered two hundred soldiers and sailors from all branches of the service, both the army and navy, though the larger number of recruits came from the Third, Twelfth, Thirty-eighth, Forty-third, and Sixtieth Regiments of Infantry.

The first officers chosen were Charles L. Rice, C.; Josiah Soule, Jr., S. V. C.; John H. Harper, J. V. C.; George H. Hunt, Adjt.; J. S. Gray, Q.M.; Wesley Gurney, Q.M.-Sergt.; H. H. Reed, Sergt.-Maj., who were installed Jan. 18, 1869, by Capt. C. W. Thompson, assistant adjutant-general of the department.

The name of Hartsuff Post 74 was adopted in honor of Gen. George L. Hartsuff, who commanded the brigade to which the Twelfth Massachusetts belonged. He was a West Point graduate and had served in the regular army in the Florida war, a brave officer, and one who won the respect and love of all under his command.

From the formation of the encampment it has been the endeavor of the comrades to carry out the three grand principles of the order, fraternity, charity, and loyalty, particularly the two former, as a glance at the figures furnished by the relief committee will show.

The total receipts have been seven thousand dollars,

The teachers of Rockland are as follows: C. F. Meserve, M. M. O'Brien, Abbie E. Ferris, high school; C. B. Collins, William F. Nichols, Hulda B. Loud, Emma F. Poole, grammar school; Fidelia A. Estes, Ella A. Everson, W. W. Winslow, Sara A. McIlvein, Alice E. Newhall, Effie Beal, intermediate; Alice Holbrook, Central Street; Maria Jenkins, Mary P. Shaw, Clara A. Snow, Carrie Hughes, Mary D. Dunbar, Jennie McIlvene, Mary D. Lantz, primary.

The physicians at present practicing in Rockland are J. C. Gleason, medical examiner, C. S. Millett, Dr. Southgate, Mrs. Dr. Winslow, Dr. Beamish, and Dr. Forrest.

The receipts at the post-office the past year amounted to $3140.85.

In 1860, Mr. William Douglas opened a periodical store. At this time he sold scarcely one hundred papers a day. From this small beginning his business has greatly increased, until now he averages six hundred a day, four hundred of which are dailies.

List of women in the town of Rockland qualified to vote in the election of school committee, as made out by the selectmen, March 3, 1884:

Sarah E. Bird.*
Emma L. Bearce.
Mary R. Burrell.*
Lydia F. Baker.*

Mary L. Burrell.*
Susanna P. Babcock.
Rebecca T. Collins.*
Angelia W. Collins.*

six thousand of which has been carefully expended in rendering assistance to soldiers and sailors, whether members of the order or not, in their hour of sickness or distress, and in caring for their families when necessary until they were self-supporting.

This relief-fund has been raised from time to time by holding fairs and entertainments, and in this connection too much praise cannot be given to the citizens of Rockland, who have ever taken a lively interest in the organization, and have heartily supported every enterprise which would add to the relief-fund.

The ladies have also been earnest workers in the cause, forming themselves into a Grand Army Sewing Circle, which has been of great benefit socially and financially to the post. First and foremost in every good work, in this they have been especially active.

Since 1869 death has often visited their ranks, and some twenty-two comrades have been called by the great Captain to be mustered into the ranks of the higher encampment. The roster is as follows :

Died
Gideon B. Phillips.....	Aug. 29, 1869.
Capt. Josiah Soule, Jr.....	Oct. 5, 1870.
James B. Studley.....	April 24, 1873.
John A. Johnson.....	May 16, 1875.
Zenas Smith.....	Aug. 28, 1875.
John C. Hebbard.....	Feb. 1, 1876.
Noah Freenan.....	Feb. 25, 1876.
Walter M. Beal.....	June 19, 1876.
Charles F. Bly.....	Jan. 28, 1877.
Elijah Estes.....	April 15, 1877.
Patrick Donovan.....	June 29, 1877.
Jerome Shaw.....	Jan. 14, 1878.
Wesley Gurney.....	March 30, 1878.
Henry Warner.....	May 27, 1878.
Leander Torrey.....	April 8, 1879.
Lemuel Jenkins.....	Aug. 12, 1880.
Herbert M. Loud.....	Feb. 14, 1881.
Albert Smith.....	April 12, 1881.
Reuben L. Baker.....	Jan. 12, 1882.
Nathan S. Jenkins.....	April 8, 1882.
R. J. Hughes.....	May 20, 1882.
George W. Stoddard.....	Sept. 12, 1882.

It is a sad thought connected with the order that sooner or later it must of necessity become extinct. As the comrades gather each year to strew those flowers of affection on their dead comrades' graves, they are reminded by the increasing number of those little flags, so significant in their meaning, that they too will soon be called to the encampment of the great Commander, but if by their example the observance of Decoration-day be fully established, the Grand Army will have accomplished a work which shall be felt for all coming time, for a purer patriotism and stronger devotion to country must be the result of such observance.

The present officers are as follows: Isaac Hopkins, C.; A. H. Baker, S. V. C.; Charles H. French, J. V. C.; J. H. Harper, Q.M.; W. E. Foster, Q.M.-Sergt.; J. Looby, adjt.; George H. Hunt, Chapl.; L. A. Swaine, Sgt.-Maj.; Silas Gurney, Surg.

Some of the members of the post have a realizing sense of the horrors of Andersonville, Florence, Libby Prison, and Belle Isle, among whom were Comrades John H. Harper, Darius Everson, and John Avery, who remained in Andersonville ten, six, and eleven months respectively. It is a subject, even now, upon which they do not care to talk, their lives being saved only as by a miracle, so exhausted and emaciated were they by the inhuman treatment there received. Others were confined at different prisons, but were fortunately paroled after a short confinement.

The St. Alphonsus Total Abstinence and Benevolent Society.—On Nov. 26, 1870, a meeting of those interested in the formation of a Catholic Total Abstinence Society was called to meet in St. Bridget's Church, Abington. About two hundred and fifty persons responded, and, as a result, the above-named society was formally organized on Dec. 4, 1870. At this time the Catholic parish of Abington included what are now the towns of Abington, South Abington, and Rockland, and although but a small proportion of the members belonged in Abington, it was deemed best to hold the meetings monthly in the old town house, and at an early date we find it recorded that a vote of thanks be extended to the town officers for the free use of that edifice. It was not a great while before it was found difficult to get the members together from such great distances, and after struggling along for about five years it was decided to remove to Rockland, where rooms were secured in the Union Company's building, and after meeting there for a year they removed to the old hotel, where the society opened a reading-room and gymnasium, where they remained until it was found necessary to remove the building to make way for the new church which was afterwards built on that site.

It was now decided to build a hall to meet the increasing demands of the society, and after becoming incorporated, June 30, 1882, the erection of their present hall was commenced.

Temperance Hall, which was opened to the public Thanksgiving-day, 1882, is situated on the east side of Union Street, only a few rods north of the depot. The first floor is occupied by the members as a reading-room, and also as a place of social enjoyment, where all kinds of innocent amusements are always in order. Adjoining the first room on this floor, and connected with it by folding-doors, is the gymnasium, which is fitted up with all the latest appliances for physical culture. On the upper floor, which is reached by two flights of stairs situated on the right and left of the front entrance, is the main hall, seventy by forty-five feet, and a seating capacity of five hundred, with a splendid stage, anterooms, etc., which is used by the society for lectures, meetings, and sociables. The society is at present in a flourishing condition, having one hundred and fifty members on the roll, all interested in carrying out the objects for which the society was incorporated,—“The Promotion of Temperance in this Commonwealth and Charity and Benevolence amongst its Members.”

Hatherly Lodge, No. 699, K. of H., was instituted July 16, 1877, by C. H. Eaton, agent for Supreme Lodge. Charter members: Leonard Whiting, W. B. Studley, William Douglas, E. W. Whiting, J. S. Poole, C. A. Townsend, J. C. Gleason, M.D., George H. Ryder, W. G. Ball, G. E. Donham, L. W. Easton, G. C. Sherman, Daniel Purcell, C. W. Mitchell, Isaac Hopkins, M. V. B. Brock, Leander Torrey, Albert Culver, A. F. Kelley, Rev. A. W. Westgate, C. L. Rice, John Mann, Jr., Gideon Studley, Jr. Lost by death and otherwise, five; present number of members, sixty-two. Officers: J. Looby, D.; C. A. Townsend, Treas.; C. W. Mitchell, R.; L. W. Easton, F. R.

Rockland Encampment, No. 55, I. O. O. F., was instituted March 2, 1883, by E. Bentley Young, Grand Patriarch. Charter members (and first board of elective officers): Albert J. Meader, C. P.; Luther W. Easton, H. P.; Charles W. Mitchell, S. W.; Henry E. Fuller, S.; Leonard Whiting, Treas.; Charles H. Lane, J. W. Present number of members, fifty-two. Present board of elective officers: A. C. Duncan, C. P.; J. L. Burrell, S. W.; A. W. Clapp, Treas.; William W. Curtis, H. P.; S. A. Hunt, S.; A. Josselyn, F. S.; J. Looby, J. W.

Standish Lodge, No. 177, I. O. O. F., was instituted Oct. 6, 1876, by Horace W. Stickney, Grand Master. Charter members: J. C. Gleason, M.D., C. W. Mitchell, Leonard Whiting, P. R. Curtis, C. K. Witherell, C. A. Townsend, W. F. Hunt, D. H. Everson, N. B. Ellis, E. W. Whiting, Leander Torrey, J. H. Harper, George C. Soule, Henry M. Wade, Jeremiah Looby, W. H. Hebbard, C. A. Hebbard, S. D. Whiting, W. C. Curtis. Lost by death and otherwise, six; present number of members, eighty-eight. Elective officers: H. T. Smith, N. G.; G. E. Donham, R. Sec.; W. F. Hunt, V. G.; J. B. Hersey, Treas.; Daniel Purcell, Per. Sec.

The East Abington Savings-Bank was incorporated in March, 1868. The original members were Sumner Shaw, Franklin Poole,* Washington Reed,* Charles H. Dill (2d), James M. Underwood,* Gideon

Studley,* J. J. Estes, Elijah Shaw, Charles W. Torrey, Levi Reed,* R. J. Lane, Zenas M. Lane, Amos S. Reed, Isaiah Jenkins,* Alonzo Lane, Leonard Blanchard, George B. Clapp, Brainerd Cushing, Micah H. Poole,* Zenas Jenkins, Josiah Soule, Jr.,* Walter B. Studley, E. R. Studley, Jenkins Lane,* S. H. Dawes,* David Torrey, E. P. Torrey, Henry B. Arnold, Cornelius Daly, Van Buren Grover, Cyrus Poole, Edwin W. Whiting, Abner Curtis,* Joseph Perry.

Those marked with a * have since deceased.

At the first meeting, held May 11, 1868, Sumner Shaw was chosen president, Richmond J. Lane was chosen vice-president, and Zenas Jenkins was appointed treasurer, and the bank was opened for deposits on the 23d of May, 1868, at the railroad station, Mr. Jenkins being then station agent. This arrangement continued till October, 1869, when Mr. Jenkins resigned as treasurer, and Walter B. Studley succeeded him, and the bank was moved to Mr. Studley's store. The deposits at this time were about forty-eight thousand dollars. In 1872, Richmond J. Lane succeeded Mr. Shaw as president, and Franklin Poole became vice-president. Mr. Poole continued in his office until his death. Mr. Lane still continues as president.

The incorporation of Rockland in 1874 led to a change in the name of the bank. This was done by an act of the Legislature, passed Feb. 11, 1875.

Another change in the office of treasurer was made in April, 1876. Mr. W. B. Studley having resigned, E. R. Studley was appointed in his place, and the bank took a room in Underwood block, where it has remained since. The bank has had a steady growth, and at present has a deposit account of four hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars.

An effort to establish a church in East Abington (Rockland) was made in 1726. Between that date and 1812 several attempts were made to the same end, but were defeated through the opposition of the town. When, however, the South Parish had been successful in being set off (1807), and Rev. Samuel Niles, pastor of the First Church, had been laid aside by paralysis, it was felt that the time for success had come. A number therefore gathered on Fast-day, 1812, and determined to go forward to the establishment of the Third Church of Abington. The place of this gathering was then a rocky pasture, surrounded by woods, now the most central and thickly-settled portion of the town. The next July, on this spot, were laid the foundations of a church edifice.

Congregational Church.—1813 was a notable year in the history of the church. August 27th it was organized. The organization took place in a private house, and the new body consisted of fourteen members. August 28th it was voted to call a pastor, and Rev. L. W. Colburn was chosen. October 27th the meeting-house was dedicated, and the first pastor inducted into his sacred office.

The day after the church was organized a meeting was held, at which it was voted to call Rev. Samuel W. Colburn. He accepted, and was installed the day of the dedication, 27th of October, 1813. Mr. Colburn's ministry here closed March 31, 1830.

Dec. 24, 1830, a call was extended to Rev. Lucius Alden. After an active pastorate of nearly two years Mr. Alden was installed, Dec. 5, 1832. His labors in this place closed June 27, 1843. On the 11th of December, 1843, it was voted to invite Mr. H. D. Walker to the pastorate. The ordination took place Feb. 15, 1844, and Mr. Walker's work as pastor was terminated Oct. 31, 1867. During the next eight years the church was without a settled pastor.

Rev. Jesse H. Jones was acting pastor about two years, Rev. Cyrus Wallace, D.D., about the same length of time, and Rev. Joseph Cook nearly a year.

Oct. 5, 1875, Rev. A. W. Westgate was installed pastor, and continued in that position until October, 1879.

Rev. L. Z. Ferris began that same month to supply the pulpit, and was installed as pastor June 24, 1880.

During the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Colburn—the "years of foundation"—thirty-four members united with the church. In the thirteen years of Rev. Mr. Alden's ministry more than a hundred were added, of whom about forty were received in 1832. The accession while Rev. Mr. Walker was pastor was one hundred and eighty-three. Seventy persons united with the church in 1857.

During the time the church was without a settled pastor ninety-seven came into its communion.

Under Rev. Mr. Westgate's pastoral care about forty became members.

The number of members the first Sabbath of 1884 was two hundred and sixty.

During this increase in numbers changes had been made in various directions. The first house of worship was enlarged and greatly improved in 1837; but at the end of another twenty years this house was removed, and (1857) the present spacious structure was erected.

The charitable contributions have increased as the years have passed, and in 1883 were nearly thirteen hundred dollars. This same year the expenses amounted to two thousand four hundred dollars, while a debt which had been accumulating for several decades, and amounting to two thousand two hundred dollars, was wiped away.

The Sabbath-school, of which the senior deacon of the church, R. J. Lane, Esq., has been superintendent more than twenty years, numbered, in the aggregate, Jan. 1, 1884, two hundred and eighty-three. And it may be said, in closing, that this year (1883) has also been marked in its accessions to the number of the church, especially from the Sabbath-school.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—The First Methodist Episcopal Church of Rockland, then East Abington, was built in 1832, through the efforts of Rev. John Bailey, who served as pastor at that time. It was situated on the north side of Webster Street, near the Hanover line. The membership consisted of seven persons. The first Methodist sermon in this town of which there is any record was preached by Rev. John Adams, in the house of David Cushing, in 1824.

"Father" Cushing, as he was familiarly known, may be considered the father of Methodism in what is now known as Rockland. He was converted in 1826, at Truro camp-meeting, and on his return he engaged Rev. Samuel Thompkins and Rev. William R. Stone to preach in East Abington twice a month. Their labors were followed by others, but the first regular pastorate was in 1830-33, by Rev. John Bailey. In 1833-34, Rev. Thomas Gile was the stationed preacher. About this time East Abington and East Randolph were formed into a "circuit."

In 1834-36, Rev. Richard Livesey was appointed by Conference, and during his pastorate East Abington again became an independent charge.

In 1836-37, Rev. E. B. Bradford was pastor.

Rev. George W. Bates, pastor in 1837-38, reported a membership of eighty-five, the largest membership ever reported in the history of this church.

In 1838-39, East Abington and Pembroke were united in a "circuit," with Rev. Andrew J. Cope-land preacher in charge.

In 1839-40, Rev. Increase Bigelow was appointed to the charge.

In 1840-41, Rev. Otis Wilder served the church, and was followed by Rev. Nathan Rice, who closed his pastorate in 1843.

In 1843-44 the charge was without a regular pastor. Rev. S. G. Usher served from 1844-45.

Then followed an interval of fourteen years in which no preacher was appointed; but the society was served irregularly by those who were available. During this interval the church building was consumed by fire.

In 1859 the church entered upon what may be called its second epoch, in what is known as the "Old Congregational Church," furnished by Abner Curtis. Rev. Henry D. Robinson, pastor at this time, reported a membership of sixteen.

Rev. Joseph Marsh served the people in 1860-62. The church again entered upon a period of reverses, and no preacher was appointed by Conference for a number of years; but, true to the genius of Methodism, the church again revived, and in 1871-72 the present church building was erected at a cost of nine thousand dollars, of which five thousand five hundred dollars were paid at the time.

Rev. C. S. Nutter, of the Boston University School of Theology, served the church at this time.

In 1872-75, Rev. George H. Bates was appointed to the charge, and during his pastorate fourteen hundred and forty-five dollars were paid on the debt.

Rev. George T. Oliver, a student of the Boston University School of Theology, served the church in 1875-76.

Rev. W. F. Steele was appointed to the charge in 1876-77, and was succeeded by Rev. S. H. Day, who served till 1878.

Rev. Oliver A. Curtis, a student of the Boston University School of Theology, was appointed to the charge in 1878-80.

Rev. R. E. Buckley, a student from the same institution, served the church from 1880-81, and was succeeded by Rev. S. F. Harriman in 1881-82.

Rev. George H. Trever, also a student of the School of Theology, was appointed to the charge in 1882-83, who was succeeded by Rev. W. E. Kugler.

In 1884, the present year, Rev. E. N. Kirby was appointed pastor of the church. It is confidently expected that within a few months the old debt of two thousand dollars will be paid, as a large part of it, early in the year, has already been subscribed. Then it is hoped the church will enter upon its period of greatest usefulness.

Baptist Church.—Early in the year 1854 the Baptists of East Abington and vicinity began to meet for public worship in a hall which they engaged for the purpose. Through the influence and offered assistance of Deacon George W. Chipman, of Boston, the Baptists of the town organized on May 1, 1854, a church to be called the "East Abington Baptist Church." The church at the time of its organization numbered twenty-two members. Rev. Horace T. Love was the first pastor of the little flock, and during his short pastorate of less than one year and a half the church more than doubled. A council called by the newly-organized body recognized it as a regularly-constituted Baptist Church. The growth of the church was so vigorous that at the annual meeting held March 13, 1855, it was voted to build a house of worship, and steps were at once taken to raise the money necessary for the purpose. In December, 1855, a contract was made to construct a house whose cost should be five thousand dollars, and it was dedicated Sept. 4, 1856.

The church has enjoyed a good degree of prosperity. Since its first year it has been blessed with several revivals. The two most important may be the one which occurred in the winter of 1857, and the other which occurred in the spring of 1884. The first, when Rev. A. B. Earle labored in the town, was perhaps the most extensive revival during the history of the church. The second occurred when Evangelist C. C. Luther conducted a series of meetings which continued for fifty-two consecutive evenings, and resulted in quickening of the church and in adding to its membership a good number of converts. In the period elapsing from May 1, 1854, to the present time (June, 1884) the church has grown from a membership of twenty-two to a membership of one hundred and ninety.

At the time of writing the financial condition of the church is healthful, and all current expenses are promptly paid. An effort, which will probably be successful, is now being made to raise two thousand dollars, the amount which is necessary to pay the debt of the church and make external repairs and improvements.

The church has had ten pastors, whose names and times of service are as follows: Rev. Horace T. Love, May, 1854, to June, 1855; Rev. N. P. Everett, December, 1855, to March, 1857; Rev. W. S. McKenzie, January, 1857, to July, 1858; Rev. J. D. Chaplin, October, 1858, to April, 1862; Rev. Serreno Howe, July, 1862, to May, 1867; Rev. J. H. Hamblin, July, 1868, to September, 1872; Rev. J. R. Chase, November, 1872, to October, 1874; Rev. L. D. Fitz, January, 1875, to December, 1878; Rev. A. Barnelle, April, 1879, to September, 1881; and Rev. A. E. Woodsum, called April, 1882, is the present pastor.

A Unitarian Church has recently been formed. It is a thrifty society, and is at present meeting in a hall. It has no permanent pastor, but is supplied from Sabbath to Sabbath. This society hopes soon to erect a church edifice and secure a permanent pastor.

Church of the Holy Family.—The Catholic Church of Rockland is of so recent origin that its history must of necessity be very brief. Rockland was until quite recently included in the Abington Parish, and the Catholic population attended church there; but they became so numerous that about three years ago they began to build a church of their own. The building is of brick, and is doubtless the most imposing and expensive church edifice to be found in Southeastern Massachusetts outside of a city. The upper part of the house is not at present completed, but when it is finished the entire cost will be fifty thousand dollars. The situation of this church is very prominent and central, and the edifice is a great ornament to the town.

Franklin Poole

The services are held in the vestry of the church at present, and the congregation usually numbers about eight hundred. The Catholic population of the town is seventeen hundred. Rockland and Hanover constitute one parish, which is under the spiritual care of the Rev. Father Tierney. Father Tierney came to Rockland in June, 1883. His people are very much attached to him, and he is working most heartily for their spiritual and moral welfare.

Graduates.—Elliot Holbrook, 1874, graduated in the course in civil engineering with the title of S.B.

Cyrus B. Collins, Rockland.....	1878
Arthur W. Wheeler, Amherst.....	1879
James E. Thomas, Harvard.....	1879
Charles W. Holbrook, Amherst.....	1880
Junietta T. Wright, Rockland.....	1882
Grace E. Cooper, Rockland.....	1883
Viola L. Poole, Rockland.....	1884
Maria Gayvon, Rockland.....	1884
Harry C. Shaw, Harvard.....	1884
Albert A. Beal, Tufts.....	1884

The town officers for the present year are as follows: Town Clerk and Treasurer, Ezekiel R. Studley; Selectmen, Assessors, Overseers of the Poor, and Fence-Viewers, Charles Bearce, William Forbes, Edwin Mulready; School Committee (three years), Mariesta D. Howland; Surveyors of Highways, Henry A. Baker, Horace M. Hunt, James A. Monroe; Constables, George F. Wheeler, Owen Maguire, Thomas F. Kendrigan, Andrew J. Mansur, Horatio B. Burgess, John McMorro, Joseph P. Campbell, William S. Perham, Elbridge V. Wheeler; Field-Drivers, Francis Wade, George C. Dunbar; Trustees of Public Library, Sarah A. Donham, Chester M. Perry; Auditors, William H. Bates, John Sullivan, J. S. Smith; Board of Health, J. C. Gleason, C. S. Millet, Franklin Poole.

The population of Rockland is now about 5000; valuation, $2,236,850; number of polls, 1347.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

FRANKLIN POOLE.

Franklin Poole descended from Edward Poole, of Weymouth, who, it is supposed, came to that town from England about the year 1635, the exact date being somewhat uncertain. John, the grandfather of Franklin, was born in Weymouth in 1743, and married Sarah Clark, of Braintree, in 1769 or 1770, and the same year came to East Abington, and built a house on what is now known as Liberty Street, which is still standing in good repair and inhabited.

Micah, the son of John, and the father of the subject of this sketch, was the second in a family of eight children, and was born April 3, 1772, and married Nabby Holbrook, of Weymouth.

He was a man of marked prominence and influence in his native town for many years, being one of the selectmen eleven years, from 1813, and represented the town in the State Legislature seven years. David Poole, his brother, was remarkable for his musical and mathematical abilities. He, in conjunction with a friend, once published a volume of church music and some of his compositions were surreptitiously published in an old Handel and Haydn collection, and were popular for many years. He composed the anthem which was sung at his own funeral, and it has since been used several times upon similar occasions. He also correctly made all the astronomical calculations for an almanac, which embraced the time for nearly twenty years.

Franklin was born Sept. 29, 1811, in that part of Abington which is now Rockland, and was the eighth in a family of twelve children. He was educated in the public schools of the town and at Andover, and for several years followed school-teaching as a business apart of the time, working during the intervals between schools at shoemaking, which then, as now, was the principal business of the town. He earned at that time small wages, compared with the prices paid for labor at the same business at the present time. He was one of those men who all his life possessed the happy faculty of making a balance upon the right side of the ledger at the end of the year, no matter what the income. In short, he could keep his expenses within his income, believing that course to be the financial road to comfort and happiness.

He married Ann Sargent, daughter of Joseph Allen Sargent, of Wells, Me., June 5, 1836, who was a woman of remarkable energy and ability, and contributed her full share in laying the foundation for and in building up the fortune which, through the most honest and honorable means only, they gathered about them. He always seemed to recognize and fully appreciate the great help he received from the superior management and frugality of his wife. She died suddenly, April 16, 1878.

To this marriage four children were born,—Carrie, born July 26, 1837, was educated at Middleboro' and at Mount Holyoke Seminary, and was a successful teacher. She married James F. Claffin, a teacher of Newton, Mass., and finally settled in Lombard, Ill. She died at Grand Island, Neb., Nov. 3, 1875, while on her way home from California, where she had been endeavoring to regain her failing health. Her son and only child, William, is a graduate of Amherst College, in the class of 1883.

Charles Follen was born Sept. 13, 1839, and died July 26, 1840.

Benjamin F. was born June 13, 1842, was educated in the public schools of the town, and from boyhood has devoted himself to the grocery and hardware trade in his native place. He married Harriett E. Hunt, of East Abington (now Rockland), Aug. 11, 1862. They had one child, a daughter, who died in infancy.

Jerome B., born Dec. 14, 1844, was educated at Phillips Academy, Exeter, N. H., and at Harvard College, where he graduated in the class of 1867, and since then has followed the profession of teaching, and has been a teacher in the English High School of Boston since November, 1873. He married Eurilla A. Shaw, of East Abington (Rockland), July 6, 1868, who died Aug. 29, 1880, leaving one daughter, Grace L., born Jan. 25, 1872.

Mr. Poole, in company with two of his brothers, Micah H. and Cyrus, helped to make up that memorable and historic, and it may be safely called illustrious, list of men in California known as "Fortyniners." He succeeded fairly well at mining, and came home in the summer of 1850, having been gone about a year and a half.

He soon after began, in a small way, in the grocery business at his native place, out of which, by prudence, economy, and good judgment, he accumulated what was, for a man of his habits, a competency of this world's goods. He possessed, in a marked degree, reliable and trustworthy business qualities. All his transactions in trade were characterized by that unswerving and unquestioned integrity which marked his life.

He was entirely above all the allurements and temptations which any sort of financial crookedness could suggest. His judgment regarding business was careful, though quick and decided. He intended that his estimate of men should be just. In forming an opinion of the value of a man's financial credit, he was much more likely to ask what the man was than what he had.

He was often chosen to positions of responsibility in the town of Abington, and also in Rockland, since that became an independent corporation. His services were particularly valuable on a special board of valuation for Abington in 1862. He was for several years a member of the school committee in Abington, and afterwards in Rockland, and was connected with the Rockland Savings-Bank from its incorporation, most of the time being vice-president, and also upon the board of investment, and held these positions at the time of his death. He was a member of the Board of Health of Rockland from the time that board was established until he died.

He retired from active business in the spring of 1880, the trade which he established in 1851 having grown to be a large and lucrative one, in both groceries and hardware. In his son, Benjamin F., he leaves an able successor.

He contracted a second marriage, with Madeline Hayden, of Quincy, June 29, 1880.

Mr. Poole was a hater of all shams, and he had but to see or know of one to denounce it, and he often expressed himself with such an honest bluntness as to offend those who did not know him well; and he was sure to strike hard whenever he met the perpetrator of a swindle.

One day several years ago he met the pastor of the parish to which he belonged near a church then in process of construction, and Mr. Poole quite sharply criticised the architectural style of the building, and the minister said, "Why, it is in imitation of freestone," when Mr. Poole replied, "Confound imitations! Haven't we seen enough of them to teach us to build at least our churches so that they shall honestly be what they seem."

He was an early Abolitionist, and all his life long he tried to maintain those principles which promised the broadest human freedom. The temperance cause found in him an earoest adherent and a faithful supporter. He was a man of decided convictions, with the courage to express and ability to defend them.

He died on the 22d of May, 1884. His name will long be cherished in the memory of his friends and neighbors. His wife, his two sons, a grandson (the child of his daughter), and a granddaughter (the child of Jerome B.) are the members of his immediate family who survive him.

James Lane

Washington Reed

JENKINS LANE.

Among the pioneers who founded and built up the great manufacturing interest which so largely predominates in the northerly section of the county (the manufacture of boots and shoes) few names will stand higher on the page of history than that of Jenkins Lane, and this, too, not wholly because of his business capacity and mechanical skill, which, with an industry and perseverance that never relaxed, built up a magnificent business for himself, while it stimulated others to follow. But more and better than this is the record of a broad and generous citizenship, which shared his success with others, that was always ready to help his neighbors and workmen towards a self-sustaining independence, and to-day that part of the town where his life was passed bears witness to his generous and unselfish enterprise, and is his best monument. Mr. Lane was born in East Abington on the 24th day of July, 1801.

His father, a farmer in moderate circumstances, gave him a common-school education, and he learned the trade of a shoemaker. For a number of years he worked at the bench, making sewed shoes in the manner of sixty years ago, wholly by hand-work, and after his marriage taking his bench into the room where he began housekeeping, his wife stitching and fitting the uppers and he making the shoes,—a common thing at that time. Up to this time he had worked for others, taking out his stock and making it into shoes at so much a pair. Then he began to buy stock in a small way, and, cutting and making it up, would take his shoes to Boston and sell or trade for more stock. Such was the humble beginning of a business which steadily increased in his hands till it mounted up to several hundred thousand dollars a year, and during the last years of his life, in connection with his sons, who had become partners in the business, to a million dollars in a year. Through all these years his integrity and fair, square dealing were never questioned. He had built up his success by straightforward, honest business methods, and so continued to the last.

In 1846 he was elected a member of the Legislature, and served one term, and for several years he filled the place of director in the Abington National Bank, and president of the Abington Savings-Bank, and treasurer of the Hanover Branch Railroad Company, holding these positions up to the time of his decease. But public official position had few attractions for him. His business and home-life were more congenial to his nature. His cheerful and buoyant disposition was a marked characteristic, and while he had ample dignity when it was required, his strong sympathy with the young and his own boyish love of fun lasted him through life.

For years a school-house directly across the street from his own place sent out its scores of merry boys and girls, overflowing into the street and into his yard with boyish freedom and hilarity, yet it was no source of disturbance to him: he rather enjoyed it; and his workmen in the shops, as he went around among them, instead of having sharp criticism or censure, kept watch rather for some boyish prank or practical joke, which sometimes came when least expected.

During his last years he gave up the active management of his business to his sons, and devoted himself to improvements in machinery and inventions, which, with his natural mechanical ingenuity, he greatly enjoyed.

Mr. Lane was married, in 1825, to Mehitable P. Jenkins, of East Abington. By her he had seven children,—four sons and three daughters; all excepting two daughters still survive. He died on the 17th of November, 1870.

In the sketches of the lives of some of the leading settlers of the Old Colony we find this tribute, "He was long a useful man in the colony." Most fittingly may we borrow the simple eulogy for Jenkins Lane, "He was long a useful man" in the community in which he lived.

WASHINGTON REED.

Washington Reed was born in Abington, July 6, 1820, his father, Goddard Reed, and his mother, Marcia Reed, both being the grandchildren of Thomas Reed, born in Abington in 1732. Goddard Reed was one of the most prominent citizens of the east part, holding the offices of postmaster, representative to the General Court, selectman, director of the Abington Bank, and numerous minor offices, and his son, Washington, after finishing his education, which was quite liberal for the times, was able to enter immediately upon active business life, and to form the habits and gain the experience which contributed largely to his future success. After the retirement of his father from business he entered, in company with Mr. John Lane, in the wholesale boot and shoe business, with offices at Boston and New Orleans, at which latter place Mr. Reed resided and conducted the business part of the time. He continued in this firm for a number of years, when he withdrew to become a partner in the firm of Keene, Reed & Bryant, doing a large business, both manufacturing and importing leather; and later, in 1860, in company with Mr. George B. Clapp, he engaged in the manufacture of fur-lined overshoes, the firm doing a larger amount of business than any similar company in the United States. He continued in this business until 1867, when he retired permanently from active business, devoting his time to travel and to the care of his estate.

In his business Mr. Reed exhibited the energy, sound judgment, and sagacity characteristic of the family, and which he inherited from both father and mother, and on account of his large experience and acknowledged integrity he was much sought by those needing counsel in business affairs, and during the years of his life after their incorporation he was a director of the Rockland Savings-Bank and of the Hanover Branch Railroad. In public affairs he took a deep interest, and was always ready to contribute his full share of labor and money for measures of public improvement. In the contest which resulted in the division of the town of Abington and the incorporation of the town of Rockland he was the leading spirit, and contributed largely by his ability and persistence to the result. Although not a politician in any sense of the word, he was a pronounced member of the Whig and Republican parties, and in 1872 received the nomination of the latter for senator from the Second Plymouth District, but was defeated through the treachery of the leaders of the party in some of the towns in the district on account of the division question, and, as was said at that time, "in a strong Republican district the candidate of the majority was defeated, and a senator chosen who represented neither his district nor his town, but only an ungenerous opposition to a single act of legislation."

In his private life Mr. Reed was one of the most exemplary of men, of strict integrity and irreproachable habits; he truly added to his faith virtue, and to his virtue charity, large and extended, with the absence of ostentation characteristic of his whole life.

He was married June 2, 1839, to Harriet Corthell, of South Abington, and died July 13, 1881, shortly after his return from a trip to California.<sup>1</sup>

JOSEPH FRENCH.

Joseph French was born in Boston, Mass., Jan. 15, 1813. His father, Moses French, came to Boston from New Hampshire. He married Elizabeth Perry, of Hanover. They had four children,—Catherine M., Eliza, Joseph, and Joan E. Mr. French died in 1822. Joseph, then about nine years of age, came to live with his maternal grandparents in Hanover. He had no other educational advantages than were afforded by the common schools in the community where he was brought up.

He was early taught to earn his own living, being put at shoemaking when a boy. He learned the trade thoroughly, as it was then conducted, and upon attaining his majority he obtained a position as cutter in the factory of Jenkins Lane, at Rockland (then East Abington), and remained in Mr. Lane's employ many years.

About 1859 he engaged in the retail grocery business in Rockland, and meeting with success, he continued in trade till 1874, when he sold out and retired. He married, Dec. 25, 1834, Sarah P., daughter of Charles and Sarah (Reed) Lane. Their children were Sarah M. (deceased), Joseph E., Francis M., Charles H., Sarah E. (deceased), Henrietta W. (now Mrs. Stephen M. Howes, of Rockland), and Isadora A. (now Mrs. A. W. Perry, of Rockland).

Mr. French was a man highly esteemed for the many noble qualities he possessed. Being naturally of a modest, retiring disposition, he never sought or obtained office, but in the various relations of life which he assumed he bore himself in such manner as to win the lasting regard of those with whom he was brought in contact. He was genial and pleasant as a companion, warm-hearted and sincere as a friend, and strictly upright and honest in his business relations. To the poor he was kind and generous, and gave substantial aid when and where it was deserved. He was a man of calm judgment and strong principles of honor and integrity. In religious faith he was a Baptist, and in politics a Republican. He died Feb. 2, 1876.

JOSEPH E. FRENCH.

Joseph Edward French, eldest son and second child of Joseph and Sarah P. French, was born Aug. 12, 1838, in East Abington (now Rockland), Mass., and received his education at the high school in that town. As soon as he was of sufficient age for his services to be of value in that capacity he was placed to learn shoemaking in the factory of Mr. Jenkins Lane, and was there employed at stitching and cutting up to 1861. He then took charge as foreman of the factory of Leonard Blanchard, where he remained five years, when he took charge as general manager, for J. F. Dane, Grinnell & Co., of Boston, of their factory located in Rockland, and continued in this capacity a period of twelve years, when he went on the road as salesman for Z. M. and E. Lane, and continued with them two years. He then, in company with George W. Hall, engaged in manufacturing <sup>1</sup> The above sketch of Mr. Reed was kindly contributed by Mr. George Hunt.

Joseph French

J. E. French.

Benjamin Beal

boots and shoes at Rockland, in which business he still continues. They manufacture a fine grade of goods, and find sale readily at good prices for their products. They employ from seventy-five to one hundred hands; Mr. French superintending the manufacturing, while his partner, Mr. Hall, attends to the selling. They are now entering on their third year, and are meeting with encouraging success.

He married, Oct. 2, 1859, M. Ellen, daughter of Reuben and Salome (Curtis) Burrell, of Rockland. They have but one child living, Winslow B., born Aug. 19, 1869.

Mr. French is a director in the Rockland Savings-Bank, and is an energetic, active man, and a useful citizen. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a Baptist.

BENJAMIN BEAL.

Benjamin Beal, the son of Samuel and Sarah (Remington) Beal, was born in Templeton, Mass., May 10, 1798. His parents were originally from Abington, Plymouth Co. When Benjamin was eight years of age his mother died, and he came to live with his uncle, Nathaniel Beal, in what is now the town of Rockland, and remained with him until he had attained his majority. He had the usual advantages for an education which the common schools of the town at that day afforded. His uncle was a shoemaker, and young Beal learned the trade with him, and worked for him until he was of age. When he was twenty-two years of age he married, June 6, 1820, Charlotte Melville, who was born in Boston, Jan. 29, 1798, and who was entirely orphaned when an infant, and was adopted by Thomas Whiting, of Abington (now Rockland). She lived with Mr. Whiting till her marriage with Mr. Beal. She still survives, and is a lady of very remarkable strength of mind and force of character, and much of Mr. Beal's success in life was due to her prudence, judgment, and helpful aid. For a few years after Mr. Beal's marriage he made shoes by contract for others, and on one occasion he lost, through the failure and absconding of a party for whom he worked, seven hundred dollars. A very severe loss for him at that period.

When he began on his own account as a manufacturer, his first lot of shoes consisted of thirty-six pairs, which he sold in Boston, receiving at the same time quite a large order for more. He was one of the early manufacturers in the town of Rockland, and beginning in this small way, he gradually built up quite a large business for that period.

At that time the work was chiefly done at the homes of the operatives, and Mr. Beal had men working for him not only in his own but in all the surrounding towns, and furnished constant employment to a great many people. He was energetic, enterprising, and economical, and met with abundant success. The financial crash of 1852, however, seriously affected him. He lost heavily through the failure of merchants to whom he sold his goods, and he was finally compelled to make an assignment. He turned over all his property to his assignees, and they effected an amicable settlement. He at once re-embarked in business, met with good success, and soon re-established himself on a firm basis. He did not continue in manufacturing much longer, however, as in 1853 he retired permanently from the business. In common with other manufacturers at that day, he conducted a general supply store in connection with his manufacturing. The surplus earnings of his business he invested largely in real estate in and about Rockland, and this proved a wise investment, as the increase in value of lands eventually made him wealthy. At the time of his decease he owned and rented more than twenty houses. For several years prior to his death he devoted his entire attention to the care of his landed interests. He was always a modest, retiring man, and would never accept an office. In political faith he was a Whig and Republican. He had five children,—Benjamin (deceased), Franklin (now living in Rockland near the old homestead), Daniel L. (deceased), Boylston (resides in North Abington), and Daniel W. (who lives in Campello).

Mr. Beal was a very kind man in his domestic relations, and it is the testimony of his wife, who is now living in the full possession of her faculties at the advanced age of eighty-six years, that he was a kind, noble, true husband during the long period of sixty years which they lived together. Mr. Beal was a man of strong vitality, will-power, and determination, and Mrs. Beal is a lady of most remarkable mental strength, and yet these two powerful wills harmonized, and through a longer period than is often allotted to husband and wife they amicably trod life's pathway together, and this tribute is paid by Mrs. Beal to the memory of a good husband and an honorable, worthy man. Mr. Beal died March 17, 1882. His health had been remarkably good to within six years of his death, when he was stricken with paralysis, and from that time to his demise was a helpless invalid. He rests in Mount Vernon Cemetery, at Abington. Mrs. Beal has conducted the affairs of the estate since his decease with remarkable sagacity and judgment, and with but little outside aid or assistance in the direction of affairs.

HON. LEVI REED.

Hon. Levi Reed was the son of Samuel Reed, and was born in East Abington (now Rockland), Dec. 31, 1814. After attending the town schools he acquired further education at Phillips Academy, Andover.

Upon leaving that institution he engaged in teaching, and for many years was principal of the Washington School, in Roxbury. His health becoming impaired, he returned to his native town and engaged in the business of shoe manufacturing.

In 1861 he was elected a member of the Senate, and was subsequently chosen State auditor, and these offices he ably and faithfully filled. He died Oct. 18, 1869. He was a public-spirited, useful, and much-respected citizen.

J. C. GLEASON, M.D.

J. C. Gleason, M.D., was born in Hubbardston, Mass., Nov. 9, 1837. Fitted for college at New Salem Academy; entered Amherst in 1859, and graduated in the first sixth of his class in 1863; taught in high schools in Holliston, Abington, and Barre; graduated from Harvard Medical Department in 1867, and practiced three years in Hardwick, Worcester Co., Mass.; was member of House in 1870 for Hardwick; moved to Rockland in the fall of 1870; has been chairman of school board since the incorporation of town, in 1874.

Dr. Gleason is at present a Fellow of Massachusetts Medical Society, and a member of its council. He is also a member of the Massachusetts Medico-Legal Society; on its standing committee (being medical examiner of Second Plymouth District).

He is professor of Clinical Medicine in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, 34 Essex Street, Boston, Mass.

He has contributed articles to Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, and to the "Transactions of the Massachusetts Medico-Legal Society."

HISTORY OF ANCIENT BRIDGEWATER.

BY BRADFORD KINGMAN.

ANCIENT BRIDGEWATER.

Grant of Bridgewater Plantation—Purchase of Indians—Copy of Indian Deed—Confirmatory Deed from Pompono—Deed from Governor Thomas Hinckley for the Government—Confirmatory Deed from Josiah Wampanuck to Inhabitants of Bridgewater.

To give a clear account of the early settlement of the ancient town of Bridgewater it will be interesting to give some account of the origin of the town, its connection with and its identity with the parent town of Duxbury, and a brief account of its having been set off from Duxbury, and the purchase from the Indians. The ancient town of Bridgewater—then comprising what was North, East, West, and the present town of Bridgewater—was formerly a plantation granted to Duxbury in 1645, as a compensation for the loss of territory they had sustained in the setting apart of Marshfield from them in the year 1640. The grant was in the following language :

“The inhabitants of the town of Duxbury are granted a competent proportion of lands about Saughtuckquett (Satucket), towards the west, for a plantation for them, and to have it four miles every way from the place where they shall set up their centre; provided it intrench not upon Winnytuckquett, formerly granted to Plymouth. And we have nominated Capt. Miles Standish, Mr. John Alden, George Soule, Constant Southworth, John Rogers, and William Brett to be feofees in trust for the equal dividing and laying forth the said lands to the inhabitants.”

How these lands were divided, or what should entitle any one to a share, no record appears to show. Governor Hinckley, in his confirmatory deed, says that the “inhabitants agreed among themselves.” There were fifty-four proprietors, each of whom held one share, the names of whom are as follows :

William Bradford.	Edmund Hunt.
William Merriek.	William Clarke.
John Bradford.	William Ford.
Abraham Pierce.	Constant Southworth.
John Rogers.	John Cary.
George Partridge.	Edmund Weston.
John Starr.	Samuel Tompkins.
William Collier.	Edmund Chandler.
Christopher Wadsworth.	Moses Simmons.
Edward Hall.	John Irish.

Nicholas Robbins.
Thomas Hayward.
Ralph Partridge.
Nathaniel Willis.
John Willis.
Thomas Bonney.
Miles Standish.
Love Brewster.
John Paybody.
William Paybody.
Francis Sprague.
William Bassett.
John Washburn.
John Washburn, Jr.
John Ames.
Thomas Gannett.
William Brett.

Philip Delano.
Arthur Harris.
John Alden.
John Forbes.
Samuel Nash.
Abraham Sampson.
George Soule.
Experience Mitchell.
Henry Howland.
Henry Sampson.
John Brown.
John Howard.
Francis West.
William Tubbs.
James Lendall.
Samuel Eaton.
Solomon Leonard.

To these shares were afterward added two more shares,—one to Rev. James Keith, of Scotland, their first minister, and the other to Deacon Samuel Edson, of Salem, who erected the first mill in the town,—making fifty-six shares.

This grant was considered as little more than an authority or right to purchase it of the natives. For this purpose Capt. Miles Standish, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth were appointed a committee to make the purchase, which they did, as appears by the following instruments :

“WITNESS THESE PRESENTS, that I, Ousamequin, Sachem of the Country of Poconocket, have given, granted, enfeofed, and sold unto Miles Standish, of Duxbury, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth, of Duxbury aforesaid, in behalf of all the townsmen of Duxbury aforesaid, a tract of land usually called Satucket, extending in the length and breadth thereof as followeth : that is to say, from the wear at Satucket seven miles due east, and from the said wear seven miles due west, and from the said wear seven miles due north, and from the said wear seven miles due south ; the which tract the said Ousamequin hath given, granted, enfeofed, and sold unto the said Miles Standish, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth, in the behalf of all the townsmen of Duxbury, as aforesaid, with all the immunities, privileges, and profits whatsoever belonging to the said tract of land, with all and singular all woods, underwoods, lands, meadows, rivers, brooks, rivulets, &c., to have and to hold, to the said Miles Standish, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth, in behalf of all the townsmen of the town of Duxbury, to them and their heirs forever. In witness whereof, I, the said Ousamequin, have hereunto set my hand this 23<sup>d</sup> of March, 1649.

“Witness the mark of  OUSAMEQUIN.

“In consideration of the aforesaid bargain and sale, we, the said Miles Standish, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth, do bind ourselves to pay unto the said Ousamequin, for and in consideration of the said tract of land, as followeth :

“7 coats, a yard and a half in a coat.

“9 hatchets.

“8 hoes.

“20 knives.

“4 moose-skins.

“10 yards and a half of cotton.

“MILES STANDISH.

“SAMUEL NASH.

“CONSTANT SOUTHWORTH.”

This contract is said to have been made on what was called “Sachem’s Rock” (called by the Indians “Woonnocooto”), in East Bridgewater, a little south of Whitman’s Mills (now known as the Carver Cotton-Gin Company), and near the house of the late David Kingman.

This Ousamequin, sometimes called Ossamequin, was no other than Massasoit himself, who, in the latter part of his life, had adopted that name. The deed written by Capt. Miles Standish, one of the original planters of the colony, and signed with the mark of the sachem, is still in existence. When the old sachem was called upon to execute his deed, he endeavored to make it as sure as possible. For that purpose he affixed a mark in the shape of a  $\xi$ .

Thus we have seen that the original town of Bridgewater, comprising the territory now known as Brockton, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, and Bridgewater, including a portion of “Titicut Parish,” was purchased by Capt. Miles Standish and others for the trifling sum of seven coats, nine hatchets, eight hoes, twenty knives, four moose-skins, and ten and a half yards of cotton, the whole not amounting to thirty dollars in value.

The original town of Bridgewater was the first interior settlement in the Old Colony. The grant of the plantation, as we have seen, was in 1645, and the settlement made in 1650. The first settlers had a house-lot of six acres each on the Town River, and the place was called Nuckatest, or Nuncketetest. The first lots were taken up at West Bridgewater, along the Town River, first houses built and the first improvements made there. The settlement was compact,—the house-lots being contiguous,—with a view for mutual protection and aid against the Indians, and, as a further protection from the natives, they erected a stockade or garrison on the south side of the river and fortified many of their dwellings. It is said that not more than one-third of the original fifty-six proprietors ever became inhabitants of their new settlement. From this original home the settlers scattered into other portions of the town, extending their dwellings first into the southwest part of the town, toward Nippenicket Pond, a locality known as Scotland, on the road to Taunton, and Titicut, on the road leading to Middleboro’, whither they were in the habit of going either to mill or to trade, and we are told they frequently went to that place on foot, with the grists on their backs, a distance of several miles.

The last settled part of the town was the North Parish (now Brockton), which was not till after 1700, no permanent settlement being made in what was called the North Parish till after that time, and the settlers were mostly from the West Parish (now West Bridgewater).

The plantation remained to Duxbury until June, 1656, when it was incorporated into a distinct and separate town in the following concise language :

“ORDERED, That henceforth Duxborrow New Plantation bee allowed to bee a townshipe of ytselve, distinct from Duxborrow, and to bee called by the name of Bridgewater. Provided that all publicke rates bee borne by them with Duxborrow upon equally proportions.”

The court settled the rates to be paid by the proprietors as follows :

“The town of Bridgewater is to bear one part of three with Duxbury, of their proportion of the country rates for the officers’ wages and other public charges.

Previous to the incorporation of the town the plantation had been called Bridgewater, but of the origin of the name we have nothing authentic except a matter of fancy for a town in England of that name. From the time of its first settlement the town has maintained a strong position in the history of the country, and for a long time continued a united and harmonious whole until 1715, when a petition was sent to General Court to be set off into a separate parish or precinct, the petitioners representing themselves as inhabitants of the easterly part of Bridgewater. A committee of two in the Council and three of the House was appointed to examine into the matter, who attended to their duties, and reported in favor of granting their request, which was accepted, and an act of incorporation passed June 1, 1716, with this condition :

“That the whole town stand obliged to an honorable maintenance of the Rev. James Keith, their present aged minister, if he should outlive his powers and capacities of discharging the office and duty of their minister.”

The new parish was called the South, and the old one the North Precinct, which then included the West and what was afterwards known as North Bridgewater

(now Brockton). In 1723 that part of the old North Precinct now known as East Bridgewater (then known as the West Parish) was set off, and constituted a precinct called the East Parish, Dec. 14, 1723.

Titicut Parish was formed from the southwest part of the South Parish, with a part of Middleboro', Feb. 4, 1743. This place consisted of forty-eight families, forty-one houses, two hundred and sixty-two inhabitants in 1764, and in 1810 it had a population of three hundred and eighteen.

As some disputes arose in regard to the original purchase of Ousamequin, confirmatory deeds were given by Pomponoho, an Indian, at Titicut, and Governor Thomas Hinckley, in behalf of the government, and another from Josiah Wampatuck, another Indian, thus making a perfect title to all the land comprising Ancient Bridgewater. Here follows copies of the above-named deeds:

CONFIRMATORY DEED FROM POMPONOHO.

"This deed, made November 20th, A.D. 1672, witnesseth, that I, Pomponoho, alias Peter, an Indian, living at Titicut, in the colony of New Plymouth, in New Eng., have sold for the sum of sixteen pounds,—viz., six pounds of current money of New England, and ten pounds in good merchantable corn, as by bill appeareth,—all the lands lying on the north side of Titicut River, within the bounds of Bridgewater, what lands were mine, or were either my father's or grandfather's or any otherwise conferred on me, excepting those lands expressed as follows, viz. one hundred acres of land lying up the river to the eastward of a small brook, given to an Indian called Charles, my brother-in-law, and a certain parcel of land lying against the wear and bounded by the landing-place, running to the head of my field, containing about ten acres at the utmost, I say I, the above-said Pomponoho, alias Peter, have bargained, sold, and by these presents do bargain and sell for myself, my heirs, and assigns forever, unto Nicholas Byram, sen., Samuel Edson, sen., and William Brett, sen., in and for the use of the townsmen of Bridgewater, joint purchasers with them, which persons above mentioned were ordered by the court to make purchase of those lands, as by court record appears, I say I have sold all these lands, with every part thereof, and all the immunities and privileges belonging thereunto, to them, their heirs, and assigns forever, the same quietly and peaceably to possess, without the lawful let, interruption, or molestation of me, the above-said Pomponoho, alias Peter, or other persons whatsoever, lawfully claiming by, from, or under me, them, or any of them. In witness whereof I have hereunto set to my hand and seal.

"Read, sealed, and delivered POMPONOHO (P) :: in presence of us. mark.

"JOSEPH HAYWARD.

"JOHN CARY, SEN.

"Acknowledged before JOSIAH WINSLOW, Gov., Feb. 20, 1676.

"Recorded by NATHANIEL CLARK, Secretary, March, 1685."

The two reserved lots in the above grant were afterwards purchased by individuals in the town. Thus all the lands within the most extensive limits of the town appear to have been justly and fairly purchased of the Indians, and we have the above-named Governor Winslow's attestation on record that this was the case in all the towns in the Old Colony of Plymouth.

In the year 1685 the Court of Assistants were empowered to examine, allow, and confirm from time to time all claims and titles to land formerly granted either to towns or individuals by the General Court, and, when allowed, they were to "pass the seal of the government for confirmation." In pursuance of this order, all the grants made to Bridgewater, as above stated and described, were confirmed by the following deed under the hand of Governor Hinckley and the seal of the government:

CONFIRMATORY DEED FROM GOVERNOR THOMAS HINCKLEY TO THE TOWN OF BRIDGEWATER.

"At his Majesty's Court of Assistants, held at Plymouth the 6th of March, A. N. 1685-86.

"To all to whom these presents shall come, Thomas Hinckley, Esq., Governor of his Majesty's Colony of New Plymouth, in New England, sendeth greeting.

"WHEREAS, At his Majesty's general court, held at Plymouth the 4th of June, 1685, it was ordered and enacted that the court of assistants be from time to time a committee empowered to examine, allow, and confirm all such claims and titles to lands which were formerly granted or allowed by the general court, either to townships or particular persons, which, being allowed by the said committee, shall pass the seal of the Government for further confirmation thereof; and forasmuch as it hath been made to appear to the said court of assistants, now sitting at Plymouth, the first Tuesday in March, 1685-86, that a certain tract of land was granted by Wm Bradford, Esq., and his associates, assembled in court, in the year of our Lord 1645, unto the inhabitants of the town of Duxbury (a competent proportion of lands), about a place called by the Indians Maessquatucket, for a plantation for them, the inhabitants of Duxbury, and that they shall have it four miles every way from the centre; the inhabitants of Duxbury being fifty-six in number, by agreement among themselves, every one were to have equal shares, who, by the approbation and appointment of his Majesty's honored court in New Plymouth, 1645, did employ Mr. Constant Southworth, with some others, to purchase the above-mentioned tract of land of Ossamequin, chief Sachem of the Poconocket country, which being done, and now inhabited by many of the proprietors, is now called Bridgewater, and all such privileges allowed to them as the court allows or grants to other townships; and having set up their centre, his Majesty's court held at Plymouth, 1668, did grant to Bridgewater six miles from the centre on all four sides, where former grants made by the court hindereth not, as appears in court records, and is bounded out by the agents of each respective town adjoining, as appears by their hands to their agreement, and assented to and acknowledged before the Governor and his associates, sitting in his Majesty's court held at Plymouth, the 2nd of March, 1685/6, the bounds of the whole township being settled between them and other towns adjoining, are as followeth: The bounds betwixt Bridgewater and Taunton being a heap of stones lying four miles west from the centre, and running north from station to station till it meet with the line of the colonies; and from said heap of stones south to a heap of stones lying to the west of Unketest Pond, and from thence southeast into a great white oak being marked with a T for Taunton, and on the north side with a B for Bridgewater, and so from station to station till it come to the great river on the westward side of a spot of meadow, according to the agreement of the agents of both towns. And the bounds between Middleborough and Bridgewater is the great river, until it come to the north side of Mr. Standish's land, lying on the mouth of Winnetuxit river, and so from the north side of said Standish's land until it meet with the easternmost line of Bridgewater, being a heap of stones, four miles from the centre, which is the bounds between them and the Major's purchase, running from said heap of stones south and by west half a point westerly until it meet with said Standish's land, &c., and from the aforesaid heap of stones running north-northeast from station to station to four white-oaks, the easternmost marked on all four sides, and so from station to station until it meet with the north line. The north bounds being six miles from the centre to a company of small trees marked, being to the northward of a great rock, and from the aforesaid marked trees running east until it meet with the above said northeast line, and from the aforementioned marked trees running west until it meet with the line of the colonies, and with the line of the colonies till it meet with the westerly line and Taunton (now Easton) bounds. All which lands, both upland and meadow, swamps, cedar swamps, ponds, rivers, brooks, springs, wood, underwood, and all herbage, feedings, minerals, with all rights, liberties, privileges, and appurtenances thereto belonging, unto the appropriated inhabitants and other proprietors, though not inhabitants of the said town of Bridgewater, according to each person's several and respective title or interest therein, excepting two-fifth parts of the royal mine, one-fifth part to his royal majesty, and the other one-fifth part to the president and council. To have and to hold unto the said town and proprietors respectively, to their and every of their heirs and assigns forever, according to the tenor of our charter or letters patent granted by the honorable council at Plymouth, in the county of Devon, for the planting, ordering, and governing of New England, derivatory from his Majesty King James the First, of happy memory; and in testimony hereof doth allow the public seal of the Government to be affixed thereunto for the further confirmation thereof.

"THOMAS HINCKLEY, Governor. :

"Attest, NATHANIEL CLARK, Secretary."

A confirmation of the original purchase made of Ossamequin was also obtained about the same time, as follows :

CONFIRMATORY DEED FROM JOSIAH WAMPATUCK TO BRIDGEWATER.

*"To all Christian people to whom these presents shall come,
Josiah Wampatuck sendeth greeting.*

"Know ye, that I, Josiah aforesaid, for and in consideration of ten pounds in money to me in hand paid, and one hundred acres of land lying on the upper end of Poor Meadow, on the lower side of a foot-path that goeth to Scituate, lying on both sides of the river, doth confirm, establish, and ratify unto Samuel Edson, sen., Esquire John Howard, and John Willis, sen., in behalf of the purchasers and town of Bridgewater, in New Plymouth Colony, in New England, and to their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns forever, all that whole tract of land lying northward of the south four-mile line of Bridgewater, which Ossamequin, Sachem of the Pocconocket country, by the consent and approbation of his Majesty's General Court held at Plymouth, in New England, in the year 1645, sold to the inhabitants of Duxbury, as appears by deed, under Ossamequin's hand, to Capt. Miles Standish, Mr. Constant Southworth, and Samuel Nash, as agents for the town of Duxbury. I, the above said Josiah, do ratify and confirm the above said sale of Ossamequin's, and bargain of lands belonging to Bridgewater, as uplands, swamps, meadows, brooks, rivers, ponds, timber, underwood, herbage, mines, with all commodities, benefits, privileges, immunities, and appurtenances whatever therein contained.

"I, the above said Josiah, also do ratify, establish, and confirm, and forever make over all my right, title, and interest in the above-mentioned land from me, my heirs, executors, and assigns, unto the above said Samuel Edson, John Howard, and John Willis, agents for the town of Bridgewater, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns forever, to have, and to hold, occupy, and enjoy as their proper right forever, without any claim, title, interest, or molestation to be made by me, my heirs, executors, or assigns, or any other person or persons, to any part or parcel thereof, in, by, or under me any way appertaining; and do by these presents bind myself, and heirs, and executors, and assigns to maintain and defend the above-mentioned sale of lands against other Indian or Indians that shall make any claim or title to any part or parcel thereof."

"In witness whereof I have set to my hand and seal this twenty-third day of December, and in the second year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord King James II. A. D. one thousand six hundred and eighty-six.

"The mark of JOSIAH WAMPATUCK.

"Signed, sealed, and delivered in presence of us.

"JOHN SOULE.

"JOSEPH BARSTOW.

"SAMUEL TINSLEY.

"December 23d, 1686.

"Recorded, p. 425, in the Great Book of Records.

"Pr. SAMUEL SPRAGUE.

"Recorder.

"Acknowledged before

"WILLIAM BRADFORD,

"Deputy Governor."

The one hundred acres mentioned in the above confirmation were afterwards repurchased by individuals in the town. From this deed it appears the greatest part of the town was twice purchased of the Indians,—once of the Massasoit, and again of Wampatuck,—and a valuable consideration paid each time. By the boundaries of the town, as described in Governor Hinckley's deed of confirmation, it is evident a gore of land was still left on the north between Bridgewater (now Brockton) and the line of the colonies, commencing at the point where the six-mile line met the colony line towards the northwest corner of the town, and thence extending easterly to the northeast corner of the town, where the distance to the county line is considerable. The westerly and narrow end of this gore having been purchased of the government after the union of the colonies by Daniel Howard and Robert Howard, was, on the petition of the selectmen of the town, annexed to Bridgewater, Oct. 15, 1730. These several grants and additions constituted all the territory ever belonging to Bridgewater in its greatest extent. The greatest part of Abington and what is now Hanson at that period belonged to Bridgewater, which must then have contained about ninety-six square miles. In this situation, and with these extensive territorial dimensions, the town remained without change or diminution till June 10, 1712, when Abington was incorporated.

When the Abington petitioners first applied for an act of incorporation, July 4, 1706, they denominated themselves "certain inhabitants of the east part of the town of Bridgewater, and proprietors of a certain tract of land between the town of Weymouth, Hingham, Scituate, and Bridgewater," and when the act was finally passed, in 1712, the boundaries were thus described :

"On the north with the line of the colonies of the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth, on the east upon the town of Scituate, on the south with the line that is the southerly bounds of land of John Cushing, Esq., and of John Cushing, Jr., Esq., thence on the southwesterly side by certain bounds which the town of Bridgewater have set and prefixed to Beaver Brook, and on the west with the said brook until it comes to the extent of Bridgewater northward, together with a small gore of land lying between the said town of Bridgewater and the said line of the colonies, the town of Bridgewater having signified their consent thereto."

By the plain and express language of the statute, the whole gore is included in Abington ; but for some reasons now unknown, the "Howard Farms" seem, as the selectmen of Bridgewater in their petition stated, to have been considered as "belonging to no town," till they were annexed to Bridgewater in 1730. Another considerable tract on the east part of the town was annexed to Pembroke, June 7, 1754, and now constitutes the greater part of Hanson. The old Bridgewater line was as far east as the west line of the farm formerly owned and occupied by the late Rev. Dr. Hitchcock. These two are the only instances in which any considerable portions of the town have been annexed to other corporations. Questions and disputes as to boundaries were formerly frequently arising between this and neighboring towns. The latest occurred with Middleboro', which was finally settled by court June 8, 1716, when the great river was constituted the boundary between them. This seems to have been done in pursuance of the express power which the court had reserved to itself in the "two-mile additional grant." The boundaries of the town, as finally settled, may be thus described: On the east it is bounded by Halifax and Hanson ; on the north by Abington, Randolph, and Stoughton ; on the west by Easton and Raynham ; and on the south by Middleboro', Titicut River there constituting the boundary. It is the northwest town in the county of Plymouth, adjoining the county of Norfolk, or Old Colony line, on the north and the county of Bristol on the west. Its dimensions may be estimated at about twelve miles by six, and as containing at least seventy square miles. The centre of the town is about twenty-six miles from Boston, twenty from Plymouth, and ten from Taunton.

HISTORY OF BROCKTON.

BY BRADFORD KINGMAN.

CHAPTER I.

Petition of the North Precinct to be set off into a separate Town—Charter for a Precinct—First Meeting of the Same—Selectmen—Clarks—Treasurers—Parish Committee—Moderators of Precinct Meetings—Parish Tax for 1744—Poll Tax List for 1770—United States Land Tax, 1798.

North Parish of Bridgewater.—On account of the labor of attending on church worship at “so remote a distance” from home, fifty-five individuals belonging in the old North Parish sent a petition to the General Court, asking to be set off into a separate township, which petition was so far granted as to allow them the powers and privileges usually allowed to parishes.

The following is a copy of petition and the act of incorporation :

“To His Excellency Jonathan Belcher, Esq<sup>r</sup>., Capt<sup>n</sup> General and Governour in Chief in and over his Majesties Province of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England, and to the Honourable his Majesties Council and House of Representatives in Generil Court Assembled at Boston, on the 31st of May, 1738, the Petition of us, the Subscribers, Inhabitants of the Town of Bridgewater, Consisting Chiefly of the North part of the west precinct, and two Familys of the East Precinct, in s<sup>d</sup> Town,— “Humbly Sheweth :

“That, when the meeting-house was lately built In the West precinct; the Inhabitants of the North part of s<sup>d</sup> West precinct Cheerfully Consented to, and Did their proportionable part In, building of s<sup>d</sup> meeting House where it Now stands, tho very Remote from the Petitioners, and at such a Distance from them so as but few of their Families Ever Could, without Great Difficulty, attend the Publick Worship of God there; but, Notwithstanding, they were Willing to Do the utmost of their power and ability to Promote the Worship of God their, In hopes when they were able to have it Nearer to them; and, by the Providence of God, they are Greatly Increased In Numbers and Something In Estates, So that they look upon themselves Capable of Bulding a Meeting-House, and Sittling a Minister, and upholding the Publick Worship of God among themselves, and are in hopes that the Best part of the Town and West precinct have no Just Cause to object against it, Since we have been so helpful, and Done to the utmost of our power in Sittling the minister and Bulding the New Meeting House, In s<sup>d</sup> West precincts and we are willing and Desirous that what we then Did should be left to that precinct, who are now able of themselves, under their priesent good and Growing Circumstances, to maintain the Publick Worship of God there without us, as will appear by the Valuation of their Estates herewith exhibited, which the more Emboldens us to petition this Honourable Court to Set us off a Distinct and Separate Township, by the following metes and Bounds, which Includes not only the North part of Bridgewater, but a small Tract of land and a few of the Inhabitants of the town of Stoughton, which suitable accomodites them as well as us, viz. . Beginning at a white-oak tree standing on the North west part of Jonathan Packard’s field, on the Easterly side of COUNTRY Road, and from thence East and West till It meets with Easton Line, and East till it meets with the East precinct Line, and then North on s<sup>d</sup> Line Half one mile, and then North East till it meet with Beaver Brook; then by said Brook to the Colony Line, So called; then Westerly by s<sup>d</sup> Line to a Beach-tree which is the Easterly Corner Bounds of Stoughton; then on the Line between Brantrey and Stoughton to Capt. Curtis’ Land; then Westerly to Salisbury plain River; then Southerly by s<sup>d</sup> River to the Colony Line; then Westerly by s<sup>d</sup> Line to Easton Line; and then South By s<sup>d</sup> Line first mentioned. We, having in time past once and again petitioned this Honourable Court for Relief in the premises, but it so happened that this Honoured Court Did not then Grant the prayer of our petition in full, But Nevertheless, according to our Desier, Sent a Committee to view and Consider our Circumstances, whose report (we humbly Conceave) was something Different from What we prayed for in our petition, and the matter falling through, in as much as it happened that his Excellency the Governour Did not then sign what the Honoured Court acted on said report, and we remaining under our Difficulties and unrelieved, But yet taking encouragement from what was acted on s<sup>d</sup> report by the Honoured Court, and also from what was acted by our town in general, at a Town-meeting Legally Called and Notified to that purpose, on the 15th of February Last, In which We had the major vote for our being set off a Distinct Township, and, that we might not be under Difficulties In Bulding an House and Settling a Minister all at once, have erected and Inclosed a good House for the publicke Worship of God Where it may Best accomodate us all. We Do therefore think it our duty once more humbly to Renew our Petition that We may be eet off a Township as Before herein prayed for, and we Humble beg leave here to say, that what we now offer in Respect of our being So Set off is Sincerity for the promoting the Worship of God and Religion In the Puriety of it among us.

“Wherefore we pray your Excellency and Honours would be pleased to here our Request and Grant our petition, and as we in Duty bound Shall Ever pray.

“Robert Howard.
John Johnson.
John Kingman (2<sup>d</sup>).
David Packard.

Charles Snell.
Charles Cushman.
Nathaniel Hammond.
Theoplis Curtis.

TREASURERS.

Treasurers of the North Parish of Bridgewater from 1738 to 1821 :

Abiel Packard, 1738-43.	Capt. Jesse Perkins, 1773, '81, '82.
Deacon Samuel West, 1744, '45.	Issachar Snell, 1774.
Samuel Brett, 1746-48.	Reuben Packard, 1775.
Constant Southworth, 1747.	Simeon Packard, 1778, '79.
Daniel Howard, 1749-51.	Simeon Cary, 1780.
Isaac Packard, 1752-54.	Capt. David Packard, 1783.
Abia Keith, 1755, '59-61.	Lieut. Daniel Cary, 1784-92.
Thomas Torrey, 1756, '58.	Jonathan Perkins, 1793, '94.
Jabez Field, 1757.	Abel Kingman, 1795-1800.
Abel Packard, 1762.	Caleb Howard, 1801.
Dr. John Staplea Crafts, 1763, '64.	Capt. Howard Cary, 1802-9.
Zachariah Cary, 1765.	Perez Crocker, 1810.
Barnabas Packard, 1766-71.	Jonathan Beals, 1811, '12.
Nathaniel Southworth, 1772, '76, '77.	Ichabod Howard, 1813.
	Edward Southworth, 1814-21.

PARISH COMMITTEE.

Committee of the North Parish of Bridgewater from 1738 to 1821, showing the years each has served:

Timothy Keith, 1738-40, '49.
 David Packard, 1738-45.
 Daniel Howard, 1738, '39, '41-48, '52-55.
 Samuel Kingman, 1739-40.
 James Packard, 1741, '42, '51, '52.
 Zachariah Snell, 1743, '46, '47, '54.
 Samuel West, 1744, '45.
 Abiel Packard, 1746-48, '50, '52, '54, '56-58, '60, '61, '63-69.
 Moses Curtis, 1748, '49.
 Solomon Packard, 1749.
 Robert Howard, 1750, '51, '56, '70, '81.
 Henry Kingman, 1750, '51, '55, '67, '68.
 Shepard Fiske, 1753, '55-58.
 Simeon Cary, 1759, '61, '77, '79, '91.
 Nathaniel Reynolds, 1759, '66, '70, '72, '74, '75.
 Constant Southworth, 1760, '62, '64.
 Ebenzer Packard, 1762, '63, '68, '69, '73, '74.
 Isaac Packard, 1765, '72.
 Abia Keith, 1770.
 Barnabas Howard, 1771, '72, '74, '76, '78.
 Dr. Philip Bryant, 1771, '75, '76, '79, '95, '97.
 Jacob Packard, 1772.
 Simeon Brett, 1777.
 Deacon David Edson, 1776.
 Josiah Hayden, 1778.
 Jesse Perkins, 1780, '83, '91, '93, '96, '98-1800.
 Jonathan Cary, 1780, '84, '85, '87-90.
 Capt. Zebedee Snell, 1780, '86, '94, '95.
 Zechariah Gurney, 1781, 1812, '21.
 Ichabod Edson, 1781.
 Issachar Snell, 1782, '84-93.
 Matthew Kingman, 1782-93, '98.
 Reuben Packard, 1782.
 William Shaw, 1783.
 Ichabod Howard, 1794, 1802, '04-06.
 Dr. Elisha Tillson, 1794, '95, '97.
 Capt. Lemuel Packard, 1796, '99, 1803, '07, '08.
 Timothy Ames, 1796.
 Dr. John S. Crafts, 1797.
 Col. Caleb Howard, 1798, 1801, '03, '11-13, '15-21.
 Joseph Silvester, Esq., 1799, 1800.
 Jonathan Perkins, Jr., 1800, '10, '15, '19, '20.

Issachar Snell, Jr., 1801.
 Daniel Cary, 1801.
 Perez Southworth, 1802, '04-10, '12-14, '21.
 Howard Cary, 1803.
 Capt. Gideon Howard, 1804-10.
 Moses Cary, 1807-09.
 Asa Jones, 1809.
 Col. Edward Southworth, 1816.
 Abel Kingman, Esq., 1811, '13, '14.
 Thomas Packard, 1811.
 Capt. Robert Packard, 1817, '18.

MODERATORS OF PRECINCT MEETINGS.

Moderators of the yearly precinct meetings for the choice of officers from 1738 to the incorporation of the town of North Bridgewater in 1821, also the date of annual meetings :

Timothy Keith, Feb. 5, 1739.	Simeon Cary, March 17, 1779.
Timothy Keith, Mar. 12, 1739.	Thomas Thompson, March 27, 1780.
Jas. Packard, March 26, 1739.	Simeon Brett, March 19, 1781.
John Kingman, Mar. 24, 1740.	Capt. Jesse Perkins, March 19, 1782.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 23, 1741.	Col. Josiah Hayden, March 13, 1783.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 23, 1742.	Issachar Snell, Esq., March 11, 1784.
Abiel Packard, Mar. 28, 1743.	Matthew Kingman, Mar. 17, 1785.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 28, 1744.	Barnabas Howard, March 29, 1786.
Shepard Fiske, Mar. 25, 1745.	Dr. Philip Bryant, March 21, 1787.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 26, 1746.	Capt. Zebedee Snell, March 18, 1788.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 25, 1747.	Issachar Snell, Esq., March 19, 1789.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 28, 1748.	Daniel Howard, Mar. 18, 1790.
Abiel Packard, Mar. 27, 1749.	Issachar Snell, Mar. 22, 1791.
Abiel Packard, Mar. 29, 1750.	Issachar Snell, Mar. 19, 1792.
Abiel Packard, Mar. 25, 1751.	Issachar Snell, Mar. 19, 1793.
Shepard Fiske, Mar. 25, 1752.	Matthew Kingman, Mar. 17, 1794.
Constant Southworth, March 28, 1753.	Dr. Elisha Tillson, March 16, 1795.
Shepard Fiske, Mar. 28, 1754.	Dr. Philip Bryant, March 21, 1796.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 26, 1755.	Lemuel Packard, Mar. 9, 1797.
Shepard Fiske, Mar. 29, 1756.	Daniel Howard, Mar. 8, 1798.
Shepard Fiske, Mar. 28, 1757.	Caleb Howard, March 7, 1799.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 28, 1758.	Matthew Kingman, Mar. 6, 1800.
Zachariah Snell, Mar. 20, 1759.	Joseph Silvester, Jr., March 2, 1801.
Simeon Cary, March 19, 1760.	Daniel Howard, Jr., March 4, 1802.
Constant Southworth, March 16, 1761.	Daniel Howard, Jr., March 28, 1803.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 22, 1762.	Moses Cary, March 27, 1804.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 25, 1763.	Abel Kingman, Mar. 11, 1805.
Shepard Fiske, Mar. 19, 1764.	Caleb Howard, Mar. 27, 1806.
Simeon Brett, March 27, 1765.	Jona. Perkins, Mar. 30, 1807.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 19, 1766.	Howard Cary, March 24, 1808.
Daniel Howard, Mar. 18, 1767.	Dr. Nathan Perry, March 20, 1809.
Constant Southworth, March 22, 1768.
Simeon Cary, March 20, 1769.
Simeon Cary, March 20, 1770.
Nathaniel Reynolds, March 20, 1771.
Nathaniel Reynolds, March 12, 1772.
Simeon Cary, March 22, 1773.
Simeon Brett, March 28, 1774.
Nathaniel Reynolds, March 20, 1775.
Simeon Cary, March 14, 1776.
Simeon Cary, March 17, 1777.
Simeon Cary, March 25, 1778.

Jona. Perkins, Mar. 19, 1810.	Joseph Sylvester, Jr., March 24, 1817.
Gideon Howard, Mar. 18, 1811.	Joseph Sylvester, Jr., April 3, 1818.
Caleb Howard, Mar. 23, 1812.	Howard Cary, Esq., March 25, 1819.
Jona. Perkins, Mar. 15, 1813.	Caleb Howard, Mar. 10, 1820.
Jos. Sylvester, March 24, 1814.	Dr. John S. Crafts, March 10, 1821.
Jos. Sylvester, March 13, 1815.
Caleb Howard, March 4, 1816.

PARISH TAX, 1744.

The following is a list of rates as made out by the assessors in the North Parish of Bridgewater (now Brockton) for the payment of Rev. John Porter's salary for the year 1744, as made out by Daniel Howard and Robert Howard, assessors of the precinct, September ye 14th, 1744, and committed to Joshua Warren, constable, for collection, and is inserted to show the inhabitants of the parish at that date:

Names.	Polls.	Tax.	Names.	Polls.	Tax.
		£ s. d.			£ s. d.
Timothy Keith.....	2	2 7 6	Issac Fuller.....	1	1 3 9
David Packard.....	3	3 11 3	Jacob Packard.....	1	1 3 9
Solomon Packard....	2	2 7 6	Alexander Wilson. 1	1	3 9
Jacob Allen.....	1	1 3 9	David Brown.....	1	1 3 9
John Kingman (2d) 1	1	3 9	Daniel Ames.....	1	1 3 9
Benjamin Edson... 3	3	11 3	Daniel Howard.....	1	1 3 9
John Kingman (3d) 1	1	3 9	Robert Howard....	2	2 7 6
Henry Kingman .. 1	1	3 9	Samuel West.....	1	1 3 9
Deacon Packard... 2	2	7 6	Pelatah Phinney. 1	1	3 9
Zechariah Packard 2	2	7 6	Seth Packard.....	1	1 3 9
James Torrey.....	0	0 3 0	David Packard, Jr.	2	2 7 6
Joshua Warren.....	2	2 7 6	William Packard... 2	2	7 6
James Hewett.....	1	1 3 9	Mark Perkins.....	3	3 11 3
Micah Langford... 1	1	3 9	Samuel Brett.....	1	1 3 9
Daniel Rickard.... 1	1	3 9	A. Thompson.....	2	2 7 6
Abiel Packard.....	2	2 7 6	Jabez Field.....	2	2 7 6
C. Southworth.... 2	2	7 6	Walter Downie... 2	2	7 6
Widow L. Packard 0	0	0 0	Benj. Pettingill... 1	1	3 9
Caleb Phillips.....	1	1 3 9	Joseph Pettingill. 1	1	3 9
John Johnson.....	0	0 0	Peter Edson.....	1	1 3 9
Zachariah Cary... 2	2	7 6	Benjamin Worrick. 1	1	3 9
John Pratt.....	1	1 3 9	John Buck.....	1	1 3 9
Zechariah Snell... 2	2	7 6	Simeon Cary.....	1	1 3 9
William French... 0	0	0 0	Jonathan Cary... 1	1	3 9
Elisha Dunbar.....	1	1 3 9	Thomas Terrill... 1	1	3 9
Abiah Keith.....	1	1 3 9	John Coley.....	1	1 3 9
Daniel Field, Jr... 1	1	3 9	Zepio (colored).... 1	1	3 9
Ebenezer Hill.....	1	1 3 9	Thomas Henry.... 1	1	3 9
Job Battles.....	1	1 3 9	Matthew Buck.... 1	1	3 9
Joseph Phinney... 1	1	3 9	Abiah Keith.....	1	1 3 9
Nath'l Reynolds... 1	1	3 9	Widow Keith.....	0	0 0
Thomas Reynolds. 1	1	3 9	Ames.....	0	1 3 9
Samuel Pettingill. 1	1	3 9	Japhet Rickard... 0	1	3 9
Asa Pettingill.... 2	2	7 6	Ephraim Willis.... 0	0	0 0
Isaac Allen.....	1	1 3 9	John Brett.....	1	1 3 9
Benj. Hayward.... 1	1	3 9	Thomas Buck.....	1	1 3 9
Zechariah Cary... 1	1	3 9	Benj. Edson, Jr... 1	1	3 0
Edward White.....	1	1 3 9	John Dailey.....	0	0 0 9
John Randall.....	2	2 7 6	Charles Snell.... 1	1	3 9
William French... 1	1	3 9	Edw'd Southworth. 2	2	7 6
David French.....	1	1 3 9	Shepard Fiske.... 0	0	0 0

Poll-Tax List for 1770.—The following list is inserted to show the residents of the North Parish of Bridgewater (now Brockton) in 1770, with the number of polls against each householder:

Names.	Polls.	Names.	Polls.
Joseph Allen.....	1	Dr. Philip Bryant.....	1
Samuel Brett.....	1	Seth Bryant.....	1
Simeon Brett.....	3	Job Bryant.....	1
Matthew Buck.....	3	Jeremiah Beal.....	2

Names.	Polls.	Names.	Polls.
Japhet Beal.....	1	Ashley Curtis, Jr.....	1
Zechariah Cary.....	1	Elisha Dunbar.....	0
Joseph Cole.....	1	Elisha Dunbar, Jr.....	1
Samuel Cole.....	2	Seth Dunbar.....	1
Zachariah Gurney... 1	1	Silas Dunbar.....	1
Lieut. Elisha Gurney. 1	1	Jesse Dunbar.....	1
Micah Gurney.....	1	Ens. John Dailey... 1	1
Daniel Howard, Esq.. 1	1	Jabez Field.....	3
Capt. Barnabas Howard. 1	1	Levi French.....	1
Capt. Robert Howard. 2	2	Ebenezer Snell.... 2	2
Robert Howard, Jr... 1	1	Cornet Charles Snell. 2	2
Elisha Hayward.....	1	Elezzer Snow, Jr... 2	2
Joseph Hayward.....	1	Samuel Sturtevant. 1	1
Jonathan Hayden.... 1	1	Ezekiel Southworth. 1	1
Josiah Hayden.....	2	Edmund Soper.....	1
Abiah Keith.....	2	Jacob Thayer.....	1
Nathan Keith.....	2	Enoch Thayer.....	1
Jacob Keith.....	1	Zechariah Watkins, Jr. 1	1
John Manly.....	1	Elezzer Cole.....	1
John Brett.....	1	Ephraim Willis.... 1	1
Capt. Abiel Packard... 2	2	Demetrius Rickard. 1	1
Thomas Packard.....	1	Fobes Field.....	1
Timothy Packard.... 1	1	Samuel Brett, J.... 1	1
David Packard.....	2	Ezra Cary.....	1
David Packard, Jr... 1	1	Abram Packard.... 1	1
Abiezer Packard.... 1	1	Eos Thayer.....	1
William Packard.... 2	2	Barnabas Curtis... 1	1
William Packard, Jr... 1	1	Elezzer Cole.....	1
Lemuel Packard.... 1	1	Daniel Ames.....	3
Capt. Isaac Packard... 2	2	Timothy Ames.....	1
Abia Packard.....	1	Noah Ames.....	1
Ensign Abel Packard. 2	2	Benjamin Ames... 1	1
John Packard.....	1	Simeon Alden.....	1
Nathan Packard, Jr... 1	1	Isaac Brett.....	1
Barnabas Pratt.....	1	Simeon Cary.....	1
Thomas Pratt.....	1	Jonathan Cary... 1	1
Jonathan Perkins... 1	1	Dr. John Staples Crafts. 1	1
Daniel Pettingill... 1	1	Deacon David Edson. 1	1
Stephen Pettingill... 1	1	James Edson.....	1
Caleb Phillips.....	1	Benjamin Edson... 1	1
Capt. Eliphalet Phillips. 1	1	Jacob Edson.....	1
Nathaniel Reynolds. 1	1	William Edson... 1	1
Philip Reynolds.... 1	1	Iehabed Edson... 1	1
Jonas Reynolds.... 1	1	Ebenezer Edson... 2	2
Timothy Reynolds... 1	1	Isaac Fuller.....	1
Thomas Reynolds... 3	3	Mark Ford.....	1
Thomas Reynolds... 1	1	Thomas Henry, estate . 1	1
Jacob Rickard.....	1	Lieut. John Howard. 2	2
Charles Richards... 1	1	Adam Howard.....	0
Ens. Issachar Snell. 1	1	Lieut. Henry Kingman. 2	2
Zebedee Snell.....	2	Matthew Kingman. 1	1
Nehemiah Lincoln... 1	1	Henry Kingman, Jr... 1	1
Ebenezer Packard... 2	2	John and Adam Kingman. 1	1
Jacob Packard.....	1	John Kingman, Jr... 1	1
Nathan Packard.... 2	2	Levi Keith.....	2
Simeon Packard.... 1	1	Lemuel Southworth. 1	1
James Packard.....	1	Benjamin Southworth. 1	1
Kenben Packard.... 2	2	William Shaw.....	3
Seth Packard.....	1	Joseph Sylvester... 1	1
Lieut. Josiah Packard. 1	1	Thomas Thompson. 2	2
Joshua Packard.... 1	1	Seth Thayer.....	2
Daniel Packard.... 1	1	Joshua Warren... 1	1
Eliab Packard.....	0	Ebenezer Warren... 1	1
Barnabas Packard... 1	1	Ezra Warren.....	1
George Packard.... 1	1	Thomas West.....	1
Josiah Perkins.....	1	William French... 1	1
Samuel Pettingill... 3	3	Isaiah Fuller.....	1
Edmund Pettingill... 1	1	Lieut. Daniel Noyes. 0	0
Joseph Pettingill... 2	2	Jacob Noyes.....	0
Daniel Richards... 2	2	Samuel Noyes.... 0	0
John Richards.... 0	0	David Porter.....	0
Constant and Natb. Southworth. 1	1	Joseph Porter... 1	1
Edward Southworth... 2	2	Samuel Dike.....	1
Ephraim Cole.....	1	Jesse Perkins... 1	1
Joseph Cole, Jr... 1	1	Jacob Packard, Jr... 1	1
Ephraim Churchill... 2	2	Moses Cary.....	1

United States Land Tax.—“General list of all Dwelling-Houses which, with the Out-Houses appurtenant thereto and the Lots on which the Same are erected, not exceeding two Acres in any Case, were owned, possessed, or occupied, on the 1st day of October, 1798, within the Assessment District No. 10, in the Sixth Division of the State of Massachusetts, exceeding in value the Sum of One Hundred Dollars:”

Names of reputed owners.	Valuation.	Names of reputed owners.	Valuation.
Daniel Alden.....	$200	Thomas and Elijah Packard.....	$175
Timothy Ames.....	230	Abiah and Howard Packard.....	250
Noah Ames.....	225	Josiah Pratt.....	150
Job Ames.....	225	Jonas Reynolds.....	150
Joseph Alden.....	110	Widow Elizabeth Reynolds.....	150
Daniel Alden.....	230	Seth Snow.....	105
Philip Bryant.....	500	Ephraim Sturtevant.....	275
Amzi Brett.....	110	Jonathan Snow.....	200
Job Bryant.....	200	Silas and Widow Snow.....	550
Samuel and Wm. Brett..	275	Zechariah and Oliver Snow.....	275
Japhet Beal.....	250	Jeremiah Beal.....	175
Ephraim Cole.....	500	Isaac and Joseph Brett..	620
Jonathan and James Cary.....	325	Samuel Brett.....	150
Jonathan Cary, Jr.....	200	Rufus Brett.....	110
Simeon and Howard Cary.....	325	Daniel Cary.....	350
Jacob and Ebenezer Dunbar.....	220	Thomas Craft.....	550
Jacob Dunbar, Jr.....	150	Ephraim Churchill.....	105
Samuel Dike, Jr.....	120	Barnabas Curtis.....	120
Manasseh and Samuel Dickerman.....	325	Joseph and B. Crosswell..	105
Ichabod Edson.....	250	Moses Cary.....	110
Seth Edson.....	105	Samuel Chesman.....	175
William and William Edson.....	120	Benjamin Keith.....	275
David Edson.....	120	Shepard Keith.....	150
James and Josiah Edson..	230	Seth Kingman.....	500
Josiah and Elisha Eames..	200	Matthew Kingman.....	275
James Eaten.....	105	Matt. Kingman (guardian of Isaac Packard)..	325
Fobes, Jabez, and Daniel Field.....	500	Abel Kingman.....	150
William Field.....	175	Nathan Keith.....	120
Asa Ford.....	175	Henry Kingman.....	150
Mark and Samuel Ford..	150	Nehemiah Lincoln.....	175
Bezaleel and Bethuel Field.....	200	Nathan Leach.....	150
Zechariah Gurney } Zechariah Gurney Jr. } Silas Sturtevant } Ephraim Groves } Caleb Hayward.....	125	Nathaniel Manley.....	230
Ichabod Howard.....	625	Daniel Manley.....	230
John Howard.....	500	Daniel Manley, Jr.....	110
Alfred Howard.....	230	Thomas Macomber.....	200
Robert and Robert Howard, Jr.....	400	Hayward Marshall.....	175
Mary Howard } Solomon Hill } Waldo Howard.....	200	Ephraim Noyes.....	500
Asaph Howard.....	200	Josiah Packard.....	500
Asaph Hayward.....	275	Eliphalet Packard.....	150
Joseph Hayward.....	175	Nathaniel and Leonard Orcutt.....	135
Barnabas and Jonas Hayward.....	500	Silas Packard.....	625
Daniel Howard (2d).....	300	Jonathan Perkins, Jr.....	150
John Hunt.....	180	Ames Packard.....	110
Oliver Howard.....	350	Ebenezer, Lot, and Robert Packard.....	360
Gideon Howard.....	400	Jonas Packard.....	150
William Jameson.....	175	James Porter.....	120
Asa Jones.....	175	Josiah Packard.....	200
Ephraim Jackson.....	230	Lemuel Packard.....	650
Jonathan Keith.....	230	Jonathan Perkins.....	110
Levi Keith.....	350	Nathan Packard.....	325
Luke Perkins and Isaac Porter.....	120	Jesse and Zadoc Perkins..	625
Josiah Perkins.....	120	Rebecca Perkins.....	120
Benjamin Packard.....	450	Noah Packard } James Perkins.....	600
Joseph Packard.....	105	Thomas Packard.....	130
Widow Content Packard..	150	John Porter.....	200
Mark Perkins.....	175	Luke Perkins.....	200
Levi Packard.....	325	Shepard Perkins } Widow Abigail Perkins } Zebedee Snell.....	175
Widow Dorothy Packard..	275	Issachar Snell.....	400
Cyrus Packard.....	175	Joseph Snell.....	110
		Joseph Sylvester.....	120
		Joseph Sylvester, Jr.....	350
		Benjamin Southworth....	105
		Shepard Snell.....	150
		William and Micah Shaw	300
		Nathaniel Snell.....	275

Names of reputed owners.	Valuation.	Names of reputed owners.	Valuation.
Perez Southworth.....	$210	Jeremiah Thayer.....	$110
John Tilden.....	275	Enos Thayer.....	230
Thomas and Thomas Thompson, Jr.....	460	John Wales.....	130
James Thompson.....	.....	Thomas Willis.....	500
Seth Thayer.....	110	Ephraim Willis.....	250

NAHUM MITCHELL, Assessor.

JOHN WHITMAN,
SOLOMON HAYWARD,
DANIEL CARY,
JONATHAN COPELAND,
DANIEL FOBES,

} Assistant Assessors.

BRIDGEWATER, March 5, 1799.

CHAPTER II.

Precinct Controversy and Incorporation of the Town—Indian History—Petition of the North Parish (Asa Howard and others) to be Incorporated into a Town—Remonstrance of Gideon Howard and others—Remonstrance of Eliab Whitman and others—Petition in aid of Asa Howard and others for an Act of Incorporation—Remonstrance of Daniel Howard, Esq., as Agent for the Town of Bridgewater—Vote of the Town—Petition of Jesse Packard and others in aid of Asa Howard’s Petition—The Act of Incorporation as passed June 15, 1821—First Town-Meeting.

Precinct Controversy and Incorporation of the Town.—The people of the North Parish remained contented with their connection with the other portions of the town for a long time; but, as the number of inhabitants increased, they commenced to discuss the propriety of becoming a town by themselves. The first step taken in that direction was in 1793. In a warrant for a parish meeting, dated June 15, 1793, we find the following:

“To see if the Parish will petition to the town to be set off into a town by themselves, or petition the West Parish to join with them into a town if they should get voted off by said town.” At a meeting held June 26, 1793, agreeably to notification, “the above article was negatived, and the meeting was dissolved by the moderator.”

Things remained quiet in reference to the subject of division of the town till Nov. 25, 1814, at which time a meeting was held “to see if the parish will petition the town of Bridgewater to vote them off into a separate town by themselves.” “Voted not to do so.”

Another measure was then proposed; namely, “To see if the parish will petition the Legislature of this Commonwealth to incorporate them into a town by the name of North Bridgewater, or such other name as the parish may think proper, with all the rights and privileges of other incorporated towns." Upon this article "no action was taken, and the meeting was dissolved." Again we find, March 4, 1816, a committee of seven were chosen "to consider the subject of requesting the town to set them off into a town by themselves, and to report at a future meeting." Col. Caleb Howard, Daniel Howard, Esq., Abel Kingman, Esq., Gideon Howard, Esq., Howard Cary, Esq., Joseph Sylvester, Esq., and John Wales were the committee. The meeting was then adjourned to April 8, 1816, at which time the parish came together, and, after hearing a verbal report from their committee, "Voted to take measures to have the parish separated from the town and incorporated with the privileges of a town." Also "voted the same committee petition the town to vote that the parish be incorporated." What this committee did towards forwarding the wishes of the town does not appear on record. Again, November 11th of the same year, the parish "voted to take measures to have this parish separated from the town and incorporated with the privileges of a town." Thirty-nine in favor, nineteen opposed to the measure. We should judge by the records that nothing was done for a few days, as we find another meeting was held ten days after the above vote was passed, at which a committee of four was chosen, with full instructions to petition the Legislature to incorporate the parish with the privileges of a town. Sixty-two were in favor, and thirty-six opposed to the same. Abel Kingman, Esq., Joseph Sylvester, Esq., Col. Edward Southworth, and Col. Caleb Howard were the committee to carry the above vote into effect.

At a meeting held May 5, 1818, to ascertain the yeas and nays on the question of a division of the town, the yeas were one hundred and twelve; the nays, nineteen.

Indian History.—The war of the colonists with King Philip proved very disastrous to the Indian race. Many obstacles were thrown in their way, which so far discouraged them that they were forced to give up their possessions and seek other localities away from the new-comers, who were gradually extending their territory westward.

"There was a time when red men climbed these hills,
And wandered by these plains and rills,
Or rowed the light canoe along you river,
Or rushed to conflict armed with bow and quiver,
Or, 'neath the forest leaves that o'er them hung,
They council held, or loud their war-notes sung."

To what extent Indians occupied the North Parish (now Brockton) we are unable to learn. We have no doubt, however, that they were quite numerous, as the plow frequently brings to light some relic of past days and of an uncivilized people. Spear-points, arrow-heads, mortars, pestles, gouges, and stone hatchets are often found in different sections of the town.

In the north part of the town are found hearth-stones of ancient Indian wigwams. There was one directly under the house of the late Oliver Howard, which was taken down a few years since. Judging from the number of relics found in the northerly section of the town, we should judge they frequented that part of the parish to a considerable extent.

The writer has a clay pipe found by Mr. Willard Howard near his residence; also specimens of arrow-heads of stone found by Bela Keith, Esq., on his land at Campello, which are splendid specimens of natives' work, besides many other relics of barbarous days.

There is another evidence of the town having been the residence of the red man. In the west part of the town, on what is called "Stone House Hill," a natural cave is found in the solid stone, from which the hill derives its name, which is said to have been the dwelling of some tribe of Indians. It is situated on or near the old road leading from North Bridgewater (now Brockton) to Easton, and near the residence of Timothy Remick.

It is also traditionary that Indians had their huts in the valley of Salisbury River, opposite Campello, and so on north as far as the bridge at "Sprague's Factory." There was an Indian family named Hammond, who lived on the land recently owned by the late Benjamin Kingman, Esq., west of his farm-barn, in a lot formerly known as the "Old Pasture," and nearly opposite the residence of Lucius Keith, or the Seth Kingman place. The native Indian tribes living upon maize and fish principally, as well as game, we are inclined to the opinion that they generally sought for dwelling-spots near some stream, where fish could be found, as it made no difference about their game, that they could find all over the forests.

It is impossible at the present time for us to realize to ourselves the situation of the first white settlers of the town. They lived in constant fear of a sudden attack. Exposed at all times, they were haunted in their imaginations by death with torture, or of a hopeless captivity. The principal companion of the white man, whether in the field or at his dwelling, was his gun. While at his daily labor in the cultivation of his lands, if he had not his gun, he was likely at any time to be carried away.

Even down to a late period, when people assembled for public worship, a guard was the first thing to establish, in order that they might not be suddenly captured.

We do not learn that the people of the North Parish were so much molested as in some other portions of the ancient town, for the reason the white people did not settle that portion to any extent till after 1700.

Mitchell, in his excellent "History of Bridgewater," says "that the people displayed great courage and intrepidity during Philip's war, and were often advised to desert their dwellings and repair to the seashore towns." They, however, resolutely kept their ground, and helped other towns to do the same. Whatever others may think, there is something sad in the reflection that the natives of these hills and valleys have disappeared, and at the same time we cannot regret that a Christian and enlightened people have taken the places of a barbarous and heathen race. The last vestige of the tribe that once traveled over the soil of Bridgewater has long ago disappeared.

"Alas for them! their day is o'er;
Their fires are out on hill and shore."

Petition of Asa Howard and others.—March 25, 1819, the parish "voted to petition the Legislature the next session for a division of the town." Abel Kingman, Esq., Col. Caleb Howard, Joseph Sylvester, Esq., and Col. Edward Southworth were chosen a committee to draft a petition and get petitioners. The following is a copy of the same as presented to the General Court:

"To the Honorable Senate and Honorable House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled, A.D., 1819:

"The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of the north precinct of Bridgewater, humbly shows that the town of Bridgewater is large and extensive in territory, and furnishes about eleven or twelve hundred voters, of which number nearly three hundred belong to the north precinct, and have to travel from five to seven miles on an average to attend town-meetings, over a piece of way which is generally very bad in the months of March and April; and in having to transact our town business such a distance from home, it subjects us to a great expense of time and travel, which might be saved if we were set off into a separate town, as we then could transact all our town and parish business on the same days. We would further represent that it is very difficult in full meetings doing the business of the town in their present house on account of it being out of repair and not of sufficient size. Several attempts have been made to repair and make the house suitable for the whole town to meet and transact their business in, but have failed.

"Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that the honorable Legislature will take into their wise consideration the grievances above stated, and set off and incorporate said precinct into a separate town, by the name of North Bridgewater, and by the lines and estates that it was incorporated by, and has been improved to, as it relates to the town of Bridgewater. And in duty will ever pray.

"Asa Howard.	Daniel Alden.
Jeremiah Beals, Jr.	Akerman Pettingill.
Azel Gurney.	Caleb Howard.
Jeremiah Beals.	Arza Leonard.
Asa Ford.	William Kimball.
Caleb Phillips.	Renben Drake.
John Packard (2d).	Ornan Cole.
Oliver Snell, Jr.	James Willis.
Oliver Snell.	Gideon Packard.
Jeremiah Snell.	Jonas Keith.
Thomas Reynolds.	Joshua Jenkins.
Daniel Ames.	Daniel Bryant.
Gustavus Sylvester.	Ephraim Sturtevant.
Arza Keith.	Nehemiah Lincoln.
Caleb Jackson.	Cyrus Packard.
Jonathan Snow.	Sullivan Packard.
Zachariah Gurney.	Newton Shaw.
John Burrill.	Joel Ames.
Benjamin Ames.	Galen Packard.
Isaac Horton.	Welcome Howard.
Jonathan Porter.	John Burrill, Jr.
James Hatch.	Benjamin Crosswell.
Orren Faxon.	Samuel Snell.
Lemuel French.	Zachariah Thayer.
Isaac Clapp.	Nathan Jones.
Ambrose Packard (2d).	Joseph Brett.
Joseph Whiting.	Zebedee Snell.
Joseph Wild.	Nathan Bryant.
Zenas Packard, Jr.	Silas Howard.
Barnabas Edson.	Cyrus Snell.
Simeon Dunbar.	Levi French.
Zenas Packard.	Ezekiel Reed.
Oliver Dike.	Fobes Field.
Abel Kingman.	Simeon Reynolds.
William Tribou.	Alfred Bolton.
Jonas Howard, Jr.	Harvey Hawes.
Jonathan Cary.	Daniel H. Cary.
Perez Crocker.	Benjamin Southworth.
Bela Keith.	Zenas Brett.
Eliphalet Brett.	Hezekiah Packard.
Ambrose Packard.	Thomas White.
Zophar Field.	Lemuel Tirrill.
Ichabod Howland.	Isaac Whiting.
Elijah Drake.	Jonathan Edson.
Cyrus Warren.	Asa Battles.
Parmenas Brett.	James Loring.
Apollas Howard.	William Brett.
John Porter.	Levi Packard.
Elisha Tillson.	Waldo Field.
Martin Drake.	Martin Southworth.
Joseph Reynolds.	David Ames.
Simeon Dunbar.	Samuel Brett.
Apollas Packard.	Samuel Brett, Jr.
John Battles.	James Porter.
Asa Pratt.	Ebenezer Warren.
Israel Packard.	Abiezer Hobart.
Barzillai Field.	Silas Snow.
Thomas Wales, Jr.	Daniel Field.
Micah Faxon.	John Field.
Mark Faxon.	William Badger.
Perez Southworth.	James Churehill.
Matthew Snell.	Oliver Bryant.
Cyrus B. Phillips.	Lemuel Packard.

Josiah Ames.
Bethuel Field.
Robert Howard.
Nathan Leach, Jr.
Edward Pratt.
Nathan Hayward.
Benjamin F. Dickerman.
Parmenas Packard.
Rosseter Jones.
Josiah Brett.
Martin Cary.
David Ford.
David Ford, Jr.
Abijah Knapp, Jr.
David Packard (2d).
Charles Lincoln.
John Packard.
Benjamin Kingman.
Jabez Kingman.
Simeon Packard.
Joseph Faxon.
Nathaniel Ames.
Micah Packard.
David Packard.
Bernard Jackson.
Joseph Silvester.
John Cobb.
Samuel Dike, Jr.
Jonas Packard.
Samuel Ford.
Adin Packard, Jr.
Thomas Wales.
Noah Chesman.
Howard Cary.
Isaac Keith (3d).
Sylvanus French.
Zibeon Brett.
Ozen Gurney.
Edward Southworth.
Asa Jones.
Zibeon Packard.
Abiel Kingman.
Zibeon Cole.
Joseph Reynolds, Jr.

Calvin Bryant.
Jonas Reynolds.
Samuel Chesman.
Sprague Snow.
Mark Ford.
Enos Thayer.
Eliphalet Thayer.
Alexander Thayer.
Alexander Thayer, Jr.
William Alden, Jr.
William Packard.
Isaac Packard.
Joseph D. Snell.
Isaac Brett.
Alpheus Tribou.
Isaac Reynolds.
Eliphaz Sprague.
Adin Packard.
Jesse Perkins.
Stillman Willis.
Ziba Keith.
David Edson, Jr.
Samuel Harris.
Galen Warren.
John May.
Nathaniel Manley.
Perez Southworth, Jr.
William Brown, Jr.
Ichabod Howard.
Alvah Warren.
Oliver Leach.
Josiah Edson.
Micah Shaw.
Samuel Dike.
John Humphrey.
Lewis Daille.
James Humphrey.
Joseph Hayward.
Nathaniel Hobart.
Nathan Leach.
Howard Packard.
Daniel J. Dickerman.
Nathaniel Wales.
Aphia Alden.

"IN SENATE, June 3, 1819.

"Read and committed to the Committee on the Incorporation of Towns.

"Sent down for concurrence.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 3, 1819.

"Read and concurred.

"TIMOTHY BIGELOW, Speaker."

Here follows the action of the General Court upon the petition :

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

"IN SENATE, June 4, 1819.

"On a petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the petitioners cause an attested copy of their petition, with this order thereon, to be served on the Town Clerk of said town of Bridgewater, thirty days at least before the second Wednesday of the second Session of the present General Court, that all persons interested may then appear and show cause (if any they have) why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

"Sent down for concurrence.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 4, 1819.

"Read and concurred.

"TIMOTHY BIGELOW, Speaker.

"A true copy. Attest :

"S. F. McCLEARY, Clerk of the Senate."

"BRIDGEWATER, September 27, 1819.

"This order of notice, with a copy thereof, was left with me by Abel Kingman, Esq.

"ELIAKIM HOWARD, Town Clerk."

At the second session of the General Court, the town of Bridgewater was represented by Daniel Howard, who had been chosen as the agent of the town to oppose the petition of Asa Howard and others for an act of incorporation. Remonstrances against the petition were also presented from Gideon Howard and ninety-eight others, and Eliab Whitman, Esq., and fifty-eight others, also residents of the North Parish, and a petition of Bela C. Dike and nineteen others, which we publish in full, to show the feeling of the parish at that time :

Remonstrance of Gideon Howard and others.

—The following is a true copy of Gideon Howard's remonstrance :

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled, January Term, 1820 :

"The subscribers, inhabitants of the North Parish of the town of Bridgewater, beg leave respectfully to remonstrate against the petition of Asa Howard and others praying the General Court of Massachusetts to set off and incorporate the North Parish of the town of Bridgewater aforesaid with all the privileges of a town. Your remonstrants feel imperiously urged by a sense of duty to again come forward, the steady and decided supporters of the union of the town of Bridgewater. The preservation of the union, resources, influence, respectability, and friendly intercourse which subsists between the sections of so large a town is with them an object truly desirable; and, upon most candid examination, they are at a loss on what to bottom this eager desire to loosen the bands of its union and degrade its importance. It is a fact well known that but few towns in the county of this Commonwealth have managed their public business more correctly for fifty years past than the town of Bridgewater; and it is believed that, at the present moment, did not the question about division agitate and, indeed, irritate the feelings of its inhabitants, the business of the town might be performed understandingly, decently, and in order. We feel assured your Honors will search in vain for reasons to support an opinion that the lasting and substantial interests of the town will be promoted by division; and we feel equally assured that the separation of the section prayed for in the petition aforesaid will immediately result in a complete division of the whole town. Your remonstrants would not attempt a display of arguments or objections on this subject, but cheerfully submit their interest and wishes to your wise consideration. A former decree, on a petition to divide the town of Bridgewater, inspires your remonstrants with confidence in renewing their opposition to an impolitic measure. They are further encouraged by a recent vote of the town, which, by a majority of sixty-five votes, declared that the North Parish should continue a part of the town of Bridgewater. The town has at all times been uniform in its opposition to division, and an application being made to the General Court for division has invariably voted by handsome majority to preserve its union. Your remonstrants, however, confident of success in their opposition, may be disappointed. With all due deference to the decision which the General Court may make on this important subject, anxious for the fate of Bridgewater as a town, they will early search for the evidence of a final result. And the first moment of doubt will induce them to petition your Honors to belong with the property which they respectfully hold to the town of Bridgewater.

"Gideon Howard.	Ebenezer Dunbar.
Luke Packard.	Samuel Wood.
Asa Battles.	Isaac Hartwell, Jr.
Shepard Packard.	James Willis.
James Cary.	Abijah Knapp.
Theron Ames.	Martin Dnnbar.
Job Ames.	John Tilden.
Darius Howard.	John Tilden, Jr.
Lewis Howard.	Daniel Manley.
Sidney Howard.	Howard Marshall.
Moses Cary.	Gilbert Snell.
John Craft.	Enos Thayer.
Silas Packard.	Ephraim Cole.
Jonathan P. Crafts.	John Ames.
Jesse Perkins, Jr.	Rev. Thomas Beresford.
Ebenezer Edson.	Samuel Packard.
Seth Snow.	Isaac Eames.
John Smith.	Otis Alden.
Eliphalet Kingman.	Alvin Snell.
Josiah Perkins.	Shepard Snell.
Nahum Perkins.	Loring Brett.
Thomas Thompson.	Cyrus Howard.
John Thompson.	Nathao Packard.
Josiah Dunbar.	Samuel Bryaut.
Silas Dunbar.	Seth Kingman.
Waldo Hayward.	Galen Manley.
Enos Thayer (2d).	Benjamin Marshall.
Seth Edson.	John Wales, Jr.
William Edson.	Ephraim Noyes.
Otis Howard.	Merritt Noyes.
Gideon Howard, Jr.	Oliver Howard, Jr.
Oliver Howard.	Barnabas Curtia.
Lott Blanchard.	David Noyes.
William French.	Moses Noyes.
Ezekiel Merritt.	John Ritchie.
M. H. Perkins.	Ansel Perkins.
Amos Whiting.	Robert Packard.
Turner Torrey.	Perez Robinson.
Issachar Snell.	Ortho Hayward.
Shepard Keith.	Azor Packard.
Joseph Snell.	Zina Hayward.
Henry Kingman.	Daniel Howard, Jr.
Jacob Fuller.	David Battles.
Isaac Curtis.	Salmon Manley.
Charles Packard.	Austin Howard.
Preston Packard.	John Wales.
Caleb Copeland, Jr.	Eliab Whitman.
Oliver Jackson.	Samuel Holmes.
Charles Dunbar.	Jonathan Perkins.
Jacob Dunbar.

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 15, 1820.

"Read and committed to the Committee on the Incorporation of Towns.

"Sent up for concurrence. TIMOTHY BIGELOW, Speaker."

"IN SENATE, January 18, 1820.

"Read and concurred. JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

Remonstrance of Eliab Whitman and others.
—The following is a copy of the remonstrance of Eliab Whitman and others of the North Parish :

"To the Honorable the Senate and the Honorable the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled, Anno Dom. 1820.

"We, the undersigned inhabitants of the North Parish in Bridgewater, understanding that an order of notice from your honorable body has been served on said town of Bridgewater, purporting that Asa Howard and 213 others have petitioned the General Court praying that said North Parish may be set off from the town of Bridgewater, and incorporated into a separate town by the name of North Bridgewater, do most respectfully represent that, in our opinion, the proposed dismemberment of the town of Bridgewater cannot be supported by such reasons and arguments as will justify a measure so repugnant to the interest and happiness of the said North Parish, as well as to the town at large. We cannot conceive what new reasons or arguments can be offered for dividing the town. It is a fact that the population of said town has been nearly stationary for forty years past, and the distance from the centre has not increased, but in several instances has been considerably shortened, and the roads very much improved in that time. It is also a fact that there are sections of the south, east, and Ticut parishes nearly as remote from the centre of the town as the most remote section of the North Parish, and they cannot be much relieved by the proposed division. The town-house is a substantial building, and ample in its size, and with a very small expense might be made a convenient accommodation for our most numerous town-meetings. Nevertheless, should your Honors, in your great wisdom, think it expedient to grant the prayer of said petition, and incorporate the said North Parish into a distinct and separate town,

"We, the undersigned inhabitants of said North Parish, being deeply impressed with the belief that such a measure will be pregnant with many great and serious evils to said North Parish, do most earnestly wish, and humbly pray your Honors, that we, the said undersigned, may, with our estates, be exempted from said Act of Incorporation, and still retain our connection and relation to the town of Bridgewater; and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

"Eliab Whitman.	Silas Dunbar, Jr.
Lott Blanchard.	Thomas Thompson.
Gideon Howard, Jr.	David Battles.
Lewis Howard.	Job Ames.
Darius Howard.	Asa Battles.
Theron Ames.	Ansel Perkins.
Martin Dunbar.	Turner Torrey.
Shepard Keith.	Hayward Marshall.
Jonathan Perkins.	James Willis.
M. H. Perkins.	Benjamin Marshall.
Jacob Dunbar.	Ezekiel Merritt.
Ebenezer Dunbar.	Josiah Perkins.
Charles Packard.	Silas Packard.
Shepard Snell.	Jacob Fuller.
Sidney Howard.	John Crafts.
Samuel Packard.	Josiah Dunbar.
Ephraim Noyes.	William French.
Moses Noyes.	John Wales, Jr.
Ortho Hayward.	Moses Cary.
Austin Howard.	Seth Snow.
Rev. Thomas Beresford.	E. Edson, his X mark.
John Tilden.	Jonathan P. Crafts.
Abijah Knapp.	John Tilden, Jr.

Seth Edson.	Enos Thayer (2d).
Nabum Perkins.	Nathan Packard.
Jesse Packard.	Joseph Snell.
Isaac Curtis.	Oliver Jackson.
Oliver Howard.	Isaac Eames.
Waldo Hayward.	William Edson.
John Wales.

"IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 19, 1820.

"Read and referred to the Committee on Incorporation of Towns.

"TIMOTHY BIGELOW, Speaker."

"IN SENATE, JANUARY 19, 1820.

"Read and concurred.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

Petition in aid of Asa Howard and others.

—The following is a copy of a petition in aid of Asa Howard and others :

"To the Honorable Senate and the Honorable House of Representatives in General Court assembled, A.D. 1819 :

"The petition of the undersigned inhabitants of the North Parish of Bridgewater humbly shows that whereas there is now pending before the honorable legislative body the petition of Asa Howard and two hundred and thirteen others praying for said North Parish to be set off into a town for various reasons did not sign said petition, but have since taken into consideration the subject-matter of said petition, and are of an opinion that it will be very advantageous to the inhabitants of said parish to be set off as aforesaid, and cannot see any disadvantage that will arise to the remaining part of the town by granting the prayer of said petitioners. For the foregoing reason your petitioners wish to have their names annexed to said petition, and, in duty bound, will ever pray.

"Bela C. Dike.	Abijah Pitcher.
Ebenezer Warren Jr.	Ephraim Brett.
William Cary.	Luke P. Lincoln.
Ephraim Howard.	Joseph S. Packard.
Job Bryant.	Orin Packard.
Elisha Belcher.	Shubael Clark.
John Marshall.	John B. Harris.
Moses Packard.	Martin Snow.
Joel Packard.	Charles Gurney.
Algernon S. Silvester.	Issachar Snell."

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, JANUARY 18, 1820.

"Read and committed to the Committee on the Incorporation of Towns.

"Sent up for concurrence.

"TIMOTHY BIGELOW, Speaker."

"IN SENATE, JANUARY 18, 1820.

"Read and concurred.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

Remonstrance of the Town of Bridgewater.

—The following is a copy of remonstrance from the town of Bridgewater, by Daniel Howard, Esq., as agent :

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled.

"The subscriber, an agent for the town of Bridgewater, duly appointed for this purpose, begs leave, in behalf of said town, respectfully to remonstrate against the petition of Asa Howard and others, praying that the North Parish of said Bridgewater may be set off and incorporated into a separate town, by the name of North Bridgewater.

"This renewed attempt to divide the town of Bridgewater has been witnessed by a large majority of its inhabitants with feelings of regret and surprise. It was hoped and believed that the petitioners would acquiesce in the decision of the last General Court, whose attention was called to the subject by a petition, both in substance and in form like the present. The petitioners, however, having seen fit to renew the controversy, renders it necessary on the part of the town again to protest against the adoption of a measure which no exigence or necessity requires, and which, it is believed, would affect very injuriously the best interests of the inhabitants of Bridgewater.

"The evils which the petitioners suffer from their connection with the town are, as they allege, the distance which they have to travel to attend town-meetings, the badness of the roads at a certain season of the year, and the want of a house convenient for the transaction of the business of the town.

"There is no town in the Commonwealth the inhabitants of which, if so disposed, cannot complain of some inconveniences to which they are subjected in the transaction of their municipal concerns. The inconveniences experienced in this respect by the town of Bridgewater are not more numerous than what are suffered by the greater part of the towns in the State. The distance traveled by the petitioners to attend town-meetings, and the badness of the roads, may be inconveniences, but they are not more so now than they have ever been since the town was incorporated. They are inconveniences to which the inhabitants of every country town must, in a greater or less degree, submit, and to which the people of the North Parish, in their more unambitious days, quietly submitted, in the full persuasion, no doubt, that they could not be remedied without subjecting themselves and the town to others of a much more serious and formidable nature.

"It may be asserted, however, with truth, that the roads in Bridgewater are, generally speaking, uncommonly good. They have been much improved, and, within a few years, new ones have been opened, lessening the distance of travel from various parts of the town (particularly the North Parish) to the centre.

"The numerous population of Bridgewater, to which the petitioners have alluded, constitutes no impediment to the correct and orderly transaction of the business of the town.

"Their system of town government, practiced upon for many years, very much facilitates the management of their municipal concerns. Each parish has the nomination, and, in fact, the appointment of its proportion of town officers, and thus the interests of all are equally consulted.

"If the town house is out of repair, as stated in the petition, it can be easily fitted so as to accommodate all the inhabitants, and nothing has prevented this but the fear of a division, which the petitioners have contributed so much to excite and keep alive.

"The whole amount, then, of what the petitioners would gain by a separation would be barely saving to themselves of a few miles' travel, an advantage too inconsiderable to balance the many disadvantages to the town at large, of which such a measure must be productive.

"The separation of the North would doubtless be followed by a total dismemberment of the ancient and respectable town. A short time would see us divided into four or five petty towns, with an increase of expense to each, involved in perpetual litigations with each other, and vexed with internal broils. The seeds of dissension are already sown among us, and wait only the favorable moment of a separation to spring up and yield a plentiful harvest.

"It is unnecessary to pursue this subject further, and set down in order all that can be said against granting the request of the petitioners. Enough has been said in this brief statement, it is apprehended, to convince every candid and reflecting mind that a separation of the North Parish would, to itself, be productive of no real advantage, but to the town of great and lasting injury.

"January 15, 1820."

"DANIEL HOWARD."

"IN SENATE, January 18, 1820.

"Read and committed to the Committee on Incorporation of Towns.

"Sent down for concurrence.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 18, 1820.

"Read and concurred.

"TIMOTHY BIGELOW, Speaker."

"The Committee of both Houses appointed to consider applications for the Incorporation of Towns, to whom was referred the petition of Asa Howard and others, inhabitants of the north precinct of Bridgewater, praying that said precinct may be incorporated into a separate town, have had the same under consideration, and ask leave to report, that the prayer of the petition be so far granted that the petitioners have leave to bring in a bill for that purpose.

"Which is respectfully submitted, by order of Committee.

"EBEN GAY, Chairman."

"IN SENATE, February 2, 1820.

"Read and accepted.

"Sent down for concurrence.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Feb. 11, 1820.

"Read and concurred.

"E. H. MILLS, Speaker pro tem."

Vote of the Town.—The vote on the acceptance of the report was seventy-eight in favor, and sixty-eight opposed. An effort was made to reconsider the above vote, which was rejected.

In the first session held in June, 1820, the petition was again presented, and the following action taken :

"IN SENATE, June 10, 1820.

"On the petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the petitioners cause an attested copy of their petition, with this order thereon, to be served on the Town Clerk of Bridgewater, thirty days at least before the first Wednesday of the next session of the present General Court, that all persons interested may then and there appear and show cause (if any they have) why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

"Sent down for concurrence."

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 10, 1820.

"Read and concurred.

"E. H. MILLS, Speaker."

"A true copy. Attest:

"S. F. McCLEARY, Clerk of the Senate."

"Received this order of notice by hand of Abel Kingman, Esq., the seventh day of August, 1820.

"ELIAKIM HOWARD, Town Clerk of Bridgewater."

The town, upon the receipt of the above order of notice, held a meeting Nov. 6, 1820, "to see whether the town would vote to be divided." One hundred and forty-four voted in favor of division, and one hundred and sixty-four against the same.

The meeting then adjourned to the 24th of November, at which time the vote was put to see whether they would choose an agent to oppose a division of the town. Two hundred and six voted to choose an agent, and three hundred and twenty-one voted against the same. This is the last attempt of the town to oppose the passage of the bill to incorporate the North Parish into a town.

Petition of Jesse Packard and others in aid of Asa Howard.—At the next session of the General Court, held in Boston, January, 1821, the subject of division was again brought to their notice, as appears of record. The petition was read and referred to the Committee on Incorporation of Towns, Jan. 18, 1821, together with the following petition :

"To the Honorable Legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts :

"The undersigned humbly represent that we did, in the course of the last year, sign a paper remonstrating against the petition of Asa Howard and others, inhabitants of the North Parish of Bridgewater, praying for said parish to be incorporated into a town, and was at that time fully of an opinion that it would be best for the town to keep together; but, taking into consideration the petition of the West Parish to become a town, and the proceedings of the town at a late meeting on the subject of said petition, do not think it proper to oppose any further; but if the honorable Legislature should think proper to grant the prayer of the said Asa Howard and others, we wish to be incorporated with them, notwithstanding any petition to the contrary.

"NORTH PARISH, Jan. 10, 1821.

"Jesse Packard.

Oliver Jackson.

Jacob Dunbar.

Ebenezer Dunbar.

Ezekiel Merritt.

Turner Torrey.

Abijah Knapp.

Isaac Hartwell, Jr.

Hayward Marshall.

Nathan Packard.

Ansel Perkins.

Samuel Bryant.

Job Ames.

Theron Ames.

Shepard Snell."

The committee to whom was referred the above petitions reported as follows, namely :

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

"The committee of both Houses, to whom was referred the petition of Asa Howard and others, praying that the North Precinct, in the town of Bridgewater, in the county of Plymouth, may be set off from Bridgewater, and incorporated into a separate town, have had the same under consideration, and ask leave to report that the prayer of the petition be so far granted that the petitioners have leave to bring in a bill for that purpose.

"Which is respectfully submitted, by order of the committee.

"MARK DOOLITTLE, Chairman."

"IN SENATE, June 9, 1821.

"Read and accepted.

"Sent down for concurrence.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President."

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 11, 1821.

"Read and concurred.

"JOSIAH QUINCY, Speaker."

Act of Incorporation.—The following is a copy of the bill as passed by both Houses, assembled June 15, 1821 :

"AN ACT to establish the town of North Bridgewater.

"SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by authority of the same :

"That all that part of the North Parish of Bridgewater which lies within the said town of Bridgewater, according to the present territorial limits thereof, be and hereby is established as a separate town, by the name of North Bridgewater; and the inhabitants of the said town of North Bridgewater are hereby vested with all the powers and privileges, and shall also be subject to all the duties and requisitions of other corporate towns, according to the constitution and laws of this commonwealth.

"SECTION 2. Be it further enacted, That the inhabitants of the town of North Bridgewater shall be holden to pay the arrears of all State, county, and town taxes which have been legally assessed upon them, together with their proportion of all debts due from the said town of Bridgewater prior to the date of this act; and the said town of North Bridgewater shall be entitled to receive their proportion of the said debts and taxes due to the said town of Bridgewater, when collected and paid into the treasury of said town; and the said town of North Bridgewater shall be entitled to hold their proportion, according to the present valuation of all the real and personal property belonging to the town of Bridgewater before the passing of this act.

"SECTION 3. Be it further enacted, That the said town of North Bridgewater shall be holden to support their proportion of the poor of the town of Bridgewater which are now chargeable to said town, which proportion shall be ascertained by the present valuation of the town; and all persons who may hereafter become chargeable as paupers to the said towns of Bridgewater or North Bridgewater shall be considered as belonging to that town on the territory of which they had their settlement at the time of the passing of this act, and shall in future be chargeable to that town only.

"SECTION 4. Be it further enacted, That all future State and County taxes which may be levied on the said towns of Bridgewater and North Bridgewater, previous to a new valuation, shall be assessed and paid in the same proportion as they now are according to the present valuation.

"SECTION 5. Be it further enacted, That any Justice of the Peace for the County of Plymouth is hereby empowered, upon application therefor, to issue a warrant, directed to a freehold inhabitant of the said town of North Bridgewater, requiring him to notify and warn the inhabitants thereof qualified to vote in town affairs to meet at such convenient time and place as shall be appointed in the said warrant, for the choice of such officers as towns are by law required to choose and appoint at their annual town-meetings."

"IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 14, 1821.

"This bill having had three several readings, passed to be enacted.

"JOSIAH QUINCY, Speaker.

"IN SENATE, June 15, 1821.

"This bill having had three several readings, passed to be enacted.

"JOHN PHILLIPS, President.

"June 15, 1821.

"Approved.

"J. BROOKS."

The first town-meeting held after the incorporation of the same was July 4, 1821. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Daniel Huntington, the pastor of the First Congregational Church. Joseph Sylvester, Esq., was chosen moderator, and Col. Edward Southworth town clerk. Abel Kingman, Esq., Howard Cary, Esq., and Capt. Zechariah Gurney were chosen selectmen, after which the other town officers were chosen. The number of voters present at the first town-meeting was about two hundred.

CHAPTER III.

SITUATION AND TOPOGRAPHY.

Situation and Extent—Topography—Centre Village—Campello—"Sprague's" or Factory Village—Salisbury Heights—Northwest Bridgewater—Rivers, Brooks, Hills—Natural History—Birds, Fish, Wild Animals—Geological Formation—Official History—Selectmen—Assessors—Town Clerks—Treasurers—Moderators—Dates of Annual Meetings—Engineers of the Fire Department—Councillors—Senators—Representatives to the General Court—Coroners—Notaries Public—Deputy Sheriffs—Justices of the Peace—Trial Justices—Votes for Governor in Brockton—List of Governors.

Brockton is a city in the northwest part of Plymouth County,—bordering on Bristol County on the west, and Norfolk County on the north,—and is situated between 42° 03' and 42° 08' north latitude, and between 70° 57' and 71° 04' west longitude; and is bounded on the north by Randolph and Stoughton, on the east by Abington and East Bridgewater, on the south by West Bridgewater, on the west by Easton. It is twenty miles south from Boston, thirty miles northeast from Providence, twenty-four miles northwest from Plymouth, the shire-town of Plymouth County, sixteen miles southeast from Dedham, the shire-town of Norfolk County, fifteen miles northeast from Taunton, a half shire-town of Bristol County, thirty-five miles northerly from New Bedford, thirty and one-quarter miles northeast from Fall River, forty-nine and one-quarter miles northeast from Newport, R. I., one hundred miles from Provincetown, two hundred and ten miles from New York by rail and steamer. The city is five and a half miles in length from east to west, and five miles in width from north to south, and contains about thirteen thousand acres, and is about four and a half miles square,—has a total length of nearly one hundred miles of public streets, and it may truly be called a "live" place.

Campello.—The next in importance is a neat and pleasant locality, about one and a half miles south from the centre of the city, formerly known as "Plain Village," now Campello. This name was first suggested to the citizens of Plain Village at the time of the establishment of the post-office, in February, 1850, on account of the name of Plain Village being often confounded with other places spelled nearly the same. It was proposed by Rev. Daniel Huntington, and unanimously adopted by the people as a proper one, it signifying a small plain. It has always been noted for its extensive manufacturing establishments of boots, shoes, cabinet furniture, and musical instruments; and the thrift and industry of her citizens may be clearly seen in the neat and tidy appearance of the small cottages scattered throughout the limits of the same. The growth of this place was materially checked, May 23, 1853, by one of the most destructive fires that ever occurred in the city, if not in the county. It is now growing rapidly, and bids fair to be among the best localities for business. Here there is a large amount of business done in the shoe trade, several large establishments being engaged in manufacturing goods for foreign markets, the owners or proprietors of which have stores for the sale of goods in Boston, one manufactory of musical instruments, several variety stores, grocery stores, post-office, railroad depot near by, rendering it a desirable place for trade or for a private residence. The main street runs the entire length of the city, north and south, with graceful elms on either side. There are schools in the place and five churches.

Salisbury Square.—Sprague's Factory Village, or Salisbury Square, is another small and beautifully-located cluster of houses and manufacturing establishments, about three-fourths of a mile east of the main street of the city, on the road leading to Abington. There is a large manufactory of last and boot-trees in this place, with water- and steam-power, formerly owned and conducted by the late Chandler Sprague, Esq., to whom the citizens of that portion of the city owe their success for the enterprising manner in which he rendered the place attractive. Several years since he erected a large and convenient building for his use, in which were conducted several branches of manufacturing; also a beautiful residence now owned by Dr. S. J. Gruver, situated but a short distance from the factory; also a store. In this vicinity is a neat and roomy school-house, having a tower, with a bell; a saw-mill, and several shoe manufactories, besides other establishments for the manufacture of shoe tools.

Brockton Heights.—The next is the "West Shares, or "Northwest Bridgewater" (now known as "Brockton Heights"), a prominent height of land from which magnificent views may be had. It is the highest portion of land to be found in all the four Bridgewater. On the north we have a view of the Blue Hills of Milton, and on the west we have a picturesque view of the Western Hills; and no place can excel it for its lovely scenery and its healthful locality. The land is of a good quality, and the people in this portion of the town are mostly farmers. In immediate proximity to this place is one Methodist Church, school, post-office, and store, and is situated at about equal distance from Stoughton and Centre of Brockton.

Rivers and Brooks.—This town is well watered by brooks and streams, only one large enough to be called a river, and that of small size. Most of these have had mills erected upon them. The most prominent of these is the Salisbury River, which rises in the town of Stoughton, running southerly one-half mile west of the Centre Village, till it crosses Belmont Street, a short distance below the mill known as the Caleb Howard Mill, when it turns and runs east till it meets Trout Brook.

This brook also rises in the southerly part of Stoughton, and runs south about a half-mile east of the middle of the town till it meets Salisbury Brook, near Sprague's works. At this point the two are joined, and run in a southerly direction, a short distance east of Campello village, into the town of East Bridgewater.

Beaver Brook is another stream, rising in Weymouth; runs in a southerly direction, and forming a boundary-line between Abington and North Bridgewater, till it enters East Bridgewater. Another river rises in Easton, and runs through the southwest part of the town into West Bridgewater, and is called Cowesett Brook.

Mike's Brook rises in the northeast part of the town, and runs southwestwardly, and empties into Trout Brook, and is a very small stream.

West Meadow Brook rises north of the residence of Caleb Phillips, near Pleasant Street, and runs in a southerly direction into West Bridgewater, near Henry Jackson's.

Another small stream rises in the south part of Stoughton and north part of Brockton, near George W. Hunt's; running southeasterly it empties into Salisbury Brook, near Galen Packard's mill.

Also, a small stream rises near the residence of the late Deacon Silvanus French, and, running south, enters West Bridgewater east of the late residence of Nahum Hayward, and empties into Salisbury River.

Although the streams in this town are small, there has been, at various times, considerable manufacturing done by water-power. There are no ponds in town of any size, excepting those made by flowing meadows for mill-privileges, the largest in town being that at Sprague's works, next at Howard's mills, and one at Tilden's Corner. There is about a thousand acres in the town covered by water, the balance is well divided into woodland, pasturing, and mowing, and there is no city or town in the county where there is less unproductive or unimproved land than in this town. There are over four thousand acres of good woodland, and over eleven hundred acres of land tilled, exclusive of orcharding; over fifteen hundred acres of good upland mowing land, about eighty acres of orcharding, about six hundred acres of fresh meadow, about three thousand acres of pasture land.

Hills.—Of the town of Brockton, we may say that its surface is comparatively level, with but a few hills. Besides those already mentioned, there are some elevated spots here and there, prominent among which is Cary Hill, situated in the northeast part of the town, overlooking the village on the south, gently sloping in either direction, from the top of which we may get pure air and fine views in an autumn day. When the leaves are turned into rich drapery, it is worth while to ride to this place for the prospect that may be had. It is of very easy access by good roads, and the wonder is that it is not more generally selected as a place of residence by those wishing a healthy and retired locality. The land in the immediate vicinity is good, well adapted to tillage, produces fine crops with little labor.

Prospect Hill is another high and pleasant spot of land, very desirable for building purposes, and but a short distance from the village in a northwest direction, west of the late Capt. Asa Jones' residence. On this height are many fine residences.

Ridge Hill is a rough and rocky pasture, running from near the residence of Freeman Holmes, in the south part of the town, northerly for about one mile, and has been much celebrated for its plentiful crops of huckleberries and blackberries.

Stone-House Hill is situated on the boundary-line between Brockton and Easton, a short distance west of the shoe manufactory of Jonas Reynolds at Tilden's Corner. At this place is an old cave, made in the solid stone ledge, and is said to have been used by the Indians as a dwelling. The cave may now be seen as formerly used. It is situated on the old road leading from Brockton to Easton. A pastoral poem was written by George H. Fullerton, Esq., the late postmaster of Brockton. This work is worthy of a perusal.

Natural History.—To the true votary of science everything in nature presents a lovely aspect. "To him there are books in the running streams, sermons in stones, good in every thing."

"There's a pleasure in the pathless woods;
There is society where none intrudes."

Every town has its natural history, and every mile of its surface, with its hills and plains, its rivers, ponds, rocks, and trees,—all have a charm that clusters around the home of childhood. The forests of Brockton consist of red-, white-, and sugar-maple (although the latter is scarce, it is occasionally found), white-, red-, and black-ash, the tremulous poplar and verdant hemlock, the tall spruce, much used in building, white-ash, used for carriage-work, scythes, and rake-handles, for hoops, sieve-rims, and boxes, and a superior wood for oars. Sassafras was in early times quite plenty, valuable only for medicinal purposes. Chestnut is not abundant. White-oak is used for carriages, red-oak for casks, the bark of which is used for tanning; hickory affording plenty of good shell-barks; butternut is not common,—here and there a tree; white-pine is tolerably plenty, although it has been of late much cut for fuel and building purposes; pitch-pine is quite plenty,—good only for fuel, being knotty and pitchy; red cedar, used for rail-fences and pencil-woods, also very useful for linings to chests, as a protection from moths; red-beech, used for plane, woods, last, and boot-tree forms. Tall and graceful elms rejoice the eye in every direction. In the early settlement of the town large quantities of ship-timber of oak and chestnut were carried from the town to the sea-shore towns of Weymouth, Scituate, and Duxbury. Among those who did a large trade in that line were Messrs. Abel and Eliphalet Kingman, and, later, Edwin H. Kingman. Of late years a ready market is found at home for all the wood cut, where formerly large lots were either carried to Boston and the seaport towns, or made into charcoal, and then sent to Boston. Since the railroads have been built wood has been much used on the locomotives, and has made it scarce at times, but if we take a look about the town we shall find "a few more left of the same sort."

Fruit-Trees.—Of this kind of tree not so great a variety is found as in many places, although the writer is happy in believing that there is an increasing interest being felt in this most important of agricultural pursuits,—that of raising fruit. The most common fruit is the apple. There is a fair assortment of them in the town, and the new orchards contain choice varieties, while the old and wild orchards have given way to the woodman's axe. Now the apple is a staple article of consumption, the consumers being more numerous than the producers, and people are looking more to the cultivation of all kinds than ever before. Choice varieties are engrafted upon the stumps of old trees, and were it not for the borers that eat the roots, canker-worms and caterpillars that eat the leaves and branches, we might look with delight upon as fine orchards as could be found in any place. These pests have destroyed the orchards, as grasshoppers have the nice fields of grass, and the ways and means of ridding the orchards of these plagues is not yet fully understood. Next to the apple comes the pear-tree, which does not appear to thrive as well in this town as in many others, the land not being well adapted for this kind of fruit, though of late many have been successful, and raised choice kinds.

Peaches are raised to a very limited extent, the climate not being adapted for the successful cultivation of this variety. The trees are said to be short-lived, and do not flourish.

Cherries do very well, and much is being done in this kind of small fruit, many varieties being cultivated. Of the native shrubs, we find the town has the usual variety,—such as the blueberry and huckleberry,—that affords employment for the boys and girls in a pleasant afternoon, and a source of pleasure to older persons, furnishing an agreeable repast when eaten with milk. Then we find the raspberry, gooseberry, and thimbleberry. Of the raspberries, there are the red and white, that grow wild, and are cultivated in gardens. Gooseberries of late years have become an article of much use, many new varieties having been introduced, the best of which is the English variety, that grow as large as shellbarks. Then we have the currant, an exceedingly useful article of culture, and easily raised, valuable for wine or table use. Of these we have also several varieties,—red, white, and black. Then comes that highly-esteemed and valuable luxury,—“a dish of ripe strawberries, smothered in cream.” These are found in many places growing wild in the pastures, and, although they are sweet and delicious, they are found so scarce that not much account is made of them. The cultivated fruit of this kind is a favorite dish, of which there is a great variety, among which are the “Hovey’s Seedlings,” “Early Virginia,” and “Boston Pine.” These are fast becoming an article of cultivation as much as the potato or corn, and large amounts are cultivated in the gardens and fields of this town. The first that were raised for market to any extent were those by Mr. B. F. Lawton, of the West Shares. Since then several have raised them with profit and sent them to market, among whom are C. H. Packard, at Campello, and Ira Copeland.

“Wife, into the garden, and set me a plot
With strawberry-roots of the best to be got:
Such growing abroad among thorns in the wood,
Well chosen and picked, prove excellent and good.”

TUSSEK.

Birds.—The birds common in this locality are the quail, partridge, snipe, woodpecker, woodcock, sparrow, thrush, robin, blue-bird, bobolink, wren, pewee, lark, king-bird, blue-jay, black-bird, chickadee, marten, barn- and bank-swallow, cat-bird, cuckoo, humming-bird, kingfisher, whip-poor-will, owl, hawk, crow, bats. Wild geese occasionally alight on the small ponds in the outskirts of the town.

“What songs with those of birds can vie,
From the goldfinch that on high
Swings its wee hammock in the sky?”

CANNING.

Fish.—Among the different kinds of fish that abound in our streams may be found the trout, pickerel, sucker, shiner, minnow, hornpout, eels, perch. Herrings in early days used to run up the rivers, but of late are seldom found.

Wild Animals.—The early forests in town had their share of vexatious animals that were common in this part of the country,—as wolves, wild-cat. Foxes have become shy of company. Skunk, musquash, and mink have been severely hunted. Woodchucks, rabbits, and squirrels of different kinds. Raccoons, that damaged the cornfields, have almost disappeared. Moles and meadow-mice are found in the fields, and often do much damage, gnawing bark off of trees in winter.

But the worst enemy the early settlers had to contend with among the beast kind was the wolf, which troubled the infant settlements exceedingly,—so much that shepherds were appointed over the flocks by day, and they were put in folds at night and securely guarded,—and even after the town became quite thickly settled these pests would make night hideous by their howling around the farms. Rewards were offered by the town for their heads, and wolf-traps were common in all parts of the town.

Geology.—The geological formation of Brockton is similar to many other towns in Plymouth County. The hills, meadows, large plains and intervalles, deep swamps and rocky pastures furnish food for almost all kinds of grass, trees, and shrubs. Of the rocky portions of the town we find sienite, or composition of feldspar, quartz, and hornblende. Says Dr. Hitchcock, in his survey through the State,—

“The most elegant variety of porphyritic sienite that I have met with in the State occurs in North Bridgewater and Abington, and in other parts of Plymouth County. Its base consists of quartz and feldspar, with an abundance of epidote, disseminated and in veins. This rock, if polished, would form, it seems to me, the most ornamental stone in the State. The feldspar, crystal, that constitutes it a porphyry, are of a flesh color. There is a dark-colored mineral diffused throughout the mass, which may be hornblende or mica."

In some sections of the town slaty formations exist to a slight extent, but of very little account.

Where mica is found plenty in the composition it is sometimes called sienite granite.

Large quantities of peat have been cut in the meadows of the town in past times, and it is now being used as a fuel, which is of an excellent quality.

Large quantities of iron ore have been found in the western and other sections of the town, and some has been manufactured into iron. It is not, however, plenty now, and the business of making it into iron ceased several years since.

Official History.—There are many who like to know who have had the management of public affairs both in town and State. To see a list of those having held positions of trust and confidence can hardly fail to be of interest to us as showing the estimate in which they were held by their fellow-citizens. To be a selectman, or "townsman," as they were sometimes called, was considered as being one of the "fathers of the town." The selectmen have nearly the control of the affairs of a town, and it is very common, even to this day, in town-meetings, "to refer the matter to the selectmen, with full powers," or to leave business at the discretion of the selectmen, with suggestions from the town. Hence the value that should be placed upon such officers, and the reason why none but men of good judgment and integrity should be selected. Anything and everything, not otherwise provided by law, in regard to town affairs, falls by custom to the care of the selectmen, and generally such men have been chosen.

SELECTMEN.

List of selectmen from the incorporation of the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton, to its incorporation as a city :

- Howard Cary, 1821, '22, '23, '24.
- Zachariah Gurney, 1821, '22, '23.
- Abel Kingman, 1821, '22, '23.
- Eliphalet Kingman, 1824, '25, '26, '27, '28.
- Ephraim Cole, Jr., 1824, '25, '26, '27, '28.
- John Packard, 1824, '25.
- Robert Packard, 1824.
- Caleb Howard, 1824.
- Jesse Perkins, 1826, '27, '28.
- Benjamin Kingman, 1829, '30, '31, '32, '33.
- Darius Howard, 1829, '30, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35.
- Nahum Perkins, 1829, '30, '31, '32, '33, '39, '40, '45.
- Linus Howard, 1834, '35.

- Lucius Kingman, 1834, '35.
- Albert Smith, 1836, '37, '38.
- Lorenzo Wade, 1836.
- Nathaniel H. Cross, 1836, '37.
- Isaac Eames, 1837, '39, '40, '50.
- Newton Shaw, 1840, '41, '42, '43, '44.
- Caleb Copeland, 1836, '40, '41, '42, '45.
- Josiah W. Kingman, 1838, '39, '40, '41, '58, '60, '61, '62, '63.
- Perez Marshall, 1842, '43, '43.
- Col. Nathan Jones, 1843, '44.
- George Clark, 1846, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '53, '54, '72.
- Bela Keith, 1845, '46, '47, '48, '51, '52, '53, '54.
- Frederick Howard, 1849.
- John Field, 1849.
- Marcus Packard, 1851, '52, '53.
- Ellis Packard, 1855, '59, '60, '61.
- William H. Cooper, 1855.
- Vinal Lyon, 1855.
- Franklin Ames, 1856, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63.
- Edwin H. Kingman, 1846, '47, '48, '56, '57.
- Franklin Keith, 1856, '57, '58.
- Nelson J. Foss, 1859, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '72.
- Isaac Kingman, 1850, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '77.
- Ruel Richmond, 1854.
- Nathan Packard (2d), 1862, '63.
- Jonas R. Perkins, 1864.
- Rufus L. Thatcher, 1864, '65, '66, '67.
- George Stevens, 1866.
- Jonathan White, 1868.
- Elbridge G. Ames, 1869.
- Henry A. Ford, 1870, '71, '73, '74, '75, '76, '79, '80, '81.
- Albert Keith, 1871.
- Welcome H. Wales, 1873, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78.
- Davis S. Packard, 1875, '76, '78.
- Simeon F. Packard, 1877.
- Henry Southworth, 1877.
- Sanford Winter, 1877.
- Henry B. Packard, 1878.
- Daniel Dunbar, 1878, '81.
- John J. Whipple, 1878.
- Henry H. Packard, 1879, '80, '81.
- William W. Cross, 1879, '80.
- Ziba C. Keith, 1879.
- Walter F. Cleaveland, 1879.
- William S. Green, 1880.
- Henry E. Lincoln, 1880, '81.
- Rufus P. Kingman, 1881.

ASSESSORS.

List of assessors<sup>1</sup> of the town of North Bridgewater and Brockton from 1875 to the date of its becoming a city, March 28, 1874 :

- Edward Crocker, 1875.
- Henry A. Ford, 1871, '75, '76.
- David S. Packard, 1875, '76, '78.
- Henry Southworth, 1876, '77.<sup>2</sup>
- Isaac Kingman, 1877.
- Simeon F. Packard, 1877, '79, '81.
- Frederic Howard, 1870.

<sup>1</sup> The selectmen have performed the duties of assessors and overseers of the poor from the incorporation of the town to 1875, at which date they became a distinct board of officers.

<sup>2</sup> Three assessors previous to 1877, then five were chosen.

Elisha H. Joslyn, 1877, '79.
 Henry E. Lincoln, 1878, '79, '80.
 L. F. Severance, 1878.
 Barnabas Snow, 1880.
 Albert Keith, 1880.
 William Rankin in 1880, '81.<sup>1</sup>
 Rufus C. Kimball, 1881.

TOWN CLERKS.

List of town clerks of North Bridgewater, now Brockton, from its incorporation to its incorporation as a city, with the years each has served:

Col. Edward Southworth, 1821, '22, '23, '24, '25, '26, '27, '28, '29.
 Jesse Perkins, 1830, '31, '32, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '38.
 Franklin Ames, 1839, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '53, '54.
 Horatio E. Payne, 1855, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61.
 Welcome H. Wales, 1862, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78.
 Henry A. Ford, 1879, '80, '81.

TREASURERS.

List of treasurers of the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton, from its incorporation to its incorporation into a city:

Col. Edward Southworth, 1821-29.
 Jesse Perkins, 1830-38.
 Franklin Ames, 1839-54.
 Francis M. French, 1855.
 Rufus P. Kingman, 1856-64.
 Oakes S. Soule, 1865-81.

MODERATORS.

Date of the annual town-meetings, and list of moderators from the incorporation of the town to the present time:

July 4, 1821. Joseph Sylvester.
 March 18, 1822. Joseph Sylvester.
 " 22, 1823. " "
 " 15, 1824. " "
 " 14, 1825. " "
 " 13, 1826. " "
 " 12, 1827. Ahel Kingman.
 " 10, 1828. Joseph Sylvester.
 " 9, 1829. " "
 " 8, 1830. Ahel Kingman.
 " 7, 1831. " "
 " 5, 1832. Joseph Sylvester.
 " 18, 1833. " "
 " 17, 1834. " "
 " 2, 1835. " "
 " 7, 1836. Nathan Jones.
 " 6, 1837. " "
 " 5, 1838. Joseph Sylvester.
 " 4, 1839. Nathan Jones.
 " 2, 1840. " "
 " 8, 1841. " "
 " 14, 1842. " "
 " 20, 1843. Jesse Perkins.
 " 18, 1844. " "
 " 17, 1845. " "

<sup>1</sup> Chosen to take the place of H. E. Lincoln.

March 16, 1846. Jesse Perkins.
 " 15, 1847. " "
 " 20, 1848. " "
 " 19, 1849. " "
 " 11, 1850. " "
 " 24, 1851. " "
 " 1, 1852. " "
 " 7, 1853. " "
 " 6, 1854. " "

April 2, 1855. W. H. Cooper.

March 24, 1856. George Clark.

" 30, 1857. " "
 " 22, 1858. " "
 " 29, 1859. " "
 " 12, 1860. W. H. Cooper.
 " 4, 1861. Rodolphus H. Williams.
 " 10, 1862. " "
 " 9, 1863. " "
 " 14, 1864. " "
 " 7, 1865. " "
 " 5, 1866. " "
 " 4, 1867. " "
 " 9, 1868. " "
 " 8, 1869. " "
 " 7, 1870. " "
 " 1, 1871. " "
 " 11, 1872. " "
 " 3, 1873. " "
 " 9, 1874. " "
 " 1, 1875. " "
 " 6, 1876. " "
 " 5, 1877. " "
 " 4, 1878. " "
 " 3, 1879. " "
 " 1, 1880. " "
 " 7, 1881. " "

ENGINEERS OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

List of engineers of the fire department since its organization, in 1846:

Benjamin Kingman, 1846, '47, '48. Darius Howard, 1854, '55, '56, '57, '60, '61.
 Edward Southworth, 1846, '47, '58. Lewis Fisher, 1855, '56, '57, '58, '59.
 Josiah W. Kingman, 1846, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '54. Nelson J. Foss, 1857, '58, '60, '61.
 Charles Lincoln, 1846, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59. Barnabas H. Gray, 1858, '59.
 Ruel Richmond, 1846, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '54. Chas. L. Hathaway, 1858, '59.
 Chandler Sprague, 1846, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '53. Daniel Dunbar, 1859.
 William S. Gay, 1846, '47, '48. Alpheus K. Harmon, 1860.
 Bela Keith, 1849, '50, '51, '52. Benjamin P. Lucas, 1861, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71.
 Benjamin G. Stoddard, 1849, '50, '51, '52. Chas. H. Hartwell, 1864, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71.
 Charles Howard, 1852, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59. William Stevens, 1866, '67, '68, '69, '70.
 Lorenzo D. Hervey, 1853, '54. H. D. Kendriok, 1871.
 Francis M. French, 1853, '55, '56, '57. E. L. Stevens, 1871.
 Aaron B. Drake, 1853, '54, '55, '56, '57. Nehemiah S. Holmes, 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, '78, '80, '81.
 Edwin H. Kingman, 1854.

Benjamin S. Clark, 1872, '73, '74.
 David R. Eldred, 1872, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81.
 Elisha Hollis, 1872.
 Charles E. Tribou, 1872.
 Josiah S. Lincoln, 1873, '74.
 Samuel Waterman, 1873, '74, '75, '76, '77.
 J. E. Hollis, 1873, '74.
 J. Lowell French, 1876, '77.
 Kenneth McLeod, 1876, '77, '78, '79.

William H. Jacobs, 1876, '77, '78, '79, '80.
 Henry A. Willis, 1876, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81.
 Zenas L. Marston, 1877, '78, '79, '80, 81.
 Charles Eaton, 1881.
 Solomon Leighton, 1875.
 R. B. Grover, 1875.
 Francis Goodwin, 1875.
 Uriah Macey, 1875.
 William S. Green, 1878.

COUNCILLORS.

Executive councilor from District No. 8:

Hon. Franklin Ames, 1859.

SENATORS.

State senators from North Bridgewater and Brockton:

Hon. Abel Kingman, 1836, '37.	Hon. Edward Crocker, 1868.
Hon. Jesse Perkins, 1841, '43.	Hon. Jonathan White, 1869, '77, '78.
Rev. Azariah B. Wheeler, 1857.	Hon. Henry W. Robinson, 1875, '76.
Hon. Edward Southworth, Jr., 1861.

REPRESENTATIVES TO THE GENERAL COURT.

List of representatives to the General Court from the town of North Bridgewater and Brockton from its incorporation to the time of its incorporation into a city:

Caleb Howard, 1822.	Rev. A. B. Wheeler, 1856.
Howard Cary, 1823, '24.	Rev. Paul Couch, 1857, '58.
Capt. John Packard, 1825.	Edward Southworth, Jr., 1859, '60.
Abel Kingman, 1828, '29, '30, '36, '37.	Lorenzo D. Hervey, 1861, '62.
Ephraim Cole, 1829, '30.	George B. Dunbar, 1863.
Rev. John Goldsbury, 1831.	Jonathan White, 1865.
Eliphalet Kingman, 1831.	Nelson J. Foss, 1864.
Lucius Kingman, 1834, '35.	Uriah Macey, 1866.
Albert Smith, 1838, '39.	C. C. Bixby, 1867.
Eliab Whitman, 1840, '41.	Welcome H. Wales, 1868, '70.
Benjamin Kingman, 1842, '43.	I. C. Lewis, 1869.
Daniel Huntington, 1844.	Loring Thayer, 1871, '72.
Henry French, 1845, '46.	Edward O. Noyes, 1872, '73.
Josiah W. Kingman, 1847, '48.	T. M. House, 1873.
Jesse Perkins, 1831, '33, '34, '35, '36, '37, '39, '40, '49, '51, '52.	Ziba C. Keith, 1874, '75.
No choice 1850.	Alfred Laws, 1875.
Nahum Perkins, 1853.	Henry E. Packard, 1877.
No choice 1854.	Baalis Sanford, Jr., 1877.
Lewis Fisher, 1855.	Alfred C. Monros, 1878, '79.
	Albert Keith, 1879, '80.
	Davis S. Packard, 1880, '81.

CORONERS.

Coroners in the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton:

Thomas Packard, Dec. 17, 1811.
 Thomas Wales, Jr., July 3, 1821.
 Benjamin A. Packard, Feb. 11, 1856.

NOTARIES PUBLIC.

Notaries public in the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton:

Jonas R. Perkins, Dec. 6, 1853.	Hamilton L. Gibbs, June 14, 1878.
George W. Bryant, May 10, 1854.	John J. Whipple, March 16, 1881.
Charles W. Sumner, June 27, 1874.	Loring W. Puffer, Jan. 20, 1882.
Charles D. Fullerton, May 9, 1876.	Ira A. Leach, April 28, 1882.

DEPUTIES AND SHERIFF.

Deputies sheriff resident in the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton:

Darius Howard, 1806-12.	Sumner A. Hayward, 1852, '53, '57, '59.
Benjamin Kingman, 1819-51, '54, '55.	Charles J. F. Packard, 1856-59.
Fiske Ames, 1815-22.	Otis Hayward, 1862-65.
Ahira S. Porter.	Henry S. Porter.
George A. Wheeler.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.<sup>1</sup>

List of justices of the peace, with the date of their commission, in the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton:

Nathaniel Reynolds, June 14, 1776.
 Barnabas Howard, March 14, 1782.
 Daniel Howard,* May 17, 1787.
 Daniel Howard (2d), June 19, 1790.
 Issachar Snell, March 11, 1791.
 Gideon Howard, July 4, 1803.
 Issachar Snell, Jr., March 5, 1804.
 Caleb Howard, Jan. 25, 1806.
 Howard Cary, July 10, 1807.
 Simeon Dunbar, Feb. 17, 1810.
 Abel Kingman, Feb. 22, 1811.
 Lemuel Packard, Feb. 25, 1812.
 Joseph Sylvester, Feb. 25, 1812.
 Eliab Whitman,*† July 3, 1816.
 Silas Packard, July 3, 1818.
 Edward Southworth, Feb. 1, 1819.
 Micah Packard, Aug. 20, 1823.
 Jonathan Snow, Jan. 7, 1824.
 Eliphalet Kingman, March 1, 1827.
 Linus Howard, Aug. 27, 1829.
 George Clark, June 25, 1830.
 Jesse Perkins,*† June 16, 1831.
 Austin Packard,†† Sept. 29, 1835.
 Bela Keith, July 7, 1837.
 Franklin Ames,*†‡ March 31, 1842.
 Isaac Eames, June 20, 1843.
 Perez Crocker, June 20, 1843.
 George W. Bryant,†† March 31, 1846.
 Isaac Kingman, Oct. 13, 1847.
 Jonathan White,*‡ March 19, 1851.
 Edwin H. Kingman, March 26, 1851.
 Perez Marshall, April 25, 1851.
 Jonas R. Perkins,†† Nov. 20, 1852.

<sup>1</sup> Those marked with * are of the Quorum; those marked with † are trial justices; those marked with ‡ are justices throughout the commonwealth. All others are county appointments.

Charles Lincoln, Feb. 9, 1855.
 Francis M. French, Feb. 9, 1855.
 Hiram Jernegan, Oct. 1, 1855.
 Dennis Snow, Feb. 11, 1856.
 Rufus L. Thatcher, † Feb. 9, 1857.
 Manley Packard, March 24, 1857.
 Nathan Jones, March 24, 1857.
 Ellis Packard, March 24, 1857.
 Cornelius H. Dunham, March 24, 1857.
 Willard Keith, Oct. 29, 1857.
 Franklin Keith, Feb. 15, 1858.
 William H. Cooper, March 10, 1858.
 Horatio E. Payne, Jan. 26, 1858.
 Loring W. Puffer, Feb. 8, 1859.
 Algernon S. Sylvester, Feb. 15, 1859.
 Edward Southworth, Jr., March 29, 1859.
 Chandler Sprague, Nov. 23, 1859.
 Galen E. Pratt, Jan. 2, 1860.
 Daniel Crocker, April 30, 1860.
 Sumner A. Hayward, Nov. 27, 1860.
 Isaac E. Soell, Feb. 6, 1861.
 Arza B. Keith, Feb. 19, 1861.
 Charles Gurney, Feb. 26, 1861.
 Nelson J. Foss, May 17, 1861.
 Ellis W. Morton, Jan. 13, 1862.
 David L. Cowell, Dec. 31, 1862.
 William Perry, Jan. 30, 1863.
 Josiah W. Kingman, Jan. 14, 1864.
 Bradford Kingman, ‡ Jan. 22, 1864.
 A. T. Jones, July 31, 1867.
 F. C. Blanchard, Mar. 4, 1870.
 John Le Roy Morgan, Sept. 23, 1871.
 Charles C. Bixby, Feb. 1, 1871.
 R. P. Kingman, Feb. 27, 1873.
 A. C. Monroe, April 22, 1873.
 W. W. Wilkins, April 23, 1873.
 J. J. Whipple, July 1, 1873.
 Albert Keith, Feb. 13, 1874.
 William M. Thompson, Dec. 18, 1874.
 F. Howard, Feb. 16, 1875.
 C. D. Fullerton, Jan. 29, 1875.
 H. A. Ford, March 19, 1875.
 De Witt Clinton Packard, May 14, 1875.
 H. L. Gibbs, Dec. 27, 1875.
 F. M. Wilkins, June 22, 1876.
 S. F. Packard, July 29, 1876.
 George Farwell, July 14, 1877.
 Alfred Laws, Oct. 18, 1877.
 Loyed E. Chamberlain, Nov. 12, 1877.
 Eliot L. Packard, Jan. 9, 1877.
 John Cronin, Nov. 16, 1878.
 C. W. Turner, March 15, 1879.
 Ira A. Leach, April 1, 1879.
 Daniel Dunbar, June 14, 1879.
 P. B. Keith, Jan. 20, 1879.
 John D. Fiske, Sept. 3, 1880.
 T. E. Gifford, Nov. 10, 1880.
 David H. Gibbs, Jan. 20, 1881.
 F. B. Washburn, Mar. 10, 1881.
 H. H. Packard, Mar. 28, 1881.
 B. Sanford, Jr., Dec. 27, 1881.
 C. D. Fullerton, Jan. 28, 1882.
 S. P. Howard, March 25, 1882.
 Ziba C. Keith, May 5, 1882.
 F. E. White, Dec. 13, 1882.
 F. B. Gardner, Feb. 15, 1882.

E. C. Packard, April 1, 1884.

F. M. Bixby, April 21, 1884.

NUMBER OF VOTES POLLED FOR GOVERNOR.

Votes for Governor since the incorporation of the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton, in June, 1821:

1822. William Eustis..... 165	1848. George N. Briggs... 315
John Brooks..... 38	Stephen C. Phillips... 298
1823. William Eustis..... 211	Caleb Cushing..... 67
Harrison G. Otis.... 28	1849. George N. Briggs... 328
1824. William Eustis..... 220	Stephen C. Phillips... 226
Samuel Lothrop..... 34	George S. Boutwell... 98
1825. Levi Lincoln..... 184	1850. George N. Briggs... 324
Marcus Morton..... 3	Stephen C. Phillips... 309
1826. Levi Lincoln..... 213	George S. Boutwell... 84
Samuel Hubbard... 2	1851. Robt. C. Winthrop... 381
1827. Levi Lincoln..... 124	John G. Palfrey..... 315
William C. Jarvis... 3	George S. Boutwell... 123
1828. Levi Lincoln..... 140	1852. Horace Mann..... 374
Marcus Morton..... 3	John H. Clifford..... 355
1829. Levi Lincoln..... 190	Henry W. Bishop... 98
Marcus Morton..... 4	1853. Emery Washburn... 347
1830. Levi Lincoln..... 169	Henry Wilson..... 305
Marcus Morton..... 6	Henry W. Bishop... 90
1831. Levi Lincoln..... 245	Bradford L. Wales... 50
Marcus Morton..... 7	1854. Henry J. Gardner... 537
1831. <sup>1</sup> Levi Lincoln..... 125	Emery Washburn... 97
Samuel Lothrop.... 66	Henry Wilson..... 52
Marcus Morton..... 6	Henry W. Bishop... 51
1832. Levi Lincoln..... 121	1855. Julius Rockwell... 270
Samuel Lothrop.... 100	Henry J. Gardner... 265
Marcus Morton..... 15	Erastus D. Beach... 207
1833. John Q. Adams..... 209	1856. Henry J. Gardner... 668
John Davis..... 61	George W. Gordon... 36
Marcus Morton..... 29	Erastus D. Beach... 217
1834. John Bailey..... 128	Luther V. Bell..... 43
John Davis..... 108	1857. N. P. Banks..... 368
Marcus Morton..... 29	Henry J. Gardner... 197
1835. Edward Everett..... 214	Erastus D. Beach... 182
Marcus Morton..... 77	1858. N. P. Banks..... 434
1836. Marcus Morton..... 157	E. D. Beach..... 184
Edward Everett..... 144	Amos A. Lawrence... 27
1837. Edward Everett..... 280	1859. N. P. Banks..... 325
Marcus Morton..... 151	B. F. Butler..... 156
1838. Edward Everett..... 228	George N. Briggs... 40
Marcus Morton..... 149	1860. John A. Andrew... 677
1839. Edward Everett..... 293	Erastus D. Beach... 193
Marcus Morton..... 179	Amos A. Lawrence... 103
1840. John Davis..... 400	1861. John A. Andrew... 358
Marcus Morton..... 180	Isaac Davis..... 162
1841. John Davis..... 383	1862. John A. Andrew... 596
Marcus Morton..... 178	Charles Devens, Jr. 230
1842. John Davis..... 358	1863. John A. Andrew... 579
Marcus Morton..... 184	Henry W. Paine... 56
Samuel E. Sewall... 31	1864. John A. Andrew... 733
1843. George N. Briggs... 323	Henry W. Paine... 193
Marcus Morton..... 187	1865. Alex. H. Bullock... 608
Samuel E. Sewall... 37	Darius N. Couch... 94
1844. George N. Briggs... 385	Benj. F. Butler..... 1
George Bancroft... 140	George N. Briggs... 1
Samuel E. Sewall... 80	1866. Alex. H. Bullock... 811
1845. George N. Briggs... 325	Theo. H. Swetzer... 146
Isaac Davis..... 138	1867. Alex. H. Bullock... 782
Samuel E. Sewall... 68	John Q. Adams..... 398
1846. George N. Briggs... 293	1868. William Claflin... 869
Isaac Davis..... 121	John Q. Adams..... 259
Samuel E. Sewall... 66	1869. William Claflin... 519
1847. George N. Briggs... 290	E. M. Chamberlain... 284
Caleb Cushing..... 136	John Q. Adams..... 139
John M. Brewster... 64	1870. William Claflin... 607

<sup>1</sup> Owing to an amendment in the Constitution there were two elections in 1831, which required the Governor to be chosen in November instead of April, and to take his seat on the first Wednesday of January instead of the last of May. The reader will therefore understand that, from 1832 those who were elected in November are chosen for the following year.

1870. Wendell Phillips.... 245	1876. John I. Baker..... 249
John Q. Adams..... 162	1877. Alexander H. Rice. 663
1871. Wm. B. Washburn... 576	William Gaston..... 368
John Q. Adams..... 226	Robert C. Pitman... 162
Robert C. Pitman... 95	Wendell Phillips.... 1
E. M. Chamberlain. 21	1878. Thomas Talbot.....1167
1872. Wm. B. Washburn.1067	Benj. F. Butler..... 888
Francis W. Bird.... 276	John G. Abbott..... 24
William Jones..... 13	Alonzo A. Miner.... 24
1873. Wm. B. Washburn. 778	1879. John D. Long.....1094
William Gaston..... 184	Benj. F. Butler..... 944
Benj. F. Butler..... 4	John Q. Adams..... 68
1874. Thomas Talbot..... 663	Daniel C. Eddy..... 45
William Gaston..... 463	1880. John D. Long.....1589
Israel W. Andrews. 6	Chas. P. Thompson. 946
1875. Alexander H. Rice. 561	Charles Almy..... '18
William Gaston..... 429	Horace B. Sargent.. 28
John I. Baker..... 193	1881. John D. Long..... 615
Charles F. Adams.. 8	Chas. P. Thompson. 268
Wendell Phillips... 8	Charles Almy..... 69
1876. Alexander H. Rice.1117	Israel W. Andrews. 148
Charles F. Adams... 606

Votes for Governor in the City of Brockton.

1882. Benj. F. Butler..... 1468	1883. Geo. D. Robinson. 1870
Robert R. Bishop.. 1263	Benj. F. Butler..... 1797
Charles Almy..... 38	Charles Almy..... 47

The following list of Governors of the State will show when North Bridgewater (now Brockton) acted with a majority of the people of the commonwealth :

John Brooks, 1816-22.	Nathaniel P. Banks, 1858-60.
William Eustis, 1823-24.	John A. Andrew, 1861-65.
Levi Lincoln, 1825-33.	Alexander H. Bullock, 1866-69.
John Davis, 1834-35.	William Clafin, 1869-72.
Edward Everett, 1836-39.	William B. Washburn, 1872-74.
Marcus Morton, 1840.	William Gaston, 1875-76.
John Davis, 1841-42.	Alexander H. Rice, 1876-79.
Marcus Morton, 1843.	Thomas Talbot, 1879-80.
George N. Briggs, 1844-50.	John D. Long, 1880-82.
George S. Boutwell, 1851-52.	Benjamin F. Butler, 1883.
John H. Clifford, 1853.	George D. Robinson, 1884.
Emery Washburn, 1854.
Henry J. Gardner, 1855-57.

CHAPTER IV.

First Meeting-House in the North Parish—Its Appearance—Second House—Description—Sale of Pews—First Bell—Seating of Colored People—Third Meeting-House—Pew-Holders—Clock—First Stoves—Erection of the Fourth Meeting-House in 1854—Dedication—Description of the Same—Sale of Pews.

Meeting-Houses of the First Congregational Parish.—The first meeting-house in the North Parish was built in 1737, on or near the spot where the present edifice now stands. The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Dunbar, of Stoughton, from Solomon's Song viii. 8: "We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for?"

From the best information gained, it was a small, plain structure, in keeping with the times, facing south, without steeple, bell, or chimney; the windows had diamond-shaped glass, walls plastered, but not warmed by stove or furnace.

"Our meeting-house,—our meeting-house,—

It stood upon a hill,
Where autumn gales and wintry blasts
Piped round it loud and shrill.
No maple-tree with leafy shade,
Nor tall, protecting oak,
Stood near to guard the ancient house
When tempest round it broke.

"No steeple graced its homely roof

With upward-pointing spire,—

Our villagers were much too meek

A steeple to desire,—

And never did the welcome tones

Of Sabbath-morning bell

Our humble village worshippers

The hour of worship tell."

To this place the people of the parish gathered from Sabbath to Sabbath, with commendable regularity, on horseback or on foot. They "kept the Sabbath and revered the Sanctuary."

At the time of the incorporation of the parish the house was "Erected and Inclosed," but not finished. At a meeting held March 12, 1739, "Timothy Keith, Benjamin Edson, David Packard, Daniel Howard, Edward Curtis, were chosen a committee for the finishing of the meeting-house in s<sup>d</sup> Precinct;" also "voted to raise two Hundred and fifty pounds for the finishing of the same, to be paid by the last of August;" chose Abiel Packard "Receiver of stuf and meterels." March 26, 1739:

"The committee appointed to finish the meeting-house made demand of the several inhabitants how they would pay their Reats, or what they would percuere towards the prosecution of the work of finishing the meeting-house. In order to pay their Raits Where upon a number subscribed what they would percuere, as first:

"James Packard to do the Glazing of the House, and what it amounts to more than his Reats Come to, to take his pay at the forge, In Iron ore or Cole next fall Insewing. John Johnson and John Kingman to do the masing work and nails, and to take his pay over and Abuv his Raits at the fornes or forge, In Labour, or Cole, or Iron ore the next fall Insewing. David Packard, Solomon Packard, and Jacob Allen to find Lime.

"Robert Haward, to find one thousand of pine Bords.

"Zacheus Packard, to find one thousand of oak Bords.

"Solomon Packard, to find one thousand of pine Bords.

"Benjamin Edson, to find one thousand of pine Bords.

"Abiel Packard, to find one thousand of pine Bords.

"Timothy Keith, to find one thousand of oak Bords.

"Daniel Haward, to find one thousand of pine Bords.

"Theofilus Curtis, to find five hundred of pine Bords.

"Edward Curtis, to find five hundred of pine Bords.

"James Barret, to find one thousand of pine Bords.

"Josbua Warren, to find Henges; Timothy Keith, David Packard, Solomon Packard, Jacob Allen, Benjamin Edson, Daniel Haward, to find all the sheet work."

The above offers were accepted, by vote of the meeting, in "lue of money so far as shall pay their Raits." Oct. 8, 1739, "Voted to sell roome for pews in the meeting-house." Dec. 10, 1739, "Voted to sell room for pews in order to Raise money to buy a Cushing."<sup>1</sup> Jan. 15, 1740, "Voted to chuse three men to set a prise upon the pews to be Gin to Bid at, so that no man should Beed below the prise thay should set, maid choise of James Packard, Abiel Packard, and Isaac Kingman for the same." Jan. 21, 1740, "Meeting was held to-day," and "voted to sell the pews to the highest bidder." "John Kingman, vendue-master, who seet up the first pew ou the west side of the pulpit to be sold to the highest Beder, and so all the Rest Suckseveley Round the meetin-house to the Number of 13 pews."

	£	s.	d.
"Voted, that John Kingman shuld have the first pew, It being five feet Two inches front and five feet Three inches deep, for (he being the highest Beder) .....	17	05	0
Voted, that Daniel Haward should have the Seekond pew, It being 5 ft. 2 inches front and 5 feet 2 inches deep, for.....	13	00	0
Voted, that Charles Snell should have the Thurd pew, It being 7 ft. 8 inches front and 4 ft. 6 inches deep, for.....	14	10	0
Voted, that John Johnson should have the Forth pew, It being 6 ft. 10 inches front and 4 ft. 6 inches deep, for.....	13	00	0
Voted, that Jabez Field should have the Fifth pew, It being 7 ft. 9 inches front and 4 ft. and 6 inches deep, for.....	12	10	0
Voted, that Walter Downe should have the sixth pew, It being 6 ft. and 10 inches front and 4 ft. 7 inches deep, for.....	5	00	0
Voted, that James Packard should have the Seventh pew, It being 7 ft. 3 inches front and 4 ft. 7 inches deep, for.....	23	00	0
Voted, that Nathan Keith should have the Eighth pew, It being 7 ft. 3 inches front and 4 ft. 7 inches deep, for.....	28	15	0
Voted, that Weddow Ledah Packard should have the ninth pew, It being 6 ft. 10 inches front and 4 ft. 7 inches deep, for..... (No amount given.)
Voted, that Zachriah Snell should have the tenth pew, It being 7 ft. 9 inches front and 4 ft. 6 inches deep, for.....	16	15	0
Voted, that Abiel Packard should have the Eleventh pew, It being 7 ft. 9 inches front and 4 ft. 6 inches deep, for.....	15	00	0
Voted, that David Packard should have the twelfth pew, It being 7 ft. 10 inches front and 4 ft. 6 inches deep, for.....	23	05	0
Voted, that Robert Haward should have the thirteenth pew, It being 6 ft. 9 inches front and 5 ft. 6 inches deep, for.....	27	00	0"

Robert Haward was chosen "receiver of the Bonds," given for the pews.

List of charges given in to the precinct for building the new meeting-house.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
John Packard.....	55	19	0	Theofilus Curtis.....	05	13	8
Abiel Packard.....	24	15	0	Solomon Packard.....	12	00	0
Weddow Ledah Packard.....	15	09	6	Benjamin Edson.....	04	11	0
Zacheus Packard.....	11	09	0	Timothy Keith.....	07	00	0
Jacob Allen.....	10	01	0	David Packard.....	53	12	0
Joshua Warren.....	07	16	0	John Kingman.....	05	06	5
James Barret.....	08	02	6	Josiah Snell.....	16	00	0
John Johnson.....	39	15	9	Mr. Barnabas Pratt..	08	02	0
Daniel Howard.....	11	00	6	Zachariah Saell.....	00	15	0
Robert Howard.....	8	00	0	John Colly.....	06	06	0
Elezer Washburn.....	74	17	0	Total.....	386	11	4

<sup>1</sup> Probably this was for the pulpit.

"January 12, 1741. 'Voted that John Colly should have Thirty-five shillings for sweeping the meeting-house the year Insuing.' March 23, 1742, Abiel Packard to sweep the meeting-house the present year for 35 shillings.

"March 28, 1743. John Coly to have 40 shillings for sweeping the meeting-house this year coming.

"June 6, 1743. A meeting was held 'to see whether the precinct would vote to Buld Seats In the Galiryes, aod it was voted in the negative.' It was then put to vote to see whether the precinct would 'sell Roome over the stairs and behind the front Galiry next to the wall for pews and it was voted in the Affirmative."

From the above it appears that the house had galleries put up, but not finished. The usual practice in building churches in early times was to finish the inside and sell "pew-room" or sections, which each purchaser would finish to suit himself. Hence we frequently find votes in the records as follows:

June 20, 1743. "It was put to vote by the moderator of the meeting to see whether the precioct would vote to sell fore pews Behind the front Galary, and over the Stayers at a publick vandue to the highest Beder. The Demenshions of s<sup>d</sup> Pews are as followeth: 'over the women's Stairs 6 feet front and five feet and half deep. Behind women's front Galary, 8 feet front and five feet deep. Behind men's front Galary six feet and a half front, and five feet deep, over the men's stairs six feet front, and five and a half deep, allowing Covenant Roome to pase up aod down the stairs.' Voted in the affirmative."

"The pew over the men's stairs was seet up by the moderator to sail and Timothy Keith Beding two pounds and ten shillings upon s<sup>d</sup> pew, It was struck off to him, he being the highest Beder."

"The pew over the women's stairs was bid off by Daniel Howard, he Beding two pounds and ten shillings on s<sup>d</sup> pew."

"The pew Behind the men's front galary was seet up, and Simeon Brett Beding twenty-seven pounds upon s<sup>d</sup> pew, It was struck off to him."

"The pew behind the women's front galary was set up by the moderator to sail, and Constant Southworth Beding twenty pounds and five shillings upon s<sup>d</sup> pew, It was struck off to him, he being the highest Beder."

Abiel Packard, Robert Haward, and Zachariah Snell were a committee to give confirmation to the above "sail of pews."

Sept. 3, 1744. "Voted to buld two seats in each side Gallery."

The first thing to be done after building a church in early times was to "seet the peopel" and provide a pew for the minister.

Sept. 3, 1744. We find "Jabez Field & charge voted for Building Mr. Porter's pew, £3 10 shillings."

June 28, 1746. It was put to vote "to see If the Precinct would vote to finish the meeting-house this year, and it was voted in the affirmative."

"Voted, that James Packard, Henry Kingman, and Jabez Field be a committee to see the meeting-house be finished."

What the effect of the above vote was we find no record, and are left to judge that it was never carried into effect, as appears by the following record, aiming at the same thing, namely,—to have the "meeting-house" completed.

Aug. 15, 1748. "Voted that Abiel Packard, Constant Southworth, and Samuel Brett be a committee to finish the meeting-house the present year."

The following persons were supposed to have worked upon the house in the completion of the same, as it appears March 27, 1749. The following sums were voted to be paid: To Samuel Brett, for work "Don In the meeting-House," £6 7s. To Luke Perkins, £1 10s. March 29, 1750, "money voted to Simeon Cary for Labour Don abought the Meeting-House, to be Drawed out of the Treasury, £8 1 4." "Voted to Archabiel Robson for Bannisters for the Meeting-House £4 10 shillings Lawfull Money."

At a meeting held Sept. 27, 1756, it was "voted that the Petition between the men and women's frount Gallery Shuld be bult up a gain where it first stood. Also voted that the Rume on the women's side of the Petition should be for the women."

By the above votes we see the custom prevailed of keeping the men and women in separate pews, and have no doubt the work was completed, and that they were kept in their proper places, for we find Barnabas Pratt was allowed £3 8s. for putting up a "petition" between the "Gallereyes and the Hind Seets."

At a meeting of the precinct held Dec. 4, 1758, "voted that the committee provide an Iron Latch and Bolt for the South Dore of the meeting-house."

Second Meeting-House.—The subject of building a new church, or of enlarging the old one, was talked of in 1760, and a meeting called to see what the precinct would do, which was held Dec. 1, 1760:

"To see if the Precinct will vote to enlarge the Meeting-House by splitting of It In tow, or making an addition to it, or both, and also to See if any person or persons will under-take the Doing of it for the Rume In the addition that shall be maid to the meeting-house, and in case the Precinct should not vote to Inlarge the meeting-house, then to see if the Precinct will vote to Buld a new Meeting-House, and when and where it shall be set, and of what Bigness it shall be bult." The vote was first put "to see if the Precinct would build a new House, which was voted in the negative." "Then to see if the Precinct would vote to Inlarge the Meeting-House by splitting of it. Voted in the negative."

Thus things remained for over a year, when the subject was again brought up at a meeting held Dec. 29, 1761, at ten o'clock A.M., "To see what sum of money can be raised towards the Bulding a new Meeting-House. In the North Precinct of Bridgewater, by selling the pew Rome to the Highest Beders. In a Meeting-House of the same Demen-shons of the South Meeting-House, in Bridgewater, the number of them and the Setuation and Begness may be seen by a plan that will be Provided in said meeting on said day." "Voted that Capt. Simeon Cary should be marster of the vandue to sell the pews to the Hiest Beders;" and also "voted that the pew on the Right Hand of the pulpet-stairs shuld be for the use of the menestry In said Precinct;" and it was further "voted that Every person that had a pew struck of to him by the vandue-master shuld pay Down a Dolor, as Enerst for his pew."

"The master of the vandue chose by the precinct then proseded to the sail of the Pews to the Number of 47, on the flore of the Meeting-House." The number, names, and price of each being as follows:

Pew No.	Name	£	s.	d.
1.	Ebeuezer Snell.....	18	16	0
"	2. Ebcnezer Packard.....	16	18	8
"	3. Nehemiah Lincoln.....	15	9	4
"	4. Zachariah Gurney, Jr.....	10	10	8
"	5. Issachar Snell.....	14	2	8
"	6. Daniel Manley and Ephraim Cole.....	17	17	4
"	7. Elisha Gurney.....	17	12	0
"	8. Josiah Packard.....	18	0	0
"	9. Matthew Kingman.....	18	10	8
"	10. Simeon Brett.....	13	12	0
"	11. Abiezer Packard.....	17	6	8
"	12. Thomas Thompson.....	16	0	0
"	13. Isaac Packard.....	21	12	0
"	14. Barnabas Howard.....	18	13	4
"	15. Alexander Kingman.....	17	6	8
"	16. Adam Howard and Zebedee Snell.....	22	0	0
"	17. Nathaniel Southworth.....	14	8	0
"	18. Josiah Hayden.....	18	13	4
"	19. Abia Keith.....	22	5	4
"	20. Daniel Ames.....	16	16	0
"	21. William Packard.....	14	13	4
"	22. Abia Packard.....	14	2	8
"	23. Simeon Cary.....	15	9	4
"	24. Jonathan Cary.....	15	1	4
"	25. Thomas Packard.....	14	18	8
"	26. John Howard.....	14	16	0
"	27. Jacob Packard.....	no account
"	28. Barnabas Pratt.....	13	6	8
"	29. Robert Howard.....	18	16	0
"	30. Charles Snell.....	18	16	0
"	31. Thomas Reynolds.....	20	13	4
"	32. Zachariah Cary.....	16	0	0
"	33. Samuel Brett.....	14	16	0
"	34. Benjamin Ames and Nathaniel Linfield.....	14	18	8
"	35. Reuben Packard.....	14	13	4
"	36. Issachar Snell.....	32	2	8
"	37. Joseph Richards.....	18	13	4
"	38. Daniel Richards.....	24	16	0
"	39. Robert Thompson.....	15	14	8
"	40. Barnabas Packard.....	16	2	8
"	41. Abel Packard.....	23	12	0
"	42. David Packard.....	18	16	0
"	43. Ensign Henry Kingman.....	14	18	8
"	44. Capt. Lemuel Dunbar.....	14	16	0
"	45. Jabez Field.....	13	6	8
"	46. Seth Harris.....	14	16	0
"	47. Eliphalet Philips.....	16	0	0

After the sale of the above pews "the Precinct aGorned the meeting to Monday the forth Day of Jenuary, at twelve o'ck, M." "Agreeably to agornment the precinct gathered together, and the vandue-master, chosen by the precinct for the sail of the pews, proseded and made sail of sixteen pews In the front Gallery," the number, names, and prices of which were as follows, namely :

Pew No.	Name	£	s.	d.
1.	Isaac Fuller.....	20	13	4
"	2. Issachar Snell.....	20	8	0
"	3. Luke Perkins.....	26	13	4
"	4. Issachar Snell.....	21	2	6
"	5. Issachar Snell.....	24	5	4
"	6. Jonathan Hayden.....	14	8	0
"	7. William Edson.....	14	5	4
"	8. Barnabas Howard and Jabez Field.....	18	8	0
"	9. Joshua Packard.....	13	17	4
"	10. Jacob Packard.....	29	17	4
"	11. Nathan Packard and Simeon Packard...	10	0	0
"	12. William Shaw.....	10	16	0
"	13. Josiah Perkins.....	9	9	4
"	14. Dependence French and Theophilus Curtis, Jr.....	12	13	4
"	15. Levi French and Isaac Brett.....	12	8	0
"	16. Dr. Phillip Bryant and Seth Bryant.....	12	2	8

Description of the New House.—Jan. 5, 1762.

"Voted to Buld a meeting house of the same demenshous of the South meeting-house In Bridgewater, excepting two side Gallary to be bult in seets;" also "voted to Buld the meeting-House the next summer, within twelve month from the aforesaid Date hereof;" and "voted that all the posts of the Body of the meeting-House shuld be sawed and the house faced South." Robert Haward, Capt. Simeon Cary, and Mr. Abia Keith were chosen a committee for "prosicuting the Bulding the meeting-House in the North Precinct." "Voted that the house shuld be Shilingled with sedar shingles."

Monday, Nov. 8, 1762. "A meeting was called to see if the precinct will vote to Buld a Belfree to the meeting-house," and it was voted to "Build one over the East Dore," also "voted to Buld a porch over the west Dore, and to sell the stairways for pews to the highest Beder." It seems nothing had been done towards forwarding the building of the "Belfree" in January, as another meeting was called to meet January 17th, "to see if the precinct will vote to buld the Belfree, and spire, already voted to be built, provided it can be don by subscription, and without taxing the precinct," which was voted in the affirmative; also "voted that the Belfry should be twelve feet square, and eighty-five feet high from the grown." Capt. Simeon Cary, Isaac Packard, and Barnabas Howard were chosen a committee to "Buld" the same. In the spring of 1762 the building was commenced. The frame was raised in June, 1763, and in December of the same year the house was completed and dedicated to the worship of God the last week of that month. Rev. Mr. Dunbar preached the sermon in the forenoon of the day of dedication, from the text, Isaiah lx. 7: "I will glorify the house of my glory." Rev. John Angier, of the East Parish, preached a sermon in the afternoon from the text, Psalms cxii. 1: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." The first sermon preached in the new meeting-house by Rev. Mr. Porter was from text, Haggai ii. 9: "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than the former." The carpenters that performed the carpenter-work upon this house were Deacon Jonathan Cary, Benjamin Packard, Micah Packard, Seth Packard, Barnabas Pratt, Thomas Pratt, Job Bryant, Gamaliel Bryant, Samuel Hayden, Phinchas Paine, Jeremiah Beals. Col. Josiah Hayden was the master-workman of the inside of the house. Col. Simeon Cary, who was one of the building committee, was master of the outside of the house. Col. Hayden also built the pulpit and sounding-board. All of the above mechanics belonged in the town.

We have already seen that the precinct voted to have a steeple built by subscription, but for some reason which does not appear on record it was not all paid in. For this purpose the pew back of the "Deekon seet" was put up for "sail" to help pay the committee that built it what expense had been incurred. May 17, 1764, "Voted to sell the old meeting-house for the use of the precinct in jenerail."

"Alas! there came a luckless day,
Our meeting-house grew old,—
The paint was worn, the shingles loose;
In winter it was too cold.
"They called it an old-fashioned thing,
And said it must be sold."

First Bell.—Also voted the same day to "Geet a Bell for the New Meeting House, not exceeding six hundred Wate." Daniel Howard, Esq., Capt. Abiel Packard, and Lieut. Henry Kingman were chosen a committee to purchase the same. Oct. 24, 1765, "Voted to Build stairs to the Belfree." It seems the bell of the new meeting-house became broken from some cause, and at a meeting held Oct. 10, 1768, to see if the precinct would vote to mend the bell, voted in the affirmative, also "voted that Lieut. Henry Kingman should geet it mended." We presume that the bell was past mending, as we afterwards find, Dec. 11, 1769, a vote "to geet a new Bell of Seven hundred wate. Lieut. Henry Kingman, Col. Simeon Cary, and Capt. Isaac Packard were appointed a committee to go and agree with Mr. Hubbard, for the making and taking down of the old Bell and hanging the new one." Jan. 11, 1770, "Voted to Imploy Mr. Aaron Huburd and Mr. Gellomer to new Run the Bell, and that it shall be of Seven hundred wate." In the early part of 1772, a number of persons became "larned" in the rules of "musick" under Mr. Billings, and asked that seats might be assigned to them in the south part of the women's gallery. This request was complied with as follows: Nov. 30, 1772, "Voted to the singers the South part of the women's Gallery During pleasure." We find this produced some dissatisfaction, and efforts were made to restore the seats back to the women. Various meetings were called until, April 8, 1773, a special meeting being called, the question was put by the moderator to see if the precinct will vote to restore the Southerly part of the womens gallery to the womens use again." It was "voted in the negative." April 3, 1775, The above vote was reconsidered, and a vote passed "allowing the north part of the womens seats During the pleasure of the Parish," also "voted to build a pair of stairs in the Belfree." Dec. 11, 1788, "Voted to sell the Deef Seet." Also "voted to sell the two hind seats each side of the Broad alley." Now the parish begin to think that some repairs are needed, and a committee of three were chosen to report what repairs were necessary. Job Bryant, Moses Cary, and Jeremiah Beals were that committee, who reported the following to be done: "new sett the Glass in putty, paint the Door, windows, and walls, and the platform of the Belfree be covered with Led." Voted "that the window frames and sashes be painted white."

Seats for Colored People.—March 19, 1789. "Voted to build a porch provided it can be Don without expense to the parish, and also to put seats in the porch and Belfree for the negroes, and sell the room where the stairs and negro pew now are." Thus we see that in this year the negroes were to sit in the loft provided on purpose, which created no little feeling on the part of the colored population.

March 4, 1795. "Voted to shingel the Meeting House the front side, to be completed by the 15 of Sept."

In the year 1800 we again find a disagreement between the colored people attending worship and sitting in the same seat with the white people, which very much annoyed some of them, and to remedy this trouble a meeting was held August 4th, "To see what measures the Parish will take to prevent the blacks from occupying the seats appropriated to the use of the white people, so as to prevent any disturbance in time of Public worshipe," at which time it was "Voted that the side galleries and the seats in the Body of the meeting house be appropriated to the use of the white people, and the seats in the porch above to the use of the blacks."

Jan. 19, 1801, "Voted to erect seats in the front gallery for the singers, in front of the front pews," and "voted that they be erected in a surkerler forme."

April 30, 1801, "Voted to paint the inside work that has heretofore been painted, to be under the direction of the Parish Committee." Early in the year 1805, the people of the parish, wishing to improve the looks of their house of worship, called a meeting, which was held March 11, 1805, "To see if the Parish will repair the meeting Hous, and what repairs they will make the year insuing." At this meeting a committee of nine was chosen to view the house and report at the adjournment of the meeting. This committee consisted of the following persons: Capt. Abel Kingman, Capt. Howard Cary, Maj. Caleb Howard, Jeremiah Beal, Jesse Perkins, Gideon Howard, Esq., Perez Southworth, Silas Packard, Daniel Packard. This committee report "that it was necessary to make new the wast bords and water table from the north east corner of the meeting hous, and on the South side, to the South side of the Porch door, that as many of the sashes as are defective should be made new, and such repairs on the doors as shall be found necessary; that the bell fraim, banisters, &c., be made new, and all the trimmings together with the spire be painted, that the body of the house together with the rouff be painted." A committee of five were appointed to select a color for painting, who reported "white, oue shade on the yallow." Moses Cary, Jonathan Beals, and John Wales were chosen a committee to carry the above repairs into execution. Aug. 30, 1805, "Voted to Polish the Vain."

Dec. 5, 1816. We again find a vote respecting the seating of the colored people, as follows: Voted "that the People of color may occupy the two Back seats in the west gallery of our meeting house & no other seats, or that they may have ground for one pew in the northwest corner of the Gallery, and ground for another pew in the North East corner of the Gallery as they Choose, and that the Parish clerk serve the people of color with a copy of this vote."

In 1818 the subject of warming the meeting-house came up in the following manner: Some of the churches in the neighboring towms having found it a luxury to have the house of God warmed and made comfortable, thought it would not be too much of a sin to enjoy the same comfort. The idea at first met with serious opposition; for the first article in a warrant concerning the purchasing of a cast-iron stove was negatived, which move was made Dec. 10, 1818, as follows: "Voted to have the article of getting a stove inserted in a warrant for the next spring meeting," and in the following spring, March 25, 1819, "voted the stove or stoves to a committee of five," consisting of Col. Caleb Howard, Daniel Howard, Esq., Abel Kingman, Esq., Capt. Zachariah Gurney, Eliphalet

Kingman. Dec. 13, 1819. This committee reported it "inexpedient to get a Stove." March 7, 1822. "Voted the South part of the East Gallery for the use of the young women." Previous to February, 1823, this Parish had been known by the name of the "North Parish in Bridgewater." Dec. 22, 1822, The parish "voted to take measures to alter the name of the North Parish of Bridgewater, and that it be called the 'First Parish in North Bridgewater;' also voted that the Parish take measures to petition the Legislature to carry the above into effect." Caleb Howard, Esq., Perez Crocker, and Perez Southworth were appointed to petition the Legislature in behalf of said parish; so that from that time forward it was known as the "First Parish in North Bridgewater." In the early part of 1824 the bell of this parish was found broken, and Abel Kingman, Esq., Caleb Howard, Esq., and Rev. Daniel Huntington were chosen a committee to purchase a new one, March 2, 1824, with discretionary power to "gitt a Bell of the wate of from 10 to 12 cwt." A bell was purchased of George H. Holbrook, of West Medway, Mass., April 17, 1824, which was warranted for one year with fair common usage, and weighing twelve hundred and forty-two pounds, at an expense of $465.75. An article was inserted in a warrant for parish meeting, March 2, 1824, "To see if the Parish will agree to make any alteration in the form or shape of the Meeting House, either inside or out, or to make any repairs to either." This was the first movement toward rebuilding or repairing the old house. At this meeting it was voted to make some alteration, providing that they can agree with the pew-holders on reasonable terms. For this purpose a committee was chosen to see upon what terms the pew-holders would consent to "give up thare pews." This committee consisted of Howard Cary, Silas Packard, Capt. David Ames, Nathaniel Littlefield, Bela Keith, Eliphalet Kingman, Capt. John Packard, Capt. Asa Jones, Col. E. Southworth, Israel Packard, Capt. Jeremiah Beals, who were to report at the next meeting, which report was as follows: "25 were willing to have their pews appraised, 24 willing to sell, 13 willing to exchange their old for new ones." "Voted not to accept of the committee's report," and also "Voted they wouldn't make any alteration in the Meeting-House." Feb. 25, 1825. "Voted to dismiss the article concerning alteration of the Meeting House." Sept. 4, 1826, the subject was again brought before the parish, "To see if the Parish will agree to alter, repair, or rebuild their Meeting-House."

Third Meeting-House.—A committee of fifteen were chosen to take the subject into consideration, who reported in favor of building a new house. Oct. 23, 1826. Voted to choose a committee of five out of town to appraise the pews in said meeting-house. Col. Royal Turner, of Randolph; Ezra Forbes, of Bridgewater; Wade Daley, of Easton, John Belcher, Micah Nash, of Abington, were appointed said committee, who proceeded to their duty Nov. 7, 1826, and appraised the whole, amounting to two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars. Feb. 16, 1827. Chose a committee of eleven to nominate three as building committee, and six as advising. Abel Kingman, Lieut. Isaac Packard, and Benjamin Kingman were appointed as the building committee, and the two first named resigning, B. Kingman was chosen as agent to build the house, and Belah Keith, Esq., Asa Jones, Daniel H. Cary, Col. Isaac Littlefield, Lieut. Ephraim Cole, and John Tilden, Jr., were chosen as advising committee. A committee of five were appointed to locate the house, consisting of the following persons: Silas Packard, Jesse Perkins, Esq., Col. Edward Southworth, Col. Cyrus Porter, Abel Kingman, Esq., who reported in favor of setting the house its width south, and half its length west. Report accepted March 16, 1827.

The old house was taken down in April of this year. On the first day of the week in which this was to be done, and the ground cleared for another house, a sermon was delivered by Rev. D. Huntington, the pastor of the church, from Zachariah xii. 6: "And Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem." And as many of the society could not go abroad to worship while the new house was in process of building, it was thought best to provide temporary accommodations. For this purpose an addition was made to the sheds at the southwest corner of the green, in which seats were provided for the congregation, and to which the pulpit of the old house was removed. And the author has often been told that in that humble place there were many precious hours spent, and some of the most interesting seasons of religious exercise enjoyed there that ever they experienced. The new house of worship was completed in November, so that the sheds were occupied by them during the interval of time between those dates. The house was dedicated Nov. 27, 1827, with highly appropriate and interesting exercises.

Nov. 15, 1827. At a meeting of the parish the following persons were chosen a committee of arrangements for the dedication of the new house, namely, Benjamin Kingman, Capt. David Ames, Col. Nathan Jones, Col. Isaac Littlefield, Lieut. Ephraim Cole; also Silas Packard and Benjamin Kingman were appointed and authorized to convey the pews to those that purchased. Voted that the sale of pews take place Wednesday, Nov. 28, 1827, to commence at nine o'clock A.M.

The following shows a list of the pews sold, the number, names of owners, and price for which they were sold. Zenas French, of Randolph, vendue-master :

PEW-HOLDERS.

5. Azel Gurney.....	$101.50	66. Turner Torrey...	$202.00
6. Robert Howard...	104.00	67. Josiah Ames.....	203.00
7. James Cary.....	110.50	68. Rositer Jones.....	196.00
8. David Edson, Jr..	106.00	69. Asa Jones.....	197.50
9. Simeon Packard..	103.00	70. S. Packard, Esq.	195.50
10. Hezek' h Packard.	98.50	71. Micah Faxon.....	173.50
11. Eliphalet King-		73. Nathaniel Ames.	123.50
man.....	98.00	74. Howard Packard	127.00
12. Joel Ames.....	100.50	75. Nahum Perkins.	135.50
13. Ornan Cole.....	85.50	76. D. Littlefield....	136.00
14. Francis Cary.....	94.00	77. Silas Packard....	133.50
15. Moses Packard...	93.50	78. Jabez Kingman.	128.50
16. Ezekiel Merritt...	86.00	79. Benj. Ames &
17. Zibeon French....	75.00	Galen Pratt... ..	125.00
18. Col. Edw. South-		80. Isaac Littlefield..	122.50
worth.....	72.00	81. Alva Noyes.....	117.50
19. Asa Ford.....	56.00	82. Galen Warren... ..	112.50
20. Apollas Packard..	38.00	83. Martin Cary.....	107.00
21. Ambrose Packard	21.00	84. L. Howard.....	102.50
22. Bela Keith.....	40.00	85. Daniel Ford.....	94.00
23. Josiah Fuller.....	49.50	86. Samuel Allen....	71.00
24. Josiah Packard...	69.50	87. Eliphalet King-
25. Ziba Keith.....	94.00	man.....	58.50
26. Robert Packard,		88. Benj. Packard... ..	48.50
Jr.....	94.50	89. Seth Copeland... ..	31.50
27. Simeon Lench.....	102.00	90. Zenas Thayer....	30.50
28. Abel Kingman....	103.00	91. William Lewis... ..	37.25
29. David Ames.....	108.50	92. Zenas Brett.....	42.50
30. Luke Packard....	117.00	93. M. Copeland.....	47.00
31. Benj. Kingman....	115.00	94. E. Kingman.....	57.00
32. Josiah Brett.....	123.00	95. Alva Noyes.....	60.00
33. Micah Faxon.....	127.00	96. Daniel H. Carey	73.50
34. Isaac & Jonas		98. Jesse Perkins....	66.50
Keith.....	128.50	99. Jesse Perkins....	70.00
35. Silvanus French..	127.50	100. H. Packard.....	103.00
36. Isaac Curtis.....	134.10	101. Lieut. E. Cole....	105.25
37. Micah Shaw.....	125.00	102. Mark Perkins... ..	107.00
38. Arza Keith.....	128.00	103. Isaac Packard... ..	89.00
39. Col. Edw. South-		104. Barzilla Cary....	90.00
worth.....	140.00	105. Oliver Leach.....	77.00
40. Thomas Wales....	173.00	106. Jonas Reynolds..	85.00
41. Lieut. Eph. Cole.	195.00	107. Barzilla Field ...	114.00
42. James Littlefield.	206.00	108. { J. Dunbar (half)	54.25
43. Jacob Fuller.....	204.00	{ M. Perkins (half)	54.25
44. Isaac Packard....	205.00	109. Albert Smith....	97.00
45. Jeremiah Beals..	200.00	{ O. Dike (half)	38.75
46. Arza Packard....	190.00	{ H. Alden (half)	38.75
47. Theron Ames.....	180.00	111. N. Lincoln.....	42.50
48. Abel Kingman....	175.50	114. Benj. Ames &
49. Josiah W. King-		Galen Pratt... ..	47.00
man.....	155.00	{ Isaac Curtis
50. John W. King-		(half).....	43.00
man.....	140.50	{ Luke Packard
51. Charles Keith....	132.50	(half).....	43.00
52. A. French & Son..	124.00	119. Bela Keith.....	26.00
53. Lysander Howard	95.50	121. John Wales....	20.00
54. Joel Packard....	56.00	124. Simon and Heze-	24.50
55. David Ames.....	32.25	kiah Packard... ..	24.50
56. Abel Kingman,		126. J. Brett (half)...	18.75
Esq.....	30.00	126. Moses and David
57. Samuel Tribon... ..	54.00	Packard (half)..	18.75
58. Martin Cary.....	80.00	127. Bela Keith.....	30.00
59. Noah Ford.....	120.50	129. John Shankland	26.00
60. Col. Cyrus Porter	133.50	132. Silas Packard....	18.75
61. Eliphalet King-		134. Isaac Keith.....	23.00
man.....	140.00	135. John Wales.....	33.50
62. Bela Keith.....	155.00	137. Eliphalet King-
63. John Thompson... ..	169.50	man.....	43.50
64. Col. Nathan Jones	178.50	140. Lemuel French..	44.00
65. Isaac Littlefield..	182.00	141. Abel Kingman... ..	40.50

Nov. 28, 1827. Voted that the three easterly pews in the north side of the gallery be reserved for young women. And again the subject of seating the colored people comes up, and it was "Voted that the South west and North west pews be reserved for the people of Colour." Jan. 14, 1828. At a meeting held this day, "To see if the parish will vote to procure a timepiece," it was "voted to defer the subject of getting a timepiece to a future meeting." January 28th, the same subject was brought before the parish for action, when it was "voted not to do any thing respecting getting a timepiece."

The report of the agent in building the new house was as follows, Jan. 14, 1828 :

"The total cost of the new house, including the furniture, as furnished at the expense of the parish, was seven thousand five hundred and nine dollars and seventeen cents. The old house sold for four hundred and three dollars and thirty-seven cents, which, deducted from the cost of the new building, leaves the nett cost seven thousand and ninety-five dollars and eighty cents."

Also at the same time "voted that the Parish committee be instructed to build Horse sheds for those that want them at cost. Benjamin Kingman chosen as agent to build them." March 24, 1828. Jesse Perkins, Col. Edward Southworth, and Benjamin Kingman were appointed to view the ground in front of the meeting-house with reference to erecting a fence, who reported in favor of erecting one, "to extend 40 feet front of the house of a circular form, of 20 Stone Posts, and Iron rods or chains." Jan. 24, 1832, a new bell was procured. Thomas Gurney and Abel Kingman, Esq., were the purchasing committee. The bell was manufactured by George Holbrook, of Medway, Mass. Also, in April of the same year, a clock was procured by subscription, which was made by George Holbrook above named, costing three hundred dollars, placed upon the church April 11, 1832. The proprietors of the clock offered it to the parish upon their paying what outstanding accounts were unpaid, which offer was accepted, and $62.88 paid for the same Monday, Jan. 21, 1833. The subject of warming the house was brought before the society again, "To see if the Parish will procure a stove or any other apparatus for warming their meeting house." A committee of five were chosen "to get information respecting the best mode of warming their Meeting House, and to what course is pursued in other Societies, and report at the next March meeting." Turner Torrey, Lysander Howard, Darius Littlefield, Eliphalet Kingman, and Ephraim Cole committee for the above. After report of committee, Dec. 30, 1833, "Voted that they would not consent to have a stove in our meeting house providing it was done free of expense to the Parish." Monday, Aug. 10, 1835. Chose a building committee of five persons to build a parsonage-house,—Edward Southworth, Abel Kingman, Benjamin Kingman, Bela Keith, and Rositer Jones, committee. At last the parish concluded to warm the house, which appears by a vote passed Nov. 28, 1835. Heman Packard, Col. E. Southworth, and Ephraim Cole were chosen a committee to provide stoves for the meeting-house;—truly a most remarkable innovation when compared with the former custom of sitting during long sermons shivering and shaking, as though it were wicked to be made comfortable. Judging by the records this people, like most other societies, were occasionally troubled with naughty boys, as April 13, 1844, "Voted to choose a number of persons to take care of the boys in the gallery." March 8, 1852 An article was inserted in the warrant, calling a meeting of the parish, "To see if the Parish will make a general repair and revision of their meeting house, and take measures that may be proper to settle with the pew holders." "Voted unanimously to make a general repair and revision of their meeting house." "Also made choice of Benjamin Kingman, Oakes S. Soule, and Marcus Packard a committee to procure plans for reseating and repairing the meeting house, and report at a future meeting." March 22, 1852. The committee appointed to get a plan for reseating and repairing "reported in favor of building a new house, and recommended that the Parish thoroughly review the whole subject deliberately." This report was accepted, and the same committee were appointed to "investigate and get such information in relation to the whole matter of building and repairing their house as they may think best calculated to enable the parish to judge correctly as to what is best to be done, to examine modern built houses at their discretion."

The same day "voted to reconsider the vote to repair and reseat the Meeting-House."

Fourth Meeting-House.—The above-named persons were chosen as building committee. April 26, 1852, Benjamin Kingman, Ozen Gurney, and Marcus Packard were appointed to settle with pew-holders, sell the old house, and provide another place of worship. Dec. 27, 1852, "Voted to instruct the building committee to proceed in building a house when the sum of Eight Thousand Dollars is subscribed." March 17, 1853, made choice of three persons to appraise the old pews,—namely, John W. Loud, of Weymouth; Joseph Lewis, of Duxbury; Nathan Randall, of Duxbury, were chosen.

The ladies of the First Congregational Church and society held a levee for social intercourse and fellowship at the Satucket Hall, Feb. 15, 1853. The object of the meeting was to increase the fund for furnishing the new meeting-house which was then talked of building. The meeting was largely attended, the weather mild, the traveling good, with a bright moon. The meeting made choice of William P. Howard as president. The North Bridgewater Brass Band was present, and made the first impression; then prayer was offered by Rev. Paul Couch; then a musical treat by Isaac T. Packard; remarks appropriate to the occasion by Rev. Paul Couch; amusements; refreshments for five hundred persons; and a little later in the evening the following song was sung by Isaac T. Packard, the organist of the church:

"THE OLD VILLAGE CHURCH.

"A song for the church, the old village church,
Which has stood full many a year.
We'll sing to its praise in the loftiest lays;
For we love its portals dear.

"The storms they have beat on that sacred retreat,
While its inmates have bowed in prayer;
The lightnings have flashed and the deep thunder crashed
With the notes of the chanting choir.

"Memory now can look back through time's beaten track
And remember the joyful day
When its frame was reared, while the workmen cheered,—
To them it was sport and play.

"They saw the tower rise, pointing up to the skies,
While within the deep-toned bell
Gave forth the glad sound to the people around
That the building was finished well.

"Then a song for the church, the old village church,
Which has stood full many a year.
We'll sing to its praise in the loftiest lays,
For we love its portals dear.

"But old Father Time, he thinks it no crime
To crumble the stateliest towers;
In silence he's spaced, and the beauty defaced
That was once in this temple of ours.

"And progression appears in these later years
To make it our duty clear
That we must in our might, while contending for right,
A fine new structure rear.

"Then a song for the church, for the new village church
Which we hope we then shall see,
In which we may raise glad notes of praise
To thee, Great One in Three.

"The work has begun, and the ladies have done,
And are doing from day to day,
An honorable part to encourage each heart
To labor without delay.

"They have invited us here, and with right good cheer
We respond to their festive call;
And we'll do nothing worse than to fill their purse,
To discount in the fall,

“ In decking the church, the new village church
Which we hope we then shall see,
In which we may raise glad notes of praise
To thee, Great One in Three.”

The frame of the new house was raised Aug. 25, 1853, in the afternoon, when the following ceremony took place: 1, hymn, sung by the children; 2, prayer, by Rev. Charles L. Mills, of the Porter Church; 3, prayer, by Rev. A. B. Wheeler, of the Second Methodist Episcopal Church; 4, hymn, written by Isaac T. Packard, the organist of the church:

“ Praise to thy name, eternal King.
In grateful numbers here we bring;
Oh, now behold us from above,
And smile upon us in thy love.

“ Here on this hallowed ground we meet,
And now thy blessing we entreat;
Oh, may these walls in order rise,
Through help that cometh from the skies.

“ Oh, build this house, this house of prayer!
Make it the object of thy care;
Here with thy people ever dwell;
Here may thy saints thy glories tell.

“ And from this earthly house below
May multitudes redeemed go
To that prepared by thee above,
There join to sing redeeming love.”

The old meeting-house was sold to Messrs. Winthrop S. Baker and Rufus P. Kingman for $1226.60, who took a lease of the land upon which the building stood, a few feet south of where the present building now stands, for the term of fifty years from March 21, 1854, at the rate of one hundred dollars per year. The building was remodeled and used as a hall for public meetings until destroyed by fire Nov. 7, 1860.

Dedication.—The present new and splendid edifice was opened to the public at two o'clock on Thursday, July 27, 1854. There were present from fifteen hundred to two thousand persons, and the exercises were in the following order: 1, voluntary on the organ; 2, chant,—“ Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hosts;” 3, invocation and reading of the Scriptures; 4, anthem,—“ Let all the nations fear;” 5, prayer; 6, hymn,—

“ To thee this temple we devote,
Our Father and our God;
Accept it thine, and seal it now,
Thy Spirit's blest abode.

“ Here may the prayer of faith ascend,
The voice of praise arise;
Oh, may each lowly service prove
Accepted sacrifice.

“ Here may the sinner learn his guilt,
And weep before his Lord;
Here, pardoned, sing a Saviour's love,
And here his vows record.

“ Here may affliction dry the tear,
And learn to trust in God,
Convinced it is a Father smites,
And love that guides the rod.

“ Peace be within these sacred walls,
Prosperity be here;
Long smile upon thy people, Lord,
And evermore be near;”

7, Sermon by Rev. Paul Couch, text, Isaiah ii. 2-5, showing that the house of God is to be a central and controlling power in the world's reformation; 8, hymn, anthem,—“ Peace be to this habitation;” 9, dedicatory prayer; 10, anthem,—“ Hark! the song of jubilee;” 11, closing prayer; 12, hymn and doxology by the congregation,—“ From all that dwell below the skies;” doxology,—“ Praise God from whom all blessings flow;” 13, benediction.

The sermon is spoken of as having been of the highest order. Many a golden thought was presented to the people, and will be treasured by them. The singing also was of the most excellent kind, and entitled to great praise. The last hymn was sung to the tune of “ Old Hundred,” in which the congregation joined, and seldom has that tune been sung with such great power and in such correct time as on that occasion. The organ poured forth a flood of harmony from which no deviation could be made, and every one present seemed pleased with the arrangements and detail of the exercises. The day was pleasant and the attendance very large.

Description of the Church.—Few houses are to be found in the country that will compare favorably with this. Its exterior is rendered attractive and pleasing to the eye by its beautiful proportions, which, while they present and possess unusual strength, are so arranged that the whole appearance is not only satisfactory, but very graceful and imposing. The length of the building is ninety-six feet, width sixty-four feet, with a spire one hundred and eighty-five feet in height, and contains one hundred and sixteen pews on the floor and twenty-eight in the gallery. It is built in the Romanesque style of architecture, designed by Messrs. Towle & Foster, of Boston; was built by Samuel Vaughn, of Boston. The pews are all neatly carpeted, cushioned, and upholstered, both in the gallery and below. The gallery contains a large and beautiful organ, built by W. B. D. Simmons, of Cambridge Street, Boston, which was finished May 17, 1854. On entering the building we find on the first floor a vestry of good size and a large room, carpeted and well furnished, for the use of the Ladies' Association connected with the society. In the rear of these rooms are two convenient and well-arranged tenements, which are rented. Ascending from the main entrance on either side stairs of very easy grade we find ourselves in the vestibule, from which we enter the auditory or ascend to the galleries. The interior effect is exceedingly fine. The spacious floor, well-arranged pews (all uniform and somewhat richly upholstered), the ample galleries (not projecting from the sides with huge overshadowing effect, but rather relieving the height and presenting a corresponding finish), the chaste and elegant pulpit, finely-frescoed walls and ceiling are in perfect harmony with each other and their design and uses, and beautifully wrought without glaring effect. Upon the west end of the building, on the ceiling to the left of the pulpit, is the following inscription: "Ye shall keep my Sabbaths and reverence my sanctuary. I am the Lord." To the right of the pulpit is the following: "The Lord hath chosen Zion. He hath desired it for his habitation." The outlay in erecting this house, including the organ, was about twenty-four thousand dollars. The first sale of pews took place on Monday following the dedication, at which seventy-three pews were sold for the sum of $22,282.50. The choice-money paid was $1746.50. After the sale there were forty-three pews remaining unsold on the floor of the auditory, many of which were very desirable, and several in the galleries, all of which were carpeted and furnished as below.

The bell that belonged on the old church, when sold, was transferred to the new house above described in June, 1854. The following legend was upon the same:

"I to the church the living call,
And to the graveyard summon all."

This bell, after having done many years of faithful service, gave out but a short time after it was removed; for we find, Sept. 5, 1855, a new bell was purchased of Messrs. Henry N. Hooper & Co., of Boston, weighing two thousand and thirty-five pounds.

CHAPTER V.

Ministry of Rev. John Porter—Rev. Asa Meech—Rev. Daniel Huntington—Rev. William Thompson—Rev. Paul Couch—Rev. Nathaniel B. Blanchard—Rev. Edward L. Clark—Rev. Henry A. Stevens—Rev. Elbridge P. McElroy—Rev. Henry L. Kelsey—Rev. George E. Martin.

First Congregational Church.—In nearly all the early New England towns the history of the church is a history of the town, and among the first things sought after was the establishment of the gospel ministry among them. The prayer of the petitioners having been granted so far as to set them off into a separate parish, the next thing was to see whom they could get to preach to them. For this purpose a meeting was held Oct. 8, 1739, "to see if the precinct would vote to have preaching three months this winter season." It being voted in the affirmative, David Packard, John Kingman, and Abiel Packard were chosen a committee "to Geat a minister to preach to us three months this winter seson." And the committee were also requested "to apply to Mr. Porter, Mr. Howard, or Ephrim Keith," to supply the pulpit for three months.

Monday, March 24, 1740, "it was put to vote to see whether the precinct would vote to have Mr. Porter preach to them three months." "Voted in affirmative." "Samuel Kingman, David Packard, and Timothy Keith were chosen a committee to go to Mr. Porter to see whether he would suply the pulpet for the three months." What the result of their interview was with him does not appear on record. We judge, however, that an invitation to settle as a permanent preacher was more agreeable, as a meeting was called soon after, on the 21st of April, by the same committee, "to see if the sd precinct can agree to give Mr. John Porter a Call to be an ordained minister of the gospel for sd precinct; also to see what Grattess the precinct will agree to give said Mr. Porter, for Incouragement for to Settell among us; also what we can agree to pay unto Mr. Porter as a yearly salary."

MINISTRY OF REV. JOHN PORTER.—At this meeting it was "voted to Give Mr. John Porter a Call to be their minister;" also, "voted to Give him two hundred pounds as a Grattess for Incouragement to settell among us, and give him one Hundred and ten pounds per year, as a yearly salary, During the time he shall be our minister."

The committee appointed "to discourse with Mr. Porter upon the above-mentioned premises" were Samuel Kingman, David Packard, Timothy Keith, Daniel Howard, and Samuel West.

Aug. 4, 1740, "voted one Hundred pounds additional money as Grattess, making Three Hundred pounds, besides an addition of five pounds per year for four years, and then ten pounds per year for five years, and then to stand at one Hundred and Eighty pounds per year; to be paid in yearly, in any passable money, at the Reat of silver at Twenty-Eight Shillings per ounce; and so his salary to Rise and fall, as the price of silver Doth, During the time that he shall be our minister."

Aug. 25, 1740, "voted to chuse Samuel Kingman, David Packard, and James Packard a committee to Give Mr. Porter a Call in behalf of the precinct;" also voted that the 18th of September should be kept as a day of fasting and prayer, before the ordaining of Mr. John Porter.

The call, as presented to Mr. Porter, is as follows, together with his acceptance of the same:

"MR. PORTER,—Since it hath pleased God to favor us with your labors amongst us for several months past, it has been to our general acceptance; and we have unaciously agreed to give you a call to take the pastoral charge of us, and hope that the same God who has made your labors so satisfactory to us will incline your heart to accept, convincing you that it is a call from him as well as us; and, withall, we promise to make it our prayer to the Great God for you that he should furnish you with all ministerial gifts and graces for the work of the ministry and edifying of the body of Christ among us, and that we will ever honor and obey you when you shall become ours in the Lord. These are therefore to certify you that at a meeting legally warned the precinct did, by a full and clear vote, give you a call to the ministry among us; and for your further encouragement did vote 300 Pounds for a settlement; and for the pursuant year, one hundred and ten pounds for your salary, and then to advance five pounds pr. year, four years, and then ten pounds pr. year, five years, and then to stand yearly at one hundred and Eighty pounds per year, to be paid in yearly, in any passable money, at the rate of silver at 28 shillings pr. ounce; and so your salary to rise and fall, as the price of silver doth, during the time you shall be our minister.

"Dated at Bridgewater,

"SAMUEL KINGMAN,

"North Precinct,

"DAVID KEITH,

"Aug. the 25th, 1740.

"JAMES PACKARD,

"Precinct Committee to give Mr. Porter a call In behalf of the precinct."

"Answer,

"To be communicated to the North Precinct in Bridgewater, given the 25th of Aug., 1740.

"BRETHREN AND FRIENDS,—Inasmuch as it has pleased the Sovereign God, who has all hearts in his hand, and can turn them as the rivers of water are turned, so to incline and Unite you of this Place as to give me an invitation to settle among you in the work of the gospel ministry, though unworthy, yet, Apprehending it to be the call of Christ, whose I am, and whom I ought to serve, I accept your call, and I trust I do it with due and becoming reverence and cheerfulness.

"Brethren and Friends: Further I desire to express all due gratitude to you for your love and respect shown me in the various instances of it, and I pray to God to continue it; and you yet to manifest it in every regard, and as the gospel requires and acknowledge that those that preach the gospel, should live of the gospel, so I shall expect an handsome and honorable maintenance from you so long as I shall sojourn among you as your pastor. But, above all, I shall expect and request you to be constant, earnest, and incessant at the throne of grace for me, that God would give me grace to serve him cheerfully and faithfully in the great and difficult work I am now about to engage in, that so I may finish my course with joy, and, in the day of Christ's appearing and kingdom, may have many of you of my charge as a seal of my ministry, that so then together we may receive a crown of glory which shall never fade away.

"I subscribe myself yours to serve in the Lord,

"JOHN PORTER."

Agreeable to the above call and acceptance, the Rev. Mr. Porter was ordained as pastor of the Fourth Church in Bridgewater, Oct. 15, 1740.<sup>1</sup>

The following is the covenant which the church adopted as the basis of their union:

"We, whose names are underwritten, the most of whom have been members of the first church of Christ in Bridgewater, having now, as we conceive, a call from God to embody a distinct church by ourselves, according to gospel order, and as our particular circumstances require, do, upon this solemn occasion, think it our duty, and therefore agree, to renew the covenant which our fathers made, both with God and with one another, under a humbling sense of our violations of past covenant engagements, adding hearty prayers that our past sins may be forgiven, and that we may have the help of the Holy Spirit to enable us to keep that covenant with God, wherein we solemnly engage, as follows: 1st. That we will take the Lord Jehovah to be our God, by a free choice of him, and firm dependence on him, and satisfaction in him, as our chief good, renouncing all other interest whatever. 2d. That we will cleave to the Holy Scriptures as our only rule of faith and obedience. 3d. That we will acknowledge our Lord Jesus Christ in his threefold office, as our Prophet, Priest, and King, particularly in his kingly government; that all his laws and ordinances may be upheld by us in the purity and power of them; that an able and faithful ministry be encouraged and continued among us; that in all the administrations of the house of God, we will have a due regard to the power of office belonging to the ministry, and the privileges belonging to the brethren as to judgment and consent. That we will endeavor faithfully to observe the rules of purity, in respect to the visible qualifications of those we admit to communion with us, that the table of the Lord be not polluted,—that they be such as have a competent understanding of the mysteries of Godliness, and of a well-ordered conversation, and who, upon examination, hold forth repentance from dead works, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. We will conscientiously observe the rules of discipline which Christ hath prescribed, that the temple of God be not defiled; will see that church censure be faithfully dispensed to such as are full communicants, and to the children of the covenant. The adult in church relation (though not yet admitted to full communion), walking orderly, and waiting upon God to prepare them for the full enjoyment of him in all his ordinances, shall (at their desire) have the initiating seal of baptism administered to their children, and they themselves shall be encouraged and excited to follow the Lord in all the ways of his appointment, and when they offer themselves to join with the church, shall be examined respecting their proficiency, under the means, and hold forth such evidences of the grace of God as may be required to make their communion comfortable. 4th. We will walk in Love one toward another, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of Peace, that there be no schism or rent in the body of Christ. 5th. In all difficult cases we will apply to neighboring ministers and churches of Christ for counsel. 6th. We will walk with God in our houses with a perfect heart, duly attending on family worship and government in the faithful discharge of relative duties, endeavoring that true religion may be propagated to posterity, that our God may be our children's God after us. 7th. We will bear our testimony against the growing sins of the times and of this place, and it shall be our endeavor that the work of reformation in all parts of it be carried on among us. 8th. As we have opportunity, we will seek the good of one another, and so the good of all men, both with respect to spirituals and temporals. 9th. It shall be our endeavor to stand complete in all the will of God, to cleave to the Lord and one another through all adversity. All this we do sincerely and solemnly engage in the sight of God, men, and angels, in a humble dependence of faith upon the merits of our Lord Jesus Christ, for our acceptance with God, and on the power of his spirit and grace to work all our works in us and for us; and, finally, to perfect all that concerns us to the praise of his glory. Adopted Sept. 18th, 1740.

<sup>1</sup> David Packard provided for the ordination, for which he had £29 10s.

- |                      |                        |
|----------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Timothy Keith.    | 14. Nathaniel Hammond. |
| 2. David Packard.    | 15. Hannah Keith.      |
| 3. James Packard.    | 16. Hannah Packard.    |
| 4. Zacheus Packard.  | 17. Jemima Packard.    |
| 5. Samuel West.      | 18. Meroy Packard.     |
| 6. Abiel Packard.    | 19. Lydia Packard.     |
| 7. John Kingman.     | 20. Sarah Packard.     |
| 8. Joshua Warren.    | 21. Rebecca Kingman.   |
| 9. Seth Packard.     | 22. Jaac Warren.       |
| 10. Caleb Phillips.  | 23. Meroy Packard.     |
| 11. Isaac Fuller.    | 24. Hannah Phillips.   |
| 12. Zachariah Carey. | 25. Sarah Fuller."     |
| 13. John Johnson.    |                        |

Rev. Mr. Porter was a man of very respectable talent, distinguished for his prudence, fidelity, exemplary life, and holy conversation. The great doctrines of the gospel were prominent in all his preaching; and a crucified Redeemer was a theme on which he delighted to dwell with peculiar earnestness, interest, and satisfaction. He continued to preach to this society for sixty years, when, feeling weary with many years of service in the vineyard of the Lord, and feeling the infirmities of age creeping upon him, he called for aid to assist him in his ministerial labors. To this claim the church and society readily assented, as appears by the following vote: April 21, 1800, "Voted, To chuse a committee of seven to look up sum suitable Person or Persons to assist Rev. Mr. Porter." Capt. Jesse Perkins, Deacon David Edson, Daniel Cary, Moses Cary, Daniel Howard, Esq., Deacon Eliphalet Packard, Lieut. Caleb Howard were chosen as said committee. This committee found a man in the person of Asa Meech, who preached to them as a candidate until, at a meeting held Aug. 18, 1800, "Voted, that thursday the twenty-Eighth day of August be held as a day of Fasting and prayer for directions in settling a colleague with Mr. Porter, and also to apply to Mr. W. Reed, and Mr. Gurney to preach on that occasion."

Also, "Voted that the parish committee request Mr. Meech to supply the pulpit further."

The publication of Rev. John Porter is "Evangelical Plan; or, an Attempt to form Right Notions in the Minds of the Common People, and to Establish them in the Minds of the People." Republished by Dr. E. Alden, of Randolph.

Rev. John Porter was the son of Samuel and Mary Porter, of Abington, Mass.; born in 1716; graduated at Harvard College in 1736; commenced preaching as a candidate for the Fourth Church in Bridgewater (now the First Church of Brockton) in December, 1739. Soon after the incorporation of the North Parish he received a call to settle with them as pastor Aug. 25, 1740, which call he accepted, and was ordained Oct. 15, 1740. Mr. Porter entered upon the duties of his office with all the advantages which a faithful church and affectionate society could afford. Their hearts were deservedly united in him, and seldom has any minister of the gospel been enabled to exert a more general and salutary influence over the people of his charge. His qualifications, both natural and acquired, were peculiarly respectable. He was taught not only of men, but of God. Much of what was estimable in his Christian and ministerial character he gratefully ascribed to the labors of that justly celebrated and eminently useful servant of Christ, the Rev. Mr. Whitefield, under whose ministry of the word he received the most deep and salutary impressions a little before his entrance upon the duties of the sacred office. With that great and good man he formed an intimate acquaintance, invited him to his pulpit, and, with his beloved flock, enjoyed the benefit of his evangelical instructions. This circumstance undoubtedly contributed to increase that zealous spirit of reformation by which the Rev. Mr. Porter's long and faithful ministry was so happily characterized. He clearly exhibited and ably defended the great doctrines of the gospel, and, though not fond of controversy, wielded the sword of the Spirit with uncommon skill, vigor, and success against all the assailants of evangelical truth. His labors among his people in the sanctuary and from house to house were greatly blessed. Mr. Porter continued to labor with this people until Sept. 1, 1800, when, finding the infirmities of age creeping upon him, and a frame worn out in the service of his Master, he asked for assistance in his labors. His son-in-law, Rev. Thomas Crafts, and Rev. Asa Meech, then a candidate for the ministry, from Connecticut, came to his help, and Mr. Meech received a call to become a colleague pastor with him, which call he accepted, and was ordained Oct. 15, 1800.

Rev. Mr. Porter continued to perform pastoral labor, preaching, occasionally, till his decease. The last sermon he preached was from John ix. 4: "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work." This sermon is often spoken of as having been peculiarly and prophetically appropriate, and most tenderly affecting to those who were listening to the last message of truth and love from the lips of one whom very many regarded as a spiritual father, and all as an affectionate and faithful friend. He departed this life March 12, 1802, in the eighty-seventh year of his age, and in the sixty-second year of his ministry. His sickness was of three weeks' duration, which commenced about one week after the delivery of the above-named discourse. His wife, with whom he had so long and so happily lived for more than one-half a century, died about four months previous to his death. This circumstance seemed to render his death more welcome to him than otherwise. She was a woman of very exemplary habits, and a devoted mother in Israel. His funeral was attended by Rev. Zedekiah Sanger, D.D., of Bridgewater, Mass. His remains lie buried in the graveyard near the residence of the late William Tribou, at Campello. On the gravestone may be found the following inscription: "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." To the virtues of Rev. Mr. Porter's private life, and the usefulness of his ministerial qualifications and labors, the affection and respect with which he was viewed by his family and acquaintances, the love and veneration of the large and respectable religious society with which he so long lived in harmony and labored with success, the manner in which his services were accepted in other societies where he occasionally preached, and the lasting reputation he maintained in the church, are the most unequivocal and honorable testimonies. To the influence of this good man, more than any other thing, is the community indebted for the love of order, industry, economy, enterprise, and religious character of many of the descendants of that society. His influence had very much to do with formation of the character of the early inhabitants of the town of North Bridgewater, now Brockton.

MINISTRY OF REV. ASA MEECH.—Sept. 1, 1800, "Voted to give Rev. Asa Meech a call." Also, "Voted to choose a committee of seven to Report a plan for the settlement of Mr. Meech, which consisted of the following persons: Capt. Jesse Perkins, Matthew Kingman, Deacon E. Packard, Capt. Abel Kingman, Capt. William French, Ichabod Howard, Lieut. Caleb Howard," who subsequently reported a plan as follows, namely: "That he be our minister until two-thirds of the legal voters of the parish are dissatisfied with him, and then to be dismissed by giving him a year's notice. Also he having the same privilege to leave the people when he thinks proper, he giving them a year's notice." Also, "that the Said parish pay him four Hundred Dollars for the first five years; and after the expiration of the five first years, Three Hundred and thirty-four dollars a year, so long as he continues our minister." The above Report was accepted, and it was "Voted the above committee present Mr. A. Meech with the call of the parish to the work of the ministry," which is as follows:

"To Mr. Asa Meech, Candidate for the Sacred ministry, now residing in this place.

"SIR,—Whereas our aged and beloved pastor has requested the settlement of an assistant with him in the work of the Sacred Ministry. And as we are very desirous of a continuance of the regular Administration of Gospel ordinances among us—And having experience of your good abilities as a Gospel Preacher and such good evidence of your good moral character as gives us great satisfaction, Therefore we, the members of the fourth church and congregation of the Christian Society in Bridgewater, do hereby invite you, with a Solemn call, to Settle with us as a colleague pastor with the Rev. John Porter. That you may be more particularly informed of the doings of the Parish in this, a committee, consisting of the following-named gentlemen, viz.: Captain Jesse Perkins, Matthew Kingman, Lieut. Caleb Howard, Dea. E. Packard, Capt. Abel Kingman, Capt. Wm. French, Ichabod Howard, will wait on you with the vote of the parish respecting the encouragement they offer you, as an inducement to Settle with us in the Sacred Ministry, and give you such other information as you may desire. Your answer is requested as soon as may be consistent with a full deliberation on so solemn and such an important subject.

"DANIEL CARY, Parish Clerk.

"The North Church in Bridgewater met this day [Sept. 29, 1800], and proceeded to hear the answer of Rev. Asa Meech.

"BRIDGEWATER, Sept. 23, 1800.

"To the fourth church and congregation of the Christian Society in Bridgewater.

"Whereas you have given me an invitation and Solemn call to settle with you in the Gospel Ministry as a Colleague Pastor with the Rev. John Porter, Having looked to God by prayer for his most gracious direction, and having consulted my friends and fathers in the ministry, And after mature deliberation on the Subject, I trust and hope that a door is opened in divine providence for my usefulness in this place. This is therefore to manifest my acceptance of your call, and my willingness to be employed in performing the important office and duties of the Christian ministry among you so long as God shall open the way by harmonizing our minds, and give me grace, wisdom, and strength. And while I commit all to the great head of the Church may Grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to us abundantly from God our father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

"ASA MEECH."

Sept. 29, 1800, "Voted that the ordination of Rev. Asa Meech be on the fifteenth day of October next."

At this meeting a committee of three were chosen to make provision for the council, namely, Capt. Jesse Perkins, Daniel Cary, and Capt. Howard Cary, who were provided for by Mr. Daniel Cary, at an expense of $165.58.

Mr. Meech was ordained as a colleague pastor with

Mr. Porter, Oct. 15, 1800, and continued to preach till the death of Mr. Porter, which took place March 12, 1802, in the eighty-seventh year of his age and sixty-second of his ministry. He continued his labors after the death of Mr. Porter until, early in 1811, he was requested to resign, and was dismissed by an ecclesiastical council for that purpose. His farewell sermon was preached Dec. 1, 1811.

His ordination sermon was preached by Rev. Lemuel Tyler, A.M., pastor of the First Church in Preston, Mass., from text, Titus i. 9: "Holding fast the faithful word, as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers," which was a very able discourse upon the necessity of gospel ministrations, the qualifications of ministers, or what gospel ministers should do to promote, and must do to secure, peace and promote good order in the church; also on the doctrine of election, justification, and revelation, and the divinity of the Holy Ghost. He then goes on, giving a short exhortation to the pastor, and then to the people. Both of the above sermons were printed and circulated.

Rev. Asa Meech was son of Thomas Meech, born in Boston, April 20, 1775. He was not a college-educated man, but in 1807 received an honorary degree from Brown University. He was approved as a candidate for the ministry by the New London County Association, in May, 1799, was ordained at North Bridgewater, Oct. 15, 1800, and dismissed in 1811; from thence he removed to Canterbury, Conn., and was installed Oct. 28, 1812, where he remained till the spring of 1822, preaching his farewell sermon May 5th. Here his ministry was not only useful in increasing the number of the church, but by establishing its faith and order. Towards the close of his pastorate, however, a feeling of personal opposition arose which rendered his removal expedient. He emigrated to Canada, where he purchased a farm near Hull, and employed himself thenceforth in its cultivation, preaching at times, as opportunity was offered. He died Feb. 22, 1849, at the age seventy-four. He had published three sermons, one of which was that on leaving Canterbury.

He married (first) Mary DeWitt, of Norwich, April 29, 1802; (second) Maria DeWitt, November, 1809; (third) Margaret Dockstader, Nov. 7, 1822, and had by the three wives twenty-one children, many of whom now reside in Canada.

Publications of Rev. Asa Meech:

Ordination Sermon, delivered by Rev. Lemuel Tyler, A.M., Oct. 15, 1800. Colleague pastor with Rev. John Porter.

Oration by Rev. Asa Meech, delivered in North Bridgewater, July 4, 1805, in commemoration of the Anniversary of American Independence.

Valedictory Sermon. By Rev. Asa Meech, A.M., Dec. 1, 1811. Preached at the North Church, in Bridgewater.

MINISTRY OF REV. DANIEL HUNTINGTON.—For a third time this society were called to settle a pastor. Their next minister was Rev. Daniel Huntington, who came from New London, Conn., to North Bridgewater early in the spring of 1812, and, after preaching a few weeks, received a unanimous call to become their pastor. The following are some of the votes which were passed at the legal meetings of the society:

At a meeting held Dec. 23, 1811, it was "voted that thursday the 19th day of December be kept a Day of fasting and prayer for Divine Direction to a parson to settle with us—in the work of the ministry, and that the parish committee apply to Dr John Reed, Rev Mr Strong, and Rev Mr Sheldon to assist, and that the committee provide for them."

March 23, 1812, "Voted to choose a Committee of Seven men to procure a candidate or candidates to supply the pulpit, and made choice of Gideon Howard Esq, Howard Cary Esq, Dea Ichabod Howard, Abel Kingman Esq, Dea David Edson, Caleb Howard Esq, and Capt Zachariah Gurney."

A meeting was held July 13, 1812, "To see if the Parish are united in Mr Daniel Huntington as a preacher of the Gospell," it was "voted unanimously in favor of Mr Daniel Huntington," "and to use means to procure him to supply the pulpit preparatory to a settlement." "Voted that the Committee already chosen to perform that Duty use their discretion either to apply personally or by letter."

Aug. 17, 1812, "Voted to Join with the church to give Mr. Huntington a Call to settle with us in the work of the Sacred Ministry;" also "voted to offer him Seven Hundred Dollars as settlement and Seven Hundred dollars as an annual salary, or Seven Hundred and fifty Dollars, to be paid annually so long as he remain our minister." Capt. Jesse Perkins, Deacon David Edson, Deacon Ichabod Howard, Caleb Howard, Esq., Howard Cary, Esq., Joseph Silvester, Esq., Abel Kingman, Esq., were chosen a committee to wait upon Mr. Huntington and make him the above offer, which was in the following words:

"To Mr. Daniel Huntington, Candidate for the Sacred Ministry:

"SIR,—Whereas the Grate head of the Church in his wiss and Righteous Providence has seen fit that this church and Society should be Destitute of a pastor, we are desirous to have the regular administration of gospel ordinances restored to us, and having had so much Experience of your good abilities as a gospel preacher, am induced to hope that your labors may be blest among us. We, therefore, members of the fourth church and congregation in Bridgewater, do hereby give you solemn call to settle with us, and take upon you the sacred office of pastor according to the regular mode practised in our churches. That you may be more particularly informed of the doings of the parish, a committee consisting of the following gentlemen, viz.: Capt. Jesse Perkins, Dea. David Edson, Dea. Ichabod Howard, Caleb Howard, Esq., Howard Cary, Esq., Joseph Sylvester, Esq., Abel Kingman, Esq., will wait upon you with the votes of the parish relative to the encouragement they offer you as an inducement to settle with us in the sacred ministry, and give you such other information as you may desire. Your answer is requested as soon as may be consistent with a full deliberation on so solemn and important a Subject.

"Signed by order and in behalf of said Parish.

"MOSES CARY, Moderator.

"JESSE PERKINS, Parish Clerk.

"BRIDGEWATER, Aug. 17, 1812."

Answer.

"To the members of the fourth Church and Society in Bridgewater:

"Sept. 14, 1812.

"BRETHREN AND FRIENDS: Having taken into serious and prayerful consideration the invitation Which you have given me to settle among you in the Gospel ministry, together with the offer which accompanies it, viewing almost unanimous expression of your wish and the pecuniary provision which evinces its sincerity, as indicative of the will of our divine Master, who in his providence has brought us together, I have thought it my duty to accede to your proposal, and hold myself in readiness to take upon me the sacred offices of your pastor according to the regular order of church whenever it shall please the great head of the church by the laying on of hands by the Presbytery to put me in trust with the Gospel. With Regard to choice of compensation which was left me by your note, I would inform you that the first offer, viz.: Seven Hundred as a settlement, and Seven Hundred as an annual salary is preferred and accepted.

"Yet before the question of my settlement among you is fully concluded, suffer me to present to you a few requests, Which I believe it cannot be incompatible with your interest to grant, and, First. It is my wish that for the words 'until it is needful to procure another minister in his room,' which is annexed as a limitation to your offer of a salary, the following may be substituted: 'During his ministry among us,' as the latter expression, it is thought will more safely guard against future misunderstanding. Second. I have to request, for the same purpose, that my letter addressed through the hands of Silas Packard, Esq., to the Church and Society, on subjects connected with my proposed settlement, may be put on record, that I may not be excluded from the society of my friends and relatives, who reside at some distance, nor be debarred such recreations as is necessary to health. I must request the privilege of exemption from parochial duty for three weeks annually. Shall these requests be granted?

"Brethren and Friends, I shall cheerfully give myself to the work of the ministry among you, confidently hoping that you will receive me in brotherly love, and constantly exercise towards me that christian tenderness and candor, for which delicacy and responsibility of my situation will so loudly call above all, trusting that you will not cease to supplicate the God of all grace and consolation that he would bless our connection and make it a source of our mutual and everlasting joy.

"Your Brother and Servant in Christ,

"DANIEL HUNTINGTON."

North Parish, Sept. 14, 1812. "Voted that the ordination be on the last Wednesday in October. Accordingly the Council met on the Twenty-Eighth Day of October, consisting of Rev. Zedekiah Sanger, D.D., of South Bridgewater; Rev. John Reed, D.D., of West Bridgewater; Rev. James Flint, D.D., of East Bridgewater; Rev. Daniel Thomas, of Abington; Rev. Jacob Norton, of Weymouth; Rev. Thomas T. Richmond, of Stoughton; Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., of Easton; Rev. Jonathan Strong, D.D., of Randolph; Rev. Edward D. Griffin, D.D., of Boston; Rev. Joshua Huntington, of Boston; Rev. Abel McEwen, of New London, Conn.; together with their delegates," and he was duly installed as pastor of the "Fourth Church in Bridgewater." Rev. Mr. McEwen preached the sermon from the text, Nehemiah vi. 3: "I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down; why should the work cease whilst I leave it, and come down to you?" Rev. Dr. Griffin offered the ordaining prayer. Rev. Dr. Sanger gave the charge. Rev. Mr. Huntington, of Boston, a brother of the pastor-elect, then pastor of the Old South Church in Boston, extended the right hand of fellowship.

Of the success of Rev. D. Huntington's labors among this church and society, we may say that, at the time of his settlement, the parish was just recovering from the effects of an unhappy division. This recovery, of course, was gradual; and the first three years may be considered as occupied in wearing out the prejudices and jealousies thus excited, so that the ordinary means of grace could be profitably used. During this period of time the ways of Zion mourned. In 1812 but one was received into the church on profession, and one in 1813; in 1814, three; in 1815, one; and then came one of God's times to favor Zion. In 1816 seventy eight were added to the church (a full and interesting account of this revival was published by Rev. Mr. Huntington in the Boston Recorder, June 10, 1817), and in 1817 ten more were added as the fruits of the same harvest. During the whole time he remained with this people, a period of twenty-one years, there were received into the church two hundred and fifty-three members; previous to 1820 there were one hundred and six members admitted. The years 1830, 1831, and 1832 were distinguished by an unusual interest in this church and neighboring churches. During those years eighty-six were added.

As a consequence of too frequent services in his own and neighboring churches the health of the pastor gradually failed, and he was obliged to resign his pastoral labors, which he did by a letter, which was read to the congregation by Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, of Randolph, March 10, 1833, and calling a meeting on the 19th of the same month to act upon the request. Agreeably to the notification the church met, and Eliphalet Kingman chosen to preside. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Huntington, the subject of the request of the pastor was considered, and after careful inquiry concerning the necessity of the measure proposed, it was "voted, unanimously, that although we most sincerely regret the necessity of the Measure proposed, yet we feel constrained by a sense of Duty to our pastor, and to the cause which both he and we profess to love, to comply with his request;" also made choice of Deacon Sylvanus French, Dr. Nathan Perry, and Heman Packard a committee to represent the church before the council, which consisted of Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., First Church in Easton; Rev. Richard S. Storrs, First Church in Braintree; Rev. Melancthon G. Wheeler, First Church in Abington; Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, First Church in Randolph.

This council convened at the house of the pastor, March 27, 1833, Rev. R. S. Storrs moderator, Rev. Calvin Hitchcock scribe. Afterward adjourned to Col. Edward Southworth's hall, where a communication was read, presented from the church and society, in which it was declared that it was with great reluctance they consented to his dismissal, and as an expression for the pastor's ill health, "Voted that he be requested to accept of a liberal donation."

The council, after mature deliberation, voted "that in view of all the circumstances of the case before them they are constrained, with much reluctance, to express their concurrence with the parties in reference to the dismissal of Rev. Daniel Huntington, and do consider his pastoral and ministerial Relation as regularly dissolved according to Ecclesiastical order," and state that,—

"The providence of God, that has so clearly indicated this result, is deeply mysterious. When we reflect on the uninterrupted harmony of feeling, and the entire cordiality of the intercourse and co-operation of the pastor and the flock for more than twenty years, and add to this the fact of a constantly strengthening attachment, down to the present time, and also the remembrance of the unusual amount of blessing with which the relation now dissolved has been attended, we are constrained to pause in silent wonder, and then exclaim, 'Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight.' In pronouncing the relation dissolved, we feel we are but declaring the will of Heaven; and most deeply do we sympathize with Each of the parties in this mutual trial. To the dearly beloved brother, with whom we have so long walked to the house of God in company, and so often taken sweet council, we give a parting hand, with emotions that cannot be uttered. We know him,—we love him; we shall never forget him nor his toils, nor his sorrows, nor his joys, nor his paternal sympathies, nor his rich success in the cause of the Redeemer; and most affectionately do we commend him as a faithful brother, and able minister of the new testament, a strenuous defender of the faith once delivered to the Saints, and an indefatigable laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. Our prayers will go up to God without ceasing, that he may be fully restored to the services of the Sanctuary, and become the Spiritual father and guide of other hundreds in some other portions of our Zion; and that he may long live, and everywhere enjoy the same hallowed confidence, and full esteem of his brethren, which have been inspired by his uniform course of conduct, in the sphere of action from which he now departs in obedience to the call of Heaven. The brethren of the church and the members of this society will accept the assurance of strong sympathy and unimpaired affection on the part of this council. There is no root of bitterness that has sprung up in an evil hour; it is no diminution of your love; it is no spirit of envy or covetousness that has brought you into your present state of trial. The hand of the Almighty afflicts you; and will you not say, shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil? We know, beloved brethren, that hearts are ready to break, and that you sorrow most of all, lest you should see the face of your beloved pastor no more. But while we cannot chide your tears, nor wonder that you are ready to inquire, Why, Lord? we are bound to say to you, fear not. The same God who gave you the treasure in which you have so long rejoiced still lives, and listens to the sighs and prayers of his people; go to him, and he will sustain and direct and bless you still. The friends of your pastor will be your friends; his brethren will be your brethren; his God will be your God. Live in Love, cherish unity of spirit, and preserve it ever in the bonds of peace. As your sorrows are mutual, so shall be your consolations. As your day is, your strength shall be. And hereafter, when the Son of man shall appear in the clouds of heaven, may you, with your beloved and faithful pastor, and your children of many generations, stand before him, and hear from his lips the blessing, 'Well done, good and faithful servant; enter ye into the joy of your Lord.'

"RICHARD S. STORRS, Moderator.

"CALVIN HITCHCOCK, Scribe.

"A true copy:

"HEMAN PACKARD, Clerk."

Rev. Mr. Huntington was afterwards settled for several years over the South Congregational Church and Society at Campello.

Rev. Daniel Huntington removed to New London, Conn., and engaged in teaching a private school of young ladies, preaching only occasionally, where he remained till called to settle at Campello, Mass., Jan. 1, 1840.

MINISTRY OF REV. WILLIAM THOMPSON.—Again, after the lapse of twenty-one years, is this society called upon to fill a vacancy in their pulpit, caused by the dismissal of Rev. D. Huntington. March 19, 1833, "Voted to choose a committee of five to supply with preaching," and Darius Littlefield, Heman Packard, Capt. Jeremiah Beals, Lieut. Ephraim Cole, and Deacon Sylvanus French were chosen said committee.

June 13, 1833. At a meeting of the parish, held this day, "Voted to give Rev. William Thompson a call to settle with them as their pastor." Mr. Thompson, however, wishing for time to consider the matter, gave his decision July 24th, accepting the invitation of the society, and they "voted to have the ordination Sept. 18, 1833." (Afterwards changed to the 17th.)

Accordingly, an ecclesiastical council was held at the house of Silas Packard, Esq., September 17th, at nine o'clock A.M., for the purpose of ordaining Mr. Thompson, which consisted of the following:

Rev. Joel H. Lindsey, of Park Street Church, Boston; Zachariah Gurney, delegate.

Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, D.D., West Randolph; Ezekiel French, delegate.

Rev. David Brigham, East Randolph; Ezra Thayer, delegate.

Rev. Baalis Sanford, Union Church, East and West Bridgewater; Samuel Rider, delegate.

Rev. Ebenezer Gay, Trinitarian Church, Bridgewater; Isaac Fobes, delegate.

Rev. Luther Sheldon, Easton; Giles Randall, delegate.

Rev. John Codman, Dorchester; Deacon Charles Howe, delegate.

Rev. Daniel Huntington, New London, Conn. (former pastor).

The council proceeded to examine the papers as laid before them, and receiving testimonials of Mr. Thompson's church-standing and theological studies, with his approbation to preach the gospel, and examining him as to his views and acquaintance with experimental religion, and becoming fully satisfied with them, it was "voted unanimously to proceed to ordain him."

The following was the order of exercises:

1, voluntary, by the choir; 2, anthem; 3, introductory prayer, by Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater; 4, hymn,—“There is a stream, whose gentle flow;” 5, sermon, by Rev. Joel H. Lindsey, of Park Street Church, Boston, text, 2 Cor. ii. 16, “And who is sufficient for these things?” 6, ordaining prayer, by Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, D.D., of Randolph; 7, hymn, tune “Old Hundred,”—

“Great Lord of angels, we adore
The grace that builds thy courts below;
And through ten thousand sons of light,
Stops to regard what mortals do.

“Amidst the wastes of time and death,
Successive pastors thou dost raise,
Thy charge to keep, thy house to guide,
And form a people for thy praise.

“At length, dismissed from feeble clay,
Thy servants join th' angelic band;
With them, through distant worlds they fly;
With them before thy presence stand.

“Oh, glorious hope! oh, blest employ!
Sweet lenitive of grief and care!
When shall we reach those radiant courts,
And all their joy and honor share?

“Yet while these labors we pursue,
Thus distant from thy heavenly throne,
Give us a zeal and love like theirs,
And half their heaven shall here be known.”

8, charge to pastor, by Rev. Daniel Huntington; 9, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Baalis Sanford, of East Bridgewater; 10, address to the church and society, by Rev. Daniel Huntington; 11, anthem,—“Let us, with the joyful mind;” 12, concluding prayer, by Rev. David Brigham, of East Randolph; 13, doxology,—“Praise God, from whom all blessings flow;” 14, benediction, by the pastor.

The day was unusually pleasant, and the exercises very interesting and satisfactory to all present.

Mr. Thompson continued with this people but a short time, owing to a pressing call from a new theological seminary at East Windsor, Conn., which he received in September, 1834, and which, after one refusal and another urgent call, he was led to accept, and where he now labors as “Professor of Biblical Literature,” at East Windsor, Conn. The council called for advice in relation to the request of Rev. Mr. Thompson for dismissal, convened at the house of Silas Packard, Esq., Sept. 4, 1834, and consisted of the following persons:

Those chosen by the pastor were,—

Rev. John Codman, D.D., of Dorchester; Rev. Daniel Dana, D.D., of Newburyport, Mass.; Rev. George W. Blagden, D.D., of Salem Street Church, Boston; Rev. Elisha Fisk, of Wrentham, Mass.; Rev. Lyman Matthews, of Braintree.

Those appointed by the church and society were as follows:

Rev. Warren Fay, D.D., of Charlestown, Mass.; Rev. S. Gile, of Milton; Rev. Jacob Ide, of Medway, Mass.; Rev. Sylvester Holmes, of New Bedford, Mass.; Rev. Erastus Maltby, of Taunton, Mass.

The claims of the seminary were strongly urged by Rev. Dr. Tyler, president of the institution, in behalf of the trustees, and the claims of the society and church were represented by Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, D.D., of Randolph, in a very able manner. The council, after considerable discussion and deliberation, “voted that the relation between Rev. William Thompson and the Church be dissolved.” The society held a meeting Sept. 5, 1834, and "voted to accept of the report of the Council," which is as follows:

"The removal of settled pastors from their charges endangers in a high degree the best interests of the churches, and is not to be encouraged except where circumstances seem clearly and imperiously to demand it. Such circumstances in the present interesting state of the world, when so much is doing for the cause of Christ, must be expected to occur. And when they do, are to be met with a spirit of expanded benevolence, both by churches and their pastors. Especially should this be the case when the Theological Seminaries of our land call upon us for those who, by talent, experience, acquisitions, and, more than all, by practical piety, are needed to instruct those who are to be under shepherds of the flocks of the Redeemer. In yielding up their pastors to such claims, when clearly and affectionately presented, the churches emphatically give, and have given, to them again in full measure, pressed down and running over.

"When other pastors sent forth by the instrumentality of him who was once their own, becoming willing and efficient workmen in many parts of the Lord's vineyard, such is the call now made upon this beloved church by one of these institutions, and the council would affectionately suggest that in considering this call it is important that the church should contemplate the relations to the vital interests of the whole of Zion sustained by such seminaries, and reflect also upon the fact that as they are dependent in a great measure on such institutions for faithful workmen, who shall go forth and reap the harvest of the world now white for their entrance, it becomes them to cherish toward them no common interest, but to be ready to sustain them by their most earnest endeavors. Especially should this be the case when it is remembered that the instructors in these seminaries, since they are to teach those who are to be future pastors, should be previously taught themselves in the field of practical labor, and must therefore generally come from our churches. Impressed with such sentiments, this council do advise this church to acquiesce in the late decision of their beloved pastor, and resign him to what he believes to be the call of the great Head of the church.

"Some of the council desire it to be stated that they have come to this decision without deciding on the merits of the Theological Institute of Connecticut, but solely on the ground of Mr. Thompson's strong conviction of duty, and would express their opinion that but for such a conviction now publicly and clearly expressed, he might still be more useful in this present sphere of labor. The council recommend that the adoption of this result should be understood by the church and society as dissolving the connection between them and their beloved pastor; and in announcing this result they wish to express their strong sympathy in the self-denial the contemplated separation must cost them, and to assure them of their fervent prayers in their behalf. To this people it may be difficult to resign a pastor to whom their attachment is so strong, and in whom confidence is so entire. This trial seems to be aggravated by dissolving this happy relation so soon after it had been formed. All this the council most deeply feel, yet we confide in God to sustain and guide you in this day of your affliction. And here our confidence in your future course and prospects is greatly strengthened by a recollection of your unanimity in the changes through which you have passed, while we commend you to the great Head of the church, we fervently pray that you may remain of one mind, and soon be perfectly united in another pastor, who shall guide you and your children to that rest where the pain of separation shall be known no more.

"JOHN CODMAN, Moderator.

"ERASTUS MALTBY, Scribe.

"A true copy of the original result.

"ERASTUS MALTBY, Scribe.

MINISTRY OF REV. PAUL COUCH.—At a meeting of the society held July 20, 1835, it was "voted to unite with the Church in giving Rev. Paul Couch a Call to settle with us in the ministry, not one dissenting vote." Also, "Voted that we offer the Rev. Mr. Couch an annual Salary of Seven Hundred and fifty dollars, and also a Gift of One Hundred and fifty dollars."

August 9th. "Chose a committee of five to confer with Mr. Couch and agree upon a council. Capt. Jeremiah Beals, Eliphalet Kingman, Esq., Jesse Perkins, Esq., Nahum Perkins, and Deacon Sylvanus French were selected for that purpose, who agreed upon the following persons:

Rev. Ebenezer Gay, Trinitarian Church, Bridgewater; Cornelius Holmes, delegate.

Rev. Baalis Sanford, Union Church, East and West Bridgewater; Deacon John Soule, delegate.

Rev. James W. Ward, First Church in Abington; Richard Vining, delegate.

Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, West Randolph; Ezekiel French, delegate.

Rev. David Brigham, East Randolph; Thaddeus French, delegate.

Rev. Erastus Maltby, Trinitarian, Taunton; George B. Atwood, delegate.

Rev. John Codman, Second Congregational Church, Dorchester; Deacon Charles Howe, delegate.

Rev. David Sanford, Dorchester.

Rev. Samuel Gile, D.D., Milton.

Rev. Jonas Perkins, D.D., Braintree.

Rev. Daniel Huntington, New London, Conn. (former pastor).

Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., First Church, Easton; Caleb Pratt, delegate.

Wednesday, Oct. 7, 1835, being the day agreed upon for his installation, Col. Nathan Jones, Capt. Jeremiah Beals, and Jesse Perkins were chosen a committee to make arrangements for that day.

The following was the order of exercises:

1, voluntary, by the choir; 2, anthem, by Haydn,—"Wake the Song of Jubilee;" 3, introductory prayer, by Rev. Erastus Maltby; 4, original hymn, by their former pastor, Rev. D. Huntington:

"Herald of our Saviour God,

Welcome, welcome, in his name!

Sound his wondrous grace abroad;

All his boundless love proclaim.

"Sinners renewed—lost—defiled,
Shall the joyful news receive:
Cleansed, restored, and reconciled,
Bless his holy name, and live.

"To each bruised and bleeding heart,
Gilead's healing balm apply;
Hope to trembling souls impart;
Wipe the tear from sorrow's eye.

"Through Emanuel's favored land,
Sound the trump of Jubilee!
Bid the prison-doors expand;
Hail the ransomed captives free;"

5, sermon, by Rev. John Codman, D.D.; 6, consecrating prayer, by Rev. Jonas Perkins, D.D.; 7, original hymn, by Rev. D. Huntington:

"Ascended Saviour, thee we praise,
For all thy truth and kindness shown,
Accept the honors that we raise,
And smile upon us from thy throne.

"Yea, from that glorious throne come down;
Here with thy church vouchsafe to stay,
And let thy oostant presence crown
The joys of this auspicious day!

"Still let our faith expect and prove
Th' exhaustless bounty of thy hand;
And while we taste thy richest love,
Our heart with gratitude expand.

"A double portion of thy grace
On this thy messenger bestow;
And 'neath the shining of thy face,
Let his with heavenly lustre glow.

"Grant him these num'rous souls to bear,
As trophies of his faithful love,—
Seals of his high commission here,—
Gems in his crown of joy above.

"Then to thy great and holy name,
Pastor and flock, through endless days,
Thy truth and mercy shall proclaim,
In rapt'rous songs of grateful praise."

8, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Samuel Gile, of Milton; 9, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Baalis Sanford; 10, address to the church and society, by Rev. Calvin Hitchcock; 11, anthem, by Mozart,—
"Hallelujah, Amen;"<sup>1</sup> 12, concluding prayer, by Rev. Ebenezer Gay; 13, benediction, by Rev. Paul Couch.

Rev. Mr. Couch continued to preach the gospel to this people in all its simplicity, and with marked ability, freedom, and candor,—such as had its desired effect upon the community in which he moved,—till May 8, 1859, when he asked to be relieved from his pastoral labors, which request was granted July 1, 1859, and the estimation in which he was held by his people may be seen in the following resolutions, which were passed by the church at a meeting held on that day:

"Resolved, That while in view of the circumstances set forth by our pastor in his communication as the reasons which, in his opinion, render it expedient that he go away, and which have induced him to request his release from his pastoral charge over this church and society and people, we have at a previous meeting, reluctantly recorded our assent to his request. And we esteem it a duty which we owe to ourselves, and to him, to say that in taking this step we defer to his judgment, and consult his express wishes, and are not led to it by any disaffection on our part.

"We still appreciate those traits in his character which, manifested among us, won for him our affection and regard, and we will cheerfully bear testimony, unitedly, to that high mental culture, that maturity of judgment, that sincerity, earnestness, and fearlessness, in declaring from the pulpit the counsels of God; that ready sympathy with the afflicted and sorrowful among his people, and that love and known consistency of his daily life with his office as minister of Christ, which have constrained us always to esteem with respect and reverence his teachings, and to submit with love and confidence to his guidance; and when in the prospect of a speedy separation all these things are vividly brought to mind concerning our beloved pastor, it is not without painful misgivings that we consent to the sundering of those ties which, for the period of twenty-four years, bound him to this church and people.

"Resolved, If such separation takes place, we tender our pastor assurances of our wishes and our prayers for his welfare, wherever he may be called to labor, and express the hope that his labors here may prove to him as he goes, and to us who remain, not only a present memory, but, by the grace of God, a means and a pledge of a happy reunion of church and pastor in a better world."

With a view to the dismissal of Mr. Couch, an ecclesiastical council was called for the purpose of hearing and acting upon the request of their pastor for a dissolution of his connection with the church and society, which meeting was held July 19, 1859. The council was as follows:

Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree; Elisha French, delegate.

Rev. Jonas Perkins, D.D., of Braintree; Levi W. Hobart, delegate.

Rev. Charles W. Wood, of Campello; Josiah W. Kingman, delegate.

Rev. Ezekiel Russell, D.D., of East Randolph; John Adams, delegate.

After hearing the statement of the pastor requesting his dismissal, and the statements of the church and society, who very reluctantly yielded their assent, the council voted:

"That in view of all the circumstances, the strong convictions and preference of the pastor, and the assent, though reluctant, of the church and society, it is expedient that the ministerial and pastoral relation of the Rev. Paul Couch to the First Church and Society in North Bridgewater be dissolved, the dissolution to take effect, or the relation to terminate, the first day of August, 1859.

<sup>1</sup> The music on that occasion was conducted by Thomas J. Gurney, and was of the highest order, and the other exercises were highly gratifying to a large and attentive audience.

"In coming to this result the council cannot withhold the expression of their deep regret that a connection that has so long existed, been so auspicious to both pastor and people, sealed by effusions of the Eternal Spirit, cemented by mutual affection and esteem, and so productive of permanent good to the cause of truth and the honor of Christ in the world, should be thus sundered. Deeming themselves incompetent to judge of the validity of all the reasons for the course pursued, and trusting much to the sound discretion and judgment of the parties themselves, this council still, in view of all the circumstances, seem constrained to acquiesce in what seems to be the leadings of Providence. This council deeply regret the separation from one whose urbanity, large experience, and Christian kindness and wisdom have ever done so much to enlighten and cheer ministerial intercourse in all its connections. They therefore commend the Rev. Paul Couch to the churches of Christ, as one rich in ministerial experience, able, gifted, faithful, and beloved, with no blemish on either his Christian or ministerial reputation. This council also commend this dear church for the sacrifice they have made for the cause of truth, and the prosperity of the kingdom of Christ in this place. They commend them for the affection and kindness they have shown to their pastor, their deference to his wishes, their provision for his wants. They would urge them also to a settlement of the gospel ministry among themselves as soon as circumstances will allow it, and to a perseverance in the cause hitherto pursued.

"They, finally, deeply sympathize with them in their separation from a pastor that has been so long and so justly respected and beloved, and commend them in their disappointment to the care of the Shepherd of Israel.

"RICHARD S. STORRS, Moderator.

"EZEKIEL RUSSELL, Scribe.

"A true copy of the doings of the council.

"E. RUSSELL, Scribe.

"NORTH BRIDGEWATER, July 19, 1859."

Rev. Mr. Couch preached his farewell discourse July 31, 1859.

On Monday evening following a large number of the society and friends came together in the vestibule of the church for the purpose of presenting him and his family tokens of their regard to them. A gold watch and one hundred dollars in money were presented to Mr. Couch, a silver goblet and a set of spoons to Mrs. Couch, and a splendid guitar to their daughter, Miss Harriet E. Couch, who had sung in their choir for many years.

From North Bridgewater, Rev. Mr. Couch removed to North Cambridge, Mass., where he received an invitation to preach. Here also the people had taken possession of the house he was to occupy by stocking it well with a year's supply of provisions.

Rev. Paul Couch was born in Newburyport, June 21, 1803; attended the public schools of his native town till the age of sixteen years, attending one year in a private academy; entered the Freshman class in Dartmouth College, N. H., 1820; graduated in 1823; studied three years in the Theological Seminary at Andover, Mass.; commenced preaching in the fall of 1826; first ordained at West Newbury,

Mass., in March, 1827; married Miss Harriette Tyler, of Griswold, Conn., May 28, 1827; settled at Bethlehem, Conn., in 1829; left there in 1834, and was installed in North Bridgewater in October, 1835, and dismissed at his own request, after a service of twenty-four years, in 1859. Since that time he has been preaching in North Cambridge one year, and in various places, and now, in 1865, has been preaching at Stonington, Conn., for upwards of a year. They have had seven children, five of whom are now living,—the oldest son living in Brooklyn, N. Y.; second son is in Victoria, Vancouver's Island; third is in the Eighteenth Regiment of Connecticut Volunteers; fourth was a graduate of Harvard College in 1864; his daughter is married, and resides in Jewett City, Conn.

Publications of Rev. Paul Couch :

Two sermons, preached Dec. 23, 1849. Published by Damrell & Moore, Boston, 1849.

Temperance sermons on different occasions.

Sermon preached at the funeral of Rev. Daniel Thomas, former pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Abington, on Friday, Jan. 8, 1847. Published by T. R. Marvin, 1847.

Sermon preached in the First Congregational Church of Stonington, Conn., Aug. 6, 1863, on national thanksgiving.

MINISTRY OF REV. NATHANIEL B. BLANCHARD.—Immediately after the dismissal of Rev. Mr. Couch, an invitation was given to Rev. N. B. Blanchard, a native of Abington, Mass., who had been preaching for three years at Plymouth, to supply their pulpit for one year, commencing the first Sabbath in August, 1859. After this term had expired they had become so attached to him as a preacher, and finding him to be a man of ability, he received a call June 12, 1861, to settle with them as their pastor; which call he accepted Aug. 4, 1861, and was installed Sept. 18, 1861. The council consisted of Rev. T. Stowe, of New Bedford; Rev. Henry B. Hooker, D.D., of Boston; Rev. Jonas Perkins, D.D., of Braintree; Rev. H. D. Walker, of Abington; Rev. Charles L. Mills, of the Porter Church in North Bridgewater; and Rev. Stephen G. Dodd, of East Randolph; Rev. James P. Terry, of South Weymouth.

After the business meeting and examination of the papers of the pastor-elect, the council proceeded to the services of installation, commencing at one and a half o'clock P.M., with the following order of exercises: 1, voluntary; 2, reading of the Scriptures and prayer, by Rev. Mr. Stowe; 3, hymn; 4, sermon, by Rev. Dr. Hooker, D.D.; 5, installing prayer, by Rev. Jonas Perkins, D.D.; 6, anthem; 7, charge to the pastor, by Rev. H. D. Walker; 8, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Charles L. Mills; 9, charge to the people, by Rev. S. G. Dodd; 10, prayer, by R. J. P. Terry; 11, hymn; 12, benediction by the pastor.

The sermon on this occasion is said to have been an able and interesting exposition of the relations of the gospel of Christ to the human conscience, and the other services were of an interesting nature. Mr. Blanchard continued his labors of love to this people until the month of August, 1862, when, his health failing, he relinquished his labors for a season to travel, that he might recover. He was on his way to Plymouth, N. H., stopping at Concord, N. H., became worse, and there died, Aug. 7, 1862. His remains were brought to his church, where funeral services were attended by Rev. H. D. Walker, of East Abington, August 9th; and afterwards his body was taken to Edgartown for burial.

At a meeting of the church, held soon after the funeral, the following resolutions were passed, expressive of their feelings at his decease:

"WHEREAS, Almighty God, by his inscrutable Providence, has removed from us our beloved pastor, Rev. Nathaniel B. Blanchard, by death,—

Resolved, That we are deeply sensible of the great loss we have sustained by being deprived of his instructive, faithful, earnest, and zealous ministrations; that we received him as a man after God's own heart; that we loved him as our pastor and our friend; and we would honor his memory as that of one endeared to us by the most holy associations.

Resolved, That in all the civil and social relations, while he sustained the dignity of his profession and sacred office, Mr. B., by the grace and urbanity of his demeanor, won the respect and affectionate regard of all the members of the community in which he moved.

Resolved, That we heartily sympathize with his family in this the sad hour of their bereavement.

Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be published in the North Bridgewater Gazette, and also that a copy of the same be sent to the widow of the deceased.

"HENRY HOWARD, Clerk."

Rev. Nathaniel Bailey Blanchard was born in Abington, Mass., July 16, 1827. In 1848 he became a member of the Congregational Church in East Abington; in 1853 graduated at Amherst College; in 1855 he completed his theological course at Bangor, Me.; July 15, 1856, he was ordained to the Christian ministry of Edgartown, Mass. While at this place he was married. He became a pastor of the Pilgrim Church in Plymouth, Mass., where he remained three years. On Sept. 18, 1861, he was installed as pastor of the First Congregational Church in North Bridgewater. While preaching at that place his health failed him, and he became unable to perform the services incumbent upon a pastor. He started on a journey for his health, and, on his way to Plymouth, N. H., stopping at Concord, grew worse, and died Aug. 7, 1862, aged thirty-five years. He was a man universally loved and respected wherever he went, and from his youth was a thoughtful boy, with high aims and noble purposes, faithful in all the minor duties, and true in all the social and fraternal relations. He made the most of his opportunities, entering with a heart full of zeal and love upon his work,—his joy of preaching Christ. Sincerity, kindness, and the constraining love of Christ shone forth in all his walk.

MINISTRY OF REV. EDWARD L. CLARK.—After the decease of Rev. Mr. Blanchard, the pulpit was supplied by various ministers, among whom was Mr. Clark. At a meeting of the First Congregational Church, held April 11, 1863, it was unanimously voted to give Mr. Edward L. Clark a call to become their pastor; which call he accepted, and was installed Sept. 22, 1863.

The following churches were invited to the installation of Rev. Mr. Clark, viz.:

Porter Evangelical Church, Brockton: Rev. Samuel H. Lee, pastor; David Howard, delegate.

South Congregational Church, Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; George Sawyer, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of Bridgewater: Rev. E. Douglas, pastor.

Union Church of East Bridgewater: Rev. N. H. Broughton, pastor; Galen R. Richards, delegate.

First Church of Stoughton: Ebenezer Drake, delegate.

First Church of Randolph: Ebenezer Alden, M.D., delegate.

Second Church of Randolph: Rev. S. G. Dodd, pastor; Deacon T. W. Whiting, delegate.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook: Rev. Ezekiel Russell, pastor; Deacon Moses French, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. Frederick R. Abbe, pastor; Deacon John A. King, delegate.

Second Church of Abington: William P. Cottrell, delegate.

Third Church of Abington: Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor; Levi Reed, delegate.

Second Church of Weymouth: Rev. J. P. Terry, pastor; William Dyer, delegate.

Union Church of Weymouth: Rev. S. H. Hayes, pastor; Benjamin Ells, delegate.

South Church of Braintree: Rev. L. R. Eastman, pastor; Paul Wild, delegate.

First Church of Braintree: Deacon Elias Hayward, delegate.

Harvard Congregational Church of Brookline: Rev. J. Lewis Diman, pastor; Deacon John N. Turner, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Somerville: Rev. David Temple Packard, pastor; Deacon Jesse Lovett, delegate.

Park Street Church of Boston: Rev. Andrew L. Stone, pastor; Martin L. Keith, delegate.

Second Church of Dorchester: Rev. James H. Means, pastor; Stephen Wales, delegate.

The following ministers were present by special invitation:

Rev. Paul Couch, of Jewett City, Conn.

Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., of Easton, Mass.

Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater, Mass.

Rev. Jonas Perkins, of Braintree, Mass.

Rev. David Brigham, of Fall River, Mass.

After a careful examination of the papers that had passed between Mr. Clark and the church and society, and finding them satisfactory, the council proceeded to examine the candidate, closely interrogating him in regard to his religious experience, and becoming fully satisfied, "voted to proceed to the services of installation," which were in the following order:

1, introductory prayer, by Rev. Charles W. Wood, of Campello; 2, reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Ebenezer Douglas, Bridgewater; 3, singing 518th hymn of the Psalmist; 4, sermon, Rev. A. L. Stone, of Park Street Church, Boston; 5, anthem, by the choir; 6, installing prayer, by Rev. Jonas Perkins, D.D., of Braintree; 7, charge to the pastor, by Rev. J. Lewis Diman, of Brookline, Mass.; 8, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Samuel H. Lee, of the Porter Church; 9, address to the people, by Rev. Paul Couch, of Jewett City, Conn. (their former pastor); 10, concluding prayer, by Rev. D. Temple Packard, of Somerville, Mass.; 11, singing 117th Psalm; 12, benediction, by the pastor.

Rev. Edward L. Clark was born in Nashua, N. H., Feb. 3, 1838; fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.; graduated at Brown University, Providence, R. I., 1858; spent one year traveling through Egypt, Palestine, and other ancient places in the Holy Land; studied theology at Andover Theological Seminary; graduated 1862; was ordained as chaplain of the Twelfth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, with whom he remained one year; afterwards settled as pastor of the First Congregational Church in North Bridgewater, Sept. 22, 1863.

Mr. Clark continued to preach to this people with faithfulness and fidelity for nearly three years, when his impaired health caused him to send to the church and society the following letter of resignation;

"NORTH BRIDGEWATER, June 17, 1866.

"To the First Congregational Church.

"DEAR BRETHREN,—Believing that the providence of God has indicated by my health that the time has come for me to resign the care of the society, I desire you to unite with me in calling a council during the first week in July to advise in this matter.

"With the most fervent prayer for your continued prosperity, I remain your affectionate pastor,

"EDWARD L. CLARK."

The council called to dismiss the Rev. Edward L. Clark were as follows:

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; Josiah W. Kingman, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton: Rev. J. V. Hilton, pastor; Abel W. Kingman, M.D., delegate.

Third Church of Abington: Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor; Zenas Holbrook, delegate.

First Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; Ebenezer Alden, M.D., delegate.

First Church of Abington: John Newton Noyes, delegate.

Second Church of Abington: Rev. H. L. Edwards, pastor; Dean Spencer Vining, delegate.

Rev. Jonas Perkins, of Braintree, Mass.

After a careful examination of the position of pastor and people, the council came to the following resolution:

"While the Council deem it advisable that the connection which has so happily subsisted between the parties who called us should be dissolved, they come to this conclusion with sentiments of deep regret. It appears that the services of the Pastor, both in the pulpit and in every other department of Pastoral duty, have been increasingly satisfying to the people of his charge from the beginning, and that to many of them he has become especially beloved by reason of the success with which, during the latter part of his ministry, the Holy Spirit has attended his preaching. The council recommend him to the fellowship of the churches, and tender him their devout wishes that his health may be restored, and that he may be permitted for many years to labor successfully in the Lord's Vineyard. Also sympathizing with this beloved church and people, the council commend them to the Divine Shepherd that he preserve their unity and peace, and in due time give them a Pastor after his own heart.

"JONAS PERKINS, Moderator.

"H. L. EDWARDS, Scribe.

"NORTH BRIDGEWATER, July 2, 1866."

The church was now without a pastor, and the Rev. James Wilson Ward, Jr., was engaged to supply the pulpit for one year, from Dec. 9, 1866, at a salary of fourteen hundred dollars per year. Mr. Ward preached to this people during the term above named, and became much endeared to them, and on the 6th of December, 1867, it was voted by the parish to extend a call to him to become their pastor, which was declined.

On the 5th of December the following resolutions were placed on record as a token of the regard in which he was held by them as a preacher, viz.:

“Resolved, That Rev. James W. Ward, Jr., who has filled the office of pastor to this church for the past year, has shown himself a man of superior ability, ardent piety, and unquestionable Christian character, and worthy of the unlimited confidence and regard of this church, and we sincerely regret and deplore the necessity of a separation.”

Various preachers were heard during the year, and on the 3d of January, 1868, the society extended a call to Rev. Edson Rogers, who had supplied the pulpit for four Sabbaths, to become their pastor. This call was declined, and after hearing other candidates the church and society united in giving a call to Rev. Henry A. Stevens.

MINISTRY OF REV. HENRY A. STEVENS.—Mr. Stevens was called to settle with them as their pastor, with a salary of two thousand dollars, which was accepted, May 14, 1868, and Deacon John W. Kingman, Jonas R. Perkins, Esq., and John T. Burke were chosen a committee on the part of the church, and Edward Southworth, Jr., Deacon Joel T. Packard, and Samuel McLaughlin were chosen on the part of the society, to make arrangements for a council.

A mutual council was held June 24, 1868, the following churches having been invited to participate in the installation services on that occasion, viz.:

Old South Church of Boston: Rev. J. M. Manning, D.D., pastor; F. D. Allen, delegate.

First Trinitarian Congregational Church of Medford: Rev. J. T. McCollom, pastor; Deacon Samuel Train, delegate.

Old South Church of Reading, Mass.: Ambrose Kingman, delegate.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater, Mass.: Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor; Deacon George W. Holmes, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Daniel Reed, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; Adelbert F. Keith, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton: Deacon Simeon Packard, delegate.

Waquoit Congregational Church of Falmouth, Mass.: Rev. David Brigham, acting pastor.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook, Mass.: Rev. Ezekiel Russell, pastor; E. E. Holbrook, delegate.

First Church of Randolph, Mass.: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; Ebenezer Alden, M.D., delegate.

Also present by invitation:

Rev. Jonas Perkins, of Braintree.

Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater.

Rev. Baalis Sanford, of East Bridgewater.

The usual proceedings of councils in the examination of the candidate, the call, etc., having been concluded, they were deemed highly satisfactory, and the following programme for the services of installation was made, viz.:

1, reading of Scriptures and prayer, Rev. J. C. Larrabee; 2, sermon, Rev. J. M. Manning, D.D.; 3, installing prayer, Rev. David Brigham; 4, charge to the pastor, Rev. Horace D. Walker; 5, right hand of fellowship, Rev. Charles W. Wood; 6, address to the people, Rev. J. T. McCollom; 7, concluding prayer, Rev. Jonas Perkins; 8, benediction by the pastor.

Charles W. Wood, moderator; J. C. Larrabee, scribe.

March 13, 1874. Previous to this date the church had been called the “First Congregational Church, North Bridgewater.” At a meeting held this day it was voted to petition for a change of name to “Brockton.”

The committee of the church calling a council were J. T. Packard, Joseph Smith, F. B. Gardner, April 27, 1874.

May 8, 1874. A meeting of the council was held in the vestry to advise about the dismissal of Rev. H. A. Stevens.

The following churches were invited and represented, viz.:

Stoughton: Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor; Deacon E. Drake, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church: Rev. R. G. S. McNeille, pastor; Deacon Simeon Packard, delegate.

South Church, Campello: Rev. C. W. Wood, delegate.

First Church, Abington: Rev. S. E. Freeman, pastor; Deacon J. A. King, delegate.

Central, Bridgewater: Rev. H. D. Walker, pastor; A. M. Hayward, delegate.

Church in Randolph: Rev. John C. Larrabee, pastor; Deacon Joseph Graham, delegate.

Rev. C. W. Wood, moderator; R. G. S. McNeille, scribe.

After the usual hearing before councils on both sides, they retired, and reported their decision as follows:

“Resolved, That we accede to the request of Rev. H. A. Stevens for dismissal from the pastorate of the First Congregational Church.”

Rev. C. W. Wood, Rev. R. G. S. McNeille, and Rev. H. D. Walker were requested to put in form the result of the council, as follows :

"In coming to this conclusion (to wit, advising the dismissal of Bro. Stevens) we desire to express our deep regret at the necessity which exists for dissolving the relation with the First Church in Brockton. We recognize his pastorate as having been eminently successful, and are happy to know of the high respect and deep affection felt towards him on the part of the church and parish, as has been expressed by their representatives in their behalf. We commend Bro. Stevens to the churches of Christ as an eminently faithful, earnest, and successful minister of the Gospel, and trust Providence may prepare for him in the future even a larger field for successful ministration. We are compelled to express our regret that his health has been put in jeopardy by parochial work outside of his parish, and while we commend his large-hearted kindness and sympathy in ministering to the sick and afflicted, we recognize the labor which has exhausted his strength has been largely in behalf of those who are not attendants upon church, nor respectors of God's ordinances. He has been at once a pastor to his large church and a missionary without compensation to this town, and on the part of ourselves, his associates in labor, of our neighboring churches, we regret exceedingly that so kind a friend and faithful co-worker should feel obliged to remove from our neighborhood.

"We sympathize with the church in the loss of one so deeply endeared to their hearts, and trust that Providence will enable them speedily to unite in the choice of another husbandman of Christ who shall successfully enter into his labors.

"CHARLES W. WOOD, Moderator.

"R. G. S. McNEILLE, Scribe."

Various ministers were heard after the pulpit became vacant for over one year. On the 17th of March, 1875, a call was extended to Rev. F. A. Warfield, then of Greenfield, Mass., to become their pastor, with a salary of three thousand five hundred dollars yearly. To this invitation to settle Mr. Warfield returned a negative reply.

MINISTRY OF REV. ELBRIDGE P. McELROY.—July 23, 1875, the parish voted to unite with the church in extending a call to Rev. Elbridge P. McElroy to become their pastor. This call was accepted, and Mr. McElroy was installed on the 15th day of October, 1875, by a mutual council met for that purpose. The following churches composed the council, viz. :

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton : Rev. R. S. G. McNeille, pastor ; Henry W. Robinson, delegate.

First Church of Randolph : Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor.

Second Congregational Church of South Weymouth : Rev. George F. Stanton, pastor ; Deacon Jason Holbrook, delegate.

Central Square Congregational Church of Bridgewater : Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor ; H. D. Sanford, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Stoughton : Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor ; Deacon Nathaniel Gray, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Abington : Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor ; Deacon H. A. Noyes, delegate.

Union Church of Weymouth and Braintree : Rev. L. H. Frary, pastor ; Josiah Perkins, delegate.

Evangelical Church of Brighton : Rev. Henry A. Stevens, pastor ; George S. Conner, delegate.

Winthrop Congregational Church of Holbrook : Deacon Newton White, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello : Rev. L. S. Woodworth, pastor ; Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., delegate.

Village Church of Dorchester : Rev. Philander Thurston, pastor ; T. F. Clary, delegate.

Congregational Church of East Weymouth : Deacon Edwin Howard, delegate ; and Rev. David Brigham and Rev. Baalis Sanford.

The council met agreeable to the call, and the usual examination of the pastor, and the council finding everything satisfactory, the following order of exercises were agreed upon, viz. : 1, reading of the doings of the council by the scribe ; 2, invocation, by Rev. Philander Thurston ; 3, anthem,—“And many people shall go and say ;” 4, Scripture lesson, by Rev. L. S. Woodworth ; 5, hymn 985, sung by congregation ; 6, prayer of installation, by Rev. David Brigham ; 7, fellowship of the churches, by Rev. R. S. G. McNeille ; 8, anthem,—“Great and marvelous ;” 9, charge to the pastor, by Rev. H. D. Walker ; 10, address to the people, Rev. Henry A. Stevens ; 11, hymn 1151, by the choir ; 12, concluding prayer, by Rev. George F. Stanton ; 13, doxology, by the congregation ; 14, benediction, by the pastor.

J. C. Larrabee, moderator ; George E. Freeman, scribe.

Mr. McElroy preached to this church for two years, till Oct. 7, 1877, at which time he sent his resignation to the church and society, to take effect December 31st following. The estimation in which he was held by the people of his charge, both in church and society, may be best seen in the following testimonials :

"At a meeting of the First Church, held Oct. 18, 1877, it was voted to accept the resignation of Rev. E. P. McElroy.

"In accepting the resignation of our Pastor, the Rev. E. P. McElroy, we desire to place on record our appreciation of his consistent and persistent labors of the past two years to advance the spiritual interests of this church. We also recognize in his earnest endeavors to interest the children and direct their steps to the Saviour in the spirit of the Master, and in all his labors for the oppressed and the fallen we feel that he has followed closely in the footsteps of the Master, and wherever he may be called to labor, we pledge him our sympathies and our prayers.

"F. B. GARDNER, Clerk."

Nov. 5, 1877. At a meeting of the First Congregational Parish in Brockton, held this day, the following appears on record :

"Our beloved Pastor, Rev. Elbridge P. McElroy, having tendered his resignation, and the same having been accepted by the Parish,

"Resolved, That while we unwillingly acknowledge the necessity, and reluctantly admit the expediency of dissolving this connection, this parish recognizes with pleasure the indefatigable industry and zealous activity of Mr. McElroy in every movement for promoting the morality and well-being of this community, and that it entertains unlimited confidence in his integrity and pure Christian character.

"Resolved, That Mr. McElroy has been an earnest and efficient preacher of the truths of the Gospel, and will be followed wherever Providence may lead him with grateful interest, and our hearts' desire that he may find a wide, congenial field, where he may enjoy the fruits of his labors, and the unalloyed satisfaction of reaping the harvest of a successful ministry.

"JONAS R. PERKINS,
"WILLIAM A. SANFORD,
"FRANCIS B. GARDNER,
"Committee."

Pursuant to letters missive from the First Congregational Church, Brockton, an ecclesiastical council convened in the vestry of the church December 31st, at two and a half o'clock P.M.

The council was composed of the following churches represented by pastors and delegates, viz :

Central Square Church, Bridgewater : Rev. H. D. Walker, pastor ; Zebulon Pratt, delegate.

First Church, Abington : Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor ; Philip Trufant, delegate.

South Congregational Church, Campello : Rev. L. S. Woodworth, pastor ; N. H. Washburn, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church : George C. Cary, delegate.

First Church, Randolph : Rev. J. C. Larabee, pastor ; John Wales, delegate.

H. D. Walker was chosen moderator, and J. C. Larrabee, scribe.

After the letters of resignation and recommendation were read the council retired, and "Voted, to advise the dissolution of the Pastoral Relation existing between the Rev. E. P. McElroy and the First Church and Society in Brockton. In coming to this conclusion we yield reluctantly to the pressure of circumstances and exceedingly regret the necessity for a separation so shortly after the union of pastor and people was formed. We very heartily commend our Bro. McElroy to the churches of our order as one possessing many excellent qualifications for the work of the ministry. We believe his pastorate in Brockton has been marked by great earnestness, enthusiasm, and self-denying efforts, warm sympathies, and fidelity in preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Resolutions on the records of both church and parish show such a high estimate of Bro. McElroy in every relation that our sorrow at the separation is mingled with wonder that there should be the necessity which both parties seem to feel. We sympathize the more deeply with both, and commend Bro. McElroy to our churches as a minister worthy of all regard. We express, also, our hope that this church and people may soon have in his place one who will as faithfully, earnestly, and to their acceptance fulfill here his ministry.

"H. D. WALKER, Moderator.

"J. C. LARRABEE, Scribe."

The church did not remain long without a pastor, as we find by the following record :

Feb. 19, 1878. "Voted, that the parish unite with the church in extending a call to Rev. H. L. Kelsey to become their Pastor."

To this call an affirmative reply was made to the church, dated Hollis, N. H., March 7, 1878, and a council was invited to install Mr. Kelsey on the 3d day of April, 1878.

Pursuant to letters missive from the First Congregational Church of Brockton, convening an ecclesiastical council to review their proceedings in calling the Rev. H. L. Kelsey to become their pastor, the council convened at the First Congregational Church, April 3, 1878, at 10.15 A.M.

Rev. H. D. Walker chosen moderator, and Rev. John Herbert, of Stoughton, scribe.

Rev. H. D. Walker, pastor ; C. D. Copeland, delegate, Bridgewater.

Rev. John Herbert, pastor ; Ebenezer Drake, delegate, Stoughton.

Rev. L. S. Woodworth, pastor ; George Sawyer, delegate, Campello.

Rev. George F. Stanton, pastor ; Norton Pratt, delegate, South Weymouth.

Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor ; Warren Belcher, delegate, Randolph.

Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor ; Elijah Fauce, delegate, Abington.

Rev. D. W. Richardson, pastor ; Stephen Harlow, delegate, East Bridgewater.

Simeon Packard, delegate, Porter Church, Brockton.

Rev. Reuben Thomas, Ph.D., pastor ; Martin Kingman, delegate, Brookline.

After the usual examination and the statements of Mr. Kelsey, the council retired, and voted the same was satisfactory, and the following were the order of exercises at the service in the afternoon at two o'clock, viz :

1, prayer and Scripture lesson, Rev. J. C. Larrabee ; 2, sermon, by Rev. Reuben Thomas, Ph.D., of Brookline ; 3, prayer of installation, Rev. George F. Stanton ; 4, charge to the pastor, Rev. H. D. Walker ;

5, fellowship of the churches, Rev. L. S. Woodworth ; 6, address to the people, Rev. George E. Freeman ; 7, benediction, by the pastor.

By vote of the parish passed Sept. 2, 1878, soon after the settlement of and during the pastorate of Mr. Kelsey, they erected a parsonage house on Prospect Street, at a cost of about five thousand dollars.

On the 13th of June, 1882, Rev. Mr. Kelsey tendered his resignation.

In accordance with letters missive from the First Congregational Church in this city to the Porter and South Congregational Churches of Brockton, the Central Square Church of Bridgewater, the First Congregational Church of Randolph, and Congregational Churches in Braintree and South Braintree, the pastors and delegates from the above list of churches convened in mutual council, Tuesday, Sept. 5, 1882, to consider and confirm the action of the First Church and Parish in accepting the resignation of Rev. H. L. Kelsey as their pastor. The council was organized by the choice of Rev. J. C. Bodwell, of Bridgewater, as moderator, and Rev. Edwin Smith, of South Braintree, scribe. After prayer by the moderator, the pastor's letter of resignation and the records of the votes of church and parish accepting the same were read by Hon. J. R. Perkins, chairman of the church committee. A brief verbal statement was added by Rev. H. L. Kelsey, giving some of the reasons that have induced him to ask a release from his charge, after which the council retired for deliberation. The official "result" of their doings is embodied in the following resolutions :

"Resolved, That in the judgment of this council the said pastoral relation between Rev. H. L. Kelsey and the First Congregational Church and Society of Brockton should be dissolved, the same to end Sept. 30, 1882.

"Resolved, That while we deeply regret the necessity laid upon us to concur in the action of pastor and people, it is at the same time the source of great satisfaction to us that the reasons for this action are such as in no way militate against the Christian character or ministerial faithfulness of the pastor.

"Resolved, That we fully and heartily recommend the Rev. H. L. Kelsey to the churches as a brother beloved, who holds our entire confidence, and as an able and devoted minister of the gospel.

"Resolved, That the action of the council is taken with the hope that the parish will deal generously with the retiring pastor, allowing him the use of the parsonage at least till November 1st.

"Resolved, That we also express our interest in and sympathy for this ancient church and society, and earnestly hope and pray that the great Head of the Church may not leave them long without an under-shepherd. To this end we most affectionately recommend that this church study earnestly the ways of peace and harmony among themselves, and that they be prepared to enter with unity of purpose and to co-operate faithfully with the pastor whom God shall send."

Rev. Mr. Kelsey soon after removed to Suffield, Conn.

MINISTRY OF REV. GEORGE E. MARTIN.—On the 12th of July, 1883, a call was extended to Rev. George E. Martin, of Brattleboro', Vt., to settle with them in the gospel ministry. To this invitation a favorable response was received, and arrangements for a council for the purpose of installation were made, and, pursuant to letters missive, an ecclesiastical council was called to meet Oct. 11, 1883.

On that day the following churches were represented, viz. :

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton : Deacon Simeon Packard, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello : Rev. John T. Blades, pastor ; Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., delegate.

Central Church of Worcester : Rev. Daniel Merriman, D.D., pastor ; Deacon E. H. Sanford, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of Abington : Rev. B. M. Frink, pastor ; Horace Reed, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of Taunton : Rev. Heman Packard DeForest, pastor ; E. E. Richards, delegate.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater : Rev. J. C. Bodwell, pastor ; Albert G. Boyden, delegate.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook : Edmund White, delegate.

After the usual hearing and examinations the following order of exercises were made : 1, reading of minutes, by scribe ; 2, introductory reading of Scriptures, by Rev. B. M. Frink ; 3, sermon, by Rev. John E. Todd, D.D. ; 4, charge to the pastor, Rev. Daniel Merriman, D.D. ; 5, right hand of fellowship, Rev. F. A. Warfield ; 6, charge to people, Rev. J. C. Larrabee ; 7, prayer, by Rev. John T. Blades ; 8, benediction, by the pastor.

Rev. Daniel Merriman, moderator ; H. P. DeForest, scribe.

A meeting of the church was held July 24, 1884, to consider the letter of resignation from Rev. George E. Martin, Deacon Joel T. Packard presiding. After a brief discussion the church chose Dr. S. J. Gruver, W. A. Sanford, and Jonas R. Perkins a committee to join with the parish in calling a council for the purpose of dismissing Mr. Martin, and a vote passed unanimously that his resignation be accepted.

The following resolutions, presented by Dr. Gruver, were unanimously accepted :

"Resolved, Although we regret sincerely, for the church's interest, Brother Martin's decision to assume work in another field, and believe that such action will, for a while at least, be a serious detriment to our church, yet we believe that Mr.

Martin conscientiously sees a larger duty in the church which calls him from us, with prayer that the Head of the Church may bless him and us and the church to which he goes. In this decision we herewith, and in this spirit, accept his resignation.

“Resolved, That Rev. G. E. Martin is a man of Christian principles sustained by Christian life, a studious and able preacher of the word.”

The council met agreeably to notification, Monday afternoon, July 30, 1884.

The following are the churches represented in the council for his dismissal, viz.:

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton: Rev. F. A. Warfield, pastor.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. John T. Blades, pastor.

First Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Rev. J. C. Bodwell, pastor.

First Congregational Church of Middleboro': Rev. D. T. Prentice, pastor.

A presentation to the council of Mr. Martin's letter of resignation and the records of the action taken by the church in relation thereto having been made, Mr. Martin gave a somewhat detailed statement of the circumstances attending the call from St. Louis and of the reasons which finally led him to accept the same. This statement made it so apparent to the council that Mr. Martin was following marked Providential leadings in deciding to remove to St. Louis, that no room was left for argument, and the council unanimously “Voted to ratify the course pursued by him and the church, and to grant the letter of dismissal.”

They also adopted the following minute:

“In coming to this conclusion we desire to express our sincere conviction that the circumstances which have led to the resignation of Brother Martin have been entirely unsought by him, and have been urged upon his consideration by very marked Providences to which we feel compelled to yield our judgment in the case.

“We desire here to record our warm appreciation of the Christian spirit our brother has manifested in the trying position in which he has been placed. We further express our most thorough endorsement of the good work Brother Martin has been permitted to accomplish during his brief pastorate in this church. As an attractive preacher, a devoted pastor, a warm-hearted workman in the Lord's vineyard, we most heartily commend him to the churches of our Lord Jesus Christ. We give him our best wishes and earnest prayers for abundant success in his new field of labor.

“To this church in their unexpected trial we extend our most sincere sympathy, rejoicing in the spirit of love with which they have met this trying event, praying that the Lord may comfort them in this experience, sanctify them by it, and speedily unite them in the choice of another pastor.”

“J. C. LARRABEE, Moderator.

“D. T. PRENTICE, Scribe.”

The church is now without a pastor, in September, 1884.

Rev. George E. Martin, son of George Henry and Sarah (Hopkins) Martin, was born in Norwich, Conn., Jan. 27, 1851; fitted for college at the Norwich Free Academy; graduated at Yale College, 1872; taught school from 1872 to 1875; studied in Yale Theological Seminary from 1875 to 1878, graduating in 1878. In July, the same year, he received a call from the Central Congregational Church of Brattleboro', Vt., and was settled July 9, 1879; also chaplain of the Brattleboro' Insane Asylum; remained till Oct. 1, 1883. In September, 1883, the First Congregational Church of Brockton, Mass., gave him a call to become their pastor, and he was duly installed Oct. 11, 1883; dismissed Sept. 1, 1884; received a call from the First Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, Mo., in June, 1884, to which place he removed the 1st of September following.

DEACONS AND CLERKS OF THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The deacons of the First Congregational Church have been as follows:

Jacob Fuller, March 24, 1826; Sylvanus French, March 24, 1826; Zenas Packard, Jan. 22, 1834; Heman Packard, Jan. 22, 1834; Jeremiah Beals, Feb. 1, 1837; Simeon Packard, Feb. 1, 1837; Ozen Gurney, Feb. 1, 1837; Heman Packard, Feb. 1, 1837; John W. Kingman, Feb. 8, 1862; John W. Hunt, Feb. 8, 1862; Henry Howard, Nov. 3, 1858; Joseph Hawett, April 23, 1868; Joel T. Packard, April 23, 1868; Henry M. Littlefield, June 3, 1872, resigned March 4, 1880; Joseph S. Smith, March 9, 1875, resigned Aug. 25, 1881; Charles D. Brigham, March 4, 1880; John Barbour, Sept. 8, 1880; John T. Burke, May 4, 1882; William A. Sanford, June 15, 1882.

Following is a list of clerks of the First Congregational Church:<sup>1</sup>

Nov. 15, 1812, Daniel Huntington; April 17, 1833, Heman Packard; Sept. 17, 1833, William Thompson; June 11, 1834, Heman Packard; Feb. 7, 1844, David Howard; Jan. 16, 1850 (P. Couch's handwriting); Aug. 10, 1859, Henry Howard; April 3, 1862, voted that the pastor act hereafter as clerk;<sup>2</sup> April 11, 1863, to April 21, 1864, Henry Howard; April 23, 1866, L. C. Bliss; April 18, 1867, to April 3, 1873, Charles D. Brigham, resigned Nov. 3, 1873; Nov. 3, 1873,

<sup>1</sup> In the early history of this church the pastor performed the duties of clerk.

<sup>2</sup> Mr. Blanchard, the pastor, died Aug. 7, 1862, and, September 7th, Henry Howard was elected clerk pro tem.

Francis B. Gardner, to fill vacancy; Jan. 12, 1882, Henry M. Littlefield; Edwin Bradford Jones, the present clerk, 1884.

CHAPTER VI.

Second Congregational Society—Rev. John Goldsbury—New Jerusalem Church—Act of Incorporation—Description of the New Church Temple—Rev. Warren Goddard, Rev. Henry E. Goddard—Organization for 1884—Quakers or Friends—St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church—Bethesda Swedish Lutheran Church, Campello—Swedish Evangelical Independent Church, Campello—First Universalist Church and Society—First Baptist Church—First Methodist Episcopal Society—Central Methodist Episcopal Society—Methodist Episcopal Church at Campello.

Second Congregational Society.—During the year 1824 many of the members of the First Congregational Church, under the pastoral care of Rev. Daniel Huntington, becoming dissatisfied with the views of their pastor, and entertaining different views of Christian doctrines, especially on the doctrine of the Trinity, the native character of man, divinity and atonement of Christ, regeneration, and other kindred views of the gospel, petitioned the General Court to be incorporated into a separate society, which petition was granted in the following words, which we copy verbatim :

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court Assembled and by the authority of the Same.

"That Abiel Kingman, Micah Packard, David Cobb, Jr., Nathan Hayward, Gideon Howard, David Packard, Marcus Shaw, Jesse Packard, John Battles, Hiram Atherton, Nahum J. Smith, Newton Shaw, Anthony S. Allen, Edwin Keith, Washburn Packard, Asa Brett, Hervey Hersey, Samuel Thayer, Samuel Howard, Eliphalet Thayer, Oliver Snell, Jr., Zeha Thayer, Sihon Packard, Jr., Apollas Howard, Welcome Howard, Caleh Howard, Jr., Azor Packard, Simeon Dunbar, Nathaniel H. Cross, Joseph S. Packard, Joseph D. Snell, Zenas Packard, Jr., Stillman Willis, Silas Snow, Silas Snow, Jr., John Curtis, Hosea Packard, Asa Shaw, Samuel Packard, William Curtis, Jr., Isaac Packard, Isaac Richards, John Field, Zophar Field, Austin Howard, Josiah W. Curtis, Richmond Carr, Otis Howard, David Edson (3d), Luke P. Lincoln, Thomas Reynolds, Azel Reynolds, Oliver Snell, Isaac Snell, Jeremiah Snell, James J. Sanders, Daniel Bryant, Ara Battles, Abijah Childs, Thomas White, Thomas White, Jr., Arza Leonard, John White, with their families and estates, together with such others as may hereafter associate with them and their successors, be, and they are hereby incorporated into a Society by the name of the 'Second Congregational Society' in the town of North Bridgewater, with all the Powers, privileges, and immunities which other religious societies in this Commonwealth are by law entitled to, and may purchase, receive by gift, or otherwise real estate to the value of which, Shall not exceed the sum of Eight Thousand Dollars.

"Passed June 18, 1825."

About this time land was purchased of Micah Faxon for a church. This was located on a rising spot of ground, south of the present public-house, and near "Kingman's Brick Block." A house was erected, which was dedicated Aug. 9, 1826, with appropriate services, as follows: Introductory prayer and reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. John Pierpont, of Boston; dedicatory prayer, by Rev. Eliphalet Porter, D.D., of Roxbury, Mass.; sermon, by Rev. Benjamin Huntoon, of Providence, R. I., from the text, Acts xxiv. 14: "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law, and in the prophets;" concluding prayer, by Rev. James Kendall, D.D., of Plymouth; benediction, by Rev. Richard M. Hodges, of Bridgewater.

Rev. John Goldsbury, of Warwick, Mass., received an invitation to become their pastor, and, accepting of the same, he was ordained Wednesday, June 6, 1827, with the following services: 1, introductory prayer and reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. J. P. B. Storer, of Walpole, Mass.; 2, sermon, by Rev. Luther Hamilton, of Taunton, Mass.; 3, ordaining prayer, by Rev. John Reed, D.D., of West Bridgewater, Mass.; 4, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Eliphalet Porter, D.D., of Roxbury, Mass.; 5, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Ezra S. Gannett, D.D., of Boston; 6, address to the people, by Rev. John Pierpont, of Boston; 7, concluding prayer, by Rev. Henry Edes, D.D., of Providence, R.I. The pleasantness of the day, and the deep interest in the occasion, caused the house to be thronged. The sermon was from text, John xviii. 37: "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

The sermon on that occasion was exceedingly interesting and very judicious, dwelling at some length on the simplicity of the truth which the Christian teacher is required to inculcate. Among the many things noticed were the difficulties of a Christian ministry,—the indifference to truth prevalent in the world, the prejudices of opinion that hinder the reception of truth, and the disposition among men to mystify and obscure the plainest principles. The charge to the pastor, by Rev. Dr. Porter, was listened to with peculiar interest, from his filial allusion to one under whose ministry many of this society had formerly sat,—Rev. John Porter, father of Rev. Eliphalet Porter, D.D., of Roxbury, Mass.

Rev. John Goldsbury was born in Warwick, Mass., Feb. 11, 1795; fitted for college at different schools and academies, and under private instruction; graduated at Brown University in 1820; commenced the study of divinity at Harvard College in 1821, under Professors Ware, Norton, and Willard; taught in Taunton Academy several years; was ordained in North Bridgewater Wednesday, June 6, 1827, where he remained till Sept. 4, 1831; and resided in Warwick, Mass., where he died.

New Jerusalem Church.—The knowledge of the "New Church" doctrines was introduced into this part of the country by the Rev. Holland Weeks, of Abington, Mass., who was dismissed from his society in that town about the year 1820 for having become a believer in them, which circumstance created no little excitement at the time, and was the means of inducing some others to look into the subject, and to become believers themselves. The first society of receivers of the doctrines in this place was formed in 1827, and consisted of ten members, namely, Sidney Perkins, Nathaniel B. Harlow, William French, Martin Beal, Jabez Field, John Field, of North Bridgewater, Isaiah Noyes, Daniel Noyes, Elisha Faxon, and Austin Cobb, of Abington. In 1828 the number had increased to twenty. During that year a hall was fitted up in the house of Jabez Field, to hold public meetings. Rev. Eleazer Smith preached for them once a month, from 1827 to 1831, and afterwards every Sabbath, till 1834. In 1831 the hall owned by Maj. Nathan Hayward was occupied by the society for meetings, and, still later, the building previously used by the Second Congregational Society, or better known as the "Unitarian meeting-house." Also the hall over the hotel, then kept by Edward E. Bennett. In 1832 the society petitioned the Legislature for an act of incorporation as a religious society, which was granted, as may be seen by the following act, dated March 3, 1832, and styled,—

"THE FIRST SOCIETY OF THE NEW JERUSALEM CHURCH IN NORTH BRIDGEWATER.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by authority of the Same,

"That Jabez Field, Lucius Field, James A. Tolman, Ruel Richmond, Robert Stoddard, Nahum Smith, Rufus Dorr, Orville Handy, Winslow B. Cushman, James Humphrey, William French, Ephraim Howard, Josiah Packard, Charles Howard, Nathaniel B. Harlow, Lyman Clark, Sidney Perkins, Eleazer Smith, John Field, Sanford Brett, Samuel Howard, Marcus Shaw, William Faxon, John Ide, and Arnold Hunt, together with those who have associated, or may hereafter associate with them, or their Successors, for the purpose of public worship, be, and they hereby are, incorporated into a religious Society known by the name of the 'First Society of the New Jerusalem Church,' in the town of North Bridgewater, with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties and liabilities of Parishes, according to the Constitution and Laws of this Commonwealth.

"Be it further enacted, That the said Society shall be capable in Law to purchase, hold, and dispose of any estate, either real or personal, not exceeding the Sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars, for the Support of public Worship, and for other lawful Parochial purposes."

The first meeting held under the provisions of the above acts was held April 5, 1832, at the house of Jabez Field, at which William French was chosen moderator; Lyman Clark, clerk and treasurer; Jabez Field, collector; John Field, Nathaniel B. Harlow, and Marcus Shaw, prudential committee. In August, 1834, Rev. Haskell M. Carll was invited to preach to the society, which he continued to do about three years. On the 7th of December, 1834, he organized a church in the society. Soon after, in September, 1835, the building of the first house of worship in the town of that denomination was commenced, and was dedicated on Saturday, Jan. 16, 1836. There were present at the dedication Rev. H. M. Carll, the pastor of the society; Rev. Thomas Worcester, of Boston; Rev. Adonis Howard, of East Bridgewater. The dedicatory service was read by Rev. Mr. Carll; sermon, by Rev. T. Worcester; reading of the Word, by Rev. Adonis Howard. Mr. Carll left the society in the fall of 1837, and Rev. Warren Goddard, the late pastor, commenced preaching for them Oct. 14, 1838; and January of the next year (1839), an invitation was extended to him to settle with them as their pastor. This call was accepted, and he was ordained the 19th of September, 1839. The following are the doctrines of Charity and Faith:

"1. That God is one in essence and in person, that from love towards men he assumed humanity and glorified it, and that he thus became God with us, the Saviour and Redeemer, Jesus Christ.

"2. That the word is divine Truth proceeding from the Lord; that it was written by inspiration, and is adapted to all the various states of Angels and men, and that thus it is the divine Medium by which men are consoiated with Angels and by which men and Angels are conjoined with the Lord.

"3. That the Lord alone is the Source of Genuine life, the precepts of which are the ten Commandments; that these precepts are to be obeyed by man as of himself, with the acknowledgment that the will and power to do them are of the Lord alone. And thus that men are regenerated and Saved by the Lord, by means of a life according to his precepts."

The first house of worship was fifty-eight feet in length, forty feet in width, and twenty feet high; spire, sixty-five feet high, painted white, with green blinds. The interior contained fifty-two pews, besides a neat, plain pulpit and a small choir-gallery. The building was situated on land purchased of Sidney Perkins, the building and land costing about three thousand dollars.

This society worshiped in the old house above described until the dedication of another house, which had been built to suit the wants of the growing society, and which took place Jan. 22, 1857. The services commenced about ten o'clock in the forenoon, and were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Goddard, and were of a deeply impressive character, well fitted to bring the hearer into a state receptive of his love who desires our offerings, "to the end that he may more abundantly enrich us with spiritual blessings." The weather was such on that day, so very severe, that but few, comparatively, were present, and those mostly from the people of the town. The services were reading of the Psalm cxxii., followed by a chanting from an appropriate selection (No. 80, Psalm lxxxiv.). After which Psalm cxxxii. and others were read responsively by both pastor and people, the people of the society standing, mostly in front of the desk, and responding as an act on their part of offering up the house to the worship and service of the Lord. The music was not only appropriate, but well performed. After the exercises were over, a collation was partaken of in the hall below by nearly all who had been present, including many from the neighboring societies, and a very pleasant season of social interview closed the exercises of the day.

Description of the New Church Temple.—This church is situated on a spacious lot of ground, bordered with trees of considerable size, fronting the west. The dimensions of the main building are seventy-nine by fifty-six feet. It is built in the Italian style, with a plain square tower at the west (front) end, eighty-eight feet in height, and twenty-two feet square, projecting ten and a half feet forward from the main building. The entrance in front is by a wide double door into the vestibule, from which there is an ascent by eleven easy steps into side entries, or lobbies, from which one enters the body of the church. This measures sixty-one by forty-five feet, and contains one hundred and two pews, all on the main floor, there being no side galleries. They are arranged in semi-circular order, without doors, cushioned, and covered with crimson damask. The floor is handsomely carpeted, and walls and ceiling elegantly painted in fresco. On the east side is a projection of four feet deep by thirty-two wide, a space for the tabernacle, a repository for the Word in the centre, and for a small private room each side of it. The tabernacle consists of an ark of fine cabinet-work, overhung with crimson curtains. Over it is the inscription in large letters, "Behold the tabernacle of God is with man." To the right of it, but standing out in front, on the edge of the platform, is the pulpit, which is of octagonal form and, like the tabernacle, of black walnut. The communion-table stands at the left side. The organ-loft is within the body of the tower, opposite the pulpit, having in front a small gallery for the singers, elevated about eight feet above the pew-floor. There is a basement of brick, affording space for a hall under the whole main building, to which there is an entrance from the vestibule within, and also by doors from without, at the northwest and southwest corners. The superstructure is of wood, colored in imitation of freestone. The house is provided with a good-toned organ, of suitable size and capacity, manufactured by George Stevens, Esq.

Martin Wales, Esq., of Stoughton, presented the society with two thousand dollars towards paying the expense of building the new house. Chandler Sprague, Lyman Clark, and George W. Bryant were building committee; Jason Perkins, contractor.

Rev. Warren Goddard was the son of the late Dr. John Goddard, of Portsmouth, N. H., where he was born Sept. 12, 1800. He fitted for college at the Portsmouth Academy, and entered Harvard University September, 1815, one year in advance; graduated at that institution August, 1818. In the spring of 1819 he became fully satisfied of the truths of the doctrines contained in the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, and entered as a student of theology in the family of Rev. Thaddeus M. Harris, D.D., of Dorchester, Mass. At the completion of his studies, there being only one society of the New Church in all New England,—namely, that in Boston, consisting of less than a score of members, and already provided with a pastor-elect,—and the few societies in the United States being also provided with ministers, he was obliged to postpone his former purpose of entering the ministry until there should be some society needing ministerial services. At this time an opening presented itself in the academy at Sandwich, Mass. He therefore accepted the office of principal, and was very successful, commencing with twelve pupils, all belonging in that town. Soon after this, applications for admission continued to increase, first from the adjoining towns, then from more distant places, even as far as South Carolina. At the end of two years he commenced and pursued the study of law in the office of the late Lieutenant-Governor John Reed, of Yarmouth, Mass., and was admitted to the bar of Barnstable County; practiced law two years in Barnstable, and nearly a year in Boston, in connection with Professor Parsons, when, becoming dissatisfied with the practice, so far as it related to the management before juries, he relinquished the practice of law, and accepted an appointment as principal of the English and classical school at Princeton, Mass., where he labored two or three years with signal success. Several societies having during this time been formed, and needing ministerial services, Mr. Goddard returned to the profession of his first choice, and after preaching and receiving several calls to settle in Abington, Portland, and North Bridgewater (now Brockton), he at length settled at the latter place, where he was installed Sept. 19, 1839, and where he has continued to labor in the ministry until 1865, when he resigned. He was one of the most acceptable and useful New Church ministers to be found in the country.

Mr. Goddard married, first, Mary Crowell Tobey, of Sandwich, Mass., by whom he had six children. He married, second, Sarah Eldridge, of Yarmouth, Mass., by whom he had four children,—Warren, a New Jerusalem preacher, who was for a time settled in Brookline, Mass., now in Providence, R. I.; Henry Edward, a preacher in Brockton; also another son, John, a New Jerusalem preacher, settled in Cincinnati, Ohio; and Asa Eldridge, a teacher in Washington University, St. Louis, Mo. Although the father has retired from active duty as a preacher, he is still a resident of Brockton, enjoying a ripe old age, surrounded by pleasant associations.

Rev. Henry Edward Goddard, the present pastor, is the son of Rev. Warren and Sarah (Eldridge) Goddard; was born in Brockton, May 20, 1852; graduated at the high school in his native town in 1871; Brown University, Providence, R. I., 1875. After a three years' course of study in the New Jerusalem Theological School, at Waltham, Mass., and one year at Cornell University, he became assistant pastor of the New Jerusalem Church in Cincinnati, Ohio. He was ordained pastor of the church in Brockton, Sept. 24, 1876, Rev. Joseph Pettee, of Abington, Mass., preaching the sermon on that occasion. Mr. Goddard has served the town on the school committee three years.

In 1884 the society have added to the church a room on the south side of their church for a ladies' parlor, and other purposes.

The following is the organization for 1884:

Rev. Henry E. Goddard, pastor; Thomas H. West, J. Willard Packard, B. Ellis Eaton, Rufus C. Kimball, B. F. Battles, church committee; Rufus C. Kimball, treasurer; Rev. Henry E. Goddard, superintendent of Sabbath-school; Flushing Cornwall, sexton.

Quakers or Friends.—There was an association or society of Friends, in North Bridgewater, formed April 26, 1838, and consisted of twenty-five members, as appears by record, which is as follows:

"We, the undersigned, hereby become members of a Society forming of this sect, called Quakers, and do hereby agree to subject ourselves to the rules and regulations which shall be adopted by said Society, in the town of North Bridgewater.

Michael O. Neil.	Josiah Fuller.
Nahum J. Smith.	John L. Skinner.
Cyrus Packard.	Apollos O. Howard.
Jacob W. Crosby.	Reuben S. Webster.
Edward Southworth, Jr.	William Ripley.
Daniel Guild.	Charles S. Johnson.
Charles L. Hathaway.	Jarvis D. Smith.
Roswell Richardson.	Thomas Batchelder.
John Leonard.	Edwin W. Bosworth.
John R. Morrill.	Noah Blodgett.
M. B. Peirce.	Nathan Packard.
Jabez D. Lamson.	Jeremiah Stetson, Jr."
Ambrose Packard.

At the request of Nahum J. Smith and twenty-four other members a meeting was called by Hon. Jesse Perkins, Esq., a justice of the peace, which met at the hall of Col. Edward Southworth, April 30, 1838, at seven o'clock P.M., for the purpose of organization, at which time Edward Southworth, Jr., was chosen clerk, who took the oath of affirmation in the usual form; Jacob W. Crosby, Nahum J. Smith, John L. Skinner were chosen overseers; Cyrus Packard, treasurer and collector, besides a committee to prepare a constitution and by-laws; meeting then adjourned to May 8, 1838. The "meeting met according to adjournment, and, after discussing various matters connected with the society, adjourned to June 7th," when they again came together for friendly conversation and again adjourned sine die.

The above is the latest record to be found concerning this society; and it is presumed that the society did not flourish for any length of time.

St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church.—Previous to the year 1856 the members of this church were attendant on church worship in private houses and in the various halls in the village, and were supplied by transient clergymen. During that year Rev. Thomas B. McNulty came to the town as a stated pastor, in connection with some others in the immediate vicinity, the care of which devolved upon him.

Rev. Thomas B. McNulty was born in Londonderry, Ireland; fitted for college at Londonderry Academy; graduated at Foyle College; studied philosophy and theology at Irish College, Paris; was ordained June 6, 1846, at the parish church of Sulpice, by Monsieur Affrè, Archbishop of Paris; came to America in 1853, and after preaching at Lowell, Salem, and other places, was appointed to take charge of the Catholic Church in Brockton and vicinity.

Here he soon succeeded in gathering a large number of regular church worshipers, and during the same year purchased a parcel of land for the sum of five thousand two hundred and twenty-five dollars, situated on the west side of Main Street, near Wales' Corner, in the south part of the village, and containing about three-fourths of an acre, upon which he has caused a large and splendid church edifice to be erected, one hundred and ten feet long, fifty feet wide, built in the Romanesque style of architecture. The basement is built of Quincy granite. The principal story is of brick, trimmed with freestone. The tower and steeple is one hundred and eighty feet in height. The auditory is furnished with one hundred and forty-six slips, capable of holding seven hundred persons. The altar is at the west end of the building, and at the east or front end is the choir-gallery. The chancel-window is made of stained glass, with emblematic panes representing the four evangelists,—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. The house is furnished with a magnificent organ, from the manufactory of E. & G. G. Hook, of Boston. Upon the side walls are displayed fourteen pictures, representing different scenes in the Lord's Passion, painted at great expense in Italy. The cost of the church was twenty-five thousand dollars, which, together with the land, cost about thirty thousand dollars. The architects were Messrs. Fuller & Ryder, of Boston. Mr. Andrews, of Nashua, N. H., was the contractor. The preacher's pulpit, also the railing around the altar, was manufactured by Messrs. Howard, Clark & Co. In the southwest corner of the house is the sacristy, and in the northeast corner is a private room, out of which is the entrance to the basement story. In point of durability and style of architecture, when built, this house was not surpassed by any in the town. Its position is prominent, and makes a bold appearance upon the principal thoroughfare in town.

This church was dedicated Sunday, May 22, 1859, and, although the weather was quite rainy, there was a large assembly present. The services were as follows:

Bishop Fitzpatrick, of Boston, delivered the sermon; high mass was celebrated by Rev. Mr. Roach, of Randolph; Rev. Mr. Shaben, of Salem, officiated as deacon; Rev. Mr. Tallon, of New Bedford, as sub-deacon; Rev. Mr. Haley, of Boston, was master of ceremonies, a number of other priests assisting; Rev. Mr. McElroy, of Boston, preached at vespers; singing was performed by a choir from Salem.

The number of attendants on church worship at this place is about two thousand.

The following is the organization of this church for 1884:

Rev. Thomas B. McNulty, pastor; Rev. Francis J. Glynn and Rev. Michael Doherty, assistant priests; Patrick Gilmore, superintendent of the Sabbath-school; Arthur Dimond, organist.

Bethesda Swedish Lutheran Church, Campello.—About the year 1854 there were a few Swedes who came to the town, finding employment in the various shoe manufactories. Since that time, and up to the present, they have increased in numbers, till at length it was deemed advisable among the new-comers to have religious services in their native language. After preaching in a hall for a time, a new house of worship was erected on the east side of Main Street, in Campello, in 1867. The building is about thirty by sixty feet, with a steeple seventy-five feet high. The audience-room contains sittings for about three hundred persons. It has a neat pulpit, painted white, with gilt trimmings, with a railing around the same. The main building has stained-glass windows, rendering the whole very pleasing. This church has been quite flourishing, and now numbers one hundred and fifty. Communicants, 150 members.

The pastors have been as follows:

Rev. Henry O. Lindeblad, July, 1869-72; Rev. John G. Pricell, 1872-73; Rev. A. Hult, 1873-80; Rev. Michael U. Norberg, 1880, the present pastor.

Madame Christine Nilsson, the famous songstress, when visiting this country, sang at a concert held in this church, November, 1870, the proceeds of which she kindly donated to this society to free them from debt. The amount received as the benefit of that concert was about two thousand dollars. A street has since been named by the town in honor of her beneficent gift to this people.

This is said to have been the first Swedish Church built in New England, and is now fully established under the New York Conference of Swedish Churches. The society have recently raised their church edifice, and placed a brick basement, for religious meetings, under the same, thus furnishing them with a large vestry for evening services, Sabbath-schools, etc. The entire cost of the building is about ten thousand dollars.

List of officers in this church in 1884:

Rev. Michall U. Norberg, pastor; C. A. Nilson, Gustavus Lundberg, Andrew Swanson, Gustave Carlson, Martin Moberg, trustees; Swan T. Johnson, Charles Anderson, John A. Staf, Paul N. Cook, deacons; Andrew Swanson, clerk.

Swedish Evangelical Independent Church, Campello.—The church was the outgrowth of the Bethesda Swedish Church in Campello, and originated with a few members who withdrew from the above-named church and organized themselves into an independent body, and commenced services in Drake's Hall, where they worshiped about one year, when they erected a church of their own, on Nilsson Street, but a short distance from the original Swedish Church. It has about one hundred communicants.

A lot of land was purchased of Jonas R. Perkins, Esq., in 1880, on which they erected a building fifty by thirty, which was completed and dedicated in 1881, on the same day of the assassination of President Garfield. The building is a neat, plain building, without any tower, with a choice lot of land around the same, neatly kept, with a grass lawn.

The interior aspect is pleasant, and contains sittings for about two hundred persons. The seats are of ash, in keeping with the entire building. They have a neat pulpit, a divan presented by Lyman Carlson, and a "Smith cabinet organ." The cost of the church is about twenty-five hundred dollars.

In the recess back of the pulpit is a cross made of native cedar, standing on the floor, on the arms of which is a representation of the nails; on the centre of the cross is a crown of thorns made from the thorn-tree, Euphorbia splendens, which was imported from Palestine and presented to the church. Over and above this are the words, in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin:

"Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews."

Directly over the pulpit is the following inscription:

ETT BÄRN AROSS FODTENSON, ARÖSS GIVEN.<sup>1</sup>

The first pastor was Rev. Andirs Gustaf Nilson; the present pastor is Rev. Emil Holmblad.

List of officers of this church for 1884:

Rev. Emil Holmblad, pastor; Gustave Smith, secretary; John Peterson, treasurer; Augustus Dean, superintendent of Sabbath-school; Alfred Johnson, assistant pastor.

First Universalist Church and Society.—This society was organized Aug. 31, 1857, at which time Josiah V. Bisbee was chosen clerk; David E. Studley, treasurer; Ellis Packard, O. O. Patten, Lorenzo D. Hervey, F. O. Howard, William H. Cooper, executive committee; Thaddeus E. Gifford, collector.

Previous to this time this denomination had no regular preaching, and since its organization it has had transient preachers until the settlement of Rev. William A. Start.

The following persons composed the society at its formation: Otis Hayward, Lorenzo D. Hervey, Ellis Packard, David Hall, David F. Studley, F. O. Howard, Amasa O. Glover, Marcus Holmes, Oren Bartlett, Thomas Swift, E. L. Thayer, Jerome Thomas, F. A. Thayer, Luther Tower, Martin Packard, Isaac Harris, Waldo Field, Thaddeus E. Gifford, Edwin E. Pollard, John W. Hayward, A. B. Marston, Seth Leonard, Joseph E. Estes, Josiah V. Bisbee, O. O. Patten, Charles E. Tribou, Samuel F. Tribou, Elijah Tolman, C. G. Swift.

The society erected a neat and commodious house of worship on Elm Street in the month of May, 1863. Its dimensions are sixty feet in length, thirty-eight in width, and contains sixty pews, capable of seating three hundred persons comfortably. The pews are of a circular form, with the seats nicely cushioned, floor carpeted, and in all respects the house is complete. In the rear of the pulpit is the following inscription upon the wall, which is nicely frescoed: "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people." Underneath this house is a capacious and convenient vestry.

The house was dedicated, with appropriate exercises, on Wednesday, May 20, 1863, commencing at 10 o'clock A.M., as follows: 1, voluntary, by the choir; 2, prayer of invocation, by Rev. E. Hewitt; 3, reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. J. G. B. Heath; 4, anthem, by the choir; 5, consecrating prayer, by Rev. A. P. Cleverly; 6, hymn; 7, sermon, by Rev. A. A. Miner, of Boston; 8, anthem; 9, prayer, by Rev. H. Jewell; 10, hymn; 11, benediction. The sermon was from the text in Psalm xxii. 27, 28: "For the kingdom is the Lord's: and he is the governor among the nations." At the conclusion of these services the friends were invited to a most generous repast in the vestry, and the society spared no pains or expense to secure temporal as well as spiritual comfort to their visitors. After a short intermission the services of installing Rev. William A. Start as pastor of the church were commenced in the following order of exercises: 1, anthem, by the choir; 2, invocation, by Rev. J. Eastwood, of Brighton; 3, reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. M. R. Leonard, of South Dedham; 4, hymn; 5, sermon, by Rev. J. Crebore, of Abington, text, Eph. iv. 12, 13: "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." The sermon was very timely and effective, as well as practical, showing fully the needs of a minister, his dependence on the people for support, the minister's relation to the sorrowing, the various relations of the people, and the sources of inspiration to his labor, and the awards as fruits of his toil. 5, hymn; 6, installing prayer, by Rev. G. H. Emerson, of Somerville; 7, charge to the pastor, by Rev. A. A. Miner, of Boston; 8, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. James Eastwood, of Brighton; 9, charge to the people, by Rev.

<sup>1</sup> Translated reads, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

A. P. Cleverly, of Boston; 10, prayer; 11, anthem; 12, benediction, by the pastor.

This society owe much of their success to the active, zealous, and persevering efforts of Rev. A. P. Cleverly and Rev. J. Crehore.

First Baptist Church.—This church was constituted Jan. 10, 1850, and consisted of seventeen members, the names of which are as follows: Rev. James Andem (pastor), Emma A. Andem, Williams Alden, Persis Packard, Nathaniel Shepardson, Alpheus Alden, Priscilla C. Alden, Edmund R. Wade, Julia Ann Wade, Harriet Thayer, Joanna Packard, Olive T. Packard, Caroline F. Packard, Sally Hall, A. Amanda French, Frederick L. Trow, Jonas P. Jameson. Officers of the church: Rev. James Andem, pastor; Edward S. Packard, George F. Parish, deacons; Alpheus Alden, clerk; Edmund R. Wade, treasurer; Deacon Edward S. Packard, Deacon George F. Parish, Nathaniel Shepardson, F. L. Trow, standing committee.

Previous to the organization of this church, in 1850, those members belonging in the town had met in a hall, where they had preaching from February, 1849, Rev. Isaac Woodbury, of Haverhill, Mass., being the first preacher, who preached for four successive Sabbaths. The people were next supplied with transient ministers, mostly from the Newton Theological Institute, among whom was Rev. S. A. Thomas, of Dighton, who spent one of his vacations with them. Rev. James Andem, of Brookline, commenced to supply their pulpit for one year, from October, 1849. During the year 1850 the church had great encouragement to erect a house of worship, the numbers having already increased from seventeen members to fifty-seven in the short space of one year. Its members consisted mostly of young persons, and not belonging to the most wealthy class, their perseverance in erecting and sustaining a church is all the more creditable.

A small but neat house of worship was erected by this society in September, 1850, fifty feet long, thirty-five feet wide, twenty feet high, without steeple or bell, costing about two thousand five hundred dollars, which was dedicated Jan. 22, 1851, with the following exercises: 1, chant; 2, invocation; 3, hymn, written by the pastor, Rev. James Andem (music, by Isaac T. Packard),— “Praise dwell on every tongue,

While Zion’s courts we throng,—
    Auspicious day!
Let every heart unite
To hail thy cheering light,
Chasing dark shades with bright
    And heavenly ray.

“The grace thy love bestows
Like streams in fullness flows,
    Ancient of days!
Thou who on earth once dwelt,
Make thy pure presence felt
Where humbly we have knelt
    In prayer and praise.

“In this thy dwelling-place,
Let wisdom, truth, and grace
    In worship blend.
These courts thy glory fill,
As dew on Hermon’s hill,
Thy purer love distill,
    And here descend.”

7, reading of the Scriptures; 5, introductory prayer; 6, hymn, written by Rev. James Andem,—

“Great God, our Father and our Friend,
Before thy throne thy children bend;
Let songs of praise before thee swell,
While in thy courts thy children dwell.

“Great Source of truth, to thee, in prayer,
We give this house;—make it thy care.
Here let thy saints, a goodly vine,
Nurtured by grace, be wholly thine.

“Be thou their shield and thou their rock,—
Be Christ the shepherd of his flock,—
And hoary age and blooming youth
Here drink of living wells of truth.

“From year to year loud anthems rise
In sacred numbers to the skies,
And prayer ascend from Zion’s hill,
That heavenly grace may here distill.

“Praise to thy name, through Christ thy Son,
Great God, for what thy love has done;
When praise on earth is still in death,
We’ll praise thy name with nobler breath.”

7, sermon, by Rev. Pharellus Church, D.D.; 8, dedicatory prayer; 9, anthem; 10, benediction, by the pastor.

The land on which their building stood is on the west side of Montello Street, and was purchased of Mr. Sidney Perkins for the sum of three hundred dollars.

The second minister ordained was Rev. Richard K. Ashley. The ordination was Sept. 29, 1852, and consisted of the following:

1, voluntary, by the choir; 2, reading of doings of council; 3, reading of Scriptures and introductory prayer; 4, the Lord hath chosen Zion; 5, ordination sermon on that occasion was by Rev. J. Aldrich, of Middleboro’, Mass.;—6, anthem, “How Beautiful upon the Mountains;” 7, ordaining prayer, by Rev. I. Smith, of East Stoughton; 8, charge to the pastor, by Rev. N. Colver, of South Abington; 9, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. A. E. Battelle, of Marshfield;

10, address to the people, by Rev. Thomas E. Keely, of Kingston, Mass.; 11, hymn,—“We bid Thee Welcome in the Name;” 12, concluding prayer; 13, doxology,—“Praise God from whom all blessings flow;” 14, benediction, by the pastor.

Their building was sold at auction, July 13, 1854, to Samuel S. Brett and Fearing W. Bent, and was used as an armory for the North Bridgewater Dragoons.

For many years the society had no regular church services, until at length new life was infused into the Baptist brethren, and a new fire was kindled from the remaining embers of the old society with gratifying results.

Here follows the record of the new enterprise:

“THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.—The movement which had been in progress several weeks, under the direction of Rev. G. H. Perry, of Middleboro’, resulted in the formation of a Baptist Church under the above name, and started with a membership of thirty-five. The meeting for organization took place on Tuesday evening, April 17, 1877, the venerable Father Fitz being present and taking part in the devotional exercises. It was voted that the new church meet the council called for the purpose of extending recognition and present the articles of faith adopted.

“On Wednesday afternoon, April 25, 1877, a council assembled in the First Congregational Church for the purpose of formally recognizing the new organization. It was composed of pastors and delegates from the following churches:

“Middleboro’: Rev. G. G. Fairbanks, pastor; Stephen B. Gibbs, J. T. Wood, delegates.

“South Abington: Rev. L. B. Hatch, pastor; D. B. Gurney, J. L. Corthell, delegates.

“South Hanson: Rev. J. B. Reed, pastor.

“Plymouth: Rev. B. P. Byram, pastor; A. J. Whiting, E. C. Turner, delegates.

“New Bedford: Rev. C. A. Snow, pastor; G. H. Perry, George Matthews, delegates.

“Cohesett: Rev. H. H. Beaman, pastor; G. W. Hill, H. Merritt, delegates.

“Carver: Rev. G. N. Fullerton, pastor; H. A. Lucas, H. C. Corvill, delegates.

“Boston: Rev. A. Pollard, D.D.

“Middleboro’: Rev. H. Fitz.

“Rev. Mr. Fairbanks was chosen moderator, and Rev. B. P. Byram clerk. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Pollard. Statements were presented showing the action which had been taken in the organization of the church, and it was unanimously voted that the proceedings be approved, and that the public service of recognition take place. The order was arranged and carried through as follows:

“Invocation, Rev. J. B. Reed, of Hanson; hymn, Rev. H. H. Beaman, of Cohesett; reading of the Scriptures, Rev. B. P. Byram, of Plymouth; hymn, Rev. R. G. S. McNeille, of the Porter Church, Brockton; prayer, Rev. G. G. Fairbanks, of Middleboro’; sermon, Rev. C. A. Snow, of New Bedford; prayer of recognition, Rev. Dr. A. Pollard, of Boston; hand of fellowship, Rev. L. B. Hatch, of South Abington; charge, Rev. H. Fitz, of Middleboro’; benediction, Rev. G. N. Fullerton, of Carver.

“The services were all of deep interest, the sermon being an able elucidation of the text, ‘He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit.’”

The next pastor was Rev. Joshua Tillson, of Hingham, Mass., a preacher of the Massachusetts Baptist Convention.

Mr. Tillson was succeeded by Rev. Oscar Dwight Thomas, of Springfield, Mass.

The public services attending the recognition of Mr. Thomas as pastor of the First Baptist Church in Brockton took place on Wednesday evening, Dec. 18, 1878, in Perkins’ Hall, Main Street. The apartment was neatly and tastefully trimmed with festoons, mottoes, etc., and presented a very attractive appearance. A large audience was present to witness the services, which were of deep interest throughout. The exercises took place in the following order:

Invocation, by Rev. D. A. Jordan, of the Central Methodist Church, Brockton; anthem, by the choir, under the direction of T. G. Nye; reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Z. T. Sullivan, of the Porter Church, Brockton; prayer, by Rev. C. D. Sweet, of Middleboro’; singing, hymn read by Rev. H. I. Kelsey, of the First Congregational Church, Brockton; sermon, by Rev. H. K. Potter, of Springfield; prayer of recognition, by Rev. L. G. Barrett, of South Abington; singing; welcome address to the pastor, by Rev. G. G. Fairbanks, of Middleboro’; address to the church, by Rev. G. W. Bosworth, D.D., of Haverhill; doxology, by the congregation; benediction, by the pastor.

Rev. Mr. Thomas is from Springfield, where he has held the pastorate of a young Baptist Church for three or four years. His success in the field he left, and the exceedingly favorable impression he has made, both among the people to whom he comes as a minister and others in the place whom he has met, encourage great hope that his labors here may not only strengthen and establish the ecclesiastical organization of which he has now become the head, but may also add largely to the Christian forces in operation here for the diffusion of religious truth and light among the people. Our friends of the Baptist Church are to be warmly congratulated on the consummation of their relations.

This church has a neat edifice for church worship, occupying a commanding position, at the corner of Belmont and Pond Streets, seventy-four by forty-one feet floor, with a bell-tower and spire, one hundred feet high, on the prominent corner, through which, as well as at the other front corner, are the entrances to the building. The audience-room presents an exceedingly attractive appearance, the ceiling being carried up under the roof, stained Gothic windows admitting light, and handsome pews of ash furnishing the sitting accommodations for the congregation. At the southerly end is the preacher's platform, which has been furnished with a neat and tasteful desk, chairs, etc., and underneath the floor is arranged a large tank or baptistery. At the right of the platform and under an arched alcove are the seats for the choir, while on the opposite side is a retiring-room for the pastor and stairway to the vestry, and over the entrance-ways is located a commodious gallery. A pretty carpet covers the floor, comfortable cushions are provided for the pews, while harmonizing with both is the neat and pleasing fresco that covers walls and ceiling. In the recess, in the rear of the pulpit, is the cabinet organ, and on the wall is the following:

"THE LORD IS IN HIS HOLY TEMPLE."

The lot on which the building stands cost two thousand three hundred and eighty-one dollars. The house was built by James Beal, master builder, at a cost of about eleven thousand dollars, and has sittings in the main audience-room for about four hundred and fifty people. The vestry will seat about two hundred and fifty persons. The new edifice was dedicated to the worship of God on Thursday, March 17, 1881, in the presence of a large and deeply-interested congregation, who came from towns adjoining and from places more remote. The services were in charge of the pastor, Rev. O. D. Thomas, and were arranged in the following order: Voluntary; invocation, by Rev. N. N. Glazier, of South Abington; reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. J. C. Foster, of Randolph; singing, by the choir; prayer, by Rev. G. G. Fairbanks, of Middleboro'; hymn, sung by the congregation; report of the building committee; sermon, by Rev. Dr. Gordon, of Boston; hymn; dedicatory prayer, by Rev. G. W. Bosworth, D.D., of Boston; singing; benediction.

The musical part of the services was under the direction of Loyed Chamberlain, Esq., with Miss Minnie Chamberlain at the organ, and a well-drilled choir, reinforced for the occasion by some of our well-known singers.

The report of the building committee was read by the pastor, showing the church as substantially free of debt, and thanking the many who have aided in the enterprise.

The sermon by Dr. Gordon was founded on the text in John xv. 24: "If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin," from which the preacher developed the twofold theme,—the approving and reproofing character of Christ's works. It was an able presentation of the subject, and was listened to with deep attention.

This society is in a flourishing condition, and the numbers are increasing rapidly,—so that the work of the church is not confined to this locality, but it is proposed to branch out in the good work of the gospel ministry. The present active and efficient pastor has already the elements of strength for a new church in the northerly portion of the city, where he has a mission church, which originated in the starting of preaching in what is known as "Snell's Grove," on North Main Street, June 14, 1883. In September of that year a Sabbath-school class held services in a vacant store at the corner of Main and Oak Streets. In March, 1884, they moved to the shop of Bradford Snell.

Plans have been matured by the officers of this church for the building of a chapel, to be located on Snell Street, which will be a neat edifice, with sittings for three hundred people. On the same floor with the auditorium will be a smaller room for chapel purposes, and on either side of the pulpit will lead to anterooms to be used for committee meetings. The finish of the interior will be of ash. The windows to be in cathedral style of stained glass. The outside of the building will be surmounted with a tower one hundred feet high.

Charles Jameson is the present superintendent of the Sunday-school of one hundred and twenty scholars.

The organization of officers of this church for 1884 is as follows:

Rev. Oscar D. Thomas, pastor; Josiah R. Gurney, Harvey Merritt, deacons; James W. Strachan, Fred. S. Thomas, Trueman Huntress, finance committee; Eugene Remington, clerk; William D. Wilder, treasurer; Melvin Hollis, superintendent of Sabbath-school; James Easton, sexton.

First Methodist Episcopal Society.—Previous to 1830 there was no regular organized society of this denomination in the town. On the 9th day of March in that year Nathaniel Manley and one hundred and ten others formed themselves into an association, with the following articles of agreement:

"WHEREAS, We the subscribers, being disposed to encourage and promote the public worship of God in a way agreeable to the dictates of our own consciences, do hereby agree to form ourselves into a religious society by the name of the 'First Episcopal Methodist Society in North Bridgewater,' for the purpose of promoting, carrying on, and supporting the public worship of God in conformity to an Act passed Feb. 16, 1824."

On the 12th day of April of the same year a committee, consisting of Isaac Packard, John Tilden, and Galen Manley, were chosen to procure land and erect a church. They purchased a lot of land of Micah Packard for the sum of $41.20, it being the lot where the house now stands. A house was erected, fifty-four feet long, twenty-one feet wide, twenty-two feet high, with a spire eighty feet high, and a bell weighing one thousand and sixty pounds, made by George Holbrook, of Medway, Mass. The exterior appearance of the house is neat, painted white, with nine windows and green blinds. The interior of the house is well furnished, containing fifty-eight pews, choir-gallery, with seats for fifty persons. The floor is neatly carpeted, walls arched overhead. In 1855 a clock was put up, and in 1857 a new and commodious pulpit was placed in the house. The instrumental music is a seraphine.

The house was built under the direction of Messrs. Isaac Hartwell, John Tilden, and Galen Manley, as building committee, and cost three thousand dollars. Mr. John Peterson was master carpenter. A parsonage-house was built in 1860.

The following is a list of the clergymen who have supplied the pulpit of this society, and the years each has served :

Revs. P. Crandall, 1834-35; E. Bradley, 1835-36; D. Kilburn, 1836-37; Sanford Benton, 1837-38; C. Noble, 1838-39; L. Bates, 1840-41; Anthony Palmer, 1841-43; Henry Mayo, 1843; Lemuel Harlow, 1844; B. M. Walker, 1845; Dixon Stebbins, 1846-47; T. Spilsted, 1847-48; G. W. Rogers, 1848-49; John Livesey, 1849-50; John D. King, 1850-51; Ebenezer Blake, 1852-53; Theophilus B. Gurney, 1853-54; Azariah B. Wheeler, 1855; J. B. Weeks, 1860-61; Israel Washburn, 1861; Charles A. Carter, 1862-63; W. A. Clapp, 1863-64; Alexander Anderson, 1865-66; F. Ryder, 1866-68; J. B. Washburn, 1868-70; Samuel M. Beal, 1870-73; Edward L. Hyde, 1873-74; J. W. Wood, 1874-75; H. Faville, 1875-76; W. G. Wilson, 1876-78; R. E. Buckley, 1878.

Bridgewater Circuit was set apart from Stoughton and Easton July, 1832, at a conference held in Providence, R. I.

This is the only meeting-house in this section of country that retained the corner-seats especially for the colored people, which were in the corners of the gallery. This was removed at the time of the remodeling of the church, in 1873.

From 1866 to 1870 this church worshiped with the church in Easton, holding services on alternate Sundays. In 1870 the plan was adopted of the Boston University, sending students to supply the pulpit. That arrangement continued for several years.

In 1873 extensive repairs were made upon this meeting-house by the labors of Rev. Samuel M. Beal, who had been preaching to this people for some time. The pulpit was transferred to the opposite end of the house, the pews rearranged, the gallery lowered, pulpit platform remodeled, an arched recess constructed at its rear, a new black-walnut railing and furniture to correspond was furnished; new lighting fixtures, new heating apparatus; new carpets were placed on the platform and aisles; the walls freshly colored in delicate tints; a new centre-piece placed on the ceiling, thus rendering the audience-room very attractive.

The services at the rededication of this edifice were held March 13, 1873. Rev. Mr. Dunham, of Easton, offered prayer and read the Scriptures. Sermon preached by Rev. G. E. Reed, of Fall River.

Preaching services are held at 1.30 P.M. The Sunday-school convening at noon. The salary of the pastor is paid by subscription.

The following is a list of officers of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Brockton Heights :

Rev. A. Hagerty, pastor; Samuel Clark, Bradford Packard, George Smith, parish committee; Bradford Packard, Samuel Clark, George A. Packard, Mrs. Bradford Packard, Mrs. S. J. Clark, Mrs. M. L. Reynolds, Mrs. Charles Phillips, Mrs. E. L. Snow, stewards; Seth M. Hall, parish clerk; Bradford Packard, treasurer and superintendent of Sunday-school.

Central Methodist Episcopal Church.—This church was formed March 2, 1842, consisting of about thirty members, among whom were the following persons :

Sanford Alden, Eliza G. Alden, Liberty Packard, Mary A. Packard, Israel Packard, Jr., Jane W. Packard, Cornelius H. Dunham, Lucia Dunham, Thaddeus Gifford, Abigail Gifford, Mary Edson, Fearing W. Bent, Mehitabel W. Bent, Jarvis D. Smith, Martha Smith.

The society first held meetings in Hayward's Hall, commencing March 2, 1842; afterwards occupied the Unitarian Church till July 23, 1843, when they removed to the hall of Tyler Cobb.

Rev. O. G. Smith was their first pastor, who preached to them from the organization of the church till 1844. He was succeeded by Rev. Addison Childes, of the Providence Conference, who soon after closed his earthly labors, and the society employed Rev. H. C. Atwater, a graduate of Yale College, and at that time a teacher of the Adelpian Academy, till the close of the Conference year, when he was admitted to the Conference, and stationed there in 1845. During the same year, a plain but substantial house of worship was erected, costing two thousand six hundred dollars, built by Messrs. Dunbar & Soule, and dedicated Jan. 8, 1846, Rev. Edward T. Taylor preaching the dedication sermon. Sanford Alden, Fearing W. Bent, Thomas Hathaway, Liberty

Packard, Israel Packard, Jr., Cornelius H. Dunham, and Oliver D. Shepardson were appointed trustees.

Rev. Henry Smith was located for this church in 1846, and remained two years; Rev. Lemuel Harlow in 1848, but was not received.

Here follows a full list of the pastors of the Second Methodist Episcopal Church :

Revs. Edward Otherman, 1848; John B. Husted, 1849; John Livesey, Jr., 1850; Azariah B. Wheeler, 1851-52; Erastus Benton, 1853; Andrew McKeoun, 1854; Robert McGonegal, 1856; John Cooper, 1857-58; N. Bemis, 1859; Merritt P. Alderman, 1860-61; Thomas Ely, 1862-63; Frederic A. Crafts, 1864-66; John Howson, 1867-68; Joseph H. James, 1869-71; T. M. House, 1872-73; S. B. Sweetzer, 1874; William T. Harlow, 1875; Dwight A. Jordan, 1876-78; George A. Morse, 1879-80; John Ellis Hawkins, 1881-82; Albert P. Palmer, 1883-84.

During the year 1853 this society erected a new and splendid church edifice at an expense of twenty-four thousand dollars. Barnabas Snow was the contractor and master-builder, Isaiah B. Young, of Boston, architect. The building is ninety-four feet long by sixty feet wide, with a tower one hundred and ten feet high, containing a bell weighing eighteen hundred and twenty-seven pounds, from the foundry of Henry N. Hooper, of Boston, costing six hundred and sixty-five dollars. The interior of the house is furnished with one hundred and ten pews and an elegant organ, manufactured by Mr. George Stevens, of Cambridge, Mass. A baptismal font of marble was presented to the society by S. S. Green; also a beautiful Bible and hymn-book presented by the Young Gentlemen's Charitable Association connected with the church.

The corner-stone of this church was laid July 25, 1853, with appropriate ceremony, as follows: 1, remarks, by Rev. A. B. Wheeler; 2, reading of the Word, by Rev. Paul Couch; 3, singing; 4, prayer, by Rev. T. B. Gurney; 5, benediction.

Previous to the benediction occurred the ceremony of depositing a tin box in one of the corner foundations of the tower, which contained the following:

Records of the Second Methodist Church in North Bridgewater; names of original and present members of the Second Conference; officers of the Sabbath-school; trustees of the church; building committee; architect and master-builder; pastors of the various churches in town; copies of order of exercises on the occasion; minutes of the Providence Annual Conference; missionary report of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Sabbath-school report; discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church; copies of Zion's Herald, Church Advocate and Journal, Missionary Advocate,

Sabbath-School Advocate, North Bridgewater Gazette.

This house was dedicated to the worship of God June 1, 1854, with the following order of exercises, commencing at ten and a half o'clock:

1, voluntary, on the organ; 2, reading of the 84th Psalm, by Rev. George W. Stearns; 3, voluntary, by the choir; 4, reading of the 964th hymn of the Methodist Collection, by Rev. J. B. Gould; 5, reading of Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple (1 Kings viii.), by Rev. J. Mather; 6, dedicatory prayer, by Rev. F. Upham; 7, voluntary, by the choir; 8, sermon, by Rev. Miner Raymond (principal of Wilbraham Academy), text, 1 Tim. i. 15,—“This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners;” 9, concluding prayer, by Rev. I. J. P. Collyer; 10, reading of the 970th hymn, by Rev. W. T. Harlow.

The sermon was spoken of as a masterly exposition and defense of the cardinal doctrines of the gospel as taught by that denomination.

Pews were sold to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars a short time after the dedication, and everything had fair for a prosperous and useful society.

This church was blessed with a great revival in January, 1843, the result of which was, large numbers were added to the church, and a flourishing Sabbath-school organized March 2, 1842.

Superintendents of the Sunday-school have been as follows: Liberty Packard, Arba Pratt, L. F. C. Loomis, Richard P. Thurston, Israel Packard, Henry Baylies, Charles Worth, Philip Reynolds, Rufus L. Thacher, John Filoons, George M. Copeland, Uriah Macoy, Edwin Sawtell, J. B. Wiswell, Cyrus F. Copeland, E. T. Sampson.

The church organization for 1884 is as follows: Rev. A. P. Palmer, pastor; C. F. Copeland, Apolas Eaton, C. Barney Rounds, George M. Copeland, F. S. Reynolds, W. E. Beal, William A. Parmenter, Charles Hartwell, Jr., J. H. Dickinson, stewards; Sanford Winter, president; D. B. Lovell, secretary; Philip Reynolds, treasurer; N. S. Holmes, Edwin Sawtell, Asa Snow, Uriah Macoy, C. F. Copeland, Henry L. Thompson, trustees; N. S. Holmes, Philip Reynolds, W. H. Gray, J. W. Jameson, Mrs. A. P. Palmer, E. T. Sampson, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Methodist Episcopal Church of Campello.—In 1879 the number of attendants upon the Methodist Church worship in the central village of Brockton had become so numerous, and the many inconveniences of attendance on all the meetings were such, that a few members thought the time had arrived when this denomination should have a church of their own in Campello. Accordingly, Rev. John Livesey, a preacher, who had formerly supplied in the First Church at the "West Shares," was appointed to preach to the people of Campello by the New England Southern Conference of Methodist Churches, formerly known as the Providence Conference. Services were commenced by preaching in "Huntington Hall," on Main Street, in the early part of 1879. On the 18th day of May of that year John Montgomery, a well-known and active member of the Second Church in the village, was appointed class-leader. The first year the church numbered fifty-four members, which has increased to a membership of one hundred and fifty members, and is rapidly increasing with the growth of the city.

In 1880 a lot of land was purchased on the south side of South Street, sufficiently large for a church and parsonage buildings. William S. Green and George R. Pierce were building committee. A neat wooden building, forty-five by sixty feet, with an addition of twelve by twenty, was erected, surmounted with a small tower, in which is a bell.

Philip Reynolds, of Brockton, contributed one thousand dollars to the general building fund.

The interior is furnished with a good cabinet organ, manufactured by George Woods & Co., a neat black-walnut pulpit, presented by George M. Copeland, of Brockton, and chairs inclosed within a rail, of the same material. It contains sittings for three hundred persons, in fifty-eight pews. In 1883 the society added a two-story parsonage at an expense of twenty-five hundred dollars. The church cost about five thousand dollars, besides the improvements now being made in the raising of the church building and adding a vestry.

Since the organization was started it has had the kind assistance, co-operation, and good wishes of all the other churches, and is in a flourishing condition, bidding fair to become a large society.

The following persons have been their pastors from the commencement :

Rev. John Livesey, April, 1879, to April, 1881 ; Rev. S. F. Chase, April, 1881, to April, 1883 ; Rev. Augustus W. Kingsley, April, 1883,—is the present pastor.

The following persons were officers the first year of the organization :

Trustees, L. B. Pratt, Charles Peterson, John Montgomery, George A. Haven, George R. Pierce, Willard Howard, William S. Green, Charles H. Eldridge, Howard P. Keith ; Stewards, George A. Haven, George R. Pierce, James L. Robinson, Arthur P.

Alden, John Montgomery ; Superintendents of Sunday-schools, George R. Pierce, George S. Cobb.

Rev. Augustus W. Kingsley was born in Montville, Conn., Oct. 2, 1840, son of Charles and Evelina (Spalding) Kingsley ; graduated at Middletown University, Conn., 1863 ; joined the Providence Conference, 1868 ; settled in South Manchester, Conn., 1868-70 ; in Burnside, Conn., 1873-75 ; with Hope Street Methodist Church, Providence, R. I., 1876-78 ; Middleboro', Mass., 1879-81 ; in Burnside, Conn., 1882 ; in Campello, Mass., 1883-84.

CHAPTER VII.

SOUTH CONGREGATIONAL SOCIETY AND CHURCH.

South Congregational Society—First Meeting-House—Dedication of the Second Meeting-House—Moderators of Society Meetings—Committee of the Society—Clerks—Treasurers—List of Society Officers for the year 1884—South Congregational Church—Church Faith and Covenant—Ministry of Rev. John Dwight—Ministry of Rev. Daniel Huntington—Ministry of Rev. David Temple Packard—Ministry of Rev. Charles W. Wood—Ministry of Rev. Leverett S. Woodworth—Ministry of Rev. John T. Blades—Deacons of the South Congregational Church.

South Congregational Society.—This society was composed of members who belonged to the First Congregational Society, in the Centre Village, under the pastoral care of Rev. Paul Couch. The people in the southerly portion of the town having become quite numerous, and the inconvenience of attending constantly upon public worship at such a distance (one and a half miles) was such that a new and more convenient means was thought of. Hence, after much consultation and many meetings, thirty-four persons petitioned to a justice of the peace to call a meeting for the purpose of organizing them into a new society. The following persons were the original members :

Josiah W. Kingman.	John W. Snell.
Bela Keith.	Albert Hunt.
Ziba Keith.	Sylvanus French.
Benjamin Keith.	Davis Kingman.
Azor Packard.	Charles Williams.
Thomas Packard.	John Millett.
Charles Keith.	Stafford Drake.
Jason Keith.	Robert Packard, Jr.
Vinal Lyon.	Aaron B. Drake.
Isaac K. French.	Stephen D. Soule.
Cary Howard.	Ephraim Jackson.
Oliver Jackson.	Abijah Thayer.
Nahum Hayward.	Josiah Dunbar.
Pardon Keith.	Freeman Holmes.
Jonathan Snell.	Fearing W. Bent.
Abijah Holmes.	Jonas Keith.
Calvin Hatch.	Zina Hayward.

Agreeable to the petition above referred to, Hon. Jesse Perkins, Esq., issued a warrant calling a meeting, to be held at the house of Bela Keith, Esq., Dec. 3, 1836, at one o'clock P.M., when the following officers were chosen: Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., moderator; Jason Keith, clerk; Charles Keith, treasurer; Azor Packard, Ziba Keith, Charles Keith, parish committee.

First Meeting-House.—The first step taken toward erecting a house of worship was to obtain a spot of land upon which to build. For this purpose, Isaac Keith gave the society the lot now owned and occupied by them, on the corner of South and Main Streets, Campello, on condition that they pay him the interest on the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, annually, until the decease of Mr. Keith and wife, then it was to become the property of the society.

The first house of worship was built by subscription, and cost $4307.37, of which sum three thousand dollars only was subscribed. The house was built under the direction of Bela Keith, Esq., as master-builder, in 1836, who paid the balance ($1307.37) over the subscription. The frame was raised July 4, 1836, was a plain, substantial building, sixty feet in length, forty-three feet in width, and twenty-one feet posts, with a spire eighty-five feet in height, and a bell weighing one thousand and thirty-two pounds, manufactured by George Holbrook, of East Medway, Mass. The house had sixty pews, besides the choir gallery. The basement was used as a vestry for evening meetings.

Dedication of the Second Meeting-House.—On the 23d day of May, 1853, the people of Campello were visited by one of the most disastrous fires that ever occurred in the county, destroying several buildings, among which was their house of worship. The time had come, something must be done,—no pastor, no house in which to hold their meetings. The people of that place, always enterprising, did not long remain thus. A meeting of the parish was called June 1st. At this meeting a committee of five were chosen to proceed at once in the erection of a house, namely, Bela Keith, Martin L. Keith, Cary Howard, Aaron B. Drake, Vival Lyon, with Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., and Dr. Horatio Bryant as an advisory committee. This committee set themselves immediately at work, the result of which was the erection of the present edifice, which is of wood, painted in imitation of freestone, eighty-four feet long, fifty-six feet wide, with posts forty feet high, and a spire one hundred and eighty-five feet high.

The spire of the church, as first erected, was blown down in the great snow-storm of January, 1857. The present spire is one hundred and thirty-five feet high. Rebuilt by W. R. Penniman, of South Braintree.

On entering the building, we find on the first floor one large vestry, one small vestry, and a large, carpeted, well-furnished room for the use of the "Ladies' Benevolent Society." Ascending from the main entrance, on either side, a very easy flight of steps, we find ourselves in a vestibule, from which we ascend to the choir-gallery or enter the auditory. The interior aspect of this house is fine. The spacious floor, well-arranged slips, neatly carpeted and upholstered, the chaste and elegant pulpit, manufactured by Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., was of rosewood, of an elegant design, and polished in the highest style, and the finely frescoed walls, gave the place an air of pleasantness quite in contrast with the churches of earlier days.

The original outlay in the construction of this house was sixteen thousand dollars. It is built in the Romanesque style of architecture, from plans drawn by Messrs. Towle & Foster, of Boston. The builder was Mr. William Drake, of Stoughton. The bell was cast at the foundry of Mr. George Holbrook, of East Medway, Mass., and weighs thirty-two hundred pounds. A marble-faced clock was presented to the society by Henry K. Keith, in 1854, which was placed in front of the choir-gallery. Benjamin Franklin Hayward, Freeman Howland Shiverick, and Samuel French were a committee appointed to make arrangements for the ordination and dedication, which took place on Thursday, Sept. 21, 1854, with the following appropriate exercises:

Music; invocation and reading the Scriptures, by Rev. S. L. Rockwood, of Hanson; prayer, by Rev. James W. Ward, of Abington; hymn, read by Rev. Isaac C. White, of Abington.

"Here, in thy name, eternal God,
We build this earthly house for thee;
Oh! choose it for thy fixed abode,
And guard it long from error free.

"Here, when thy people seek thy face,
And dying sinners pray to live,
Hear, thou, in heaven, thy dwelling-place,
And when thou hearest, Lord, forgive.

"Here, when thy messengers proclaim
The blessed gospel of thy Son,
Still by the power of his great name,
Be mighty signs and wonders done.

"When children's voices raise the song,
Hosanna! to their heavenly King,
Let heaven with earth the strain prolong,
Hosanna! let the angels sing.

"But will, indeed, Jehovah deign
Here to abide, no transient guest?

Here will our great Redeemer reign,
And here the Holy Spirit rest!

"Thy glory never hence depart!
Yet choose not, Lord, this house alone;
Thy kingdom come to every heart,
In every bosom fix thy throne."

Sermon, by Rev. Ezekiel Russell, D.D., East Randolph; anthem; dedicatory prayer, by Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree; anthem; closing prayer, by Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree; anthem; benediction.

Since the above dedication the society has increased rapidly, requiring more pew accommodations, and the few public-spirited individuals of the church, of which there is no lack in Campello, contributed enough to add to the length on the west end of the building, in which was placed the organ, in the rear of the pulpit. A new pulpit and furnishings were introduced, together with other improvements inside, such as frescoing the walls and ceiling, piping the house for gas-lights, etc., rendering the house more attractive and roomy than it was originally. The grounds around the building have been newly graded, a new fence surrounding the lot, which has granite curbstones and concrete walks. In fine, the church and society has been prosperous, and are in good standing, financially and otherwise, in the denomination to which they belong.

MODERATORS.

Annual meetings and moderators of the South Congregational Society, Campello:

- Dec. 3, 1836. Josiah W. Kingman.
- March 7, 1837. " "
- April 9, 1838. Lemuel B. Hatch.
- " 1, 1839. Davis Kingman.
- March 27, 1840. " "
- April 12, 1841. Josiah W. Kingman.
- " 18, 1842. Davis Kingman.
- " 1, 1843. Charles Keith.
- " 8, 1844. " "
- March 31, 1845. " "
- April 6, 1846. Benjamin Keith.
- " 7, 1847. Charles Keith.
- " 17, 1848. " "
- " 16, 1849. Bela Keith.
- " 8, 1850. " "
- May 19, 1851. " "
- April 12, 1852. " "
- " 11, 1853. " "
- " 14, 1854. Aaron B. Drake.
- " 9, 1855. " "
- " 7, 1856. " "
- " 13, 1857. Josiah W. Kingman.
- " 2, 1858. " "
- " 11, 1859. Russell Alden.
- " 6, 1860. B. H. Gray.
- " 15, 1861. Bela Keith.
- " 14, 1862. Josiah W. Kingman.
- " 20, 1863. Daniel Dunbar.

- April 11, 1864. Nelson J. Foss.
- " 8, 1865. Daniel Dunbar.
- " 23, 1866. Aaron B. Drake.
- " 15, 1867. Daniel Dunbar.
- " 27, 1868. " "
- " 26, 1869. " "
- " 18, 1870. " "
- " 24, 1871. " "
- " 24, 1872. Galen Pratt.
- " 4, 1873. Daniel Dunbar.
- " 13, 1874. " "
- March 31, 1875. " "
- " 29, 1876. Dr. William Richards.
- April 2, 1877. " "
- " 9, 1878. S. Franklin Packard.
- " 7, 1879. Dr. William Richards.
- " 16, 1880. S. Franklin Packard.
- " 18, 1881. " "
- " 4, 1882. Warren T. Copeland.
- " 16, 1883. " "
- " 18, 1884. " "

COMMITTEES.

Committee of the South Congregational Society, Campello:

- Azor Packard, 1836, '37, '44.
- Ziba Keith, 1836, '38, '44, '47, '60.
- Charles Keith, 1836, '37, '40, '48, '49.
- Capt. Robert Packard, 1837, '39, '45, '51, '60, '76.
- Zina Hayward, 1838, '43, '45, '46, '49, '60, '68, '74.
- Davis Kingman, 1838, '42, '44.
- Josiah W. Kingman, 1839, '45, '46, '47, '48, '52, '54, '63, '69.
- Lemuel B. Hatch, 1839.
- Cary Howard, 1840, '48, '59.
- Franklin Keith, 1840, '55, '74.
- Bela Keith, 1841, '51, '62.
- Pardon Keith, 1841, '43, '46.
- Benjamin Keith, 1841, '50, '51.
- Calvin Hatch, 1842.
- Samuel French, 1842, '62.
- Abijah Holmes, 1843, '50.
- Nelson J. Foss, 1847, '52, '56, '63, '69.
- Sylvanus Keith, 1849, '53, '63, '78.
- Martin L. Keith, 1850, '53.
- Russell Alden, 1852, '56, '59.
- Anson Morse, 1853.
- Albert Keith, 1853, '71.
- Freeman H. Shiverick, 1854.
- Arza B. Keith, 1854, '57, '65, '67, '69, '70.
- Bradford Kingman, 1855.
- Samuel D. Keith, 1855, '66, '70.
- Sidney Packard, 1856, '61.
- Daniel Dunbar, 1857, '72, '77.
- Benjamin F. Hayward, 1857.
- Barnabas H. Gray, 1858, '73.
- Robert H. Packard, 1858.
- Harrison Bryant, 1859.
- Charles P. Keith, 1861.
- Henry Jackson, 1861.
- Jonathan C. Keith, 1862, '63, '68.
- Voted to elect four committee this year (1863).
- Otis Cobb, 1864, '81, '82, '83.
- Dr. J. F. Richards, 1864.
- George Sawyer, 1864, '67, '79.
- Caleb H. Packard, 1865, '81, '82.
- Henry S. Keith, 1865.

William S. Snell, 1866.
 Charles H. Cole, 1866, '80.
 S. Franklin Packard, 1867, '70.
 Ziba C. Keith, 1868, '71, '77, '83.
 Nathan H. Washburn, 1871, '78.
 George Churchill, 1872, '80.
 Daniel N. Keith, 1872, '79.
 A. B. Marston, 1873.
 John M. Wentworth, 1873.
 Charles W. Bacon, 1874.
 Preston B. Keith, 1875.
 Edmund B. Fanning, 1875, '73, '84.
 Lucas W. Alden, 1875.
 Edwin Keith, 1876, '84.
 George E. Keith, 1876, '81, '82.
 Rufus P. Keith, 1877.
 Austin C. Packard, 1878.
 Flavel B. Keith, 1879.
 Warren T. Copeland, 1880.
 Joshua Reed, 1884.

CLERKS.

Clerks of the South Congregational Society, Campello :

Jason Keith, 1836, '37, '38, '39, '40.
 Cary Howard, 1841, '42, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50.
 Dr. Horatio Bryant, 1851, '52, '53.
 Albert Keith, 1854, '55, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.<sup>1</sup>
 Myron L. Keith, 1884.

TREASURERS.

Treasurers of the South Congregational Society, Campello :

Charles Keith, 1836.
 Jason Keith, 1837.
 Lemuel B. Hatch, 1839.
 Cary Howard, 1840, '41.
 Josiah W. Kingman, 1842, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50.
 Spencer W. Noyes, 1851.
 Benjamin Keith, 1852, '53.
 Samuel French, 1854, '55, '56, '57.
 Freeman H. Shiveriek, 1858.
 Mary K. Keith (?).
 Nelson J. Foss, 1860.
 Azra B. Keith, 1862.
 Daniel Dunbar, 1863, '64.
 George Sawyer, 1865, '66, '67, '68. ('69, '70 no record.)
 S. Franklin Packard, 1871, '75, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.
 Franklin Keith, 1872.
 Preston B. Keith, 1872.
 George E. Keith, 1873.
 William S. Green, 1874.
 Austin C. Packard, 1876, '77.
 George W. Packard, 1877. (A. C. Packard elected to fill his place.)

LIST OF SOCIETY OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR 1884.

Rev. John T. Blades, pastor ; Edmund B. Fanning, Edwin Keith, Joshua Reed, parish committee ; Myron L. Keith, clerk ; S. Franklin Packard, treasurer and collector ; Preston B. Keith, superintendent of Sunday-school ; Alvin Howe, sexton.

<sup>1</sup> A vote of thanks to Mr. Keith was passed April 18, 1884, for thirty years of faithful service as clerk of the society.—B. K.

South Congregational Church (Campello).—

The society having been duly organized, and a house of worship erected, it was thought best to form a new church among themselves. For this purpose the following persons made application to be dismissed from the First Church, with suitable testimonials, to be formed into another church, and to use a similar creed as the one which they leave: Sylvanus French, Mercy E. Keith, Abigail Keith, Olive Jackson, Martha Keith, Charles Keith, Mehitabel Keith, Ziba Keith, Polly Keith, Mary Keith, Sylvia Howard, Huldah Howard, Keziah Hayward, Charles Williams, Zilpha Hatch, Josiah W. Kingman, Joanna Packard, Robert Packard, Sarah Packard, Mary Packard, Josiah Dunbar, Sybil Dunbar, Anna Dunbar. This request was granted. A council was next called, for the purpose of organization, which met at the house of Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., on Tuesday, Jan. 3, 1837, at one o'clock P.M., at which time and place it took the name of the "South Congregational Church," of North Bridgewater.

The members of the council present at the organization of the church in Campello, Jan. 3, 1837, were as follows :

First Church in Randolph : Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, pastor ; W. Thayer, delegate.

Church in East Bridgewater : A. Shaw, delegate.

First Church of North Bridgewater : Rev. Paul Couch, pastor ; Dr. Abel W. Kingman, delegate.

Rev. Calvin Hitchcock was moderator.

Rev. Paul Couch, scribe.

The following Articles of Faith and Covenant were adopted by them at that time :

ARTICLES OF FAITH AND COVENANT.

"Confession of Faith and Covenant of the South Congregational Church, North Bridgewater, Mass.

"We solemnly profess our unfeigned belief of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, as given by divine inspiration ; our acceptance of all the doctrines contained in them, and our submission to the whole will of God, therein revealed. Particularly, we profess to believe that the Lord Jehovah, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, is the one living and true God ; that the Lord Jesus Christ is the Son of God, essentially equal with the Father, and the only Saviour of men ; that the Holy Ghost is also God, and that he is the only Sanctifier of those who believe in Christ to the salvation of their souls.

"We believe that, in consequence of the fall of man from his primitive state of innocence, all the human race, while unregenerate, are destitute of holiness, and therefore that a renovation of heart, during the present life, through sanctification of the Spirit of God, is necessary to fit mankind for union and communion with the visible Church of Christ on earth, and for admittance into the kingdom of heaven.

"We believe that, in order to effect our deliverance from the bondage of corruption and from the curse of the law, under which we all have fallen by transgression, the Eternal Word, who in the beginning was with God, and was God, was made flesh, and dwelt among men on earth, uniting with his divinity the whole human nature (yet without sin) in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. That this mysterious and adorable personage, having magnified and honored the divine law by his doctrine and example, at length died on the cross, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, and that it is through the efficacy of his propitiatory sacrifice alone his people obtain the divine favor and blessing.

"We believe that, having thus laid down his life, he took it again, being declared the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead, and that he is now at the right hand of the Father, a prince and a Saviour, bestowing repentance and remission of sins, through the agency of the Holy Spirit attending the ministry of his word, on those whom the Father hath given him, in the everlasting covenant of redemption, as a seed to serve him.

"We believe that, whosoever will may come and partake the blessings of this great salvation, as they are freely and sincerely offered in the Gospel, yet that none of our apostate race are, of themselves, disposed to forsake sin and devote themselves to God, in heart and life, so that it rests with him, in the exercise of his sovereign wisdom and goodness, to have mercy on whom he will have mercy; making his Gospel effectual to their conviction and conversion, by the attendant energy of his Holy Spirit.

"We believe that none who are thus made partakers of the heavenly calling shall be finally deprived of the grace which was given them in Christ Jesus before the world began, but that they shall all be kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation.

"We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ shall appear again at the last day to judge the quick and dead; that he will then receive to mansions of eternal rest all who have truly believed and obeyed his Gospel, and sentence to everlasting destruction from his presence, and from the glory of his power, all who have died, or who shall then be found living in impenitence and unbelief.

Covenant.

"Humbly hoping that these truths have come, not only to our understanding but to our hearts, 'in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance,' and that we have been enabled to receive them with that faith which purifies the heart and works by love, and in the exercise of that repentance which is unto life, We do now solemnly avouch the Lord Jehovah to be our God, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, to be our Redeemer, and the Holy Spirit to be our Sanctifier.

"Depending on divine grace for spiritual strength and comfort, we take the word of God as our only rule of faith and practice, avowing it to be our supreme desire and solemn determination to seek his glory and his favor in obedience to all his holy will. Accordingly, we engage to unite in maintaining and attending on the ministry of his word and ordinances, as he shall give us ability and opportunity, to be thereby edified in our holy faith. We submit ourselves, individually, to the brotherly watch and discipline of the community which we hereby form, and mutually engage to watch over, to exhort, to assist, comfort, and admonish each other in brotherly love, as our relation and circumstances may require."

The next thing done, after the formation of the church, was to find a man to preach to them. After hearing many candidates, at a meeting held Jan. 9, 1837, the church and society "voted to give Rev. Thomas Kidder, of Waterbury, Vt., a call to settle with them in the ministry, and to give him a salary of Five Hundred and Fifty Dollars per year." This call was not accepted.

MINISTRY OF REV. JOHN DWIGHT.—Rev. John Dwight, of Medway, Mass., was then invited to become their pastor by a vote passed March 7, 1837, to whom the society offered six hundred dollars as a yearly salary. This was accepted, and Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., Ziba Keith, Deacon Jacob Fuller, and Bela Keith, Esq., were chosen a committee to make arrangements for his installation. The day being fixed for the ordination, a council was called, who met at the house of Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., consisting of the following persons, April 12, 1837, namely: Rev. Jacob Ide, of West Medway, Mass.; Rev. Joseph Bennett, of Woburn; Rev. Paul Couch, of North Bridgewater; Rev. Luther Sheldon, of Easton; Rev. Baalis Sanford, of East Bridgewater; Rev. James W. Ward, of Abington; Rev. Jonas Perkins, of Braintree; Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, of Randolph; Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater; Rev. Calvin E. Park, of Stoughton; and Rev. John Dwight was duly ordained as their pastor.

Rev. John Dwight was born in Shirley, Mass., Jan. 2, 1810; fitted for college at Woburn Academy; taught school in Woburn two terms; graduated at Amherst College in 1835; studied theology with Rev. Jacob Ide, D.D., of West Medway, Mass.; licensed to preach by the Mendon Association in the early part of 1837; received a call to settle over the South Church in Campello, Mass., in 1837; was ordained April 12, 1837; dismissed in March, 1839; installed over the Second Church in Plymouth, Mass., July 18, 1841; dismissed in March, 1846; installed pastor of the church in North Wrentham, Mass., June 23, 1853; dismissed April 1, 1856. He married Sarah Ann Hastings, of Boston, April 14, 1837, and has six children, all of whom reside at Massachusetts.

Mr. Dwight labored with his people until Jan. 2, 1839, when a council was called, as follows:

Agreeable to letters missive from the South Church in North Bridgewater (Campello), an ecclesiastical council was held at the house of Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., on Wednesday, the second day of January, 1839, for the purpose of considering the request of Mr. Dwight for a dissolution of the pastoral relations between the church and people. The churches composing this council were as follows:

Church of Stoughton: Rev. Calvin Park, pastor; Deacon Fisher Gay, delegate.

Church of Easton: Rev. Luther Sheldon, pastor; Deacon Harrison Mitchell, delegate.

Church of West Randolph: Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, pastor; Horatio B. Alden, delegate.

Church of Bridgewater: Rev. Ebenezer Gay, pastor; Deacon Morton Eddy, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. Baalis Sanford, pastor; John Richards, delegate.

Church of East Randolph: Rev. Dennis Powers, pastor; Abner Derby, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. J. W. Ward, pastor; Zibeon Packard, delegate.

First Church of North Bridgewater: Eliphalet Kingman, delegate.

Rev. Dr. Park was chosen moderator; Rev. J. W. Ward, scribe.

The council, after mature deliberation, voted, "unanimously, That under the existing circumstances they deem it expedient that the pastoral relation between Mr. John Dwight and the South Church in North Bridgewater be dissolved.

Voted, "unanimously, that this council give the Rev. John Dwight a full and cordial recommendation to the churches of our Lord Jesus Christ as a pious, able, and devoted ambassador of our Lord and Saviour.

Voted, "That the council deeply regret the practice frequent at the present day of the dissolution of the pastoral relations on trivial grounds as exceedingly injurious to the interests of the pastor and church, and the cause of Zion, and do, therefore, record their decided and unanimous disapprobation of the practice.

"The council tender to the Rev. John Dwight their cordial sympathies, now vacating this portion of his Master's vineyard, and pray that he may soon be stationed on some part of the walls of Zion, and where he may meet with distinguished success, employ his time and talents in advancing the best interests of the church of God.

"They would also tender their cordial sympathies to this Church and Society, now left as sheep without a shepherd, and devoutly pray that the great Head of the church may continue to prosper and bless them and soon send them an under-shepherd, who may break to them the bread of life.

"CALVIN PARK, Moderator.

"J. W. WARD, Scribe.

"A true Copy.

"Attest: JASON KEITH, Clerk."

MINISTRY OF REV. DANIEL HUNTINGTON.—Various preachers were heard from that time until November, when, at a meeting of the society, held Nov. 19, 1839, it was "voted to unite with the church in giving Rev. Daniel Huntington, of New London, Conn., a call to become their pastor." Josiah W. Kingman, Charles Keith, and Deacon Sylvanus French were chosen a committee to confer with Rev. Mr. Huntington, and offer him six hundred dollars salary, which offer being accepted, a council, consisting of Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree; Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater; Rev. Luther Sheldon, of Easton; Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, of Randolph; Rev. Jonas Perkins, of Braintree; Rev. Baalis Sanford, of East Bridgewater; Rev. Paul

Couch, of North Bridgewater, was called for the purpose of installing him as their pastor, Jan. 1, 1840. He continued to preach to this people till May, 1851, when Mr. Huntington, thinking the time had come for him to relinquish his labors, "that some one might fill his place whose influence might the more effectually call forth its resources, and more equalize the pecuniary liabilities," asked that a council be called to consider the question of his dismissal, which was granted. A meeting of the church and society was held, and a strong opposition to his dismissal being manifested, the council unanimously declared themselves "happy to find, in the light of all the documents before them, and the verbal assurances given them by the pastor on the one hand, and the committee of the church and society on the other, that there is no sufficient ground for such action as is indicated, by the letter missive, in the existing circumstances of the parties concerned;" and Mr. Huntington finally withdrew his resignation, and continued to supply the pulpit as before until the regular yearly meeting, April 18, 1853, when he was requested to resign his position. He therefore tendered his resignation to the church at a meeting held May 2, 1853, and asked for a council to be convened for the purpose of his dismissal. The following persons composed the council, viz.:

First Church in Braintree: Richard S. Storrs, D.D., pastor; Jonathan Wild, M.D., delegate.

Union Church of Weymouth and Braintree: Rev. Jonas Perkins, pastor.

Trinity Church of Bridgewater: Rev. David Brigham, pastor; Oliver Allen, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. Baalis Sanford, pastor; Deacon Nathan Whitman, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. James W. Ward, pastor; Joshua Whitmarsh, delegate.

The council was organized by the choice of Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs as moderator, and Rev. James W. Ward as scribe.

This council met at nine o'clock A.M., May 11, 1853, when the relation between pastor and people was dissolved. After due deliberation the council came to the following result:

"Doubtless sufficient reasons may exist for the dissolution of the pastoral relation, independently of Providential calls to stations of increased responsibility, and of the summons to give account of one's stewardship at the tribunal of God. The failure of health, the loss of intellectual vigor or moral character on the part of the pastor; the unfriendliness of influential individuals, the exhausted resources of church and congregation, or the long and total suspension of divine influences, may indicate the expediency, not to say the necessity, of terminating the connection between the pastor and his flock. Even in cases like these, it is more than probable that, had patience its perfect work, and were a more humble reliance on God maintained, the plea of expediency or necessity would be nullified by the onward progress of time. But in the case before the council to-day, neither failure of health, loss of intellectual vigor nor moral character,—neither individual unfriendliness, exhausted resources, nor want of success in the ministry, is or can be urged as the ground either of the tender or acceptance of the pastor's resignation; his health never was better; his character, in whatever aspect viewed, has never stood higher, nor has he an acknowledged enemy within the church or outside of it, and the congregation has been growing in wealth ever since he came to it, while the church has doubled its numbers; he loves his people warmly, and with one consent they profess to reciprocate his love. Such is the testimony, both of those who wish the pastoral relation dissolved, and those who deprecate the means; and yet, at their mutual request, this council is assembled to 'advise and assist' in the question of his dismission.

"After previous advice, kindly given and received two years ago, but now overlooked, and without any important change in the circumstances of the parties, nothing remains to the council but, agreeably to the earnest request of the pastor and the corresponding action of the church without the assignment of any satisfactory reasons on the part of the church, to declare the pastoral relation hitherto subsisting between Rev. D. Huntington and the South Church in North Bridgewater to be dissolved by their mutual agreement. While making this declaration, the council feel bound, by regard to the honor of the ministry and the sacredness of truth, to affirm of the pastor, in accordance with the statements made to them, that for no fault of his own is this dissolution accomplished. That having been long tried and well known to all the pastors and churches of the region round about, as a man of unblemished character, a Christian of deep experience, a minister of uncommon talent, fidelity, and affectionateness, and a model of meekness, self-denial, and devotedness to the interests of Zion, he possesses our entire confidence and warmest love; and he is hereby most cordially and unreservedly commended to the fraternal regards of all ministers and churches among whom his future lot shall be cast, as well as to the safe conduct of 'Him who dwelt in the bush,' and led his people of old into the promised land.

"And most cordially do the council sympathize with those specially afflicted by the bereaving event of this day. Most deeply do they lament existing trials, whether real or imaginary; and most affectionately advise to a more patient waiting on God in the future, and a firmer reliance on his almighty arm in support of the ministry of his appointment. And if he shall give you another pastor hereafter, as we fervently hope and pray, may he be equally a man of God's own heart as the man you lose to-day, and a man whose instructions shall be as pure, whose life shall be as exemplary, whose spirit shall be as affectionate, whose fidelity shall be as clear to all men, and whose success shall be far more abundant in eradicating the love of money, which is the root of all evil, in winning souls to Christ and filling heaven with hallelujahs to the Lamb that was slain; and for this, may your faith and love grow exceedingly, and your labors abound more and more, till you shall be called to join the general assembly and church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven.

"R. S. STORRS, Moderator.

"J. W. WARD, Secre.

"A True Copy.

"Attest: JAMES W. WARD."

Rev. Daniel Huntington was the son of Gen.

Jedediah, and grandson of Gen. Jabez Huntington, of Norwich, Conn., both of whom were generals in the army of the Revolution (1775), also brother of the late Rev. Joshua Huntington, of the Old South Church, Boston. He was born at Norwich, Conn., Oct. 17, 1788; graduated at Yale College, New Haven, Conn., in 1807; studied theology; and was first ordained at North Bridgewater, Oct. 28, 1812, where he remained as pastor of the First Congregational Church until prostrating disease compelled him to retire from that field of labor, greatly to his own grief and that of a devoted church and society, in March, 1833, being dismissed by council March 27, 1833. In May following, he removed his family to New London. After a brief respite from pastoral labors, he gained sufficient strength to gratify his fine literary taste in the instruction of successive classes of young ladies in the higher branches of an educational course while a resident of New London, the city of his birth and death. In this employment, combined with occasional preaching as returning health permitted, seven years passed away usefully and pleasantly. At the end of this period his heart yearned for a return to the labors of his love; and receiving an earnest call from a portion of his original church and congregation to take charge of them in the Lord, he cheerfully consented to the arrangement, and was received not only by them, but by the original church, and all the churches and pastors who had known his going out and coming in in former years with open arms. His installation took place Jan. 1, 1840, where he continued to labor for thirteen years as a gospel preacher, winning souls to Christ, and making glad the hearts of all by his tender love and faithfulness. At the end of that period he tendered his resignation, May 2, 1853, which was accepted, and he was permitted to retire to the home of his youth, and pass the evening of his days amid the scenes of his earliest aspirations. From that day, for about six years, till near the time of his departure, he continued to preach the gospel "in season and out of season" as "the open door was set before him," all the while setting his house in order. At the moment when his Master called him he was diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, preaching his last sermon to the mission church at Mohegan, just four weeks before the messenger of death met him.

The physical sufferings of his last days were very great, owing to the complicated diseases which, with fierce strength, assailed his delicate frame, but his patience and faith failed not,—no complaining or murmuring word fell from his lips,—his mind was clear and unclouded to the last. To the affectionate daughter who was trying to arrange the pillows for his aching head he said, "Let me go, for the day breaketh," and to another, who asked if he would not lie down, he answered, "Lay me down in Jesus' arms: 'other refuge have I none.'" To a brother according to the flesh, who said to him, "I hope you can say, with the apostle, 'I know in whom I have believed,'" he replied, after a moment's pause, "I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day." Thus closed a life eminently devoted in its progress to the happiness of his family and friends, to the honor of his Redeemer, and the salvation of men, in peace, and the joyful hope of a glorious immortality. Mr. Huntington was a man of refined sensibilities, generous sympathies, unfeigned humility, and extreme modesty (that imposed a restraint on the putting forth of his native genius), of pleasant aspect, voice, and manner, of genial humor, and gifted with good judgment. He sought to make home agreeable to children and guests; as a man and companion, affable, courteous, and true; a zealous defender of the faith, a clear, logical, earnest minister of the New Testament. As a pastor he had few equals, being eminently kind, sympathizing, prudent, and studious. As a husband, father, brother, son, he was affectionate and faithful, and greatly beloved in his domestic and social relations,—distinguished above most others in consolation to the afflicted and bereaved. His preaching was such as might convince any one of his sincerity and belief in those truths which he professed to believe. He sought not for abstruse matters, hard to be understood, neither did he aim at beauty of style nor pomp of display, either in language or person, but was simple, earnest, scriptural, practical. Many must have felt, upon learning of his death, that they had lost a friend. All who knew him will acknowledge that a good man has gone. Thus has ended the life of one who, when he first entered the ministry, declared his intention to continue in that profession, God permitting, to his death, which took place at New London, Conn., May 21, 1858.

"Rest here, blest saint, till from his throne
The morning break and pierce the shade."

Publications of Rev. Daniel Huntington :

Sermon at the Funeral of Alpheus Packard, delivered in the North Meeting-House in Bridgewater May 12, 1812.

Discourse delivered in the North Meeting-House in Bridgewater (now Brockton), Dec. 22, 1820. Being the Second Centennial Anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. Published by Ezra Lincoln, Boston.

Sermon on the Occasion of the Death of Rev. R. S. Storrs' Wife, April 9, 1818.

Discourse delivered before the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, May 26, 1824.

A Memoir of Mary Hallam Huntington, his Daughter. Published by the American Sunday-School Union, Philadelphia.

A full Account of the Great Revival in 1816 was published by him in the Boston Recorder of June 10, 1818.

Address before the Pilgrim Society at Plymouth, Mass.

Discourse delivered in the South Church in Campello, Oct. 31, 1852, it being the Fortieth Anniversary of his Ordination.

A Poem on the Pleasures and Advantages of True Religion, delivered before the United Brothers' Society in Brown University on their Anniversary, Aug. 31, 1819.

MINISTRY OF REV. DAVID TEMPLE PACKARD.—Rev. David Temple Packard, a native of the town, and who had just completed his theological course of study, was the first minister settled in the new house. He was invited to supply them during the building of the new church by a vote passed April 18, 1854. This he continued to do in Salisbury Hall till the new vestry was finished, when services were held there on the Sabbath, and May 22, 1854, the society "voted to give Rev. David Temple Packard a call to settle with them in the ministry, and offer him 800 Dollars as his Salary." This call he accepted, and he was ordained as their pastor Thursday, Sept. 21, 1854.

The churches represented in the council were as follows, viz. :

First Church of Braintree : Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., pastor ; Elias Hayward, delegate.

Evangelical Congregational Church of Easton : Rev. Luther Sheldon, pastor ; Deacon N. T. Mitchell, delegate.

Union Church of Weymouth and Braintree : Rev. Jonas Perkins, pastor ; Deacon E. H. Richards, delegate.

Trinitarian Congregational Church, Bridgewater : Martin Wentworth, delegate.

First Congregational Church of North Bridgewater : Rev. Paul Couch, pastor ; David Packard, delegate.

Congregational Church of Hanson : Rev. S. L. Rockwood, pastor ; Deacon G. F. Stetson, delegate.

First Church of Falmouth : John Butler, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church of North Bridgewater :
Deacon Simeon Packard, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater :
Deacon Charles Churchill, delegate.

Fourth Church of Abington : Rev. Isaac C. White, pastor ; Elbridge G. Ford, delegate.

First Church of Yarmouth : Rev. Abel K. Packard, pastor ; Oliver Mathews, delegate.

Mystic Church of Medford : Rev. Jacob M. Manning, pastor ; J. W. Washburn, delegate.

Central Church of Middleboro' : Rev. W. C. Dickinson, pastor ; Abiel Wood, delegate.

The following clergymen were also present by invitation, viz. :

Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater.

Rev. Charles Livingston, of Plympton.

Rev. Mr. Gurney, of St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Rev. Mr. White, of Orleans.

Rev. Josiah L. Armes, of Mason, N. H.

The council organized by the choice of Rev. Dr.
Richard S. Storrs, D.D., moderator, and Rev. W. C.
Dickinson as scribe. The services on that occasion were as follows :

1, reading of the Scriptures and invocation, by Rev. Abel K. Packard, of Yarmouth, Mass. ; 2, introductory prayer, by Rev. S. L. Rockwood, of Hanson ; 3, sermon, by Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree ; 4, ordaining prayer, by Rev. Jonas Perkins, of Braintree ; 5, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Jacob M. Manning, of Medford, Mass. ;
6, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Paul Couch, of the First Church in Bridgewater ; 7, address to the People, by Rev.
Luther Sheldon, D.D., of Easton ; 8, concluding prayer, by Rev. Ebenezer Gay, of Bridgewater ; 9, benediction, by the pastor.

The following hymn was sung on that occasion :

“ We bid thee welcome in the name
Of Jesus, our exalted Head ;
Come as a servant : so he came,
And we receive thee in his stead.

“ Come as a shepherd : guard and keep
This fold from hell and earth and sin ;
Nourish the lambs, and feed the sheep ;
The wounded heal, the lost bring in.

“ Come as a watchman : take thy stand
Upon thy tower amidst the sky ;
And when the sword comes on the land,
Call us to fight, or warn to fly.

“ Come as an angel : hence to guide
A hand of pilgrims on their way ;
That safely walking at thy side,
We fail not, faint not, turn, nor stray.

“ Come as a teacher sent from God,
Charged his whole counsel to declare ;

Lift o'er our ranks the prophet's rod,
While we uphold thy hands with prayer.

“ Come as a messenger of peace,
Filled with the Spirit, fired with love ;
Live to behold our large increase,
And die to meet us ALL ABOVE.”

Mr. Packard continued to preach to this people with ability, earnestness, and eminent success, having large audiences, till Sept. 25, 1856, when he tendered his resignation. A council was called at his request, which was held Oct. 1, 1856, and the relation between pastor and people was dissolved, very much to the regret of the community.

The following were members of the council called in the dismission of Rev. David T. Packard :

First Congregational Church of North Bridgewater :
Rev. Paul Couch, pastor ; Azel Gurney, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church of North Bridgewater :
Rev. Charles L. Mills, pastor ; Jonathan Keith, delegate.

Congregational Church of Easton : J. W. Morse, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater :
Deacon John Soule, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of East Bridgewater : Rev.
Balis Sanford, pastor ; Deacon Francis Packard,
delegate.

Church of Holbrook : Rev. Ezekiel Russell, pastor ;
Erastus Wales, delegate.

The council having organized, Rev. Balis Sanford was chosen moderator ; Rev. Ezekiel Russell, scribe.

After a hearing of all the facts presented, it was “ Voted, That the Pastoral relation hitherto subsisting so happily between the Rev. David T. Packard and this church and people be and is hereby dissolved.

“ The Council cannot withhold the expression of their deep regret that a connection formed some two years since, under circumstances so auspicious both for pastor and people, sealed by the effusions of the Spirit, and continued to the present hour strengthened and cemented by mutual affection and esteem, should be so soon sundered.

“ Deeming themselves incompetent to decide upon the validity of the reasons assigned, and avoiding the assumption of that responsibility, they still, in view of all the circumstances of the case, feel constrained to acquiesce in this result.

“ The impaired health of the Pastor's family, they trust, will soon be restored, and his usefulness continued in some other sphere. And they therefore commend him to the churches of Christ as an able, faithful, beloved, and without a blemish in his christian or ministerial reputation. They also commend the church and the people for the affection and kindness they have shown to their pastor, and commit them in their disappointment and destitution to the care of the Great Shepherd.

“ E. RUSSELL, Scribe.

“ A true copy of minutes of Council.

“ NORTH BRIDGEWATER, Oct. 1, 1856.”

Rev. David Temple Packard was born in North

Bridgewater, Mass., Aug. 24, 1824; received a common-school education in his native town; fitted for college under the tutorship of Rev. Paul Couch, at the Adelpian Academy, North Bridgewater, and Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.; graduated at Amherst College, August, 1850; taught high school at East Braintree, Mass., one year; entered Bangor Theological Seminary, October, 1851, and graduated Aug. 30, 1854. After receiving two other calls, he accepted the call of the South Church, where he was ordained Sept. 21, 1854; dismissed Oct. 1, 1856; from thence he removed to the West, preaching at Rock Island, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa; returned to Massachusetts in 1858, and in June of that year commenced preaching for the First Congregational Society in Somerville, Mass.; installed as pastor of that church and society Sept. 21, 1860; afterwards settled in Brighton, Mass., and Stockton, Cal., where he died from the effects of an accident. Mr. Packard married Abbie C. Mayhew, of Chesterfield, Me., July 24, 1855. Children, Abbie Elizabeth, March 8, 1857; Chester Mayhew, Sept. 2, 1860; died Aug. 26, 1862.

Publications of Rev. D. Temple Packard: Sermon preached at Somerville, Massachusetts, on the national fast, entitled "The Dawn of the Morning," Dec. 28, 1862; published by Rand & Avery.

The society were without a pastor from Oct. 1, 1856, to Feb. 3, 1858, during which time various preachers were heard, and March 23, 1857, Rev. Samuel Fiske was invited to become their pastor, but declined. Again, July 13, 1857, an invitation was extended to Rev. C. D. Lothrop to settle with them as their gospel minister, nothing further having been done about this call.

MINISTRY OF REV. CHARLES W. WOOD.—On the 9th day of December, 1857, Rev. Charles W. Wood, of Ashby, Mass., was invited to become their spiritual leader and pastor. This invitation was accepted, and on the 3d of February, 1858, Mr. Wood was duly installed as pastor by a council called for that purpose. Jan. 11, 1858, Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., Barnabas H. Gray, and Russell Alden, were chosen a committee of arrangements in relation to the installation of Mr. Wood.

Pursuant to letters missive from the South Congregational Church in North Bridgewater, an ecclesiastical council convened in the vestry of said church Feb. 3, 1858, consisting of the following members:

Church of Andover Theological Seminary: Rev. Austin Phelps.

Church of South Braintree: Rev. Dennis Powers, pastor; I. Davidson, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church, North Bridgewater:

Rev. Charles L. Mills, pastor; Simeon Leach, delegate.

Central Church of Middleboro': Rev. Isaiah C. Thacher, pastor; I. M. Pickens, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. Frederick R. Abbe, pastor; J. L. Nash, delegate.

Second Church of Abington: Rev. Henry L. Edwards, pastor; O. G. Healey, delegate.

Third Church of Abington: Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor; Deacon Z. L. Whitney, delegate.

Union Church of East Bridgewater: Rev. Philo B. Wilcox, pastor; Sidney Allen, delegate.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook: Stephen Chessman, delegate.

The council was organized by the choice of Rev. Austin Phelps, moderator; and Rev. H. D. Walker, scribe.

After the usual examination of the candidate, the following services were arranged, viz.: Invocation and reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Frederick R. Abbe, of Abington; prayer, by Rev. Henry L. Edwards, of South Abington; sermon, by Professor Phelps, of Andover Theological Seminary; installing prayer, by Rev. P. B. Wilcox; charge to the pastor, by Rev. Charles L. Mills, of the Porter Church, North Bridgewater; right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Isaiah C. Thacher, of Middleboro'; address to the people, by Rev. Horace D. Walker, of Abington. The day was exceedingly pleasant, and the exercises of a very pleasing kind. The sermon was an eloquent production, and the choir performed their part in an admirable manner.

Mr. Wood was a successful preacher and pastor of this church for fourteen years, till May 9, 1872, at which time he tendered his resignation, and asked for a council to dismiss him from his pastoral charge.

Pursuant to letters missive from the South Congregationalist Church of Campello, an ecclesiastical council was convened in the vestry of said church on Wednesday, at two o'clock P.M., June 5, 1872, which was organized by the choice of Rev. H. D. Walker, moderator; and Rev. J. C. Larrabee, scribe. The following persons comprised the council:

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton: Deacon Simeon Packard, delegate.

Trinity Church of Bridgewater: Rev. H. D. Walker, pastor; Lewis Hopkins, delegate.

First Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; A. Wales, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. H. A. Stevens, pastor.

The council having heard the case as presented to them by pastor and people,—

"Voted, That with great reluctance we advise the dissolution of the relation existing between Rev. Mr. Wood and the church and parish."

"Voted, That the following should be adopted :

"The council, having listened to the case as presented to them, are constrained to advise the dissolution of the pastorate of Rev. Charles W. Wood over the church and society in Campello. They arrive at this conclusion most reluctantly, for thus is severed a connection that has had upon it the smile of the Great Spirit of the church for fourteen years, and one that has retained in the circle of churches a minister of Christ, whose character and ability made his presence and ministrations a most welcome benediction.

"Rarely does any man live so long in any region and among any people, giving less occasion to gainsayers, and so universally and deeply respected and beloved. We do most cordially and fully commend him to the churches of Christ as an able and faithful minister of the gospel, wise to win souls, as a man and citizen in all the relations of life, of great wisdom and ability, whose kindness of heart and rectitude of conduct have been a perpetual testimony for his master.

"J. C. LARRABEE, Scribe.

"CAMPELLO, June 5, 1872."

Rev. Charles W. Wood was the son of Wilkes Wood; married, first, Eliza Ann, daughter of Rev. Jonathan Bigelow, of Rochester, September, 1841; second, Mrs. Catherine S. Lemist, daughter of Jonathan Clark, of Gilmanton, N. H. He had four children,—Charles H. W., Edward Clark, Emily Catherine, and Caroline Melville.

Mr. Wood remained with this people fourteen years, having been dismissed at his request June 5, 1872, and removed to Scotland, Bridgewater. He was born in Middleboro', Mass., June 30, 1814; fitted for college at Plainfield Academy, Connecticut, and Pierce Academy, Middleboro', Mass.; graduated at Brown University, Providence, R. I., in 1834; graduated at Andover Theological Seminary in 1838; ordained at Ashby, Mass., October, 1839; at Campello, February, 1858; at Scotland, Bridgewater, where he now resides.

MINISTRY OF REV. LEVERETT S. WOODWORTH.—On the 19th day of January, 1874, it was "voted, That this church extend to Mr. Leverett S. Woodworth a call to become our pastor," which was accepted, and S. F. Packard, B. H. Gray, and Preston B. Keith were chosen a committee to make arrangements for the installation. The following persons were members of the council:

Beneficent Church of Providence, R. I.: Rev. James G. Vose, D.D., pastor; Deacon E. R. Holden, delegate.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Rev. H. D. Walker, pastor; Rev. Isaac Dunham, delegate.

First Church of Brockton: Deacon John W. Kingman.

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton: Rev. R. G. S. McNeille, pastor; Isaac Kingman, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Stoughton: Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor.

Congregational Church of Lakeville: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; Deacon Myrick Hastings, delegate.

Congregational Church of Easton: Rev. A. S. Hudson, pastor; Albert Drake, delegate.

Congregational Church of Brighton: Rev. H. A. Stevens, pastor.

First Congregational Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; A. Walcs, delegate.

The council met agreeably to notice at 1.30 o'clock P.M., Oct. 29, 1874, and organized by the choice of Rev. Thomas Wilson, moderator, and Rev. J. C. Larrabee, scribe.

The following was the order of exercises:

- 1, voluntary; 2, reading the minutes of council;
- 3, invocation, by Rev. A. S. Hudson; 4, reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. H. D. Walker; 5, anthem;
- 6, sermon, by J. G. Vose, D.D.; 7, ordaining prayer, by Rev. H. A. Stevens; 8, hymn; 9, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. R. G. S. McNeille; 10, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Charles W. Wood; 11, anthem;
- 12, address to the people, by Rev. Thomas Wilson; 13, prayer, by Rev. J. C. Larrabee; 14, hymn; 15, benediction, by the pastor.

Mr. Woodworth continued to preach to this church until Nov. 11, 1879, at which time he resigned, and a council was called to advise in the matter of his dismissal. Deacon George Sawyer, N. H. Washburn, and George E. Keith were chosen a committee of arrangements.

Pursuant to letters missive, the following churches were represented on the council:

First Congregational Church of Abington: Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor; Alvin Vaughn, delegate.

Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton: Rev. Z. T. Sullivan, pastor; Deacon Simeon Packard, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. H. L. Kelsey, pastor; O. F. Leach, delegate.

The result of the council is as follows:

"Voted unanimously, That the action of the church and Parish be accepted and sanctioned, and that we declare the pastoral relations between the Rev. L. S. Woodworth and this church and Parish terminated.

"In reaching this conclusion we deeply regret the circumstances that have led Brother Woodworth to be willing to leave this field where for five years he has labored as a faithful, zealous and efficient minister of the Lord Jesus Christ. We express our hearty regrets at his departure from our midst, and commend him most earnestly to the confidence and fellowship of the brethren among whom his lot is cast. Wishing him great prosperity in his new field, and praying that the great Head of the Church to ever keep him and his family under his loving care. We extend our warmest sympathies to the church thus bereft of an earnest and faithful pastor. Wishing likewise the gracious guidance of the Chief Shepherd as they shall seek another to fill his place.

"REV. GEORGE E. FREEMAN,
"Moderator.

"REV. H. L. KELSEY, Scribe."

MINISTRY OF REV. JOHN T. BLADES.—The next pastor settled was Rev. John T. Blades, of Saco, Me., who was invited by vote of the church on July 19, 1880. This call was accepted Aug. 18, 1880. Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., N. H. Washburn, and Deacon S. Franklin Packard were chosen a committee of the church to make arrangements for the installation. On the 14th of September, 1880, a council was called at two o'clock P.M., composed of the following members:

South Church of Salem: Rev. E. S. Atwood, pastor.

Central Church of Lynn: Rev. A. H. Curwin, pastor; Henry Howard, delegate.

Second Church of Dorechester: Rev. E. N. Packard, pastor; B. C. Hardwick, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. H. L. Kelsey, pastor.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Levi Walker, delegate.

First Church of Braintree: Rev. T. A. Emerson, pastor; Arza B. Keith, delegate.

Congregational Church of South Braintree: Rev. Edwin Smith, acting pastor.

Congregational Church of Scotland: Rev. Charles W. Wood, acting pastor.

Congregational Church of Rockland: Rev. L. C. Ferris, pastor; Charles W. Howland, delegate.

Congregational Church of South Abington: Rev. F. P. Tompkins, acting pastor.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook: Elisha Holbrook, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Walter Severance, delegate.

Congregational Church of East Providence, R. I.: Rev. Leverett S. Woodworth, pastor; George Curtis, delegate.

After a hearing before the council, and an examination of the doings by church and society and of the candidate, everything having been found satisfactory, it was voted "that the council proceed to the services of installation in the evening of that day," which were in the following order:

1, voluntary on organ; 2, reading of the minutes of the council; 3, anthem,—“How Beautiful Upon the Mountains,” etc.; 4, invocation and reading of the Scriptures; 5, sermon, by Rev. A. H. Curwin; 6, 7, installing prayer, by Rev. Charles W. Wood; 8, response; 9, charge to the pastor, by Rev. E. N. Packard; 10, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. H. L. Kelsey; 11, hymn; 12, address, by Rev. E. S. Atwood; 13, prayer; 14, anthem; 15, benediction.

Rev. T. A. Emerson, moderator; Leverett S. Woodworth, scribe.

Deacons of the South Congregational Church (Campello).—Jacob Fuller, April 26, 1837; Sylvanus French, April 26, 1837; Cary Howard, April 22, 1845; Galen Pratt, April 22, 1845; S. Franklin Packard, Dec. 4, 1865; George Sawyer, Dec. 4, 1865.

CHAPTER VIII.

PORTER EVANGELICAL CHURCH AND SOCIETY.

Original Organization—Ministry of Rev. John F. Norton—Ministry of Rev. Charles L. Mills—Ministry of Rev. Samuel H. Lee—Ministry of Rev. John V. Hilton—Ministry of Rev. Robert G. S. McNeille—Ministry of Rev. Z. T. Sullivan—Ministry of Rev. F. A. Warfield—Dedication of the First Meeting-House—Rededication of the Enlarged Meeting-House—Organization of the Society, 1884.

Porter Evangelical Church.—This church was formed of members who withdrew from the First Congregational Church in North Bridgewater for the purpose of forming another church, it being deemed advisable that something should be done to awaken a new interest in the cause of truth, and to induce union of feeling and action in the support of the ordinances of the gospel, according to orthodox Congregational usages and principles. The first meeting of a series held, which resulted in the organization of the Porter Evangelical Church, was at the house of Hezekiah Packard, Tuesday, Jan. 8, 1850.

Other meetings soon followed, and on Thursday evening, Feb. 7, 1850, at the same place, Davis Kingman was chosen moderator, when it was "Voted, unanimously, 'that we will take measures to form another orthodox Congregational Church in this place, as soon as it may be deemed expedient.'"

A committee of five were chosen, viz.: Deacon Simeon Packard, Simeon Leach, Abel W. Kingman, M.D., Robert Holbrook, and Isaac Kingman, to see how many would unite in the movement. This committee reported Feb. 12, 1850, the names of seventy persons who were in favor of immediate action, and who were prepared to unite in the formation of another church. At this meeting it was agreed to lay the subject before the church at their next meeting, and take means to call a council immediately for the purpose of formation, if they deemed it expedient.

This was done at a meeting of the church held the day following (February 13th), and a committee was appointed by the church to call a council for that purpose. At a meeting of the church, held February 19th, it was voted that they adopt the same articles of faith and covenant as those used by the First Church. Also voted, that the name of the new church shall be the Porter Evangelical Church. A council was accordingly called, which met on the 6th day of March, 1850, the following churches composing the council:

Congregational Church of Easton: Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., pastor; John R. Drake, delegate.

Trinitarian Congregational Church of Bridgewater: Rev. David Brigham, pastor; E. Hathaway, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. J. W. Ward, pastor; Zibeon Packard, delegate.

Trinitarian Congregational Church of Taunton: Rev. Erastus Maltby, pastor; H. G. O. White, delegate.

Village Church of Dorchester: Rev. David Dyer, pastor; Shadrach Jenkins, delegate.

Central Congregational Church of Boston: Rev. George Richards, pastor; I. C. Proctor, delegate.

Congregational Church of South Weymouth: J. P. Terry, pastor; Deacon I. Loud, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of Dorchester: Rev. J. H. Means, pastor; Deacon C. Howe, delegate.

Evangelical Congregational Church of Hingham: Rev. E. Porter Dyer, pastor; Deacon Asa H. Holden, delegate.

Congregational Church of Middleboro': Rev. I. W. Putnam, pastor; S. Harlow, delegate.

First Congregational Church of North Weymouth: D. Pratt (3d), delegate.

The council was organized by the choice of Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., moderator; Rev. Erastus Maltby, scribe.

After hearing statements and facts regarding the reasons for a new organization, and a thorough examination into all matters pertaining thereto, the council "voted, unanimously, that under existing circumstances in this church it is expedient, agreeably to the request of the members calling this council, that another 'Orthodox Congregational Church' be organized in this place to be called the 'Porter Evangelical Church.' It being understood that they are to adopt the Articles of Faith and Covenant now adopted by the church they leave." The public services of organization were assigned for seven o'clock in the evening, which were as follows: 1, introductory prayer and reading of the Articles of Faith and Covenant, by Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., of Easton; 2, consecrating prayer, by Rev. David Brigham, of Bridgewater; 3, fellowship of the churches, by Rev. E. Porter Dyer, of Hingham; 4, address to the church, by Rev. David Dyer, of Dorchester; 5, concluding prayer, by Rev. Erastus Maltby, of Taunton. The church met Friday, March 8th, and "voted to establish public worship forthwith," and various committees were chosen to make such arrangements as seemed necessary for that purpose.

The first meeting for public worship was held in the hall of Tyler Cobb, on Sunday, March 10, 1820. Rev. Joseph Merrill, of Dracut, Mass., preached on that day and the two succeeding Sabbaths.

MINISTRY OF REV. JOHN F. NORTON.—The next minister was Rev. John F. Norton, who came to the town April 6, 1850, and preached five Sabbaths, when the church and society united in giving him a call to become their pastor, May 7th, which he accepted May 10, 1850; and immediate measures were taken in calling a council to install him as their pastor. The following churches were represented in the council:

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. Daniel Huntington, pastor; Charles Keith, delegate.

First Church of Easton: Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., pastor; Deacon H. T. Mitchell, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Randolph: Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, D.D., pastor; Deacon Wales Thayer, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of Bridgewater: Rev. David Brigham, pastor; Levi Walker, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of Taunton: Rev. Erastus Maltby, pastor; James M. Williams, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Dedham: Rev. Calvin Durfee, pastor; C. Talbot, delegate.

First Congregational Church of North Bridgewater: Rev. Paul Couch, pastor; Henry Howard, delegate.

Village Church of Dorchester: Rev. David Dyer, pastor; Deacon James Tolman, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. James W. Ward, pastor; John Hunt, delegate.

Congregational Church of South Weymouth: Rev. J. P. Terry, pastor; A. W. Pain, delegate.

Evangelical Church of Hingham: Rev. E. P. Dyer, pastor; A. Kilby, delegate.

Eliot Church of Roxbury: Rev. A. C. Thompson, pastor.

Second Congregational Church of Dorchester: Rev. J. H. Means, pastor; Deacon Edward Sharp, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Falmouth: John Jenkins, delegate.

Winthrop Church of East Randolph: Elisha Belcher, delegate.

The council was organized by the choice of Rev. Daniel Huntington as moderator, and Rev. James W. Ward, scribe, who convened in the vestry of the Methodist Church, by invitation of that church.

His installation took place in the meeting-house of the First Church, June 5, 1850, at 1½ o'clock P.M., with the following order of services on that occasion:

1, voluntary, by the choir; 2, reading minutes of the ecclesiastical council; 3, invocation and reading of the Scriptures; 4, anthem; 5, introductory prayer; 6, hymn,—words and music composed for a similar occasion by Rev. D. Huntington,—“Herald of our Saviour God;” 7, sermon, by Rev. A. C. Thompson, of Roxbury, Mass.; 8, chant,—“I will give you pastors according to mine own heart;” 9, installing prayer, by Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., of Easton; 10, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Calvin Hitchcock, D.D., of Randolph; 11, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. J. P. Terry, of South Weymouth; 12, hymn,—“How beautiful upon the mountains;” 13, address to the people, by Rev. Daniel Huntington, of the South Congregational Church, Campello; 14, concluding prayer, by Rev. David Dyer; 15, hymn, by the congregation, tune, “Hamburg:”

“’Tis done,—the important act is done;
Heaven, earth, its solemn purport know;
Its fruits, when time its race has run,
Shall through eternal ages flow.

“The covenants of this sacred hour,
Great Shepherd of thy people, seal;
Spirit of grace diffuse thy power,
Our vows accept, thy might reveal.

“Behold our guide, and deign to crown
His toils, O Lamb of God, with love;
His lips inspire; each effort own;
Breathe, dwell within him, heavenly Dove.

“Behold his charge: what wealth shall dare
With its most priceless worth to vie?
Suns, systems, worlds, how mean they are,
Compared with souls that cannot die!

“The sun may set in endless gloom,
The planets from their stations flee,
Creation fill oblivion’s tomb;
But souls can never cease to be.

“Oh, when before the judgment-seat
The wicked quake in dread despair,
May we, all reverent at thy feet,
Pastor and flock, find mercy there.”

16, benediction.

Mr. Norton continued with this people until Dec. 4, 1851, when he was dismissed at his request.

The council represented in the dismissal of Rev. John F. Norton was as follows:

Evangelical Church of Easton: Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., pastor.

Second Congregational Church of Randolph: Rev. Ezekiel Russell, pastor; E. Wales, delegate.

South Congregational Church at Campello: Ziba Keith, delegate.

Trinitarian Congregational Church of Bridgewater: Rev. David Brigham, pastor; Deacon Abiel Bassett, delegate.

Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., moderator; Rev. David Brigham, scribe.

Rev. John F. Norton was born in Goshen, Litchfield Co., Conn., Sept. 8, 1809; entered Yale College in 1829; but his health failing, he left college during his junior year. He received the degree of A.M. from that institution in 1848; studied theology at the Theological Seminary at East Windsor, Conn., where he graduated in 1837; traveled nearly a year in Northern and Western Europe; was principal of academies in Goshen, Brooklyn, and Norfolk, Conn., for eight years; was ordained pastor of church in Milton Parish, Litchfield, Conn., Oct. 23, 1844; installed pastor of Porter Evangelical Church in North Bridgewater, Mass., June 5, 1850; dismissed at his request, Dec. 4, 1851; installed pastor of the Evangelical Church in Athol, Mass., March 17, 1852; married, first, Harriet Frances Jenkins, of Falmouth, Mass., Aug. 19, 1839, who died Feb. 3, 1849; second marriage to Sophia W. Elliot, of Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 31, 1850; she died June 6, 1852. He then married Ann Maria Mann, of Stoughton, Mass., Sept. 26, 1853; has one child living, Lewis Mills Norton, born Dec. 26, 1855.

MINISTRY OF REV. CHARLES L. MILLS.—Various ministers supplied the pulpit, among whom were Rev. Hubbard Beebe, of South Wilbraham, Mass., and Rev. Edwin P. Wright, of Ackworth, N. H., after which the church and society united in giving Rev. Charles L. Mills a call, in July, 1852, to settle with them as their pastor.

A council, composed of the following churches, convened at the meeting-house of the Porter Evangelical Church, on the 11th day of August, 1852, at nine o'clock A.M., for the purpose of installing Rev. Mr. Mills, viz.:

First Church of Braintree: Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., pastor; Charles French, delegate.

Church of Easton: Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., pastor; John B. Drake, delegate.

Winnisimmet Church of Chelsea: Rev. I. P. Langworthy, pastor; Charles B. Wilder, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. Paul Couch, pastor; Deacon Ozen Gurney, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. James W. Ward, pastor; Zibeon Packard, delegate.

Congregational Church of Athol: Rev. John F. Norton, pastor.

First Church of Randolph: Rev. C. M. Cordley, pastor.

Winthrop Congregational Church of Holbrook: Elisha N. Holbrook, delegate.

Congregational Church of Stoughton: Rev. Albert Perry, pastor; E. Dickerman, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Yarmouth: Rev. Abel K. Packard, pastor; F. Dunbar, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of Weymouth: Rev. J. P. Terry, pastor; A. Vining, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Otis Grover, delegate.

Rev. Daniel Butler, of Westboro', Mass.

The council was organized by choice of Rev. Luther Sheldon, moderator; Rev. J. P. Terry, scribe.

After a satisfactory hearing as to the qualifications and belief of the pastor-elect, the council voted unanimately that they would proceed to the services of installation in the following order:

1, reading of the minutes of the council, by the scribe; 2, invocation and reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Abel K. Packard, of Yarmouth, Mass. (now of Anoka, Minn.); 3, introductory prayer, by Rev. J. P. Terry, of South Weymouth; 4, sermon, by Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree; 5, installing prayer, by Rev. James W. Ward, of Abington; 6, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Luther Sheldon, D.D., of Easton; 7, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Daniel Butler, of Westboro', Mass.; 8, hymn,—

“He that goeth forth with weeping,
Bearing still the precious seed,
Never tiring, never sleeping,
All his labor shall succeed.

“Then will fall the rain of heaven,
Then the sun of mercy shine;
Precious fruits will then be given,
Through an influence all divine.

“Sow thy seed, he never weary,
Nor let fears thy mind employ;
Be the prospect ne'er so dreary,
Thou mayst reap the fruits of joy.

“Lo, the scene of verdure bright'ning,
See the rising grain appear;
Look again! the fields are whit'ning;
Sure the harvest time is near.”

9, address to the people, by Rev. I. P. Langworthy, of Chelsea; 10, concluding prayer, by Rev. John F. Norton, of Athol (their former pastor); 11, benediction, by the pastor.

Rev. Mr. Mills preached to this people until Feb. 18, 1862, when he was dismissed.

Rev. Charles L. Mills was born in Morristown, N. J., Aug. 11, 1812; graduated at Yale College in 1835; studied theology at the Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J. Mr. Mills preached in various places in the West and about New England for twelve years or more, and in 1852 was called to settle as pastor of the Porter Evangelical Church of North Bridgewater, where he remained till February, 1862. After a brief respite from pastoral labor, he received a call to settle at Wrentham, Mass., where he was ordained as pastor of the First Congregational Church, Feb. 10, 1863. He married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of Deacon William Lyman, of Middletown, Conn.; second, Rebecca, daughter of Deacon Peter Smith, of Andover, Mass.

MINISTRY OF REV. SAMUEL H. LEE.—The church was without a pastor but a short time, as we find by record, the church “voted, June 16, 1862, unanimately, to give a call to Rev. Samuel H. Lee to settle with them in the ministry.” This call was accepted.

A council, consisting of the following churches, was called to advise in reference to the ordination of Rev. Samuel H. Lee, Sept. 17, 1862:

First Church, Braintree: Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., pastor; R. H. Allen, delegate.

First Church, Stoughton: Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor; Deacon Eben Drake, delegate.

First Church, Somerville: Rev. David T. Packard, pastor.

First Church, Randolph: Ebenezer Alden, delegate.

Second Church, Randolph: Rev. S. G. Dodd, pastor; Simeon L. Whitcomb, delegate.

Winthrop Church, Holbrook: Rev. E. Russell, D.D., pastor; Levi Whitcomb, delegate.

First Church, Abington: Rev. F. R. Abbe, pastor; Henry A. Noyes, delegate.

Second Church, Abington: Rev. Henry L. Edwards, pastor; William R. Vining, delegate.

Second Church, Weymouth: Rev. J. P. Terry, pastor; William Dyer, delegate.

Union Church, South Weymouth: Rev. P. N. Hayes, pastor; C. S. Fogg, delegate.

Union Church, Weymouth and Braintree: Rev. Lysander Dickerson, pastor; J. W. Loud, delegate.

First Church, North Bridgewater: John W. Kingman, delegate.

Third Church, Abington: Rev. H. D. Walker, pastor; H. H. Burrill, delegate.

Union Church, East Bridgewater: Rev. N. H. Broughton, pastor.

Evangelical Church, Hingham: Rev. E. Porter Dyer, pastor; Caleb S. Hunt, delegate.

Congregational Church, Houston: Rev. Benjamin Southworth, pastor.

South Congregational Church, Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; George Sawyer, delegate.

The council organized by the choice of Richard S. Storrs, moderator; Charles W. Wood, scribe.

After an examination of the candidate and his credentials, and finding them satisfactory, the order of exercises at the installation was as follows: 1, invocation and reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. E. Porter Dyer, of Hingham; 2, introductory prayer, by Rev. E. Douglas; 3, sermon, by Rev. Edward N. Kirk, D.D., of Boston; 4, ordaining prayer, by Rev. S. G. Dodd, of East Randolph; 5, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree; 6, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Charles W. Wood, of Campello; 7, address to the people, by Rev. David Temple Packard, of Somerville; 8, concluding prayer, by Rev. F. R. Abbe, of Abington; 9, benediction, by the pastor.

On the 8th of February, 1866, Mr. Lee sent in his resignation to the church, who united with him in calling a council for the purpose of dismissal, which was held on the 20th of the same month. The churches present were:

First Congregational Church of Broekton: Rev. Edward L. Clark, pastor; Deacon John W. Kingman, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; Deacon S. Franklin Packard, delegate.

Trinitarian Congregational Church of Bridgewater: Rev. E. Douglas, pastor; Deacon Abiel Bassett, delegate.

First Church of Abington: Rev. F. R. Abbe, pastor; Deacon John A. King, delegate.

Second Church of South Weymouth: Rev. J. P. Terry, pastor; Deacon B. F. White, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. N. H. Broughton, pastor.

Union Church, South Weymouth: Rev. S. H. Hayes, pastor; I. S. Cobb, delegate.

Rev. J. P. Terry, moderator, and Rev. Edward L. Clark, scribe.

The council, after a full hearing, "voted, that in their judgment it is expedient, and they accordingly advise that this relation terminate."

Rev. Samuel H. Lee was born in Sprague, Conn., Dec. 21, 1832; fitted for college at Williston Seminary, East Hampton, Mass.; entered Yale College, 1854; graduated in 1858; graduated at the Normal School, New Britain, Conn., 1852; was a teacher in the Normal School three years; studied theology at Yale Theological Seminary two years; received an invitation to settle as pastor of the Porter Evangelical Church in North Bridgewater in 1862, where he was ordained Sept. 17, 1862.

MINISTRY OF REV. JOHN V. HILTON.—Jan. 31, 1867, a call was extended to Rev. John V. Hilton to settle as their pastor, which was declined. Various ministers were heard till March 22, 1869, at which date Rev. Charles M. Lamson was invited to settle with them in the gospel ministry, the call being unanimous. This call was accepted and Mr. Lamson was duly installed. Pursuant to letters missive from the Porter Evangelical Church, an ecclesiastical council was convened in the meeting-house of said church on Thursday, Aug. 5, 1869, at 9.30 o'clock A.M., as follows:

First Congregational Church of Broekton: Rev. H. A. Stevens, pastor; Deacon Joel T. Packard, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; Deacon S. Franklin Packard, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. J. P. Aldrich, pastor; Luther Richards, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of Bridgewater: Lewis S. Hopkins, delegate.

Second Church of Abington: Rev. W. F. Ober, A. P.; Samuel Blake, delegate.

First Church of Randolph: Ebenezer Alden, M.D., delegate.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook: Rev. Ezekiel Russell, pastor; Elisha N. Holbrook, delegate.

First Church of Stoughton: Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor; Deacon Ebenezer Draker, delegate.

Evangelical Congregational Church of Brighton: Rev. David Temple Packard, pastor.

Village Church of Dorchester: Rev. H. M. Tenney, pastor; John A. Tucker, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of Hadley: Rev. W. H. Beman, pastor; Benjamin Adams, delegate.

North Congregational Church of New Bedford: Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, pastor; Deacon John Bryant, delegate.

Highland Church of Boston: Rev. Charles L. Mills, pastor; Deacon Samuel W. Hall, delegate.

Rev. Abel Kingman Packard, of Anoka, Minn.

Rev. W. S. Tyler, D.D., of Amherst, Mass.

The council organized with Rev. Charles W.

Wood moderator, and Rev. H. M. Tenney as scribe, and the following order of exercises were arranged, viz.: 1, voluntary; 2, introductory exercises, Rev. H. M. Tenney; 3, anthem; 4, sermon, by Rev. W. S. Tyler, D.D.; 5, anthem; 6, ordaining prayer, by Rev. W. H. Beman; 7, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, D.D.; 8, hymn; 9, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. Henry A. Stevens; 10, address to the people, by Rev. Charles L. Mills; 11, anthem; 12, benediction, by the pastor.

MINISTRY OF REV. ROBERT G. S. MCNEILLE.—Several ministers were heard till April 1, 1872, at which time it was voted "that we extend a call to Rev. Robert G. S. McNeille, of New Haven, Conn., to become our pastor." This call was accepted, and a council was called April 25, 1872, at three o'clock P.M.

The roll of the council consisted of the following churches represented:

Shawmut Church of Boston: Rev. E. B. Webb, D.D., pastor; Alvah White, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Brooklyn: Rev. H. A. Stevens, pastor; Jonathan White, delegate.

First Church of Stoughton: Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor; Samuel Clapp, delegate.

Second Church of Weymouth: Rev. George F. Stanton, pastor.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. Austin Dodge, pastor.

First Church of Abington: Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor; Deacon H. A. Noyes, delegate.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor; H. D. Sanford, delegate.

North Church of New Haven, Conn.: Rev. Edward L. Clark, pastor.

East Church of New Haven, Conn.: Charles Wilson, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. Charles W. Wood, pastor; Ziba C. Keith, delegate.

After the usual examination of the candidate, and everything found satisfactory, the following order of exercises were arranged, viz.:

1, reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Heman Packard DeForest; 2, prayer, by Rev. Thomas Wilson; 3, sermon, by Rev. Edward L. Clark; 4, installing prayer, by Rev. Charles W. Wood; 5, charge to pastor, by Rev. E. B. Webb, D.D.; 6, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. H. A. Stevens; 7, address to the people, by Rev. Horace D. Walker; 8, benediction, by the pastor.

Rev. Edwin B. Webb, D.D., moderator; Rev. George E. Freeman, scribe.

Nov. 15, 1877, Mr. McNeille tendered his resignation as pastor of the church, and a mutual council was held to advise in the matter of dismissal, consisting of the following persons:

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. E. P. McElroy, pastor; Deacon Joseph S. Smith, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Stoughton: Rev. John Herbert, pastor; Deacon Ebenezer Drake, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Abington: Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor.

First Congregational Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; Deacon O. H. Leach, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. L. S. Woodworth, pastor.

The council organized by the choice of Rev. George E. Freeman moderator, and Rev. L. S. Woodworth as scribe. The resignation was read, and all parties interested were heard, and the council advised "that the pastoral relation to this church cease," as follows:

"Having heard Rev. R. G. S. McNeille's letter of resignation read, and also the action of the church and parish accepting the same, we hereby as a council adjudge the action to be orderly, and advise that Bro. McNeille's pastoral relation to this church hereby cease. And in coming to this conclusion, we with pleasure bear witness to Bro. McNeille's high abilities as a preacher, to his genial social qualities, which have secured for him a warm place in the hearts of his friends and associates in the ministry, and have given him a strong hold upon this church and community, and also to the peace and prosperity which have attended his ministry here.

"We heartily commend him to the field of his future labors, and trust that there he will prove himself a good minister of Jesus Christ and be eminently successful in the edifying of the church and in the salvation of souls.

"We tender our sympathies to the church in the dissolution of the pastoral relation, and pray that the Great Head of the church may soon fill this vacant place with a teacher and guide who will lead this people on to future peace and prosperity, and to great success in advancing the kingdom of Christ in this place."

The council then dissolved.

MINISTRY OF REV. Z. T. SULLIVAN.—On the 1st day of April, 1878, the following vote was passed by the church: "Voted, unanimously, that we extend a call to Rev. Z. T. Sullivan, of New Bedford, Mass., to become pastor of this church."

The call was accepted April 15th, and a council met on the 2d day of May, 1878, for the purpose of installing Mr. Sullivan. The churches represented were as follows:

First Church of Abington: Rev. George E. Freeman, pastor; Deacon J. L. Nash, delegate.

Maverick Church of Boston: Rev. John V. Hilton, pastor; F. E. Dimmock, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Easton: Rev. L. H. Sheldon, pastor; Luke S. Greenleaf, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. L. S. Woodworth, pastor; Josiah W. Kingman, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of New Bedford: Rev. M. C. Julien, pastor.

North Church of New Bedford: Rev. A. H. Heath, pastor; Deacon Zachariah Sturtevant, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. H. L. Kelsey, pastor; Jonathan White, delegate.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook: Deacon Newton White, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of South Abington: Rev. Frank I. Tompkins, pastor; Martin S. Stetson, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. D. W. Richardson, pastor; James S. Allen, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Stoughton: Rev. John Herbert, pastor; Deacon Nathaniel Gay, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; George H. Wilkins, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of South Weymouth: Rev. George F. Stanton, pastor; William Dyer, delegate.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Rev. Horace D. Walker, pastor; Deacon H. D. Sanford, delegate.

Salem Square Church of Worcester: Rev. Charles M. Lamson, pastor; Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, D.D.

The council was organized by the choice of Rev. George H. Freeman, moderator; Rev. Horace D. Walker, scribe. After the usual examination of the candidate, and his reasons for changing his pastoral relations, the council advised his settlement, and assigned the various parts of the installation services, as follows:

- 1, invocation and Scripture lesson, by Rev. John Herbert;
- 2, sermon, by Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, D.D.;
- 3, installing prayer, by Rev. M. C. Julien;
- 4, charge to the pastor, by Rev. A. H. Heath;
- 5, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. H. L. Kelsey;
- 6, address to the people, by Rev. Charles M. Lamson;
- 7, concluding prayer, by Rev. L. S. Woodworth.

May 28, 1881, Rev. Mr. Sullivan sent his resignation to the church, with a request that the pastoral relation between him and the church should terminate July 1, 1881. Accordingly a council was called to take action in the matter of his dismissal, represented by the following churches, viz.:

First Congregational Church of Brockton: J. R. Perkins, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Deacon George Sawyer, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Randolph: Deacon Joseph Graham, delegate.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Rev. J. C. Bodwell, pastor; Deacon Abiel Bassett, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Stoughton: Rev. D. O. Clark, pastor; Deacon E. M. Morton, delegate.

The above persons convened in the Porter Church on the 28th day of June, 1881, agreeably to the request of pastor and church, and organized by the choice of Rev. J. C. Bodwell moderator, and Rev. D. O. Clark as scribe.

The council, after listening to the above representations, voted unanimously to confirm the doings of the church and society, and agreed to the following resolution:

"WHEREAS, in the providence of God it has become necessary, on account of loss of health, for Rev. Z. T. Sullivan, pastor of the Porter Evangelical Church and society of Brockton, to discontinue his ministerial labors, and to tender his resignation of the pastorate; and whereas, the Porter Church and society have accepted his resignation;

"Resolved, That this council hereby approves of the action taken by pastor and church, and advises the dissolution of the existing pastoral relation. We desire to say further that we accede to the termination of this relation with deep regret. We deeply sympathize with Bro. Sullivan in the affliction that has befallen him, and praying that he may be restored to health by a change of residence, commend him to the churches as a faithful and able minister of our Lord Jesus Christ. We extend also to the Porter Church and people our sympathy in the loss of the pastor for whom they have testified so much love, and trust that in His own good time the Lord may send them another to be their spiritual guide.

"D. O. CLARK, Scribe." "J. C. BODWELL, Moderator."

MINISTRY OF REV. F. A. WARFIELD.—On the 31st day of January, 1882, the church "voted, that we extend a call to Rev. F. A. Warfield, of Boston, to become Pastor of this church." This call was accepted by letter from Mr. Warfield, March 7, 1882. A council was held in the Porter Evangelical Church of Brockton on Tuesday, March 28th, at three o'clock P.M., for the purpose of installing the pastor-elect. The following churches were represented, viz.:

First Congregational Church of Brockton: Rev. H. L. Kelsey, pastor; Dr. S. J. Gruver, delegate.

South Congregational Church of Campello: Rev. John T. Blades, pastor.

Central Square Church of Bridgewater: Deacon Levi Walker, delegate.

Union Church of East and West Bridgewater: Rev. P. M. Griffin, pastor; John C. Gates, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Randolph: Rev. J. C. Larrabee, pastor; A. W. Whitcomb, delegate.

Winthrop Church of Holbrook : Rev. H. A. Loring, pastor ; E. Everett Holbrook, delegate.

First Congregational Church, Stoughton : Rev. D. O. Clark, pastor ; H. W. Darling, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Abington : Rev. R. W. Haskins, pastor ; Deacon John A. King, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of South Abington : Rev. B. M. Frink, pastor ; Deacon Luke Noyes, delegate.

Congregational Church of Rockland : Rev. L. Z. Ferris, pastor ; J. S. Smith, delegate.

First Congregational Church of Easton : Rev. W. H. Dowden, pastor ; A. C. Heath, delegate.

Phillip's Congregational Church of Boston : Rev. R. R. Meredith, pastor ; William Gallagher, Jr., delegate.

Union Church of Boston : Deacon W. W. Whitcomb, delegate.

Trinitarian Church of Taunton : Rev. Heman Packard DeForest, pastor ; Elijah E. Richards, delegate.

Congregational Church of Assonet : Rev. George F. Walker, pastor ; Deacon Thomas G. Nichols, delegate.

Prospect Hill Church of Somerville : Rev. A. E. Winship, pastor ; Alvin L. Lovejoy, delegate.

Second Congregational Church of Bridgeport, Conn. : Rev. R. G. S. McNeille, pastor ; Frederick Truber, delegate.

Rev. H. L. Kelsey was chosen moderator of the council, and William Gallagher, Jr., as scribe.

The examination of the pastor-elect having been declared satisfactory, the council assigned the following as the order of services at the installation held at seven o'clock P.M., March 28th, viz. : 1, reading of the minutes of the council, by the scribe ; 2, invocation and Scripture lesson, by Rev. H. L. Kelsey ; 3, sermon, by Rev. R. R. Meredith ; 4, installing prayer, by Rev. J. C. Larrabee ; 5, charge to the pastor, by Rev. Heman Packard DeForest ; 6, right hand of fellowship, by Rev. John T. Blades ; 7, address to the people, by Rev. R. G. S. McNeille ; 8, concluding prayer, by Rev. H. A. Loring.

Number of members at the time of organization of the church was ninety-five.

The deacons of the Porter Evangelical Church from its organization have been as follows : Simeon Packard, March 19, 1850 ; Elbridge H. Packard, March 19, 1850 ; Henry W. Robinson, April 29, 1864 ; Augustus T. Jones, April 29, 1864 (resigned Jan. 18, 1866) ; George H. Cushman, March 1, 1866 (resigned Jan. 29, 1869) ; Samuel W. S. Howard, Jan. 19, 1865 ; George C. Cary, Jan. 21, 1869 ; Hiram Wade, Jan. 29, 1874 ; Edmund W. Holmes, Jan. 29, 1874 ; Joseph L. Smith, Feb. 15, 1883.

The following is a list of the clerks of Porter Evangelical Church from its organization : David Howard, March 19, 1850 ; Samuel W. S. Howard, Jan. 16, 1862 ; George C. Cary, Jan. 15, 1874, who is the present incumbent.

Porter Evangelical Society.—This ecclesiastical society was legally organized March 20, 1850, and a committee, consisting of Simeon Leach, David Howard, and Edwin H. Kingman were chosen to select a lot of land, and procure plans for a house, who were subsequently authorized to purchase a lot and proceed with the building. The lot on which the edifice now stands was purchased of the late Silas Packard, Esq., for the sum of one thousand dollars, and contains about eighty-four square rods, having a front on Main Street of seven rods, with a depth of twelve rods. The house is situated between the residence of the late Silas Packard, Esq., and that of Franklin Ames, Esq., and but a short distance north of the First Church. The plans of this building were drawn by Messrs. Melvin and Young, of Boston, and the building is sixty feet wide, eighty-eight feet in length, with twenty feet posts, with a spire one hundred and seventy-five feet in height. The house has ninety pews on the main floor, besides the front seat, which is held free ; has twenty-four pews in the side-galleries, with seats for sixty persons in the choir-gallery, in front of the organ. There is a large and commodious basement, finished into three rooms, the largest being used as a chapel, which is forty-three feet by fifty-eight, and eleven feet high. Mr. Joseph Sanger, of Watertown, was the contractor, who furnished all the material (excepting foundation and brick work for the basement), for the sum of seven thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven dollars. The house was raised about the 1st of August, 1850, and so far completed that the chapel was first used for public worship Sunday, Oct. 13, 1850.

DEDICATION OF THE FIRST MEETING-HOUSE.—The house was completed and dedicated Jan. 9, 1851, with the following order of exercises : 1, voluntary ; 2, invocation ; 3, chant,—“ I was glad,” etc. ; 4, introductory prayer ; 5, hymn, by a member of the Porter Church,—

“ From thy high throne, Eternal King,
Oh listen, while thy children sing ;
And tune our hearts to lofty praise,
As we the joyful anthem raise.

“ But will the great Jehovah hear
Our humble song, our fervent prayer ?

Will he within his temple meet
His children, bowing at his feet?

"Yes, in this house, 'Thus saith the Lord,'
I'll magnify my holy word;
And sinners, humbled in the dust,
Shall learn my holy name to trust.

"Within this house shall mortal tongues
Begin to chant immortal songs;
Whilst listening angels, hov'ring round,
Join to prolong the sacred sound.

"Then let us lift our voices high,
Let shouts of praise ascend the sky;
Loud let the solemn organ peal,
Whilst we express the joys we feel.

"Great God of sov'reign power and grace,
Oh, with thy presence fill this place;
This temple make (in mercy given)
'The house of God, the gate of Heaven.'"

6, sermon, by the pastor, Rev. John F. Norton, from the text, Psalm xi. 3, "If the foundation be destroyed what can the righteous do?" 7, anthem; 8, dedicatory prayer, by Rev. Daniel Huntington, of Campello; 9, dedication chaot; 10, concluding prayer; 11, hymn, by Rev. Daniel Huntington, of the South Congregational Church, Campello, tune, "Old Hundred," by the congregation,—

"To Thee, Most Holy and Most High,
Whom all the hosts of Heaven adore,
Again we raise our earnest cry,
Thy gracious presence to implore.

"Within these walls, oh, deign to dwell
And here thy suppliant people meet,
Oft as they come their wants to tell,
Or lay their offerings at thy feet,

"Here let Immanuel's glory shine,
And songs of grateful praise ascend;
While souls subdued by love divine,
Beneath his golden sceptre bend.

"Nor here alone this grace be given;
Let all around thy glory see;
Each house become a 'gate of Heaven,'
Each heart a living temple be."

Doxology.

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow;
Praise him, all creatures here below;
Praise him above, ye heavenly host;
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

12, benediction.

The total cost of house, land, furniture, and organ, including interest on borrowed money, up to the time of selling the pews (Jan. 10, 1851), was fourteen thousand nine hundred and thirty-five dollars. The amount obtained from the sale of pews was twelve thousand five hundred dollars, beside other pews taken soon after the adjournment of the sale, making nearly enough to cover the entire cost to the society. Various donations were made to the society toward furnishing the house, amounting to four hundred and thirty-five dollars, from different individuals. The church and society paid two hundred dollars for a new collection of hymn-books for church and chapel use, making about sixteen thousand two hundred dollars paid and pledged for future payment during the first year of its existence.

In 1866, extensive repairs and improvements were made, particularly in the audience-room; the ceiling and walls were neatly frescoed, the singing gallery was lowered, new windows were put in, and the original pulpit replaced by platform furnishings of a more modern pattern. More than all, the pews on the main floor were rearranged, and twenty-four new ones were added, increasing the number of sittings to about seven hundred. The expense attending these improvements was not far from seven thousand dollars.

REDEDICATION.—The congregation worshipping with the Porter Evangelical Church had so increased during the past seventeen years since the last repairs were made, in 1866, that there was a long-felt need of enlarged accommodations. The sum of ten thousand dollars was subscribed for providing the same, and plans were elaborated and completed by the well-known church architect, T. M. Silloway, of Boston.

A new section was added in rear of the original edifice, forty by sixty-eight feet in size, the transept projecting eight feet outward from the main building on either side, chiefly for architectural effect. The new section, which in itself contains more than half as many square feet as the original structure, not only affords space for the introduction of over sixty additional pews, but an opportunity of carrying out an improvement for a long time desired by many, viz., the transfer of the choir gallery to a position in the rear of the pulpit. Other improvements embraced in the plan were the topping out of the spire, which, since the day it had been so rudely assailed by the winds, had remained an ill-proportioned and unsightly stump, suggestive of amputated strength as well as of departed beauty. Enlarged and convenient vestry accommodations were also features provided for in the plans, and these, as they have been realized, are proving to be among the most valuable and most thoroughly appreciated of the acquisitions gained by the enlargement. To note in brief the results of the work which has been brought to completion, it may be said that sittings in the audience-room of the church will comfortably accommodate eleven hundred people; the choir and organ have been moved to a better location, steam-heating throughout the building has been provided, the main audience-room has been furnished throughout with new pews, pulpit furnishings, cushions, and carpets, and new and improved lighting fixtures have been introduced, while below there is a main vestry or lecture-room fifty-two by fifty-six feet in size, occupied also by the upper department of the Sunday-school, newly furnished, and with sittings for six hundred. Opening out of this room, and connected with it by large sliding sashes, are two smaller rooms, one of which has been furnished as a ladies' parlor and the other fitted for the use of the primary department of the Sunday-school, for social purposes, and for the weekly prayer-meetings of the church. Contiguous to the above are other apartments used as kitchen, committee-room, etc. All are convenient and pleasant, and well adapted for use as work-rooms of the church.

The entire expense incurred to bring the work to completion, including the outlay for the new carpet, paid for entirely by the ladies, in addition to the one thousand dollars subscribed by them to the general fund, is, as near as can be ascertained, about seventeen thousand dollars. This is some six thousand dollars in excess of the amount pledged at the outset.

The house was rededicated on Wednesday evening, Dec. 26, 1883, marking a notable event in the history of the society. The exercises were witnessed by over one thousand persons.

The musical selections were prepared with special care, and were rendered in a way to indicate in an even more than usual degree the musical intelligence and skill of the choir, and the results of the careful training of Organist and Director Burrell. Perhaps these points were best shown on this occasion in the singing of Randegger's anthem, "Praise God," which was not only artistically sung, but was to the congregation the most impressive of the musical numbers in the order of services.

After the opening exercises, including the organ voluntary, the anthem "Come all ye Faithful," the reading of Scripture by Rev. John T. Blades, of the South Congregational Church, Campello, prayer by Rev. George E. Martin, of the First Church, and a fine rendering of Buck's paraphrase of the 46th Psalm by the quartette, a statement of the building committee was read by A. T. Jones, Esq., giving a brief history of the church from its organization to the present time. Rev. Dr. Reuben Thomas, of Brookline, Mass., after a few congratulatory remarks to the people, preached the dedicatory sermon from the text, Matthew xxiv. 35. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away," which was an eloquent and forcible discourse.

The exercises of the evening closed with an anthem by the choir, the dedicatory prayer by Rev. J. C. Labaree, of Randolph, a hymn by the congregation, and the benediction by the pastor. The services were in all respects impressive and pleasing, and the very many friends of the Porter Society from other churches who came to participate in them joined in rejoicing and congratulations at an event which makes progress and growth in the work in which all are interested in common.

Organization of the church for 1884: Rev. F. A. Warfield, pastor; Simeon Packard, Elbridge H. Packard, George C. Cary, Edmund W. Holmes, Joseph S. Smith, and Hiram Wade, deacons; George C. Cary, clerk; Edmund W. Holmes, superintendent of Sunday-school.

Organization of the parish for 1884: Augustus T. Jones, Lucius F. Alden, George A. Perkins, parish committee; Charles A. Noyes, clerk; George H. Jameson, treasurer; Joseph D. Parish, sexton.

There are 367 members of the church, 396 families, and 586 members of the Sunday-school connected with this church.

CHAPTER IX.

Capture of Louisburg—Treaty at Aix-la-Chapelle—War renewed in 1754—Attack on Nova Scotia by the Colonies—Crown Point—Niagara—List of Men in the Crown Point Expedition—Capt. Simeon Cary's Company—Capt. Josiah Dunbar's Company—Expedition against Canada—Capt. Lemuel Dunbar's Company—At Crown Point—Controversy between England and America—Acts of Trade—Sugar Act—Stamp Act—Tea Destroyed in Boston Harbor—Boston Port Bill—Preparations for War—Minute-Men—Company marched on Lexington Alarm—List of persons in the various Companies in the Service during the War—Shay's Rebellion—List of Soldiers called into the Service to quell the same at Taunton—War of 1812—Impressment of Seamen—Embargo—War declared by the President—Calls for Troops from Militia—Pay-Roll of Company from North Bridgewater, stationed at Plymouth.

The Old French War.—By a treaty made between the English and French at Utrecht in 1713, the French had ceded the provinces of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland to Great Britain. The French, finding need of a fortress in that region, had built Louisburg on the Island of Cape Breton, at a cost of thirty thousand livres and twenty-five years of labor.

When the war of 1744 broke out between France, Spain, and Great Britain the New England colonies soon found the French made use of this fortress as a hiding-place for the privateers that annoyed their vessels. A naval force was got ready for sea. Four thousand three hundred and sixty-six men were raised from the various colonies, properly equipped, and placed under the command of Governor Shirley, assisted by Commodore Warren, a British officer from the West Indies, who succeeded in the capture of the fortress after a siege of forty-nine days. The town and island surrendered June 17, 1745. Nothing now occurred of importance till the treaty made between England and France in October, 1748, at Aix-La-Chapelle. This war has been called, by way of distinction from a later one, the "Old French War," or otherwise known as "King George's War."

Owing to the irregularity and torn condition of the rolls, and no record of the names of those who took part in this expedition being on the old town records, we are unable to present their names.

French and Indian War.—By the treaty at Aix-La-Chapelle between the French and English, hostilities had ceased for a few years, although occasional depredations and incursions were made into the border towns, rendering it necessary to keep up some of the garrisons; and in many places people were obliged to go armed to their fields to work, for fear of Indian massacre and assault. The war was renewed in 1754, although it was not formally declared till 1756.

Early in the year 1755 the colonies proceeded to attack the French at four different points,—Nova Scotia, Crown Point, Niagara, and Ohio River.

In these expeditions Massachusetts bore a prominent part, and contributed both men and means to carry on the war. We find among the names of those that went from the North Parish of Bridgewater the following list. In a return of sick in Col. Pomeroy's regiment, at Lake George, Nov. 25, 1755, is the name of Nathan Packard.

In the muster-roll of Capt. Joseph Washburn's company, on the Crown Point expedition, from Sept. 11 to Dec. 22, 1755:

Lemuel Dunbar, sergt.	Isaac Perkins, corp.
Joseph Cole, corp.

Also in Capt. Samuel Clark's company, on the Crown Point expedition, from Sept. 15 to Dec. 16, 1775:

Zechariah Gurney.

In the muster-roll of Capt. John Clapp, in Col. Dwight's regiment, we find Lemuel Dunbar, ensign.	Benj. Southworth, corp.

Joseph Cole, sergt.	Elisha Gurney, corp.

In camp at Fort Edward, July 26, 1756, in service from Feb. 18 to Nov. 15, 1756.

In the muster-roll of Capt. Simeon Cary's company, in Col. Thomas Doty's regiment, in service from March 13 to Dec. 11, 1758:

Simeon Cary, capt.	James Packard, Jr., sergt.
Lemuel Dunbar, 1st lieut.

Privates.

Edmund Pettingill.	Adam Kingman.
Isaac Packard, Jr.	James Loring.
Isaac Fuller, Jr.	Jonathan Snow.
Archibald Thompson, Jr.	John Packard.
Abijah Hill.	Ephraim Jackson.
John McBride.	Lemuel Kingman.
Henry Kingman, Jr.

In the roll of Capt. Josiah Dunbar's company, in service from Feb. 14, 1759, to Dec. 28, 1760:

Elisha Gurney, 1st lieut.

Privates.

Ephraim Cole.	Abijah Hill.
---------------	--------------

The following is a list of men in Capt. Simeon Cary's company, in an expedition against Canada, in service from May 14, 1759, to Jan. 2, 1760:

Simeon Cary, capt.	Jonathan Snow, sergt.
--------------------	-----------------------

Privates.

Samuel Cole.	Joseph Pettingill.
Jesse Perkins.	Joshua Packard.

In the muster-roll of Capt. Lemuel Dunbar's company, stationed at Halifax, N. S., in service from March 31, 1759, to Nov. 1, 1760, are Lemuel Dunbar, capt.	Eleazar Packard, drummer.

----------------------	---------------------------

Privates.

Isaac Fuller.	Seth Packard.
James Loring.	Jonathan Perkins.
Lemuel Kingman.

In Capt. Lemuel Dunbar's company, in service from April 18, 1761, to Jan. 14, 1762, we find the names of Lemuel Dunbar, capt.	Peter Dunbar, corp.

----------------------	---------------------

Privates.

Lemuel Fuller.	Lemuel Kingman.
Adam Kingman.	Stephen Pettingill.

Also in the muster-rolls of Capt. Lemuel Dunbar's company, enlisted for an expedition to Crown Point, in service from March 4, 1762, to Dec. 5, 1762:

Lemuel Dunbar, capt.

Privates.

Hugh Carr.	Abijah Hill.
Thomas Carr.	John Pratt.
Lemuel Fuller.	Philip Reynolds.
Ephraim Groves.

We have thus far endeavored to present the names of all those who did service during the French wars. Doubtless many have served in these expeditions that are not on the rolls, or have entered other companies not belonging in the Bridgewater rolls.

We can see, however, by the foregoing lists that the North Parish of Bridgewater (now Brockton) did her part in the service in which Massachusetts took the lead.

The Revolutionary War.—No period in the history of the world is more interesting, or more full of moral and political instruction, than that of the American Revolution. The controversy between Great Britain and the American colonies arose in regard to the right of Parliament to tax the colonies while they were not allowed the privilege of representation in that body. Parliament determined to make the experiment, which it did, and the result of which is familiar to all readers of history. The first of a series of oppressive acts was that known as the "Acts of Trade," that tended to destroy all trade with the colonies. The second act required a duty to be paid into the English treasury on all sugar, molasses, indigo, coffee, wines, etc., that came into the colonies. This act passed April 5, 1764, and was called the "Sugar Act."<sup>1</sup>

At the time of the passage of this act, it was resolved to quarter ten thousand soldiers somewhere in America. Both of these acts were strongly opposed by the colonies, and laid the foundation for a still greater breach in the trade between the two countries. Trade in the colonies was principally confined to home productions, and the people determined not to import anything that it was possible to do without. Parliament finding the source of income very small, sought for another way to raise funds.

On the 22d of March, 1765, the famous Stamp Act was passed, to go into effect on the 1st of November following. This act required all colonial documents, as bonds, notes, and deeds, to be written on stamped paper, and to bear the royal seal, or to be of no value.

A general burst of indignation followed the passage of this act. Legislative bodies passed resolves, and protested against the measure. Societies in great numbers were formed, called "Sons of Liberty," who determined to resist parliamentary oppression. People began to wear cloth of their own manufacture, and denied themselves of foreign luxuries. Economy became the order of the day, the excess of which was soon felt in England, as many manufacturers were idle for want of a market for their goods, and laborers began to feel the consequences of her folly.

The king and Parliament soon saw their error, and repealed this act March 18, 1766, at the same time declaring they had a right to tax the colonies whenever they "deemed it expedient," thereby intending not to give up their right to taxation, but only to change the form; for the next year they passed an act levying a duty on glass, paper, paint, tea, etc. This only created continued opposition, which was such that Parliament thought proper to repeal all former resolves in regard to taxation, reserving a small tax of threepence a pound on tea. The strong resolutions passed by the colonies not to import or consume tea finally deprived the English government of a revenue from that source, and an attempt was made to import it through the agency of the East India Company, who had a right to export teas to all ports free of duty. Several ships were sent to the large cities in America. Those sent to Boston were consigned to some of Governor Hutchinson's relatives. The inhabitants were determined it should not be landed, and it was not. It was thrown into the sea by a body of men disguised as Indians. As soon as the news of the destruction of the tea arrived in England, Parliament resolved to punish the devoted town of Boston. Next came the Boston Port Bill, forbidding the landing or loading of goods in the harbor, passed March 25, 1774.

All these measures that were passed by Parliament did not intimidate the Americans, but served to strengthen their firm purpose not to submit to their oppression in any form.

When the Legislature of Massachusetts met at Salem in June, 1774, a meeting of delegates from all the colonies was proposed, which soon after met at Philadelphia, Sept. 4, 1774, when a declaration of rights was agreed upon.

At this time everything assumed the appearance of opposition by force. Fortifications were thrown up in Boston by Gen. Gage, who had been appointed Governor by Parliament. The Provincial Congress met at Concord, Oct. 11, 1774, where measures were taken for arming the whole province. Twelve thousand men were ordered to be raised, and to hold themselves in readiness at a moment's warning, and were called "minute-men." Companies were formed through all parts of the country. Provisions and military stores were collected at various places, particularly at Concord. Gen. Gage, wishing to destroy the means of carrying on the war by the provincials, detached Lieut.-Col. Smith and Maj. Pitcairn, April 18, 1775, to proceed to Concord for the purpose of destroying the military stores which he had learned had been stored there. Information having been sent in advance to Concord of their movements, the people flew to arms, and marched in small squads to where they were needed.

<sup>1</sup> The tax on rum was ninepence; molasses, sixpence per gallon; and sugar, five shillings per hundred.

When the Baitish troops arrived at Lexington, about five o'clock on the morning of the 19th, they were met by a small band of militia, paraded in front of the village church. Maj. Pitcairn rode up to them and bade them disperse, which command was followed by a scattering fire, and a general skirmish ensued, in which eight men were killed and several wounded. The main body of the troops passed on to Concord, where they arrived soon after sunrise, and a fight known as the "Concord Fight" took place. At Lexington was the first blood shed in defense of the liberty of the people, and immediately on the departure of the troops from that place, by an arrangement previously made, the committees of safety throughout the whole country dispatched messengers on horse in every direction, so that by evening every town within one hundred miles was informed that the war had commenced. The news was scattered throughout the towns by guns being fired, and other signals being given, so that people in the remote sections of a town were soon aware that they were needed. The news of this battle arrived in Bridgewater early in the day, and before sunset the company had collected and were ready for a march.

After a long and laborious search among the Revolutionary rolls, we have found the following names of those who have taken part in the Revolutionary war from North Bridgewater. The first we find is the company of minute-men that marched on the 19th of April, 1775, on the occasion of the Lexington alarm.

List of Capt. Josiah Hayden's company in Col. Bailey's regiment of minute-men, April 19, 1775 :

Josiah Hayden, capt.	William Packard, corp.
Nathan Packard, 1st lieu.	Timothy Ames, corp.
Zachariah Gurney, 2d lieu.	Jeremiah Beals, corp.
Reuben Packard, sergt.	Eleazer Cole, drummer.
Joseph Cole, sergt.	Silvanus Packard, drummer.
Henry Kingman, sergt.

Privates.

Simeon Alden.	Micah Gurney.
Noah Ames.	Anthony Dike.
Daniel Ames.	Robert Howard.
Japhet Beal.	Daniel Howard.
Simeon Brett.	Oliver Howard.
Samuel Brett.	Bela Howard.
Seth Bryant.	Simeon Keith.
William Cole.	Lemuel Packard.
Ephraim Cole.	Jonathan Packard.
Jonathan Cary.	Jonathan Perkins, Jr.
Daniel Dickerman.	Jonas Reynolds.
Nathan Edson.	Joseph Reynolds.
Barnabas Edson.	Joseph Sylvester.
Fobes Field.	Charles Snell.
Mark Ford.	Uriah Southworth.
Richard Field.	John Thompson.
Ephraim Groves.	Enos Thayer.
John Gurney.	Ezekiel Washburn.

Ebenezer Warren.	Jacob Edson.
Job Bryant.	Thomas Pratt.
Mannasseh Dickerman.

Also Capt. Robert Orr's company, Col. John Bailey's regiment, who marched from Bridgewater in consequence of the Lexington alarm :

Daniel Cary, one month and one day in service.
 Luke Packard, one month and one day in service.

Capt. Robert Webster's company, Gen. Pomeroy's regiment :

Asa Packard, fifer, in service three months and twelve days from April 27, 1775.

We find in the roll of Capt. Nathan Mitchell's company, that marched from Bridgewater in consequence of the Lexington alarm, the 19th of April, 1775, the name of Jonathan Cary, in service eleven days.

Again on the 23d of April, 1775, the Provincial Congress resolved to raise thirteen thousand five hundred men from Massachusetts immediately, the term of service to be eight months. Among these we find the following companies :

A muster-roll of Capt. John Porter's company in Col. Paul D. Sargent's regiment :

	Term of service.
John Porter, captain.....	June 29 to August, 1775.
Isaac Fuller, sergeant.....	July 7 " "
Uriah Southworth, corporal.....	June 29 " "
Ezekiel Washburn, corporal.....	June 29 " "
Samuel Cole, drummer.....	July 7 " "
Luther Cary, fifer.....	June 29 " "
Daniel Ames, private.....	July 7 " "
Ebenezer Edson, private.....	June 30 " "
Benjamin Fuller, ".....	June 30 " "
William Shaw, ".....	June 27 " "

No man of this company received any guns, bayonets, cartridge-boxes, or clothing, excepting what he provided himself with.

A complete list of men in Capt. Josiah Hayden's company, in Col. John Thomas' regiment, to Aug. 1, 1775 :

	M.	W.	D.
John Hayden, captain.....	3	1	1
Zachariah Gurney, first lieutenant.....	3	1	1
Joseph Cole, ensign.....	3	1	1
Eleazer Cole, sergeant.....	3	1	1
Ephraim Groves, sergeant.....	3	1	1
Job Bryant, corporal.....	3	1	1
Richard Field, corporal.....	3	1	1
Sylvanus Packard, drummer.....	3	1	1
Simeon Brett, private.....	3	1	1
Luther Cary, ".....	3	0	5
Southworth Cole, ".....	2	0	5
Thomas Crafts, ".....	3	1	1
Daniel Dickerman, private.....	3	1	1
Anthony Dike, ".....			Armorer.
William French, ".....	0	3	3
Micah Gurney, ".....	3	1	1
Jonathan Packard, ".....	3	1	1
Oliver Packard, ".....	3	1	1
Thaddeus Pratt, ".....	3	1	1
Joseph Snell, ".....	2	1	1

In Capt. Daniel Lothrop's company, in Col. John Bailey's regiment, for eight months' service, from May 3, 1775, were the following :

Term of Service.
Ephraim Jackson.....	Three months.
Ebenezer Dunbar.....	One month.
Adam Howard.....	Three months and six days.
Nathan Leach.....	One month and two days.
Daniel Packard.....	One month and two days.
Matthew Pettingill.....	One month and two days.

A muster-roll of Capt. Frederick Pope's company (eight months' service) to Aug. 1, 1775 :

Eleazer Snow, enl. June 25, 1775.
Mannasseh Dickerman, enl. June 24, 1775.
Eleazer Snow, enl. June 27, 1775.

Names of men enlisted in Capt. Thomas Pierce's company of artillery, in Col. Knox's regiment, for service at Roxbury, Dec. 16, 1775 :

Elijah Packard.	Jonathan Packard.
-----------------	-------------------

An exact roll of Capt. Elisha Mitchell's company, in Col. Simeon Cary's regiment, that marched April 2, 1775 :

Joseph Cole, lieut.	Samuel Cole, drummer.
Joseph Snell, corp.

Privates.

Daniel Ames.	Ichahod Packard.
Jonathan Cary.	Daniel Cary.
Josiah Packard.	Simeon Keith.
Thomas Craft.	Luke Packard.
Jonathan Keith.

Capt. Eliakim Howard's company, in Col. Edward Mitchell's regiment, that was ordered to march to the service of the United States, March 4, 1776 :

Daniel Howard.	Jeremiah Thayer, Jr.
Simeon Keith.

Capt. Henry Prentiss' company, in Col. Marshall's regiment, raised for the defense of Boston, July 5, 1776 :

Zechariah Gurney, lieut.	Joseph Cole, lieut.
--------------------------	---------------------

List of Abiel Pierce's company, in Col. Nicholas Dike's regiment, from Aug. 3, 1776, to Nov. 29, 1776 :

Barzillai Field.	Ichabod Packard.
Stephen Pettingill.

The following persons were in the service under Capt. Henry Prentiss, in Col. Thomas Marshall's regiment, to Aug. 1, 1776 :

Zechariah Gurney, enl. May 4th.
John Thompson, enl. June 8th.
Ezekiel Washburn, enl. June 8th.
Zechariah Gurney, enl. June 8th.
Gideon Lincoln, enl. June 8th.
Mark Ford, enl. June 8th.
Enos Thayer, enl. July 8th.
Joseph Reynolds, enl. July 12th.
David Reynolds, enl. July 12th.

This company was also in service from August to Nov. 1, 1776, at the expiration of which time they enlisted for one month additional service.

A muster-roll of Capt. Snell's company, in Col. Mitchell's regiment of militia, who marched on the alarm to Rhode Island, Dec. 8, 1776, and were in service two weeks and two days :

David Packard, 1st lieut.	Jeremiah Beal, sergt.
John Packard, 2d lieut.	Ezra Cary, sergt.
William Packard, sergt.	Samuel Brett, corp.

Privates.

Timothy Ames.	Charles Snell.
Daniel Amas.	Eleazer Snow.
Jonas Packard.	Ephraim Packard.
Jonathan Hayden.	Simeon Alden.
Fobes Field.	Henry Thayer.
Joshua Ames.

The following are those having served in the artillery companies :

A roll of officers and men in Capt. Daniel Lothrop's company, in Col. Thomas Crafts regiment of artillery, in the service of Massachusetts Bay, up to the first day of August, 1776 :

Joseph Cole, 1st lieut., enl. May 9, 1776.
Richard Field, sergt., enl. May 13, 1776.
Samuel Cole, drummer, enl. May 16, 1776.
Jeremiah Thayer, matross, enl. May 20, 1776.

This company was also in service from Aug. 1 to Nov. 1, 1776; also from Nov. 1, 1776, to Feb. 1, 1777 :

Eleazer Snow enlisted in this company November 1st, and was in service with the above-named men from Feb. 1, 1776, to the 7th of May of the same year.

Jan. 26, 1777, a resolve was passed by the Assembly, making a requisition on Massachusetts for every seventh man of sixteen years old and upward, without any exception (save the people called Quakers), to fill up the fifteen battalions called for by the Continental Congress, to serve three years or during the war. The following are those enlisted from Bridgewater :

Ebenezer Edson, Crane's regiment; three years; Frothingham Co.
Micah Gurney, Thirteenth Regiment; three years; Light Infantry Co.
Joshua Cushman, Ninth Regiment; three years; Capt. Miiler.
Ephraim Groves, Crane's regiment; three years; Frothingham Co.
Nehemiah Packard, Thirteenth Regiment; during war; Light Infantry Co.
Benjamin Packard, Thirteenth Regiment; during war; Capt. Allen.
Daniel Packard, Fourteenth Regiment; three years; 8th Co.

The following persons marched on a secret expedition to Tiverton, R. I., and were in service from Sept. 25th to Oct. 30, 1777 :

Nathaniel Packard, 1st lieutenant; Jonathan Packard, 2d lieutenant; Nathaniel Manley, sergent.

Privates.

Seth Edson.	Elijah Packard.
Caleb Howard.	John Pratt.
Simeon Packard.	John Pratt (2d).
Shepard Packard.	John Packard.

Each of this company received a bounty of twenty dollars per month.

Capt. Edward Cobb's company that marched from Bridgewater to Bristol, R. I., April 21, 1777, for two months' service :

	Time in Service.
	M.	W.	D.
Daniel Howard, 1st lieutenant.....	2	4	0
Hezekiah Packard, fifer.....	2	0	4½
Barzillai Field.....	2	0	4½
Zechariah Gurney.....	2	0	4½
Oliver Packard.....	2	0	4½
Jonathan Snow.....	2	0	4
Hugh Carr.....	2	0	4

We also find in Capt. Stetson's company, Col. Marshall's regiment, the name of Daniel Packard, enl. April 9, 1777.

Joshua Warren was in Capt. Bartlett's company, in Col. Wesson's regiment, May 7, 1777.

Solomon Packard was in service in Capt. Benjamin Edgell's company, Col. John Jacob's regiment, five months and sixteen days, 1777.

A draft was made for men to reinforce the northern army Jan. 1, 1778. For this service, in Capt. Jacob Allen's company, Col. John Bailey's regiment, from Massachusetts, in the camp at Valley Forge, Jan. 24, 1778, is the name of Caleb Howard, corp.

A pay-roll of Capt. Nathan Packard's company, in Col. Thomas Carpenter's regiment of militia, in the State of Massachusetts, from July 25 to September 9, 1778, in service in Rhode Island :

Nathan Packard, capt.	Joseph Reynolds, corp.
Jesse Perkins, 1st lieutenant.	Ebenezer Dunbar, corp.
Nathaniel Orcutt, 3d lieutenant.

Privates.

Mannasseh Dickerman.	John Pratt.
Simeon Keith.	Daniel Pettingill.
David Packard.	Simeon Packard.
Amzi Brett.	David Reynolds.
Samuel Craft.	John Thompson.
Mark Ford.

Capt. John Ames' company of militia, who marched to Rhode Island and joined Col. Nathaniel Wade's regiment on the 27th of June, 1778, for a term of twenty days, agreeably to a resolve of the General Court :

Daniel Howard, 1st lieutenant. Lemuel Gurney, fifer.

Privates.

Daniel Cary.	Oliver Packard.
Seth Edson.	Thomas Pratt.
Asa Keith.	Barzillai Field.
Joshua Warren.	Micah Pratt.
Thomas Packard.

"A return of men mustered for Col. Robinson's regiment, by James Hatch, muster-master for the county of Plymouth, to serve in ye New England States until January, 1778 :"

Uriah Southworth.	Daniel Howard.
Alpheus Cary.	Southworth Cole.
Peter Edson.	Oliver Packard.
Simeon Dunbar.	Luther Cary.
Eleazer Snow.	Ahiah Southworth, July 26, 1778.

In Capt. Joseph Cole's company, Col. John Jacob's regiment, in the Continental service one year from Jan. 1, 1778, we find the following names :

Joseph Cole, capt.	Hezekiah Packard, fifer.
Isaiah Fuller, 1st lieutenant.

Privates.

Alpheus Cary.	Joshua Warren.
Peter Edson.	Luther Cary.
Ephraim Churchill.

In September, 1778, the following persons were mustered into the service of the States, to serve till Jan. 1, 1779 :

Hezekiah Packard.	Zechariah Gurney.
Jeremiah Thayer.	Oliver Packard.

Isaiah Fuller was a lieutenant in Capt. Joseph Cole's company, in Col. John Jacobs' regiment, from April 1, 1778, to January, 1779, for nine months' service.

In Capt. Calvin Partridge's company of militia, in Col. Samuel Pierce's regiment, stationed at Little Compton, R. I., April 30, 1779 :

Zech. Gurney, 1st lieutenant.	Zechariah Watkins, lieutenant.
James Packard, sergent.	Lemuel Gurney, private.

Privates.

Solomon Hill.	Shepard Packard.
Daniel Brett.

Were in Col. Ezra Wood's regiment for one month; enlisted for service at Ticonderoga in May and part of June, 1778.

Shepard Packard also enlisted in Capt. Edward Sparrow's company, Col. Nathan Tyler's regiment, in June, 1779.

Joseph Sylvester enlisted in Col. Bailey's regiment, for three years or during the war, Oct. 24, 1779.

The pay-roll for six-months men raised in the town of Bridgewater, in July, 1780, for Continental service, contains the following names from the North Parish :

Akerman Pettingill. Hugh Carr.
Zechariah Gurney. Solomon Packard.

Also

Simeon Keith, sergt., Jacob Packard, private,
Jeremiah Thayer, corp.,

that marched on the alarm to Rhode Island, by order of Council, July 22, 1780, in service from July 30th to August 9th.

Capt. David Packard's company, in Col. Eliphalet Cary's regiment, who marched on the alarm to Rhode Island, July 22, 1780, in service from July 23d to Aug. 9, 1780 :

David Packard, capt. Eleazer Snow, 2d lieut.

Sergeants.

Daniel Howard. Ephraim Packard.
William Packard. Samuel Brett.

Corporals.

Fobes Field. Luther Cary, sife major.
Ephraim Cole. Micah Gurney, drummer.
Jonathan Cary.

Privates.

Philip Packard. Solomon Hill.
Daniel Howard. Adin Packard.
Bela Howard. Levi Packard.
William Brett. Ahiah Packard.
Joshua Ames. Joshua Cushman.
Alphens Cary. Ichabod Howard.
Timothy Ames. Barnabas Pratt.
Howard Cary. Nathaniel Snell.
Lemuel Packard. Joseph Reynolds.
Barnabas Pratt, Jr. Enos Thayer.
Thomas Packard. Eleazer Cole.
Charles Hayden. Timothy Reynolds.
David Gurney. Jeremiah Beal.
Richard Field. Samuel Chesman.
Ephraim Field. Eleazer Snow, Jr.
Zechariah Howard. Mannasseh Dickerman.
Jonathan Reynolds. Joh Ames.
James Perkins. Noah Ames.
Daniel Dickerman. John Gurney.
Daniel Ames.

An order was passed by the Assembly to raise two thousand men to reinforce northern armies in 1780.

In this service we find from the North Parish, in Bridgewater,

Hugh Carr, Akerman Pettingill,

in Capt. Hancock's company, who marched from Springfield July 4, 1780, for six months.

Zechariah Gurney was in the Eleventh Division, and marched from Springfield under command of Ensign Bancroft for six months, July 11, 1780.

Solomon Packard was in the seventh division of six-months men who marched from Springfield under the command of Capt. Dix, July 7, 1780.

The following is a list of Capt. Nathan Packard's company in Maj. Eliphalet Cary's regiment, that marched on account of the alarm in Rhode Island, July 22, 1780, by order of Council, from North Bridgewater :

Nathan Packard, capt. John Thompson, sergt.
Jesse Perkins, 1st lieut.

Privates.

Mark Packard. Caleb Packard.
Josiah Packard. Simeon Packard, Jr.
Anthony Dike. Jacob Packard.
Mark Perkins. William Shaw, Jr.
Barnabas Edson. Daniel Shaw.
Seth Edson. Naphtali Shaw.
Ebenezer Edson. Gilbert Snell.
Benjamin Keith. John Tilden.
Seth Kingman. Rufus Brett.
Daniel Manley. Asa Packard.
Shepard Packard. Josiah Edson.
Jonathan Perkins. Josiah Perkins, Jr.

Again we find in the company of Capt. Luke Bicknell, in Col. Putnam's regiment at West Point, N. Y., 1781, several persons from North Bridgewater :

Joshua Cushman. Marlboro Packard.
Simeon Packard. Isaiah Packard.
Thomas Packard. Daniel Alden.

The following persons enlisted in Col. John Bailey's regiment, Jan. 25, 1782, to reinforce the Continental army :

Joseph Sylvester. Noah Pratt.
Benjamin Kingman. John Thompson.
Daniel Packard.

We have now given the reader an account of those who took part in the war that resulted in our national independence. Imperfect as this list may be, owing to the unconnected tattered rolls at the State-house, we have endeavored to get the names of all who did military duty during the eight years' strife between England and America, and place them in readable form. We have brought the account down to the close of the war, or to the time of the signing of the treaty at Paris, in November, 1782. The war had grown exceedingly unpopular after the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, in October, 1781, although nothing definite was done till March, 1782, when the House of Commons voted not to prosecute the war any further. At the close of that year commissioners were chosen on both sides, who met at Paris, and after a long consultation, they agreed upon the articles of peace. These were signed November 30th of that year, and on the 20th of January, 1783, hostilities ceased between the two countries.

On the 19th of April, just eight years after the battle of Lexington, Washington issued his proclamation of peace. Thus ended a war of nearly eight years' duration, in which a hundred thousand lives were lost, and millions of property destroyed. It was the decision of this war that established the United States among the powers of the earth. In looking over the list of persons that took part in the battles of our country, we should not forget those who were left at home to provide for the families of absent ones. In many instances the women of the town had to till the soil to obtain what food was actually needed for subsistence; in short, every nerve was brought into requisition to provide home-made cloth, stockings, shirts, and blankets, that were called for by the government in large quantities; and although the women, wives, and mothers of those who fought the battles could not fight in the face of the foe with muskets, they did their part in aiding and abetting; and their deeds were as heroic in many instances as those we record; may their memory ever be cherished with gratitude, and stimulate us all to act well our part, and thus be mutual helpers to each other through life, that at its close we may have the satisfaction of feeling that we have done our whole duty, and done it well.

Shay's Rebellion.—At the conclusion of the Revolutionary war, peace and independence having been established, the attention of the people was directed to the finances of the country. The English merchants flooded the country with foreign goods, and thereby drained us of specie, and ruined the manufacturers. This involved merchants and others in debt.

The masses of the people, finding themselves burdened under the weight of taxes and loss of employment, became quite disheartened and uneasy, and hence could easily be led into almost any kind of a scheme to relieve their burdens. Debts could not be collected, and the heavy taxes were the ruin of a great many. During this state of feeling, a few persons, taking advantage of that condition of affairs, called a public meeting, which was held at Hatfield, Mass., in August, 1786, to see what they could do to better themselves. This meeting so inflamed the people that a mob of fifteen hundred persons assembled at Northampton, to prevent the sitting of the courts. From thence the insurrection fire continued to burn and spread throughout the State. One Daniel Shay, of Pelham, Mass., was one of the principal movers in the scheme. A similar company was collected at Springfield, in September following. Here they found a military force sufficient to stop their proceedings. Similar gatherings were had in the towns where the county courts were held, in other parts of the State, the object being to stop all means of collecting debts by the usual process of law. Such a gathering was had at the court-house in Taunton, Bristol Co., in September, 1786.

At this place, as before, the insurgents found that preparations had been made for a grand reception; and after a delay of a day or two, in frightening the people in that vicinity, the mob dispersed.

Among those called to suppress this rebellion at Taunton were the following companies from Bridgewater. The list below gives the names of those from the North Parish of Bridgewater:

"A muster and pay role of ye 7th company of militia in the 3d regiment, in the county of Plymouth, and commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Orr,—

Lemuel Packard, capt.	Howard Cary, sergt.
Daniel Cary, 1st lieu.	Ephraim Field, corp.
Samuel Brett, 2d lieu.	Josiah Reynolds, drum'r.
Parmenas Packard, sergt.	Ephraim Sturtevant, fifer.

Privates.

Oliver Howard.	Gideon Howard.
Robert Howard.	Seth Edson.
John Howard.	James Cary.
Jonas Howard.	Daniel Ames.
William Reynolds.	Thomas Packard.
Barzillai Field.	John Crafts.

"The above-named persons were in service from September 9th to the 13th, 1786.

"Sworn to before

"JUSTICE HOWARD.

"LEMUEL PACKARD, Captain."

"A muster and pay role of Captain John Thompson's company of militia, in service from September 9 to September 13, 1786:

John Thompson, captain.

Privates.

Levi Washburn.	Ichabod Bruyint.
Jeremiah Thayer.	Calvin Bruyint.
Mark Perkins.	Job Bruyint.
Josiah Perkins.	Job Bruyint, Jr.
Amasa Brett.	Daniel Perkins.
Leonard Oreutt.	Nathan Keith.
Oliver Packard.	Daniel Bruyint.
Obadiah West.	Seth Kingman.
Nathan Packard.	Calvin Brett.
Nathan Packard, Jr.	William Shaw.
David Edson, Jr.	Henry Kingman.
Thomas Thompson, Jr.	Ichabod Edson.
Jonathan Keith.	Ephraim Groves.
Josiah Packard.	Japhet Beals.
Jonathan Perkins, Jr.	Jonas Howard.
Elijah Packard.	Beza Bruyint.
Peter Bruyint.

"Sworn to before

"JUSTICE HOWARD.

"JOHN THOMPSON, Captain."

"BRIDGEWATER, September ye 9th, 1786."

War of 1812.—The war of 1812 was memorable as the opening of a second war with England. The difficulty existing between the two nations consisted in the English government impressing our seamen on board their ships, and by a series of depredations upon our commerce, even upon our own coasts, together with insults to the American flag in various ways.

On the 4th of April an embargo was placed upon all vessels within the jurisdiction of the United States for ninety days, and on the 18th of June war was formally declared by the President between England and the United States. Various incidents and many interesting events occurred both on land and sea during the years 1812, 1813, and 1814, which we have not space to publish. The skirmishing on the sea was spirited, and resulted in many victories to our forces, and on land was as favorable as could be expected, and in the end secured to us our rights as Americans.

The plan of operations at first was to guard our sea-coasts, sending troops to man them by calls on the militia at various times, the whole under the direction of the regular army. The spring of 1814 opened with the loss of the ship "Essex," of the navy, at Valparaiso, which served to stimulate the people of the United States to renewed activity, although the war was considered by many as uncalled for. Fortunately, there were those who thought it best to maintain their dignity, and not allow any injustice to be done to our seamen. During the year 1814 the militia along the seaboard towns were called upon to guard the forts. Among those who responded to the call from North Bridgewater was the following company :

"Pay-roll of a company of infantry, under command of Capt. Nehemiah Lincoln, detached from the Third Regiment, First Brigade, in the Fifth Division, stationed at Plymouth, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Caleb Howard, commandant."

Nehemiah Lincoln, capt.                      Silas Dunbar, ensign.
Ephraim Cole, Jr., lieutenant.

Sergeants.

Gustavus Sylvester.                      Martin Kingman.
Josiah Dunbar.

Corporals.

Jabez Kingman.                      Daniel Packard.
Galen Manley.                      Nathan Jones.

Musicians.

Robert S. Holbrook.                      George W. Burt.

Privates.

John Ames.                      Martin Cary.
Benjamin Ames.                      Simeon Dunbar.
Oliver Bryant.                      Samuel Dike, Jr.
John Burrill, Jr.                      Bela C. Dike.
Samuel Brett.                      Samuel Dickerman.
Zibeeon Brett.                      John Delano.
Zenas Brett.                      Isaac Eames.
John Battles.                      John Field.
William Battles.                      Asa Howard.
Chester Cooley.                      Cyrus Howard.
Zenas Cary.                      Lewis Howard.
Luther Cary.                      Oliver Howard, Jr.

Otis Howard.                      Jason Packard.
Gideon Howard.                      David Packard (2d).
Austin Howard.                      Loring White.
Oliver Howard.                      Nathaniel Ames.
Ira Hayward.                      Theron Ames.
Manley Hayward.                      Joseph Packard.
James Hatch.                      Cyrus B. Phillips.
Bernard Jackson.                      Waldo Hayward.
Isaac Whiting.                      Martin Drake.
Benjamin Kingman.                      Isaac Packard.
James Loring.                      Lemuel Sumner.
John May.                      David Packard.
Ambrose Packard.                      Silvanus French.
Luke Packard.                      Simeon Cary.
Jesse Packard.                      Enos Thayer.
Sullivan Packard.                      Galen Packard.
Arza Packard.                      Charles Clapp.
Zibeeon Packard.                      Hezekiah Packard.
Thomas Reynolds.                      Charles Lincoln.
Matthew Snell.                      Sidney Howard.
Oliver Snell.                      Sprague Snow.
Jeremiah Snell.                      Galen Warren.
John Smith.                      Jonathan Edson.
Newton Shaw.                      Nathaniel Ames.
Simeon Warren.                      Howard Manley.
Cyrus Warren.                      John Thompson.
Ephraim Willis, Jr.                      Waldo Field.
James Willis.                      Salmon Manley.
Ebenezer Crocker.                      Ozen Gurney.

"Plymouth, Oct. 12, 1814.

"This may certify that the above is a true and correct roll of the company under my command, from the 20th of September to the 12th of October, 1814.

"NEHEMIAH LINCOLN, Captain."

The following persons were also in service three days, from the 12th to the 15th of October, 1814, under the command of Capt. Nehemiah Lincoln, and not included in the above list :

Nahum Leonard, lieutenant.                      Simeon Taylor, corp.
Seth Keith, sergeant.                      Jona. Copeland, 3d corp.
Ansel Alger, sergeant.

Privates.

David Ames.                      Charles Ames.
Charles Copeland.                      Bezer Lathrop.
Ebenezer Caldwell, Jr.                      Gershom Orcutt.
Perez Robinson.                      Howard Alger.
Daniel Hartwell, Jr.                      Kingman Cook.
Asa Briggs.                      Benjamin Randall.
Perez Williams, Jr.                      Asa Packard.
Seba Howard.                      Edward C. Howard.
Eleazer Churchill, Jr.                      Samuel Packard.
John Colwell.                      Charles Dunbar.

CHAPTER X.

The Rebellion of 1861—Election of 1860—State of the Country at the Commencement of the Rebellion—Steamer "Star of the West"—Secession of South Carolina—Firing upon Fort Sumter—Call for Seventy-five Thousand Volunteers for Three Months—Company F, Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment—Casualties and Changes in the Twelfth Regiment—Nar-Martland's Brass Band—rative of the Twelfth Regiment—Call for more Troops—Company I, First Massachusetts Cavalry—List of Changes and Casualties in the Same—Companies and Regiments in which Soldiers have been in the Service—One Hundred Days' Men—List of Changes, Prisoners, Promotions, Deaths, etc., during the Rebellion.

It is well known that there had existed for a long time a bitter antagonism between the Northern and Southern portions of the United States upon the great subject of slavery. Fierce party contentions had long existed, and ever will continue under a free elective government.

Till the election of November, 1860, however, there never was a Southern Presidential candidate that did not receive electoral votes at the North, nor a Northern candidate who did not receive electoral votes at the South. The country at this time was in a state of unexampled prosperity. Agriculture, commerce, and manufactures—East, West, North, and South—had just recovered from the great financial crisis of 1857, and our country was spoken of and regarded by the rest of the civilized world as among the most prosperous nations of the world. We had been classed (with England, France, and Russia) as one of the four leading powers of the age. No sooner had the results of the election of November 6th been made known than it appeared on the part of one of the Southern States—and whose example was soon after followed by others—that it had been the firm intention of those States not to abide the result of the election unless it resulted in giving them their candidate. They were not satisfied with having had their own choice for sixty years, and now they had agreed not to abide by the decisions of the majority, in the event of the election of Abraham Lincoln, and in consequence of this the greatest conspiracy of the nineteenth century came to light, and the nation at once became involved in a civil war.

The first overt act of war committed in pursuance of this treasonable conspiracy, after the formal act of South Carolina passing its secession ordinance, was the firing upon a national transport, laden with men and supplies for the garrison in Charleston harbor. The date of the ordinance was Dec. 20, 1860. The firing upon the steamer "Star of the West" was Jan.

9, 1861. The commencement of the Rebellion is dated from April 12, 1861, when the rebels, who numbered by hundreds, commenced firing upon Fort Sumter from every direction.

It was then the intention of the rebels to follow up this first blow by seizing the capital at Washington. In this they were frustrated; for on the 15th of April the War Department called for seventy-five thousand troops from the militia of the several States for three months' service, who hastened to Washington, and thus saved the capital of the nation. In no portion of the world was ever an army gathered so quickly; in less than two months over two hundred thousand men were in the army, ready for action. The response to the President's calls was truly wonderful, both in men and money.

On the 16th the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment was on its way to the seat of government by railroad, and the Third and Fourth Regiments moved by steamers; on the 18th the Eighth Regiment marched under Gen. Butler; on the 20th the Third Battalion of Rifles, under Maj. Devens; and the Fifth Infantry, with Cook's battery of light artillery, on the morning of the 21st. The number of troops furnished by Massachusetts under these calls for three months' service were three thousand seven hundred and thirty-six.

The call for volunteers in the month of April, 1861, was met in the spirit of '76. Frequent meetings were held, patriotic speeches were made, and volunteers came up nobly to fill the ranks.

On Saturday evening, April 20, 1861, a large and enthusiastic meeting was held in the vestry of the New Jerusalem Church for the purpose of forming a new military company. Dr. Alexander Hichborn was chairman of the meeting, Jonas R. Perkins, Esq., secretary. There were about one thousand persons present. Spirited and patriotic addresses were made, and over one hundred came forward and enlisted in the service of their country.

Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment.—The following company enlisted as volunteers for three years or during the war:

Roll of Company F, Twelfth Regiment, Capt. Alexander Hichborn, as corrected at Fort Warren, July 13, 1861, under command of Col. Fletcher Webster:

Alexander Hichborn, 39, capt., North Bridgewater, physician, married.
 Alpheus K. Harmon, 34, 1st lieutenant, North Bridgewater, painter, married.
 Hiram W. Copeland, 26, 2d lieutenant, North Bridgewater, clerk, single.

- John S. Stoddard, 31, 1st sergt., North Bridgewater, brush manufacturer, married.
- Nathan H. Crosby, 29, 2d sergt., Bridgewater, awl-forged, married.
- Charles L. Sproul, 25, 3d sergt., North Bridgewater, stitcher, married.
- Francis P. Holmes, 31, 4th sergt., North Bridgewater, awl-forged, married.
- James B. Sampson, 24, 5th sergt., North Bridgewater, merchant, single.
- James S. Tennet, 30, corp., North Bridgewater, wood-turner, married.
- Uriah Macey, 35, corp., North Bridgewater, trader.
- Roswell C. Amsden, 33, corp., North Bridgewater, boot-cutter, married.
- Galen Edson, 33, corp., North Bridgewater, cabinet-maker, married.
- Charles H. Reinhart, 39, corp., North Bridgewater, carpenter, married.
- Frederick C. Packard, 18, corp., North Bridgewater, melodeon manufacturer, single.
- Walter D. Packard, 20, corp., North Bridgewater, clerk, single.
- Edwin T. Cowell, 19, corp., North Bridgewater, baggage-master, single.
- James Sullivan, 12, musician, Boston, single.
- Joseph Lynch, 22, wagoner, East Stoughton, teamster, single.
- James A. Allen, 23, private, North Bridgewater, machinist, single.
- Luther E. Alden, 30, private, North Bridgewater, boot-cutter, married.
- James F. Andrews, 35, private, North Bridgewater, cabinet-maker, married.
- Leander B. Andrews, 30, private, North Bridgewater, painter, married.
- Lawrence Burke, 19, private, North Bridgewater, cooper, single.
- John Barry, 19, private, North Andover, machinist, single.
- Isaac W. Blanchard, 25, private, North Bridgewater, butcher, married.
- Henry Burns, 28, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Eli Bunker, 20, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Henry L. Bunker, 18, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- William H. Benney, 22, private, North Bridgewater, boot-maker, single.
- John L. Colter, 21, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Henry R. Coots, 40, private, Chelsea, shoemaker, married.
- George W. Childs, 21, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- John Creighton, 21, private, Boston, laborer, single.
- Malcolm D. Halberg, 30, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Thomas Doyle, 30, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Albert S. Dean, 27, private, North Bridgewater, machinist, married.
- Aaron B. Dodge, 22, private, North Bridgewater, hootmaker, single.
- Joseph P. Davis, 23, private, East Randolph, shoemaker, married.
- Sargent Daniels, 37, private, North Bridgewater, hatcher.
- Seth Edson, 33, private, North Bridgewater, carpenter, married.
- Aaron B. Frost, 23, private, Lowell, shoemaker, single.
- Joseph W. Freeman, 22, private, North Bridgewater, needle-maker, single.
- Henry W. Freeman, 33, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, married.
- Robert F. Fuller, 29, private, North Bridgewater, shoe-cutter, married.
- John E. Ford, 25, private, Boston, barber, single.
- Andrew J. Frost, 31, private, North Bridgewater, hootmaker, single.
- John C. Greeley, 33, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, married.
- Warren A. Holmes, 20, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Linas P. Howard, 24, private, North Bridgewater, shoe-cutter, single.
- Rufus F. Hull, 23, private, Georgetown, manufacturer, married.
- Albert P. Hovey, 32, private, Boxford, wheelwright, married.
- Nathaniel H. Hall, 30, private, North Bridgewater, stitcher, married.
- Christopher T. Harris, 21, private, Plymouth, tin-worker, single.
- Volney Howard, 21, private, Randolph, bootmaker, single.
- Clarence E. Hartwell, 25, private, North Bridgewater, hootmaker, married.
- John S. Hamilton, 25, private, North Bridgewater, hootmaker, single.
- John Hallihan, 24, private, Lowell, shoemaker, married.
- Charles Howard, 20, private, North Bridgewater, farmer, single.
- William W. Hayden, 17, private, South Bridgewater, clerk, single.
- Andrew Jackson, 22, private, West Bridgewater, shoe-cutter, single.
- Laban Jackson, 20, private, North Bridgewater, farmer, single.
- Thaddens Keith, 28, private, North Bridgewater, farmer, single.
- Dexter D. Keith, 29, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, married.
- Benjamin J. Keith, 19, private, South Bridgewater, blacksmith, single.
- Martin M. Keith, 22, private, South Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Carl A. Linstead, 27, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, married.
- Timothy Leary, 18, private, West Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- F. A. Manchester, 33, private, North Bridgewater, shoe-cutter, married.
- Francis N. Maroni, 20, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Henry E. Morley, 22, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- William W. Newson, 28, private, Boston, mechanic, single.
- Arthur J. F. O'Keefe, 18, private, Boston, printer, single.
- Isaac S. Porter, 19, private, Stoughton, farmer, single.
- James A. Packard, 25, private, North Bridgewater, shoe-cutter, married.
- Samuel N. Packard, 37, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, married.
- Anthony P. Phillips, 19, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
- Herbert A. Phillips, 24, private, North Bridgewater, bootmaker, single.
- George A. Perkins, 23, private, North Bridgewater, bootmaker, single.
- Gilman B. Parker, 21, private, West Boxford, shoemaker, single.
- Henry C. Richardson, 18, private, West Boxford, mechanic, single.

William H. Rugg, 21, private, Boxford, shoemaker, single.
 William F. Robinson, 27, private, North Bridgewater, farmer, married.
 Osgood Ring, 40, private, North Bridgewater, boot-trees, single.
 Charles Reed, 20, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
 Henry Rogers, 27, private, South Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
 Frederick S. Symonds, 33, private, North Bridgewater, awl-forgor, single.
 Frank M. Stoddard, 19, private, East Stoughton, shoe-cutter, single.
 Francis A. Sanford, 21, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
 George G. Smith, 22, private, Easton, shoemaker, single.
 Luther T. Snell, 18, private, North Bridgewater, machinist, single.
 Harrison Stevens, 18, private, Boston, clerk, single.
 George F. Tinkham, 24, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
 Ephraim Tinkham, 28, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, single.
 Nathan M. Tripp, 25, private, North Bridgewater, carpenter, married.
 Ira Temple, 23, private, Boston, teamster, single.
 Joseph J. Vincent, 21, private, North Bridgewater, shoe-cutter, single.
 George B. Walker, 22, private, Weymouth, bootmaker, single.
 George F. Whitecomb, 19, private, Randolph, lastmaker, single.
 Thomas W. Wall, 21, private, East Stoughton, shoemaker, single.
 Lewis B. Wade, 19, private, Northwest Bridgewater, bootmaker, single.
 Herbert O. Morse, 21, private, Boxford, shoemaker, single.
 Webster Howard, 24, private, North Bridgewater, shoemaker, married.
 Jerome R. Hodge, 27, private, Canton, Me., shoemaker, married.
 Franklin M. Godfrey, 23, private, Easton, carpenter, single.
 Richard Packard, 20, private, North Bridgewater, shoe-striper, single.
 Samuel E. Chandler, 24, private, Charlestown, clerk, single.
 Freeman Ranney, 44, private, Boston, merchant, married.
 John Howard, private, East Bridgewater, school-teacher, single.
 William Woods, 21, private, Boston, medical student, single.

The Twelfth Regiment, of which Company F, of North Bridgewater, formed a part, was organized at Fort Warren by Col. Fletcher Webster (son of the late lamented and illustrious Hon. Daniel Webster, of Marshfield, Mass.), "a brave and generous gentleman," who fell in the battle of Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862. The regiment, when mustered into service on the 26th day of June, 1861, numbered one thousand and forty men. Company F was recruited at North Bridgewater, and left that town April 29, 1861, at nine o'clock A.M. The event of leaving the town was the occasion of a grand demonstration by the people of the town, thousands of whom had turned out to bid them farewell. The company assembled in their armory, which they left under the escort of the North Bridgewater Light Dragoons, Capt. Lucius

Richmond, with the engine companies Nos. 2, 3, 5, and 6, and a large body of citizens, marching to the music of the North Bridgewater brass band, through the village to the railroad depot. The gathering was very numerous, probably never exceeded upon any occasion in that town. A sober feeling pervaded the concourse in view of the peril to be encountered by our townsmen, and sympathy for those who were parting with husbands, brothers, and sons, and perhaps forever. A large company of citizens with the band accompanied the soldiers in the train to Boston, and when arriving in Boston, marched in procession to Faneuil Hall, and from thence to their temporary quarters, at 71 Clinton Street. The company numbered eighty, rank and file, when they left the town for Boston, to which there were large additions made soon after.

MARTLAND'S BAND.—Roll of North Bridgewater brass band attached to the Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment of volunteers:

Band-Master.

William J. Martland.

Musicians.

Amasa S. Glover.	Fernando De Argome.
Thaddeus M. Packard.	Minot Thayer.
George E. Sturtevant.	Richard B. Atkinson.
Samuel C. Perkins.	William Dubois.
Isaac C. Dunham.	George A. Bates.
John B. Emmes.	James S. Bean.
Robert S. White.	Louis A. Beaumont.
Lucius H. Packard.	Charles M. Capin.
Henry C. Packard.	Nathaniel Carver.
Joseph Kennedy.	John Calnan.

This band was mustered out of the service May 8, 1862.

DEATHS, CASUALTIES, ETC.—An account of casualties, deaths, desertions, promotions, and changes in Company F, Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment:

Alexander Hiehorn, capt., com. June 26, 1861; disch. May 13, 1862.
 Alpheus K. Harmon, 1st lieutenant. June 26, 1861; capt. May 10, 1862; wounded at the battle of Bull Run; disch. July 8, 1864, at the expiration of three years' service; pro. acting provost-marshal of the Ninth Massachusetts District June, 1864.
 Hiram W. Copeland, 2d lieutenant, com. June 26, 1861; disch. Jan. 8, 1862.
 John S. Stoddard, enlisted in Co. F, of the 12th Regt. of Massachusetts Volunteers as a private, and immediately upon the organization of the company was appointed orderly sergeant; afterwards commissioned as second lieutenant May 13, 1862; promoted first lieutenant Dec. 14, 1862. He was in the battle of Gettysburg, and narrowly escaped being taken prisoner; but by his native shrewdness and strategy he succeeded in getting back to his regiment; immediately after this he received a captain's commission, dated July 23, 1862; he fell, while leading his men on in the very face of the enemy, pierced by a bullet, killing

- him instantly, May 10, 1864, in the battle of Spottsylvania, Va. In all the positions that he was called to fill he proved himself faithful, and an officer of unusual capacity, while his kind and considerate regard for his men, and his ever genial disposition, made him a favorite with all, wherever he was known, and the community in which he lived have reason to deplore the loss of one whose soldierly qualities commanded the respect of his associates. He was buried on the battle-field by his men.
- Nathan H. Crosby, 1st sergt., disch. for disability October, 1862.
- Charles L. Sproul, sergt., disch. by order from War Department Aug. 1, 1863; afterwards attached to the navy on the Mississippi River; com. as 1st lieut. in Co. C, 60th Massachusetts Regt. for one hundred days' service, July 11, 1864; capt. July 30.
- Francis P. Holmes, sergt., disch. Sept. 1, 1861; afterwards re-enlisted, and was killed.
- James B. Sampson, sergt., pro. 2d lieut. Sept. 18, 1862, and assigned to Co. A Jan. 13, 1863; taken prisoner at the battle of Gettysburg, Pa., and was an inmate of Libby Prison, Richmond, Va.; was a prisoner at Columbia, S. C., where he ran past the guard with two other fellow-captives, and reached the Union lines in safety, after a perilous journey of three hundred miles.
- James S. Tannett, corp., afterwards sergt., died July 13, 1862, of typhoid fever, at Manassas.
- Uriah Macey, corp., afterwards 1st sergt., taken prisoner at the battle of Gettysburg, and was a resident of Belle Isle Prison, Richmond, Va., till March, 1864; com. as capt. of Co. C, 60th Massachusetts Regt., in one hundred days' service, July 11th; pro. maj. July 30, 1864; must. out of service Nov. 30, 1864.
- Roswell C. Amsden, corp., disch. for disability Aug. 18, 1862.
- Galen Edson, corp., pro. sergt.; died Feb. 20, 1864, at Culpeper Court-House, Va. He was engaged in the battles at Cedar Mountain, Thoroughfare Gap, Second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Antietam, and Gettysburg. He was spoken of by his superior officers as a brave and faithful soldier, always at his post, never shrinking from duty or danger.
- Charles H. Reinhardt, corp., disch. for disability May 30, 1862.
- Frederic C. Packard, corp., trans. to Co. D Nov. 18, 1861, and disch. for disability Oct. 17, 1862.
- Walter D. Packard, corp., detached as hospital clerk at Frederick, Md., and hon. disch. July 8, 1864.
- Edwin T. Cowell, corp., trans. to the United States Signal Corps Jan. 13, 1864.
- James Sullivan, musician, disch. for disability Jan. 26, 1864.
- Joseph H. Lynch, wagoner, must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- James A. Allen, sergt., pro. to 1st lieut. July 23, 1863; sergt.-maj. Jan. 25, 1863.
- Luther E. Alden, corp., trans. to Invalid Corps March 15, 1862, and afterwards to Vet. Res. Corps; wounded at the battle of Bull Run.
- James F. Andrews, private, must. out at the expiration of service July 8, 1864; wounded at battle of Bull Run; released from Libby Prison, January, 1864.
- Leander B. Andrews, private, must. out at exp. of service, July 8, 1864.
- John Barry, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Antietam, September, 1862; must. out at the exp. of service, July 8, 1864.
- Henry Burns, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Antietam September, 1862; must. out at the exp. of service, July 8, 1864.
- Eli Bunker, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Antietam September, 1862; trans. to the Invalid Corps Jan. 16, 1864.
- Henry L. Bunkor, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Antietam, September, 1862; must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- William H. Bennie, private, disch. on account of wounds received at Bull Run Feb. 12, 1864.
- George W. Childs, corp., killed in action at the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 18, 1862.
- John D. Creighton, private, disch. on account of wounds received at Bull Run, June 11, 1863.
- Malcolm F. Dhalberg, private, severely wounded at the battle of Antietam; died Dec. 17, 1862.
- Thomas Doyle, private, severely wounded at the battle of Bull Run; disch. on account of wounds Dec. 15, 1862.
- Albert S. Dean, private, disch. for disability June 4, 1862.
- Aaron B. Dodge, private, disch. for disability Jan. 9, 1863.
- Joseph P. Davis, private, must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Sargeut Daniels, private, trans. to the U. S. Cav. Oct. 13, 1861.
- Seth Edson, private, disch. for disability Dec. 19, 1862.
- Aaron B. Frost, private, died in battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862.
- Joseph W. Freeman, private, disch. for disability Dec. 12, 1862.
- Henry W. Freeman, private, must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Robert F. Fuller, private, trans. to the Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 16, 1864.
- Andrew J. Frost, private, died at Fairfax Court-House Aug. 28, 1862.
- John C. Greeley, private, trans. to brigade headquarters; wounded at the battle of Bull Run; must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Warren A. Holmes, private, disch. for disability March 14, 1863.
- Linus P. Howard, private, killed at the second battle of Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.
- Rufus F. Hull, private, disch. for disability October, 1862.
- Albert P. Hovey, private, must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Nathaniel H. Hall, private, trans. to division headquarters; must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Christopher T. Harris, private, disch. for disability Sept. 26, 1862.
- Volney Howard, sergt., pro. to brig. com.-sergt. July 12, 1863.
- Clarence E. Hartwell, private, trans. to the U. S. Cav. Oct. 13, 1861.
- John S. Hamilton, private, died of smallpox near Washington, December, 1862.
- John Hallihan, private, disch. for disability June 11, 1863.
- Charles Howard (2d), private, wounded at the battle of Bull Run; disch. for disability on account of wounds Oct. 10, 1862.
- William W. Hayden, minor, private, disch. June 28, 1862.
- Andrew Jackson, sergt., slightly wounded in the eye at the battle of the Wilderness; must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Laban Jackson, private, wounded in the side at the battle of the Wilderness; must. out of service July 8, 1864.
- Thaddeus Keith, 1st sergt., killed at the battle of the Wilderness May 6, 1864. At the time of his death he was at the fore-front of the battle, where he gallantly and bravely resisted several onsets of the enemy. His frank and generous nature made him a favorite in the company.
- Benjamin J. Keith, private, disch. for disability Dec. 28, 1861.
- Dexter D. Keith, private, disch. for disability Jan. 29, 1863; afterwards re-enlisted; lost his right hand in the battle of Plymouth, N. C., April, 1864, and taken prisoner.
- Martin M. Keith, private, severely wounded at the battle of Bull Run.
- Carl A. Lindstedt, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg; must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Timothy O'Leary, private, trans. to New York Battery; must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Francis A. Manchester, private, slightly wounded at Antietam.

Francis N. Maroni, corp., killed in action at second battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862.

Henry E. Morley, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Antietam; must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Isaac S. Porter, private, trans. to the Vet. Res. Corps July 1, 1863.

James A. Packard, corp., detached for hospital duty; must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Samuel N. Packard, private, disch. for disability July 3, 1863.

Anthony P. Phillips, private, disch. March 4, 1863; trans. to the Seventy-third Ohio Regiment.

George A. Perkins, private, killed in the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862.

Gilman B. Parker, private, slightly wounded at the battle of Bull Run.

Henry C. Richardson, private, trans. to the 39th Mass. Regt. June 25, 1864.

William H. Rugg, corp., must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Herbert Phillips, private, must. out of service July 8, 1864.

William F. Robinson, private, must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Osgood King, private, trans. to the Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 18, 1863.

Henry Rogers, private, disch. for disability March 4, 1863.

Frederick S. Simonds, private, severely wounded at the battle of Bull Run; disch. for disability March 13, 1863.

Frank M. Stoddard, sergt., wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg; killed at the battle of Spotsylvania, Va., May 10, 1864.

Francis A. Sanford, private, killed at the second battle of Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.

George S. Smith, private, trans. to the Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 20, 1864.

Luther T. Snell, private, severely wounded at the battle of Antietam; disch. for disability March 3, 1863.

Harrison Stevens, private, severely wounded at the battle of Antietam; disch. for disability Dec. 25, 1862.

George F. Tinkham, private, severely wounded at the battle of Antietam; disch. on account of wounds March 4, 1863.

Ephraim Tinkham, private, wounded at Fredericksburg; trans. to the Vet. Res. Corps March 15, 1862.

Nathan M. Tripp, private, must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Joseph J. Vincent, private, pro. hosp. steward March 20, 1863.

George B. Walker, private, severely wounded at the second battle of Bull Run; died at Washington of wounds Sept. 24, 1862.

George F. Whitcomb, private, disch. for disability Sept. 1, 1861.

Thomas W. Wall, private, wounded at the battle of Antietam; disch. for disability November, 1862.

Lewis B. Wade, private, wounded at Fredericksburg; detached as provost-marshal; must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Herbert O. Moore, private; no report.

Webster Howard, private, detached to provost-guard; disch. April 29, 1863.

Jerome R. Hodge, private, killed in the battle of Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.

Franklin M. Godfrey, musician, disch. from the 12th Regt.; re-enl. in the 33d Regt.; must. out of service July 8, 1864.

Richard Packard, private, killed in the battle of Fredericksburg Dec. 13, 1862.

Samuel E. Chandler, private, pro. to q.m.-sergt. Jan. 25, 1863.

Freeman R. Ranney, private, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 17, 1863.

John Howard, private, disch. for disability Dec. 27, 1862.

William Woods, private, disch. for disability Jan. 11, 1863.

Lyman Allen, private, was drafted in North Bridgewater July 15, 1863, and was detailed to do guard duty at Long Island, where, by strict integrity of character, he won the confidence of all with whom he had to do. With others he was sent to the front and attached to the 12th Regt., and was killed in the first battle that he was engaged in, near Spotsylvania, May 10, 1864.

Rodney M. Leach, private, was drafted July 15, 1863; trans. to the 39th Mass. Regt. June 25, 1864; wounded.

Henry L. Winter, private, killed at the battle of the Wilderness May 5, 1864.

Names of those having deserted from Company F, Twelfth Regiment, after being regularly enlisted:

John L. Colter, private, Aug. 30, 1862, at the second battle of Bull Run.

Charles E. Reed, private, March 16, 1863, at Winchester, Va.

John E. Ford, private, July 22, 1861, from Fort Warren, Boston harbor.

Arthur J. O'Keefe, private, Aug. 30, 1862, at the second battle of Bull Run.

Lawrence Burke, private, July 1, 1862, at Manassas Junction.

NARRATIVE OF THE TWELFTH MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT.—
 "On the 23d of July, 1861, this regiment left Boston, and arrived at Sandy Hook, Md., on the 27th inst., and went into camp. They marched twenty-one miles to the Monocacy River, and encamped, remaining there several days; from that place they marched to Hyattstown, a distance of six miles; to Darnestown, eighteen miles; to Muddy Branch, seven miles; to Edward's Ferry, fifteen miles; and to Seneca Mills, by the way of Poolesville, fifteen miles. They went into winter quarters at Frederick, Md., having arrived through Darnestown and Barnestown, a distance of thirty miles. Upon the 27th of February, 1862, they broke camp at Frederick, and went into camp at Shenandoah City, Va., distant twenty-five miles from Frederick. March 1st they went to Charlestown, Va., by the way of Bolivar Heights, a distance of seven miles; they left Charlestown, March 10th, for Winchester, Va., by the way of Berryville, twenty-four miles; marched from Winchester to Snicker's Gap, by the way of Berryville, on the 21st of March, eighteen miles; March 23d went to Aldie, distant eighteen miles; they returned to Snicker's Gap on the 24th, from whence they marched to Goose Creek, distant eleven miles; on the 28th they left for Cub Run, and on the 29th marched to Bull Run, five miles. They were almost continually on the march from place to place through the Shenandoah Valley between the 1st of April and August 1st, seldom remaining long in one camp; August 9th they were engaged in the battle of Cedar Mountain, in which they lost Capt. N. B. Shurtleff, Jr., and ten men wounded; after this they made several marches and counter-marches, and on the 20th of August were engaged in the battle of the Rappahannock, in which they suffered no loss; from this to the 30th they were almost constantly on the march, and on the day last mentioned, in an engagement at Grovetown, near Bull Run, Col. Webster, Capt. Kimball, and ten men were killed, and one hundred and thirty-five men were wounded and missing. After this battle, the regiment retreated to Centreville, arriving there the next day; on the 14th of September, they marched to South Mountain, and were engaged in that battle, in which one man was killed and five wounded; from that place they went to Keedysville, and on the afternoon of the 16th, formed in line of battle and bivouacked for the night; they engaged the enemy at five o'clock in the morning, but were ordered to leave the field at nine A.M., and withdrew in good order. They went into this fight with three hundred and twenty-five men, and lost forty-seven killed and one hundred and sixty-six wounded, several of whom subsequently died of their wounds. On leaving the field, bringing off their regimental colors, four officers, and thirty-two men, they volunteered to support a battery; after which they rejoined their brigade, and participated in the pursuit of the flying enemy, who withdrew across the river.

"The regiment was at this time under the command of Capt. B. F. Cook, of Company E. On the 22d of September, Col. James L. Bates took command of this regiment. From this time until November 10th they were mostly on the march in Maryland and Virginia, and arrived at the Rappahannock Station November 8th, near which they encamped.

"At the battle of Fredericksburg, fought on the 13th of December, 1862, the Twelfth Regiment was in Gen. Gibbons' division. The division was formed in three brigade lines, and the third, commanded by Gen. Taylor, had the advance, the Thirteenth Massachusetts Regiment acting as skirmishers for the division. Col. Lyle's brigade, composed of the Twelfth Massachusetts, the Twenty-sixth New York, and the Nineteenth and One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Regiments of Pennsylvania Volunteers, formed the second line, this regiment having the right. The third line was Col. Root's brigade, the Sixteenth Maine Regiment having the right. The position of the Twelfth Regiment was taken at nine o'clock A.M.; the enemy were hidden from view by a thick wood. Our men remained lying down until one o'clock P.M. under a brisk fire of shot and shell, the skirmishers being hotly engaged, and the balls of the enemy passing over us. During these four hours there was but one man of this regiment injured. At one o'clock the signal to advance was given to the whole division and immediately obeyed. A heavy fire of musketry broke from the whole line of woods in our front. Gen. Taylor's brigade stood the fire some thirty minutes, when the brigade in which was this regiment was ordered to relieve them. As they advanced they became separated from the brigade by the retiring regiments of the Third Brigade, and continued to advance independently, taking a position and firing until their ammunition began to fail. Their brigade had fallen to the rear, and they were alone until the third line came forward; their solid ranks broke the right of this line, which opened to the right and left to get to the front, where it was quickly formed. The Twelfth Regiment followed the one in their front, the Sixteenth Maine, a short distance, and being out of ammunition, were about to join their brigade in the rear, when they were ordered by Gen. Taylor to prepare for a charge. The colonel thereupon gave the command to fix bayonets, and filed to the right of the brigade and charged with them into the woods in their front. About two hundred of the enemy rushed through our lines and gave themselves up as prisoners of war. We carried the position and remained some twenty minutes expecting support, but none was in sight and the men were constantly falling before the fatal fire of an unseen enemy. Captains Ripley, Reed, Packard, and Clark, and a hundred of the men had fallen. After consulting with the officers the colonel gave orders to about face, and they fell back slowly and reluctantly and in very good order, hearing their tattered banners with them to their brigade. After reaching the place, they were ordered to fall back to where they were supplied with ammunition and rations. They remained under arms all night, and early on the morning of the 14th they were ordered to another position, where they remained till the night of the 15th, when they recrossed the river to Falmouth with their corps. During the battle the Twelfth was under fire six hours, and their loss was chiefly sustained during the last two hours. During that time they had five officers wounded and fifteen men killed, eighty-seven wounded, and three missing, making an aggregate of one hundred and five out of two hundred and fifty-eight, with which they went into the fight."

On the 3d of May, 1861, the President called for forty-two thousand and thirty-four volunteers to serve for three years, unless sooner discharged, to be mustered into infantry and cavalry service; also for an increase of the regular army of twenty-two thousand seven hundred and fourteen, making nearly sixty-five thousand.

The number required of Massachusetts was three regiments; this number was afterwards increased to six, and again, by the persuasion of Col. Fletcher Webster, to seven regiments.

On the 17th of June, Massachusetts offered ten more regiments to the United States for three years, which were accepted. Under these calls regiments were filled and sent to camp or to the field to fill up old regiments, as they were needed.

The following lists will show the regiments in which the men from North Bridgewater have served:

First Massachusetts Cavalry.—List of Company I, First Regiment Massachusetts Cavalry, Capt. Lucius Richmond, under Col. Robert Williams:

Nathaniel Merchant, 1st lieutenant, discharged Dec. 26, 1861.

Freeman H. Shiverick, 1st lieutenant; pro. from 2d lieutenant.

Lewis Cabot, 2d lieutenant.

George B. Mussey, com.-sergeant; Francis A. Richardson, q.m.-sergeant.

Sergeants.

Robert S. Capen.	Joseph E. Cole.
William S. Huntington.	George N. Holmes.
George W. Leach.

Corporals.

Benjamin Knight, Jr.	Joshua Turnbull.
Joseph T. Stevens.	Roscoe Tucker.
Augustine A. Colburn.	John H. Walker.
Matthew W. Lincoln.	Samuel C. Lovell.

Buglers.

Henry T. Daggett.	John D. Darling.
-------------------	------------------

Farriers.

A. J. Bailey.	Alfred Worthington.
---------------	---------------------

Privates.

Richard Adams.	Richard Cunningham.
Giles R. Alexander.	Thomas F. C. Dean.
Martin Argan.	Joel D. Dudley.
Caleb Badger.	Edward Drury.
Andrew W. Bartlett.	George A. Edson.
Joseph Bisbee.	Elihu T. Ellis.
Francis A. Bliss.	Joseph C. Estes.
James Baynes.	William H. French.
Ezekiel N. Brown.	Ebenezer R. Faxon.
Virgil F. Blaisdell.	James Fitzpatrick.
Isaac W. Cox.	Tolman French.
Samuel A. Chandler.	Charles P. Farnsworth.

Edward T. George.
Isaac P. Gaynor.
Francis O. Harlow.
Henry P. Holmes.
Hiram F. Howe.
George W. Hunt.
James H. Howland.
Freeman P. Howland.
Daniel W. Jacobs.
John Jewett.
Edward T. Jordan.
Caleb H. Joslyn.
Andrew J. Keene.
Noah M. Knight.
Thomas D. Knight.
William H. S. Kimball.
John H. Leonard.
Ellis V. Lyon.
Edward A. Lunt.
Jeremiah Leavitt.
Daniel Linnehan.
Stephen C. Moulton.
Andrew Morse.
Wilson Orr.

Horace F. Pool.
Isaac R. Porter.
John T. Peterson.
Charles M. Packard.
Samuel Patterson.
Amandus Richardson.
Gilbert G. Richardson.
William W. Robinson.
George W. Reed.
John A. Studley.
Moody K. Stacey.
Joseph S. Stone.
William A. Smith.
John Sylvester.
Edward Tilden.
James H. Tucker.
William A. Vining.
Rufus H. Willis.
Henry M. Wheeler.
Joseph Ware.
Nathan C. Wood.
Frederick M. Wortman.
Eugene W. Whitehouse.

This company was recruited in North Bridgewater by Capt. Lucius Richmond. In 1853 a dragoon company was chartered in the town, and when the call was made for men, he enlisted as many of that company as he could, and offered their services to the government, and was accepted.

The company left North Bridgewater in the morning train for Camp Brigham, Readville, on the 11th of September, 1861. Before leaving the town the company partook of a collation at their armory, and then marched through the principal streets in the village to the music of drum and fife, escorted by a large concourse of citizens, with Engine Companies Nos. 2, 3, and 5. The streets were filled with an eager crowd to witness their departure and bid them farewell.

The regiment left the State in battalions. The First Battalion left on the 25th, the Second on the 27th, the Third on the 29th of December, 1861. The Third Battalion—consisting of Company I, of North Bridgewater, Capt. Lucius Richmond; Company K, Capt. James H. Case, of Middleboro'; Company L, Capt. William Gibbs, of Waltham; Company M, Capt. Marcus A. Moore, of Waltham—left Camp Brigham Dec. 29, 1861, by the way of the "Shore Route" to New Haven and New York.

Upon their arrival in New York they had a collation provided for them at Park Barracks, where they remained for fourteen days. Left New York for Port Royal in steamer "Marion," Jan. 11, 1862, where they arrived after a passage of seventy-two hours. Camped at Hilton Head till about the 1st of August. From thence removed to Beaufort, S. C.; was engaged in the battle of Pocotaligo, S. C., during which three men were slightly wounded in Company I. Afterwards remained in camp till April 1, 1863, when twenty-five men were detached for courier duty on Morris and Folly Islands. On the last of May the remainder of the company was ordered from Beaufort to Hilton Head, and again, on the 7th of June, fifteen were ordered to James Island, under Gen. Terry.

On the 7th of July, Capt. Richmond was placed in command of fourteen infantry companies, forming the picket-line from Hilton Head to Caribou Sound, near Fort Pulaski; removed to headquarters at Hilton Head, Jan. 4, 1864. Ordered to Jacksonville, Fla., February 5th, where they arrived on the 8th of February. Here they joined Capt. Elder's First United States Battery of four guns, and the Fortieth Massachusetts Regiment Mounted Infantry, under command of Col. Guy V. Henry. These companies were brigaded and placed under the command of Col. Henry, as acting brigadier-general.

These forces started on an expedition of one hundred and fifty miles into the country on the day of their arrival, and during the first night surprised and captured four picket-posts of five men each, and captured an artillery camp of eight guns, called Camp Finnegan, after which they proceeded on to Baldwin Station, on the Jacksonville and Tallahassee Railroad, where they arrived at sunrise, Feb. 9, 1864, and captured four cars loaded with ammunition, cannon, and forage, and also a quantity of turpentine, rosin, and cotton. On the 10th, arrived at Barber's Ford, on the South Fork of St. Mary's River. Here the forces engaged in fight about noon. During this engagement, Thomas F. C. Dean, of Stoughton, was killed. He was a member of Company I, from North Bridgewater. Four men were slightly wounded. The Union forces captured forty-five prisoners. The next night they bivouacked at Sandersonville, after driving Finnegan's forces from there, which was his headquarters at that time.

After destroying distilleries, corn, etc., started for Lake City, and arrived within one and a half miles of that place, when they engaged Gen. Finnegan's force, in sight of the city. After a severe fight of about two hours, ammunition becoming short, and having no supply-train, they fell back to Barber's Ford, by order of Gen. Seymour.

On the 15th of February, went to Callihau Station, on the Gainesville and Fernandina Railroad. At St. Mary's River, destroyed three ferries, and returned to Barber's Ford on the 19th of February. On the following day, Gen. Seymour engaged the rebels at Olustee with five thousand men, the enemy having thirteen thousand men. After a severe fight, both sides fell back. On their retreat, the Union forces destroyed Baldwin village. Fought at Camp Finnegan February 23d, Mile Run, February 25th.

On the 30th of March the battalion was ordered to Pilatka, Fla., where they remained fourteen days. While there they lost four men while on picket duty,—Matthew Lincoln, of Abington; H. F. Poole, of Easton; John Sylvester, of East Bridgewater; Roscoe Tucker,—who were carried to Andersonville Prison; the last three have since died. On the 14th of March the battalion evacuated Pilatka. At this time, part of the company having re-enlisted and gone on a furlough to the North, Capt. Richmond was ordered to St. Augustine, Fla., with the remainder of the company; stopped there three days; from thence removed to Jacksonville, Fla. On the 22d of April was ordered to Virginia; embarked for Hilton Head, and arrived there next day. May 1st, started for Yorktown, Va.; arrived May 3d; joined Gen. Gillmore, May 8th, at Bermuda Hundred. The company was engaged in fights on the 8th and 9th of May at Swift Creek; was engaged in front of Fort Darling from the 11th to the 16th of May, and fell back to Bermuda Hundred the same day. On the 9th of June was engaged in front of Petersburg, Va.; on the 28th of September was in front of Richmond, and from that time to the middle of November was in several fights. About the 15th of November, was ordered to the headquarters of the Army of the James, under Gen. Butler, and was employed on escort and courier duty. Capt. Richmond was honorably discharged Dec. 17, 1864, after thirty-nine months' service, in which he proved himself a brave and good officer. In the advance from Jacksonville to Lake City it was Capt. Richmond's company that led the advance, capturing and first engaging the forces of the enemy in front, and was in almost every instance successful.

In 1864 this company was consolidated into the Fourth Massachusetts Cavalry, so that the history of those from North Bridgewater, or belonging to Company I, may be found in that regiment.

List of men from North Bridgewater in Company K, First Massachusetts Cavalry, Capt. James H. Case, of Bridgewater:

Edmund Crockett.	Austin H. Snow.
Joseph Dam.	Hiram Thayer.
Waldo Field.	William Welsh.
John Simonda.

DEATHS, CASUALTIES, ETC.—List of changes, casualties, deaths, etc., that have occurred in Company I, of the First Massachusetts Cavalry, under Capt. Lucius Richmond:

Freeman H. Shiverick, 1st lieut., resigned July 28, 1862.
 Lewis Cabot, 2d lieut., trans. to the 4th Mass. Cav.
 B. Knight, Jr., corp., disch. for disability at Beaufort, May 12, 1863. He was engaged in the battle of Pocotaligo, Oct. 22, 1862.
 George N. Holmes, sergt., disch. for disability April 23, 1864.
 Joseph T. Stevens, corp., died at Hilton Head, March 31, 1862.
 A. J. Keene, private, disch. for disability at Beaufort, April 22, 1863.
 Joshua Turnbull, corp., disch. for disability Jan. 19, 1863.
 A. W. Bartlett, private, died at Beaufort, from wounds received at Barber's Ford, Fla., Feb. 10, 1864.
 Joseph C. Stone, private, disch. for disability at Bedloe's Island, New York Harbor, Aug. 29, 1862.
 Henry T. Daggett, bugler, pro. to chief bugler of the regiment May 7, 1864.
 Richard Adams, private, disch. for disability April 20, 1862.
 Virgil S. Blaisdell, private, disch. for disability April 8, 1864.
 Caleb Badger, private, disch. for disability July 9, 1863, at Beaufort, S. C.
 Joseph B. Bisbee, private, died July 14, 1862; was in action at Pocotaligo.
 Thomas F. C. Dean, private, killed at Barber's Ford Feb. 12, 1864. He was in action on James and Morris Islands during the siege of Fort Wagner and Pocotaligo, S. C.
 Tolman French, private, disch. for disability May 4, 1864.
 James Fitzpatrick, private, trans. to the Invalid Corps July 9, 1863.
 Eben R. Faxon, private, disch. for disability at Beaufort April 22, 1863.
 James H. Howland, private, disch. for disability at Hilton Head April 8, 1862.
 John Jewett, private, trans. to Co. K Dec. 23, 1861.
 Jeremiah Leavitt, private, pro. to hospital steward 1862.
 Edward A. Lunt, disch. for disability at Beaufort July 9, 1863.
 George B. Mussey, com.-sergt., trans. to the non-com. staff April 9, 1862; disch. Dec. 10, 1862.
 Francis A. Richardson, q.m.-sergt., disch. for disability at Hilton Head December, 1863.
 Gilbert R. Richardson, private, disch. Feb. 7, 1862.
 W. A. Smith, private, disch. for disability at Hilton Head April 8, 1862.
 Frederic M. Wortman, private, fell overboard from steamer "Rebecca Clyde," in Port Royal harbor, Feb. 6, 1864, in action at Pocotaligo.
 Hiram M. Wheeler, private, disch. for disability at Boston, November, 1862.
 R. S. Capen, private, pro. to sergt.-maj. in the 4th Mass. Cav.
 S. C. Lovell, corp., trans. to Co. K; pro. to ord.-sergt. Aug. 23, 1864.
 F. A. Bliss, corp., trans. to Co. F; pro. to q.m.-sergt. Aug. 12, 1864.
 J. E. Cole, private, trans. to the non-com. staff as saddler's sergt. Sept. 10, 1864.
 John H. Walker, corp., pro. to q.m.-sergt.; disch. at the exp. of service, Sept. 24, 1864.
 Augustine A. Colburn, corp., pro. to com.-sergt.; disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 J. H. Leonard, corp., hon. disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 Isaac Cox, private, disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 William S. Huntington, sergt., disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 George N. Hunt, sergt., disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 F. O. Harlow, sergt., disch. Sept. 24, 1864.

D. W. Jacobs, sergt., disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 John T. Peterson, sergt.; disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 J. R. Porter, sergt., disch. Sept. 24, 1864.
 J. D. Darling, bugler, pro. to the non-com. staff Sept. 25, 1864.
 H. P. Holmes, private, disch. Oct. 8, 1864.
 George S. Richards, private, disch. Oct. 14, 1864.
 H. F. Howard, private, disch. Oct. 30, 1864.
 A. J. Bailey, farrier, disch. Oct. 30, 1864.
 E. W. Whitehouse, private, disch. Nov. 13, 1864.
 John Sylvester, private, died at Andersonville December, 1864.
 Roscoe Tucker, private, died at Florence, S. C., Jan. 29, 1865.
 Horace F. Poole, private, died on the passage home from Florence, where he had been confined as a prisoner of war, March 9, 1865.
 Matthew W. Lincoln, private, was a prisoner at Florence; exchanged Aug. 9, 1865.
 R. H. Willis, private, pro. to 2d lieutenant, January, 1865.
 George W. Leach, private, pro. January, 1865.
 H. S. Kimball, private, pro. to 2d lieutenant in colored infantry December, 1864.
 Joel D. Dudley, corp., killed at High Bridge, Va., April 6, 1865.
 Samuel Patterson, private, captured in front of Jacksonville March 16, 1864.
 Ellis V. Lyon, private, died Sept. 24, 1864; funeral Oct. 2, 1864.

First Massachusetts Regiment :

Co. E, Capt. Clark B. Baldwin, John Donahue.

List of men in Capt. Francis H. Tucker's company, Company H, of the Second Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, under command of Col. George H. Gordon, for three years' service, as mustered May 25, 1861, from North Bridgewater :

James P. Bell.	Patrick Keenan.
John Cullen.	Patrick Murray.
Richard Casey.	Linus B. Thomas.
Benjamin N. Gardner.	Jeremiah Merea.
Charles M. Hall.	Hugh O. Donald.
Maurice Keating.

List of men in Capt. Ward L. Foster's company, Company G, of the Seventh Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, under the command of Col. Darius N. Couch, as mustered into three years' service June 11, 1861, from North Bridgewater :

Charles W. George, corp.	Albert D. Hunt.
James S. Newman, corp.	Edward B. Leach.
George L. Horr.	Francis S. Packard.
Samuel F. Howard.	Joseph Reynolds, Jr.
Alonzo S. Hamilton.	Horace M. Clark.
Russell S. Higgins.	Jacob Rotch.
Oliver Horton.	Alfred H. Tilden.
Morgan Jones.	David Thompson, Jr.
John B. Dean.	John Griffin.

We also find the following names in the same regiment as follows :

Co. A, Capt. David H. Dyer, John B. Cobb.
 Co. K, Capt. Franklin P. Horlow, Walter C. Churchill.
 Co. E, Capt. Horace F. Fox, William Douglas.

List of men in Company K, Capt. George W. Dut-ton's company, of the Ninth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, Col. Thomas Cass, as mustered into three years' service June 15, 1861, from North Bridgewater :

John Lanagan.	John Sweeney.
William Linnehan.	John Scannell.
David Maguire.	Dennis Wheelan.
William Mitchell.	James Webb.
Michael Connell.	Roger Cunningham.
Charles O. Collins.	William Farrell.
Michael Clark.	James Gilbridge.
Patrick Cunningham.	James Harris.

Also in Company B, Capt. Christopher Plunkett, June 15, 1861 :

Thomas Hogan.	Michael Kelly.
James Riley.	John Russell.
John Horan.	Patrick Sheridan.

Co. E, Capt. John R. Teague, Michael Horan.
 Co. I, Capt. James E. McCafferty, Jr., Owen Sweeney.

A list of men from North Bridgewater in the Eleventh Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers for three years, as mustered June 12, 1861 :

Co. B, Capt. John H. Davis, Thomas Donahue, William Walsh.
 Co. C, Capt. Porter D. Tripp, George W. Wood.
 Co. E, Capt. James R. Bigelow, Dennis Downey, Miletus Luther, Patrick O'Brien, Perley A. Doyle.

In the Thirteenth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, Company K, Capt. William P. Blackmer, is Charles Drayton, must. June 26, 1861.

The muster-rolls of the Eighteenth Massachusetts Volunteers, Col. James Barnes, contain the following names, mustered in July and August, 1861 :

Co. A, Capt. Lewis N. Tucker, James Mathison.
 Co. B, Capt. George C. Ruby, William Flannagan.
 Co. E, Capt. Thomas Weston, Samuel Kimball, Ferdinand Robinson, David Sanford, Thomas W. Childs, Howard P. Keith.
 Co. F, Capt. Henry Onion, Thomas P. Leyden.
 Co. H, Capt. Joseph W. Collingwood, James F. Willis.
 Co. I, Capt. Frederic D. Forrest, Ira Belcher.

Twentieth Regiment, Col. W. Raymond Lee :

Co. H, Capt. George M. Maey, George H. Howard.
 Co. I, Capt. A. W. Beckwith, James Barney.

Twenty-second Regiment, under command of Col. Henry Wilson and Col. Jesse Gove :

Co. D, Capt. John F. Duoning, Francis E. Allen, Edward Lathrop.

Twenty-third Regiment, Col. John Kurtz :

Co. K, Capt. Carlos A. Hart, Moses Paron.

Twenty-fourth Regiment, Col. Thomas G. Stevenson :

Co. G, Capt. Robert F. Clark, George A. Howard, Justin Howard, Paul W. Jackson.
 Co. F, Capt. George F. Austin, Heman E. Packard.

List of men in the Twenty-eighth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers :

- Co. B, Capt. Lawrence P. Barrett, Philip Donahue.
 Co. C, Capt. John Brennan, Timothy Connolly, Michael Casey, Edward Dyer, John Doherty, Edward Magrane, Thomas Maloney, Thomas Sullivan, Uriah Phillips, John Flaunagan.
 Co. I, Capt. G. F. McDonald, Timothy Regan, Hugh Riley, John Canara.

Twenty-ninth Massachusetts Regiment, under command of Col. E. W. Peirce, three years' service, 1861 :

- Co. B, Capt. Israel N. Wilson, Anthony La Rochelle.
 Co. C, Capt. Lebbeus Leach, Edward F. Drohan, David W. Harden, John S. Howard, William Keith.
 Co. G, Capt. Charles D. Richardson, George W. Pope.

Thirtieth Regiment, Col. N. A. M. Dudley :

- Co. D, Capt. Marsh A. Ferris, D. M. Rochester.

Thirty-second Regiment, Col. Francis J. Parker :

- Co. B, Capt. George L. Prescott, Charles Augustus.
 Co. G, Capt. Charles Bowers, Julius R. Churchill.
 Co. H, Capt. Henry W. Moulton, Sylvester Russell, Daniel Shannahan.

Again the President, at the request of the various Governors of the loyal States, issued a proclamation July 1, 1862, calling for three hundred thousand more volunteers to serve for three years, or during the war. The number of regiments sent from the State up to this date was twenty-seven, besides thirteen unattached companies, making in all thirty-one thousand three hundred and seventy-seven men.

The quota for Massachusetts was fifteen thousand ; the number called for from North Bridgewater was fifty-two. In response to the above call, a legal meeting of the town was held at the new church vestry July 19, 1862, at which it was "voted to borrow five thousand two hundred dollars for a term of years ; and to pay one hundred dollars each to any person that should volunteer into the service of the United States, under the late call of the President."

After remarks by several gentlemen present, the following resolutions were offered by D. C. Cowell, and adopted :

"Resolved, That earth has never seen a holier war than that now waged by the Government of the United States to put down rebellion ; and that we should be derelict and criminal in the highest degree, if we failed to make every needful sacrifice, in order to transmit to our posterity the glorious heritage of popular government.

"Resolved, That we hail with satisfaction the recent legislation in Congress, as an evidence on the part of the government that treason and rebellion shall be promptly and effectually crushed.

"Resolved, That there shall be paid from the town treasury to each volunteer from this town, who shall enlist on or before the 30th inst., until our quota is complete, the sum of one hundred dollars.

"Resolved, That while the citizens of this town will endeavor to do, and will do, their duty, and their whole duty, they have a right to expect that those in authority, whether in Congress, the cabinet, or the field, will pursue a vigorous policy, and make war in earnest, until the last rebel has laid down his arms, and acknowledge paramount allegiance to the United States.

"Resolved, That justice, which is the only sound policy and the best economy, demands that the government should call upon every loyal person without distinction of complexion or race, within the rebel States, to rally around the flag of the Union, and should give freedom and protection to all who obey the call, and that the neglect in the future so to do will be a stupendous blunder, unparalleled in the history of the world."

Immediately after the above meeting, the business of recruiting and filling the town's quota was brisk, resulting in the following persons enlisting for the term of three years, or during the war.

In the Thirty-third Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers for three years' service, Col. Albert C. Maggi commander, we find,—

Enlisted in July and August, 1862.

- Co. B, Capt. James Brown, Andrew Anderson, Alexander Turner.
 Co. H, Capt. Edward B. Blasland, Thomas Drohan, Charles O. Flannagan, Arthur McIntee, Peter Donahue, Patrick McEster.
 Co. I, Capt. Elisha Doane, Caleb Athearn, Albert B. Dunbar, Matthew Grady, Gustavus Arfridson, Daniel Feeley, Oliver M. Holmberg, Joseph Beals, John Finnegan, John Maguire, Charles Strommet.
 Co. M, Capt. B. Frank Rogers, William O'Brien, John H. T. Sanford, John Mason, Harrison L. Higgins, Charles F. Swanstrom.

List of men in the Thirty-fifth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers for three years' service, Col. Edward A. Wild commander :

Enlisted in July and August, 1862.

- Co. A, Capt. Stephen H. Andrews, Thomas P. Barnfield, Albert G. Drake, Marcus E. Packard, Alden Cushing, Charles N. Packard, Edwin L. Snow, Dudley Wade, Henry C. Ames.
 Co. C, Capt. Tracy P. Cheever, Preston Holbrook, Davis B. Reynolds, William P. Roberts, Elmer W. Holmes, Heman F. Stranger, John Kendall, James Ide, Horatio D. Snow, Edward F. Snow, George L. Robinson, Elisha A. Cushing, Henry A. Willis, William Deane.

List of men in Company K, Thirty-eighth Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, Col. Timothy Ingraham :

Capt. James H. Slade.

- |                        |                        |
|------------------------|------------------------|
| George A. Jenks.       | John Kendall.          |
| Edmund A. Landers.     | William A. W. Averill. |
| Gibbon Sharp, Jr.      | Thomas R. Broadhurst.  |
| Samuel H. Sanford, Jr. |                        |

Thirty-ninth Massachusetts Regiment, Col. P. Stearns Davis :

- Co. A, Capt. George S. Nelson, Sylvanus E. Packard, George W. Cole, Samuel Dean.

Co. F, Capt. Joseph J. Cooper, Fernando C. Skinner.
Co. H, Capt. Charles N. Hunt, Francis J. Childs, Ephraim F. Howard.

List of men in Company A, Capt. James T. Lurvey, Fortieth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, Col. Burr Porter:

Nelson Cushman.	John L. Mason.
John D. Sanford.	Lucius S. Perkins.
A. G. Tinkham.	Albert W. Hayden.

The following men enlisted in the Ninth Massachusetts Light Battery in July and August, 1862, for three years' service, under the command of Capt. Achille De Vecchi:

David Brett.	Henry Packard.
Bartlett C. Edson.	Eleazer Cole.
Henry Fenn.	H. A. Packard.
Richard Holland.	Reuben L. Willis.
John H. Kelley.	Austin Packard.
Henry F. Nash.

List of men in Tenth Massachusetts Battery, under the command of Capt. J. Henry Sleeper, for three years' service, mustered Sept. 9, 1862:

John P. Aphthorp.	Charles N. Packard.
Franklin Ward.

In the early part of the year 1862, permission was given to raise a company of heavy artillery for garrison duty at Fort Warren, Boston harbor. This company was raised by Stephen Cabot, of Boston.

For this service we find the name of John Geary, must. March 6, 1862.

Again in August came a call for three hundred thousand more troops, as follows:

"Ordered, First, that a draft of three hundred thousand militia be immediately called into the service of the United States, to serve nine months, unless sooner discharged.

"Ordered, Second, that if any State shall not, by the 15th of August, furnish its quota of the additional three hundred thousand authorized by law, the deficiency of volunteers for that State shall be made up by a special draft from the militia.

"EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War."

The quota for Massachusetts, under this call, was nineteen thousand and eighty. In response to this call the people were, as in the previous calls, "wide awake." Early on Thursday morning, Aug. 21, 1862, a large handbill was circulated, with the following announcement: "War meeting! Grand rally! Volunteering vs. drafting! Rally to your country's call!" etc. The meeting which this bill called together was held on the afternoon of Thursday, the 21st, at two o'clock, in the new church vestry. Patriotic speeches were made by Hon. B. W. Harris, of East Bridgewater, J. C. Cluer, of Boston, and others of the town, the sentiment of the meeting being decidedly in favor of crushing the Rebellion.

This meeting closed at five o'clock P.M., to give way for a legal town-meeting to be held in the same place. At the close of this meeting, which had been adjourned to the Saturday following, after remarks by several persons present, the following resolutions were offered by David L. Cowell, which were adopted by the meeting:

"Resolved, That the citizens of North Bridgewater, in furnishing their quota of the three hundred thousand volunteers for three years, and the additional quota for nine months, have neither exhausted their means nor their patriotism, but that they are ready to respond to another call, and still another, if necessary, to put down treason and rebellion.

"Resolved, That the present rebellion is an insurrection of political slaveholders against republican institutions, and therefore the power of slavery should henceforth be turned to the use of freedom; that the slaves of rebels should be liberated, and as many of them as are willing armed; and, while we have unwavering confidence in the honesty and patriotism of the President, we earnestly implore him to have faith in the people, and go ahead.

"Resolved, That, without detracting from the merit of those who have gone before, the alacrity with which our young men come forward in response to the call for nine months' men eminently entitles them, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, to be called volunteers."

The number that had enlisted up to the close of the meeting was seventy, each of whom generously offered to relinquish fifty dollars of their bounty of one hundred and fifty dollars, as voted by the town to be paid to each volunteer.

From Aug. 25 to Dec. 9, 1862, the following persons enlisted in the nine months' service, as appears on the rolls of the various companies from North Bridgewater:

List of men in Company K, from North Bridgewater, in the Third Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, for nine months' service, under Col. Silas P. Richmond, from Sept. 23, 1862:

Samuel Bates, capt.	James H. Packard.
Augustus Davenport.	Shepard B. Willbur.
N. M. Davenport, Jr.	Nathan F. Packard.
Luther M. Morse.	George Phelan.
Albert L. Marshall.	Henry L. Manly.
Isaac P. Osborne.	Elisha Reynolds.

The above regiment served in the commencement of the war as three months' volunteers from the old militia organization. After their term of service at Fortress Monroe had expired it returned to its old place in the militia of Massachusetts. When the call was made for a draft of nine months' men, the Third Regiment, Col. Silas P. Richmond, volunteered at once, and was sent to Camp Joe Hooker, at Lakeville, where it filled up its ranks to the full requirement. The above company embarked on board the steamers "Merrimac" and "Mississippi," at Boston,

Oct. 22, 1862, and sailed for Beaufort, N. C., the same evening.<sup>1</sup>

List of men in Company E, Fourth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, Col. Henry Walker, for nine months' service, from Sept. 26, 1862:

Lewis Soule, capt.	Albert S. Peck.
Henry F. Dearborn.	Matthew T. Packard.

This regiment went into Camp Joe Hooker, at Lakeville; afterwards in service, under Gen. Banks, at New Orleans.

List of men in Company C, Forty-second Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, under Col. Isaac S. Burrill, for nine months' service, mustered in October, 1862:

Orville W. Leonard, capt.	Albert Thompson.
Frederick C. Blanchard.	Thomas M. Farrell.
Augustus Bowley.	Hiram A. Freeman.
Christopher Corcoran.	Volney H. Dunbar.
Swan P. Colberg.	Cornelius Duffy.
Josiah Edson.	Frank Langren.
Leroy S. Hamilton.	Hugh McIntire.
James Kenyon.	Robert Owens.
David Murphy.	George F. Parker.
William McGrane.	Michael Reardon.
Patrick McGrane.	Thomas Kelly.
Andrew P. Olson.	James Corcoran.
Willard F. Packard.

This regiment was recruited at Camp Meigs, Readville, the nucleus of which was the Second Regiment, afterwards changed to the Forty-second. It was ordered to Gen. Banks' department, in the Gulf, and was on duty at New Orleans, Galveston, and Carrollton, La.

List of men in Company K, Forty-third Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, under Col. Charles L. Holbrook, mustered Sept. 16, 1862, for nine months' service:

J. Emory Rounds, capt.	Daniel B. Lovell.
Cyrus F. Copeland.	George H. Fullerton.
Aaron S. Harlow.	Sherman T. Merea.
John S. Perry.	Charles Tillson.
Martin V. B. Dunham.

This regiment was recruited through the influence of the Second Battalion, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, First Brigade, First Division, otherwise known as the "Tiger Regiment;" was in camp at Readville; left camp, and embarked on board transport, Oct. 24, 1862, and sailed for Newberne, N. C., where it was in service in Gen. Foster's division.

In the Forty-fourth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, Col. Francis L. Lee, nine months' service:

Co. D, Capt. Henry D. Sullivan, Howard Davis.

This regiment, otherwise known as the "New England Guard Regiment," encamped at Camp Meigs, Readville, embarked on board steamer "Merrimac," for Newberne, N. C., Oct. 22, 1863.

List of men in the Forty-fifth Regiment of Volunteers, for nine months' service, under Col. Charles R. Codman, Company G, Capt. Joseph Murdock:

George E. Allen.	Warren Shaw.
William S. Brett.	George Thacher.
Sydney Chandler.	Marcus H. Reynolds.
Andrew C. Gibbs.	Charles E. Tribou.
Augustus B. Loring.	William H. Vose.
Richard Field.	Charles A. Crocker.
Robert S. Maguire.	William E. Bryant.
Moses A. Packard.	Davis H. Packard.

This regiment was well known as the "Cadet Regiment," from the fact that many of the officers belong to that organization; embarked on board steamer for Newberne, N. C., Oct. 24, 1862, where it joined Gen. Foster's forces. They were engaged in the battles of Whitehall and Kinston.

In the Forty-eighth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, for nine months' service, Col. Eben F. Stone, Company K, Capt. J. S. Todd, we find,—

Charles B. Shaw, must. Dec. 9, 1862.

This regiment was in the Department of the Gulf.

This completes the lists of those who were from North Bridgewater in the nine months' service. The foregoing exhibits all the regular enlistments in the various companies in Massachusetts regiments. We next find the scattering enlistments as follows:

Men in the Rhode Island contingent, belonging in North Bridgewater, previous to January, 1863:

George B. Bunker, Albert Mathison, Thomas O. Mera, Patrick Casey, in the Third Regiment.
John W. Curtis, in the Fourth Regiment.

Ninth Rhode Island Battery:

Benjamin Packard.	Edmund Reynolds.
Franklin Reynolds.	Eben Luther.
John Pike.	William H. Wade.

List of men in the New York contingent, from North Bridgewater, previous to January, 1863:

Terrance Connell, Co. K, 4th Regt.
William Fitzgerald, Sickles' brigade.
Rufus E. Matthews, mounted rifles.
Philip McDonald, 99th Regt.
Hugh Riley, 99th Regt., Co. K.

The following men from North Bridgewater were in the naval service previous to 1863:

William W. Packard, enl. Feb. 10, 1861 (3 years), on "Kingfisher;" pro. to capt. steward.
Charles H. Packard, enl. Sept. 12, 1862 (1 year), on "Dacotah;" disch. Sept. 12, 1863.
Walter L. French, enl. Aug. 11, 1862 (1 year), on "Hunchback;" disch. Aug. 15, 1863.

<sup>1</sup> See Col. Richmond's "Report" for further items concerning their service.

George F. Packard, enl. Aug. 12, 1862 (1 year), on "Daylight;"
 disch. June 6, 1863.
 Samuel J. Wade, enl. Aug. 11, 1862 (1 year), on "Miami;"
 disch. Sept. 6, 1863.
 Lorenzo J. Dam, enl. Aug. 11, 1862 (1 year), on "Miami;"
 disch. Sept. 6, 1863.
 Elijah Smith, enl. Aug. 11, 1862 (1 year), on "Colorado;"
 disch. September, 1863.
 S. S. Churchill, enl. Aug. 12, 1862 (1 year), on "Housatonic;"
 disch. Sept. 17, 1863.

Names of persons drafted in North Bridgewater,
 Sub-District No. 27, July, 1863 :

Rufus E. Howard.	Leonard C. Stetson.
Rufus Copeland.	Francis Brett.
Ellison Hawes.	Henry M. Jackson.
Charles H. Cary.	Charles H. Phillips.
Levi Leach.	Perez McFarland.
John D. Thayer.	Nathaniel B. Blackstone.
Michael McSweeney.	John W. Hayward.
Josiah E. Packard.	Samuel A. Holbrook.
Henry Cross.	James McGuire.
Lorenzo D. Bates.	Sylvanus C. Stetson.

(The above persons paid a commutation fee of three hundred dollars each.)

Simeon W. Edson.	George M. Nash.
George W. Andrews.	Lyman Allen.
William H. Searle.	Rodney M. Leach.
Luther H. Hollis.

(The last named were sent to rendezvous.)

Warren A. Howard.	Simeon D. Carr.
John P. Bertman.	Lysander F. Gurney.
Joseph Bullard.	Francis L. Wilder.
George E. Sturtevant.	Pelham Jones.
Zina Hayward (2d).	Lyman E. Tribou.
Edwin Howard.

(Each furnished substitutes.)

A proclamation was issued Oct. 17, 1863, calling for three hundred thousand more soldiers for three years or during the war, and "in all places where the quotas are not filled on or before Jan. 5, 1864, on that day a draft will be enforced." In the enlistments under this call, they were for one, two, or three years, and in any company that was not full, and hailing from the same State that the recruit resided in.

In the First Regiment of Heavy Artillery from Massachusetts, mustered in November and December, 1863, for three years, are the following :

David W. Graves.	Daniel B. Eames.
Luther Shepardson.	John E. Hollis.
Frank E. Drake.	Charles E. Jernegan.

List of persons from North Bridgewater in the Second Heavy Artillery, mustered into three years' service in August, October, and December, 1863 :

William E. Bryant.	John M. Wentworth.
William Kerrigan.	George T. Whitcomb.
Christopher Brannagan.	James Coffee.
William Murphy.	Joseph Hurley.
Jonathan W. Shaw.	Dexter D. Keith.
Philip Saxton.	Sumner A. Smith.

Veteran Reserve Corps :

Nehemiah C. Ivers, three years; must. Oct. 21, 1863.
 Patrick Powers, one year; must. Nov. 11, 1863.
 Morris Glancy, three years; must. Nov. 24, 1863.

Fifty-sixth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers :

Co. A, Capt. George A. Fletcher, Warren S. Gurney, must. for three years, Dec. 26, 1863.
 Co. G, Samuel T. Packard, must. Jan. 19, 1864.

Second Massachusetts Cavalry, three years' service:

Fisher Copeland, must. Dec. 29, 1863.
 George H. Matthews, must. Jan. 1, 1864.
 Patrick Donabue, must. Oct. 30, 1863.

March 14, 1864, an order was given to the various provost-marshals throughout the State, by order of President Lincoln, to draft two hundred thousand men as a reserve force, in addition to the five hundred thousand called for in February, 1864, to be used in the army, navy, and marine corps of the United States.

The different towns were allowed till April 15th to fill their quota under this call by volunteering.

Under this call the following persons were in service in the Veteran Reserve Corps of the United States :

Patrick Powers.	James Fadden.
Daniel Delaney.	Turner Torrey.
Simeon Dowling.	Daniel Donabue.
Caleb Badger.	Patrick Lynch.
Edward Creedan.	Edward P. Packard.
Thomas Havy.	Cyrus L. Williams.
Elbridge L. Leach.

First Brigade, First Division, Twentieth Corps,
 United States troops :

Orlando Dow.	William Kearney.
Alden B. Winns.	Otis H. Hamilton.
John L. Hibbard.	George H. Stearns.
A. M. Robinson.	Nathaniel McKinsley.
George A. Stone.

The following persons were obtained to fill up the town's quota under call of March 14, 1864 :

Three Years' Recruits obtained at Washington.

James Wilson, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 James Rexss, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Gerthref Wentgel, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Charles Hammond, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Henry A. Levick, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Lyman A. Root, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 William Hunt, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 George J. Miller, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 George Jordan, May 3, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 James R. Brown, May 3, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Michael F. Kelley, May 3, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 James D. Cole, May 3, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Baptist Sawyer, May 3, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 Adolphus Richards, May 2, 1864, 1st Regt., Reserve Corps.
 James S. Badger, April 30, 1864, 1st Battery.
 Nathaniel Colman, May 1, 1864, 22d Regt., Co. H.

Robert Eckhart, May 1, 1864, 22d Regt., Co. H.
 Henry Hughes, May 1, 1864, 22d Regt., Co. H.
 Michael Ryan, May 1, 1864, 22d Regt., Co. H.
 Andrew J. Covell, May 3, 1864, 24th Regt., Co. B.
 Nicholas Paul, May 3, 1864, 24th Regt., Co. B.
 Michael Stanton, May 3, 1864, 24th Regt., Co. B.
 Christian Alson, May 3, 1864, 24th Regt., Co. B.
 John F. Cunningham, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 101st Co.
 David Martin, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 101st Co.
 Michael Fony, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 123d Co.
 Charles Gall, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 123d Co.
 Charles R. Goodwin, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 123d Co.
 James Miller, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 123d Co.
 David P. Shaw, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 123d Co.
 Theodore Sheitz, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 123d Co.
 John Lyons, May 3, 1864, 2d Batt., 39th Co., V. R. S.
 Thomas Hillman, May 3, 1864, 1st Batt., 205th Co., V. R. S.
 John Darling, May 3, 1864, 1st Batt., 205th Co., V. R. S.
 Albert Marquis, May 3, 1864, 1st Batt., 205th Co., V. R. S.
 James H. Grew, May 3, 1864, 1st Batt., 205th Co., V. R. S.
 Lewis Artemas, May 3, 1864, 1st Batt., 205th Co., V. R. S.
 David White, May 3, 1864, 1st Batt., 205th Co., V. R. S.
 Nathaniel Brown, May 6, 1864.
 Jacob Greely.

One Hundred Days' Men.—Again in July, 1864, the enemy having marched to within a few miles of the capital, and the Governors of several States feeling desirous to aid in the defense of the same, at their earnest solicitation, they were permitted to call for troops to serve for one hundred days. An order was issued by Gen. William Schouler, from the headquarters at Boston, July 8, 1864, calling for four thousand men to do garrison duty in the forts in and around Washington, to be raised immediately. In response to the above call, forty-two companies were in camp at Readville in less than ten days after the order was issued. Again did North Bridgewater come up nobly to the work of filling up the ranks. A company of a hundred and one, rank and file, was recruited, and left the town under the command of Capt. Uriah Macoy, July 13, 1864. The company left town in the morning train of cars for Readville. A large concourse of the friends of the company assembled at the depot to witness their departure, and to bestow their parting good wishes.

The following is a list of the company, which was mustered in July 14, 1864, and mustered out Nov. 30, 1864:

Uriah Macoy, appt. capt. July 11th; pro. maj. July 30th.
 Charles L. Sproul, pro. 1st lieutenant. July 11th; pro. capt. July 30th.
 Thomas P. Barnfield, pro. 2d lieutenant. July 11th; pro. 1st lieutenant. July 30th.
 Beriah T. Hillman, pro. 2d lieutenant. July 30th.
 D. Perkins Reynolds, pro. 1st sergeant. July 31st.
 John Ryan, pro. 2d sergeant. July 31st.
 Daniel L. Weymouth, pro. 3d sergeant. July 31st.
 Peter Dalton, pro. 5th sergeant. July 31st.
 Huron Wade, pro. 3d corp. July 31st.

Emery Z. Stevens, pro. 5th corp. July 31st.
 Alfred W. Jones, pro. 6th corp. July 31st.
 Amos S. Perkiss, pro. 7th corp. July 31st.
 Seth L. French, pro. 8th corp. July 31st.

F. D. Millet, mus.	Lewis D. Stinchfield.
George F. Hayward, mus.	George B. Smith.
Ethan Allen.	John H. Cole.
Elijah Bates.	George Churchill.
Willard Bryant.	Charles R. Curtis.
Ezekiel R. Bartlett.	Benjamin B. Curtis.
Charles R. Beals.	James Dwyer.
George W. Barnfield.	Willard Howard.
James E. Ball.	Andrew Johnson.
George W. Barnard.	Flavel B. Keith.
Herbert C. Blood. <sup>1</sup>	Thomas Kenney.
Frederick N. Bigelow.	Justin V. Keith.
Nathan B. Blood.	Avory F. Keith.
John A. Belcher.	Edward Luney.
James Coreoran.	Daniel Lawson.
Benjamin F. Lewis.	Barzillai Field.
Benjamin E. Mitchell.	Seth L. French.
Frederick Mitchell.	Leonard Faunce.
Timothy McCarty.	Varanes Filoon.
Austin S. Macoy.	Michael Fitzgerald.
Albert W. Mowry.	Thomas Fitzpatrick.
William McGonnigle.	William H. Foster.
Augustus Melburg.	Henry Gardner.
Joshua Morse.	Charles E. Graves.
Timothy Mullens.	Spencer B. Glass.
Anthony Phillips.	Charles W. Gardner.
Harrison Phillips.	George A. Haven.
Charles D. Packard.	Robert Henderson.
John W. Porter.	William Stevens, clerk.
Reuel W. Dunbar.	James Sullivan.
Frederick M. Hathaway.	Alexander Thrasher.
Samuel W. Holbrook.	Charles H. Thompson.
Seth M. Hall.	David L. Tinkham.
Bela B. Hayward.	Asa W. Tinkham.
Frederick Hanson.	John Towle.
Roland Harris.	Herbert M. Thompson.
Edwin Holmes.	Albert E. Windship.
David Perkins.	Edward M. Willis.
Cyrus Reed.	Dexter E. Wilbor.
Gardner W. Reynolds.	Samuel J. Wade.
Howard W. Reynolds.	John Westgate.
Josiah E. Reynolds.	George H. French.
Henry A. Soule.

This company was located at Indianapolis, Ind., and, although not actively engaged in any battle, did valuable service in doing guard duty, and received the thanks of the commanding general.

The following persons enlisted in the service in August and September, 1864, for one year, mostly in heavy artillery companies:

Charles W. Bacon.	Jacob Peacock.
Joshua R. Bartlett.	John Keegan.
John Gartland.	Charles H. Crosby.
Thomas Moran.	Volney H. Dunbar.
Galen E. Pratt.	Lucas W. Alden.
Patrick Diamond.	Stephen Davis.
Ira O. Severance.	George W. Stephens.
John Fury.	James Hoyt.

<sup>1</sup> Died October 25th, at Indianapolis, Ind.

John Diamond.
William Emerson.
Otis Cobb.
Thomas Shean.
James Herrod.
John Donohue (2d).
Franklin M. Sturtevant.
James Farrell.

Wilson Morse.
Daniel D. Sanford.
Edward W. Spencer.
George E. Peck.
St. Clair McLeod.
Marcus W. Wheeler.
Alexander D. Washburn.
James H. Keenan.

List of men in Company B, Capt. Robert Crossman (2d), Fifty-eighth Massachusetts Regiment, under command of Col. John C. Whiton, for three years' service :

William A. Start, chaplain.
Joseph Skinner.

Charles Bond.

Company D, Capt. Charles E. Churchill :

Charles D. Hunt.
Osman J. Perkins.
Charles W. Reynolds.
Joseph G. Warren.
Daniel Y. Soper.
Daniel W. Willis.
Joseph L. Bunker.

Francis I. Snow.
Isaac A. Reynolds.
John R. Mills.
Clarence Caulkins.
Samuel J. Caulkins.
William F. Willis.
Bradford Snell.

Company F, Capt. Charles D. Copeland :

George E. Holmes.
George H. Thompson.
William Mackay.
Albert G. Thompson.
Levi B. Holbrook.
Nehemiah Thompson.
Jerrie C. Vaughn.

John B. Parker.
George M. Skinner.
Henry M. Bartlett.
Daniel C. Bird.
Thomas Eagan.
Hiram A. Freeman.
Henry D. Peirce.

Company G, Capt. Samuel B. Hinckley :

Anthony P. Faunce.

Company H, Capt. William H. Harley :

James A. Smith.

Dennis Higgins.

Company I, Capt. Nathan S. Oakman :

Elijah Gay.
George B. Stevens.

Henry L. Thompson.
James F. Williams.

Company K, Capt. Albion M. Dudley :

William S. Brett.
John S. Perry.

Frank Benson.
Peter Johnson.

Fifty-ninth Massachusetts Regiment, Capt. James Gibson :

Harrison A. Hunt.

John E. Hunt.

United States Signal Corps :

James M. Kimball.
Edwin T. Cowell.

Jeremiah S. Young.

Second Massachusetts Light Artillery, Capt. William Moreland, for one year's service :

Henry J. White.
Ziha H. Bryant.

Jeffrey A. Potter.
James Ceffee.

Fourth Massachusetts Light Battery, Capt. George G. Trull, three years' service :

William Geary.

Fifth Massachusetts Light Battery, Capt. Charles A. Phillips, one year's service :

James Sheerin.

Francis E. Baxter.

Seventh Massachusetts Light Battery, Capt. Newman W. Storer, three years' service :

Patrick McCullough.

Tenth Massachusetts Light Battery, Capt. J. Webb Adams, one year's service :

Cernelius McAuliffe.

Eleventh Massachusetts Light Battery, Capt. Edward J. Jones, three years' service :

Josiah H. Foye.

Sixteenth Massachusetts Light Battery, Capt. Henry D. Scott, three years' service :

Rufus C. Bean.

Fourth United States Artillery, Co. L :

Nathaniel J. Huntress.

Willis F. H. Fisher.

Fortieth United States Regiment Colored Troops, three years' service :

George Bussey.

Third Massachusetts Cavalry, three years' service :

Thomas P. Williams.

Fourth Massachusetts Cavalry, Capt. Joseph W. Morton, three years' service :

Charles M. Hathaway.

Philip Rochester.

Edward E. Holden.

For one year's service in same regiment :

Lawrence Hogan.

Allen F. Williams.

Philip H. King.

James Donahue.

John Farrell, Jr.

Cernelins Birmingham.

In the call of July, 1864, for five hundred thousand troops a draft was to be made in all districts that were not filled within sixty days. To avoid a draft and the liability of serving, the following persons furnished substitutes :

James Davis, Aug. 29, 1864, three years, for George E. Bryant.

John Brown, Sept. 3, 1864, three years, for Charles H. Curtis.

James Collins, Sept. 5, 1864, three years, for Horatio B. Thayer.

Emil Thompson, Sept. 1, 1864, three years, for William A. Osborn.

John H. Stevens, Sept. 1, 1864, three years, for Elmer L. Keith.

Peter Keenan, Aug. 15, 1864, three years, for Charles P. Keith.

John Dehbins, Aug. 25, 1864, four years, for Charles H. Cole.

John James, Aug. 14, 1864, three years, for Nelsen J. Foss.

John Roach, Sept. 1, 1864, three years, for Francis A. Thayer.

Ambrose Dube, Sept. 2, 1864, three years, for George R. Thompson.

John Fitz Gibbons, Sept. 7, 1864, three years, for Luther Studley.

Alfred Grey, Sept. 9, 1864, three years, for Henry L. Bryant.

John Allen, Aug. 29, 1864, three years, for Charles R. Ford.

Martin Hawkins, Aug. 27, 1864, three years, for George Sawyer.

- Charles Auringer, Aug. 24, 1864, three years, for Simeon F. Packard.
- John Nelligan, Aug. 24, 1864, four years, for Barnabas H. Gray.
- John Dyer, Aug. 30, 1864, four years, for Augustus T. Jones.
- Jeremiah Maloney, Aug. 23, 1864, three years, for Sylvanus Keith.
- Charles Felman, Sept. 14, 1864, three years, for Henry E. Lincoln.
- Michael Martin, Sept. 14, 1864, three years, for Arza B. Keith.
- Jonathan J. Thompson, Sept. 15, 1864, three years, for Charles Howard, Jr.
- John Pointon, Sept. 17, 1864, three years, for Jonas Reynolds.
- Edwin R. Sice, Sept. 21, 1864, three years, for Eben G. Rhodes.
- Benagah C. Boston, Sept. 13, 1864, three years, for L. Bradford Howard.
- Charles Werner, Sept. 22, 1864, three years, for Elbridge W. Morse.
- James Edwin, Sept. 19, 1864, three years, for Mitchell Willis.
- Thomas McManus, Aug. 1, 1864, one year, for Jonas R. Perkins.
- James Brown, Oct. 10, 1864, three years, for Cyrenus W. Blanchard.
- Atone Robero, Oct. 25, 1864, three years, for Eliphalet L. Thayer.
- Navy Recruits.*
- Alvan Howe, Sept. 6, 1864, one year.
- Stillman Billings, Sept. 7, 1864, one year.
- William C. N. Sanford, acting master's mate.
- List of casualties, promotions, changes, deaths, etc., in the foregoing companies :
- David W. Graves, 1st Heavy Art.; wounded in the foot at the battle of Spottsylvania May 19, 1864.
- George W. Pope, enl. Oct. 28, 1861, in Co. G, 29th Mass. Regt. for three years' service; pro. to 2d lieutenant Dec. 6, 1862; 1st lieutenant July 29, 1864; died Aug. 5, 1864, at the Seminary Hospital, Georgetown, D. C., from the effects of a wound received in one of the battles before Petersburg, Va., June 15, 1864.
- John B. Cobb, Co. A, 7th Mass. Regt.; died of yellow fever at Mansfield, N. C., Oct. 20, 1864. At the time of his death he was q.m.-sergt. of Co. B, 2d Mass. Heavy Art.
- Preston Holbrook, Co. C, 35th Mass. Regt.; taken prisoner in the battle at Poplar Spring Church, carried to Libby Prison, and there remained one night; from thence to Salisbury, N. C., where he remained five months; released from prison in March, 1865.
- George E. Holmes, Co. F, 58th Mass. Regt.; was taken prisoner while on picket-duty near Petersburg, Va., June 7, 1864; was carried to Andersonville Prison; released in March, 1865; he died at Camp Parole Hospital, Annapolis, Md., May 28, 1865.
- John E. Hunt, Co. B, 59th Mass. Regt., musician.
- Harrison A. Hunt; taken prisoner at Petersburg; died Nov. 22, 1864, at Danville, Va.
- Alfred H. Tilden, Co. G, 7th Mass. Regt.; wounded in one of the battles in the Shenandoah Valley, 3d and 4th of June, 1864.
- Samuel T. Packard, Co. G, 56th Mass. Regt.; severely wounded in the face; died at his residence Oct. 10, 1864.
- Sylvanus C. Packard, Co. A, 39th Mass. Regt.; taken prisoner in one of the battles on the Weldon Railroad; released in March, 1865.
- Charles T. Packard, enl. in Co. F, 12th Mass. Regt.; pro. to 2d lieutenant June 26, 1861; capt. Aug. 20, 1862; he was wounded in the severe battle of Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13, 1862, losing one eye.
- Frank E. Drake, Co. I, 1st Mass. Heavy Art.; taken prisoner, and died at Andersonville, Ga., Nov. 18, 1864.
- Daniel W. Willis, Co. D, 58th Mass. Regt.; killed in battle.
- John R. Mills, Co. D, 58th Mass. Regt.; killed in battle.
- Simeon W. Edson, 22d Mass. Regt.; lost a leg in the battle of Spottsylvania May 10, 1864.
- Daniel W. Edson, 22d Mass. Regt.; lost a leg in the battle of Spottsylvania May 10, 1864.
- Walter D. Allen, 3d Mass. Cav.; died at the Philadelphia Hospital Oct. 29, 1864, from the effect of wounds received in Sheridan's army in the Shenandoah Valley.
- Richard F. Johnson, Battery C, 3d R. I. Heavy Art.; wounded July 18, 1862, at Morris Island, S. C.
- John D. Sanford, Co. K, 40th Mass. Regt.; died a prisoner at Andersonville, Ga., July 16, 1864.
- Heman F. Stenger, Co. C, 35th Mass. Regt.; wounded at the battle of Antietam.
- Alonso S. Hamilton, Co. F, 7th Mass. Regt., also of Co. C, 33d Me. Regt.; wounded at the battle of Petersburg, Va., June 17, 1863.
- George M. Nash was drafted and sent to join the 32d Mass. Regt.; was severely wounded at Spottsylvania, and died in an ambulance on the way to Fredericksburg, Va.
- Jerrie C. Vaughn, enl. March 12, 1864, in Co. F, 58th Mass. Regt.; pro. to 2d lieutenant March 25, 1864; wounded near one of his eyes, a bullet lodging behind one of them; he was formerly maj. of the 67th N. Y. Regt.
- Horace Baker, lost an arm in one of the battles of May 12, 1864.
- John A. Holmes, 29th Mass. Regt.; severely wounded in both knees.
- John B. Parker, Co. F, 58th Mass. Regt.; wounded in the leg in battle June 3, 1864.
- Andrew C. Gihbs, wounded in leg June 1, 1864.
- Daniel C. Bird, stunned by a shell in the head May 12, 1864.
- Frederic C. Blanchard, Co. C, 42d Mass. Regt.; appointed one of the Louisiana engineers; also ordered on the staff of Gen. Couch as chief engineer of the Department of the Susquehanna.
- Henry L. Thompson, Co. I, 58th Mass. Regt.; taken prisoner near Petersburg July 30, 1864; sent to prison at Danville, where he remained one month; paroled, and arrived at Annapolis, Md., Sept. 3, 1864.
- Samuel F. Howard, Co. G, 7th Mass. Regt.; was shot in the foot in the battle of Fredericksburg during an assault on St. Mary's Hill.
- Charles W. Reynolds, enl. April 2, 1864, in Co. D, 58th Mass. Regt.; fell in the battle of Petersburg a day or two before the final surrender.
- John W. Burns, bugler in Co. H, 12th Mass. Regt.; taken prisoner Oct. 11, 1863, and sent to Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., where he died Feb. 24, 1864.
- Caleb T. Athearn, Co. F, 33d Mass. Regt.; wounded in the leg.
- Dr. Charles H. Mason, surg. on board the gunboat "Virginia," died at a station near New Orleans of yellow fever Thursday, Oct. 13, 1864; was medical examiner of recruits at New Orleans.
- George W. Packard, 11th Mass. Battery; wounded by a bullet in the neck.
- William Mackey, Albert Fisher, D. Y. Fisher, B. C. Allen, of North Bridgewater, were removed from prison at Salisbury, N. C., Dec. 15, 1864.
- Daniel P. Sherman, Co. B, 1st Mass. Cav.; killed at the battle of Aldie June 17, 1863.
- Enos W. Thayer, enl. in the volunteer service Sept. 10, 1861;

com. as capt. of Co. C, 26th Regt. Mass. Vols., Sept. 25, 1861; he sailed with the regiment from Boston, Nov. 21, 1861, on the steamer "Constitution," and arrived at Ship Island December 3d, where they remained till May 30, 1862; was in the attack on Sabine Pass; also in the battle of Winchester, where he fell, wounded in a charge upon the rebels September 19th; he was a prisoner within the rebel lines five hours, when the Union cavalry made a charge and rescued him. He died October 10th, at Winchester hospital; his remains were buried at Mansfield, Mass., with military honors Nov. 11, 1864. He was much respected as an officer by his superiors, and was a brave, noble, and generous man.

Albert M. Smith, son of Albert Smith, of Charlestown, Mass., formerly of North Bridgewater, was a member of Co. C, 42d Mass. Regt.; was in the "Banks Expedition" at New Orleans, La., 1862-63. At the expiration of that service re-enlisted, and was engaged in the battle of Cold Harbor, since clerk in the hospital department.

Joseph Scott Packard, Jr., formerly of North Bridgewater, was color-bearer in the 2d Mass. Regt.; wounded at Gettysburg, Pa.

Acting Master Frederic Crocker, pro. to lieut. for bravery at Sabine Pass; afterwards commanded an expedition that captured one thousand prisoners, with their arms and ammunition; he was attached to the gunboat "Kensington," on the Florida coast, under the command of Commodore Farragut; his promotion is said to have been richly deserved.

Lucius F. Kingman, son of Davis Kingman, formerly of North Bridgewater, lately of Northboro', Mass., was killed in battle, 1863.

George H. Thompson, Co. F, 58th Mass. Regt., taken prisoner June 7, 1864; died at Andersonville, Ga.

Sumner A. Smith, Co. H, 2d Mass. Heavy Artillery, died on the Mississippi River.

Edwin E. Fauuce was in the 75th Illinois Regt.

Ambrose Henry Hayward was in Co. D, 28th Penna. Regt. of Veterans; he enlisted May 24, 1860, and died in the hospital at Chattanooga, Tenn., June 15, 1864, from the effects of wounds received at the battle of Pine Knob, Ga. He was a noble, true-hearted soldier. At the time of his being wounded he was in command of his company, and had been in several engagements. He was endeared to all his companions by his courteous and manly deportment.

Charles N. Packard, corp., was in the 35th Mass. Regt. Mr. Packard was one of the one thousand that were inspected by the regimental, brigade, and division commanders, and pronounced in every respect the most efficient soldier. He has participated in no less than fifteen battles; was at the siege of Vicksburg, and marched through Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi, with great credit to himself, and much respected by his comrades.

Austin Packard, enl. July, 1862, in the 9th Mass. Batt.; wounded in the arm at the battle of Gettysburg; he was conveyed to Philadelphia in the cars, where his arm was amputated. A prostrating fever was caused by the operation, in consequence of which he died Sept. 21, 1864. Funeral honors were paid to his remains at the grave by a detachment under Capt. A. K. Harmon.

George W. Cole, William Mackey, Fernando Skinner, and Ellis Howard, were released from rebel prisons in March, 1865.

Samuel Kimball, enl. in Co. E, 18th Mass. Regt., Aug. 26, 1861, and was killed at the battle of Bull Run Aug. 30, 1862.

William Flannagan, enl. June 26, 1861; killed at the battle of Bull Run Aug. 30, 1861.

Ferdinand Robinson, enl. Aug. 26, 1861; killed at the battle of Bull Run.

Joseph Beals, enl. July 30, 1862; died July 30, 1863, of wounds received at Gettysburg.

Edward F. Drohan, Co. C, 29th Mass. Regt.; enl. May 22, 1861; died Jan. 12, 1862.

Charles F. Swanstrom, 33d Mass. Regt., died Dec. 23, 1862.

Henry Fenn, 9th Mass. Batt.; killed in the battle of Gettysburg.

Andrew P. Olsen, enlisted in Co. C, 42d Mass. Regt.; died at the Massachusetts Hospital, New York City.

Orrin D. Holmes, son of Nathan Holmes, of North Bridgewater, enl. from Plymouth; fell in the battle before Petersburg, Va., March 25, 1864.

We have now brought the chapter of the great Rebellion of 1861 down to the close of enlistment of troops in September, 1864. From this time to the close of the war there was one continuous line of successful victories over the Confederates.

The year 1865 opened with bright prospects before us, by the capture of Fort Fisher, January 15th; of Columbia, S. C., February 17th; Charleston, S. C., February 18th; Wilmington, N. C., February 21st; of Richmond, April 3d; flight of the Confederate officers of State from Richmond, April 4th; surrender of Lee's army April 9th; surrender of Johnston's army, April 26th; capture of Jeff. Davis, May 10th. But that which gave the greatest joy to the Union people was the surrender of Lee. Then we began to see through the clouds that had been so long over us, and in the middle of May, 1865, the greatest armed rebellion of the world was at an end, so far as fighting was concerned, and the nation now appears to be as prosperous as ever. Business is good, mechanics have returned to their occupations, the farmers to their long-neglected fields, and everything wears the appearance of a peaceful and prosperous hereafter. We are, as a people, stronger than before the war. We have stood up against everything that any people has ever been called to bear, and now the "star-spangled banner in triumph still waves over the land of the free and the home of the brave."

CHAPTER XI.

Militia History—First Militia Company—Officers—Military Division of the Parish—North and South Companies—Plymouth County Brigade—First Cavalry Company, 1787—North Bridgewater Dragoon Company, 1853—Militia Districts—Active and Reserve Companies—District Number Sixty—District Number Sixty-one—Cunningham Rifles.

THE first military company formed in the ancient town of Bridgewater was formed Oct. 2, 1689. Thomas Hayward was chosen first captain, John Hayward lieutenant, and Samuel Packard ensign.

At that time the militia of the counties of Barnstable, Plymouth, and Bristol constituted one regiment, and Josiah Winslow, of Marshfield, was the colonel.

In 1762 the population of the town had become numerous enough to increase the number of companies to six. The one in the North Parish of Bridgewater (now Brockton) was called the Sixth Company. Daniel Howard was first captain in the parish, Robert Howard lieutenant, and Abiel Packard ensign. These were succeeded by Robert Howard, promoted to captain, Abiel Packard, promoted to lieutenant, and Henry Kingman ensign. Afterwards Lieut. Abiel Packard was promoted to captain, and Ensign Henry Kingman promoted to lieutenant, and Constant Southworth ensign.

These continued in office till about 1765, at which time the Sixth Company in the town was divided into two distinct and separate companies, known as the North and South. The line of division was across the parish from east to west, near the Centre Village. The officers of the North Company were Barnabas Howard captain, John Howard lieutenant, and Abiel Packard ensign. The officers of the South Company were Isaac Packard captain, Josiah Packard lieutenant, and Issachar Snell ensign. These officers held their commissions till the Revolutionary war.

In 1773 the military companies of ancient Bridgewater had been increased to nine, and these, with two companies from Abington, constituted the Third Regiment, of which Josiah Edson was colonel. This regiment was honored with a review by Governor Hutchinson on the 13th of October of that year. Josiah Hayden was appointed colonel of this regiment, July 1, 1781; Daniel Cary, major, Sept. 6, 1792.

In 1810 the Plymouth County brigade was placed under the command of Col. Sylvanus Lazell, promoted to brigadier-general. The brigade then consisted of four regiments of infantry, a battalion of cavalry, and a battalion of artillery. Among the field and staff officers of the Third Regiment were:

- Caleb Howard, lieutenant-col., appointed April 19, 1817.
- Nathan Jones, lieutenant-col., appointed Oct. 3, 1829.
- Martin Cary, lieutenant-col., appointed Oct. 1, 1832.
- Benjamin Keith, lieutenant-col., appointed Nov. 17, 1838.
- Edward Southworth, major, appointed Aug. 22, 1815.
- Martin Cary, major, appointed Sept. 22, 1831.

This regiment disbanded April 24, 1840.

April 7, 1787, a cavalry company was organized in the town, and Isaac Lazell was appointed first captain. The following are the names of commanders from the North Parish:

- Gideon Howard, captain, appointed May 25, 1803.
- Noah Chesman, captain, appointed Sept. 23, 1811.

- Jeremiah Beals, Jr., captain, appointed Sept. 9, 1819.
- Nathan Hayward, captain, appointed Sept. 20, 1823.

This company was disbanded April 10, 1828.

In June, 1853, a charter was granted to Nahum Reynolds and fifty others, to form a cavalry company, which was organized June 27, 1853, under the name of "North Bridgewater Dragoon Company." The first meeting for the choice of officers was held in Tyler Cobb's Hall, Gen. Eliab Ward presiding over the meeting, at which time the following officers were chosen:

- |                                     |                                   |
|-------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Nahum Reynolds, capt.               | H. A. Raymond, 3d lieutenant.     |
| Robert A. Stoddard, 1st lieutenant. | Jonas R. Perkins, 4th lieutenant. |
| J. Freeman Ellis, 2d lieutenant.    |                                   |

Sergeants.

- |                         |                     |
|-------------------------|---------------------|
| Freeman Bicknell, 1st.  | E. C. Mayhew, 4th.  |
| Charles T. Packard, 2d. | James H. Case, 5th. |
| Samuel S. Brett, 3d.    |                     |

Corporals.

- |                   |                 |
|-------------------|-----------------|
| Lucius Richmond.  | Welcome White.  |
| George N. Holmes. | Daniel Hayward. |

Musicians.

- |                 |                |
|-----------------|----------------|
| J. H. Smith.    | Henry Kitman.  |
| Samuel Parsons. | William Upton. |

Privates.

- |                       |                        |
|-----------------------|------------------------|
| Cyrus B. Kingman.     | Shubael P. Mears.      |
| Ephraim Noyes.        | Edward B. Packard.     |
| James E. Lyon.        | Horatio G. Macomber.   |
| Peter Dalton.         | George W. Leach.       |
| E. A. Packard.        | Charles Woodward.      |
| George L. Howard.     | Frederic Perkins.      |
| Richard M. Fullerton. | Julius Thompson.       |
| Willard Packard.      | Bela T. Brown.         |
| Oliver Jackson.       | Charles J. F. Packard. |
| David F. Tribou.      | Rufus S. Noyes.        |
| E. M. Dunbar.         | Leander Waterman.      |
| James C. Snell.       | Charles E. Smith.      |
| Manly Packard.        | Isaac Kingman.         |
| F. P. Hartwell.       | William Poole.         |
| Mitchell Willis.      | H. T. Sanford.         |
| Horace Bryant.        | Harrison Packard.      |
| James S. Sherman.     |                        |

List of military officers with the dates of their commission:

Colonels.

- |                    |                 |
|--------------------|-----------------|
| Simeon Cary, 1758. | Nahum Reynolds. |
| Josiah Hayden.     |                 |

Lieutenant-Colonels.

- |                                    |                             |
|------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Caleb Howard, May 21, 1810.        | Nathan Jones, Oct. 3, 1829. |
| Edward Southworth, April 29, 1817. | Martin Cary, Oct. 1, 1832.  |

Majors.

- |                                   |                                |
|-----------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| John Porter, May 30, 1777.        | Moses Noyes, July 22, 1824.    |
| Josiah Hayden.                    | Nathan Jones, Sept. 15, 1828.  |
| Daniel Cary, Sept. 6, 1792.       | Martin Cary, Sept. 22, 1831.   |
| Caleb Howard, June 15, 1802.      | Nahum Reynolds, Aug. 28, 1837. |
| Edward Southworth, Aug. 22, 1815. | Uriah Macoy, July 30, 1864.    |
| Nathan Hayward, March 23, 1824.   |                                |

Captains.

Daniel Howard.
 Robert Howard.
 Abiel Packard.
 Barnabas Howard.
 Isaac Packard.
 Jeremiah Beals.
 John Porter, Dec. 9, 1774.
 Simeon Cary, Dec. 9, 1774.
 Nathan Packard, July 25, 1778.
 Lemuel Dunbar, July 25, 1778.
 Joseph Cole, July 25, 1778.
 David Packard, July 23, 1780.
 Lem'l Packard, Mar. 10, 1785.
 Anthony Dike, July 16, 1792.
 Parmenas Packard, March 28, 1795.
 Leavitt Thayer, May 2, 1796.
 Robert Packard, May 29, 1796.
 Ahel Kingman, May 5, 1799.
 Howard Cary, May 14, 1799.
 Zachariah Gurney (3d), May 25, 1802.
 Gideon Howard, May 25, 1803.
 Oliver Jackson, June 17, 1804.
 Jonathan Snow, May 6, 1806.
 Thos. Thompson, May 6, 1806.
 Asa Jones, Sept. 16, 1809.
 Noah Chessman, Sept. 23, 1811.
 Nehemiah Lincoln (2d), May 25, 1814.
 Adin Packard, May 31, 1815.
 Silas Dunbar, May 26, 1816.
 Adin Packard, Jr., April 12, 1817.
 Abiel Packard, Nov. 27, 1819.
 Luke Packard, July 4, 1820.

Moses Noyes, March 19, 1822.
 David Ames, May 7, 1822.
 Ziba Keith, Sept. 5, 1822.
 Nathan Hayward, Sept. 20, 1823.
 Jabez Kingman, May 4, 1824.
 John Battles, July 15, 1825.
 Nathan Jones, May 30, 1827.
 John W. Kingman, July 4, 1828.
 Ornan Cole, Oct. 7, 1828.
 Alvah Noyes, Aug. 10, 1829.
 Augustus Jones, Aug. 10, 1831.
 Martin Cary, Aug. 10, 1831.
 Charles Gurney, Dec. 3, 1831.
 Thos. Hathaway, Oct. 27, 1832.
 Cary Howard, Nov. 1, 1834.
 Nahum Reynolds, May 3, 1836.
 Nahum Reynolds, June 27, 1853.
 Robert A. Stoddard, Sept. 28, 1853.
 J. Freeman Ellis, April 25, 1854.
 H. A. Raymond, May 8, 1856.
 J. R. Perkins, July 11, 1857.
 Lucius Richmond, Aug. 27, 1860.
 Alex. Hichhorn, June 26, 1861.
 Charles T. Packard, Aug. 20, 1862.
 J. S. Stoddard, July 23, 1862.
 Alpheus K. Harmon, May 10, 1862.
 Uriah Macoy, July 11, 1864.
 Chas. L. Sproul, July 30, 1864.

Miscellaneous Officers.

Elisha Tillson, surgeon's mate, Sept. 30, 1794.
 Daniel Hartwell, adjutant, Sept. 6, 1792.
 Caleb Howard, adjutant, Aug. 27, 1795.
 Issachar Snell, surgeon's mate, Dec. 13, 1800.
 Rev. Daniel Huntington, chaplain, May 6, 1816.
 John Tilden, Jr., adjutant, Jan. 1, 1827.
 Rev. Edward L. Clark, chaplain, June 26, 1861.
 Rev. Israel Washburn, chaplain, Sept. 1, 1862.
 Rev. W. A. Start, chaplain, April 18, 1864.

In consequence of the various calls upon the commonwealth for troops for the United States service, during the Rebellion of 1861, the volunteer militia of Massachusetts, as it existed previous to the beginning of the war, was nearly broken up, by the enlistment of its members individually, and as companies and regiments, for three months', nine months', one years', three years', and one hundred days' service; and the law establishing the volunteer militia being no longer in conformity with the system of organization prescribed by the laws of the United States, it was found impossible to recruit this militia as the law then stood. To remedy this evil, the Legislature of Massachusetts passed a law in 1864 for the reorganization of the entire militia of the commonwealth. This act was approved May 14, 1864, and all laws in existence previous to that date for the regulation of the militia were repealed. The new law provided for a new enrollment, to be made by the several assessors of the towns throughout the State, of all persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, the same to be returned to the adjutant-general.

The commander-in-chief then proceeded to divide the commonwealth into military districts of companies. Under this arrangement there were two hundred and forty-nine districts established. North Bridgewater (now Brockton) and West Bridgewater constituted two districts, and was divided as follows:

District Number Sixty includes the whole of North Bridgewater except the school districts four, five, six, and seven, otherwise known as Marshall, Ames, Campello, and Copeland Districts.

District Number Sixty-one comprised the southerly school districts, numbered four, five, six, and seven, in Brockton, and the whole of West Bridgewater.

An order was next issued to some justice of the peace within the district, to call a meeting for the election of captains of the several companies. After the election of the captain, it became his duty to enroll all persons liable to enrollment within their respective limits. "And all persons under the age of twenty-four years, liable to do military duty, shall be enrolled in one roll, and constitute the 'active militia.' And all such persons as shall be above the age of twenty-four years, together with all persons that shall be exempt from duty, excepting in cases of riot, invasion, insurrection, war, etc., shall be enrolled in another roll, and constitute the 'reserve militia.'"

The active militia was to have been formed into regiments, brigades, and divisions by the commander-in-chief, and organized in conformity with the laws of the United States, subject to such changes as the commander-in-chief might make from time to time.

The reserve militia was to have been organized into companies, regiments, brigades, and divisions, and attached to such brigades in the active militia as the commander-in-chief should deem expedient, when ordered out for actual service.

Orders were received by George W. Bryant, Esq., to notify a meeting to be held Jan. 30, 1865, for the choice of a captain for District Sixty. The meeting was held at the armory on Chapel Street, at one o'clock P.M., when Samuel F. Howard was elected captain, who was commissioned Jan. 30, 1865. A meeting was subsequently held for the choice of lieutenants April 1, 1865, when George Southworth was elected first lieutenant, and Bradford Wild second lieutenant, both of whom were commissioned April 1, 1865.

The choice of captains for District Sixty-one was made at a meeting held at West Bridgewater, on Friday, Jan. 27, 1865, at which Austin Packard, Esq., was called to preside. Mr. Thomas P. Ripley was elected captain, and received a commission dated Jan. 27, 1865.

At a meeting of the company soon after, in April, Nathaniel M. Davenport, Jr., was elected first lieutenant, and Ziba C. Keith, second lieutenant, both of Campello.

Agreeably to instructions from headquarters an enrollment was made by the captains of the above-named districts, and placed in the adjutant-general's office, in which we find the number of persons enrolled in District Number Sixty, Capt. Samuel F. Howard, for active service was one hundred and thirty men; reserve militia, five hundred and nineteen men. The number of persons in District Number Sixty-one, Capt. Thomas P. Ripley, for active service, was seventy-eight men; reserve militia, three hundred and nine men.

We have given the foregoing account of the militia organization up to May, 1865. The companies had hardly been formed, and officers chosen, when the Legislature passed a law, approved May 16, 1865, disbanding the "active militia," allowing them to volunteer in the service for five years. "All companies that do not volunteer within sixty days from May 16, 1865, shall be discharged," thus leaving a militia force of volunteers only, of which there are but few old companies.

Cunningham Rifles.—Among the present militia organizations of Massachusetts is the Cunningham Rifles, Co. I, which is a part of Massachusetts' regiment volunteer militia, with the following officers and members in July, 1884:

Captain.

James N. Keith.

First Lieutenant.

Nathan E. Leach.

Second Lieutenant.

Andrew M. Bowden.

Sergeants.

Winifried S. Hathaway. Oliver B. Battles.
E. Francis Fuller. S. Oscar Martland.

Corporals.

Edward E. Herrod. Frank L. Emerson.
Edwin W. Blankinship. Charles Williamson.
Loring M. Bates.

Privates.

Walter C. Andrews. Aruna S. Chase.
Feli Blanchard. Frank Carr.

Horatio Corbett.
William M. Carr.
Benjamin F. Chubbuck.
George E. Eliot.
Carlton L. Eldredge.
Frank Foye.
Nelson Goodwin.
William J. Howard.
George E. Horton.
William B. Hill.
Frank N. Hall.
George F. Hart.
Walter T. Howard.
Robert P. McKendrick.
Wallace Martland.
James E. A. Maffit.
Fred H. Moore.
Ewen McKendrick.
Frelon H. Marshal.
Charles W. Potter.
Phillip E. Pierce.
Melvin F. Packard.
William S. Packard.
Daniel W. Packard.
William T. Pierce.
Frank H. Reynolds.
E. Frank Swift.
Charles A. Sturtevant.
Forrest W. Swift.
George E. Sargent.
Samuel H. Taylor.
Edward E. Tilton.
Rufus E. Tilton.
Herbert Tribou.
John A. Tribou.
William R. Tilden.
J. Frank Winslow.
Lewis E. Williams.
Fred M. Wade.

CHAPTER XII.

PUBLIC-HOUSES AND TRADERS.

Public-Houses.—The city of Brockton is situated on the direct route from New Bedford to Boston, and previous to the building of the railroads that connect the two cities it was a stopping-place for travelers needing refreshment. At one time there were three public-houses in the village, beside one on the turnpike south of "Tilden's Corner."

One of the most prominent public-houses in early days was one kept by Maj. Daniel Cary, on the site where Rufus P. Kingman, Esq., now resides, formerly owned and occupied by the late John Wales. Next in order was a house kept by Barnabas Howard, at the north end of the town, where entertainment was provided for man and beast. Silas Packard kept public-house on the corner of Main and Court Streets, formerly occupied by the late Capt. Benjamin Clark. Col. Edward Southworth also kept public-house at his residence, on the site now occupied by the "City Block," and later Maj. Nathan Hayward kept near the corner of Main and East Elm Streets, the site now occupied by "Mercantile Building." Nathan Hayward, Newton Shaw, Nathaniel H. Cross, Capt. John Packard, and Edward J. Snow have each kept public-house near the corner of Main and Crescent Streets, and opposite the residence of Rufus P. Kingman, Esq.

In the early part of 1833 preparations were made for the erection of a new and more commodious house than was then in the town. July 4th of that year a house was raised by Messrs. Bela Keith, Esq., and Benjamin Kingman, who were the owners till 1856, when it passed into the hands of Tyler Cobb, who was proprietor of the house for a short time. Mr. Benjamin Kingman kept the house three years. Edward E. Bennett occupied it from that time about ten years, and the house has since changed hands as follows: O. G. Tinkham, Joslyn & Keith, Ellridge Cobb, Harrison Rogers, Mr. Alstrom, Capt. Swasey, Tyler Cobb, and F. B. Washburn, and is known as the Satucket House, now occupied by "Satucket Block," owned by F. B. Washburn.

A few years since Aaron B. Drake opened a public-house at Campello, by the name of "Salisbury House," which was kept for a few years only. There are fourteen public-houses in the city at the present time,—eleven at the Centre and three at Campello.

A short time since Sanford Winter, Esq., erected an elegant brick block at the corner of Belmont and Main Streets, formerly known as the "Old Corner Store" lot, at an expense of nearly seventy-five thousand dollars, which is now used as a public-house. It was first named "Hotel Palmer," now "Hotel Belmont," and is the leading hotel of the city. F. B. Smith is the proprietor.

Traders.—It is very difficult to give the dates when the different traders in the city began business, although we find the names of all. We here give the names of those who have been in the trade, keeping variety store, as follows: Deacon Ichabod Howard kept store at the north part of the town, on the road to Boston, in the house recently occupied by the late Deacon Ozen Gurney. Silas Packard and Col. Edward Southworth had a store on the corner of Main and Court Streets, where the late David Cobb's store now stands, now occupied by his son, David H. Cobb. Col. Edward Southworth kept store in 1816 nearly opposite the First Congregational Church, now known as the "Gazette Building." Maj. Daniel Cary kept in the north part of the old building that was several years ago removed from the corner of Main and Belmont Streets, and on the lot now occupied by the elegant residence of Rufus P. Kingman, Esq. Mr. Cary was succeeded by John Wales. Jonathan Keith kept a grocery store where the South Congregational Church now stands, at the corner of South and Main Streets, Campello. Isaac Keith kept groceries in the south part of his house, at the north corner of Main and South Streets, a short distance north of the church. Benjamin Kingman succeeded him in trade a year or two, when he removed to the Centre. Silas Packard & Co. were succeeded in trade by David Cobb, who came from Mansfield, Mass., in 1823, and learned the trade of Mr. Packard. A few years since Mr. Cobb erected a new and commodious building in place of the old store, where he continued a successful business as a variety store, till he was succeeded by his son, David H. Cobb. Capt. John Packard erected the store, corner of Main and Belmont Streets, opposite Rufus P. Kingman's house, several years since, and was associated with Joseph Packard in trade. At a little later period Matthew Kingman and Nathaniel Snow purchased the stock and good-will of the store and traded for a short time. The store was afterwards purchased by David Cobb about 1836, and was kept by Tyler Cobb for several years. About 1840, William P. Howard, of Easton, purchased the stock, and conducted a successful business for several years, and then removed to Messrs. Howard, Clark & Co.'s building, where stands the "Clark Block." In 1836, Frederick Parker came from Barnstable, and entered into partnership with Ambrose Hayward, under the firm-name of Hayward & Parker, in the dry-goods trade, in William Ryder's building on Main Street, and continued but a short time. John Ritchie opened a store at the Factory Village, near "Sprague's," which has since been occupied by Daniel Eames, Ephraim Noyes, Ira Copeland, William H. Brett, Chandler Sprague, and others. Ira Copeland erected a grocery store a short distance east from "Sprague's," on the road leading to Abington.

Lemuel B. Hatch opened the first store in Campello about forty years since, which he kept but a few years. The business has been conducted in the same building by Messrs. Tyler Cobb, Samuel Carter, John W. Snell, Varanes Wales, and Sidney Packard. A few years since Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., erected a large and commodious building for a store at the corner of Main and Market Streets, which has been in use by Sidney Packard, Messrs. Howard & Keith, and Mrs. William H. Williams, the present occupant, who keep a variety store. A few years since W. O. Alger, of West Bridgewater, erected a building corner of Montello and Depot Streets, at Campello, near the railroad station, and kept a grocery store a short time. This building was afterwards purchased by Mr. Nelson J. Foss, who occupied it as a flour and grain store and post-office. Henry Dyer had a small store on Montello Street, near the depot, and Benjamin Swain on Main Street, Campello. Several years since Aaron B. Drake & Brother were in trade where the "Salisbury House" now stands. Newton Shaw kept a store in the easterly part of the town, at "Shaw's Corner," a few years since. Perez Marshall kept a grocery store near "Tilden's Corner;" Lorenzo Wade and George A. Packard in the West Shares (now "Brockton Heights"). George Clark kept a store a short time near the same place. Isaac Packard kept store in the West Shares (now "Brockton Heights"), in the building occupied by William Packard. Benjamin Kellogg kept store in town in 1835. Cyrus Porter, Jr., had a store near Zophar Field's Corner, on North Main Street, in 1835. A few years since J. F. Hale opened a grocery store in Central Block, on Main Street. L. C. Bliss became his successor in that business. Newton Shaw had a grocery store near the railroad, on Centre Street, some years since. Mr. William H. Pierce succeeded him in business. Lyman E. Cobb erected a new store near the same locality, and continues to do a successful business in that line. Daniel Lovell purchased the store recently occupied by the "Union Store No. 619," on School Street. Henry W. Robinson commenced trade in 1844 in the store now occupied by him at the Centre. He was the successor of William White. In 1850, William B. Barry became associated with him in the business, under the firm-name of Robinson & Barry, which copartnership existed five years, Mr. Barry then removing to Boston. This was a variety store till 1859, when it was changed to dry goods exclusively.

In 1834, Charles Atherton and Albert Smith became associated in business in the hotel building, under the firm-name of Smith & Atherton. This firm continued for about two years, when they dissolved partnership, and William F. Brett became a partner with Mr. Smith, under the firm-name of Smith & Brett, in 1836. This firm continued till 1839, when Mr. Smith withdrew from the firm, leaving Mr. Brett alone in business till 1846, at which time Rufus P. Kingman, Esq., became a partner, under the firm of Brett & Kingman, which copartnership continued till 1854, they doing a dry-goods, grocery, hardware, and merchant-tailoring business. A new firm was then formed, consisting of William F. Brett, J. Freeman Ellis, S. B. Ripley, and Edward O'Neil, who continued in the same business. In 1860, Henry A. Brett came from Wareham and purchased the stock and business, and conducted the same one year, when he sold to William H. Brett and Rufus E. Brett, who continued in business under the style of William F. Brett's Sons. This firm was dissolved in 1865, Rufus E. Brett and Frederick L. Brett continuing the business under the firm-name of Brett Brothers.

In 1862, Mr. B. C. Beener & Co. opened a dry-goods store opposite Kingman's block. Charles Curtis, Jr., succeeded William P. Howard in the dry-goods trade in Howard & Clark's building, on Main Street, for several years. He afterwards removed to Taunton. B. P. Davis had a shoe store in 1850, opposite Kingman's brick block, on Main Street. Charles D. Brigham had a shoe store at 423 Main Street (Tyler Cobb's building). Ambrose Hayward opened a grocery store in Howard, Clark & Co.'s building, July 4, 1864. A. N. Farrar had a grocery store in John Tilden's building a few years since. He was succeeded by Simeon Mitchell in 1861, and the store was afterwards occupied by John Tilden.

James Hall and William H. H. Hebard have since occupied that store for a short time each. The building is now used as a residence. Henry Howard kept a store in his building, formerly occupied as a shoe manufactory, now occupied by William F. Field. E. Capen French had a grocery store near Stoddard's brush-factory, in the north part of the village; store afterwards occupied for the same purpose by Joel T. Packard. B. R. Clapp has a variety store in the building, near the new post-office, on Main Street. Southworth & Noyes had a grocery and hardware store nearly opposite Kingman's brick block, now Edward O. Noyes; Daniel Hayward one on School Street, near the railroad. John W. Snell kept a small grocery store opposite the residence of Freeman Holmes several years since. S. Francis Dearborne had a grocery store in Drayton's building, now occupied by Col. John J. Whipple as a grocery and drug store, opposite the First Congregational Church, formerly occupied by N. C. & G. W. Fisher as a grocery store. Nathan Jones kept a grocery store in Col. Southworth's building many years. E. H. Woodbridge kept paints, oils, etc., on School near Main Street. William Field also kept a grocery store in Capt. John Battles' house. Lot Packard kept a store in the house afterwards occupied by Capt. Robert Packard. F. & H. Baylies kept a dry-goods store in "Wheeler's Block," corner of Main and School Streets, a few years since. The building was afterwards owned and known as "Bixby's Building." Francis O. Hall kept a grocery store on Turnpike Street, in the West Shares, for a short time, several years since. John W. Snell kept a grocery store at Campello for a short time, in a building owned by Bela Keith, Esq. Rufus L. Thacher kept a flour and grain store in Central Block, on Centre Street, a few years since. C. C. Bixby & Co. kept a large assortment of drugs, medicines, fancy goods, books, stationery, etc., in Bixby's block, where the present brick block known as "Bixby's" now is, adjoining the "Home Bank Building." Isaac Washburn came from Kingston, and kept store in the old tavern building, opposite Rufus P. Kingman's residence, for a short time only.

CHAPTER XIII.

Free Schools—Old School Districts—School Committee of the North Parish—School Committee of North Bridgewater (now Brockton)—Annual Appropriations for Schools—New School Districts—Attendance on the Schools—Valuation of School Property in 1882—Adelphian Academy—North Bridgewater Academy—Private Schools—Normal School Scholars—Graduates of Colleges—Press of Brockton—Town Maps—United States Pensions.

Schools.—For the past two centuries our country has enjoyed a system of education that has had no parallel. The progress of our country, with all its varied interests, may be attributed to the education of her people. There is no one thing in which the happiness and prosperity of society is so much involved as in the proper education, the moral training, and discipline of youth, and the many advantages arising from the same cannot be too highly estimated or overstated. The boldness of the measure aiming at universal education through the medium of free schools has no precedent in the history of the world. Every nation abroad, as well as States at home, are imitating our example. The credit of originating these free institutions is due to our Pilgrim Fathers. It was in the cabin of the "Mayflower" that they agreed among themselves to a written constitution of government which was the nucleus of all the free governments of the earth. At the time they landed on our shores two grand ideas pervaded their minds, namely: religion, or the spiritual interest of their people, and knowledge, or the education of the young.

Free Schools.—The fisheries of Cape Cod were early laid under contributions for the support of free schools in 1671. At a public festival a few years since the following sentiments were offered: "Mackerel Schools and Free Schools, the one the support of the other;" another, "The Fishermen of Cape Cod, they get their learning on their own Hook." These institutions have long been under the control of the government, by them supported and controlled, sanctioned and protected by law as much as the right of a person to their own mode of worship; and the distinguishing feature of the system is in the advantage of common-school instruction, which is free to all, without distinction of race, color, or position, and is secured to every child in the State, that the property of the commonwealth shall be subservient to equal and adequate instruction. The mass of the people have been educated, and we have enjoyed what no other nation has been permitted to enjoy,—we have learned for ourselves how to conduct a free government, and the success of the same may be seen in the progress that has been and is now being made in all that contributes to make a nation prosperous and happy.

From earliest time the policy of Massachusetts has been to develop the minds of her people and to imbue them with the principles of duty. In doing this she has had the aid of the many towns within her limits, and has a system which is destined to greater and more elevated usefulness than has ever before been seen.

The town of Brockton has ever been ready to contribute of her public funds for educational purposes. Previous to the incorporation of the old North Parish the parish paid their proportional part of school expenses of the town of Bridgewater, and received a share of the benefits of the same. At a meeting of the town of Bridgewater, held Nov. 24, 1746, a committee of twelve were chosen "To consult what method may be most beneficial to the Town in improving of ye school for the futer." Robert Howard, Abiel Packard were chosen on the part of the North Parish. The committee made the following report: Dec. 1, 1746. "Voted that the sum of £250, old Tenor, to support schooling in the town one year next following, and that the grammar-school has been kept longer in a precinct than has been useful when it comes to their turn, and that the west precinct shall have the improvement of ye grammar-school the first year, and then the other precincts in order shall have the grammar-school according to their proportion of ye Tax." We next find a record in the parish books as follows: March 21, 1747. "At a meeting held this day To chuse a committee to take care of the money, and gat a scole masture, or a scoole dame, and to see if the precinct can agree whare the scoole shall be kept this year," it was voted "That Timothy Keith, Robert Howard, and Abiel Packard should be a committee to take care of the scoole the year Insewing." Also, "Voted by the precinct, that the precinct should be devided into three scoole Ricks, to begin at Elisha Dunbar's, and from thence to Abia Keith's, and from thence to Henery Kingman's all to the South of that line to be the South Rick, And the meedal Rick to extend North as far as the north side of Abiel Packard's field that Joynes Zachariah Gurney's, by an east and west Line from said place.

"Each peart having Equal parte In the town treasury for draft of money belonging to the precinct for the use of the scoole to be drawn by the committee for the scoole or their order." For a long time after the establishment of the North Parish, or Precinct, there were but three school districts, which were divided as above. "The subject of new school-Houses was brot to the attention of the parish, August 15, 1748, To chuse a man or men to receive the money due from the town to maintain a scoole and to dispose of the same in the best method; Also, To see if the precinct will build one or more scool-houses for the use of the Parish scool, and to act anything proper for accomplishing the same. The meeting was setteled by the choise of Daniel Howard, moderator.

Old School Districts.—"Voted that Timothy Keith, Abiel Packard, and Robert Howard should be a committee to draw the money out of the town treasury this present year, their persersionabel part for the use of the Parash Scools, and to dispose of the same in the way and manner voted by the precinct last year past." Dec. 9, 1751, a meeting was held "To agree How and whare the scoole shall be kept the Insueing year. Voted that the scool shuld be kept in three places in the precinct; also, Voted that the meddal part shuld have the scool the first fore months, and the south part should have it the next two months, and the north part, which extends from the north line of the middle rick as far north as the town extends, should have it the next three months." Again, March 28, 1753, the laying out of the money and "settelling of the scool" was left to the precinct committee. The people of the precinct, feeling dissatisfied with the division, called a meeting, which was held March 11, 1784, "To take the minds of the precinct respecting the grammar school for the future, and act what may be thought proper concerning the same," at which it was "Voted to divide the precinct into four Ricks for the Grammar-School; also, Voted that Barnabas Howard, Dea. Jonathan Cary, Mr. Matthew Kingman, and Ensign Issachar Snell be a committee for the purpose aforesaid, and make report at the fall meeting." Sept. 6, 1784, the committee for dividing the district into four ricks for the grammar-school gave in the following report:

"We, the subscribers, being chosen a committee by the North Precinct, in Bridgewater, in order to divide said precinct into four parts for the better accommodation of the Inhabitants of said precinct to improve the Grammar School, and having considered the same, do report as followeth, namely: That a line be drawn from Mr. Zachariah Cary's westerly to Ephraim Churchill's, and from thence to Easton Line, and those families on the south side of said line to be the South Rick, and those on the north side of said line to be the North Rick, and from said Cary's easterly to William Shaw's, and from thence to Ahington line, to divide the easterly part of said precinct, those families on the south side of said Road to be the South Rick, the before-mentioned Ricks to be divided North and South by the Country Road.

"ISSACHAR SNELL.
"BARNABAS HOWARD.
"MATTHEW KINGMAN.
"JONATHAN CARY."

The above report being read, it was accepted, and the meeting voted "that the Grammar School be kept six weeks in each Rick." "Voted that the two Ricks on the west side of the Country Road have the Grammar School this year."

After the above division of the parish into districts, or ricks, the precinct committee had charge of the division of the school fund as it was drawn from the town treasury, and upon them devolved the duties that afterward were assigned to the committee chosen for each district.

March 4, 1794. The parish "voted to raise £15, to be assessed on the inhabitants of the parish, for the purpose of English schooling." March 17, 1794. At a meeting of the parish it was "voted to chose a Comitty in Each English School District to take care of the school money, and see that it is well laid out for the benefit of each Destrict." The duties of this committee were to procure rooms, teachers, fuel, etc., for the schools in their several districts.

School Committee of the North Parish.—The following is a list of the school committee chosen by the town for the several districts from 1794 to 1826 inclusive:

Lieut. Nathaniel Orcutt, 1794.	Jonathan Perkins, Jr., 1797,
Ensign Howard Cary, 1794,	1806, '07, '11, '13, '16, '19.
'95, 1802, '04, '06, '11, '16,	Jeremiah Beals, 1797.
'17.	Rufus Brett, 1797.
Daniel Cary, 1794, '95, 1801.	Capt. Zebedes Snell, 1797, '98.
Perez Southworth, 1794, '95,	William Shaw, Jr., 1797.
1805.	Nathaniel Manley, 1797.
Issachar Snell, Esq., 1794, '95,	Deacon James Perkins, 1798.
'96, '97, '98.	Ensign Mark Perkins, 1798,
Ichabod Howard, 1794, '95, '98,	1804, '06, '08, '11, '17, '19.
'99, 1800, '01, '02, '07, '19.	Samuel Cheesman, 1798.
Levi Keith, 1794, '95.	Timothy Ames, 1798, 1805.
Benjamin Howard, 1794.	Ebenezer Warren, 1798.
Parmenas Packard, 1794, '95,	Seth Kingman, 1798, 1815.
'99, 1802.	Jonathan Keith, 1798, 1801,
Capt. Lemuel Packard, 1794,	'02, '03.
'96, 1802, '08.	Thomas Thompson, 1799, 1813,
Barnabas Curtis, 1794, '95.	'19, '22.
Lieut. Robert Packard, 1795,	Nathaniel Leach, 1799.
'96, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '01,	Zachariah Gurney, Jr., 1799,
'14, '21.	1804, '09, '14, '18.
Daniel Manley, 1795, 1800.	Benjamin Keith, 1799, 1805,
Ephraim Cole, 1795, 1801, '10,	'06, '07, '08, '09.
'14, '18.	Asaph Hayward, 1799.
Capt. Jesse Perkins, 1796, '99,	Japhet Beals, 1799.
1800.	Noah Ames, 1799.
Lieut. Eleazer Snow, 1796.	Josiah Perkins, 1800, '05.
Job Ames, 1796.	Anzi Brett, 1800.
Oliver Howard, 1796, 1803,	Abiah Packard, 1800.
'05.	Jonathan Cary, 1800.
Waldo Hayward, 1796.	Deacon David Edson, 1800, '08.
John Wales, 1796, 1804.	Dr. Philip Bryant, 1800, '08,
Samuel Dike, 1796, 1803, '07.	'09.
Joseph Hayward, 1796, 1805.	Ensign Jonathan Snow, 1800,
Eliphalet Packard, 1797.	'26.
Moses Cary, 1797, 1814, '16.	Micah Shaw, 1801, '06, '13,
William Brett, 1797.	'22.

Hayward Marshall, 1801, '10, '14, '24.
 Barzillai Field, 1801, '05, '09, '23.
 Ephraim Jackson, 1801, '04.
 Samuel Brett, Jr., 1801.
 Caleb Howard, 1802.
 John Tilden, 1802, '07, '09, '12, '22.
 Lieut. Ephraim Noyes, 1802, '04, '11, '14, '17.
 Isaiah Packard, 1802, '08.
 Ensign Asa Jones, 1803, '09, '18.
 Job Bryant, 1803.
 Asa Ford, 1803.
 Cyrus Packard, 1803, '06, '15, '21.
 Thomas Packard, Jr., 1803, '10.
 Joseph Abel, 1803.
 Capt. Abel Kingman, 1804, '22, '26.
 John Howard, 1804.
 Daniel Packard, 1804.
 Shepard Perkins, 1804, '09, '17.
 Seth Snow, 1805.
 Zachariah Snell, 1805.
 Abijah Knapp, 1805.
 Perez Crocker, 1806, '17.
 Gideon Howard, Esq., 1806, '12, '13, '15, '16.
 Oliver Snell, 1806, '10.
 William Edson, 1806.
 Ensign Nehemiah Lincoln, 1807, '09, '12.
 Seth Edson, 1807, '11.
 Noah Cheesman, 1807.
 Samuel Alden, Jr., 1807.
 Joseph Brett, 1807, '14.
 Joseph Sylvester, Jr., 1808, '14.
 Daniel Howard, Esq., 1808, '09, '11.
 John Ames, 1808.
 Levi Packard, 1808, '13.
 John Burrill, 1809.
 Benjamin Ames, 1809, '14, '19, '23.
 Adin Packard, Jr., 1810.
 Eliphalet Kingman, 1810, '17, '20.
 Barnabas Curtis, 1810.
 Ebenezer Dunbar, 1810.
 Jonathan Beal, 1811.
 Zebedee Snell, Jr., 1811.
 Caleb Jackson, 1811, '15.
 Joseph Reynolda, Jr., 1811.
 Silas Snow, 1812.
 Turner Torrey, 1812, '14, '17, '24.
 Sylvanus French, 1812, '19, '23.
 Jacob Fuller, 1812, '20.

Isaac Eames, 1812.
 Shepard Snell, 1812.
 Galen Packard, 1812, '21.
 Alpha Brett, 1813.
 Luke Packard, 1813, '21.
 Josiah Dunbar, 1813, '18.
 Micah Packard, 1813, '17, '23.
 Manley Hayward, 1813, '16, '21.
 Asa Howard, 1815, '22.
 Capt. John Packard, 1815, '16, '19, '20.
 Jeremiah Beals, Jr., 1815, '19.
 Lewis Dailey, 1815.
 Capt. Oliver Jackson, 1815, '21, '26.
 James Cary, 1815.
 Howard Packard, 1815, '17.
 Isaac Keith, 1816, '26.
 Enos Thayer, 1816.
 Apollas Packard, 1816.
 Darius Howard, 1817, '26.
 Ziba Keith, 1817, '21.
 Thomas Wales, 1818.
 Howard Manley, 1818, '23.
 Jacob Dunbar, 1818.
 Ezekiel Merritt, 1818.
 Samuel Packard, 1818.
 Josiah Ames, 1818.
 John Smith, 1818, '24.
 John Crafts, 1819.
 Parmenas Brett, 1819.
 Jabez Kingman, 1819, '26.
 David Ford, 1820.
 Azor Packard, 1820, '24.
 Oliver Leach, 1820.
 Theron Ames, 1820.
 Zenas Brett, 1820.
 Isaac Packard, 1820.
 Nathan Packard, 1820.
 Isaac Hartwell, Jr., 1820, '22.
 Nathaniel Wales, 1821.
 David Battles, 1821.
 Azel Gurney, 1821.
 Barnabas Edson, 1821.
 David Ames, 1822.
 Josiah Brett, 1822.
 William Tribou, 1822.
 Jonas Reynolds, 1822.
 Zibeon Brett, 1822, '23.
 Simeon Dunbar, 1823.
 Jesse Perkins, Jr., 1823, '26.
 Williams Alden, 1823.
 Hezekiah Packard, 1823.
 Martin Southworth, 1823.
 Martin Dunbar, 1823.
 Isaac Curtis, 1823.
 Sullivan Packard, 1824.
 Charles Packard, 1824.
 Samuel Dike, Jr., 1824.
 Caleb Copeland, Jr., 1824.
 Zophar Field, 1824.
 Nahum Perkins, 1826.
 Joel Ames, 1826.

choosing a committee-man in the several districts to manage the affairs independently of the town.

March 16, 1795. The parish came together "to hear the Report of a committee chosen to see if they can fix upon any plan that shall operate more equally in the division of the Grammar-School District."

"The committee appointed by the North Parish of Bridge-water at their meeting in November last to consider whether any alterations can be made in the Grammar School wricks in said Parish wick will be of more general advantage to the inhabitants thereof, Beg leave to make the following reports, namely:

"First, your committee are of opinion that the South west and South east wricks, as to their extent and bounds, remain as they now are. Secondly, your committee are of opinion that it will be for the general advantage of the inhabitants of the North west and North East wricks to be divided into three wricks, in the following manner and form, to wit: The first, or north west wrick to be bounded Northerly and Westerly on Stoughton and Easton, Southerly on the South west wrick, and easterly on the river wharcon Reynolds' saw-mill stands, including also Lieut. Parmenas Packard and Benjamin Silvester's familys. The Second, or north wrick to be bounded northerly on Stoughton, westerly on Reynolds' mill River aforesaid, Southerly on the Southern wrick, and easterly on trout Brook, excluding the before-mentioned families of Lieut. Parmenas Packard and Benjamin Silvester, including Daniel Howard, Esq., Gideon Howard, and Thomas White, and their families before mentioned. The Third, or North East wrick to be bounded easterly and northerly on Abington and Randolph, westerly on Trout Brook, and southerly on the South east wrick, excluding Daniel Howard, Esq., Gideon Howard, and Thomas White's families, before mentioned. Thirdly, your committee are also of opinion that the Grammar-School ought to be kept in the two southern wricks every other year,—one-half in the South west wrick, and the other half in the South east wrick. We are also of opinion that said Grammar-School ought to be kept in the three northern wricks every other year in the following proportion, namely: one-Third part of the time in the north west wrick, one-third part in the middle or north wrick, and one-third part of the time in the North East wrick. Fourthly, your committee are furthermore of the opinion that the school in the north or middle wrick ought to be kept alternately at the school-House near Nathaniel Snell's and the school-House near the Meeting-House, and that the school in the South east wrick ought to be kept at or between Seth Kingman's, Abel Kingman's, and Eliab Packard's, and that the School in the North east wricks ought to be kept alternately at the school-house near Deacon Jonathan Cary's and the School-house near William Shaw's, unless the inhabitants of said wrick can agree on a more central place, which we judge to be at or between Ames Packard's, Josiah Packard's, Josiah Eames', and Perez Southworth's.

"All wick is submitted to Said parish for consideration and acceptance.

"ISSACHAR SNELL,
 "ELEAZER SNOW,
 "DANIEL HOWARD,
 "JESSE PERKINS,
 "LEMUEL PACKARD,

"Committee.

"A true record.

"DANIEL CARY, Precinct Clerk."

This was the commencement of the practice of

Again, the grammar-school did not suit all the people in the parish; for, Nov. 14, 1796, we find a meeting called "To see if some more advantageous method cannot be devised for the improvement of the Grammar-School," at which it was "voted to postpone the subject to the next March meeting."

March 9, 1797. "Voted to choose a committee of one from each school District, to make some alteration in the Grammar-School Districts, and report at next fall meeting." Daniel Howard, Esq., Issachar Snell, Esq., Waldo Hayward, Capt. Lemuel Packard, Moses Cary, Capt. Zebedee Snell, Capt. Jesse Perkins, Jeremiah Thayer, Jr., Barnabas Curtis, Daniel Manley, Jr., were the committee who made the following report, Nov. 13, 1797:

"The committee appointed to report a plan for keeping the Grammar-School have agreed upon the following mode, namely:

"First, That Said School shall not be kept in a dwelling-house. Second, That Said School be kept in each English district through the parish, provided they Shall build School-Houses and fit them with seats in the same manner the School-house near the meeting-house is, and otherwise convenient in the judgment of the Selectmen for the time being, and find sufficiency of Fire wood. Third, In case any district shall not comply with the foregoing conditions, the school is to be kept in the next District according to their turn. The school shall be kept first in Issachar Snell's, 2d in Jesse Perkins', 3d Jonathan Cary's, 4th Amzi Brett's, 5th William Shaw's, 6th Ichabod Edson's, 7th Charles Snell's, 8th Ephraim Cole's, 9th Daniel Manly's, 10th Capt. Zebedee Snell's,—all of which is Submitted to the parish for consideration and acceptance.

"The above report was accepted and agreed to by the Parish.
"A trew record.

"DANIEL CARY, Parish Clerk."

Previous to the organization of the town, in 1821, the North Parish had the charge of the school funds which were set apart by the town to them, and the precinct committee were the committee when no others were chosen especially for that purpose. The amount was assessed upon the inhabitants according to their valuation. We find no systematic account of the amount appropriated yearly or the manner in which it was spent, but presume it was well expended. The schools were usually from six to eight weeks in a year, and we should judge the people would make the most of their time. We have found occasionally separate amounts additional to that voted by the town to be assessed by the parish, as, March 16, 1795, "Voted £15 for English Schooling." Also, Feb. 27, 1798, "Voted to raise two hundred dollars for the use of schooling." This above vote was reconsidered Aug. 19, 1798. The precinct voted sums only when an extra outlay had been made or a school-house built. The first appropriations are from 1821 to 1825, inclusive, when the sum of six hundred and twenty-five dollars was voted. Early the next year (1826) the State passed a general law placing the entire care and superintendence of the public schools in a town in the hands of a committee, which consisted of three, five, or seven persons, whose duty it was to examine into the qualifications of teachers, and to visit the several schools at the commencement and closing of them. Their duty was to provide books for those that fail to provide for themselves, under certain rules, and also to determine what books should be used in the schools.

School Committee of the Town.—The following is a list of the school committee from 1827 to 1864, inclusive, together with the years of their election:

- Eliab Whitman, 1827, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '46, '47.
- Linus Howard, 1827, '29, '30, '31.
- Dr. Nathan Perry, 1827.
- Rev. D. Huntingdon, 1828, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47.
- Dr. John S. Crafts, 1828, '29, '30.
- Rev. John Goldsbury, 1828.
- Heman Packard, 1829, '30, '31, '31, '33, '34.
- Albert Smith, 1829, '35, '38, '39.
- Jesse Perkins, 1829, '30, '31, '32, '33, '36, '37, '39.
- Jabez Kingman, 1830.
- Erastus Wales, 1832, '33.
- Lucius Kingman, 1834, '35.
- Zibeon Shaw, 1834, '35, '36, '37.
- Joseph A. Rainsford, 1836, '37.
- Isaac Eames, 1838.
- Josiah W. Kingman, 1838.
- Rev. John Dwight, 1838.
- Rev. Paul Couch, 1838, '39, '40, '41, '42, '43, '44, '45, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '53, '54, '55, '56, '57, '58.
- Rev. A. S. Dudley, 1845.
- Adoniram Bisbee, 1848, '49, '50, '51, '52.
- Rev. William Whiting, 1848, '49, '50.
- Henry A. Ford, 1851, '52, '56, '57, '58, '59, '60, '61.
- Rev. Henry Baylies, 1853, '54.
- Rev. A. B. Wheeler, 1854, '55.
- Rev. Warren Goddard, 1853.
- George T. Ryder, 1855.
- Charles C. Bixby, 1855.
- Rev. Charles L. Mills, 1856, '57, '58, '59, '60.
- Elbridge G. Ames, 1859, '60, '61, '62, '63.
- Galen E. Pratt, 1860, '61, '62, '63.
- Rev. Charles W. Wood, 1862, '63, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77.
- Augustus T. Jones, 1864, '65, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80.
- Rev. F. A. Crafts, 1864, '65, '66, '67.
- Rev. J. L. Stone, 1866, '67, '68.
- Jonathan White, 1867, '68, '69, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.
- Jonas R. Perkins, 1867, '68.
- Rev. E. C. Mitchell, 1868.
- Rev. I. M. Atwood, 1869, '70, '71.
- Henry A. Ford, 1870, '71, '72.
- Darius Howard, 1870, '71, '72.
- Ira Copeland, 1870, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75.
- Charles R. Ford, 1870, '71, '72, '73, '74.
- Charles D. Brigham, 1870, '71.
- Ellis Packard, 1870, '71, '72, '73, '74, '75.
- Albert Keith, 1870, '71, '72.

Loring W. Puffer, 1874.
 Enos H. Reynolds, 1874, '75, '76, '77, '78.
 S. Franklin Packard, 1874, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.
 Alfred Laws, 1874, '75, '76.
 Cyrus F. Copeland, 1874, '75, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.
 Baalis Sanford, Jr., 1875, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83, '84.
 John J. Whipple, 1875, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.
 Edward Crocker, 1876, '77, '78.
 H. N. P. Hubbard, 1877, '78, '79.
 Rev. Henry E. Goddard, 1877, '78, '79.
 Charles W. Sumner, 1875, '76, '77, '78, '79, '80, '81.
 De Witt Clinton Packard, 1879, '80, '81, '82.
 Patrick Gilmore, 1880, '81, '82.
 Lizzie A. Kingman, elected in joint convention for three years, but declined serving.
 Martha J. Farwell, 1882, '83, '84.
 Samuel L. Beals, 1882.
 David S. Cowell, 1882, '83, '84.
 Arthur E. Kenrick, 1882, '83, '84.
 Hon. Ziba C. Keith, ex officio, 1882, '84 (mayor).
 Hon. Henry H. Packard, ex officio, 1883 (mayor).
 William A. Sanford, 1883, '84.
 William Rankin, 1883, '84.

Annual Appropriations for Schools.—This committee was also required to make an annual report of the number of schools, scholars, amount appropriated, and such other details as was deemed of interest to the secretary of the commonwealth. From these reports (now on file in his office) from North Bridgewater we find the following reports, which we publish to exhibit at a glance the condition of the schools at different dates:

Year.	Number of Scholars.	Amount appropriated.	Number of Schools.
1827.....	425	$800	11
1828.....	425	800	11
1829.....	550	800	11
1830.....	580	800	11
1831.....	593	800	11
1832.....	569	800	11
1833.....	669	800	11
1834.....	650	1000	11
1835.....	657	1000	11
1836.....	676	1000	11

We see by the above returns that prior to the year 1837 the amount annually appropriated for the support of the public schools in the town did not increase in proportion to the increase in the number of scholars. During this year a change was made in the laws regulating the schools throughout the commonwealth by the organization of the Board of Education in June, 1837, and by which all the school committees in the several towns were required to make a detailed report to them annually of the condition of the schools in their respective towns, which report was either to be read in open town-meeting or printed for circulation among the inhabitants. The effect of these reports has been of universal advantage to the commonwealth, as by this system the experience of each town is laid open to the others, so that they may be benefited by another's experience. By it the several portions of the State are brought nearer each other, causing a spirit of emulation to pervade the community. It is this that has given the Old Bay State a name worthy of being handed down to future generations, and has made her so celebrated for her educational advantages.

The returns above named were usually made in March or April, and presented to the town for their approval. Below we present the reader with a copy of the returns from 1838, the year following the organization of the board, to the year 1882, inclusive:

Year.	No. Schools.	Amount appropriated by Taxation.	Number of Scholars between 4 and 16.
1838.....	11	$1000.00	704
1839.....	13	1188.83	717
1840.....	11	1200.00	701
1841.....	11	1500.00	678
1842.....	11	1500.00	713
1843.....	11	1500.00	739
1844.....	11	1761.56	799
1845.....	13	1926.20	800
1846.....	13	1926.20	800
1847.....	13	1630.00	790
1848.....	13	1630.00	817
1849.....	15	2000.00	891
1850.....	16	$2000.00	802
1851.....	16	2,000.00	867
1852.....	16	2,600.00	905
1853.....	16	2,600.00	979
1854.....	16	3,000.00	1043
1855.....	18	3,000.00	1124
1856.....	19	3,500.00	1135
1857.....	18	3,500.00	1135
1858.....	19	3,500.00	1191
1859.....	19	3,500.00	1174
1860.....	19	3,500.00	1177
1861.....	20	3,500.00	1263
1862.....	21	3,500.00	1271
1863.....	21	3,500.00	1343
1864.....	21	4,500.00	1302
1865.....	25	7,000.00	1525
1866.....	26	7,900.00	1525
1867.....	26	8,000.00	1530
1868.....	27	10,000.00	1537
1869.....	27	10,000.00	1446
1870.....	29	14,250.00	1589
1871.....	33	15,250.00	1710
1872.....	35	16,500.00	1647
1873.....	34	17,500.00	1820
1874.....	38	21,500.00	1918
1875.....	38	21,599.00	1970
1876.....	37	22,975.00	1941
1877.....	38	25,821.00	2140
1878.....	40	26,025.00	2045
1879.....	41	24,740.00	2107
1880.....	43	22,700.00	2267
1881.....	49	23,750.00	2457
1882.....	50	27,023.00	2564

No. Scholars between 5 and 16.

NOTE.—The reports in the several towns being made in the early part of the year, the figures opposite the dates above are, in fact, the record of the preceding year, as, in 1838, the return being for the year ending in March, it would be the record for 1837, and so on to the end of the list.

For eight years previous to 1864 the town of North Bridgewater (now Brockton) did not expend as much money per scholar as most of the towns in the State.

In that year the people, with a commendable spirit, added one thousand dollars to their appropriation, making it four thousand five hundred dollars, which sum was divided among the several districts through the town; also another appropriation of twelve hundred dollars for high-school purposes, making a total of five thousand seven hundred dollars for schools. To show how the town has been in past times, we will present to the reader a few figures for 1863, with an appropriation of three thousand five hundred dollars. There were in the commonwealth three hundred and thirty-three towns. Of this number, three hundred and six towns paid more for each scholar between the ages of five and fifteen than this town, while there are but twenty-six towns that did not pay as much. There were Four that paid one dollar and over.

Fifty-one that paid two dollars and over.

Ninety-nine that paid three dollars and a fraction.

Ninety-two that paid four dollars and a fraction.

Thirty-six that paid five dollars and a fraction.

Nineteen that paid six dollars and a fraction.

Ten that paid seven dollars and a fraction.

Eleven that paid eight dollars and a fraction.

Four that paid nine dollars and a fraction.

One that paid ten dollars and a fraction.

One that paid twelve dollars and a fraction.

Two that paid fourteen dollars and a fraction.

One that paid nineteen dollars and a fraction, the highest town in the State.

North Bridgewater paid $2.606 per scholar.

East Bridgewater paid $3.369 per scholar.

West Bridgewater paid $3.518 per scholar.

Bridgewater paid $3.597 per scholar.

In comparison with the other towns in Plymouth County, while this town stood second in point of population, fifth in valuation, fourth in the number of her schools, yet she paid the smallest sum per scholar of any town in the county. At that time the public sentiment began to change in regard to the importance of keeping up the schools, and the additional sum appropriated in 1864 gave a new impulse to the cause of popular education. Sept. 5, 1864, a new high school was opened in the building formerly occupied by Mr. S. D. Hunt for school purposes. The school at the end of the first year gave promise of success.

During the first settlement of the North Parish there was but one school district, and that included the entire parish. Only one teacher was required, and that was usually the minister of the parish, or some person sufficiently "larned" to teach the young to "Read, Wright, and Sifer," which at that time was all that was deemed necessary for common business pursuits, except those intending to enter some professional calling.

As the different portions of the precinct became settled, movable schools were held in private dwellings, mechanic shops, and corn-houses, or such places as could be best and most easily procured. The minds of the people were occupied in agricultural pursuits, clearing land, and providing for the support of their families, and such other matters as were necessary for subsistence. They were like all people in new places: they had not an abundance of money or means to do with, as at the present day, and he was lucky who could be spared from labor long enough to get even six weeks' schooling in a year.

New School Districts.—In 1751 the people saw the necessity of a division of the school funds, and, for the purpose of dividing the time equally and accommodating all portions of the precinct, voted to divide the parish into three school districts, or "Ricks." Again, in 1784, the parish was divided into four districts, or "Ricks," and the school was kept in the two westerly districts, which were west of the present Main Street, the first year, and the two easterly districts to have it the next year. Again, in 1795, the two northerly districts were divided into three districts, making five in the parish. In 1794 a system of choosing a district "committee man" to look after the schools in the several districts was adopted, which served to give new interest in school matters. In 1797 a committee of one from each district were appointed to rearrange the "keeping of the School." This committee reported against keeping schools in private houses, and in favor of having schools kept in order around the town, provided each district would furnish a school-house and find fuel. Various changes were made in the division of the territory till 1865, when there were fourteen school districts in the town.

No. 1, or "Centre."—The first house erected in this district was near the old church; the next was situated just south of the present hotel and on the spot where Kingman's brick block now stands. The third was located on School Street, east of the hotel and near the present new house. The present building was erected in 1847, and is a neat, roomy building, two stories in height, with a cupola and bell, and is painted white, with green blinds, and inclosed with a substantial fence. Now used for a high school.

No. 2, or "Howard."—This district comprised the northerly portion of the town, near Stoughton line. The first house erected in this part of the town was built previous to 1795, and was removed in 1860 to give place for a new and larger edifice. The next building was erected during the years 1860 and 1861, under the direction of Lucien B. Keith, Charles S. Johnson, Nahum Battles, Willard Howard, and Henry Howard as building committee, and who were the trustees in behalf of the district. The building was fifty by thirty-three feet, with twenty-three feet posts. The contractor and master-builder was John F. Beal, of Stoughton, who performed his part in a faithful and workmanlike manner. The school-room is thirty-five by forty-two feet, with seats for eighty scholars, which are of the modern style, furnished by Mr. W. G. Shattuck, of Boston. Around the outside of the room were seats for sixty scholars more. The rooms were well furnished with blackboards. There was a large room in the second story, well adapted for public gatherings of any kind, furnished with settees. There was also a retiring-room in the house, fifteen feet square, with seats for those wishing to remain during intermission. In the entry was a large amount of wardrobe hooks and iron sinks for the use of the pupils. The arrangement of the house was excellent, and the interior, as well as exterior, appearance reflects great credit upon the building committee. The house was dedicated March 20, 1861, with the following exercises: Voluntary; invocation, by Rev. N. B. Blanchard; singing, by the children; remarks, by Galen E. Pratt, of the school committee; address, by Mr. Farwell, the teacher at that time; finale, singing, under the direction of Robert Sumner, of Stoughton.

No. 3, "West Shares or Northwest Bridgewater" (now "Brockton Heights").—This district was provided with a small, neat school-house, situated upon the road leading from the Centre Village to Stoughton. It consisted of a one-story building, painted white, with green blinds.

No. 4, "Tilden."—This building was situated on the Boston and Taunton Turnpike, and near the road leading from Easton to North Bridgewater Village, and near to the shoe manufactory of H. T. Marshall; it was a small building, similar to that at the West Shares.

No. 5, the "Ames" District.—Situated on the road leading to Easton from the Centre Village, and near the residence of the late Dr. Fiske Ames.

No. 6, or "Campello" District.—The first school-house in this village was one of the first in the town; was erected previous to 1784. This was sold at auction, and removed by Maj. Nathan Hayward to the north part of the town in 1842, and a new one erected by Bela Keith, twenty-eight by eighteen feet, at an expense of about five hundred dollars, one story in height, painted white. In 1854 this house was raised, and one story added, and in 1862 a new house was built by Otis Cobb, costing four hundred and fifty dollars, situated south of the old building. These two buildings have long since given place to one large and more commodious building.

No. 7, or "Copeland."—There have been three houses in this district. The first was built about 1800. A neat and tidy house was erected in 1852: one-story building, painted and blinded, and was an ornament to that portion of the town, when compared to the old red school-house of ancient days. This district is situated about one mile east from the village of Campello, on the east side of Salisbury River, and the bounds of which extend to the West Bridgewater line.

No. 8, or "Shaw's."—This district was one of the early formed, the old house being built previous to 1794. The next house was erected in 1843, costing about five hundred dollars, one story high and painted; located on or near the same spot that the old house stood, which is near to what is called "Shaw's Corner."

No. 9, or "Cary Hill."—This is one of the oldest districts in town, a house having been built previous to 1794. It was situated in the northeast part of the town, upon a high spot of land called "Cary Hill." First house burned in March, 1840; rebuilt by Marcus Packard, in July, same year, costing four hundred and twenty-five dollars.

No. 10, the "Field District."—The school in this was situated on a prominent height of land, on the south side of Prospect Street, between the houses of John Field and the late Joseph Brett. They have a new house erected within a short time.

No. 11, or "Sprague's."—This portion of the town has had two school-houses. The first was built about 1800; the second was built in 1852, under the care of Chandler Sprague, Esq., and was a neat, two-story building, with a cupola containing a bell, the whole painted white, with green blinds, and was located in a very sightly position on a prominent street.

No. 12, or "North Wing."—This is a comparatively new district. It was formed of a portion of the Centre District, being set apart from them in 1846. At first a large, two-story house was erected, but of late it has increased in numbers to such an extent that in a few years a second house was erected for the primary department, and both became well filled with pupils.

No. 13, or "South Wing."—This, like the North Wing District, is also a new district, they having been set off by themselves at the same time the Centre was divided, and the North Wing taken from them in 1846. A new school-house was erected near the residence of Mr. Sumner A. Hayward, on the east side of Main Street, and has quite a large school.

No. 14, or "Snow's."—This district comprises the territory between West Shares and Tilden Districts. The house was situated near the First Methodist Church, on the turnpike, and has been erected but a few years.

This brings the subject of schools down to the year 1866, when, by vote of the town, held May 5, 1866, they "voted to abolish the District System." Since that time the schools have been under the immediate control and direction of the school committee chosen by the town and city. The several committee-men are selected as special for particular schools.

The following is a table of attendance on the different schools for the year 1883:

TABLE OF ATTENDANCE.

TEACHERS.	GRADE.	SPRING TERM.					SUMMER TERM.
		Number Enrolled.	Average Attendance.	Per cent. of Attendance.	Number Cases Tardiness.	Number neither Absent nor Tardy.	Number Enrolled.	Average Attendance.	Per cent. of Attendance.	Number Cases Tardiness.	Number neither Absent nor Tardy.
E. Parker, Jr., principal } W. E. Perry, sub-master } S. J. Pettee, 1st asst. } M. E. Poore, 2d asst. } W. T. Copeland.....	High School.	106	101	.95			149	146	98.1
J. F. Lewis.....	1st Grammar.	40	33.7	.92	41	2	44	36.7	.93	25	9
L. F. Elliott.....	1st Grammar.	55	53	.97	28	12	56	52	.93	23	14
M. S. Donaldson.....	1st Grammar.	57	54.33	.92	1	9	49	51	.95	2	10
G. C. Howard.....	1st Grammar.	16	14.5	.93	25	1	27	24	.93	16	6
M. A. Goodrich.....	1st Grammar.	24	20	.94	5	3	25	23	.95	9	5
E. F. Gove.....	1st Grammar.	32	31	.97	7	7	42	39	.95	6	12
E. A. Parker.....	1st Grammar.	45	42	.93	25	3	65	53	.81	20	7
H. F. Greenleaf.....	2d Grammar.	38	32.6	.90	2	6	43	40.2	.95	17	3
G. Calef.....	2d Grammar.	39	34	.92	27	5	41	35	.94	19	4
L. A. Kingman.....	2d Grammar.	34	32	.94	11	5	34	30	.88	33	8
A. L. Burke.....	2d Grammar.	46	48	.87	11	5	56	52	.92	9	15
H. M. Packard.....	3d Grammar.	55	44	.89	12	1	59	50	.94	22	5
R. A. Brett.....	3d Grammar.	56	46.8	.90	31	1	58	50.1	.93	17	5
A. N. Thompson.....	3d Grammar.	61	51.6	.93	17	9	62	51.3	.91	24	12
A. A. Averill.....	Intermediate.	45	41	.97	31	5	55	50.4	.94	10	11
L. A. Upham.....	Intermediate.	60	47.3	.88	72	1	58	50.6	.93	40	3
E. F. Wilkes.....	Intermediate.	58	50	.92	32	7	61	51	.89	22	10
I. M. Rogers.....	Intermediate.	59	50.7	.92	8	4	56	50.4	.93	15	10
G. A. Rogers.....	Intermediate.	59	56	.95	43	7	41	38.7	.95	21	6
E. Wood.....	Intermediate.	63	51.4	.90.8	15	6	59	50.6	.93.4	23	10
G. P. Wilder.....	Intermediate.	56	43.5	.79	62	2	62	51	.82	36	5
J. A. Barry.....	Intermediate.	64	54	.83	48	2	58	45	.83	46	4
P. A. Brown.....	Intermediate.	51	40.6	.89	54	4	58	47.5	.93	74	6
J. F. Otis.....	Intermediate.	45	37	.90	83	3	59	48	.92	17	2
E. A. Porter.....	1st Primary.	56	51	.91	14	6	74	59	.91	21	11
L. E. Prescott.....	1st Primary.	60	52	.86	12	3	64	57	.92	8	8
M. B. Pratt.....	1st Primary.	57	48.6	.92	52	13	59	50.9	.94	46	16
L. H. Fuller.....	1st Primary.	60	49	.97	6	9	70	62.5	.88	5	12
E. C. Blanchard.....	1st Primary.	38	34	.90	11	3	53	49	.93	16	12
E. Beaman.....	2d Primary.	57	49	.88	48	4	56	47	.84	46	2
A. L. Kendall.....	2d Primary.	69	60	.91	26	3	72	60	.91	27	4
L. W. Kingman.....	2d Primary.	56	50.6	.90	13	8	59	55.8	.94	15	8
M. M. Allen.....	2d Primary.	80	65	.92	18	8	72	60	.92	13	3
A. F. Lawson.....	2d Primary.	68	49.8	.85	23	6	72	53	.89	65	4
J. A. Wiswell.....	2d Primary.	67	61	.91	25	1	63	59	.93	21	2
J. A. Mann.....	2d Primary.	54	47.1	.87	12	4	54	44.5	.82	56	5
M. A. Brigham.....	2d Primary.	66	52.2	.79	37	5	70	56.6	.80	42	5
E. M. Kendall.....	2d Primary.	62	45.5	.84	17	2	60	39	.86	44	3
A. M. Poyntz.....	2d Primary.	60	41	.68	17	4	60	49	.81	15	5
E. Manley.....	2d Primary.	62	51.8	.83	3	14	59	49.9	.84	8	9
M. E. Hannigan.....	2d Primary.	69	54.1	.86	55	1	72	57	.91	61	2
S. G. Thomas.....	2d Primary.	58	53	.91	3	16	45	42	.92	2	17
A. F. Packard.....	2d Primary.	92	61.5	.79	134	1	92	56	.73	218	1
E. R. Packard.....	2d Primary.	74	51	.87	36	1	68	50	.90	35	2
M. Pratt.....	2d Primary.	56	43	.81	12	6	57	39	.76	40	2
W. H. Crocker } S. Rankin }	Ungraded.	57	44	.88	63	1	57	50	.87	95	2
E. M. Elliott.....	Ungraded.	70	56	.83	111	0	63	52.9	.89	62	1
M. I. Estes.....	Ungraded.	50	38.3	.56	49	5	46	38	.56	71	6
E. A. Perry.....	Ungraded.	40	34	.91	16	2	36	32.7	.96	17	5
		28	21	.84	53	...	37	27.6	.91	94	2

ESTIMATED VALUE OF SCHOOL PROPERTY, JANUARY 1, 1882.

Schools.	School Lot.	Buildings.	Furniture.	Apparatus.
Cary.....	$100	$500	$100	$16
Shaw.....	100	1,500	100	16
Howard.....	500	2,000	300	16
Prospect.....	500	2,000	400	16
Hancock.....	150	1,200	225	16
Marshall.....	100	500	75	16
Ames.....	50	300	50	13
Belmont.....	500	1,800	350	30
Park Street.....	1,000	1,800	375	20
Copeland.....	200	800	200	13
Sylvester.....	200	500	50	10
Ashland.....	250	500	50	10
Spring Street.....	1,000	1,800	375	20
Centre Primary.....	1,000	1,900	375	20
Sprague.....	1,000	7,500	800	30
Whitman.....	4,000	14,000	1,300	30
Huntington.....	1,500	14,000	1,300	30
Perkins.....	1,500	12,000	1,300	30
High School.....	5,000	8,000	500	200
Union.....	500	9,500	800	.....
Packard.....	500	2,300	475	.....
	$19,650	$84,400	$9,500	$542

Adelphian Academy.—About the middle of August, 1844, two young men, brothers, who had just finished their collegiate studies, came into town, entire strangers, without letters of introduction or money, and opened a school in a building owned by Maj. Nathan Hayward, south of the hotel and quite near the "Old Unitarian Church." They commenced with thirty students, Sept. 4, 1844, and steadily increased in numbers as follows: the first term they had forty-six students; second term, fifty; third term, ninety-six, fourth term, sixty-nine; fifth term, one hundred and twenty-one. The second year the building proved inadequate to their wants, and the church above named was procured for the same purpose. The school continued in favor and was doing well, when a meeting was held to consider the propriety of erecting a suitable building for the permanent establishing of the academy. Three thousand dollars was agreed upon as the amount needed to accomplish the object. Failing to get enough subscribed, the project was abandoned for a time. Struggling against adverse circumstances, and after much thought and many solicitations to go elsewhere, they concluded to remain at North Bridgewater, and to make that town a permanent home. A small hillock of about four acres, a short distance north of the railroad depot, was purchased, which they called Montello, upon which they erected buildings suitable for their purpose, involving an expenditure of nearly ten thousand dollars. The friends of the enterprise made them a dedicatory visit soon after the completion of the buildings, and presented them with a valuable bell for the academy building. In the spring of 1847, an act of incorporation was granted to the proprietors with corporate powers. The following is a copy of the act:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by Authority of the Same as follows:

"Silas L. Loomis, L. F. C. Loomis, Nathan Jones, and their associates and successors, are hereby made a corporation by the name of the Adelphian Academy, to be established in the town of North Bridgewater, in the county of Plymouth, with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties, restrictions, and liabilities set forth in the forty-fourth chapter of the Revised Statutes."

This corporation had permission to hold real estate to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars, and personal estate to the amount of ten thousand dollars, to be exclusively devoted to the purposes of education.

Approved March 11, 1847.

The following were elected officers of the institution: Joseph Sylvester, president; L. C. Loomis, secretary; S. L. Loomis, treasurer; Hon. Jesse Perkins, L. C. Loomis, Josiah W. Kingman, Edwin H. Kingman, David Cobb, Newton Shaw, Silas L. Loomis, George Clark, Caleb Copeland, Franklin Ames, Isaac Bames, trustees.

This institution continued to increase in numbers until a high school was thought of being established in the town, which the Messrs. Loomis supposed might injure their school, when they concluded to close it as soon as it might be done without too great a sacrifice. Thus the academy was brought to a close in 1854, after a term of ten years from its commencement. During this time they had gathered a library of over one thousand volumes and a cabinet of over ten thousand specimens. The following are among those that had taught in that institution:

Professor Silas L. Loomis, A.M., M.D., now surgeon in the United States army; Professor L. C. Loomis, A.M., M.D., now president of the Wesleyan Female College, Wilmington, Del.; J. E. Marsh, A.M., M.D., now surgeon in the United States Army; Rev. Horace C. Atwater, A.M., Hon. Isaac Atwater, A.M., chief justice of Iowa; Rev. J. H. Burr, A.M., Rev. Daniel Steele, A.M., J. Mason Everett, E. A. Kingsbury, Maximilian Hall, B. A. Tidd, Miss Emma L. Loomis, Miss Susan T. Howard, Otis S. Moulton, Annie E. Belcher, S. M. Saunders, Emery Seaman, O. W. Winchester, A.B.; Mrs. Mary A. Winchester.

The building formerly used as an academy has since been removed to the corner of Centre and Montello Streets, near the railroad depot, and is used as a manufactory. It was a three-story building, painted white, with green blinds, and crowned with a cupola for a bell.

North Bridgewater Academy.—This institution was founded by Mr. Sereno D. Hunt, who was assisted at different times by the following teachers: Mrs.

Hunt, wife of the principal; Miss Mary H. Clough, Miss Clara Kingman, Miss Sarah B. Fiske, Miss E. Marion Hurlbut, Miss Helen Eveleth, Edwin Hunt, A.B., Miss Hattie F. Stacy, and Miss Julia M. Howard.

Private Schools.—Among the most prominent of these institutions in the town is Mrs. Nathan Jones' school. We take pleasure in recording the fact that for more than thirty years Mrs. Jones has kept a private boarding-school for children of both sexes at her residence; and few there are to be found of the young persons, natives of the town, who have not attended "Mrs. Jones' School" at least for one term.

Deacon Heman Packard kept a select school at the north end of the town, on Prospect Hill, for several years previous to his leaving town for New Orleans, which had a good reputation.

Rev. E. Porter Dyer kept a select school in the town in 1835 and 1836.

Normal School.—List of persons having attended the State Normal School at Bridgewater, with the years of their attendance, most of whom are graduates:

Mr. Lucius Gurney.....	1841	Miss Almira Kingman...	1858
Miss Melinda A. Carey,..	1841	Miss Arabella Ames.....	1859
Miss Vesta Holbrook....	1841	Mr. Henry Manley.....	1859
Mr. Chauncey Conant.....	1842	Miss Lizzie A. Kingman	1860
Mr. Nathaniel Wales.....	1842	Mr. Isaac K. Harris.....	1860
Mr. Elbridge G. Ames....	1843	Mr. Thomas S. Kingman	1861
Mr. Lysander Dickerman	1843	Miss Mary E. Hughes...	1863
Mr. Frederick Perkins...	1843	Miss Julia A. Packard...	1863
Mr. Josiah V. Bisbee.....	1853	Miss Mary A. Hollis.....	1863
Mr. Augustus Remick....	1857	Miss Martha J. Packard	1863
Miss Harriet N. Kingman	1857	Miss Esther M. Simmons	1863
Mr. Ellis V. Lyon.....	1858	Mr. Charles H. W. Wood	1863
Mr. Jonas Reynolds.....	1858	Miss Lucia A. Kingman	1864

College Graduates.—List of graduates from different colleges of persons from North Bridgewater, so far as can be ascertained, to 1865:

James Thompson, 1761, Princeton, N. J., clergyman and preceptor.
 John Porter, Jr., 1770, Harvard, clergyman.
 Huntington Porter, 1777, Harvard, clergyman.
 Jonathan Porter, 1777, Harvard, physician.
 Eliphalet Porter, 1777, Harvard, clergyman.
 Thomas Crafts, 1783, Harvard, clergyman.
 Asa Packard, 1783, Harvard, clergyman.
 Zechariah Howard, 1784, Harvard, clergyman.
 Hezekiah Packard, 1787, Harvard, clergyman.
 Joshua Cushman, 1787, Harvard, clergyman and statesman.
 Naphtali Shaw, 1790, Dartmouth, clergyman.
 Theophilus Packard, 1796, Dartmouth, clergyman.
 Daniel Howard, 1797, Harvard, attorney-at-law.
 Issachar Snell, 1797, Harvard, physician.
 Lucius Cary, 1798, Brown University, attorney-at-law.
 Daniel Noyes, 1813, Yale, merchant.
 Jonas Perkins, 1813, Brown University, clergyman.
 Frederick Crafts, 1816, Brown University, preceptor.
 Jonathan P. Crafts, 1817, Brown University.
 Austin Packard, 1821, Brown University, attorney-at-law.
 Levi Packard, 1821, Brown University, clergyman.
 Eliphalet P. Crafts, 1821, Brown University, clergyman.
 Thomas Jefferson Snow, 1823, Brown University, preceptor.

Lucius Kingman, 1830, Brown University, attorney-at-law.
 Abel W. Kingman, 1830, Amherst, physician.
 Austin Cary, 1837, Amherst, clergyman.
 Samuel Dike, 1838, Brown University, clergyman.
 Abel Kingman Packard, 1845, Amherst, clergyman.
 David Temple Packard, 1850, Amherst, clergyman.
 Lysander Dickerman, 1851, Brown University, clergyman.
 Augustus T. Jones, 1856, Yale, editor and publisher.
 John P. Apthrop, 1861, Amherst.
 Heman Packard DeForest, 1862, Yale.
 Ebenezer Couch, 1864, Harvard.
 Miss Elizabeth A. Packard, M.D., graduated at New England Female Medical College.
 John Goddard entered at Amherst, 1858, but owing to ill health did not graduate.
 Henry T. Eddy is now in Yale College.

LIST OF GRADUATES OF THE BROCKTON HIGH SCHOOL.

1867.
N. Waldo Bradford.	Edward C. Wood.
Eldridge L. Brown.	R. Augusta Brett.
William P. Burden.	Alice M. Keith.
Warren Goddard.	Mary W. Lyon.
Edward D. Hall.	Alice M. Packard.
Ezra T. Kimball.	Sarah F. Packard.
Charles G. Mauley.	Alice A. White.
Charles F. Reynolds.	Emma White.
Granville W. Tinkham.
1868.
David W. Battles.	M. Addie Hall.
Ellis F. Copeland.	Florilla M. Hall.
Henry L. French.	Cynthia Hamilton.
Charles A. Leach.	Julia B. Hayward.
John F. Muir.	Isabella A. Howard.
Herman W. Perkins.	Rosa E. Kingman.
Walter L. Sawyer.
1869.
Charles H. Bates.	Addie F. Field.
Charles E. Field.	S. Nellie Foss.
George Clarence Holmes.	Mary E. Kingman.
Chester V. Keith.	Abbie Leach.
Joseph C. Snow.	Annie Leach.
Hugh H. Smith.	Ella D. Packard.
Fannie B. Bradford.	Florence L. B. Peterson.
Lizzie M. Clapp.	Emily C. Wood.
Mattie A. Copeland.
1870.
Henry M. Dunham.	Alice Cary.
Hervey Dunham.	Eliza S. Eaton.
Frank A. Dunham.	Jennie Hollywood.
Henry E. Goddard.	Ella Holmes.
Edwin D. Hathaway.	Fannie S. Kimball.
Elmer C. Packard.	Ida F. Kingman.
Lyman Shaw.	Hattie Sawyer.
Marcia L. Alden.
1871.
William F. Field.	Hattie P. Beal.
Forrest F. French.	Helen A. Cary.
Emery Gill.	Clara B. Cobb.
Rufus Henry Kimball.	Louise J. Crocker.
Patrick Gilmore.	E. Jennie Goldthwait.
Florus C. Reynolds.	Addie B. Leavitt.
E. Bradford Southworth.	Grace A. Murray.
Lyman C. Tilden.	Franklin S. Reynolds.
Louisa R. Bailey.

1872.
 Ida E. Andrews.
 Anna L. Barry.
 Addie L. Crocker.
 Louisa F. Howard.
 Isabel Keith.
 Georgianna F. Peterson.
 Laura D. Pierce.
 Asa E. Goddard.
 Helen Cushman.
 Josephine M. Hall.
1873.
 Mary C. Copeland.
 Abbie M. Holmes.
 Minnie C. Johnson.
 Ella M. Kimball.
 Lillian F. Packard.
 Idella M. Stevens.
 Lizzie F. Trow.
 Walter S. Hayward.
 Edwin W. Reynolds.
 Fred. P. Richmond.
 Alice M. Field.
1874.
 Louise G. Allen.
 Annie M. Howard.
 Edith M. Howard.
 Fred. R. French.
 Frank E. Packard.
 Annie L. Kendall.
 Fannie E. Howard.
 Jessie B. F. Little.
 Hattie E. McLanthlin.
 Eliza T. Wilder.
1875.
 E. Mabel Morey.
 Anna M. Trow.
 Benjamin W. Cobb.
 Wallace C. Keith.
 Arthur E. Kendrick.
 Mary E. Pinkham.
1876.
 Lizzie F. Estes.
 Minnie Ida Estes.
 Mary A. Hall.
 Nellie Packard.
 Henry C. Gurney.
 J. Emil C. Lagergreen.
 Frank, A. McLanthlin.
 Lizzie F. Cushman.
1877.
 Annie I. Churchhill.
 H. Maria Holmberg.
 Edith Leach.
 Anna M. Ponitz.
 Nellie D. Sewall.
 Louise Carr.
 Lillie E. Blanchard.
 Laura D. Gill.
 L. Etta Prescott.
 Elber C. Bryant.
 Oliver L. Congdon.
- Rosaletta M. Hall.
 Lizzie J. Jones.
 Marian H. Packard.
 Mary A. Sawyer.
 Henry F. Burrill.
 Charles Eaton.
 Lucius M. Leach.
 L. Eliot Packard.
 Mary E. Hayward.
- Louisa Cary.
 Mary A. Cole.
 Abbie A. Dunham.
 Inez M. Rogers.
 Annie P. White.
 J. William Baxendale.
 William H. Bryant.
 D. Frank Cooley.
 Austin M. White.
 Gardner F. Packard.
- Clara E. Gill.
 Charles O. Emerson.
 Elmer R. Gorham.
 Joseph M. Hollywood.
 C. Wesley McCoy.
 William S. Packard.
 John G. Parrott.
 Joseph H. Perkins.
 Loyed E. Chamberlain.
- Edgar B. Stevens.
 Anna W. Howard.
 Helen M. Packard.
 Seth E. Foss.
 William H. Porter.
 James E. Pointz.
- Ellen Manley.
 Mary C. Puffer.
 Henry L. Emerson.
 John Gilmore.
 Austin Keith.
 Albert Manley.
 Harry C. Severance.
- James Dorgan.
 Edwin L. Emerson.
 D. Everett Hall.
 Nathan Hayward.
 C. Herbert Kingman.
 J. Robert McCarty.
 Harry L. Marston.
 Dennis Murphy.
 John Kent.
 John J. Saxton.
- Mattie M. Allen.
 L. Ella Holmes.
 Jennie H. Packard.
 Mattie H. Studley.
 Winifred S. Bennett.
 Edward T. Ford.
 Charles F. Jenny.
 Charles W. Packard.
- Mary L. Bullard.
 Susan E. Manley.
 Lucy H. Fuller.
 Ellen M. Kingman.
 Nellie W. Packard.
 Belle Rankin.
 Horace Richmond.
 Minetta E. Snow.
 Annie N. Thompson.
 Sophia G. Thomas.
 George H. Bryant.
 L. Jennie Clark.
 M. Etta Eliot.
 Herbert L. Hayden.
- Eunice C. Blanchard.
 M. Agnes Brigham.
 Adam Capen Gill.
 Lillian M. Gurney.
 Marion H. Harris.
 Kitty P. Jones.
 Julia A. Mann.
- Cora F. Battles.
 Robert E. Brayton.
 Charles A. Briggs.
 Annie L. Burke.
 Fannie B. Clark.
 Nellie D. Hayward.
 Mary S. Howard.
 Ellen M. Kendall.
 Louie H. Ridgway.
 Marian F. Smith.
 Annie B. Clark.
 Emily B. Crowell.
- Susie L. Bowen.
 Emma W. Hall.
 Carrie L. Hawkins.
 Lucy C. Holbrook.
 Jennie H. Richmond.
 S. Emma Thompson.
 Florence E. Jones.
 Edward F. Barry.
 Lucy E. Benson.
 Maria C. Coots.
 George W. Emerson.
 Charles C. Fitzgerald.
 Patrick H. Gegan.
- Allen F. Brett.
 Arthur L. Copeland.
 Hattie M. Dunbar.
 Lottie R. Keith.
 Francis C. Kingman.
1878.
 Fannie E. Abbott.
 Terrie L. Brownell.
 Carrie E. Perkins.
 Emna F. Straffin.
 Mary A. Tighe.
 Walter J. Keith.
 Bernard Saxton.
 Walter H. Cleveland.
1879.
 John Kelliher.
 Ada F. Lawson.
 Herbert I. Mitchell.
 Jennie A. Packard.
 Lizzie J. Packard.
 Julia W. Peckham.
 Nellie M. Poole.
 Hattie E. Porter.
 William H. Sanford.
 Annie K. Severance.
 John E. Tighe.
 Arthur E. Southworth.
 Sarah R. Thompson.
 Ida B. Wheeler.
1880.
 Berthia Manley.
 Kattie F. Parker.
 Jennie M. Sewall.
 William F. Brooks.
 M. Francis Buckley.
 Maggie E. Hannigan.
 Norman B. Shaw.
1881.
 Fred. M. Bixby.
 Merton F. Copeland.
 Helen M. Deane.
 Ida E. Frazer.
 William Gilmore.
 Arthur E. Keith.
 Mary A. Kent.
 Florence W. Lambert.
 Frances E. Sproul.
 L. Maude Studley.
 Effie A. Tinkham.
1882.
 Emma E. Hall.
 Laura P. Hall.
 Mary F. Hayward.
 George E. Horton.
 Harry E. Howland.
 Elisha W. Morse.
 Eda R. Packard.
 Nora F. Russell.
 R. Minnebel Southworth.
 Mary E. Sullivan.
 Evan W. Thomas.
 Bernard B. Winslow.
 J. Alice Wiswell.
1883.
 Ella F. Osborne.
 Alice M. Packard.
 Alice G. Pettee.
 Ella D. Youngquist.
 Mary E. Brooks.

S. Franklin Beals.
Frank B. Buck.
Hattie E. Holmes.
Lena S. Howes.
Albert K. Joslyn.
Lillie M. Keith.
Minnie E. Lewis.

Nellie M. Lewis.
Thomas B. Riley.
Alice M. Snow.
Wesley S. Snow.
Lottie F. Swain.
Hattie White.

1884.

David Brayton, Jr.
Lillian M. Estes.
Chester G. Hill.
Ella L. Johnson.
Hannah J. Leonard.
Wilfred B. Littlefield.
Minnie E. Moors.
Eve E. Prescott.
Minnie E. Wentworth.
Lena M. Baker.
Lucia E. Cole.

Ada Baxter.
Lizzie C. Brett.
Arthur E. Clark.
Adelbert M. Fullerton.
Edward Gilmore.
Hattie A. Hayward.
George A. Holmes.
Nellie M. Howes.
J. Arthur Jenkins.
Clarence R. Packard.
Lewis E. Rich.

The Press of Brockton.—The first newspaper published in Brockton was commenced by George H. Brown, Esq., of East Bridgewater, Aug. 22, 1835, under the name of Bridgewater Patriot and Old Colony Gazette, in the hall over Maj. Nathan Hayward's store, in what is now the south corner of East Elm and Main Streets.

Mr. William H. Burleigh and Rev. E. Porter Dyer assisted Mr. Brown in the publication of the paper till its removal to East Bridgewater.

The next paper in the town was entitled the Old Colony Reporter and North Bridgewater Union, and was published by Messrs. F. W. Bartlett and Thomas D. Stetson, of Kingston, Mass., under the firm of Bartlett & Stetson, commenced Oct. 27, 1848. Mr. Bartlett left the firm after a term of one year, after which Mr. Stetson and Rev. William Whiting continued the paper in Col. Edward Southworth's hall till 1851.

About the same time there was a small sheet published at the office of the Reporter, devoted to the temperance cause, edited by young persons.

During the latter part of the winter of 1850 and 1851, one Dr. Cawdell commenced the publication of a paper called the Bay State Clipper. A few numbers were printed, and the paper, press, types, and one form of the paper were left in the hands of Col. Southworth, the owner of the premises occupied by the doctor, for expenses.

The Adelphian, a literary paper, was published for two years from Oct. 11, 1850, by the Messrs. Loomis, late principals of the Adelphian Academy, which was edited by the young ladies of the academy, and was especially devoted to the interests of the young.

On the 16th day of May, in the year 1851, the North Bridgewater Gazette was commenced in the hall over Col. Edward Southworth's store, by George Pbinney, Esq., now of the Waltham Free Press, who continued to publish the same till July 25, 1855, when he removed his office to a new building on Franklin Street.

Mr. Phinney continued to edit and publish the paper till 1863, when he sold his interest in the paper and printing-office to Mr. Augustus T. Jones, who removed to the old stand in Southworth's hall, opposite the First Congregational Church, and continued to publish a weekly paper until April 1, 1884, when the management was for a time under the care of F. H. Buffum & Co. On the 1st of September Mr. Jones sold the paper to A. M. Bridgman, a person well known among the newspaper fraternity as connected with the Haverhill Gazette and other papers.

The Brockton Evening Gazette (daily) was started by Mr. Jones April 13, 1881.

In 1874, Mr. G. F. Andrews, of Plymouth, Mass., started a paper called the Old Colony Press, which had but a short existence. The material was closed out by E. Y. Perry, Esq., of Hanover, Mass., who held a mortgage on the entire property.

Mr. Albert H. Fuller, thinking the time had come for a second paper in an enterprising town like Brockton, purchased the material, and published the first number of the Brockton Weekly Advance, May 6, 1876, under the firm of A. H. Fuller & Co., Walter L. Hathaway having an interest in the same, and W. J. Jenks, editor. Mr. Fuller sold the paper to Isaac Folger and S. Heath Rich, of Nantucket, who conducted the same from September, 1878, to May, 1879, reaching a circulation of about two thousand two hundred. This enterprise not meeting the expectations of its proprietors they surrendered it to their creditors, and the material was sold March 15, 1882, to Arthur E. Fessenden, who published the same a few months only.

Albert H. Fuller, mentioned above, started the Brockton Weekly Enterprise, July 5, 1879, and is now the publisher of the same, assisted by an able corps of journalists. This paper is in a prosperous and thrifty condition, S. Heath Rich, editor, having a circulation of fifteen hundred copies. Mr. Fuller started the first daily newspaper in Plymouth County, Jan 26, 1880, and has a circulation of two thousand two hundred copies.

Mr. Fessenden started a penny paper some years since which had a short existence. It was called the Daily Advance.

In 1878, the Brockton Trades Bulletin, a paper printed at the Sentinel office, in Stoughton, had a short life, and was soon forgotten.

Several years since G. A. Goodall published a miniature paper called Campello Press, which was sold to Augustus T. Jones, of the Gazette. It was an advertising sheet, and given to the public.

Mr. J. F. Hardy afterwards purchased the same, and with J. C. Russell as partner, under the firm of Hardy & Russell, published the same for a short time.

In 1883, Mr. Goodall published a paper known as the Campello Herald, also short-lived.

On the 8th of March the Campello Leader was first issued, and was published sixteen weeks. This was more of a literary paper than a newspaper, and was illustrated by the well-known artist of Brockton, Mr. A. F. Poole, having cartoons and pictures of local scenes, etc. Not being remunerative, this also shared the fate of its predecessors, and stopped.

The Brockton Eagle is the name of an eight-column weekly paper published by William L. Puffer, at No. 5 Green Street. The first number was issued Feb. 20, 1884.

Thus we see there are three weekly and two daily papers in the city.

Town Maps.—March 1, 1830, the Legislature of Massachusetts passed a resolve requiring the several towns in the commonwealth "to make a survey of their territory, and deposit a copy in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth." In conformity to this resolve, and by a vote of the town passed May 10, 1830, Jesse Perkins, Esq., made a survey of the town, and a map was published. Bradford Kingman, Esq., of Brookline, has a few copies.

April 5, 1853, at a legal meeting of the town, George W. Bryant, Chandler Sprague, Edward Southworth, Jr., Benjamin Kingman, and Frederick Howard were chosen a committee to cause the town to be resurveyed and a new map to be published. The contract for publishing the same was given to Messrs. H. F. Walling and E. Whiting. The map contained names of residences, views of churches, manufactories, roads, woods, streets, ponds, rivers, and divisions of the various school districts. The first map was about twenty inches square, of which a few copies only are in existence. The last map was thirty by thirty-nine inches. The first map of the ancient town of Bridgewater, including what is now North Bridgewater, was drawn with a pen by Beza Hayward, at that time one of the selectmen, June 16, 1795, and is a very crude affair.

A survey was made by Silas L. Loomis, A.M., in 1851, which was about twelve inches square.

In 1873, F. W. Beers & Co., of 36 Vesey Street, New York, published a map thirty-eight by sixty.

In 1880, Elbridge L. Brown, Esq., made a survey of the town, showing the different wards of the city. Nearly the same thing was published in the "Brockton Directory," in 1884.

An elegant copy-plate map was published by Bradford Kingman, Esq., in 1866, for his "History of North Bridgewater." The surveying and copy from which it was made was executed by Otis F. Clapp, Esq., a native of Brockton, now in charge of the "Providence City Water-Works," and is a skillful specimen of engineering work.

United States Pensions.—The following is a list of persons in Brockton who draw pensions by reason of wounds or other causes, as furnished by United States Pension Commissioner Dudley:

Name.	Cause for which Pensioned.	Monthly Rate.
Pease, Francis.....	Heart disease.....	$4.00
Ripley, Josiah W.....	Wound left shoulder.....	18.00
Rush, John.....	Gunshot wound right side.....	4.00
Tinkham, George F.....	Gunshot wound right arm.....	4.00
Thompson, Elijah.....	Malarial poison.....	8.00
Tinkham, Ephraim.....	Wound left shoulder.....	12.00
Tonge, Eben.....	Wound left thigh.....	2.33
Thompson, Charles H.....	Wound left leg.....	18.00
Sullivan, Thomas.....	Wound right leg.....	8.00
Shepardson, Luther S.....	Gunshot wound right arm.....	4.00
Snell, Isachar K.....	Injured left leg and groin.....	4.00
Smith, Jesse W.....	Wound right hip.....	4.00
Stranger, Herman F.....	Gunshot wound right leg.....	4.00
Keith, Martin M.....	Gunshot wound right thigh.....	2.03
Snell, Bradford.....	Gunshot wound left arm and breast.....	4.00
Jackson, Laban.....	Gunshot wound left side.....	6.00
Hathaway, Joseph T.....	Malaria poison (navy).....	7.50
Howard, Webster.....	Tuberculosis.....	4.00
Mahar, John.....	Wounded and injured spine.....	18.00
McGill, Florence.....	Wound left foot.....	4.00
Valley, Franklin.....	Gunshot wound left hand.....	12.00
Southwick, Thomas A.....	Gunshot wound left thigh.....	4.00
Packard, Stephen S.....	Injured right hip.....	12.00
Knowlton, Edward L.....	Wound thigh.....	2.66
Harriman, William H.....	Gunshot wound left hip.....	4.00
Hall, Andrew.....	Wound right foot.....	4.00
Drohan, Ellen.....	Mother.....	8.00
Blabbe, Polly.....	".....	8.00
Blanchard, Margaret.....	".....	8.00
Davis, Daniel.....	Father.....	20.00
Whitmore, Hannah H.....	Widow (navy).....	20.00
Southworth, Rhoda.....	Widow 1812.....	8.00
Hartwell, Amy.....	".....	8.00
Howard, Eliza.....	".....	8.00
Howard, Harriet M.....	".....	8.00
Kingman, Janette H.....	".....	8.00
Knapp, Polly.....	".....	8.00
Kingman, Rebecca.....	".....	8.00
Orcutt, Sarah W.....	".....	8.00
Manley, Iza A.....	".....	8.00
Thayer, Mary.....	".....	8.00
Williams, Susan M.....	".....	8.00
Warren, Rhoda.....	".....	8.00
Reynolds, Nancy.....	".....	8.00
Field, Olive.....	".....	8.00
Wilbur, Almira.....	".....	8.00
Woodward, Flora.....	".....	8.00
Conant, Salina.....	".....	8.00
Copeland, Martha.....	".....	8.00
Ames, Sally.....	".....	8.00
Brett, Nancy S.....	".....	8.00
Bradford, Mary.....	".....	8.00
Brett, Lucy.....	".....	8.00
Brett, Almira.....	".....	8.00
Noyes, Alva.....	Survivor 1812.....	8.00
McKenney, Abigail.....	Mother.....	8.00
Wright, Sarah B.....	".....	8.00
Roberts, Maria.....	Widow.....	8.00
Childs, Wealthy.....	".....	8.00
Howe, Mary A.....	".....	8.00
Miller, Louisa S.....	".....	8.00
Frost, John.....	Father.....	8.00
Vincent, James.....	Gunshot wound lower jaw.....	6.00
Thompson, Zenas M.....	Varicose vein right leg and thigh.....	8.00
Moran, David.....	Gunshot wound left ankle.....	8.00
McClotee, Arthur.....	Gunshot wound right hand.....	8.00
Willis, Henry A.....	Diseased lungs.....	8.00

Name.	Cause for which Pensioned.	Monthly Rate.
Amees, George W.	Gunshot wound left side	$2.00
Allen, Francis E.	Wound left hand	8.00
Ashley, Alson G.	Shell wound right shoulder	1.00
Bird, Daniel C.	Shell wound head and chest	8.00
Burt, Eustis E.	Gunshot wound left leg	3.00
Bunker, Eli	Gunshot wound left hip	2.00
Beals, Solomon F.	Gunshot wound left foot	2.00
Bosworth, Orrin W.	Wound left shoulder	4.00
Derry, Barden B.	Gunshot wound right hand and thigh	4.00
Eames, Daniel B.	Injured back	15.00
Warren, Joseph G.	Wound right arm	18.00
Landrigan, John	Wound left eye	8.00
Lingham, George H.	Wound left arm	6.00
Luca, Franklin W.	Wound left arm	2.66
Frost, David	Varicose veins left leg	8.00
Chamberlain, Henry H.	Wound right foot	11.25
Willis, Lydia B.	Widow	8.00
Ward, Eunice A.	"	8.00
Willis, Caroline	"	8.00
Underwood, Rachel B.	"	8.00
Tannott, Rebecca H.	"	8.00
Scott, Sarah B.	"	8.00
Mitchell, Fanny B.	"	8.00
McSherry, Catharine	Mother	8.00
Howland, Lucy C.	Widow	8.00
Maguire, Mary	"	8.00
Mills, Mary K.	"	8.00
Lortog, Sarah M.	"	8.00
Knowles, Mary K.	"	8.00
Hall, Susan E.	"	8.00
Holbrook, Maria	"	8.00
Donahue, Rosanna	"	8.00
Dudley, Lydia C.	"	8.00
Dunbar, Elizabeth	"	8.00
Clark, Martha H.	"	8.00
Coffin, Catharine E.	"	8.00
Bryant, Eunice S.	"	8.00
Andrews, Margaret	"	10.00
Coney, Sarah J.	"	8.00
Brown, Roxanna G.	"	20.00
Eddy, Almira M.	"	8.00
Estes, Milley	"	8.00
Edson, Mary A.	"	8.00
Price, Mary A.	"	12.00
Parks, Lydia	"	8.00
O'Riordan, Aon	"	10.00
Packard, Eliza J.	"	8.00
Sewell, Ellen M.	"	8.00
Shaw, Eldora	"	12.00
Hamlin, Betsey	Mother	8.00
Atherson, Hannah G.	"	8.00
Lambert, Abby W.	"	8.00
Kirk, Elizabeth	"	8.00
Howard, Vestia S.	"	8.00
Harris, Irene	"	8.00
Coles, Thomas	Chronic diarrhoea and heart disease	18.00
Edson, Simeon W.	Loss of left leg	18.00
Edson, Seth	Chronic rheumatism	8.00
Ellis, Reuben W.	Injury to abdomen	8.00
Emmes, Job B.	Pneumonia and scurvy	4.00
Drohan, Thomas	Wound left leg	6.00
Doyle, Thomas	Chronic rheumatism	4.00
Doyle, Thomas	Wound lower jaw	8.00
Donahue, Patrick	Gunshot wound left hand	4.00
Dunbar, Norman L.	Wound left thigh	16.00
Perkine, Salmon W.	Diarrhoea	2.00
Sherman, James	Gunshot wound right thigh	4.00
Willis, William F.	Diseased left lung	6.00
Peterson, Daniel M.	Wound left leg	18.00
Porcheron, Charles E.	Wound right hand	4.00
O'Coolell, Terrence	Shell wound right shoulder	14.00
Parker, John B.	Gunshot wound right leg	6.00
Packard, George W.	Gunshot wound neck and arm	4.00
Pratt, Francis S.	Gunshot wound left leg	4.00
Keith, Benjamin	Injury to abdomen	8.00
Keith, Dexter D.	Loss right hand	18.00
Kendall, John	Injury to abdomen	8.00
Howard, Charles (2d)	Gunshot wound left forearm	4.00
Thomas, Harrison O.	Wound right arm	16.00
Cullinan, John W.	Wound right hip	4.00
Howard, James L.	Chronic diarrhoea	4.00
Higgins, Harrison L.	Diseased stomach and rheumatism	4.00
Holmes, George N.	Sprain both ankles	6.00
Holmes, Francis P.	Gunshot wound right hand	3.00
Harrison, Elihu S.	Chronic diarrhoea, fever and ague	18.00
Covell, George W.	Wound right hip	18.00
Crocker, Charles A.	Wound left thigh	8.00
Foye, Josiah W.	Wound neck and right arm	8.00
Gibbs, Andrew C.	Gunshot wound right thigh	4.00
Glover, Amasa S.	Injury to abdomen	6.00
Casey, Patrick	Gunshot wound right leg	14.00
Horton, Henry W.	Gunshot wound right shoulder	2.00
Cole, Orsam M.	Chronic diarrhoea	4.00
Morton, Henry, Jr.	"	6.00
Monroe, Alfred C.	Loss left arm above elbow	24.00
McAuliffe, Cornelius	Fracture left ankle	12.00
Matthews, Rufus E.	Injury left thigh	2.00
Wilber, Charles W.	Gunshot wound left side chest	4.00
Vericker, William	Wound left arm	18.00
Vaughan, Jerrie C.	Wound r. eye, loss leg, shell w. l. thigh	18.00

Name.	Cause for which Pensioned.	Monthly Rate.
O'Donnell, Hugh	Wound left hip	$6.00
Leonard, George L.	Injury to abdomen	8.00
Baker, Horace	Loss left arm	24.00
Allen, Sherman	Gunshot wd. r. shoulder, heart disease	10.00
Alden, Luther E.	Gunshot wound right thigh	2.00
Hutchinson, Albert H.	Gunshot wound left breast	4.00
Holmes, Henry M.	Chronic diarrhoea	4.00
Cates, George E.	Gunshot wound left groin	4.00
Dyer, Frederick W.	Chronic diarrhoea	8.00
Stillmao, James H.	Malarial poison	8.00
Allen, Henry T.	Dyspepsia	6.00
Littlefield, Mercy L.	Widow	8.00
Kimball, Betsey A.	"	8.00
Beal, Maria A.	"	8.00
Conant, Eliza	"	8.00
Dean, Ruth A.	Mother	8.00
Bates, Margaret	"	8.00
Derrick, Ann S.	"	8.00
Cahoon, Elizabeth	"	8.00
Hannegan, Catherine	Widow (navy)	12.00
Williams, Sylvia K.	Widow 1812	8.00
Bacon, Willard	Survivor 1812	8.00
Keith, Pardon	Survivor 1812	8.00

CHAPTER XIV.

Casualties and Miscellaneous Events—List of Fires from 1800—1865.

Casualties and Miscellaneous Events.—In or about the year 1725, Henry Kingman came from the West Parish (now West Bridgewater), and settled on the spot where the late Seth Kingman lived and died. He was about twenty-one years of age, and unmarried. Soon after his arrival at his new home, he proceeded to the woods for the purpose of cutting fencing, about ten or eleven o'clock A.M. While in the act of splitting a large oak log, it split prematurely, and the axe entered the calf of his leg, nearly severing it, only a small portion of flesh remaining on each side to connect the parts; the bone was cut off entirely. It was a bitter cold day, and all he had to bandage with was his small handkerchief, in which was his luncheon. This he used as best he could, tied up the wound, and dragged himself to a small bridge, where he remained till evening, when, by the merest accident, some one heard him cry out for help, and even then passers-by supposed it was only the wild animals in the woods, which in that day were quite common. At last some person found him; a litter was made, on which to carry him home, and when he reached his boarding-place, a messenger was dispatched four miles or more to West Bridgewater, for a physician. A long time must have elapsed before one could reach him, as the snow was deep and very bad traveling. But, strange as it may appear to the reader, the parts grew together, and he afterwards became an efficient officer in the army.

1727, October 29. The shock of a violent earthquake was severely felt throughout New England, which lasted for several days.

1739, February 5. The first meeting of the North Parish was held to-day. Timothy Keith, moderator; Robert Howard, clerk, who continued to hold that office thirty-two years in succession.

1748. Indian corn sold for thirty-two shillings per bushel; rye, forty-six shillings per bushel; wheat, three pounds per bushel; flour, ten pounds per hundred.

1749. This summer the most severe drought ever experienced by the oldest person then living. In the last of May the grass was all burnt by the sun, the ground looked white, the earth was dried to a powder at a great depth, and many wells, springs, brooks, and rivers were dried, so that fish lay dead on the bottom. The pastures were so scorched that cattle grew poor. Hay had to be brought from England to supply their wants, which sold for three pounds ten shillings per hundredweight. Barley and oats were so much injured they scarcely saved enough for seed. Flax was a total failure. Corn rolled and wilted. Herbs of all sorts were destroyed. During all these troubles government ordered a day of fasting and prayer, and on the 6th of July copious showers of rain fell to refresh them, and things looked brighter, and what was fortunate for the people, the next winter was very mild. After the plentiful rains, a day of public thanksgiving was ordered.

1751, June 17. Severe hail-storm. Hailstones large as English walnuts were in abundance, breaking glass and doing other damage to a large amount.

1755. Summer very hot and dry. Hay scarce and high.

1755, November 18. Shock of an earthquake, shaking down chimneys. In Boston and vicinity buildings were prostrated by the shock.

1762-63. Very cold winter. Snow of great depth.

1762, September 10. Wild pigeons flew in abundance.

1763, June 8. Wild pigeons flew in abundance.

"In the year 1769, when the disputes between England and America had begun, and the importation of foreign goods was stopped, it became customary for people to manufacture their own clothing; and in many places the young ladies had spinning-matches at their minister's, for the benefit of their families. On the 15th of August, 1769, at two o'clock P.M., ninety-seven young ladies met at the house of their pastor, the Rev. John Porter, and generously gave his lady, for the use of her family, 3322 knots of linen, tow, cotton, and woollen yarn, which they had spun for that purpose. At three o'clock something, of American produce only, was set before them for their refreshment, which was more agreeable to them than any foreign dainties, considering the situation of the country at that time. At four o'clock the ladies walked in procession to the meeting-house, where a discourse was delivered by their pastor from Acts ix. 36: 'This woman was full of good works,' in which piety, industry, frugality, and benevolence were recommended and encouraged. The closing prayer being made, the following lines, composed by their pastor, were sung:

"Ye rubies bright, ye Orient pearls,
How coveted by men!
And yet the virtuous woman's price
Excels the precious gem.

"How kind and generous her heart!
How diligent her hand!
How frugal in economy,
To save her sinking land!

"Foreign productions she rejects,
With nobleness of mind,
For home commodities; to which
She's prudently inclined.

"She works, she lends, she gives away
The labors of her hand;
The priest, the poor, the people all
Do find in her their friend.

"She clothes herself and family,
And all the sons of need.
Were all thus virtuous, soon we'd find
Our land from slavery freed.'

After which anthems were sung, and the assembly being dismissed, they retired to their respective homes."

David, son of Rev. John Porter, was riding in a chaise when about ten years of age; the horse took fright, ran, and threw him out, breaking one of his legs, which was soon after amputated. He survived but a short time. Died May, 1767.

1769, October 20. Violent storm, doing great damage.

1771. Very mild winter; not over four inches of snow fell during the season.

1772, March 9, 11, 13, and 20. Very severe snow-storm.

1772, April 3. Snow six to ten feet deep. People were obliged to dig themselves out of their houses. Many sheep and cattle lost.

1778, November 10. Hay sold for six dollars per hundredweight.

1779, February 16. Hay sold for nine dollars per hundredweight.

1779, November 12. Hay sold for twenty dollars per hundredweight.

1780, November 19. Hay sold for thirty-three pounds per hundredweight.

1780. Winter very severe. Great depth of snow.

1780, May 19. Remarkably dark day. Between twelve and one o'clock people could not work; were obliged to light candles to see to eat dinner; looked very melancholy indeed; but little rain. The evening was very dark.

1781, August 5. Wild pigeons flew very thick.

1782. Very dry season.

1785, April 1. Severe snow-storm. Snow three to five feet deep.

1785, April 15. Very cold. Ground frozen hard. Rivers crossed on the ice, with excellent skating on ponds.

1785, May 20. Severe snow-storm. Snow several inches deep.

1785, November 25. Severe snow-storm. Snow very deep.

1786, May 21. Wind east for eight weeks in succession.

1791, July 18. Rev. John Porter's horse killed by lightning in a severe thunder-storm.

1804, October. Severe gale; large trees blown down, and torn up by the roots.

1805, February. Snowed five days in succession. The road between North Bridgewater and Randolph was even with the top of the walls.

1806, June. Total eclipse of the sun.

1806. Winter of 1806-7 very mild; ground not frozen over four inches deep all winter.

1806. Summer of 1806 very cold.

1808. Very heavy frosts in August.

1811, May 5. Severe snow-storm.

1811, July. Great freshet, doing great damage.

1815, September 23. Severe gale, Monday. Some verses published soon after, were as follows:

"It chanced to be our washing-day;
The clothes were all a-drying;
The stormy winds came through the lines
And set 'em all a-flying.

"I saw the shirts and petticoats
Go riding off like witches,
That day I lost—ah, how I wept!—
I lost my Sunday breeches."

The air became filled with limbs, shrubs, old pieces of timber, etc., roofs blown off from buildings, and great damage generally.

1815, September 25. Very powerful wind, unroofing many buildings, and doing considerable damage to other property.

1816. This year was remarkable for its severe cold weather.

1816, February. Arza Keith was severely burned while making varnish in his house, from the effects of which he never recovered.

1817, February 20. Remarkably severe snow-storm.

1818. Great freshet, doing great damage.

1820, December 22. Rev. Daniel Huntington delivered a discourse in the meeting-house of the North Parish, it being the Second Centennial Anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. Text, Psalms xlv. 1-3.

1821, July 4. The first town-meeting was held in North Bridgewater this day. The meeting was opened by prayer by Rev. Daniel Huntington. Over two hundred were present, and the first yearly town officers were chosen. Joseph Sylvester was moderator. Col. Edward Southworth was chosen town clerk.

1821, October 31. Messrs. Daniel Temple, of Reading, Mass., and Isaac Bird were ordained as missionaries to the heathen, in the old meeting-house. Rev. Richard S. Storrs, D.D., of Braintree, preached the sermon; Rev. Daniel Thomas, of Abington, gave the charge; and Rev. S. Green the right hand of fellowship. Mr. Temple married Miss Rachel B. Dix, of Boscowen, N. H., and sailed for Malta Jan. 2, 1822, on the brig "Cypress," from Boston. In 1823, Rev. Isaac Bird sailed for Beyroot as missionary. Mr. Temple has since died, Aug. 9, 1850.

1823, November 13. David Brown, a native of the Cherokee tribe of Indians, delivered an address in the meeting-house of the First Church, after which a collection was taken for supporting schools in his nation.

1835, November 6. Miss Susan Hersey, a young miss of sixteen, who resided in the family of Deacon John Crafts, was drowned in Howard's Pond.

1837, July 15. David Lincoln drowned in Sprague's Pond.

1845, August 23. Daniel Brett's house struck by lightning, and Mr. Brett instantly killed.

1845, November 22. Joseph Brett killed by an ox.

1844, November 6. Hon. John Quincy Adams delivered a discourse to the citizens of North Bridgewater in the meeting-house of the First Congregational Church.

1847, August 14. Lorenzo D. Hervey had his left arm fractured by coming in contact with another train at South Boston, which was standing on a side track, his arm resting at the time on the side window.

1849, May 21. North Bridgewater Union Cemetery consecrated.

1849, May 22. Ethan and Henry Leach (brothers) were thrown from a chaise while crossing the railroad at the burying-ground crossing, and instantly killed.

1849, March 22. Howard's mill-dam washed away;

also railroad bridge near Lewis Keith's mill, damaging so much as to stop the cars.

1851, October 30. Timothy Sullivan was killed by coming in contact with a bridge at the north end of the village, known as "Harlow's Bridge."

1852, May 12. David I. Gray had thumb sawed off in Howard's mill.

1852, May 27. Michael O'Leary drowned.

1852, July 22. Enterprise Engine Company, accompanied by the North Bridgewater brass band, visited New York.

1852, July 26. Eugene Marshall was a passenger on board the steamer "Atlantic," that sunk on Lake Erie. The steamer came in contact with the "Ogdensburg" near Longport, two o'clock Friday morning. Three hundred lives lost. One hundred and fifty men and women were drowned in the cabin. Mr. Marshall narrowly escaped drowning.

1852, August 15. Salmon Manly died from injuries to his spinal column to-day.

1852, September 18. Galen Edson died from wounds received by a fall that fractured his skull.

1853, November 24. Frederick A. Babcock injured on railroad.

1853, February 5. George Washington, son of Levi French, was badly scalded, injuring him so much that he died the next day (Sunday). Age, two years and ten months.

1853, February 26. Edward Elmer, son of Perez Marshall, was drowned while attempting to cross a pond near his father's house. Age, six years and five months.

1853, February. Eldridge G. Cobb, and one hundred and seven others, sent a petition to the Legislature opposing the passage of a law restricting the sale of intoxicating liquors.

1853, November 21. A collision took place between two trains of cars on the railroad, one of which was the steamboat train; four persons severely injured. One died soon after.

1853, December 29. Severe snow-storm. The cars on the railroad were stopped, for the first time since the road was opened.

1853. Alonzo S. Drisko, a workman engaged in building the new house of worship for the First Congregational Church, had an arm broken by a board falling from aloft.

1854, March 18. Severe gale. Railroad-crossing sign at Court Street blown down. The steeple of the Porter Church was somewhat damaged by the force of wind, which was pretty general throughout this section of country.

1854, June 14. Severe hail-storm about noon.

Thermometer stood at ninety in the shade. Hail-stones as large as cherries fell in abundance. Zophar Field's house struck. Cow belonging to Chandler Sprague, Esq., instantly killed.

1854, June 19. The house of Weston Simmons, known as the "Poor Farm," was struck by lightning, instantly killing Lemuel Reynolds, who had just stepped into the house for protection from the storm.

1854, July 27. The new meeting-house of the First Congregational Church was dedicated to-day.

1854, September 18. Michael Coleman and Michael Keho were run into by a steamboat train that came in contact with chaise.

1855, September 20. To-day was observed as a holiday for the purpose of holding a fair to obtain means for erecting a fence around the new cemetery. A large and brilliant procession, consisting of the various fire-engine companies in full uniform, drawing their engines, handsomely decorated, preceded by a band of music; also the North Bridgewater Light Dragoons, under the command of Capt. J. Freeman Ellis, together with a representation of the various trades in large numbers. The procession was formed at one o'clock, when, after marching about the various streets, they proceeded to Yale's mammoth tent, which had been erected for the purpose of serving the dinner, in a lot owned by Frederick Perkins, and opposite the residence of Franklin Ames, Esq. The procession was under the care of Francis M. French, Esq., as chief marshal.

1856, January 5. Severe snow-storm. No trains passed for two days. No meeting on the next day (Sabbath). Roads badly blocked.

By an act of the Legislature passed April 19, 1856, a Probate Court was established at North Bridgewater, to be held the last Tuesday of July in each year.

1856, June 3. The centennial celebration of the four Bridgewaters was held to-day, and the bells of all the four towns were rung half an hour before sunrise, and cannon fired on Trooper's Hill.

1856, June 4. A meeting was held to show the feeling in regard to the assault on Charles Sumner at Washington, at which resolutions were passed condemning the act in the strongest terms.

1857, January 18. Very severe snow-storm. Trains on the railroad were blocked for several days. The thermometer during the day was sixteen degrees below zero. The sky was obscured by a dense cloud of snow, that extended in every direction. At night the weather moderated; but the wind increased to a gale, piling the snow in huge drifts. The storm in the night was of unexampled severity. The force of the wind caused the spire of the church at Campello, which had been erected but a short time, to break just below the clock, and the bell to break through the roof and lodge in the vestry below. The damage to the house by this fall was about three thousand dollars.

1857, April 6. Some fiend placed some iron rails upon the railroad track about one mile north of the village, causing the locomotive called the "Pilgrim" to run off the track and injure the train, breaking Alden Reed's jaw-bone, an employé of the road in charge of the train.

1857, May 17. Ice formed one-sixteenth of an inch thick to-day.

1857, May 31. Terrible hail-storm, doing great damage to crops and fruit-trees in the town. Hailstones, as large as robin's eggs, fell to the depth of an inch, continuing about one-half hour.

1858, March 30. Emma Olivia, daughter of F. B. Washburn, was so severely burned while at play that she died in fifteen hours after. Age, seven years and eight months.

1858, May 14. Bela Keith, Esq., fell and broke his collar-bone while at work repairing a shed belonging to the Satucket House.

1858, May 14. Elisha Hall had his hand badly injured at Howard & Clark's steam-mill.

1858, July 21. Charles W., a son of Rev. J. Cooper, was drowned in Howard's Pond.

1858, September 21. Frank Richmond, son of Philo W. Richmond, broke his leg by falling from a ladder while at work painting on the east side of Kingman's brick block.

1859, January 22. John B., son of Charles Wentworth, was drowned. Body found Sunday noon following.

1859, June 3. Gershom I. Sylvester, son of F. M. Sylvester, seven years of age, was run over by cars near Keith's mills, and injured so that he died soon after.

1859, July 30. Mrs. Harriet Everson and Thacher Everson, wife and daughter of Joseph H. Everson, of Hanson, were killed by a locomotive near Keith's mills. George W. Monroe and Miss Sarah F. Stetson were in the covered wagon at the time and severely injured.

1859, August 25. Herbert, son of Albert Keith, choked to death by a piece of apple, which he was eating while running.

1859, September 9. Mr. Henry Volney French, who had just arrived at the depot in the Centre Village from New York, in the steamboat train, attempted to jump from the cars while the train was in motion, was thrown upon the track and run over by the train, and lived but two hours after the accident. Mr. French was of the firm of French & Howard, shoe manufacturers. He was a man of excellent habits, smart, active, and very exemplary in all the walks of life. A deep feeling of sadness pervaded the entire community upon learning of the sad affair. His wife and children were absent from home at the time of the accident, in Maine.

1859, November 26. When the four o'clock train was approaching Campello, and near the brick factory, from Boston, a woman named Joanna Barrett, in attempting to cross the track, was struck by the locomotive and injured so that she died in a few moments.

1860, June 16. Severe hail-storm. Hailstones plenty, as large as bullets, doing much damage to fruit.

1860, July 11. C. Adelbert, son of T. M. Packard, came to his death by falling into a tub set in the ground to catch water.

1860, August 2. A young child of Daniel Hayward, eighteen months old, fell from an attic of a two-story house to the ground, a distance of thirty feet, through the carelessness of a domestic; taken up apparently uninjured.

1861, February 25. Bridget O'Brien was killed by violence.

1861. Mr. G. E. Wilbor and Thaddeus Keith made a bet on the election of Abraham Lincoln, Wilbor betting he would be elected and Keith that he would not; the condition was that the one that lost was to walk to Boston. Mr. Keith, having lost the bet, started for Boston March 6th, and walked the entire distance to the city in five hours. He was accompanied through the village by fife and drum.

1861, March 24. Severe storm,—snow. Trains delayed twenty-four hours.

1861, April 8. As Mrs. John Ellis and another lady were riding from North Bridgewater village to Campello, they were robbed of their pocket-books. The rogue was caught soon after, and punished.

1861, October 3. M. W. Dwight jumped from a car when in motion near Campello Station, and was killed.

1862, May 26. Michael Larry, a lad of eight years, was drowned in a saw-mill flume, at Sprague's Factory Pond.

1863, June 5. Malcolm Howard died of injuries received by the kick of a horse owned by Dr. Baldwin, in the north part of the town.

1863, September 24. William Tolman, son of Elijah Tolman, engineer at Ellis Packard & Co.'s steam-mill, had an arm broken and otherwise severely injured.

1863, October 20. Leroy Hamilton, a driver in the employ of Hancock's express, was struck by a locomotive while crossing the track at Elliot Street crossing. The wagon was made a complete wreck. Mr. Hamilton escaped with a few bruises only.

1863, November. Nahum Perkins, a man of over seventy years of age, shot a goose from a flock that was passing over his home.

1864, February. Moses Packard fell and broke his leg in his barn.

1864, February 12. Michael Murphy and Patrick Early were burned to death in the town lock-up.

1864, February 13. Herbert Eaton broke his collar-bone while at play.

1864, April 29. A child of Cornelius McAuliffe was so badly burned while playing with fire in the pine grove that she died next day.

1864, July 14. Jennie, daughter of Patrick McCullough, was drowned in a tub of water.

1864, September 26. A boy in the employ of Harrison Rogers was dragged about by a horse till life was extinct, by incautiously fastening the rope-halter around his arms. The horse became unmanageable, so the boy could not release himself.

1864, October 12. Eliza J., wife of James S. Bond, of North Bridgewater, committed suicide by drowning, at Mansfield, Mass.

1864. The drought of 1864 has had no parallel for years. For June and July only 2.38 inches of rain fell; May previous, only two inches; July, 1.32 inches; June, 1.06 inches. In 1854, ten years in August previous, there was no rain.

1864, January 3. The body of an unknown man was found on the railroad-track, about a half-mile south of Campello depot; supposed to have fallen from the New York train. The body was terribly mangled, so that it could hardly be identified.

1864, October 27. Five cattle were killed by a Fall River train at Howard's crossing, in the north part of the town, and others badly injured.

1864. Adeline Harris was appointed teacher by the Freedman's Relief Association, stationed at Newberne, N. C., and sailed from New York December 8th.

1865, July 4. Charles Hayward, son of the late B. F. Hayward, was badly burned in the face by powder.

1865, July 4. Daniel Huntington, son of Joseph Vincent, had a thumb blown off by the discharge of a pistol.

1865, August 23. Mrs. Sanford Winter committed suicide. Cause, temporary insanity.

1865. This summer season has been very dry. Wells throughout the State dried up. Fall feed very light or none at all. Mills stopped running for want of water.

List of Fires from 1800-1865.—1804. Dwelling-house of Issachar Snell destroyed by fire.

1816. Dwelling-house of Arza Keith partially burned; caused while making varnish in one of the rooms. Mr. Keith was injured by inhaling smoke, from the effects of which he never recovered.

1818. Barn belonging to Charles Keith destroyed by fire.

1819. Barn belonging to Oliver Leach struck by lightning and destroyed by fire.

1836, March 6. Dwelling-house formerly belonging to Rev. Daniel Huntington, and occupied by Dr. A. K. Borden and George H. Brown, destroyed by fire.

1846. Cabinet-shop belonging to Howard & Clark destroyed by fire.

1847, January 30. Dwelling-house belonging to Freeman Dexter destroyed by fire at half-past five o'clock A.M. (a very cold morning).

1847, March 11. Shoe manufactory of William French partially destroyed by fire, about five o'clock A.M.

1847, March 19. Store owned by George Clark destroyed by fire at eleven o'clock P.M. Also a dwelling-house belonging to Micah Packard nearly consumed at the same time.

1847, September 26. Dwelling-house belonging to Nathan Hayward slightly damaged by fire at four o'clock A.M.

1848, March 1. Edward E. Bennett's dwelling-house slightly damaged.

1848, March 23. House of Edward J. Snow slightly damaged.

1848, March 30. Woods near Benjamin Eaton's burned.

1848, May 1. Woods near Thomas Wales burned.

1849, July 28. A carpenter-shop owned by Charles S. Johnson about three o'clock P.M.; his dwelling adjoining narrowly escaped destruction.

1850, February 6. Ruel Richmond's wheelwright-shop consumed by fire at three o'clock A.M. Weather severely cold; engines could not work well; thermometer 6° below zero.

1850, April 2. Barn belonging to Silas Packard burned at three o'clock A.M.

1850, April 15. Building owned by S. & G. Manly, at eleven o'clock P.M., was totally destroyed.

1850, August 6. David Ford's barn struck by lightning and destroyed about three o'clock P.M.

1850, October 11. Lucius Keith's periodical depot damaged by fire.

1850, October 11. Tailor-shop owned by W. F. Brett nearly destroyed about four o'clock A.M. Also a building occupied by W. E. Skinner.

1851, June 29. Store of Messrs. Brett & Kingman, in Kingman Block, badly damaged by fire about three o'clock A.M.

1852, April 9. Barn on the John Tilden farm consumed about eight o'clock A.M.

1852, May 30. Pine Grove, a short distance south of the Centre Village, was burned. Buildings were saved with difficulty.

1852, May 30. Baptist Chapel damaged by fire about $1000 at half-past eight o'clock P.M.

1853, March 30. Dwelling-house near "Keith's Mill" partly burned; formerly occupied by Zenas Packard.

1853, March 31. The last and boot manufactory owned by Chandler Sprague, Esq., and formerly known as the "Old Cotton Factory," was totally destroyed by fire at half-past three o'clock A.M. Loss, $4000.

1853, May 23. Stable belonging to Nathaniel Snow, in the Pine Grove, was destroyed about four o'clock A.M.

1853, May 23. The steam-mill connected with the furniture manufacturing establishment of Josiah W. Kingman, at Campello, took fire about a quarter to one o'clock P.M., communicating with the lumberyard and buildings around, destroying the dwelling-house of Mr. Kingman, stable, warehouse, and finishing-shop, three workshops belonging to the same, also the dwelling-house owned and occupied by Anson Morse, dwelling of David Allen, meeting-house, and fire-engine-house belonging to Enterprise Engine Company, No. 2. Many other buildings took fire from these, but by the prompt and energetic working of seven different engines were saved from the devouring element. The loss by this fire was estimated at about $50,000, with a very small insurance, a severe loss to the village, besides throwing a large number of workmen out of employment.

1853, May 24. Barn belonging to Turner Torrey, in the west part of the town, was burned in the evening.

1853, June 9. Barn belonging to John Thompson, together with fifteen tons of hay. Loss, $1000.

1853, September 29. The building owned by Rev. A. B. Wheeler, and occupied by C. C. Bixby, F. & H. Baylies, and S. W. S. Howard, partially burned.

1854, May 22. House owned and occupied by Jarvis W. Reynolds slightly burned.

1856, January 4. The dwelling-house of Dwight E. Hale was partially burned.

1856, September 8. The building known as the Unitarian Church, owned by Maj. Nathan Hayward, totally destroyed about one o'clock P.M.

1856, September 9. Barn and shop of Daniel McIntee, with two horses, were destroyed.

1856, October 5. The grocery-store near the depot in the village, occupied by William H. Pierce, partly destroyed between two and three o'clock A.M.

1856, December 22. Ara Snow's house slightly burned.

1857, January 8. Dwelling-house owned by C. J. F. Packard partially burned. Loss, $300.

1857, November 26. Shoe manufactory of Martin L. Keith & Co., at Campello, slightly damaged by fire. Damage, $100.

1857, December 17. A small building owned by the heirs of Maj. Nathan Hayward, situated in the Tilden District. Loss was small.

1857, December 21. Railroad depot took fire from the telegraph. Damage was slight.

1857, December 30. The saw-mill belonging to Messrs. Thomas and Welcome Howard nearly consumed.

1859, January 22. House on Ashland Street, belonging to heirs of Maj. Nathan Hayward. Damage, $200.

1859, September 2. The musical instrument manufactory owned by Caleb H. Packard, at Campello, occupied by A. B. Marston, destroyed.

1859, September 8. Dwelling-house and stable of Marcus Packard, on Mount Ashland, about eleven o'clock A.M. Loss, $9000. Also, a lot of wood near by, caused by sparks from the same.

1859, December 12. House owned by Henry Baylies. Loss, $800.

1860, January 11. Varnish-factory near Ephraim Brett's house. Loss, $500.

1860, January 25. Barn belonging to John Reardon, at one o'clock P.M.

1860, April 2. An old building on Pond Street. Loss, $100.

1860, April 8. An old building on the corner of Centre Street. Loss was small.

1860, October 19. Barn belonging to William F. Brett, containing thirty-two tons of hay and one cow, destroyed at twelve o'clock at night. Loss, $700.

1860, October 27. House belonging to Orren Bartlett partially burned. Loss, $500.

1860, November 7. Hall belonging to Baker & Kingman destroyed at half-past eleven o'clock P.M. Loss, $9000. Insured for $6000.

1860, November 8. Steam-mill of Howard & Clark slightly damaged by fire.

1860, November 29. Small dwelling-house owned by Benjamin Kingman, near "Keith's Mill," destroyed by fire.

1860, December 30. Tailor-shop occupied by Daniel Logue, and owned by Tyler Cobb, partially destroyed by fire.

1861, March 2. Barn belonging to Galen Packard, together with one horse and three cows, destroyed by fire about five o'clock A.M. Loss, $600. No insurance.

1861, March 11. Shop occupied by Alexander Chaplin slightly damaged.

1861, May 8. Store belonging to Col. E. Southworth partially burned. Loss, $300.

1861, June 21. House of John McCullough. Loss, $300.

1861, July 6. House belonging to Franklin Keith partially destroyed. Loss, $600.

1861, November 29. House belonging to Moses W. Hancock slightly damaged by fire.

1862, January 2. Store belonging to Daniel Hayward partially burned. Loss, $450.

1862, February 1. Store belonging to Charles Curtis partially destroyed.

1862, May 14. Barn, shop, and wood-house, together with three cows and a calf, belonging to Galen Warren, destroyed by fire. Loss, $1000.

1862, June 14. Barn, three cows, and two tons of hay belonging to Edward E. Bennett destroyed.

1862, June 16. House of Sylvester Cotter partially destroyed. Loss, $500.

1862, August 17. House belonging to Clark Paul. Loss, $200.

1863, September 30. Barn and shop of William Gegin destroyed. Loss, $700.

1863, November 26 (Thanksgiving morning). House and barn belonging to the heirs of Jesse Perkins, together with two cows. Loss, $1500.

1863, December 4. House of Davis S. Packard slightly damaged by fire.

1864, July 8. Barn belonging to Henry Edson destroyed.

1864, July 31. Barn belonging to Alvin P. Kingman destroyed at eight o'clock A.M.

1864, August 11. Barn belonging to Deacon John W. Hunt destroyed at half-past four o'clock P.M. Loss, $200.

1864, August 14. Barn belonging to Marcus Holmes destroyed at half-past eight o'clock P.M. Loss, $500.

1864, August 16. House belonging to Hugh Burke destroyed at eleven o'clock P.M. Loss, $600.

1864, September 3. Lot of wood owned by Rufus S. Noyes. Loss, $200.

1864, September 15. House in the northeast part of the town destroyed by fire. Also a barn.

1864, October 10. House owned by S. and G. Manly, on Cottage Street, destroyed by fire. Loss, $400.

1864, November 6. House owned by William Perry partially burned. Loss, $200.

1864, December 1. Car-load of straw took fire at the railroad station and burned. Also, freight-house partially burned.

1865, March 29. Shoe manufactory owned by George Stevens, at Campello, partially burned at three o'clock A.M.

1865, April 3. House on Pleasant Street slightly damaged.

1865, April 18. Shoe manufactory belonging to Peleg S. Leach, on Pine Street, entirely consumed by fire at eleven o'clock.

1865, August 5. Barn belonging to Reuben Drake struck by lightning and destroyed by fire, with from five to six tons of hay.

1865, August 24. Barn and slaughter-house belonging to Mr. Sanford Winter destroyed by fire.

CHAPTER XV.

Industrial Statistics—Valuation for 1840—Valuation for 1850—Valuation for 1860—Products of 1845—Industries of 1855—Manufacturing Statistics for 1865—Agricultural Statistics for 1865—Trades and Professions—Statistics of Labor for 1875—Farming in 1875—Statistics of Valuation and Taxation for 1883—Number of Dwelling-Houses and Families in the North Parish, now Brockton, in 1764—Population in 1810, 1820, 1830, 1840, 1850, 1855, 1860.

Industrial Statistics.—The Legislature of Massachusetts, by an act passed April 19, 1837, required the assessors of the several towns in Massachusetts to return to the secretary of the commonwealth an accurate account of the various branches of industry. The following is the product of North Bridgewater (now Brockton) for 1837:

Cotton-mill, 1; number of spindles, 350; cotton consumed, 16,000 pounds; number of yards of cotton cloth manufactured, 60,000; value of the same, $4800; males employed, 3; females, 12; capital invested, $8666. Common sheep, 60; common wool produced, 210 pounds; average weight of fleece, 3½ pounds; value of same, $84; capital invested, $120. Boots manufactured, 79,000 pairs; shoes manufactured, 22,300 pairs; value of boots and shoes, $184,200; males employed, 750; females, 375. Hat manufactories, 1; hats manufactured, 2000; value of same, $6000; males employed, 3; females, 3. Manufactories of forks and hoes, 1; value of same, $1000; hands employed, 2; capital invested, $400. Manufactories of chairs and cabinet-ware, 3; value of the same, $38,500; hands employed, 39. Value of wooden-ware manufactured, 300; hands employed, 1. Shoe-tool manufactories, 2; value of the same, $1900; hands employed, 22; capital invested, $5000.

Valuation for 1840.—Number of polls over 16, 679; number of polls supported by the town, 5; number of polls not taxed, 20. Number of houses, 388; number of shops adjoining, 153; number of warehouses, stores, etc., 6; number of barns, 264; all other buildings, 69. Tillage land, 663 acres; English and upland mowing, 1043 acres; tons of hay, 744; fresh meadow, 692; tons of hay on the same, 399; pasture, 2789; woodland, 2243; unimproved land, 2283; unimprovable land, 613; town land, 120 acres; roads, 245 acres; water, 20 acres. Horses, one year old and over; oxen, four years old and over, 467; steers and heifers, 83; sheep, 22; swine, 314. Number of chaises, 47. Grist-mills, 3; saw-mills, 3; other mills, 1. Oats, 1063 bushels; rye, 405 bushels; barley, 331 bushels; corn, 3833 bushels.

Valuation for 1850.—Polls 1067, 20 years and upwards. Dwelling-houses, 616; shops adjoining houses, 96; other shops, 134; warehouses and stores, 13; grist-mills, 4; saw-mills, 2; barns, 29; all other buildings of the value of $20 and upwards, 155. Stock in trade, $75,655; interest money, $68.96; stocks, $28,170; shares in incorporated companies, 475; tillage land, 574 acres; unimproved land, 97 acres; unimprovable land, 65; land owned by town, 100 acres; land taken for roads, 300 acres; land covered by water, 100 acres. Number of horses, 278; number of oxen, four and over, 82; number of cows, three and over, 487; steers and heifers, 151. Rye, bushels, 244; oats, bushels, 543; corn, bushels, 4344; barley, bushels, 139. Acres mowing, 1527; tons of hay, 1128; fresh meadow, 642; tons of hay, 409; pasturing, 3310; woodland, 3499; swine, 264; all other property not enumerated, value, $12,541.

Valuation for 1860.—Ratable polls, 1574, 20 years and upwards. Male polls, 3, not taxed nor supported by the town. Male polls, 2, supported by the town. Dwelling-houses, 952; each $900, $856,800. Shops within or adjoining to dwelling-houses, 94; each $75, $7050. Other shops, 206; each $200, $41,200. Warehouses and stores, 38; at $1500 each, $5700. Barns, 388; at $250 each, $97,000. Grist-mills, 4; at $2000 each, $8000.

Saw-mills, 2; at $2550 each, $5100. Steam mills and other mills not above enumerated, 5; at $3180 each, $15,900. Boot-factories, 5; $13,000. Shoe-factories, 37; at $1000 each, $37,000. Piano-forte factories, 1; $1000. Tool-factories, 2; at $850 each, $1700. Nail- and tack-machines, 1; $400. Other manufactories of iron, copper, brass, and metals, 2; at $850 each, $1700. All other buildings between $20 and $100 in value, 6; at $75 each, $450. All other buildings of more than $100 value, 5; at $1000, $5000. Amount of every person's stock in trade, $209,786. Amount of money at interest more than any creditor pays interest for, including United States and State securities, $86,500. Amount of stock held by stockholders in any bank or insurance company, $140,114. Shares in toll-bridges, canals, railroads, 323; value, $34,500. Acres of land annually tilled, exclusive of orchards tilled, 1106; at $130 each, $143,780. Amount of orcharding, all kinds of fruit, 77 acres; at $200, $15,400. Acres of upland mowed, excluding orchard mowed, 1505; at $130, $195,650; tons of hay produced, yearly produce of same, 1281. Acres of orcharding mowed, 8; $200, $1600; tons of hay, the yearly produce of the same, 5. Acres of fresh meadow, 591; tons of hay, the yearly produce of the same, 364. Acres of land, excluding orcharding pastured, 2872; at $20, $57,440. Acres of woodland, 4384, excluding pasture-land [nclosed; at $15 each, $65,760. Cords of wood, 4827. Acres of land owned by any town or other proprietors, 92; at $40 each, $3680. Acres of land used for roads, 329. Acres of land covered by water, 1000. Acres of land in town from actual survey, 12,619. Horses one year old and upwards, 279; at $75, $20,925. Oxen four years old and upwards, 60; at $40, $2400. Cows three years old and upwards, 403; at $25, $10,075. Steers and heifers one year old and upwards, 115; at $10, $1150. Swine six months old and upwards, 190; at $6, $1140. Value and description of all other ratable estate, not before enumerated, $20,990. Total value, $2,173,965.

Products for 1845.—A census of the productions of the State, published in 1845, shows the product of North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass., as follows:

Manufactories of shovels, spades, forks, and hoes, 1; value of articles manufactured, $2000; capital, $500; men employed, 2.

Musical instrument manufactories, 1; value of instruments manufactured, $900; capital, $350; men employed, 2.

Brush manufactories, 1; value of brushes manufactured, $21,500; capital, $6000; men employed, 21.

Saddle, harness, and trunkmakers, 1; value of articles manufactured, $1500; capital, $300; employ 3 men.

Hat and cap manufactories, 1; value of hats and caps manufactured, $1040; valued, $2500; capital, $500; employ 3 men.

Establishments for manufacturing railroad-cars, coaches, chaises, and other vehicles, 1; value manufactured, $1590; capital, $300; employ 3 men.

Chair and cabinet-ware manufactories, 2; value of goods manufactured, $38,000; capital, $18,571; men employed, 48.

Tinware and stove manufactories, 2; value of goods manufactured, $6074; capital, $2200; employ 11 hands.

Boots manufactured, 44,711 pairs, 155,476 pairs shoes; value, $179,716; men employed, 301; females, 203.

Value of snuff, cigars, and tobacco, $5200; employ 9 persons.

Value of pumps, blocks, $361; employ 2 men.

Value of mechanics' tools manufactured, $8250; employ 19 hands.

Shoe-last and boot-tree manufactories, 1; value of goods manufactured, $7995; capital, $1500; employ 7 men.

Value of machines for rolling leather, $1599; capital, $300; employ 1 man.

Value of packing-boxes manufactured, $2132; capital, $400; employ 6 men.

Lumber prepared, 300,000 feet; value, $3531.

Firewood prepared, 1155 cords; value, $4620.

Horses, 292; value, $17,520; neat cattle, 632; value, $15,800; swine, 338; value, $5070.

Indian corn or maize raised, 5000 bushels; value, $3333.

Rye, 366 bushels; value, $293. Barley, 239 bushels; value, $143. Oats, 585 bushels; value, $234. Potatoes, 23,111 bushels; value, $5777. Other esculent vegetables, 2000 bushels; value, $600. Millet, 4 tons; value, $50. Hay, 1445 tons; value, $20,230. Fruit raised, 7249; value, $1812. Butter, 20,496 pounds; value, $3279. Cheese, 23,280 pounds; value, $1862. Honey, 235 pounds; value, $28. Beeswax, 16 pounds; value, $4.

Industries of 1855.—The Industrial Tables for 1855 show the following as the production of North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass.:

Musical instrument manufactories, 2; value of instruments manufactured, $8780; capital, $2000; employ 9 hands.

Daguerreotype artists, 1; daguerreotypes taken, 800; capital, $450; employ 1 man.

Brush manufactories, 2; value of brushes, $8000; capital, $3000; employ 11 men.

Saddle, harness, and trunk manufactories, 1; value of saddles, etc., $6000; capital, $2000; employ 4 men.

Establishments for the manufacture of chaises, wagons, sleighs, and other vehicles, 3; value of carriages manufactured, $5200; capital, $1600; employ 8 men.

Establishments for making soap and tallow candles, 2; soap manufactured, 280 barrels; value of soap, $1120.

Chair and cabinet-ware manufactories, 1; value of chairs and cabinet-ware manufactured, $20,000; capital, $10,000; employ 32 men.

Tinware manufactories, 2; value of tinware, $13,000; capital, $4600; employ 7 men.

Boots of all kinds manufactured, pairs, 66,956; shoes of all kinds manufactured, 694,760 pairs; value of boots and shoes, $724,847; employ 692 males; females employed, 484.

Value of building-stone quarried and prepared for building, $500; employ 4 men.

Value of blacking, $8000; employ 4 men.

Value of blocks and pumps manufactured, $50; employ 1 man.

Value of mechanics' tools manufactured, $2540; employ 44 men.

Number of lasts manufactured, 40,000; value, $10,000.

Lumber prepared for market, 213,000 feet; value of timber, $32,025.

Firewood prepared for market, 3348 cords; value of firewood, $13,796; employ 60 men.

Number of sheep, 5; value, $10; wool produced, 20 pounds.

Horses, 343; value of horses, $29,880. Oxen, over three years old, 74; steers under three years old, 26; value of oxen and steers, $5760; milch-cows, 420; heifers, 36; value of cows and heifers, $17,068. Butter, 20,075 pounds; value of butter,

\$5018.75; cheese, 6505 pounds; value of cheese, \$650.50. Honey, 620 pounds; value of honey, \$155. Indian corn, 216 acres; Indian corn per acre, 28 bushels; value, \$6075. Rye, 25 acres; rye per acre, 15 bushels; value, \$567. Barley, 7 acres; barley per acre, 23 bushels; value, \$240. Oats, 20 acres; oats per acre, 19 bushels; value, \$225.60. Potatoes, 310 acres; potatoes per acre, 90 bushels; value, \$27,667. Turnips, 5 acres; turnips per acre, 200 bushels; value, \$250. Carrots,  $\frac{1}{2}$  acre; carrots per acre, 400 bushels; value, \$50. Beets and other esculent vegetables, 20 acres; value, \$5000. English mowing, 1550 acres; English hay, 1266; value, \$25,320; wet meadow, or swale hay, 375 tons; value, \$3750. Apple-trees, 7700; value of apples, \$3000. Pear-trees, 818; value of pears, \$100. Cranberries, 16 acres; value, \$3200. Beeswax, 100 pounds; value, \$73.

Bakeries, 1; flour consumed, 200 barrels; value of bread manufactured, $5000; capital, $4000; employ 6 men.

Establishments for manufacturing shoe-boxes, 1; value of boxes manufactured, $1500; capital, $1000; value of boot-tees and forms manufactured, $2000.

Peat, 500 cords; value, $2000. Swine raised, 526; value, $4208.

Manufacturing Statistics for 1865.—Gross value of mechanics' tools, $28,525; capital, $4500; hands employed, 33. Number of tack and brad manufactories, 1; value of stock, $2000; capital invested, $2500; hands employed, 2. Melodeon and organ manufactories, 2; number of instruments manufactured, 70; value of the same, $6860. Number of marble manufactories, 1; value of productions, $6422; hands employed, 10. Number of cabinet manufactories, 1; value of goods manufactured, $30,000; capital invested, $15,000; hands employed, 30. Number of pairs of boots manufactured, 103,066; number of pairs of shoes manufactured, 1,009,700; hands employed,—males, 1059; females, 208; value of goods manufactured, $1,466,900. Number of blacking establishments, 3; hands employed, 8; value of stock, $25,808.97; value of blacking manufactured, $43,806.95; capital invested, $12,300. Number of shoe-last manufactories, 1; number of lasts manufactured, 48,000; value of the same, $12,000; capital invested, $10,000; hands employed, 12. Number of shoe-box manufactories, 1; value of boxes made, $9000; hands employed, 7; capital invested, $1000.

Agricultural Statistics of North Bridgewater (now Brockton) for 1865.—Cords of firewood cut, 3065; value of the same, $10,890. Acres of farming land, 3972; value of the same, including buildings, $255,184. Acres of improved land, 3761.

Acres of woodland, 3034; value of the same, $74,415. Bushels of Indian corn raised, 5625. Acres of rye, 41. Acres of barley, 25. Acres of oats, 12½. Bushels of potatoes, 17,650. Tons of English hay, 2233. Apple-trees cultivated for fruit, 6848. Pear-trees cultivated for fruit, 1150. Number of horses, 385; value of same, $38,140. Number of oxen and steers, 68; value of same, $3965. Number of cows and heifers, 427; value of same, $18,719. Gallons of milk sold, 24,421. Pounds of butter sold, 5448. Pounds of cheese sold, 1225. Pounds of beef dressed, 378,00; value, $45,360. Pounds of pork dressed, 77,700; value, $12,432. Pounds of veal dressed, 32,151; value, $4,822.35. Value of eggs sold, $250. Number of swine, 232; value of same, $4618.

Trades and Professions.—The following list gives the number of persons employed in the various trades and professions in North Bridgewater (now Brockton) as collected in 1855:

Shoemakers.....	420	Pump-peddler.....	1
Farmers.....	153	Hotel.....	1
Bootmakers.....	134	Barber.....	1
Laborers.....	139	Academy.....	1
Carpenters.....	72	Refreshment rooms.....	3
Shoe-cutters.....	37	Marble-worker.....	1
Cabinet-makers.....	31	Lawyer.....	1
Clerks.....	28	Rolling-machine manu- facturer.....	1
Merchants.....	19	Moulder.....	1
Shoe manufacturers.....	21	Hames manufacturer.....	1
Painters.....	14	Lighthouse-keeper.....	1
Boot manufacturers.....	10	Assistant lighthouse- keeper.....	1
Masons.....	13	Railroad engineers.....	2
Awlmakers.....	13	Harness-makers.....	3
Blacksmiths.....	18	Box manufacturer.....	1
Machinists.....	7	Watchmakers.....	5
Carriage-makers.....	7	Cabinet manufacturers.....	2
Lastmakers.....	7	Horse-trader.....	1
Bakers.....	5	Railroad men.....	3
Stonemasons.....	3	Jeweler.....	1
Boot-formers.....	6	Awl manufacturers.....	3
Butchers.....	6	Expresses.....	2
Provision dealers.....	2	Brush manufacturer.....	1
Stage-drivers.....	2	Brushmakers.....	6
Boot-tree makers.....	2	Patent-leather makers.....	3
Hatters.....	2	Postmaster.....	1
Writing-master.....	1	Singing-school teacher.....	1
Teamsters.....	5	Musical instrument man- ufacturers.....	2
Shoe-tool makers.....	9	Musical instrument ma- kers.....	9
Shoe-tool manufacturers.....	2	Clergymen.....	8
Students.....	7	Warden almshouse.....	1
Soapmaker.....	1	Peddlers.....	7
Printers.....	6	Boot-trees.....	6
Last manufacturer.....	1	Livery-stables.....	2
Newspaper.....	1	Carrier.....	1
Editor.....	1	Trimmers.....	5
Musician.....	1	Sailor.....	1
Lumber-dealer.....	1	Hat manufacturer.....	1
Physicians.....	6
Cigar manufacturers.....	2
Cigar-makers.....	8
Tailors.....	10
Pumpmaker.....	1

BROCKTON FARMS IN 1875.

Property.	FARMS.	Number.	Value.
From 3 to 5 acres.....		1	.....
From 5 to 10 acres.....		16	.....
Above 10 acres.....		150	.....
		167	$851,596

BUILDINGS.
Houses.....	166
Barns.....	165
Sheds.....	32
Stables.....	4
Carriage-houses.....	5
Corn-cribs.....	5
Shops.....	9
Out-buildings.....	3
	389

LAND.
Land under crops, acres.....	1,682½	$139,039
Market gardens, acres.....	4½	760
Orchards (the land), acres.....	23	3,812
Unimproved land, acres.....	2,422½	76,709
Unimprovable land, acres.....	10	.....
Woodland, acres.....	3,502½	116,726
	7,645½	$337,046

FRUIT-TREES AND VINES.
Apple-trees.....	3,119	$9,241
Cherry-trees.....	6	60
Pear-trees.....	412	1,772
Grape-vines.....	152	450
		$11,523

DOMESTIC ANIMALS.
Bees (swarms of).....	16	$85
Bulls.....	4	130
Calves.....	76	779
Colts.....	3	250
Dogs.....	7	188
Ducks.....	82	49
Geese.....	8	15
Guinea fowls.....	21	16
Heifers.....	34	934
Hens and chickens.....	2,833	2,330
Hogs.....	125	3,124
Horses.....	202	27,060
Lambs.....	3	15
Milch cows.....	367	11,880
Oxen.....	14	1,330
Pigeons.....	117	191
Pigs.....	63	441
Sheep.....	8	30
Steers.....	4	100
Turkeys.....	25	27
		$48,974

AGGREGATES.
Land.....	$337,036
Buildings.....	314,550
Fruit-trees and vines.....	11,523
Domestic animals.....	48,974
Agricultural implements in use.....	20,012
	$732,105

DOMESTIC PRODUCTS.
For Sale.
Boards, feet.....	456,000	$5,903
Butter, pounds.....	3,305	1,462
Cider, gallons.....	7,232	1,204
Dried fruit, pounds.....	75	6
Firewood, cords.....	1,610	6,686

For Use.
Butter, pounds.....	1,696	$660
Dried fruit, pounds.....	70	11
Firewood, cords.....	248	1,100

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.
Apples, bushels.....	5,427	$4,631
Asparagus, bunches.....	150	15
Barley, bushels.....	90	90
Beans, bushels.....	11	48
Beans, string and shell, bush.....	94	158
Beef, pounds.....	5,950	508
Beets, bushels.....	1,383	382
Cabbage, heads.....	14,400	800

Celery, bunches.....	800	$50
Chickens, dressed, pounds.....	500	125
Corn, green, bushels.....	523	523
Corn, Indian, bushels.....	428	448
Cranberries, bushels.....	5	20
Cucumbers, bushels.....	30	30
Currants, quarts.....	35	7
Eggs, dozen.....	15,882	4,286
Fodder, corn, tons.....	85	891
Grapes, bushels.....	35	37
Hay, English, tons.....	1,297	28,952
Hay, meadow, tons.....	359	5,042
Hay, millet, tons.....	11	194
Huckleberries, quarts.....	100	20
Ice, tons.....	2,500	3,750
Mangoes, bushels.....	75	15
Manure, cords.....	347	2,601
Melons.....	150	15
Milk, gallons.....	180,076	46,684
Oats, hushels.....	265	184
Onions, bushels.....	85	100

Parsnips, bushels.....	30	$25
Pears, bushels.....	50	100
Peas, green, bushels.....	328	596
Pork, pounds.....	9,775	1,230
Potatoes, Irish, bushels.....	8,165	7,579
Pumpkins, pounds.....	200	2
Rye, hushels.....	79	97
Squashes, pounds.....	4,550	121
Straw, tons.....	4	81
Strawberries, quarts.....	3,160	611
Tomatoes, bushels.....	90	90
Turnips, bushels.....	3,542	1,303
Veal, pounds.....	980	122

AGGREGATES.

Domestic products, for sale.....	$15,261
Domestic products, for use.....	1,771
Hay, 1667 tons.....	34,188
Other agricultural products.....	78,375

$129,595

STATISTICS OF LABOR FOR 1875.

	Number of Establishments.	AVERAGE NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES.				WAGES.		Capital invested.	Stock used.	Value of Product.
		Total.	Males above 16.	Females above 15.	Youth and Children.	Total paid during the Year.	Total
TOWN OF BROCKTON.....	169	4725	3743	973	9	$2,279,934	$1,663,716	$5,433,333	$8,750,992
Artificial teeth and dental work.....	4	2	2	.....	..	1,650	3,150	3,132	11,165
Artisans' tools.....	5	52	52	.....	..	37,025	18,600	8,625	54,150
Boots and shoes.....	73	3981	3090	887	4	1,919,469	1,261,996	4,802,348	7,411,919
Boxes.....	4	52	22	30	..	15,500	19,425	33,125	59,190
Building.....	24	216	215	.....	1	96,586	30,400	166,650	299,450
Carriages and wagons.....	7	9	9	.....	..	5,225	3,360	4,050	16,050
Drugs and medicines.....	1	3	3	.....	..	.....	5,000	.....	25,000
Food preparations.....	6	61	52	8	1	30,050	84,000	166,498	294,150
Furniture.....	2	28	28	.....	..	.....	5,200	.....	30,500
Leather.....	4	27	25	2	..	11,975	3,200	15,900	33,000
Machines and machinery.....	3	26	26	.....	..	17,767	19,000	23,800	58,400
Metals and metallic goods.....	15	168	128	39	1	72,356	106,545	89,750	234,700
Musical instruments.....	1	3	3	.....	..	.....	2,000	.....	2,650
Photographs.....	3	6	4	2	..	3,200	7,000	5,800	12,100
Polishes and dressing.....	3	13	12	.....	1	9,326	22,500	35,805	85,118
Printing and publishing.....	3	25	21	4	..	10,290	21,800	7,550	27,000
Stone.....	2	9	9	.....	..	.....	14,900	.....	17,850
Tobacco.....	3	8	6	1	1	3,870	4,000	2,850	10,650
Wooden goods.....	6	36	36	.....	..	23,800	31,700	29,450	67,950

Statistics for 1883.—The statutes require the assessors to collect the following statistics, which are submitted for the consideration of the citizens of Brockton :

Number of polls assessed (males).....	5559
Of this number (1880) pay a property tax.....	.....
Number of female polls.....	25
Increase of polls from 1882 (males).....	750
Decrease of polls from 1882 (females).....	11
Total valuation in 1883.....	$10,467,959.00
Total valuation in 1882.....	9,150,702.00
Increase in valuation.....	1,317,257.00
Total valuation of personal estate in 1883.....	2,272,354.00
Total valuation of personal estate in 1882.....	1,845,657.00
Increase from 1882.....	426,697.00
Total value of buildings in 1883.....	4,235,865.00
Total value of buildings in 1882.....	3,748,446.00
Increase on buildings from 1882.....	487,419.00
Total value of land in 1883.....	3,959,740.00
Total value of land in 1882.....	3,556,599.00
Increase from 1882.....	403,141.00
Rate, $16½ per $1000.....	.....
Actual amount raised by taxation in 1883.....	185,154.48
Actual amount raised by taxation in 1882.....	161,951.52

Increase from 1882.....	23,202.96
Number of dwellings in 1883.....	2581
Increase from 1882.....	134
Number of horses taxed.....	1237
Increase from 1882.....	156
Number of cows taxed in 1883.....	621
Increase from 1882.....	29
Number of acres of land taxed.....	11,506
Number of pairs of oxen.....	7

Dwelling-Houses and Families in 1764.—An order was passed by the Assembly, Feb. 2, 1764, directing the selectmen of each town and district to "take an exact account of the number of dwelling-houses, families, and people in their respective towns and districts, including Indians civilized, negroes, and mulattoes, as well as white people, and females as well as males."

At this period there were one hundred and twenty houses in the North Parish,—one hundred and thirty-one families, with a population of eight hundred and thirty-three.

The above was the first attempt to take the census in Massachusetts.

In 1790 the first United States census was taken, since which time there has been a statement of the population every ten years, each one varying from the other in the system of classification.

In the years 1790 and 1800 the account is not separately given in a manner to show what the population of the North Parish was.

Population.—The population of the parish in 1810 was thirteen hundred and fifty-four.

The following is the census of the North Parish in 1820 :

Free white males under 10.....	190
“ “ “ of 10 and under 16.....	107
“ “ “ of 16 and under 26.....	153
“ “ “ of 26 and under 45.....	145
“ “ “ of 45 and upwards.....	123
Colored persons.....	23
Free white females under 10.....	181
“ “ “ of 10 and under 16.....	113
“ “ “ of 16 and under 26.....	151
“ “ “ of 26 and under 45.....	156
“ “ “ of 45 and upwards.....	134
Foreigners not naturalized.....	4
Number of dwelling-houses.....	220
Total number of inhabitants.....	1480

Population in 1830, 1953, with the following details :

Males.—Under 5, 129; 5 to 10, 112; 10 to 15, 129; 15 to 20, 122; 20 to 30, 177; 30 to 40, 105; 40 to 50, 73; 50 to 60, 36; 60 to 70, 41; 70 to 80, 19; 80 to 90, 8; 90 to 100, 1.

Females.—Under 5, 122; 5 to 10, 110; 10 to 15, 102; 15 to 20, 92; 20 to 30, 211; 30 to 40, 106; 40 to 50, 85; 50 to 60, 58; 60 to 70, 42; 70 to 80, 24; 80 to 90, 9; 90 to 100, 0.

Colored persons :

Males.—Under 10, 6; 10 to 24, 9; 24 to 36, 3; 36 to 55, 3; 55 to 100, 2.

Females.—Under 10, 3; 10 to 24, 5; 24 to 36, 1; 36 to 55, 4; 55 to 100, 4.

Population in 1840, 2094, with the following details :

Males.—Under 5, 0; 5 to 10, 170; 10 to 15, 147; 15 to 20, 156; 20 to 30, 167; 30 to 40, 187; 40 to 50, 93; 50 to 60, 72; 60 to 70, 30; 70 to 80, 23; 80 to 90, 11; 90 to 100, 2. Total, 1058.

Females.—Under 5, 0; 5 to 10, 170; 10 to 15, 135; 15 to 20, 114; 20 to 30, 132; 30 to 40, 202; 40 to 50, 100; 50 to 60, 72; 60 to 70, 48; 70 to 80, 26; 80 to 90, 15; 90 to 100, 0. Total, 1014. Colored, 22.

Population in 1850, 3939, with the following details :

Under 1, 101; 1 to 5, 379; 5 to 10, 418; 10 to 15, 364; 15 to 20, 452; 20 to 25, 449; 25 to 30, 402; 30 to 35, 320; 35 to 40, 248; 40 to 45, 198; 45 to 50, 156; 50 to 55, 115; 55 to 60, 91; 60 to 65, 79; 65 to 70, 56; 70 to 75, 35; 75 to 80, 21; 80 to 85, 13; 85 to 90, 5; 90 to 95, 4; 95 to 100, 3; colored, 30. Total, 3939.

Population in 1855, 5205, by the State census, with the following details :

Under 5, 707; 5 to 10, 533; 10 to 15, 523; 15 to 20, 507; 20 to 30, 1125; 30 to 40, 790; 40 to 50, 451; 50 to 60, 298; 60 to 70, 170; 70 to 80, 71; 80 to 90, 15; 90 to 100, 2.

Population in 1860, 6584, with the following details :

Males.—Under 1, 92; 1 to 5, 397; 5 to 10, 361; 10 to 15, 298; 15 to 20, 360; 20 to 30, 705; 30 to 40, 490; 40 to 50, 338; 50 to 60, 171; 60 to 70, 99; 70 to 80, 47; 80 to 90, 8; 90 to 100, 1. Total, 3367.

Females.—Under 1, 118; 1 to 5, 347; 5 to 10, 343; 10 to 15, 248; 15 to 20, 292; 20 to 30, 694; 30 to 40, 462; 40 to 50, 288; 50 to 60, 200; 60 to 70, 115; 70 to 80, 61; 80 to 90, 12; 90 to 100, 0. Total, 3185.

Colored people :

Males.—Under 1, 0; 1 to 2, 4; 5 to 10, 3; 10 to 15, 1; 15 to 20, 1; 20 to 30, 2; 30 to 40, 3; 40 to 50, 1; 50 to 60, 1; 60 to 70, 1. Total, 18.

Females.—Under 1, 0; 1 to 5, 2; 5 to 10, 3; 10 to 15, 0; 15 to 20, 1; 20 to 30, 3; 30 to 40, 3; 40 to 50, 1; 50 to 60, 0; 60 to 70, 1. Total, 14. Number of dwelling-houses, 1023; number of families, 1377.

Population in 1865, 6335. Number of dwellings, 1249. Number of families, 1391. Number of churches, 8. Number of school-houses, 15. Number of ratable polls, 1708. Number of legal voters, 1362. Number of naturalized voters, 141.

CHAPTER XVI.

First Coverings for the Feet—Modern Shoes—Boot and Shoe Trade in New England—Store Trade in Massachusetts—Improvements in Manufacturing—Introduction of Machinery—Early Shoe Manufacturers—Statistical Tables for Brockton—Brockton as a Boot and Shoe Manufacturing City.

Boot and Shoe Manufacture.—This important industrial interest, having assumed such wonderful proportions, and towering as it does above all its competitors in magnitude and importance, deserves more than a passing notice. When we consider the amount of capital devoted to this branch of the mechanic arts, the energy and perseverance of the leading men engaged in the same, we cannot fail to give it a place among the greatest of manufactures. It is a curious and interesting study to trace the various changes that have taken place in coverings for the feet.

The first known to have been used were fifteen hundred years before Christ, and the first or oldest form was the sandal. Those used by the poorer classes consisted of flat slices of the palm-leaf, lapped in the centre, forming the sole, and a double band of twisted leaves secured and strengthened the edge. A thong of strong fibres of the same plant was affixed to each side of the instep, and was secured round the foot, while those of the wealthy classes were made of leather, and frequently lined with cloth, the point or end turning up like a pair of modern skates. Specimens of these sandals, made of leaves or papyrus, are now on exhibition in the British Museum. Among the Hebrews, shoes were often made of wood, and those for soldiers of brass or iron. Among the Greeks and Romans the use of shoes was not common, and the Spartan youths were early taught to go bare-footed, females only being allowed to wear shoes.

From the earliest days there has always been a great diversity of style in the different periods of time. The Lacademonians wore red shoes. Roman senators and patricians wore high, black, laced buskins, with ornaments of ivory. Some were made with tops of great length, to cover the legs, and were called boots, the tops often being made of skins of wild animals laced up in front, great care being taken to procure an exact fit.

The Jews commonly went without covering for the feet, except when on very long journeys it became necessary to wear something,—in such cases sandals, made simply of a sole with one or two straps across the instep, heels being seldom used.

During the reign of Edward the Third of England, those that worked at the shoe-trade were denominated the "gentle craft," as they produced shoes of the most gorgeous descriptions; the greatest variety of pattern was devised and the richest contrast of color elaborated. Coming down to the reign of Richard the Second, boots and shoes were made of great length, so that they were chained to the knee of the wearer with gold and silver straps or cord. This fashion was in use till Parliament, in 1463, forbade shoemakers making points on shoes over two inches long for the unprivileged classes under penalty of twenty shillings, and for those that wore them excommunication was denounced against any persons wearing such. This move had the effect to widen the toes to such an absurd extent that Queen Mary limited the width to six inches.

During the reign of Charles the First, in the sixteenth century, boots were made of elegant Spanish buff leather, with tops of such enormous dimensions as to obstruct walking with ease. The distinguishing mark of gentility during the reign of George the First and Second was red heels. The ladies wore silk or velvet in preference to leather, and the favorite color was figured blue silk, with bright red heels and silver buckles. In 1790 the low, flat slipper was introduced, and the shoe-buckle disappeared and the plain shoe-string was introduced. The Prince of Wales endeavored to preserve the use of the buckle, in order to assist the buckle-makers, but fashion was too powerful for him.

The shoes of the Oriental ladies are highly ornamented, the covering being wrought with gold, silver, and silk, and set with jewels. The sabot is a shoe peculiar to France, and is made of wood, very clumsy, but warm and comfortable.

Of all the varieties of shoes none are so curious as the Chinese, none are so costly or elaborate, and none so unnatural. Their feet are kept bandaged from their infancy, so that when they arrive at maturity they are enabled to wear shoes of three or four inches in length, which are usually made of beautiful silk.

During the ninth and tenth centuries wooden shoes were quite common, and even now the peasantry of Europe wear them to a great extent.

Of the boots and shoes of modern days, those manufactured in America excel all others in style and variety of kinds. The celebrated gaiter-boot inaugurated a new era in coverings for the feet, and its introduction is attributed to the Countess of Blessington; but owing to the labor of lacing and unlacing, holes wearing out, breaking off, etc., these gave way to the elastic gaiter, which has been universally adopted and approved. The Americans are rapidly securing to themselves a superiority over all other nations in this most important of manufacturing interests, and they are now regarded as the manufacturers of the world. American ingenuity and skill has completely rivaled the best specimens of Parisian handicraft, and the importation of French gaiters has nearly ceased. Narrowing our limits down to home interests, we may safely say that the highest perfection of this branch of the mechanic arts has been attained in Massachusetts.

Early in the seventeenth century the Lords of Trade reported to Parliament that the greater portion of leather used within the province was made in Massachusetts. During the war of the Revolution, Massachusetts supplied large quantities of shoes for the army, and during the late Rebellion she supplied the demand of the government.

The boot and shoe trade of New England is of modern date. Previous to the war of 1812, those engaged in shoemaking consisted of the "village cobbler," and those whose custom it was to travel from house to house and place to place, to repair and make shoes for the families, enough to last them till he came around again, which was usually once a year. Shoes were not made up in large quantities as at the present time, and it was by degrees that the shoemakers procured a little leather and made it into shoes, and bartered them at a neighboring store for groceries, or exchanged them with the tanners for leather. At length the store-keepers kept a few shoes on hand for sale.

The store trade of Massachusetts may be said to have begun in or about 1818, when the first cargo of shoes and boots was shipped to New York to Messrs. Spofford & Tileston, boot and shoe jobbers. The trade has since continued to increase, till it now forms one-third part of the total manufacturing power of the country. Nearly every small country town in New England does something in the manufacture of boots and shoes, and it has been estimated that every eighth man is a shoemaker.

The shoes that were made previous to 1818 were mostly of the sewed kind, until a patent was obtained for riveting the uppers to the bottoms, a steel plate having been used for that purpose. Then came wooden pegs, said to have been first used by Joseph Walker, of Hopkinton, Mass. Soon after pegs had come into common use, it produced a great revolution in the manufacture of sale work. Women and boys were employed to peg shoes that could not so well be employed on sewed work, and hence the number of shoemakers increased very fast. If we stop to consider the great improvements made in the manufacture of sale work by machinery, we cannot fail to see that it has become one of the most important of business pursuits. We now find, instead of the manufacturers sending out leather to make into shoes, as in former times, large numbers of men are engaged in making shoes in the manufacturing shops by the different machines that are in use, of which there is a great variety. Instead of cutting leather with a hand-knife, it is now cut with dies, propelled either by machinery or by hand; and in place of the uppers being sewed by hand as they were formerly, machines do the work nicer and much quicker. Then we have the patent last-holder, for assisting in the process of lasting the shoes; from this the shoe passes to the pegging-machine, where, in an almost incredible time, the shoe is pegged; from thence the shoe is passed to the leveling machine, which is a powerful engine for rubbing down the bottoms. Then the shoe is handed from one person to another to do the different parts, of finishing the edges, and grinding the bottoms, putting on of heels, etc. After they are finished, by grinding the bottoms, they are colored and tied in pairs, or placed in single pairs in a paper box, and packed in cases for shipment. We have already seen that shoemaking and manufacturing are not what they were once. Manufacturing shops, instead of being small buildings, having a few cutters only, are now large and commodious buildings, several stories high, filled with machinery of different kinds, and propelled by steam-power. In one room, usually the basement, is the steam-boiler and engine, and machines for cutting sole-leather, rolling it and cutting out the soles at a single stroke. In another loft the leather is secured to the last, and the outer soles prepared for the pegging operation. This machine is supplied with a thin strip of wood, like a watch-spring, its width being the length of the peg. From the coil at each revolution of the machine, a peg is clipped, that falls into a cell, ready to be introduced by its next movement into its place in the shoe. The pegs are thus produced at the rate of fourteen in a second.

With the recent introduction of machinery there has been an increase in the amount of goods, with less help than formerly was required on the same quantity of goods.

The shoe manufacture in this town has become the prominent business of the town, giving employment to a large number of persons, both male and female. It commenced and became one of the leading branches of business previous to the incorporation of the town.

Mr. Micah Faxon was probably the first person that manufactured shoes for the wholesale trade in the town. He came from Randolph in 1811, and commenced cutting and making shoes in the house that was formerly occupied by the late Matthew Packard, and on the same lot that Mr. Faxon's house now stands. At that time there was no one in town that could bind the vamps and put the shoes together, and they were sent to Randolph to be made. At first he made one hundred pairs of fine calf spring-heel shoes, and carried them to Boston on horseback. His first lot was sold to Messrs. Monroe & Nash, a firm on Long Wharf, Boston, who were among the first to send goods to the South. When carriages came into common use, he carried his shoes into the city in wagons, and brought out his own leather. The market-men and those that carried wood and other goods to market used to bring out stock for him, which, of course, was in small lots at first. Soon after this time Messrs. Silas Packard and Col. Edward Southworth became engaged in the same business in connection with their store, on the corner of Court and Main Streets, where David Cobb's store now stands. Col. Southworth soon after built the store that he now occupies, which was in 1816. From that time to the present the business has continued to increase, till, in 1837, we find the amount of boots manufactured to be 79,000 pairs, beside 22,300 pairs of shoes, amounting in all to $184,200, giving employment to 750 males and 375 females. In 1845 the tables of industry show the amount of boots and shoes manufactured in North Bridgewater to be $179,716. Number of pairs of shoes, 155,476; number of pairs of boots, 44,711; giving employment to 301 males and 203 females.

By the above tables we see the amount of goods manufactured has decreased during the eight years intervening the dates above; we also find the number of shoes has increased by more than seven times, while the number of boots is much less. We account for the number of hands employed being so much less by the introduction of machinery, requiring less help to perform the same amount of work.

In 1855 the amount of goods had greatly increased, and the number of both boots and shoes has also increased in number, and a corresponding number of persons employed, which is as follows: Number of boots manufactured, 66,956 pairs; number of shoes, 694,740 pairs; value of the same, $724,847; number of males employed, 692; number of females, 484.

In 1865 the number of boots manufactured was 103,066 pairs; number of shoes, 1,009,700 pairs; number of males employed, 1059; number of females employed, 208. Total value of goods manufactured, $1,466,900. During the last ten years we find the increase to be $742,153 in amount; increase in the number of boots manufactured, 37,150 pairs; increase of shoes manufactured, 314,960 pairs.

Among those who have been engaged in the manufacture of boots or shoes, we publish the following names:

Micah Faxon.	George B. Blanchard.
Col. Edward Southworth.	George C. Cary.
Silas Packard.	Allen Leach.
Maj. Nathan Hayward.	Henry Cross.
Benjamin Kingman.	Charles R. Ford.
Isaac F. Curtis.	Richard M. Fullerton.
Noah Chesman.	Marcus Holmes.
David Howard.	Daniel S. Howard.
Henry Howard.	F. O. Howard.
George W. Bryant.	Cyrus Jernegan.
Thomas A. Ford.	Fearing W. Bent.
Charles L. Hawthaway.	Frederic G. Jones.
Samuel S. Brett.	George A. Haven.
Edward S. Packard.	O. O. Patten.
Francis M. French.	J. O. Patten.
William French.	Nathaniel R. Packard.
Ambrose Packard.	Washburn Packard.
Oliver Leach.	George Sawyer.
Oliver F. Leach.	H. B. Packard.
Marcus Leach.	Enos Reynolds.
Peleg S. Leach.	E. L. Thayer.
Cyrus B. Kingman.	George R. Thompson.
Martin L. Keith.	Levi B. White.
Charles P. Keith.	Welcome White.
Charles Keith.	Varanes Wales.
Franklin Keith.	Darius Howard.
Arza B. Keith.	Frederic Howard.

Albert Keith.	Howard Tilden.
Howard P. Keith.	John Tilden.
Willard Keith.	Caleb Howard, Jr.
Elmer Keith.	David Eldrid, Jr.
Thomas Young.	Isaac Perkins.
Thomas Swift.	William S. Huntington.
B. F. Hayward.	Alpheus Andrews.
Samuel D. Keith.	Robert A. Stoddard.
Horace Bryant.	Simeon Dunbar.
William Snell.	Lysander Howard.
John O. Emerson.	George Clark.
George Stevens.	F. O. Thayer.
Gardner J. Kingman.	F. A. Tbayer.
Howard Reynolds.	Lewis, Whittier & Griffin.
Gardner Reynolds.	Aaron B. Drake.
M. V. & J. W. Reynolds.	Josiah Fuller.
George Loring & Co.	Arza Keith.
B. G. Stoddard.	George W. Dunbar.
B. Cary, Jr.	Bradford Dunbar.
W. H. H. Hebard.	Howard T. Marshall.
Benjamin F. Reynolds.	Henry A. Ford.
Perez Marshall.	Edwin C. Ames.
Russell Alden.

During 1865 there was a decided increase in the number of manufacturers, and several steam-engines, with the requisite machinery for making shoes, were introduced. A year or two since Messrs. A. & A. B. Keith introduced a new method of making shoes by new and improved machines. This firm was the first in the country to adopt nearly all machinery, such as pegging, sewing, cutting, scouring, etc. They had a large factory at Campello, and another in Raynham, where they manufactured a large amount of goods for the Southern market, having a store in Pearl Street, Boston, for the sale of their goods. This firm have retired from business. Martin L. Keith had a large establishment for manufacturing goods at Campello, and a store in Pearl Street for the sale of his goods. His factory was totally destroyed by fire, and Mr. Keith is in other business in Boston.

Among the manufacturers who early introduced steam-engines in the manufacture of boots and shoes, was the late Charles R. Ford, who erected a very large building in the north part of the Centre, on Main Street; Daniel S. Howard had a large manufactory on Montello Street, and formerly used a hot-air engine for power, now uses steam-power; F. O. & F. A. Thayer had a large new engine in their manufactory on Centre Street; Samuel Herrod also introduced steam-power in his factory, at the north end of the city, on Main Street; George Stevens had a large and commodious building for manufacturing boots and shoes by steam-power, on Montello Street, Campello. This was in 1865.

The foregoing manufacturers were the first to use steam for power; now they are numbered to over a hundred who have steam boilers in the city.

Probably no city in the country has superior advantages or facilities for manufacturing boots and shoes than the city of Brockton; the facilities of transportation to Boston and New York are convenient, and workmen of all kinds are at hand to do any amount of labor that may be required.

In 1835, George W. Bryant manufactured custom boots and shoes, and sold leather to manufacturers.

B. P. Davis commenced the retail boot and shoe business on Main Street in 1850, and is the oldest dealer in that business in the city. Charles D. Brigham had a boot and shoe store at 423 Main Street. Thomas P. Reynolds had a custom boot and shoe store in Central Block, on Centre Street.

The present retail dealers are Benjamin P. Davis, A. M. Niles, E. E. Carll & Co., George H. Jameson, Walter C. Packard, John H. Carr, Sweetzer & Son, Thayer & Whitman, T. A. Corcoran, Kent & Hickey.

We present to the reader the following list of the shipments of boots and shoes at different dates, giving an idea of the growth and prosperity in that leading branch of business of Brockton. A careful examination of the tables explain themselves.

It will be understood that the figures in each column represent first the shipments for the week ending on the date opposite which they are placed, the footings for the month being placed after the figures for the last week in the month. The columns under Brockton show the shipments from the whole city, including Campello; those under Campello the shipments from Campello alone.

COMPARATIVE SCHEDULE.

	1878.	1877.
January	3..... 1531	1408
	10..... 1779	1938
	17..... 3027	3297
	24..... 2940	3378
	31..... 4125—13,402	3823—13,844
February	7..... 3730	4774
	14..... 4159	4449
	21..... 4462	4816
	28..... 4710—17,061	5216—19,255
March	7..... 4354	5024
	14..... 4063	5383
	21..... 4018	5347
	28..... 4353—16,788	4997—20,751
April	4..... 4249	5251
	11..... 4203	4610
	18..... 4109	3914
	25..... 4129—16,690	4081—17,856
May	2..... 3896	3322
	9..... 3698	3793
	16..... 3243	3150
	23..... 3026	2922
	30..... 2573—16,436	2780—15,967
June	6..... 2171	2125
	13..... 2147	2267
	20..... 1867	2124
	27..... 1647— 7,832	1709— 8,225
July	4..... 1802	1502
	11..... 1186	1103
	18..... 1533	1866
	23..... 2173— 6,694	2249— 6,720
August	1..... 2600	3418
	8..... 3047	2926

	1878.	1877.
August	15..... 3342	3107
	22..... 3716	3542
	29..... 3840—16,545	3141—15,134
September	5..... 3965	3569
	12..... 3886	3703
	19..... 4126	3178
	26..... 3727—15,704	3290—13,740
October	3..... 3830	3536
	10..... 2149	1976
	17..... 3714	2963
	24..... 3362	2810
	31..... 2581—15,936	2049—13,334
November	7..... 2318	2000
	14..... 1943	1279
	21..... 1650	1105
	28..... 1524— 7,435	1060— 5,444
December	5..... 808	810
	12..... 920	884
	19..... 974	1252
	26..... 1285— 3,987	1080— 4,026
Totals.....	154,510	154,296

Number of cases shipped in 1876, 142,010.

	1878.			1879.
	Brockton.	Campello.	Total.	Brockton.	Campello.	Total.
Jan.	2..... 840	691	1531	703	505	1208
	9..... 1210	569	1779	1162	582	1744
	16..... 2111	916	3027	1659	872	2531
	23..... 2129	811	2940	1849	1001	2850
	30..... 3105	1020	4125	2468	1062	3530
Feb.	6..... 2580	1150	3730	2662	1249	3911
	13..... 2861	1298	4159	2820	1314	4134
	20..... 3223	1139	4462	3295	1241	4536
	27..... 3490	1220	4710	3240	1228	4468
March	6..... 3426	928	4354	3086	1419	4505
	13..... 2936	1127	4063	3387	1453	4840
	20..... 2865	1153	4018	3682	1480	5162
	27..... 3001	1352	4353	3450	1647	5097
April	3..... 3105	1144	4249	3555	1467	5022
	10..... 3177	1026	4203	2962	1279	4241
	17..... 3313	796	4109	3495	1510	5005
	24..... 3075	1054	4129	3111	1292	4403
May	1..... 2871	1025	3896	3466	1320	4786
	8..... 2665	1033	3698	2420	1128	3548
Totals.....	52,083	19,452	71,535	52,472	23,049	75,521

COMPARATIVE TABLE OF SHIPMENTS OF CASES OF BOOTS AND SHOES FROM

	Brockton.		Campello.
	1881.	1880.	1881	1880.
January	7..... 3181	4843	1174	1521
	14..... 4433	4487	1672	1201
	21..... 4676	5291	1500	1540
	28..... 4959—17,249	4124—18,745	1525—5,871	1280—5,548
February	4..... 5676	3702	2045	1376
	11..... 5743	3905	1777	1323
	18..... 5572	6049	1815	1334
	25..... 6168—23,159	5528—18,184	1806—7,443	1494—5,577
March	4..... 5968	5991	1905	1613
	11..... 6243	5927	1945	1686
	18..... 6316	6011	1991	1681
	25..... 6648—25,175	5460—23,389	2121—7,962	1534—6,514
April	1..... 6521	3807	2177	1501
	8..... 4544	4320	1405	1260
	15..... 4899	6075	1602	1622
	22..... 5573	4849	1764	1566
	29..... 5315—25,852	4935—22,686	1196—8,084	1422—7,371
May	6..... 4984	4723	1848	1809
	13..... 4926	4100	1880	1365
	20..... 4764	3716	1814	1349
	27..... 4379—19,053	3585—16,124	1714—7,256	2318—6,841
June	3..... 2635	2871	912	932
	10..... 3421	2980	1213	835
	17..... 3070	3172	1080	1427
	24..... 2527—11,653	2360—11,383	1075—4,280	756—3,950
July	1..... 2991	2253	1008	496
	8..... 1890	1352	606	388
	15..... 2483	2200	755	550
	22..... 3476	2757	1136	833
	29..... 4058—14,898	3690—12,252	1284—4,789	1048—3,315
August	6..... 4378	3847	1642	1216
	12..... 5075	4473	1440	1298
	19..... 4780	4565	1881	1315
	26..... 4985—19,218	4465—17,350	1825—6,788	1411—5,240

	1881.	1880.	1881.	1880.
September	2... 5246	4990	1752	1440
	9... 4833	4502	1815	1488
	16... 5253	2561	1848	1225
	23... 4622	4547	1777	1395
	30... 4154—24,108	3014—19,614	1504—8,796	1505—7,053
October	7... 4549	3746	1130	1107
	14... 3026	3604	966	1106
	21... 3803	2456	1432	1278
	28... 3594—15,172	1851—11,657	1394—4,522	1324—4,815
November	4... 3190	2605	1206	985
	11... 3190	2531	1206	917
	18... 2922	2531	879	917
	25... 2240—11,542	2067— 9,734	762—4,053	856—3,675
December	2... 1925	1650	623	644
	9... 2040	1089	873	706
	16... 1611	2433	810	733
	23... 3060	1526	1211	820
	30... 3021—11,657	1674— 8,372	786—4,303	676—3,579
Totals.....	218,726	189,490	74,147	63,478

Total shipments for 1879, 181,372; for 1878, 154,510; for 1877, 154,296; for 1876, 142,010.

	Brockton.		Campello.
	1882.	1881.	1882.	1881.
January	6... 4440	3181	1267	1174
	13... 4455	4433	1751	1672
	20... 4982	4676	2109	1500
	27... 5791—19,968	4959—17,249	1490— 7,617	1525—5,871
February	3... 5596	5676	2197	2346
	10... 5916	5743	2085	1777
	17... 6378	5572	2118	1816
	24... 6599—26,589	6168—23,159	2454— 8,851	1806—7,443
March	3... 6570	5968	2761	1905
	10... 6806	6243	2056	1945
	17... 7091	6316	2401	1991
	24... 7328	6648	2344	2121
	31... 7162—34,957	6521—25,175	2431—11,993	2117—7,962
April	7... 6188	4544	1938	1405
	14... 6977	4899	1946	1602
	21... 6948	5573	2032	1764
	28... 6317—26,430	6315—25,852	1920— 7,806	1196—8,084
May	5... 6335	4984	1392	1848
	12... 6093	4926	1851	1880
	19... 6419	4764	1701	1814
	26... 5391—18,238	4379—19,053	1714— 6,568	1714—7,256
June	2... 5176	2635	1726	912
	9... 4960	3421	1725	1213
	16... 4810	3070	1744	1080
	23... 4192	2527—11,653	1281	1075—4,280
	30... 3218—22,356	2991	950— 7,426	1008
July	7... 3201	1890	909	666
	14... 2316	2483	918	755
	21... 3283	3476	1622	1136
	28... 4106—12,906	4058—14,898	1733— 5,182	1281—4,789
August	4... 5071	4378	1929	1642
	11... 4653	5075	1711	1440
	18... 5140	4780	1921	1881
	25... 5940—20,704	4985—19,218	2199— 7,760	7825—6,788
September	1... 6264	6246	2462	1752
	8... 6412	4833	2579	1815
	15... 5993	5253	2122	1848
	22... 5968	4622	2072	1777
	29... 5642—29,779	4154—24,108	1880—11,115	1504—8,796
October	6... 6316	4549	1738	1130
	13... 5140	3026	1713	966
	20... 4999.	3803	1776	1432
	27... 4981—20,436	3594—15,172	1660— 6,887	1394—4,522
November	3... 4061	3190	1350	1206
	10... 3704	3190	1028	1206
	17... 3467	2922	1272	879
	24... 2306—14,538	2240—11,542	1587— 5,237	762—4,053
December	1... 2915	1925	971	623
	8... 2417	2040	918	873
	15... 3256	1611	1373	810
	22... 3864	3060	1496	1211
	29... 3704—16,156	3021—11,657	1177— 5,935	786—4,303
Totals.....	261,657	218,726	92,367	74,147

The total shipments for 1880 were 189,490; in 1879, 281,372; 1878, 154,510; 1877, 154,205; 1876, 142,010.

	Brockton.		Campello.
	1883.	1882.	1883.	1882.
January	5... 6109	4440	2419	1267
	12... 6144	4455	1811	1751
	19... 6519	4982	2605	2109
	26... 6490—25,562	5791—19,968	2421— 9,266	2490— 7,617
February	2... 7487	5596	2228	2197
	9... 7946	6318	2660	2085
	16... 8104	6978	2775	2119
	23... 7637—31,174	6599—26,689	2806—10,469	2454— 8,851

	1883.	1882.	1883.	1882.
March	2... 8403	6570	2574	2761
	9... 7555	6006	2612	2056
	16... 7631	7091	2532	2401
	23... 7660	7328	2613	2344
	30... 7757—49,016	7162—34,957	2636—12,867	2431—11,993
April	6... 6484	6188	2219	1938
	13... 6491	977	2333	1916
	20... 6282	6918	2158	2032
	27... 6169—25,426	6317—26,430	2142— 8,852	1920— 7,806
May	4... 7072	6335	3111	1392
	11... 5142	6093	1508	1851
	18... 6005	6419	1859	1701
	25... 5511—23,730	5391—18,238	1745— 8,223	1714— 6,568
June	1... 4990	5176	1626	1726
	8... 5165	4960	1978	1726
	15... 4143	4810	1338	1744
	22... 4206	4192	1613	1281
	29... 4842—23,246	3218—22,356	2001— 8,555	950— 7,426
July	6... 2465	3201	1098	909
	13... 2329	2316	798	918
	20... 3559	3283	1481	1622
	27... 4667—13,020	4106—12,906	1727— 6,104	1733— 5,182
August	3... 4712	5071	1570	1929
	10... 4725	4653	1481	1711
	17... 4921	5140	1640	1921
	24... 5617	5940	859	2199
	31... 5799—25,774	6264—27,068	1866— 8,416	2462—11,222
September	7... 5997	6412	1998	2579
	14... 6437	5993	2126	2122
	21... 6329	6968	2109	2072
	28... 6108—24,871	5642—24,016	2119— 8,352	1880— 8,653
October	5... 6111	5316	931	1738
	12... 5060	5140	1853	1713
	19... 5781	4999	1720	1776
	26... 4834—22,686	4981—20,436	1857— 7,361	1860— 6,887
November	2... 4939	4061	1446	1350
	9... 4176	3704	1018	1028
	16... 4246	3467	1527	1272
	23... 3961	3306	1514	1587
	30... 3651—20,973	2915—17,453	1320— 6,825	971— 6,208
December	7... 3421	2417	1219	918
	14... 3015	2256	1078	1373
	21... 3945	2864	1322	1496
	28... 4193—14,574	3704—13,241	1397— 5,061	1177— 4,964
Totals.....	300,052	261,651	99,296	92,367

The total shipments for 1881 were 218,726; for 1880, 189,490; 1879, 181,372; 1878, 154,510; 1877, 154,205; 1876, 142,010.

Brockton as a Boot and Shoe Manufacturing City.—Brockton is one of the most active and enterprising manufacturing towns of its size in Massachusetts. In this city, which comprises the wide-awake little village of Campello, there are between seventy and eighty shoe manufacturers, employing in the prosecution of the business in all its different departments between four million and five million dollars, and from three thousand five hundred to four thousand operatives or workmen. There is but very little ladies' work made here, but the great bulk is men's, boys', and youths' congress, Alexis, Balmorals, and, in fact, all the different kinds of men's and boys' goods which are sold everywhere.

Heretofore Brockton has had a reputation of making cheap goods, and, while this is still true at the present time to a certain extent, it may be said with equal truthfulness that she makes whatever the demand is for; and while, in these depressed times, the consumer is obliged to make a dollar go as far as possible, and can only pay for a cheap shoe, her manufacturers are on the alert to comply with the demand, and let no opportunity escape to convert their leather into the kind of goods that will sell in the market. But it gives pleasure to note the gradual improvement and the growing inclination on the part of the manufacturers each year to substitute good solid leather work, made "upon honor," for the cheap, low-priced goods, filled in with what is commonly known as shoddy. In 1875 this new departure was made in a large way,—although previous to this date some fine work was made,—and now there are some six or eight large factories whose machinery is run altogether on fine, first-class work, and the workmen in which are all skilled in the higher branches of the business. Brockton people are justly very proud at the turn manufacturing has taken in this direction, and it can be stated, without fear of successful contradiction, that some of the finest, most "nobby," and yet serviceable, men's goods to be found in the country are turned out at this enterprising shoe centre. Looking through the stock- and sample-rooms, one is forcibly impressed with this radical change from cheap to high-grade goods, as the leather used for both "uppers" and "soles" is of the very best quality and tannage, and the "samples," in the almost numberless varieties of styles and patterns, are certainly worthy to grace, as they do, the counters and shelves of many of the first-class boot and shoe stores.

Wm. E. Keith

From those early days to the present, the manufacture of boots and shoes has been a distinctive business with the people of this city, and with the march of improvement and the adoption of the modern facilities for prosecuting the growing business, Brockton has kept pace, and from a few little obscure rooms once used, supplied with rudely-constructed shoemakers' benches, old-fashioned awls, waxed-ends, etc., have sprung up large two-, three-, and four-story buildings, constructed on modern principles and supplied with all the latest and most improved machinery known or used in the prosecution of the business. Nowhere has capital been more lavishly expended to secure the best facilities, and nowhere is a greater degree of enterprise manifested to keep up with the times and compete successfully with other manufacturing towns and cities.

Daniel S. Howard is one of the pioneers and most successful shoe manufacturers in the city of Brockton. He commenced this business about thirty-six years ago, with small capital, and is now said to be the wealthiest shoe manufacturer in the city. He has a large factory on Montello Street, and employs about 250 workmen; daily capacity of factory, 1500 pairs.

George Elden Keith, one of the leading and most successful manufacturers of Southeastern Massachusetts, was born in Campello, Feb. 8, 1850. He received the education afforded by the common and high schools of his native town, and was a member of the first class at the opening of the high school at Brockton. Idleness formed no part of Mr. Keith's life. While in school the mornings and nights were employed in working at the bench, making boots and shoes. After leaving school he continued at this work until July 1, 1874, when, in company with W. S. Green, he commenced manufacturing under the firm-name of Green & Keith. This copartnership continued until 1880, when he disposed of his interest to Mr. Green and erected his present large factory, and has since carried on the business as sole proprietor. This is one of the largest boot and shoe manufactories in this part of the State, the value of the annual product being from six hundred to seven hundred thousand dollars, and employing three hundred hands. It is a representative institution, and reflects great credit upon its enterprising proprietor, who in the brief period of ten years has gone from the bench to the ownership of this immense establishment.

Mr. Keith is a Republican in politics, and was a member of the first board of aldermen of the city of Brockton. He is president of the Campello Loan Association, and a director in the Brockton National Bank, and also in the Brockton Savings-Bank. In religion he is a Congregationalist, and a member of the South Congregational Church.

Oct. 23, 1877, he united in marriage with Anna G. Reed, daughter of the Hon. W. L. Reed, of South Abington, and they have one child, Elden B., born Oct. 18, 1879.

Mr. Keith traces his ancestry to Rev. James Keith, who came from Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1662. He was the first ordained minister in Bridgewater, having been ordained in February, 1664. The line of descent is as follows: Rev. James, Timothy, Timothy, Levi, Benjamin, Capt. Ziba, Franklin. Franklin married Betsey, daughter of Paul Bailey, of Sidney, Me., and had six children, of whom George E. was the fourth.

George Elden Keith is essentially a self-made man. He has gained nothing by mere luck, but everything by perseverance and well-digested plans, and the intelligent application of his energies to the end in view. In social life he is gentlemanly and affable, and is one of Campello's most enterprising and honored citizens.

Preston B. Keith traces his ancestry in this country to the Rev. James Keith, who came from Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1662. He was the first ordained minister in Bridgewater. The line of descent is as follows: Timothy, Timothy, Levi, Benjamin, Charles, and Charles Perkins, the father of the subject of this sketch, who was born June 20, 1820, and married Mary K., daughter of Josiah Williams, Dec. 4, 1843, and had three children,—Sarah Williams, Preston Bond, and Rufus Perkins.

Preston Bond Keith was born in Campello, Oct. 18, 1847. He was educated at the High School in Brockton, and at the age of eighteen went to Boston, and entered the employ of Martin L. Keith, who was a shoe manufacturer in Brockton, with a store in Boston. Here he remained five and a half years, mastering the shoe business. Returning to Brockton in 1871, he commenced business for himself in Campello, in a factory which stood on Main Street, where he continued three years, when he removed the building to Clifton Avenue, and enlarged it. Three years later Mr. Keith leased this property and erected his present large manufactory, which was opened in July, 1878. At the commencement of business the annual product amounted to about ninety thousand dollars, and he employed from thirty to forty hands. Mr. Keith has increased the business until at the present time the value of the annual product amounts to over four hundred thousand dollars, employing one hundred and seventy-five persons. A business man, with large manufacturing interests to direct and care for, Mr. Keith has found but little time to devote to the public business. He was elected member of the board of aldermen in 1882, and re-elected in 1883. He is a director in the Home National Bank, and has been since its organization. He is a director in the street railway company, and vice-president of the Campello Co-operative Bank. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the South Congregational Church.

Dec. 8, 1869, Mr. Keith united in marriage with Eldora Louisa, daughter of Josiah W. and Margaret (Dunlap) Kingman, and they have one child, Allie, born April 2, 1877.

James S. Allen, in East Bridgewater. (See biography of.)

Warren A. Howard commenced business in 1870. His factory is one hundred by thirty-five feet, four stories high. He manufactures about 1200 pairs of shoes per day, and employs about 200 hands.

S. Gardner Jones commenced the manufacture of shoes in 1878, and has continued to the present time. He employs 100 hands, and the value of the annual product amounts to $200,000. Probably there is no establishment in the city that manufactures finer goods than Mr. Jones. He is a live man and always abreast of the times in style. Mr. Jones shows his good taste in the care of his manufactory and grounds, which are very attractive.

Burt & Packard, on Pond Street. This firm was originally Jones & Packard, and commenced business in 1872. In 1875, Fred Packard was sole proprietor, afterwards Fred Packard & Co. till 1881, when John W. Burt, of New York, was admitted as a partner. The business was started with $5000 capital, and has been remarkably successful, till now the firm has a capital of $160,000, employing 225 men, manufacturing all kinds of fine goods for retail trade. This is one of the representative establishments of the city.

The financial agent of this firm is Hon. Edward Crocker, son of Perez and Free love (Thompson) Crocker. He was born in Brockton, March 16, 1814. In his early youth he attended the common schools of his native town, and at the age of thirteen engaged as a clerk in a store at Boston Highlands, where he remained five years, and then (1833) removing to New Bedford, entered the employ of William H. Crocker, a merchant of that city. He continued with Mr. Crocker until 1837, when he purchased the establishment and conducted the business as sole proprietor until 1842, when, having disposed of his dry-goods store, he commenced furnishing supplies for whaling vessels, there being at that time about four hundred hailing from that famous old whaling town. In 1849, well remembered as the year of the great exodus to the gold fields of California, Mr. Crocker joined the adventurous pioneers, and going to California located in Benicia, where, in company with Samuel C. Gray, he commenced general merchandising, and here remained until 1859. In that year he returned to New Bedford, and in 1864 to his native town, where he has since resided. While in Benicia he was chosen one of the trustees of the first female academy established in the State of California.

Mr. Crocker is held in high esteem by his fellow-citizens, and has been honored with various positions of trust and responsibility. In 1868 he represented his district in the State Senate; has been an assessor of the town three years; was a member of the first City Council, and is now one of the commissioners of the sinking fund. He is a director in the Home National Bank, and has been since its organization, in 1873.

Feb. 3, 1840, while residing in New Bedford, he united in marriage with Caroline H. Blackmer, of that city, and they had one child, Edward Leslie, who died at the age of four years.

In 1873, Mr. Crocker became financial agent of the firm of Burt & Packard, shoe manufacturers, and has continued in that position to the present time, and it is only justice to add that no man in the city of Brockton has done more than Edward Crocker to aid its manufacturing enterprises by counsel and advice; his practical knowledge of business rendering

Preston D. Keith

Edward Crocker

him an important factor in this large and rapidly-increasing manufacturing centre.

The Charles W. Copeland Manufacturing Company is a corporation formed under the laws of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, and has succeeded to the business of the well-known firm of Charles W. Copeland & Co. This company owns a large factory at Campello, five stories high, and well equipped with the latest improved machinery. The capacity is from 80 to 100 cases of boots and shoes every day.

Martin Wild, Jr. Wild & Robinson founded this business in 1869, and one year later it passed into the possession of Mr. Wild, who still carries it on. Value of annual product at beginning, $30,000; present value, $200,000; employs 85 hands.

A. M. Herrod & Co. This business was established by Reynolds & Herrod in 1872. In 1874 the firm changed to Herrod & Grant, which continued until 1879, when the firm became A. M. Herrod & Co. In the beginning employed about 30 persons; now employ 100. In 1872 the value of the annual product amounted to about $80,000; present annual product, $175,000.

L. M. Reynolds & Co. Business was commenced in 1881 on Montello Street, in Charles Howard & Co.'s needle-factory, occupying the two lower floors. In the fall of 1883 built a large factory on a private way off from Court Street, just east of the railroad. Size of factory, one hundred and twenty feet long by thirty wide, three stories. Employ 100 to 150 hands. Annual sales amount to $200,000.

C. F. Porter & Co. This business was established in 1865, under the firm-name of Porter & Packard, and continued until 1873, when it passed into the hands of Mr. Porter, who has since continued it as sole proprietor, retaining, however, the firm-name of C. F. Porter & Co. Value of annual product, $200,000. Employ 125 hands.

The firm of N. R. Packard & Co. was established in 1869. When starting they employed about 40 hands, and now employ, when running full force, about 250. Their product is from 40 to 50 24-pair cases daily. Capt. R. B. Grover became associated with Mr. Packard in 1872, and severed his connection with him in November, 1883, and is now one of the firm of M. A. Packard & Co.

W. S. Green & Co. Business founded by Green & Keith in 1874. In 1880, Mr. Green purchased Mr. Keith's interest, and the firm became Green, Thomas & Green, and one year later W. S. Green & Co., consisting of Mr. Green and Myron F. Thomas. Value of annual product, $300,000. Employ 250 hands.

Flavel B. Keith commenced business in 1873, in a factory on Montello Street, and remained there until the erection of his new factory, about six years ago. In 1873, employed about 50 hands; now, 100. Annual sales at commencement, about $75,000 to $100,000; now, $250,000 to $300,000.

Nahum Johnson & Son. Nahum Johnson commenced the manufacture of shoes about thirty years ago at South Easton. The present firm was established in 1876. Employ 75 hands.

E. H. Reynolds commenced business in 1857, and continued until 1863, when the firm became Reynolds & Parks. In 1866 it changed to Reynolds & Co., which continued about five years, when Mr. Reynolds became sole proprietor, and has continued as such to the present time. Value of annual product at beginning, about $10,000; present value, $75,000. Employs 50 hands.

L. C. Bliss & Co. established their present business Jan. 1, 1881, and their sales the first year amounted to about $100,000. The present annual product is $125,000. Employ 60 hands.

Churchill & Alden, established in 1877, under the firm-name of Whitman, Churchill & Alden, and continued for five years, then changed to present firm. At beginning of business employed about 25 hands; now employ 175, with annual production of $400,000.

Henry M. Kingman commenced business in 1882, on Spring Street. In August, 1884, removed to his new factory near Court Street. This building is one hundred and fifty by thirty-five feet, three stories, with basement. Employs 150 hands. Capacity, 60 cases per day.

Emerson, Weeks & Co. established Dec. 1, 1881, and commenced business in Marshall's factory, on Franklin Street. In 1883 removed to their present factory on North Main Street. In the beginning employed about 50 hands, and value of annual product was $100,000; now employ 125 hands, and annual product amounts to $200,000. Charles O. Emerson, D. L. Weeks.

The firm of Stacy, Adams & Co., was established in 1875 as Stacy, Adams & Jones. In 1878, Mr. Jones was succeeded by Mr. O. B. Quimby, who had been book-keeper for the earlier firm, who associated himself with Messrs. Stacy & Adams, and the firm took its present name. They employ 225 men and women, and manufacture fully 125,000 pairs of shoes annually.

George G. Snow started in business about the year 1874, in the old marble-works building, corner Main and Crescent Streets. Commenced in a small way, with about 15 or 20 hands. He now employs 260 hands, and the value of his annual product amounts to $250,000.

Jay B. Reynolds began business May, 1874, in a room on Pleasant Street; commenced in a small way, employing not over 2 or 3 hands. He now employs, when running full, from 150 to 175 operatives. His annual product amounts to $250,000.

Keith Brothers commenced business in 1874, in a small way, on Chestnut Street, employing at the time 8 or 10 hands. Afterwards removed to the Mitchell factory, on Clifton Avenue, which was burned. They removed to their present location in 1881. This concern employs at the present time about 50 hands. The annual production at commencement of business was $25,000, and at the present time, $75,000.

The business is owned solely by Mr. Edwin Keith, although the concern continues under the name of Keith Brothers.

L. E. Keith & Co. commenced business in 1877, the firm consisting of L. E. Keith and C. V. Keith. They are located at Campello.

H. W. Reynolds & Co., founded in 1865, employ 100 hands. Capacity, 300 pairs per day.

Marcus Leach commenced the shoe business in 1847, on the old Leach homestead, in a small way, and has continued alone to the present time, except one year, 1857, when P. S. and Lucius Leach were associated with him, under the firm-name of M. & L. Leach.

Jonas Reynolds & Co. This business was established by Whitten & Reynolds about 1869. About three years later Mr. Reynolds purchased his partner's interest. The present firm consists of Mr. Reynolds and Charles E. Drake. Employ 25 hands, and turn out 15 24-pair cases per week. Located at Marshal's Corner.

Packard & Grover commenced business April 1, 1884, succeeding M. A. Packard & Co. M. A. Packard & Co. commenced in December, 1879. Previous to that Mr. Packard was in business alone. Mr. Grover was formerly firm of N. R. Packard & Co. They turn out between 40 and 50 24-pair cases per day. Hands employed when running full time, from 150 to 200.

H. F. Marshall commenced business in 1867. He now employs 90 hands, and his annual sales amount to $150,000.

Howard & French. F. O. Howard commenced the shoe manufacture in 1852. In 1876 the present firm was established. They employ about 125 hands, and the annual product amounts to $150,000.

Eaton & Terry. Business established Aug. 1, 1883, with about 20 hands employed; now employ 50; firm, Charles Eaton, L. B. Terry.

H. H. Mitchell commenced business Dec. 1, 1882, and turned out the first year about $71,000 worth of goods; employed 50 hands; now employs 75 hands, and the value of the annual product amounts to $130,000.

I. A. Beals & Co. Established 1882 as Beals & Perkins; name changed to I. A. Beals & Co. July 9, 1883, Mr. Perkins retiring from the business; hands employed when starting, 60; now employ 150; at commencement turned out from 10 to 15 cases per day; now from 25 to 35.

Perkins & Joyce. Over in Factory Village, a local appellation for one section of the city, Messrs. Perkins & Joyce are operating a large factory. Although a young firm, they have been remarkably successful. Beginning in 1878 with 20 hands, they now employ over 125 men and women, and make from 300 to 500 pairs every day. These two young men constitute one of the young and enterprising firms of this city.

Richard M. Fullerton commenced the manufacture of shoes in 1858, being one of the oldest houses in the city. Employs 30 hands, with a daily capacity of 500 pairs.

The firm of Whitman & Keith was established in August, 1883. The present product is 90 cases per week, and the number of hands employed, 50. It is composed of W. E. Whitman and D. N. Keith.

Among other shoe manufacturers are L. C. Ward, James Means & Co., D. C. Bird, Thompson Bros., Sylvanus Keith, L. M. Leach, Hollis Bros., F. E. White, W. L. Douglass, George H. Kingman, I. S. Emerson, Houghton & Coolidge, A. W. Jones, Lilly & Brackett, D. W. Field, D. B. Closson, I. K. Snell.

CHAPTER XVII.

Mills—Manufactures—Bridgewater Manufacturing Company—Shoe-Tool Manufacturers—Tanners—Blacksmiths—Tailors and Clothing—Hatters—Bakers—Saddlers—Wheelwrights—Coopers—Clocks—Watchmakers and Jewelers—Musical Instruments—Dentists—Drugs and Medicines—Furniture Manufacturers—Carpenters—Painters—Masons—Tin-Plate and Sheet-Iron Workers—Blacking and Stain Manufacturing—Miscellaneous Manufacturing—List of Inventions—Jesse Reed.

Mills.—During the first settlement of the North Parish the attention of the settlers was first directed to clearing the lands and preparing the same for agricultural purposes. They very soon, however, erected saw- and grist-mills, many of which are numbered among the things that were.

One of the first mills erected in the North Parish was a saw-mill on the dam south of the residence of the late Azor Packard, said to have been built by Abijah Thayer and others, and was near the main street leading from Campello to West Bridgewater. The remains of the dam are to be seen at the present time. We should judge this mill was of small power, as it is related of a man who was passing the works, while on his way from Bridgewater to Boston, a distance of over twenty miles away, the saw was going up, and when he returned it was just coming down.

Previous to 1800 there was a saw-mill a short distance north of Cole's fulling-mill, late Wheeler's tack-works, which was owned by Zebedee Snell, Parmenas Packard, and others. There was another saw-mill a short distance north of the late John Tilden's residence, in the west part of the town, and east of Hayward Marshall's residence. The mill was owned by John Tilden, Nathaniel Manly, and others, in shares. About the same time Matthew Kingman and others erected a mill where Chandler Sprague's saw-mill now stands, in the Factory Village, or Spragueville, and was known by the name of Kingman's mill, and has been owned by Luke Perkins, Abel and Eliphalet Kingman, Parmenas Brett, John Ritchie, and lately by O. F. Curtis.

Col. Caleb Howard built a mill near his furnace on Pond Street, which has been owned by his heirs ever since, and is now used for sawing box-boards, shingles, etc.

The first grist-mill in the town was erected on the spot now occupied by Ellis Packard & Co. It was built by John Packard, and owned by him for many years, and afterwards changed hands, as follows: Bridgewater Manufacturing Company, Tyler Cobb, Joslyn & Keith, Bela Keith, A. B. Wheeler, Lewis Keith, and Ellis Packard & Co. Deacon Zenas Packard was miller for a long time at this mill, and was well known as the "honest miller." The present steam works were erected by Bela and Lewis Keith a few years since, and are used for planing, box-making, grist-mill, and the manufacture of shoe tools. It is situated quite near the village, on the road leading from thence to Abington, and is a valuable property, being near the railroad. There was another grist-mill, erected by John Tilden, and afterwards rebuilt by John Brett, in the west part of the town, near the turnpike; the mill stood for many years, and was occupied by Lewis A. Kingman as a wheelwright-shop.

The Bridgewater Manufacturing Company owned a grist-mill situated on the north side of Crescent Street, and near Mr. Sprague's office, which they purchased of Messrs. Abel Kingman, Nehemiah Lincoln and others. There is another grist-mill near where Col. Caleb Howard's furnace stood, on Belmont Street, a short distance from the Centre Village, now owned by Thomas J. and Welcome Howard.

In the early settlement of the parish it is said there was a windmill, the only one in town, situated on the hill north of the late Eliphalet Kingman's residence, on the locality known as "Windmill Hill," probably owned by Matthew Kingman & Co., and used as a grist-mill.

Manufactures.—One of the first manufacturing establishments in the North Parish was the forge erected and carried on by Ensign Constant Southworth, which stood on or near where Sprague's mill now stands. Mr. Southworth was a practical workman, having served a faithful apprenticeship at the business, and did a large business at smelting iron ore for the people in that vicinity. There was a large amount of ore dug in the westerly part of the town in the early settlement of the parish, and he had as much as his power could do. A short time since, in removing the old road-bed across Sprague's Pond, quantities of cinder and iron scraps were found that came from these works. These works changed hands several times, among whom we find Alpheus and Parmenas Brett conveyed all right, title, and interest in and to the trip-hammer or water-shop to the Bridgewater Manufacturing Company July 26, 1813.

At one time Messrs. James and Luke Perkins manufactured muskets, small anchors, scythes, shovels, plow-points, etc., at this place. During the year 1813 the above-named manufacturing company purchased all the shops and mills contiguous to the forge for the purpose of erecting a large cotton- and woolen-factory. The following is a copy of the original subscription paper, showing the names of stockholders:

"BRIDGEWATER MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

"BRIDGEWATER, May 13, 1813.

"We, the subscribers, proposing to engage in the manufacture of wool and cotton, do agree to form ourselves into a company, by the name of the Bridgewater Wool and Cotton Manufacturing Company; and for carrying into effect said object we propose as a capital eight thousand dollars, to be divided into forty shares, and we severally pledge ourselves to defray the expense arising on the number of shares annexed to our individual names:

	No. of Shares.		No. of Shares.
Eliphalet Leach.....	1	Bela Hayward.....	} 1
Martin Kingman.....	1	Ellis Holmes.....
Thomas Wales.....	2	Joseph Silvester, Jr.....	1
Alvan Perry.....	1	Daniel Ames.....	1

No. of Shares.	No. of Shares.
Charles Snell .....	1
Nathaniel Suel.....	1
Jonathan Reynolds.....	1
David Reynolds.....	1
Abel Kingman.....	3
Perez Southworth.....	1
Ichahod Howard.....	1
Thomas Thompson .....	1
Isaiah Packard.....	2
Paekard & Ames.....	1
Benjamin Keith.....	1
Perez Crocker.....	2
Seth Snow.....	1
Alpheus Brett.....	1
Parmentas Brett.....	1
Micah Faxon.....	1
Joel Ames.....	1
Daniel Alden.....	1
Paekard & Perkins, Jr.....	1
Davis Paekard.....	1
Tiley Cary.....	1
Hosea Alden.....	1
Micah Shaw.....	2
Howard Paekard.....	1
Samuel Battles.....	2
Paekard & Southworth.....	1
Jeremiah Beals, Jr.....	1
John Ritchie.....	1
Daniel Ford.....	1
Joel Briggs.....	1
Richard Thayer.....	2
John Ritchie.....	2
Andrew Ritchie.....	2"

The following is the act of incorporation as granted by the Legislature of Massachusetts :

"BRIDGEWATER MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

"June 14, 1813. Abel Kingman, Thomas Thompson, Isaiah Paekard, Perez Crocker, Micah Shaw, Ichahod Howard, and Samuel Battles, together with such as may associate with them, were incorporated into a manufacturing company for the purpose of making cotton and woollen cloth and yarn, in the town of Bridgewater, with power to hold Real Estate to amount of fifty thousand, and personal estate not exceeding one hundred thousand, as may be necessary and convenient for the purposes as above named."

This company continued to manufacture until March 10, 1837, when the corporation name was changed to Ritchie Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Ritchie continued to manufacture for several years, and sold the factory, with all their power and privileges, to Chandler Sprague, Esq., who, soon after, converted the building into a manufactory of shoe-lasts and wood-turning establishment.

At the time the forge of Mr. Southworth was in successful operation, there was a furnace erected by a few individuals of the town, which stood on or near the works of the late Col. Caleb Howard, more recently known as Howard's mill, where large quantities of hollow-ware were manufactured. The works were afterwards given up on account of the scarcity of wood. Mr. Bowdoin, of Boston, bought the furnace, which was successively owned by Col. Hobart, of Abington; Mr. Perry, of Easton; George Howard, of Bridgewater; and later by Col. Caleb Howard and Thomas J. & Welcome Howard. The building has since been used by various parties for manufacturing purposes, mostly shoe-tools, and sawing of box-boards. This mill was near the corner of Pond and Belmont Streets.

About the year 1790, Benjamin Silvester built a mill on Salisbury River, near the residence of Galen Paekard, for a fulling-mill. He sold his interest to his brother, Seth Silvester, who was succeeded by John Wales, who established a carding-mill. Mr. Ephraim Cole bought the privilege of Mr. Wales, and continued till 1825, when he sold out to Galen Paekard, who soon commenced manufacturing ship-spikes, nails, and all kinds of ship-work, using a trip-hammer. Mr. Paekard sold out to Jefferson Bisbee, who came from Canton, and began to manufacture hay and manure forks. B. F. Wheeler has recently purchased the works, and manufactured small nails, tacks, shoe-nails, and carpet tacks. Benjamin Franklin Kingman succeeded Mr. Wheeler, and the works have been successfully conducted by William W. Cross for several years.

About the year 1814, James Easton & Sons built a dam, erected a building, and commenced manufacturing spikes, axes, adzes, plane-irons, chisels, bar-iron, axles, etc., a short distance north on the same stream. They continued business for about six years and failed. Caleb and Sylvanus Easton continued the business for ten years longer, under the name of C. & S. Easton, when they retired.

Lower on the stream and just south of Pleasant Street, Sidney Perkins manufactured hay and manure-forks. He was in that business but a few years, and sold out to Hezekiah Simmons, and he was succeeded by Nathaniel B. Harlow in the same business. Several years since there was a mill situated on Trout Brook, a short distance south of Howard Street, that leads to East Randolph. The remains of the dam are in existence at the present day. The flowage of this meadow was for a long time a source of litigation in the county courts.

E. D. & O. B. Reynolds used a portion of this factory for the manufacturing of agricultural implements till they removed to near Court Street, and became interested in the Reynolds Plow Company in 1882.

About the year 1836, William Perry was engaged in the manufacture of brassware and castings; his foundry was situated near where Faxon's awl manufactory was located. Several years since Mr. Chandler R. Humphrey commenced making grave-stones at the shop of John Wales, corner of Main and Belmont Streets, now owned by Rufus P. Kingman. Since that time Sidney S. Green came to town, and was engaged for a time in that business on Centre Street. Soon after George W. Bryant, Esq., became associated with him in business, under the firm-name of Bryant & Green, in Central Block. Mr. Bryant continued alone in the business for a time, on the corner of Main and Crescent Streets.

In the spring of 1845, Messrs. George B. Dunbar and Oakes S. Soule became associated in business, under the firm-name of Dunbar & Soule, for the sale of all kinds of lumber, on the corner of Montello and Court Streets, near the railroad. In 1862 the firm was dissolved, Mr. Dunbar retiring. Since that time Mr. Soule has continued in the business as before.

Barnabas Edson manufactured the best quality of log pumps at his residence, in the eastern part of the town, on Pine Street. He afterwards moved to the Centre Village.

Tanners.—Probably the first tanner in the North Parish (now Brockton) was William Shaw, who had a tannery southwest of the house now occupied by Lawrence Copeland, in the easterly part of the town. His son, Micah, succeeded him in business, which was given up many years ago. He manufactured upper- and sole-leather. Levi Keith carried on the tanning business; also his son, Benjamin, succeeded by Capt. Ziba Keith, east of Main Street in Campello, near where Montello Street now is. Maj. Daniel Cary had a tannery south of Belmont Street, next to the river. Israel Packard was his successor. Nathaniel W. Stoddard was a manufacturer of patent-enameled leather in the north part of the village, on Montello Street.

Blacksmiths.—One of the first things done after the making of iron from the ore in this town, was the making of nails by hand. This branch of manufacture was one of the most prominent of any in the town. It furnished employment for a large number of boys and men. At first, they were forged singly; and as the machines for cutting and heading were introduced, hammered nails went out of use. Nearly every farmer had a nail-shop for his boys to occupy their leisure time, when not engaged upon the farm. Indeed, nail-shops were as common as shoe-shops are at the present day. Upon the introduction of machines for cutting and heading nails,—which were invented by Col. Jesse Reed, a native of the town,—the business of making nails was confined to different manufacturing companies, and were made in large quantities at a much lower price. We now find in the town only here and there a blacksmith-shop, for shoeing cattle and horses, and other job-work. Among the blacksmiths in the parish were Capt. Jesse Perkins, who had a shop near where Col. E. Southworth's store now stands. Asa Howard had a shop nearly opposite Centre Street. Capt. Anthony Dike had a shop near the Alva Noyes place, on the road to Abington. He made the first shovels in the vicinity, at about the time the "Ames" commenced in Easton. Josiah Perkins had a shop on Summer Street, opposite the residence of Nahum Perkins, who became his successor in that business. Alpheus Brett had a shop in Factory Village (now Sprague's). He manufactured bar-iron, plow-points, hames, hoes, etc. Nehemiah Lincoln was also in the same business in that village, manufactured cart and harness trimmings, hames, hoes, scrapers, plow-points, etc. Besides these, the traders of the town bought iron rods, and let them out to be made, by the pound, in the same manner as leather was let out to be made into shoes. Messrs. Ide & Trow commenced business on the spot where Waldo Bradford, who succeeded that firm, carried on business till 1845, when he sold out to Tyler Cobb, who conducted the business ten years. In 1855 he sold out to Mr. Bradford, who has continued for a long time, and associated with him Mr. Allen Crocker, of East Stoughton, who at length became sole proprietor. Sumner A. Hayward, of Kingston, commenced on Main Street several years since. His shop was nearly opposite where the Whitman school-house now stands, south of his dwelling, and on the present road-bed leading to Campello, and in the south part of the village. He sold to Charles W. Strout, of Brookline, who was succeeded by Hiram F. Peck.

There was a blacksmith-shop erected on Montello Street east of the residence of the late Capt. Ziba Keith, conducted by Patrick Donovan, which has since been given up.

Lorenzo Wade had a blacksmith-shop in the "West Shares," or Northwest Bridgewater (now Huntington Heights, Seventh Ward), opposite the residence of the late Isaac Packard, which was afterwards removed to its present location, occupied by Orren Wade, on the turnpike leading to Stoughton. The business is now carried on by Albert R. Wade.

B. C. Snell erected a shop near Sprague's factory, about 1853, and was succeeded by A. D. Tyler, and later by S. W. Haley.

Shoe-Tool Manufacturers.—For a long time North Bridgewater has been celebrated for the excellence of her shoe-tools and awls, lasts, and boot-trees, shoe-knives, spoke-shaves, rolling-machines, etc.

Among the first to introduce this kind of goods in the town were Ephraim Howard & Co., who made it a special branch of business; they occupied the building now used by Messrs. Howard, Clark & Co. as a furniture wareroom, using steam-power.<sup>1</sup> They manufactured hammers, presses, wheels, spoke-shaves, knives, punches, awl-handles, etc.

Charles Howard and Lewis Fisher have since manufactured the same kind of goods under the firm-name of Howard & Fisher. J. B. Mann conducted that kind of business for several years,—since removed to Stoughton. Sidney Perkins has also made shoe-knives, hammers, and patent grindstones, etc. Tyler

<sup>1</sup> Probably this was the first steam-engine used in the town.

Cobb commenced manufacturing shoe-tools in 1845, such as hammers, awls, spoke-shaves, steel compasses, brad-awls, and chopping-knives. George Willis manufactured this kind of goods for a time, until he removed to Worcester.

Since the introduction of American awls in this country there has been a large amount manufactured in this town, by Mr. William Faxon, Charles Lincoln, Josiah S. Lincoln, and Charles B. Lincoln, who is now engaged in that business. Millions of sewing- and pegging-awls are sent to various parts of the country from this town every year.

David Peeler manufactured shoe-tools in Howard's mill in 1836, when removed to Boston. J. Wallace Packard commenced manufacturing stitching- and machine-needles for all kinds of sewing-machines in March, 1858. Snell & Atherton manufacture a variety of shoe-tools, spoke-shaves, etc., in Ellis Packard & Co.'s mill.

William Hall manufactured shoe-pegs at the mill on Howard Street several years since. John W. Kingman has furnished the shoemakers with machines for rolling leather, and shoe-benches, as well as coal-sifters, washing-machines, and patent roofing. William S. Gay and Jabez Gay manufactured bedsteads, chopping-knives, and awl-handles at the old mill known as Packard's grist-mill, or Keith's mill.

In 1836, Chandler Sprague, Esq., commenced making lasts and boot-trees in the mill owned by T. J. & W. Howard, well known as Howard's mill. In 1837 he purchased the right of using Thomas Blanchard's machine for turning irregular forms. He continued in that mill until 1842, doing a small business, which has increased to a large and profitable branch of manufacturing. He purchased the building and power known as the "Old Cotton Factory," owned by Mr. Ritchie, and converted it into a manufactory; and, although he has been highly prospered in his business pursuits, yet he continues to give his personal attention to the detail of his business, and has added several branches to his original calling. E. Sumner Snell manufactured shoe-tools in his factory, also manufactured machinery, under the firm-name of E. S. Snell & Co., Mr. Sprague being the special partner.

Wilbor Webster commenced manufacturing shoe-knives, near Sprague's, in 1863. Mr. S. V. Tuck also manufactured shoe-knives, carving-knives, etc., of a superior quality.

Harrison Smith manufactured bedsteads in the old mill known as Keith's mill. Archibald Thompson made the first spinning-wheel in the country; lived near where John Thompson now resides. His posterity have continued to make wheels since that time. Jonas Reynolds also made spinning-wheels in the "West Shares." Moses Cary made hay-rakes in the northeast part of the town.

Sweetser & Merritt started in business on High Street, under the name of William A. Sweetser, March 1, 1869. Afterwards removed to corner of Centre and Montello Streets, and continued under the present title, Sweetser & Merritt, Aug. 1, 1878. Manufacture shoe machinery and upright drills. Employ 20 men.

Snell & Atherton, manufacturers of shoe-tools, heel-shaves, etc. This branch of industry was founded by Varanus Snell and Lemuel Atherton in 1853. Mr. Atherton died in 1860, and was succeeded by Henry H. Atherton, who continued in the firm about seven years. Since that time Mr. Snell has conducted the business as sole proprietor, retaining, however, the original firm-name. Employ 38 hands.

Before the invention of Blanchard's machine for turning irregular forms, lasts and boot-trees were made by hand. Nathaniel Wales was probably the first person in the town engaged in that business. Robert A. Stoddard, Marcus Shaw, and Chandler Sprague have since been engaged in that line of manufacture. When Chandler Sprague began to manufacture by machinery, there was no use for lasts made by hand. Those made by machinery have become one of the great improvements of the age, and so far surpass those made by hand as to quality that there are no others in the market.

Tailors and Clothing.—It was the custom in the early settlement of the town for ladies to cut and make gentlemen's garments. After a time men cutters went from house to house making clothes enough for the year at one time. The first tailor in Brockton was Nathaniel Snell, who went out to work for twenty-five cents per day and board. John Shankland was the next tailor; then came Michael O'Neil, who opened a tailoring-shop in the "West Shares" (now "Brockton Heights"), and afterwards in the store afterwards occupied by Col. Nathan Jones, in Southworth's building, in the Centre. Elisha B. Bumpas came from Wareham in September, 1838, and opened a clothing-shop in the building then owned by Arza Leonard, opposite Henry Cross' shoe manufactory, on the east side of Main Street, now the site of "Mercantile Block;" he afterwards removed to a room over Robinson's dry-goods store, from this place he removed to Howard, Clark & Co.'s building. Luther W. Durant was a tailor in 1836 two doors south of Patriot office, on the site of the "Mercantile Block." William Ryder came from West Bridgewater and carried on the merchant-tailoring business for several years in his building on Main Street, where Ryder's block now stands. Edward O'Neil was employed as a foreman in Messrs. Brett & Kingman's tailoring department in 1849 in Kingman's brick block. In 1859 he became associated with Mr. James B. Sampson, for the purpose of conducting the merchant-tailoring business in Tyler Cobb's building, on Main Street, under the firm-name of O'Neil & Sampson. Mr. Sampson retired from the firm in 1861 and went into the army. Mr. O'Neil continued in business alone till 1864, when he removed to Alexandria, Va., and afterwards removed to Providence, R. I., where he now resides. Walter Scott came to town from Boston in 1860, was employed by Mr. O'Neil for four years, and afterwards conducted the merchant-tailoring business on his own account. George E. Wilbour came from Wareham in 1859, and was connected with Henry A. Brett in the clothing business. L. W. Wade and Daniel F. Leonard were in town several years since and made garments. Most of the larger dry-goods stores have a journeyman tailor connected with their establishments and manufactured custom goods, therefore it would be impossible to note all the changes that have occurred. Peter F. Hollywood came from Wareham, and was employed in Brett & Kingman's store for several years, and afterwards opened a tailoring establishment on his own account in Ellis J. Morton's building, now occupied by B. R. Clapp, on Main Street, and is now doing business opposite the "Gazette Building." Daniel Logue had a tailor-shop opposite Southworth & Noyes' grocery store, on Main Street, for a short time. In January, 1854, George E. Bryant opened a clothing store in D. F. Studley's building, and in 1855 Henry L. Bryant was associated with him in the business, under the firm-name of G. E. & H. L. Bryant; afterwards occupied extensive rooms on the present site of "Bryant's Block," now used as a post-office, at the corner of Main and Centre Streets. This firm continued in trade for a long time, doing a very successful and profitable business. Since that time Henry A. Brett has opened another clothing store in Bixby's block, where he is doing a large and highly lucrative business.

Messrs. Brett & Kingman, David Cobb, H. W. Robinson, W. P. Howard, and other traders, have usually kept ready-made clothing; thus the public have always had unsurpassed facilities for obtaining the best custom garments and the cheapest.

The Boston Clothing Company is doing business in the "Home Bank Building," Henry A. Brett, manager.

Howard & Caldwell are in the same business in "Kingman's Block."

Henry E. Lincoln & Co., in "Bixby's Block," are doing a good business in the clothing line; McElroy & Cushman, in "City Block," and the "Massasoit Clothing House," Edward S. Lincoln, proprietor, on Main Street.

This business has been among the leading branches of trade in the city, and those engaged in the same have been successful merchants.

Hatters.—The first hatter in the town was Perez Crocker, who conducted business near where David Howard's boot manufactory recently stood, in the north part of the village. He was succeeded by Capt. John Battles, and he by Ellis J. Morton. There is no hat manufactory in the town at the present time; customers are supplied at the various stores in the town, of which there are many, as before seen.

The principal dealers in this line of goods now are Henry E. Lincoln & Co., in "Bixby's Block," Howard & Caldwell, in "Kingman's Block," Tolman Brothers, in "Washburn's Block," and Charles Emory, in the same building.

Bakers.—B. C. Hatch and Cyrus Packard (2d) commenced the baking business about 1830, and continued about three years in the building that had formerly been used as a school-house, on the lot now occupied by the bank building south of the hotel. In 1833, Mr. Packard sold his interest to Mr. Hatch. In 1834, David Wilder and Mr. Hatch were associated together in the business, under the firm-name of Hatch & Wilder. Shortly after that time Mr. J. C. Wilder purchased Mr. Hatch's interest in the business, and the firm was changed to J. C. & D. Wilder. Afterwards J. C. Wilder sold to John W. Hunt, who has continued with Mr. Wilder, under the firm-name of Hunt & Wilder. Their business was very successful, and in 1856 they erected a new and more commodious building, using horse-power for mixing, stamping, and cutting crackers, bread, and small cakes.

A Mr. Buckley conducted the baking business at the old stand afterwards used by Hunt & Wilder, on Crescent Street. Several years since Parmenas & Simeon Brett did a small business for a short time in the Factory Village. F. B. Washburn makes nice cake and fancy pastry at his refectory on Main Street, on the present site of the "Washburn Block;" also confectionery of all kinds and fancy baking.

Mr. Washburn has within a few years erected a large brick building in the rear of his block, where he does the largest wholesale and retail business in baking and confectionery in Plymouth County.

Felix Kaiser does a fancy cake and pastry baking on Pleasant Street, with a store in Tyler Cobb's building.

George E. Bates, bread and cake baker, is doing business on Montello Street, near South Street, Campello.

Saddlers.—In the days when every one traveled on horseback the saddler's business was a prominent trade. After the introduction of wheel carriages harness-making was added to their trade, also trunk-making. Among those who have conducted this trade are Seth Snow, a short distance below the bridge on the road leading to Campello, in the Isaac Keith House; Elbridge H. Packard, in the north part of the village; also Nathaniel H. Cross, in 1836, in the Centre Village. A few years since A. M. Leavitt came from East Bridgewater, and located where George W. Bryant's marble works were, corner of Main and Crescent Streets. Lemuel T. Bird is now doing business on High Street. A Mr. Bartlett opened a harness-shop on School Street about 1864. William H. Flagg, Leighton & Co., and Thomas Finnerty are now in that line of business.

Wheelwrights.—Abel Kingman, Esq., was one of the oldest wheelwrights in the parish. He made ox-wagons, carts, wooden plows, rakes, etc. Zachariah and Zebedee Snell made wooden plows, rakes, and grain-cradles, etc., in the northwest part of the town. Jabez Kingman, son of Abel Kingman, Esq., had a wheelwright-shop on Centre Street, near Shaw's Corner. Ruel Richmond had a large and commodious carriage manufactory on the corner of Main and School Streets, which was the principal shop in town for several years. John C. H. Eaton had a wheelwright-shop on Prospect Hill. Mason & Fletcher manufactured carriages and did job-work on High Street. From 1852 to 1855, Tyler Cobb manufactured carriages, etc., on High Street. Waldo Bradford & Co. also manufactured carriages on High Street. Lyman E. Tribou had a wheelwright-shop in the Factory Village, or "Salisbury Square," opposite A. D. Tyler's blacksmith-shop, and Lewis A. Kingman has a shop on Liberty Street, near Tilden's Corner, otherwise known as "Marshall's Corner," in the west part of the city. I. R. Cozzens, James O. Macomber, and Lurin Snow are now the principal wheelwrights in the city.

Coopers.—Daniel Pettingill made tubs, pails, churns, etc., at the place occupied by the late John W. Snell, on South Street. Lemuel Terrill carried on the coopering trade at the James Willis Place, opposite Arnold Kingman's. Joseph Whiton made nail-casks, tubs, dye-vats, churns, cheese-hoops, etc., in the Factory Village. He removed to Hingham. Lemuel Terrill, Jr., and Jacob Dunbar made rakes, measures, scythe-handles, mop- and broom-handles, etc. Jonas Reynolds made spinning-wheels, wooden plows, rakes, etc., in the "West Shares," now "Brockton Heights."

Clocks.—Previous to 1800, Ezekiel Reed made clocks near where Alpheus Holmes resided, on Belmont Street, in Downingville. Also, several years since, Rodney Brace came from Torrington, Conn., and commenced the manufacture of small wooden clocks at the West Shares, or Northwest Bridgewater, now Brockton Heights, with Isaac Packard. They sent them to all parts of the country in wagons, and were among the first to introduce small clocks.

The late David F. Studley was the principal dealer in these goods for a long time.

Luther Studley, Gurney Brothers, Herman Hewett, and Sumner Cass are the present dealers, in connection with watches and jewelry.

Watch-Makers and Jewelers.—David F. Studley came from Hanover, Mass., in September, 1834, and made watches and jewelry, also repaired all kinds of clocks, in the building now occupied by him. He afterwards erected a new and more commodious building south of Samuel Howard's house, where he became associated with his brother, Luther Studley, in the business; he afterwards sold out his interest to his brother and retired from business. At the time Mr. Studley came to the town there was no establishment of the kind in the vicinity. Since that time there have been other establishments of the same description, among whom is Augustus Mitchell, who left town in 1862 and removed to Provincetown. Herman Hewett came from Bridgewater to the town in the autumn of 1863, and is now in business in Tyler Cobb's building, 421 Main Street. Lysander F. Gurney came from Abington and opened a store in D. F. Studley's building a short time since. Luther Studley was at the old stand of D. F. Studley & Co., on Main Street, and is now located on School Street.

Musical Instruments.—This town has been noted for the excellence of the musical instruments manufactured in the town. Caleb H. Packard was the first person in the town that engaged in the manufacture of musical instruments. He commenced the business of making melodeons in 1839, and was the first to introduce piano-keys to those instruments, which was a great improvement.

A few years since Calvin Hatch, Nelson J. Foss, and Isaac T. Packard were associated together, under the firm-name of Packard, Foss & Co., for the purpose of manufacturing seraphines, melodeons, and reed organs. This firm was in business for several years over the store formerly occupied by B. Swain, and previously occupied by Sidney Packard in Campello, now the provision store of Lucas W. Alden.

Mr. A. B. Marston commenced making musical instruments in July, 1855, in the shop that had formerly been occupied by Caleb H. Packard. Mr. Marston purchased the stock and interest of Mr. Packard, and conducted business at the old stand till the building and contents were destroyed by fire, Sept. 2, 1858. Mr. Marston then erected a new and commodious building on Depot Street, Campello, in January, 1859, where he continued to manufacture the best quality of instruments for several years. He is now manufacturing cabinet organs on Montello, near South Street. Messrs. Isaac T. Packard and Edmund Packard were engaged in the same kind of business for several years, in the rooms over L. D. Hervey's house-furnishing store, in the Centre, opposite Centre Street. Edmund Packard afterwards continued the business alone till May 1, 1862, when he sold to Philip Reynolds, of Stoughton, who was engaged in that line of business for several years.

Dentists.—The first person who did anything in the way of dental operations (except tooth-pulling, which was usually done by the physicians) was Dr. J. L. Lyman, who usually came to town once a year, and did all there was to be done in that line. It soon increased to such an extent as to make it a permanent local business. Dr. Julius Thompson next occupied an office over D. F. Studley's jewelry store. He was succeeded by Dr. George R. Whitney, who came from Provincetown May 1, 1854. The next person in the business was Dr. Loring W. Puffer, who came from Stoughton, and occupied an office in Drayton's building on Main Street. He now has his office on Green near Main Street. The next person engaged in that calling was Dr. Josiah E. Packard, who commenced in August, 1856; he had an office over Benner & Co.'s dry-goods store on Main Street. He is now located in his own block, corner Main and East Elm Streets.

Those engaged in that business at the present time are Dr. Puffer, Packard Brothers, E. J. Thompson, J. J. Vincent, Edward S. Powers, Henry H. Filoor, George D. Barnet, W. J. Currier, Fred. S. Faxon, and J. F. Allen at Campello. Many of the offices in this department are elegant, and the work done in Brockton is first class.

Drugs and Medicines.—J. A. Rainsford was the first person engaged in this business in the town. His room was at the residence of the late Franklin Ames, on Main Street, north of the Porter Church. David F. Studley also kept a good stock of drugs and medicines in connection with his watch and jewelry business till 1845, when he sold his stock of medicines to Tyler Cobb, who continued in that trade till 1884, when he sold his building and business to S. B. & G. E. Curtis. The next person that did anything in that kind of goods was the late Edward Southworth, Jr., in what is now the Gazette Building.

In October, 1852, C. C. Bixby opened an apothecary store, in connection with books, stationery, and fancy goods, at the corner of Main and School Streets. In 1864, Mr. Goldthwait became associated with him as partner in the business, under the firm-name of C. C. Bixby & Co. Besides the above, many of the variety stores in the town keep an assortment of the various patent medicines in use.

This business has grown to an extensive trade, there being now thirteen apothecaries, viz., H. S. Bagnall & Co., Bowen & Packard, Fred. A. Brigham, Brockton Drug Store, Tyler Cobb, M. B. Crowell & Co., William B. Foster, L. S. M. Glidden, William Jones, N. D. Toppan, John J. Whipple & Co., George H. Leach, and Frans L. Braconier, at Campello.

Furniture Manufacturers.—Among the first of those engaged in this branch of business were Oliver Dike, Samuel Dike, Asaph Howard, Moses Cary, Jonathan Cary. Thomas Wales had a furniture store in the north part of the town, and was the principal manufacturer for many years. Samuel Carter was in the business at the West Shares (now Brockton Heights) for a short time. Jonathan Beal kept furniture store in the house afterwards occupied by Lemuel French, near where Ruel Richmond's house formerly stood, at the Centre, now the site of the "Home Bank Building." Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., commenced the manufacture of bureaus, tables, etc., for the wholesale trade about 1825, in the south part of the town, now Campello, which business he continued with success till May 23, 1853, when his entire establishment was destroyed by fire.

Samuel Howard came from Randolph to this town in 1827 and opened a furniture wareroom. In 1829, Mr. Lyman Clark became a partner, under the firm-name of Howard & Clark, and who continued to do a large and profitable business. In 1859, Mr. Howard died. The firm now in the business at the old stand consists of the following persons: Lyman Clark, Eben Rhodes, Rufus C. Kimball, under the name and style of Howard, Clark & Co., who keep a large and varied assortment of all kinds of furniture at retail, and manufacture largely for the wholesale trade. Soranes Dunham came from Fall River in 1846, was employed for a few years at Josiah W. Kingman's manufactory in Campello; he afterwards opened a jobbing-shop in the north part of the village, making and repairing all kinds of furniture. A few years since Frederic Hanson opened a furniture ware-room in the building owned by George W. Bryant, corner of Main and Crescent Streets, which continued but a short time, Mr. Hanson engaging in the marble business near the railroad station. The leading furniture dealers in the city now are Howard, Clark & Co., William H. Tobey, and McCann Brothers.

Carpenters.—Prominent among those of this branch of mechanics are Col. Simeon Cary, Col. Josiah Hayden, Deacon Jonathan Cary, Barnabas Pratt, Thomas Pratt, Job Bryant, Gamaliel Bryant, Samuel Hayden, Phineas Paine, Jeremiah Beals, Isaac Packard, Jonathan Edson, Bela Keith, Marcus Packard, Cary Howard, Oakes S. Soule, George B. Dunbar, Charles S. Johnson, Barnabas Snow, William Gray, John T. Peterson, Otis Cobb, Jason Perkins, Barnabas H. Gray, Vinal Lyon, John F. Beals, Franklin Ward, Samuel McLaughlin, Jabez Field, Joseph Hayward, Charles Cole, George Sawyer, James Sherman, Augustus Jones, Rosseter Jones, Martin L. Reynolds, Thaddeus Gifford, Thaddeus E. Gifford, Alpheus Alden, Daniel H. Cary, Samuel Harris, and Cephas Soule.

Painters.—Until within a few years nearly all of the houses were shingled, and the painting of them required but little skill. It usually consisted of Venetian red or yellow ochre, mixed with linseed oil, put on in the coarsest manner by any person. After the custom of clapboarding and finishing in modern style was introduced, painting became a separate branch of industry. It is now a trade in which people have shown the greatest skill and proficiency, both in house and fancy painting. Among those who have been engaged in that branch of business are William Tileston, William Vose, William Lewis, Jabez Lamson, Philo W. Richmond, Lucius Richmond, James O. Clapp, Samuel A. Sargent, William G. Marston, A. K. Harmon, John M. Sharpe, C. E. Lawrence, John Wales, Jonathan Beal.

Masons.—William French, Joseph Brett, Samuel Battles, David Battles, Nahum Battles, F. B. Washburn, Lewis Washburn, Sidney Washburn, Freeman Washburn, and David Mason are among those who have worked at this branch of business.

Tin-Plate and Sheet-Iron Workers.—Lorenzo D. Hervey removed from West Bridgewater to Campello in April, 1839, and established a tin-ware manufactory in company with David Hervey, in the building north of the residence of Bela Keith, Esq. The firm was dissolved in about one year, and David Hervey sold his interest to Robert Smith, of New Bedford, who continued one year, when Mr. Smith removed to New Bedford. Mr. Hervey removed to the Centre Village, and occupied the building that had previously been used as a shoe manufactory by Bradford Dunbar & Co., opposite William Ryder's residence, north of the Catholic Church. At this time Mr. Smith again became associated with him under the firm-name of Smith & Hervey. This firm continued to do business for fourteen years, since which time Mr. Hervey has continued alone in business, on Main Street, nearly opposite Centre Street. The business has consisted mostly in making tin-ware for the various peddlers who have driven from there to all parts of the country, and dealing in all kinds of kitchen-furnishing goods, stoves, etc.

Soon after the above dissolution of the copartnership of Smith & Hervey, Mr. Smith opened a hardware and furnishing store in Bixby's block, and was succeeded by Liberty D. Packard in the same business.

James D. Baldwin came from Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1862, and opened a store for the manufacture of stoves, tin-ware, and kitchen-furnishing goods, in the building formerly occupied by Ellis J. Morton as a hat manufactory. Mr. Baldwin was succeeded by E. Z. Stevens & Co.

Lorenzo Tuck came to town many years since, and opened a store of the above kind in the building formerly occupied by Messrs. William F. Brett & Co. as a tailor's shop, on the north side of School Street.

Blacking and Stain Manufacture.—Charles L. Hawthaway commenced in the smallest way to manufacture boot- and shoe-blacking, ink, etc., in 1845, which business has increased to such an extent that it has become the leading article in the American market, and also extensively used in other countries. His business had increased to such an extent as to require a partner. Accordingly he formed a partnership with his sons, who now are among the largest manufacturers in the market, and their goods are widely known. The firm is known as C. L. Hawthaway & Sons. They have an office at 233 Congress Street, Boston, with factories at Lynn and South Boston.

George H. Wood & Co. are proprietors of Lincoln Blacking Company, manufacturers of all kinds of leather-dressing, ink, stains, "ladies' blacking," etc., under the management of Charles B. Lincoln. Their factory is in Brockton, with an office at 49 High Street, Boston.

David Whittemore, Elisha Washburn, Thomas W. Pope, and Billings & Bassett have been more or less engaged in this kind of manufacturing.

O. O. Patten & Co. commenced the manufacture of dressing, blacking, and burnishing inks, cements, wax, etc., in 1867. Mr. Patten was formerly a shoe manufacturer and a pioneer in the fine shoe business. The present firm consists of O. O. Patten, W. H. Wade, and E. E. Averill.

T. W. Pope commenced the manufacture of burnishing ink, stains, etc., in 1852, and has continued to the present time. He has a large sale throughout the United States.

Miscellaneous Manufactures.—Brockton Stay Company was organized in 1878, the firm being Gayner & Campbell, with a capital of $1000. In 1881 the firm became Gayner & Walker. Value of annual product, about $50,000. Employ 10 hands.

F. M. Shaw & Son commenced business in 1878 for the manufacture of heels, and extracting oils from scrap-leather. Began in a small way, and when started employed about 12 hands; now employ over 100. In addition to this business they run a naphtha establishment for the purpose of extracting oil and bleaching calf-skinning. Make specialty of renovating carpets and clothing by the naphtha process.

Maloon & Peirce established business about the year 1872 for the purpose of crimping, stamping, scotching, perforating, and pinking. Commenced the manufacture of shoes in June, 1883. When started employed 7 or 8 hands, and now employ 60. Their business is increasing, turning out 20 cases per day. Firm, E. J. Maloon, C. J. Peirce.

Baxendale & Co., box-toe manufacturers. This business was established about 1872, and now manufactures more box-toes for men's boots and shoes than any other firm exclusively engaged in the business in the country. In the months of January and February of this year this firm made 1,100,000 pairs, or 2,200,000 box-toes. Each box was handled in the process of sorting, skiving, pressing, sand-papering, finishing, counting, etc., nine times,—that is, during these two months there were performed in this little factory, outside of the general work of preparing dies, shipping goods, etc., 198,000,000 of distinct manipulations. Employ 20 hands. The building occupied by this firm was formerly the Adelphia Academy, an old landmark of Brockton, corner Centre and Montello Streets.

Charles Howard & Co., needle manufacturers. This establishment was founded in 1857 by Mr. Howard, who continued it as sole proprietor until 1869, when his sons, Charles and H. H. Howard, became associated with him, under the firm-name of Charles Howard & Co. Mr. Howard retired in 1872, and the business has since been conducted by Charles and H. H., retaining, however, the firm-name of Charles Howard & Co. During the first year the production did not exceed 75,000 needles. They now manufacture nearly 10,000,000 per year, employing 125 hands, value of annual product amounting to $100,000.

Reed Brothers, tack manufacturers. This business was established by D. L. & F. S. Reed in 1877, in the old Packard mill. In 1881 the firm built a rolling-mill at Matfield, and in 1884 erected a large factory, one hundred and seventy-five by forty feet, two stories, which is supplied with a one hundred and seventy-five horse-power engine. In 1885 the Matfield rolling-mill, erected in 1881, will be removed to Brockton and enlarged, and the business will be greatly increased. Every branch of the manufacture will be conducted on a large scale, including tacks, spikes, cut nails, and steel shanks for boots and shoes.

W. W. Cross & Co., tack manufacturers. The old factory now occupied by Mr. Cross for the manufacture of tacks and nails, as far as can be learned, has been occupied by various concerns for the past one hundred years. Mr. Cross, when starting in 1869, employed about 10 hands, and now employs 20.

Among other manufactures are Field & Kendrick and D. S. Packard & Co. (see biography of D. S. Packard), manufacturers of counters and stiffenings; O. A. Miller, maker of the Miller treeing-machines; D. Remilliard, dies; M. Linfield & Co., lasts; Tuck Manufacturing Company, shoe-tools; Brockton Machine Company; Charles E. Stone, patent pipings; Robert Clifford & Co., machine awls; J. A. Nelson, paper boxes; Brockton Mallet Company; Herbert & Rapp Company, rubber cloth.

LIST OF PATENTS GRANTED TO BROCKTON PEOPLE, WITH THE DATES OF THE SAME.

Names.	Date.	Description of Patent.
Jesse Reed.....	June 9, 1801	{ Making nails from heated rods.
" " .....	July 15, 1802	{ Rolling iron for nails.
" " .....	Feb. 22, 1807	{ Cutting and heading nails.
" " .....	June 3, 1808	{ Machine for rasping dyewoods.
" " .....	April 15, 1809	{ Wheel for feeding iron plates.
" " .....	Sept. 16, 1810	{ Nail cutting and heading.
" " .....	Nov. 14, 1811	" "
" " .....	Oct. 22, 1814	" "
" " .....	Dec. 16, 1814	{ Manufacturing nails.
" " .....	1, 1816	{ Making tacks.
" " .....	April 21, 1825	{ Slitting-iron and feeding apparatus.
" " .....	Feb. 3, 1826	{ Cleansing Sea Island cotton.
" " .....	Jan. 5, 1831	{ Furnace to generate steam for culinary purposes.
" " .....	Aug. 5, 1831	{ Improved pump.
" " .....	1, 1831	{ Corn-sheller.
James Hall.....	July 27, 1832	{ Machines for pointing pegs.
Jesse Reed.....	Nov. 19, 1833	{ Cast iron pump.
" " .....	July 22, 1833	{ Plug and trammel-gear for ships' use.
John Hall.....	May 6, 1836	{ Machine for making shoes.
Jesse Reed.....	July 24, 1838	{ Improved pump.
Azal H. Buzzel.....	Aug. 25, 1840	{ Improved method of tanning sola-leather.
Jesse Reed.....	April 16, 1841	{ Improved pump.
Joseph J. Couch.....	March 27, 1849	{ Machines for drilling rocks.
Julius Thompson.....	Sept. 7, 1852	{ Blow-pipe for dentists.
Isaac T. Packard.....	Sept. 28, 1852	{ Improved bellows for reed instruments.
Henry Eddy.....	Sept. 19, 1854	{ Improved beehive.
Soraces Dunham.....	Dec. 25, 1855	{ Improved method of hanging saws.

Names.	Date.	Description of Patent.
Isaac A. Dunham.....	June 24, 1865...	Shoemakers' edge-planes.
Martin Snow.....	April 5, 1856...	Spoke-shaves.
Henry Eddy.....	Jan. 6, 1857	{ Improved mode of construct- ing horse-stalls.
Manley Packard.....	April 27, 1857	{ Improved method of adjust- ing and holding knives on spoke-shaves.
Isaac A. Dunham.....	Sept. 22, 1857	Edge-planes for trimming boot and shoe soles.
E. Sumner Snell.....	March 9, 1858	Machine for pricking and cutting heels.
Varanes Snell.....	July 20, 1858	Heel-shaves for boots and shoes.
Daniel G. Greene, as- signor to self and William Nash. }	Aug. 30, 1859...	Improved wagon wrench.
William H. Rounds.....	Feh. 7, 1860	{ Machine for skiving, trim- ming, and chamfering leather.
E. Sumner Snell.....	April 10, 1860	{ Edge-planes for boots and shoes.
Azel Reynolds.....	April 17, 1860	{ Staging supporter for me- chanics.
Caleb H. Packard.....	Feh. 22, 1862...	Improved clothes-wringer.
John W. Kingman.....	—, 1862...	Composition for roofing.
E. W. Bates, assignor to John Ellis. }	March —, 1863...	Improved wood-saw frames.
L. F. Thayer, assignor to William Faxco. }	Feb. 9, 1864...	Improved lusting tack.
T. K. Reed.....	Aug. —, 1864...	Eyeletting machine.
Reed & Packard.....	Aug. 23, 1864...	Catcl button.
Aberdeen Keith.....	Sept. —, 1864	{ Machine for cutting leather into counters.
E. D. & O. B. Reynolds...	Jan. 24, 1865	{ Combined cultivator and har- row.
T. K. Reed.....	March —, 1865...	Improved mouth for hags.
Walker & Tribou.....	April —, 1865	{ Clasp for fastening wheel- rims.

We take great pleasure in recording the above list to show to what extent the people of the town have been an inventive people. By these we can see that there has been a considerable of patience and persevering industry in the town since the year 1800.

JESSE REED.—Among the prominent ones, and deserving special notice, is that of Jesse Reed, who was born in North Bridgewater, Aug. 29, 1778. At the age of nine years he went to Easton to reside with Mr. Dean, with whom he resided three years, during which time his mechanical taste was displayed in the construction of a trip-hammer, put in operation by a wheel and cam-shaft, propelled by water. At the age of twelve he returned to his father, and soon after constructed the main part of a wooden clock. At the age of fifteen he was apprenticed to a joiner in Randolph, Mass., where he served a regular apprenticeship at that business.

During this period he tried his skill on perpetual motion, and the result of his labors is thus given in his own words: "I worked two days and three nights without sleep. The last night, a little before daylight, I got it ready to put into operation; and, to avoid notice, I went into a little pine grove with a friend to put it together and set it in motion. I found that, as soon as it was put together, it would go as well one way as the other, and that it would not go either way without help. I was then fully convinced that it was out of the power of man to put machinery together so as to produce perpetual motion, and that nothing short of the power to create could do it. To this belief I have ever since adhered." His first invention was a rotary pump, which was soon laid aside. His mind was next drawn to improvements in the manufacture of cut nails from heated rods; his next plan was to roll the iron to a thickness, and slit it into pieces of the right size for the body of the nail, and flatten the point; but this plan failed. The next plan was to cut and head nails at one operation. Soon after this he established a machine-shop in a small house, near a waterfall, the upper part of which he used as a residence, the lower portion as a shop. Here he built two or three nail-machines, which caused him pecuniary embarrassment, and he lost all,—his labor and money. From thence he removed to Boston and worked at his trade of joiner, and was employed in constructing the first lock on the canal through Medway. He then removed to Providence, R. I.; from thence he removed to West Bridgewater, and commenced making a machine for making fourpenny nails, to be propelled by foot, making sixty-two nails per minute. He next made machines for fourpenny and sixpenny nails, and set up in Plymouth, Mass.; from thence he removed to Kingston, in 1808. About this time he invented a machine for pulverizing dye-woods, for Messrs. Barrett & Shattuck, silk dyers, of Malden. Since that time he has invented several machines for different purposes, as machines for steering vessels, different kinds of pumps, cotton-gins, treenail-machines, etc.

Mr. Reed was a man of indefatigable industry, and of indomitable perseverance. He made and lost several fortunes in his day. Free and generous in his manners, he was not one who hoarded his gains to increase his own stores, but considered himself as a public servant, and expended on new inventions the fruits of previous toils. In his old age, not a millionaire resting from his labors, he was ever at work, with a mind as active and vigorous as when young, at Marshfield, Mass., where he closed his eventful life.

Among the inventions of Mr. Reed we notice several of the patents are for use in the making of shoes and boots, which have been of great service to the public.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Public Roads—Streets, Avenues, and Places in Brockton—The Old Turnpike.

Public Roads.—The laying out of public roads has some interest to the stranger, serving to locate some of the early residents of the town. The prominent thoroughfare through this town was what was termed the "Old Bay Path," reaching far out towards the shore towns. This was also called, in the records of early date, the "Country Road," and which extended the entire length of the town, and at first was very crooked. Many of the earliest roads were but the foot-paths of Indians, and it was common to build roads in the tracks that were used by them in their travels.

The following are published, hoping they may be of some interest to the people of the town in which they are located :

1673. Thomas Snell was to make and maintain two horse bridges, one at the hither end of Salisbury Plain over the brook, and another over the river.

1741. A road from Ames' land, by Downey's house, and so on, between Abiel Packard's and Daniel Richards' land, to the Country road.

1742, September. Layed out a way from Bay Path or Country road to William Packard's house, past David Packard, Jr.'s, house.

1744, March 30. Road from Daniel Ames', running between Daniel Richards' and Downey's house.

1781, March 10. Road from Abram Packard's, by land of Benjamin Kingman and Lieut. Henry Kingman, to Simeon Packard's.

1785, March 14. From Widow Mary Howard's, at the head of the way, easterly of Mrs. Howard's, continuing the same point to the southwest corner of Abington.

1786, March 28. A road one hundred rods long on westerly side of Bay road, northerly side of Rev. John Porter's land, and adjoining Benjamin Packard's land, to Thomas Macomber's house.

1789, March 24. Road beginning at road leading from Joseph Snell's and Joseph, Jr.'s, at Nathan Keith's line, to the southeast corner of Akerman Pettingill's land, by Ephraim Jackson's and Anna and Keziah Keith's land, to the road leading to Jacob Dunbar's.

1790, March 19. Road beginning at southwest corner of Jacob Rickard's land, and then running west in the two-mile grant to Easton.

1790, March 19. Another road a little south from Mark Ford's, running east to Jonas Packard's house.

1791, March 14. From north boundary of Asa Keith's land, then to the bridge north of Salisbury Plain, called Drift road.

1793, March 11. Road beginning where the road through the West Shares (so called) in the North Precinct strikes the four-mile line, running easterly on said line to road leading by Dr. Philip Bryant's.

1799, May 13. Road beginning at colony line, between Edward Faxon's and John Hunt's, then running south, then east to Abington line.

1801, April 6. Road from ridge near John Bisbee's, on Beaver Brook, to Deacon David Edson's, to where a gate lately stood.

1801, October 12. Road beginning at the intersecting of two roads at westerly end of mill-dam at Howard's saw-mill, so called, east and north over said dam, and called the Mill-Dam road.

1803, April 25. Road beginning at middle of road opposite southwest corner of Nathaniel Snell's wood-land, lying on road leading from Shepard Snell's to Samuel V. Turner's.

1803, April 25. Also a road beginning east side of road leading from Lieut. Samuel Brett's to Deacon Josiah Eames' house, at southeast corner of land of Josiah Packard's heirs, east to Abington line.

1818, October 29. Drift road laid out at Campello, from the burying-ground to Sprague's factory.

1821, October 29. Road from John Smith's, near school-house, to bridge west of Abel Kingman's.

1822, November 4. Road from Galen Packard's to — Street, leading by Ephraim Cole's.

1823, May 12. Road from near Samuel Ford's to Jonas Reynolds'.

1823, September 22. Road leading from near Jacob Packard's to where it intersects the road west of Jacob Fuller's, now known as "Town Farm."

1831, December 19. Road leading from nearly front of William Cary's dwelling-house, running northerly till it intersects the old road leading from William Cary's to Mike's Brook.

1834, November 1. Road from Capt. Asa Jones' to Joseph Brett's, built by John Packard.

1836, July 11. Road leading from Capt. Ziba Keith's to West Bridgewater line and East Bridgewater.

1837, April 4. Road from Caleb Copeland's to Jesse Packard's widened and straightened.

1841. Road from Sidney Howard's to Willard Snell's.

1841, July 21. Road from north corner of Tyler Cobb's to A. K. Borden's.

1842, March 14. Road from Capt. David Ames' to Benjamin Ames'.

1844, April 22. Road from John Ide's house to Warren Goddard's.

1846, March 4. Road south portion of Pond Street and Elm Street.

1846, June 15. Montello Street, from Lincoln to Centre Streets.

1847, March 29. Road from Main Street, in Campello, to Campello depot.

1850, April 19. Eliot Street, from Asa B. Jones' to Montello Street, and across railroad, east.

1851, October 6. Pond Street, from Warren Goddard's to Spring Street.

1852, March 22. Road from corner Rockland Street, near Austin Snow's dwelling-house, running west to Turnpike Street.

1852, February 27. Road from Sidney Packard's house east to Curtis' land.

1853, February 28. Road from hotel to Crescent Street.

1853, March 28. Road from Spring Street north to Apolos Packard's.

1854, February 14. Road from the late Caleb Howard's farm to the turnpike.

1854, February 14. North side of Elm Street widened.

1854, December 7. Road from westerly side of Montello Street, near William Snell's house, to Main Street, in Campello.

1856, June 15. Road from northeast corner of Lyman Clark's land, past railroad depot, to Azel Packard's.<sup>1</sup>

1860, February 15. Grove Street, from Main Street to railroad.

<sup>1</sup> When the commissioners—John B. Turner, of Scituate, Thomas Savery, of Wareham, and Joshua Smith, of Hanson—were called to lap out Centre Street, that leads from Robinson's store to railroad depot, and so on to Abington road, passing the cemetery, they thought it could not be called a public thoroughfare. The road was finally built through the generosity of public-spirited individuals, among whom were Col. Edward Southworth, Franklin Ames, Esq., Charles Packard, and others interested.

1861. Green Street, across Parish Green, from Col. E. Southworth's store, to Pond Street.

Streets, Avenues, and Places in Brockton.—The following list comprises the different streets in the city as named and on record:

Main Street, from Old Colony line, East Stoughton, to West Bridgewater line. Albion Street, from John May's corner to Howard Street.

Howard Street, from Main, near William C. Leonard's, to East Randolph line.

Winter Street, from Howard Street, near Willard Snell's, to the corner near Widow Martin Cary's.

Quincy Street, from Randolph line, at Sassafras Stake, to the corner near Samuel Packard's.

Chestnut Street, from Randolph line, near Daniel Faxon's, to Quincy Street, near Simeon Warren's.

Ashland Street, from Main, near the burying-ground, to Abington line.

Cary Street, from Crescent, near F. Sylvester's, crossing Ashland, by Edward B. Packard's, to Quincy Street.

Ames Avenue, from Main, near David Ames', to Cary Street.

Montello Street, from Ames Avenue, near the burying-ground, to Plain Street.

Court Street, from Main, near David Cobb's store, crossing Montello, Cary, and Quincy Streets, to Abington line.

Centre Street, from Main, near Lyman Clark's, crossing Montello, Cary, and Quincy Streets, to Abington line.

Short Street, from Centre, near Alvah Noyes', to Court Street, near widow Reliance Ames'.

Crescent Street, from Main, near Micah Faxon's, to Centre Street.

School Street, from Main to Crescent.

Pine Street, from Crescent, near Sprague's Factory, to South Abington line.

Plain Street, from Main, near Ziba Keith's, to West Bridgewater line, near Josiah Dunbar's.

Summer Street, from Pine to Plain Street.

East Street, from Summer, near Jesse Packard's (2d), to West Bridgewater line, by Enos Thayer's.

Hammond Street, from Pine to East Street.

South Street, from Main, near Josiah W. Kingman's, to Liberty Street, at Galen and Salmon Manly's.

Belmont Street, from Main, near Rufas P. Kingman's, to Easton line.

Manly Street, from Belmont, near Martin Dunbar's, to Liberty, near Galen Manly's.

Mill Street, from Manly to Belmont Street.

Linwood Street, from Belmont, near Fiske Ames' to West Bridgewater line.

Ash Street, from Belmont, by Percz Crocker's, to South Street.

Grove Street, from Main to Sprague's Factory.

Pond Street, from Belmont, near Josiah Packard's, to the corner near Freeman Dexter's.

Elm Street, from Main, near W. F. Brett's, to Pond Street.

High Street, from Main to Pond Street, near Rev. Warren Goddard's, on "Goddard Heights."

Pleasant Street, from Main, near First Congregational Church, to Easton line.

Spring Street, from Main, near John Battles', to Pleasant Street.

Prospect Street, from Main, near Asa D. Jones', to Pleasant Street, near Cross Tack Factory.

Oak Street, from Main, near William C. Leonard's, to Turnpike Street.

Battles Street, from Main, near Thomas Wales', to Oak Street. Eaton Street, from Prospect to Battles Street, near Nahum Battles'.

Cross Street, from Prospect to Battles Street, near Zibeon Brett's.

Turnpike Street, from Stoughton line to West Bridgewater line.

Summer Street, from Pleasant, near Meritt French's, to Stoughton line.

West Street, from Pleasant, near Eliphalet Thayer's, to Belmont Street.

Rockland Street, from Belmont, near Fiske Ames', crossing Turnpike Street, to Easton line.

Church Street, from Rockland, near Silas Snow's, to Turnpike Street.

Liberty Street, from Turnpike, at Tilden's Corner, to West Bridgewater line.

Stone Hill Street, from Turnpike, near M. L. Reynold's, to Easton line.

Chapel Street, from Main to Montello, near David Howard's. Abbott Place, from Prospect, southerly.

Allen, from Montello to Main, near the bridge.

Almshouse Lane, from Hammond to the almshouse.

Alton, from 399 Main to High.

Ames, from Main, between Battles and Oak, to Cary.

Ames road, from Belmont, near West, to North Easton line.

Appleton, from Wyman to Prospect.

Arch (private way), from Main to Montello.

Arlington, from Belmont, opposite Newton, to West Elm.

Atherton Court, from 320 Main Street.

Auburn, from Main, near Winthrop west, to Pond.

Auburn, from Perkins Avenue, to Otto (Campello).

Bartlett, from 533 Main, near the bridge, to Pond.

Bay, from Crescent, near Snell & Atherton's factory, to Centre.

Beacon, from opposite 14 Spring to Pleasant.

Belair, from Prospect to Pleasant.

Belmont Avenue, from Belmont to West Elm, Winchester Park.

Birch, from Centre to Hill.

Bolton Avenue, from Montello to Allen.

Boyden, from Court, near the Catholic Cemetery, north.

Bradford Place, from Centre, near railroad, north.

Brett, from Belmont to West Elm.

Broad, from Main to Montello, between Ames and Howard.

Brook, from Belmont to beyond West Bartlett.

Brunswick, from Brett to Elm Avenue.

Bryant, from Court to Sylvester (Pleasantville).

Byron Avenue, from Belmont to Elm (Winchester Park).

Calmar, from Main, M. H. Reynolds' factory, west.

Canal, from West Elm to Belmont, next above Pond.

Cedar, from Winter to Sylvan (Huntington Heights).

Charles, from Main, near A. T. Jones' house, to Montello.

Cherry, from Prospect, near Pond, to Ford.

Chester Avenue, from Belmont to West Bartlett.

Chestnut, from North Abington line, near Quincy, to Holbrook line.

Church, from 410 Main, opposite Lyman Block, to railroad depot.

Clark's Court, from 393 Main.

Clifton Avenue, from Main (Campello) to beyond Pond.

Clinton, from Grove, near Old Colony Railroad (Campello), to Montello.

Clinton Avenue, from Belmont, opposite Cottage, to 26 Elm.

Copeland, from Market to West Bridgewater line (Campello).

Coral, from Forest to Summer (Campello).

Cottage, from Belmont, opposite Clinton Avenue, to 5 Bartlett.

- Crescent Place, from Crescent, east of railroad, south.
 Curtis, from Crescent, opposite to Lyman, to Pine.
 Curve, from Grove north.
 Denton, from Tribou south to Calmar (Campello).
 Depot (Campello), from Main, opposite Orthodox Church, to railroad depot.
 Dover, from Main to Pond.
 Dyer, from Winter to William (Huntington Heights).
 East Bridgewater road or Plain Street, from Main (Campello) to East Bridgewater line.
 East Elm, from Main, opposite Elm, to Montello.
 East Union, from Grove to Old Colony Railroad.
 Edson, from Summer, near Copeland school to East.
 Elliot, from Main, near Ford's shoe-factory, to Emmet.
 Elm Avenue, from Belmont to West Elm (Winchester Park).
 Emerson Avenue, from Main, near Howard, to Extension (Montello).
 Emmet, from Elliot to Ashland, near Old Colony Railroad.
 Enterprise, from Broad north, between Main and Montello.
 Essex, from Tremont north.
 Everett, from Centre, near the bridge, to Court.
 Field's Avenue, from Prospect to Pleasant.
 Field Lane, from 299 Main, westerly.
 First, from Myrtle to Menlo (Menlo Park).
 Florence, from Main, opposite Packard, to beyond Pond.
 Ford, from Main, near Ashland, to Pond.
 Forest, from Coral to Auburn (Campello).
 Forest Avenue, from Main beyond Pond, projected to Fair Ground.
 Foster, from Pond, near Hervey, westerly.
 Franklin, from Main, opposite First Congregational Church, to Montello.
 Fremont, from Main, near Huntington, to Montello.
 French's Court, from 315 Main, westerly.
 Fuller, from Belmont to West Bartlett.
 Fulton, from Chestnut north, between Main and Pond.
 Garfield, from Main to Montello (Campello).
 Glenwood, from Pleasant to Highland.
 Glenwood Avenue, from Glenwood, westerly.
 Glenwood Square, from Pleasant to Glenwood.
 Grand, from Main to Montello (Campello).
 Grant, from Cary to Forest Avenue.
 Green, from 371 Main to Pond.
 Green Place, from Clifton Avenue, near Pond, southerly (Campello).
 Hancock, from Main to Montello, north of Grove.
 Hardy Avenue, from South, beyond Pond, southerly (Campello).
 Harvard, from Main, next Winthrop, to beyond Pond.
 Haverhill, from 319 Main to Walnut.
 Hayes Avenue, off Court, east of Old Colony Railroad.
 Hayward, from Railroad Avenue to Bay.
 Henry, from Curtis to Stephenson Avenue.
 Herrod's Avenue, from Main, near A. M. Herrod's shop.
 Hervey, from Main, next Dover, to Pond.
 Highland, from 66 Pond, near High, westerly, toward West Hill, from Massasoit Avenue.
 Howard Place, from West Bartlett, between Newton and Brook.
 Hunt, from Court to Centre.
 Huntington, from Main, beyond Prospect, westerly, to Pond.
 Huntington Heights, on Old Colony Railroad, near Cary Hill.
 Jackson, from Perkins Avenue to Riverview.
 Joslyn Court, from Main to Centre.
 Keith Avenue, from Main, at C. P. Keith's residence, to Pond (Campello).
 Kimball Lane, from Pond to Alton.
 Kingman, from Curtis, north, to Centre.
 Kingman Avenue, from Curtis to Pine, beyond Sylvan.
 L, from High, near Main, to Pond.
 Lake, from Howard to Monument (Huntington Heights).
 Laureston, from Calmar, to below Sheppard (Campello).
 Lawrence, from Main, passing the brick factory, to Grove.
 Leach's Avenue, from Copeland (Campello).
 Leavitt, from Brook, westerly.
 Leyden, from Summer to Riverview (Campello).
 Leyden Park, off East Bridgewater road (Campello).
 Lincoln, from School, near Main, to Bay.
 Linden, from Main, near Spring, to Montello.
 Lyman, from Crescent, junction Curtis, to Pine.
 Lyon Avenue (Campello), from Main, westerly, below Market.
 Main, from East Stoughton Line to West Bridgewater line.
 Maple Avenue, from Main, opposite the Catholic Church, to Crescent.
 Market, from Montello, across Main, to Pond, and to beyond Copeland Extension (Campello).
 Marshall's Corner, junction Belmont, Mill, Turnpike, and Stonehouse Hill road.
 Mason, from Centre, near Crescent, to Court.
 Massasoit Avenue, from Curtis to Centre.
 Menlo, from Pond west (Menlo Park).
 Menlo Park, west of Pond and south of Forest Avenue.
 Merritt's Court, from Pond, near Spring, to Nahant.
 Monument, from Winter to Lake (Huntington Heights).
 Morse, from Rumford Avenue north.
 Mulberry, from Elliot, near Old Colony Railroad, to Ashland.
 Myrtle, from Pond west (Menlo Park).
 Nevin's Avenue, from Main, east between Hancock and Packard.
 Newton, from Belmont, opposite Arlington, south to West Bartlett.
 Nilsson, from Montello, by Swedish Church, to Pond (Campello).
 North Montello, from Ashland, opposite Montello, to Main.
 Oak, from Main, opposite Howard, to turnpike, also to East Stoughton line.
 Otis, from Lawrence, near Grove, to Crescent.
 Otto, from Summer to Plain (Campello).
 Owens Avenue, from Packard to Hancock.
 Packard, from Main, next south of Union, to Montello.
 Park, from Main, below the bridge, westerly, to Pond.
 Payton Place, from Albion, near Howard (Huntington Heights).
 Peckham Avenue, from Court, northerly.
 Perkins, from Lawrence, near the railroad, north to Crescent.
 Perkins Avenue, from Montello (Campello) to Summer.
 Perkin's Place, from Court, east of Old Colony Railroad.
 Pine Avenue, from Clinton, near Old Colony Railroad (Campello), to Salisbury Plain River.
 Pinkham, from Main, nearly opposite Tremont, to Montello (Campello).
 Plain, from Main (Campello) to East Bridgewater line.
 Pleasant Place, from Pleasant, southerly, between Main and Pond.
 Pleasantville, a district lying south of Court, near the Catholic Cemetery, west of Cary, and north of Centre, opposite Union Cemetery.
 Pond, from Clifton, crossing Belmont, to Oak, near Main.
 Prospect Avenue, changed to Warren Avenue.
 Race Course, west of Main, near Campello.
 Railroad, from School to Centre, beyond the railroad.
 Richmond, from Battles, westerly.

Ridgway Lane, from Montello next south of Allen.
 River, from Ashland to Emmet.
 Riverview, from Perkins Avenue to Leyden (Campello).
 Rosseter, from Main to Montello.
 Rumford Avenue, from Kingman to Massasoit Avenue.
 Salisbury Square, junction Crescent and Grove.
 Sanson, from Jackson to Leyden.
 Second, from Myrtle to Menlo Park.
 Shaw's Corner, Quincy, junction Centre.
 Sheppard, from Main (Campello) to South Pond.
 Skinner, from Lawrence, near Grove, to Otis.
 South Centre, from Montello, between Allen and Lawrence, extended.
 Southworth Court, from 475 Main.
 Standish, from Tyler to Cary.
 Standish Avenue, from Kingman to Massasoit Avenue.
 Stoddard Avenue, from 318 Main.
 Hill Road, from Marshall's Corner to Torrey.
 Stephenson Avenue, from Massasoit Avenue to Henry.
 Sylvan, from Lake to Monument (Huntington Heights).
 Sylvester, from Bryant, westerly (Pleasantville).
 Sylvester's Corner, junction Centre, Crescent, and Cary.
 Taber, from Court, beyond the railroad.
 Temple, from Main to Montello (Campello).
 Thatcher, from Pine to Hammond.
 Thayer, from Cary, near Ashland, to Ashland.
 Tipperary, a district lying south of Ashland, east of Old Colony Railroad, and north of Elliot.
 Torrey, from Belmont at fair-grounds.
 Track, from Foster to Florence.
 Tremont, from Main, near Orthodox Church, to Pond (Campello).
 Tribou, from Main, near Swedish Church, to beyond Pond (Campello).
 Turner, from Wyman, northerly.
 Tyler, from Central to Court, beyond the bridge.
 Umeo, from Calmar, south to Lanreston (Campello).
 Union, from Main, next south of Lawrence, to Montello.
 Union Avenue, from Huntington to Battles.
 Wales Avenue (private way), from Main to Belmont, near Catholic Church.
 Wall, from Belmont, beyond Arlington, to West Elm.
 Walnut, from Prospect to beyond Wyman, projected to Spring.
 Walnut Avenue, from Walnut to Pond.
 Ward, from Main, opposite Green, to Montello.
 Warren Avenue, from Pond, opposite Walnut, to Prospect.
 Wayland, from Prospect to Huntington.
 West Ashland, from Main, opposite Ashland, to Pond.
 West Bartlett, from Chester Avenue to Brook.
 West Shares, Turnpike, between Pleasant and Rockland.
 Whitman Place, from Montello, near Crescent, west.
 Whitney, from Rumford Avenue north.
 William, from Centre to Bay.
 William's Place, from Main, near Hervey.
 Winchester Park district, west of Pond, between West Elm and Belmont.
 Winthrop, from Main to beyond Pond.
 Wood Park, near Pine and Summer.
 Wyman, from 299 Main to Pond.

The Old Turnpike.—The road known as the old "Taunton Turnpike" extended from South Boston to Taunton, passing through the towns of Raynham, Easton, West Bridgewater, Brockton, Stoughton, Randolph, and Milton. Its location was like most other roads of that day,—it was laid out in as near a straight line as could conveniently be done, without regard to hills or valleys, believing the shortest way to be the most expeditious.

This road was chartered as a turnpike corporation to Messrs. John Gilmore, Joshua Gilmore, Samuel Bass, and William P. Whiting, and constituted the "Taunton and South Boston Turnpike Corporation" in June, 1806, and was built during 1806 and 1807.

This road ran through the westerly portion of the town, or what is well known as the "West Shares" or Northwest Bridgewater, now "Brockton Heights." At one time there was a large amount of travel upon this route, both by stages and heavy baggage teams.

It is, however, of very little account as a toll-road at present, the counties through which it passes having taken it into their own hands to repair and use for the public good.

"The old Turnpike is a pike no more,
 Wide open stands the gate;
 We have made us a road for our horse to stride,
 Which we ride at a flying rate.

"We have filled the valleys and leveled the hills,
 And tunneled the mountain side;
 And 'round the rough crag's dizzy verge
 Fearlessly now we ride."

CHAPTER XIX.

EARLY HABITS AND CUSTOMS.

Social Life—Parties—Spinning Matches—Raising Flax—Process of Manufacture—Dress of Men and Women—Amusements—Raisings—Style of Architecture—Use of Cranes—Tinder-Boxes—Food of the Early Inhabitants—Drinks—Well-Sweep—Rising and Retiring Early—Attendance on Church Worship.

THE people of Brockton, in its early settlement, were on a footing of remarkable equality. Their social manners and customs were very simple, friendly, and unceremonious. Visiting was common and frequent among neighbors, and without the formalities of invitation. When a company of neighbors were invited, the women went early, taking their knitting and babies with them, and spent the afternoon, and the men went in season to take supper and return in the evening. Many of the social gatherings partook of the useful as well as the agreeable. They joined together to help their neighbors husk their corn or to raise a building, and occasionally some neighboring housewife had a quilting party, in which all the good housewives gave an afternoon to make a covering for a bed. In the social gatherings of the young people, dancing was a favorite amusement, and generally using a fiddle. If that could not be had, they used to dance by whistling and singing the tune. Spinning matches, at one time, were quite common, and the people made their own cloth and yarn, and hence were obliged to raise their flax. Nearly every farmer in town owned and cultivated a patch of ground devoted to that purpose. We here give an account of the method of preparing it for use. The quantity of seed required for an acre varied from one-half to three bushels. The stalk or stem, when grown, was of a pea-green, and from two to three feet in height, bearing a blue blossom, which ripened into a ball that contained the flax-seed. When the flax was ripe, it was pulled carefully by the roots, tied into small handfuls, left to dry on the ground a day or two, then set up in small stocks, and, after becoming well dried, was stacked in a field a fortnight or more. Then the seed were thrashed out, and sometimes dipped in water for a week or more, and evenly and thinly spread out on the grass to be rotted. This being sufficiently done, it was packed away for the winter, and, as soon as the fair days appeared in spring, there was a general turn-out of men for dressing flax, which consisted of separating the fibrous thread from the stalk. This had to be done by several implements, called the brake, the hatchel, the swingling-board and knife. A smart man dresses nearly forty pounds a day. After the process of dressing and twisting it into bunches, it was handed over to the good woman and her daughters to spin, weave, whiten, and convert into thread, cloth, and neat, beautiful garments. We shall describe the process of manufacture, as follows: first, the hatchel was brought and fastened into a chair with a string or stick, and the mother, with her checked apron, and a handkerchief pinned about her neck, and another handkerchief tied about her head to keep off the dust, sat in another chair. Winding one end of the flax tightly around the fingers of the right hand, and holding it, she drew the flax through the hatchel till it was thoroughly combed; then, changing, she combed in a similar manner the other end. Next, it was snarled or wound on the distaff, and spun into thread or yarn upon the foot- or linen-wheel. That drawn out by hatcheling was called tow, which was carded by hand, with hand-cards, and spun upon the large wheel. That was called tow-yarn. From the wheel it went to the reel, and from the reel to the loom, which nearly every family had, and every woman knew how to use, although some families let out their flax to be made into cloth and yarn.

Thus we see our ancestors were independent of foreign looms and spindles for their ordinary dress, and for mere decorations, such as are common at the present day, they had but little regard; and, indeed, a showy costume would have excited contempt rather than emulation. Their attire on the Sabbath, as well as on working-days, was plain. The father's common dress consisted of a woolen coat, a striped woolen frock, tow frock, and woolen, velvet, tow, or leather breeches. These, with long stockings, were fastened at the knee by a buckle; in winter they wore woolen or leather buskins, and thick cowhide shoes, fastened with buckles on the instep. Their best hats were what are now called "cocked-up bats," turned up with three corners, and the more noted men wore wigs.

The ordinary outer dress of the women in summer was tow and linen gowns, checked "tyers," or "aprons," and in winter woolen gowns and aprons, thick woolen stockings, and cowhide shoes. The clothing was all of their own manufacture, and every house might properly be called a "home factory." They not only spun their own flax and wool, but wove their cloth in a hand-loom. They also made garments for fathers, sons, and brothers with their own hands. They disdained no kind of domestic labor; they needed no help. Contentment and happiness reigned in their abodes, and amid all their laborious toil, personal wants were few, and, even with their limited means of supply, few remained unsatisfied. Boys and girls (for such they were till married) were early taught to work, and, as soon as they acquired muscular power, were taught to make the most of life, and apply it to some useful purpose, and none were allowed to waste it in idleness and dissipation. There was no distinction between the laborer and employer, no difference between the kitchen and the parlor; for that was almost unknown, and generally shut up, except on public days, as Thanksgiving days, fasts and the like, most of the year. Balls, concerts, and places of amusement, scenic exhibitions, and the long list of modern devices for killing time were unknown. A sing, a bee, a raising, a husking party, or a domestic circle, a sleigh-ride in the winter, or a cherry-ride in the summer, were sufficient for all the purposes of recreation and social intercourse, and for those that wished for enjoyment of a more questionable character, the means and associates were to be found in other localities. The amusements and recreation of young men were mostly of the athletic kind, as "playing ball," which was always practiced, and is now kept up in spring and fall. Wrestling was very common, especially at raisings and social and public gatherings. When at the raising of buildings the labor was over, and the men stimulated by the treat all had received, they usually commenced raising or lowering one another. This sport commenced by two young persons getting inside of a ring formed by spectators, then older persons joined in the same exercise. Wagers would be laid, and a little more stimulant taken to give elasticity and strength to the parties. In course of time parties would get in earnest, angry words and defiant gestures would be made, and it generally ended in a fight. These wrestling-matches, we are happy to say, are nearly gone by. It may be said here that, at the raising of buildings, it was customary to call the men of the town together, and the owner was expected to furnish the drinks and lunch, and, as soon as the ridgepole was fairly in place, for the master workman to dedicate the whole by dashing a bottle of rum upon the frame, followed by three hearty cheers from the company present.

We will now give the reader some idea of the early customs in regard to living, the dwellings, and other ancient matters. First in order are the

Dwelling-Houses.—The first were built of logs, and called log cabins, erected on land which was usually laid out in lots and ranges. Next, after the introduction of saw-mills, came the frame house of one story in height, and about sixteen by twenty-four or twenty-five feet on the ground, and containing from one to three rooms. The next in order of architecture was a two-story house, with gambrel roof; and some were two-story in front, with a roof slanting back to one story at the back part. The third order of houses was the hip-roof, and was introduced soon after the Revolutionary war, and consisted of a two-story house, with two front-rooms, a door in the middle, with a hall running through the centre, and generally a one-story L, on the backside, for a kitchen,—such as the house of Benjamin Kingman, the late Eliab Whitman, David Cobb, in the village, and Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., at Campello, that was burned in 1853. The windows in the earliest dwellings were either of mica or diamond-shaped glass, set in tin or lead. The chimneys were first built of stone, with mammoth fireplaces, and an oven on one side running back, which, with the chimney, occupied nearly as much room as a modern bedroom. In the chimney, running from end to end, was a lug-pole, usually made of oak, from two to four inches in diameter, on which were hung hooks and trammels of wrought iron, so constructed as to be raised and lowered at pleasure to suit the various sized kettles, which were hung over the fire for culinary uses. In the course of time these lug-poles gave way to the old iron crane, on account of their liability to burn, which was made to swing into the room or to hang over the fire. Cranes were first used in this town about 1750. The fire was made of large logs,—one large one, called a back-log, being placed on the backside of the fireplace, usually from two to four feet in length; two stones were used for andirons, and a large forestick resting on the stones to keep up the fire, besides a backstick or the back-log; then a sufficiency of smaller fire-wood was piled up, a pitch-pine knot being placed under the forestick and lighted, made a rousing fire. At each end of the fireplaces were small benches or stools, on which the children usually sat, warming one side and then the other, till they were thoroughly warmed through, while the old folks were seated in front upon a “settle” enjoying the full blaze. With this they needed no modern gas-light, no oil, nor candles, for in the evening pitch-pine knots were used, which gave a strong and brilliant light. Splinters were used to carry about the house, or into the cellar for cider and apples, instead of lamps and candles. Previous to the introduction of friction matches, which are of a recent date, every family was supposed to have a tinder-box, which consisted of a round tin box about six inches in diameter, two inches deep, with a flat cover of tin, on the outside of which could be inserted a candle. The box contained tinder, made of burnt linen cloth or pieces of punk. By the use of a piece of flint upon the corners of a file or steel a spark would catch in the punk, and then a stick, with brimstone on the end, coming in contact with the spark set the stick on fire, from whence the kindling in the fireplace was lighted. Another method in general practice was to cover “live” coals in the fireplace with ashes, so as to keep the fire alive on the hearth till morning. When this failed the tinder-box was resorted to.

Food.—The morning and evening meal usually consisted of bean or pea porridge, dipped out with a wooden spoon into a wooden bowl, with bread and butter. Coffee and chocolate were added upon extra occasions. Tea was seldom used, especially by the children. The bread consisted of rye and Indian meal; occasionally wheat bread. The dinner consisted of salt beef or pork, with vegetables boiled. Fresh meat was a rarity. Potatoes are an article of comparatively recent culture. For pudding, they had baked or boiled Indian meal. The dishes used in early days were mostly of wood. The plates were called trenchers. These wooden utensils were the first used; they gradually gave way to pewter, and still later to crockery and earthen ware.

Drinks.—Malt beer was a very common drink in the early settlement of the country, which was made from barley, and was raised by nearly every farmer. Next came cider, which soon supplanted beer. This was a universal drink, morning, noon, and night, each family laying in from ten to thirty barrels for a year's stock. So common was the use of cider that it was considered a mark of disrespect not to pass it round when a neighbor or traveler called. Another very common drink was flip, which was made of beer sweetened with sugar, with a "loggerhead," or red-hot iron, thrust into it; a little new rum was then poured in, and nutmeg sprinkled into it. Toddy was another favorite beverage, made of rum and water, well sweetened. A stick, flattened on the end, for crushing the sugar and stirring it up, was called the "toddy-stick." The ring of the tumblers, as it hit the sides in mixing, had its peculiar music, with which nearly every one was familiar.

Skillful men made graceful flourishes in making another excellent drink called "egg-nog," otherwise known as "Tom and Jerry," which was composed of sugar, milk, and spirits, mixed with a beaten egg, stirred in rapidly till the whole was made into froth, and drank hot. There are many now who have not forgotten how it tastes, and relish it quite well.

Having mentioned many of the drinks that were stimulating, we will now describe another kind,—cold water. This is obtained from the earth, and is a natural production. Various means have been in use for obtaining this liquid. The most ancient is the "well-sweep." A well was usually dug at a distance of from ten to fifty or more feet from the house; and but a few feet from the same a post was erected, having a crotch on the top end, in which a long pole was so nearly balanced and swung upon an iron or wooden pin, that when a bucket suspended upon the end of another smaller pole that descended into the water was filled, it could easily be drawn out. There are but few of this kind of apparatus for drawing water now to be found, only here and there a solitary one. Another means of obtaining water is by a windlass erected directly over a well, turned by a crank, the bucket being fastened to the end of a rope that passes over the windlass, and even this has given place to the pump and pipe. Here and there is a natural spring, from which water is conducted by pipes to houses, supplying pure, unadulterated liquid.

The custom of retiring and rising early was universal. The time of retiring was eight to nine o'clock; that of rising, at dawn of day.

The attendance on church worship was also a custom which nearly all practiced. Elderly people that owned horses rode double. The wife was seated behind her husband upon the pillion, with her arm around him. In summer the young men went bare-foot, or with shoes in hand; the young women wore coarse shoes, carrying a better pair in hand, with stockings, to change before entering the meeting-house. Going to meeting on foot was not confined to young people; many women walked three to five miles to attend church. In winter it was customary for the women to carry small foot-stoves, which were usually made of perforated tin, fastened in a wooden frame, about eight or nine inches square, in which were placed hot coals. These stoves were all the warming allowed in church. The usual time for church service was one and a half hours,—from half-past ten to twelve o'clock, or one glass and a half long, as hour-glasses were their time-pieces in the absence of clocks. The intermissions were short, being one hour in winter and one hour and a half in summer. The interval was generally spent in the nearest neighbors' houses, who always had a good blazing fire in winter, and plenty of coals with which to replenish their foot-stoves. This intermission was a grand opportunity for the people of the remote portions of the parish to meet every week and become acquainted, as it promoted social union and good feeling throughout the society. Every new and interesting event was discussed; and while partaking of their lunch they had brought with them, the father would request the boys to bring in and pass round the cider. The afternoon services being over, people might have been seen gathering around the horse-block that stood a short distance south of the church, on the green, which was a large flat-topped stone for the use of women in mounting and alighting from their horses. The means of locomotion in the days of our fathers consisted of an ox-cart, or the back of a horse. A chaise or wagon was a curiosity. A journey of forty or fifty miles was a great undertaking, requiring much preparation; while now many travel by steam hundreds of miles in a day, and think it nothing compared to that in early days.

A journey from Brockton to Boston was the labor of two days with oxen and cart. The same journey is now performed in one day, and nothing thought of its being hard. It is one hour's ride in a steam train, and the trains run in such a manner that a person can leave home after dinner, go to the city, and return in the evening train, and have several hours for business.

CHAPTER XX.

SLAVERY.

It is difficult to fix the number of slaves that have been owned in the North Parish; but, however disagreeable it may seem to many, we have to record the fact that the "peculiar institution" did exist in the town previous to the Revolutionary war. It was not thought improper for the clergy, deacons, or physicians to hold slaves. Col. Simeon Cary had a slave named King Ring, of whom it is said "he whipped the apple-trees to make them grow." He had children,—Patience, Jenny, Mary, and Fanny. Many persons are now living who can remember Patience Ring, who always lived in the family of Col. Cary and his descendants.

Another colored man lived nearly opposite the residence of the late Oliver Dike, who is said to have been a slave by the name of Toby Tarket.

We find in the records of the parish the names of several colored persons, who undoubtedly were servants in families, if not "slaves," as it was quite common for slaves to be known by one name only, like those we find in the list of marriages, as Plato, Pompey, Nero, Tobias, Violet, and the like, and for a surname they usually took the name of their owner.

In 1780 the adoption of the State Constitution forbade traffic or ownership of colored people, and from that time all have been alike free. Those who were slaves generally remained with their former masters as a matter of choice, and many of them had large families.

Among the colored people in the town, we find the names of several persons whose descendants are not in the town, many of them having removed to other localities, as Calvin and Luther Jotham, who removed to Maine, Thomas Mitchell, Amos Cordner, Moses Sash, Cuff Robin, Bennett O. Batton, Henry Traveller, Elias Sewell, Boston Foye, Cæsar Easton, Cuffee Wright, Susannah Huggins, and Oxford, who were married while servants in the family of Daniel Howard, Esq., Segmo Scott, and Primus Freeman.

The number of colored persons in the town at different periods were as follows: in 1820, 23; in 1830, 40; in 1840, 22; in 1850, 30; in 1860, 32.

There is one family of these people who have become quite numerous,—the descendants of James Easton, who came from Middleboro' previous to the incorporation of the town. He had seven children, three of whom settled in this vicinity. Caleb married, and had six children, some of whom are now residents of the town.

The anti-slavery movement in this town did not meet with that favor which it received in many other places. It began by the circulation of tracts upon that subject, and with lectures by various persons, among whom were W. L. Garrison, Parker Pillsbury, S. S. Foster, C. C. Burleigh, and, later, Wendell Phillips and Frederick Douglass. These persons were the champions of the cause, and their efforts have, no doubt, produced some good results.

Political parties have changed from time to time, till, in the election of Governor Andrew and Abraham Lincoln, the town has shown, by their votes, that they were in earnest in the cause of freedom.

Temperance.—Previous to 1800, it was a common custom to use liquors as a beverage; and even till about 1830 it was the practice to have it at public gatherings, weddings, ministerial associations, auctions, raisings, military parades, and such occasions were not complete without their punch.

It was also indispensable that those who acted the part of bearers at funerals should have something to stimulate or keep up their spirits. All the grocery stores in the country kept liquor for sale as much as they did molasses. Upon an examination of some of the old account-books of those that kept groceries, we found about one half the charges were for rum, gin, brandy, etc., which were included in the list of necessities of life.

The first item we find recorded in regard to restricting the open sale of intoxicating liquors, was "to post the names of those who were reputed as 'drunkards,' or 'common tipplers,' in the houses of those that held licenses for retailing liquor," which duty devolved upon the selectmen, as well as to forbid their selling to such persons.

Previous to 1820, licenses were granted by the Court of Sessions in each county to a certain number in each town to sell liquor, subject to the approval of the "Fathers of the Town." After that date, they were granted by the county commissioners.

The first effort we find recorded of an effort to stop the peddling of "ardent spirit" was Oct. 8, 1800, when the parish, at a meeting held on that day, "voted that there be no sellers of liquor and carts on the green, and that the parish committee see that the above order is complied with." This vote was passed for a special occasion,—that of the ordination of Rev. Asa Meech, Oct. 15, 1800.

Again, Sept. 23, 1812, the parish "voted that the parish committee keep the green clear of carts and sellers of lickers," etc.

Feb. 5, 1813, a society was formed in Boston under the name of "Massachusetts Society for the Suppression of Intemperance," the object of which was to discontinue and suppress the too free use of ardent spirits, and its kindred vices, profaneness and gaming, and to promote temperance and general morality. This society labored hard against the tide of public opinion till 1825, when the subject began to be discussed so freely that a still more efficient method was proposed, and new means were taken to spread the fearful effects of intoxication before the people.

A meeting was held by a few individuals during the year, which resulted in the foundation of the American Temperance Society, whose grand principle was abstinence from strong drink, and its object, by light and love, to change the habits of the nation with regard to the use of intoxicating liquors. On the 13th of February, 1826, the society was regularly organized, officers chosen, and a constitution prepared.

This society employed agents to travel through the country, preaching, and delivering temperance lectures, arousing the people to the evil effects of liquor. Among those engaged in that calling were Rev. Nathaniel Hewett, Rev. Joshua Leavitt, and Daniel C. Axtell. These men came to this town and gave lectures to arouse the people of the town to a sense of their responsibility, and which had its effect.

In 1829 we find the following on the records of the town, in answer to a call for a town-meeting, "to see what measures the town will take to prevent the too frequent use of ardent spirit."

March 9, 1829, "voted to raise a committee of twenty persons, to prevent the improper use of ardent spirits." The following persons were chosen as that committee: Joseph Sylvester, Esq., Darius Howard, Isaac Keith, Eliphalet Kingman, Deacon Jacob Fuller, Lieut. Isaac Packard, Deacon Jonathan Perkins, Lieut. Ephraim Cole, Micah Shaw, Nathaniel Ames, Ensign Mark Perkins, Capt. Abel Kingman, Perez Crocker, Jesse Perkins, Esq., Benjamin Ames, Edward Southworth, David Cobb, Caleb Howard, Esq., Silas Packard, Esq., and Joseph Packard.

Again, Monday, April 6, 1829, "voted to direct the selectmen to post up the names of such persons as, in their judgment, drink too much ardent spirit."

Also, made choice of the following persons, to constitute a committee, to give the selectmen information of such persons namely: Edward Southworth, Thomas Wales, Martin Cary, Micah Shaw, Isaac Curtis, Capt. Thomas Thompson, Capt. Ziba Keith, Turner Torrey, Mark Perkins, Lieut. Isaac Packard, and Lieut. Ephraim Cole.

Again, Feb. 26, 1830, an attempt was made to reduce the number of persons licensed to sell liquor. The town "voted to leave the subject of licenses to the selectmen."

In 1840, the "Washingtonian Movement" commenced, which was started in Baltimore by a few individuals. At this time there was a complete overhauling of the temperance question. Speeches were made, picnics were frequent, and every effort made to induce people to join in the enterprise. Societies were formed among the children, "cold water armies" were organized, who held meetings for mutual benefit and social intercourse.

Next came the "Maine Law," that originated in Portland, Me., by Neal Dow. This caused a new movement among the temperance people. Votes were passed at nearly every town-meeting to prosecute and bring to the law those who violated the same, by using or selling liquor.

March 15, 1847, the town "voted that the selectmen be instructed to take effectual measures to suppress the sale of ardent spirits within the town."

March 10, 1848, "voted to choose seven persons to prosecute to conviction, if practicable, those that deal in intoxicating drinks."

April 10, 1848, in town-meeting, Messrs. George W. Bryant, Esq., George B. Dunbar, and Alpheus Holmes were chosen a committee to draft a set of by-laws for the action of that meeting, and who submitted the following report, namely:

"WHEREAS, It appears to the inhabitants, in town-meeting assembled, that, in order to preserve the peace, good order, and internal police of the town, it has become necessary to avail ourselves of the advantage of making Town By-Laws for the suppression of intemperance agreeably to authority vested by the Legislature of Massachusetts;

"Therefore be it enacted by the town of North Bridgewater, in legal meeting assembled:

"SEC. 1. That no person within said town shall presume to be a retailer or seller of Cider, Strong Beer, Ale, Porter, or any other fermented liquors, in less quantities than twenty-eight gallons, and that delivered and carried away all at one time, under pain of forfeiting the sum of Twenty-Five Dollars for each offence.

"SEC. 2. All forfeitures incurred under the foregoing shall be put to such use as the town shall from time to time direct."

March 19, 1849, a committee of seven were chosen to prosecute all violations of the liquor law with unlimited authority.

March 11, 1850, at a meeting held this day it was "voted that any person guilty of the violation of any law regulating the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors shall receive from the treasurer of the town the sum of twenty-five dollars for the expense attending said prosecutions, the same to be paid on application, after having been approved by the selectmen."

During the month of May, 1851, Rev. Henry Morgan came into town, and created no little enthusiasm throughout the town on the subject of temperance. His cause was the theme of conversation in the parlor, workshop, and by the way. Parents, cousins, and friends joined in the work with children and youth. The clergymen, also, rendered valuable aid; so that, when Mr. Morgan left town, it was with a cheerful heart, and a list of seventeen hundred signers to the pledge, which was more names, in proportion to the population, than he had obtained in any other town.

Among those who were especially entitled to credit for being active in the labor of procuring signers to the pledge, were Gardner J. Kingman, Joseph Vincent, Ellis V. Lyon, Frederic Packard, Lucretia A. Drake, Alma F. Leach, Bradford E. Jones, Ellen A. Howard, Martha A. Packard, and Bethia Hayward.

The citizens of the town held a public meeting at Satucket Hall, Sept. 10, 1851. The meeting was called to order by George B. Dunbar, and Dr. Henry Eddy chosen president, and the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the friends of temperance in this town are in favor of enforcing the law for the suppression of the sale and use of intoxicating drinks, now and always, by every means in their power, both legal and moral, and that, too, against the whims and moans of a conscienceless class of persons who are willing for a few dollars to scatter destruction amongst their fellow-citizens."

Jan. 21, 1852, a mammoth petition, containing one hundred and twenty thousand names in favor of the "Maine Law," was presented to the Legislature of Massachusetts. Many friends (one hundred and twenty-six) of the temperance movement repaired to Boston, to join in a procession that was formed at Tremont Temple, to accompany the roll to the State-House.

March 1, 1852, "voted to instruct our town representative to vote for the bill to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks, as originally reported to the Senate by the committee, and that he also be instructed to oppose the sending of the bill to the people for their ratification."

A public temperance meeting was held at the vestry of the Methodist Church, Aug. 9, 1852, Dr. Henry Eddy, president, at which a committee of forty-two were chosen to inform of, and furnish evidence of, violations of the new and stringent law for the suppression of the sale of intoxicating liquors.

March 20, 1854, "voted to exclude alcoholic drinks from the fire department." Also, "voted that any member of the same that shall become intoxicated while on duty at a fire shall be excluded from the department."

SINCLAIR BAND OF HOPE (established in 1858).—This association was under the direction of the superintendent of the Porter Church Sabbath-school, the object of which was to encourage the young to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors, tobacco, and profanity.

NORTH STAR DIVISION, No. 88, SONS OF TEMPERANCE.—This division was instituted Feb. 23, 1859, and was known by the above name. "The design of this association is to shield all classes from the evils of intemperance, afford mutual assistance in case of sickness, and elevate their characters as men." The charter of this association was surrendered Dec. 4, 1863.

FRATERNAL LODGE, No. 24, INDEPENDENT ORDER OF GOOD TEMPLARS.—This organization was instituted Sept. 28, 1860, under the above name, the object of which was similar to the North Star Division.

There was another division of the Sons of Temperance in the town, called the Crystal Fount Division, in 1847, which is not in existence at the present time.

Another organization, known as the Eagle Wing Division, No. 109, was instituted at Campello, Jan. 1, 1861, which lived only a short time.

Aug. 14, 1863, the State of Massachusetts was divided into thirty districts, and in each was formed a District Temperance Union. Such an one was formed, including North Bridgewater East, and West Bridgewater, Lakeville and Carver, and was known as the Old Colony District Temperance Union. George B. Dunbar was vice-president, and Rev. William A. Start secretary and treasurer.

We have thus far seen that the movements of the temperance cause in Brockton are not unlike those in most country towns. There have, at different times, been various temperance organizations, both among the adult population and the children, but the particulars of which are not at hand. It is to be hoped that the efforts to restrain the free use of intoxicating liquors may still continue as in times past, that the baneful effects of intoxication may not increase, but grow beautifully less.

CHAPTER XXI.

PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Philip Bryant—Dr. Peter Bryant—Dr. Luther Cary—Dr. Issachar Snell—Dr. Elisha Tilton—Dr. Ziba Bass—Dr. Nathan Perry—Dr. Jonathan P. Crafts—Dr. Henry F. Borden—Dr. Adolphus K. Borden—Dr. Abel W. Kingman—Dr. James F. Richards—Dr. Edgar E. Dean—Dr. Horatio Bryant—Dr. Thomas Stockbridge—Dr. James Easton—Dr. Nahum Smith—Dr. E. R. Wade—Dr. Henry Eddy—Dr. James L. Hunt—Dr. Silas L. Loomis—Dr. Lafayette Charles Loomis—Present Physicians.

DR. PHILIP BRYANT was born in Middleboro', Mass., in December, 1732. He lived some time with his father in Titicut (Teightaquid), a parish formed of part of Middleboro' and part of South Bridgewater. With his father, he removed to North Bridgewater (now Brockton), concerning which he was wont to say that he remembered the time when a greater part of it was thought quite unfit for the purposes of settlement. He studied medicine with Dr. Abiel Howard, of West Bridgewater, whose daughter he married. He was a man of great bodily activity, a calm and even temper, healthful habits, and kindly manners. He continued to practice medicine with much success to a very old age, which was terminated by his death, which took place February, 1817, in the eighty-fifth year of his age. He was buried in the small graveyard near the westerly portion of the Agricultural Society's grounds.

Dr. Peter Bryant, son of Dr. Philip Bryant, was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Aug. 12, 1767. This man early distinguished himself by his love of study. In his frequent visits to the house of his grandfather, Dr. Abiel Howard, of West Bridgewater, he found, in a library well stocked for that time, the means of gratifying his thirst for knowledge. He studied medicine and surgery, completing his course with Dr. Lewis Leprilete, a French physician of eminent skill and a celebrated surgeon of Norton, Mass. He then removed to Cummington, in the western part of Massachusetts, which was just beginning to fill up rapidly with settlers from the eastern counties of the State. Here he established himself as a physician, and married a daughter of Ebenezer Snell, Esq., also a North Bridgewater family.

For several years he represented the town of Cummington in the Legislature of the State, and in the latter part of his life held a seat in the Senate. While in the Legislature he took a prominent part in bringing forward and passing laws still in force to raise the standard of medical education in the State. In politics he belonged to the Federal party, whose doctrines and measures he supported with zeal. He wrote for the county paper—Hampshire Gazette—certain humorous poems of a satirical cast, the design of which was political. With these he took great pains, pruning and retouching them, and polishing and invigorating the lines. His scholarship, though not extensive, was remarkably exact. He had, subsequently to his settlement in Cummington, made a voyage to the Indian Ocean, and passed six months in the Isle of France, where he acquired the French language, and preserved his familiarity with it for the rest of his life. He was a surgeon of great dexterity, firmness of hand, and precision in his operations; in private life amiable and much beloved. His life was closed in consumption the 19th of March, 1820. William Cullen Bryant, Esq., the well-known American poet, was his son.

Luther Cary was son of Zachariah and Susannah (Bass) Cary, and was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), May 30, 1761; married Nabby, daughter of Benjamin King, of Raynham, Mass.; studied medicine with Dr. James Freeland, of Sutton, Worcester Co., Mass., 1782; appointed justice of the peace June 8, 1800, justice of peace and of quorum Aug. 23, 1804, and justice of the Court of Common Pleas for Oxford County March 30, 1805. He first resided at Sterling, Mass.; removed from there to Williamshurgh, Mass., from which place he removed to Turner, Oxford Co., Me., April 2, 1798. He was an excellent physician, had a very extensive practice, and was very successful; raised up a large and respectable family, the most of whom are now living, one, a clergyman, residing in Iowa.

Issachar Snell was son of Issachar, Esq., and Mary (Keith) Snell; was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass., June, 1775; graduated at Harvard College in 1797; studied medicine and became an eminent physician. He had given especial attention to surgery, and had practiced as a physician previous to his removal to Winthrop, Me. He had performed the operation of lithotomy with great success, and soon gained a large practice in town, especially among those that emigrated from Bridgewater, Mass., of whom there were not a few. His success as a surgeon gave him such celebrity that he was often called to the neighboring towns, many miles away from his home, to perform operations. To the great regret of the people of Winthrop he removed to Augusta, Me., in 1828, where he continued to practice till his death, which took place very suddenly, in 1847, aged seventy-two years and five months. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Dr. Elisha Tilton resided in Brockton a short time only; married Molly, daughter of Capt. Zebedee Snell, Sept. 2, 1792, and had one son, Elisha Snell, born in 1794; married Betsy Chandler, of Easton, 1819.

Ziba Bass, M.D., was son of Edward Bass. He was born in Braintree, May 28, 1774; studied medicine with Dr. Ebenezer Alden, of Randolph, Mass., and commenced practice in North Bridgewater (now Brockton) about 1800 under the most favorable auspices, with the fairest prospects of usefulness to his fellow-men. He was a man of very pleasing address, of an affectionate and amiable disposition, and gave unwearied attention to the welfare of his patients. His assiduity in search of knowledge, and his constant and undeviating fidelity in all the duties of his profession, won the affection and established the confidence of a numerous class of the community in the circle of his acquaintance; but he was suddenly called, soon after commencing in life, from his earthly labors, leaving a weeping multitude to deplore his loss. The following is on his tombstone:

"Erected to the memory of Dr. Ziba Bass, who died September 23, A.D. 1804, in the thirty-first year of his age, giving full proof that usefulness was his grand object in life. He was a pattern of modesty, temperance, fidelity, prudence, economy, and uprightness, and died in hope of eternal rest and glory. Hence the following appropriation: 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.'"

Dr. Nathan Perry. This good man was born in Norton, May 27, 1776; was educated in the common schools of his native town, never having received a college education; pursued the study of medicine under the direction of Dr. Isaac Fowler, of Rehoboth, Mass., and Dr. Ebenezer Alden, Sr., of Randolph, both of whom were physicians of eminence in their day, and accustomed to the instruction of young men. Having completed his pupilage, Dr. Perry commenced practice in Reading, Mass., 1802 or 1803, where he acquired a good reputation and a competent share of employment. On the death of Dr. Ziba Bass, which took place Sept. 3, 1804, at North Bridgewater (now Brockton), on the recommendation of his instructor, and by the solicitations of many respectable citizens of that town, he was induced to change his residence, and take the place of his deceased friend. He was immediately introduced into a wide circle of practice, and during a period of nearly thirty years was the principal physician in the town. At length, in connection with reverses in his worldly circumstances and the loss of most of the members of his family by death, his spirits became depressed and his mind impaired. Subsequently he suffered from paralysis, and never fully recovered the perfect exercise of either his bodily or mental powers; consequently, during the last twenty-five years of his life, he relinquished to a great extent the active duties of his profession. In 1823 he became a fellow of the Massachusetts Medical Society by election, and a retired member in 1830. He was a good physician, a man of sound judgment and sterling integrity, always pursuing the course he judged to be right, whatever might be the consequences to himself. In early life he made a public profession of his faith in Christ, and his character was in perfect harmony with his profession. He died peacefully in a ripe old age, more from the debility incident to decay of his vital powers than from any manifest disease. Such was Dr. Perry, a good man and a worthy citizen. He closed his earthly career Sabbath morning, Aug. 16, 1857, at the advanced age of eighty-one years, leaving behind a memory cherished with affectionate regard by those who have shared his friendships and benefited by his counsels.

The following incident in relation to Dr. Perry is found in Clark's "History of Norton:":

"About the year 1792, Nathan Perry, afterward Dr. Perry, of North Bridgewater, then a youth of some sixteen years of age, was one day passing by Judge Leonard's deer-park, in Norton; he playfully reached his hands through the fence and took hold of one of the old buck's horns, and for some time annoyed him in that way. At length the deer got out of patience, broke away from his hold, and quite unexpectedly leaped over the fence, seven or eight feet high, and made a furious attack upon young Perry, throwing him upon the ground; but, very fortunately, the horns of the enraged deer, instead of striking his body, passed down on each side of it. While in this position Nathan grasped the horns of the huck, and succeeded in preventing him from doing any injury till his brothers, Gardiner and Alvin, with one of Judge Leonard's men, came and rescued him from his perilous situation."

Dr. Jonathan Porter Crafts was son of John and Olive (Porter) Crafts; born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Sept. 9, 1792; graduated at Brown University, Providence, R. I., in 1817; studied medicine, but never practiced his profession; he died in 1822, aged thirty years.

Adolphus Kinsman Borden, M.D., was born in the town of Horton, Nova Scotia, Jan. 26, 1802. He was the oldest son of David and Elizabeth Borden, the former being a direct descendant from the Borden family who came to England from Normandy at the time of the conquest. He received his early education under private tuition, and came to the United States at about the age of nineteen years, where he took up his abode with his uncle, Samuel Borden, of Fairhaven, Mass. He soon afterwards went to East Bridgewater, Mass., where he commenced the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Hector Orr. Later he studied in the office of the late Dr. Jacob Bigelow, of Boston, and after attending two courses of lectures at the Harvard Medical School, received his degree of M.D. from that university August, 1824. He went to the town of Wareham, Mass., where he practiced his profession about one year, and then returned to East Bridgewater, where, on the twenty-second day of December, 1825, he was joined in marriage to Lucy Ann Lazell, daughter of Bartholomew and Betsey Brown, by the Rev. Richard M. Hodges. As a result of this union the following children were born to him: Elizabeth Kinsman (died in infancy), George Kinsman, Edward Adolphus, Mary Mitchell, and Henry Francis, the latter being a practicing physician in the city of Brockton at the present time.

He removed to North Bridgewater (now Brockton), and commenced his career as a physician in that place by settling in that part of the town known as the West Shares (now Brockton Heights). About one year later he removed to the central part of the township. His practice was extensive and successful, and he continued it without rest until within a few months of his death, which took place on Jan. 29, 1875, after severe suffering from a sub-acute abscess of the brain and meningitis. As a physician he was an acute and careful observer, a thorough believer in the methods of study as laid down by Lord Bacon, viz.: "observation and induction." Always cool and cheerful in the sick-room, he was able to study his cases without any preconceived notion as to their nature, but ready to state them as he found their nature and extent to be. As a man, he was one of the kindest of husbands and fathers, sensitive in his nature, strong in his likes and dislikes, and quick to resent anything that tended to place him in the light of any character that was otherwise than honorable.

Abel W. Kingman, M.D., is son of Abel and Lucy (Washburn) Kingman, born in North Bridgewater, April 22, 1806; graduated at Amherst College in 1830; commenced the practice of physician and surgeon at North Bridgewater, where he resided till his death, which took place May 4, 1883. He was appointed postmaster of Brockton during Buchanan's administration.

James F. Richards, M.D., is son of Col. Jason and Sophia (Forsaith) Richards, of Plainfield, Mass.; was born July 16, 1832; taught school in Virginia; studied medicine with Dr. Forsaith, M.D., of South Abington, Mass.; graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1859, and was a resident of Campello, enjoying a lucrative practice. He is now a resident of Andover, Mass.

Edgar Everett Dean, M.D., is a son of Charles

Dean, of Easton, Mass.; born Dec. 17, 1837; came to Brockton in June, 1861, and succeeded Dr. Alexander Hiehorn in the practice of medicine. He received his early education in the district schools of his native town till he was fourteen years of age; student at Bristol Academy from 1853 to 1856; studied medicine with Dr. Luther Clark, of Pinckney Street, Boston; graduated at Medical School, Harvard, March 6, 1861; practiced in Boston for a short time, and from thence to this city, where he enjoys a lucrative and successful practice.

Horatio Bryant, M.D., is son of Micah and Drussilla (Harlow) Bryant; born in Plympton, Mass.; fitted for college with Rev. Elijah Dexter, and at Amherst Academy; entered Amherst College; taught school at Castleton, Vt.; graduated at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y.; taught academy at Plainfield, N. J.; studied medicine at Yale College, where he graduated in 1839; he commenced practice as a physician and surgeon at Blandford, Mass., where he remained several years. He married Lucretia, daughter of Ebenezer Clark, of Conway, Mass., and has one daughter. He removed from Blandford to Campello, Mass., about 1848. He now resides at Independence, Iowa.

Dr. Thomas Stockbridge was born in Scituate, Mass.; came to Brockton about 1837, and practiced as a physician several years, until he removed to New York; he continued his practice in that city till about 1855, when he returned to Brockton, and continued to practice as before till his death, which took place Jan. 14, 1863.

Dr. James Easton was in practice for some time.

Dr. Nahum Smith was a botanic physician in the town for many years, till he removed to Haverhill, Mass.

Dr. E. R. Wade came to Brockton about thirty-five years since, and was a botanic physician.

Henry Eddy, M.D., came to Brockton as a physician from Guilford, Conn. He was formerly an Orthodox clergyman; settled in East Stoughton, Mass.; he died several years since.

Dr. James Lewis Hunt was born in Jay, Essex Co., N. Y., Nov. 27, 1817; educated at Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H., and graduated at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., in 1842; attended medical lectures at Cleveland and Cincinnati, Ohio; graduated at the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati, in 1851; married Miss Maria Baldwin, of Medina, Ohio, Sept. 11, 1850; practiced medicine at Bellevue, Ohio, Plymouth, Mass., and Brockton; removed from the last-named place but a few years since, and now resides at Painesville, Ohio.

Dr. George B. Cogswell had an office in Wheeler's Block in 1859, where he remained but a short time.

Dr. Alexander Hichborn had an office in the village, and practiced as a physician till 1861, when he enlisted as a captain in Company F, Twelfth Regiment, Col. Fletcher Webster; afterwards became surgeon in the army.

Silas L. Loomis, A.M., M.D., was born in North Coventry, Conn., May 22, 1832; son of Silas and Esther (Case) Loomis; educated at the public schools of his native town till fourteen years of age; studied six months at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass., three years at Holliston, Mass.; graduated at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., at the age of sixteen; taught school; elected teacher of Mathematics and Natural Sciences at Holliston Academy in 1839; held that position during preparatory and part of his collegiate studies; in connection with his brother, established the Adelpian Academy in North Bridgewater (now Brockton) in 1844, of which he was associate principal for ten years; was elected member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1853, at the Cleveland meeting; principal of Western Academy, Washington, D. C., 1856; graduated Doctor of Medicine, Georgetown College, 1856; accepted the appointment of chief astronomer of the United States Lake Survey Expedition in 1856; published the "Normal Arithmetic" and "Analytical Arithmetic" in 1859; elected professor of Chemistry, Physiology, and Hygiene of Georgetown College in 1861, and the same year was elected president of the Washington Scientific Association; in 1862 was appointed assistant surgeon U. S. A., and accompanied the Union army of Gen. McClellan from Fortress Monroe to Harrison's Landing, and afterwards stationed at the United States general hospitals; in 1863, elected to the chair of Chemistry and Toxicology, Medical Department, Georgetown College, and has written various articles upon medical and scientific subjects, many of which are highly recommended by the press and distinguished men of all classes.

Lafayette Charles Loomis, A.M., M.D., born in North Coventry, Conn., July 7, 1824; son of Silas and Esther (Case) Loomis; he was educated at the public school till the age of thirteen; studied at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass., and at Holliston, Mass.; graduated at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1844; he commenced teaching in the public schools at the age of fifteen, which he continued to do winters through his academic and collegiate studies; in connection with his brother, established the Adelpian Academy in North Bridgewater (now Brockton) in 1844, of which he was associate principal till 1851; afterwards principal of Irving Institute, Tarrytown, N. Y., in 1852-53; elected professor of Rhetoric and Natural Science in Wesleyan Female College, Wilmington, Del., in 1853; professor of Moral and Mental Philosophy in 1854, which chair he held till his election as president of the college, in 1857. Several articles appeared in the National Magazine during that time. He was elected a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1856. In 1857 elected president of the Delaware State Teachers' Association. In 1858 he published "Mizpah, Prayer and Friendship," a devotional work of great merit; removed to Washington, D. C., and established the Lafayette Institute, a seminary for young ladies; edited "Mrs. Thomas' Travels in Europe, Egypt, and Palestine" in 1860 and in 1861; wrote upon various subjects; graduated Doctor of Medicine and Surgery, Medical Department, Georgetown College, in 1863.

Present Physicians.—Among the present practitioners of medicine of Brockton are the following: Henry F. Borden, George E. Freeman, E. A. Dakin, James C. Swan, A. Elliott Paine, E. A. Chase, S. J. Gruver, J. E. Bacon, Bradford Allen, Benedict Donovan, Chauncy M. Marston, W. P. Chisholm, Daniel A. Dimock, Fred. A. Ripley, E. E. Dean, Henry G. Ford, T. F. Roche, E. H. Sprague, Bartholomew W. Taber, Miss Ellen R. Blackwood, Mrs. J. D. Wheeler (eclectic), Mrs. M. R. Stebbins, Fred. Crockett (magnetic).

Roland Hammond and Jesse H. Averill are located in Campello.

Dr. Henry F. Borden is the son of Dr. A. K. Borden, one of the oldest physicians of the past generation, and was born and educated in his native town, and is a successful member of the profession.

Dr. James C. Swan is the son of Dr. Caleb Swan, of Easton, born of a family eminent for their skill as physicians, and it would be strange indeed if the son should not inherit some of the skill and success for which his father was noted. Although born in Easton and settled in West Bridgewater, yet he has a large and lucrative practice in Brockton, and has become one of the leading physicians in the county.

CHAPTER XXII.

Burying-Grounds—Melrose Cemetery—Hearse—Town Pound
—Lock-Up—Poor—Town House—Telegraph—Telephone—
Stages—Post-Office, Public Blocks, Halls, etc.

Burying-Grounds.—The custom of burying the dead in public places prevailed among the most ancient nations. The Romans observed this custom in the earliest days, and in the more flourishing periods of the republic they burnt their dead, and only buried their ashes in urns. The ancient Germans deposited their dead in groves consecrated by their priests, and with the introduction of the Christian religion consecrated places of burial have been appropriated for that purpose all over the world. Christians of all denominations are beginning to regard the burial-places of their friends with that reverence due to the departed.

Few evidences of a more refined sentiment can be found more marked than the selection of beautiful and choice grounds for the final resting-place of their friends. The once cheerless and gloomy aspect of our old burying-grounds has become attractive by the removal of all noxious weeds, thistles, and briars, and the yards neatly laid out with walks "round about."

In the early settlement of the country burying-lots were selected more with regard to convenience than for looks. Now beautiful spots of ground are selected in retired localities, in some shaded grove, or in some rural locality. Costly monuments are erected without regard to expense. Formerly, after the bodies were buried, the care of the grave ceased. Now neat headstones are erected, and beautiful flowers are kept in bloom over the remains of loved ones.

Probably the first burial-place in Brockton was that situated on the westerly side of the main street, leading from the Centre to Campello, and but a short distance from the residence of the late William Tribou. These grounds are of small size, and contain one tomb, and that of ancient date. In this yard many of the headstones are broken, or rough and irregularly placed, and some covered with moss, rendering the names quite illegible. This yard shows how little regard so many in the community pay to the final resting-place of their friends. It would seem as though the friends and posterity of those buried there would try to improve a spot so exposed as that, on one of the public streets of the town. A few trees set out would change the appearance very much, and a trifling expense in rearranging might make it quite attractive. We hope ere long to see some improvements in that direction.

Another yard was situated nearly opposite the Salisbury House, Campello, which was a very small family yard belonging to a few individuals. The first person buried there was Jonas Keith, the former owner of the land, who died of the smallpox. The occupants or proprietors of this lot have removed the remains of their friends to the new Union Cemetery. There was a family tomb in the yard belonging to the heirs of the late Simeon Keith. This lot was small, and situated quite near many houses, and was in so exposed a condition that it was given up as a burial-place several years since.

There is still another quite large burying-ground at the north end of the Centre, forming the corner of Main and Ashland Streets. This is an old yard, and is well filled with graves. How long this has been used for the purposes of burial we have no means of knowing. It is, however, one of the oldest in the town, and, like the first mentioned, needs care and some expense to make it attractive. There is one tomb in this yard erected by Col. Caleb Howard.

There is also another burial-ground near the residence of the late Ezekiel Merritt. This is probably quite an old spot, and is not much used of late, very few families being interested in the lot. The grandfather of William Cullen Bryant and others of the Bryant family lie buried here.

Following Belmont Street to the west till we come near the mill at Tilden's Corner, on Liberty Street, we find a neat little yard, fenced with a substantial stone wall, with but a few graves in it, and those that are there seem to exhibit some care.

We find another small burying-ground on Pleasant Street, near the residence of Charles T. Reynolds, in which are but a few graves.

There is also a burying-ground in the easterly part of the town, on Pine Street, near the residence of the late Samuel Packard, in very good order.

On Summer Street, near the residence of the late John Thompson, is another small yard, inclosed with a substantial stone fence, in which are several graves of comparatively recent date.

Melrose Cemetery.—Traveling on the road from Brockton to Stoughton, on the Taunton turnpike, we find a moderate-size spot of ground set apart for burial purposes, under the above name. In these grounds is one tomb belonging to the heirs of the late Capt. Lemuel Packard. This yard has the appearance of neatness, and is a very desirable location for a cemetery.

In 1848, Messrs. Chandler Sprague, Esq., and William F. Brett purchased a lot of land containing about fifteen acres, of Azel Packard, extending from Centre Street on the north to Crescent Street on the south, and bordering upon Sprague's Pond on the west, for the purpose of a cemetery. The land was divided into lots, walks, and avenues, and sold to various individuals for burial purposes.

The following persons were organized into a corporation under the name of Union Cemetery, Oak Grove, of North Bridgewater, April 27, 1849, namely: Benjamin Kingman, George B. Dunbar, Abel Kingman, George W. Bryant, David Howard, Chandler Sprague, Francis M. French, Robert Smith, Lorenzo D. Hervey, William P. Howard, Edward Southworth, Jr., Charles S. Johnson, and William F. Brett.

The cemetery was consecrated by appropriate exercises May 21, 1849, at which Rev. Daniel Huntington, of Campello, delivered an able address appropriate to the occasion.

There is also another cemetery on the north side of Court Street, near Perez Southworth's, containing about three acres, which is occupied by the friends of the Catholic persuasion, under care of Rev. T. B. McNulty, called St. Patrick's Cemetery.

Hearse.—In the early history of towns we find it was customary to carry the remains of departed friends to the grave upon a bier made for that purpose. It was usually carried upon the shoulders of men selected for that service, who were called bearers. Upon the introduction of carriages an effort was made to procure a hearse to take the place of the bier.

In a warrant calling a meeting of the North Parish in April, 1818, we find an article "to see if the parish would build, or cause to be built, a hearse or decent carriage to carry the dead to a place of interment, and a building to keep the same in." "Voted not to act upon the article."

Judging by a vote passed in November, 1828, we should suppose that a hearse and house were built by private enterprise. The vote is as follows: "Voted to accept of the hearse and house as presented by the proprietors to the town of North Bridgewater, and that said town will pay the balance due to Captain David Ames for building said house, amounting to fifty-two dollars."

The house stood on the old church green until Aug. 10, 1835, when the parish voted to have it removed on account of building the parsonage house.

Nov. 4, 1850, a committee was chosen to-day to repair the old or build a new hearse. Franklin Ames, Eliphalet Kingman, and Ruel Richmond were the committee. A new hearse was procured during the year, and is the one now owned by the town.

March 18, 1788, at a meeting held this day in the North Parish "to see if the parish will vote to purchis a burying cloath, and choose a man or men to purchis the same," it was "voted that the precinet committee purchis a burying cloath, and they use their Discretion in that affair."

Town Pound.—In the early settlement of the towns throughout the province swine were allowed to run at large, upon their being properly yoked, between April 1st and October 15th, and "ringed in the nose all the rest of the year," under a penalty of sixpence each. Also all sheep running at large, and not under a shepherd, between May 1st and October 31st to a fine of threepence each. The several towns could, by vote of a majority, allow them to run at large, but when they voted not to have them run there was need of a place to put those who should violate the law and break into corn-fields or private inclosures. In 1698 a law was passed requiring towos to make and keep a pound, as follows :

"That there shall be a sufficient pound or pounds made and maintained, from time to time, in every town and precinct within this province, in such part or places thereof as the selectmen shall direct and appoint, at a cost and charge of such town and precinct, for the impounding or restraining of any swine, neat cattle, horses, or sheep as shall be found damage-feasant in any corn-field or other enclosures; or swine, unyoked or unringed, neat cattle, horses, or sheep going upon the common, not allowed to feed there by the major part of the Propriety," etc.

In accordance with the above requirement the town of Bridgewater maintained a town pound from its first settlement, and when it was divided into precincts each precinct was required to erect one within their limits. The North Parish (now Brockton) being a law-loving and law-abiding people, erected one upon or near the meeting-house green, which remained till 1828, when, by a vote of the town of North Bridgewater (now Brockton), it was removed. April 7, 1828, the following record appears on the town books: "Voted to accept the offer of Benjamin Kingman, which is to furnish the town with a pound for forty years, and remove the stone of the pound for his own use as a compensation."

Mr. Kingman furnished the same according to agreement.

When the lands of our fathers were wild and unfenced, the "cattell," "hogs," "sheap," and "hosses" were allowed to run at large in the fields and roads, and then the cattle were usually marked in some way, generally by a slit in one or both of the ears, and the marks were recorded upon the records of the town, and a bell was also attached to their necks. The hogs were either "yoaked" or had "wrings" in their noses to prevent their doing damage, and the sheep wore yokes also; the horses were fettered with a chain passing from one ankle to another, that they might be taken at pleasure.

As the country became settled, people began to fence their lots and farms, and swine were placed in small pens, the sheep placed in folds, and the cattle inclosed in lots used as pasture.

Lock-up.—The next thing in order should be the lock-up. Provision having been made for penning cattle and other animals, there was also a need of some place in which persons committing crimes, and who could not take care of themselves, could be placed for safe-keeping, or be kept until they could have a trial.

The number of such persons was very few previous to about 1852, when the town voted to provide a place for the safe-keeping of criminals. The first place provided was the building that had previously been used as a hearse-house, which was fitted for that purpose, and used till 1857, when the town voted to dispose of the lock-up, and provide a suitable place for the safe-keeping of criminals upon the town farm.

Again, Nov. 30, 1857, the town "voted to choose a committee of three to build a lock-up for the detention of criminals, and that said committee be and are hereby authorized to purchase or lease a lot of land within the limits of the Watch District." George B. Dunbar, Elijah H. Joslyn, and Lyman Clark were the committee, who proceeded to erect the same upon a lot of land purchased of W. Holliston Whitman, a short distance south of Crescent Street. The building is built of brick, with cells fitted with iron bedsteads, bars, and bolts, in a durable form. The building was inclosed by a board fence several feet high. There is now a regularly organized police established in the city, and a lock-up was made connected with the police-station.

Poor.—Until within a few years it was the custom of the different towns of Massachusetts to "vendue the poor;" that is, to sell the support of the poor to the one who would do it the cheapest. The last vote we find on record in relation to selling the poor in the town of Brockton was April 1, 1822, as follows: "Voted that all paupers who cannot by themselves or friends procure a home, to be put out at public auction or private sale, for one year from the 15th inst., the remainder to be provided for by the selectmen."

In 1830 the propriety of building a house for the use of the town, and to provide a place for the poor, was brought to the attention of the citizens in town-meeting, and a committee appointed to examine and report concerning the expediency of purchasing a poor-house. Mark Perkins, Caleb Howard, Esq., Eliphalet Kingman, Jonathan Cary, and Bela Keith, Esq., were the committee, who reported that the subject of purchasing a town farm was worthy the attention of the town. Accordingly, April 4, 1831, Benjamin Kingman, Micah Packard, and Abel Kingman were appointed a committee with full power to purchase a house and land for the use of the town's poor. April 25, 1831, a farm was purchased of Benjamin King, Esq., in the easterly part of the town, consisting of ninety-four and three-quarters acres of land and buildings thereon, formerly known as the Deacon Jacob Fuller farm, for the sum of two thousand six hundred and twenty-five dollars. A superintendent was appointed yearly to manage the farm and take proper care of the poor. Deacon Jacob Fuller was the first person placed in charge. Theron Ames, Josiah Dunbar, Weston Simmons, Colwell Jones, and the present superintendent, Howard, have had the management since the first. A board of faithful and trusty overseers of the poor are annually elected by the town, who have the general oversight of the poor and provide for their wants, and we are satisfied that the poor of the town are well cared for.

This farm, with additions made by purchase at different times, is the present City Farm, consisting now of one hundred and twenty-five acres. The old buildings having been out of repair and unfit for almshouse purposes for some time, the matter of better accommodation has been a subject of discussion for some years.

By vote of the City Council, in 1883, the joint standing Committee on Public Property and the Overseers of the Poor, acting jointly, were authorized to contract for a house and barn, and cause the same to be erected on such a location on the City Farm as they may select. Acting under this vote, a location was selected on the west side of Thatcher Street, and June 9th the committee advertised for bids for the erection of the buildings. Nine proposals were received. They were opened June 23d. John F. Beals being the lowest bidder, the contract was awarded to him July 6th, he contracting to build and complete (excepting heating) the buildings for eleven thousand three hundred dollars. The contract for heating was later awarded to R. G. Shepard, for the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars.

The building contract called for a house consisting of a main or central portion three stories high, thirty feet long, thirty-nine feet wide, with two wings, each thirty-six feet long and thirty-one feet wide, two and a half stories high; also a barn, seventy feet long and forty feet wide. The buildings have been completed to our satisfaction. The inmates were transferred from the old house Dec. 31, 1883. The house is admirably adapted for the business, being heated throughout by steam, ample hospital accommodations in the upper story of the main house (a necessity which has long existed), pleasant, well-ventilated sleeping-rooms, complete arrangements for cooking, hot and cold water in wash-room,—in fact, every arrangement for the proper care and comfort of forty inmates.

The barn is well fitted, having accommodations for eighteen cattle and several horses, and ample conveniences for their care. The city is to be congratulated upon the completion of these buildings, and that the poor can be well provided for.

Warning out of Town.—The people in ancient days resorted to various means to prevent immigrants coming into town from becoming chargeable upon the public. A custom much in use in the town of Bridgewater was to notify or warn the parties moving into the town "to depart hence." We insert a copy of one handed to us as a specimen of early notions:

"Plymouth vs.

"To JOHN TILDEN, JOINER:

"By virtue of a warrant from the selectmen of the town of Bridgewater, you are requested to depart the limits of said town within fifteen days, you not having obtained leave of inhabiting the same.

"JONATHAN KEITH, Constable.

"November 25, 1789."

Town-House.—The first town-meeting in the town of North Bridgewater (now Brockton) was held in the meeting-house of the First Congregational Church, in 1821. Since that time the meeting has been holden in the various public halls in the village. Several attempts have been made to see if the town would build a house suitable for holding town-meetings. The first move in that direction was in 1843, as appears by vote of the town Dec. 16, 1843. At a meeting held on that day to see if the town would purchase the Second Congregational meeting-house, it was "voted to choose a committee of three to consider of the matter, and report at a future meeting." Benjamin Kingman, Jesse Perkins, and Eliphalet Kingman were the committee. In 1847 the subject was brought before the town at a meeting held in May, at which it was "voted to postpone building a town-house at present." Again, "March 11, 1850, Bela Keith, Esq., Jesse Perkins, Esq., Col. Edward Southworth, Caleb Copeland, Marcus Packard, Isaac Hartwell, and Capt. Henry French were chosen a committee to procure a plan of a building, and the probable cost of the same, also the subject of purchasing a lot of land, and report at a future meeting." A report was made, and, Sept. 6, 1850, the committee were instructed to purchase a lot of land of William P. Howard, which was done. The lot situated opposite H. W. Robinson's store, corner of Main and Centre Streets, the lot on which Bryant's Block stands, and Brockton's elegant post-office, was purchased of Mr. Howard for the sum of fifteen hundred dollars. April 30, 1855, the town voted to authorize the selectmen to sell the town-house lot at public auction within thirty days. The lot was sold to Mr. David F. Studley and others for three thousand and fifty dollars.

The above is the last we have heard in reference to erecting a town-house.

Telegraph.—The first electric current that passed through the town of North Bridgewater (now Brockton) on wires was in 1856. The line was run from Boston to Myrick's Station, on the line of the Fall River Railroad. The proprietors were Messrs. Brewer and Baldwin. At first the nearest office to this town was at Bridgewater. A short time had elapsed after the completion of the wires when an effort was made to have an office established nearer to this town, and through the efforts of Franklin Ames, Esq., one was opened to the public May 6, 1856. The following is the first message to the citizens of the town, and was from the editor of the Barnstable Patriot, to the editor of the North Bridgewater Gazette:

"To GEORGE PHINNEY:

"We congratulate you, and others of North Bridgewater, on the opening of a telegraph-office at your place. I am happy to shake hands with you this P.M. God bless and prosper you.

"S. B. PHINNEY."

Reply.

"To MAJOR PHINNEY:

"We receive your congratulations upon the occasion of opening a telegraph-office here with heartfelt pleasure. May the connection this day effected between North Bridgewater and Cape Cod never be severed. With the hope that the Union may be preserved,

"I remain yours truly,

"GEORGE PHINNEY."

Telephone.—The Brockton Telephone Company's business was started in April, 1878, by building a line from Brockton to Campello, one and one-half miles distant.

In 1880 a company was organized for the purpose of establishing a line to Boston and local extensions, with a capital of ten thousand dollars, which was afterwards increased to seventeen thousand dollars. Col. John J. Whipple was president; George E. Bryant, Henry E. Lincoln, Augustus T. Jones, and D. T. Burrell, of Brockton, with C. D. Nash, of South Abington, and C. A. Stearns, of Boston, directors; Charles W. Sumner, clerk and treasurer.

The first communication from Brockton to Boston was by A. E. Sproul, Esq., the correspondent of the Boston Herald, May 27, 1881, the evening on which the line was completed. Thus the city of Brockton is in communication with the outer world by telephone to any point within speaking distance.

Stages.—Who is there that does not recollect how the old mail-coach sounded as it rattled over the stone roads from Brockton to Boston, first tri-weekly, then daily, carrying the mails? How the people gathered around the driver to catch the latest news on the route, for a stage-driver was the greatest man of the age. Hear the crack of his whip as he reins the horses up to every person's door, and piles on the trunks and bandboxes. Now the iron horse takes the place of horse-flesh, and steam the place of oats and hay.

The first public stage that ran through or from Brockton was about 1820; it was a joint-stock company, of whom Silas Packard, Esq., of Brockton, Seth Allen, of Halifax, Capt. Nathaniel H. Cross, of East Bridgewater, and Capt. Asa Pratt, of South Bridgewater, were part owners. It consisted of a two-horse carriage that was formerly used by Governor Phillips as a private carriage. Col. Nathan Jones, of Brockton, was a driver for one year. It started from Bridgewater three times a week. After running about two years, the company sold their interest to Messrs. A. M. Withington and Burr, who afterwards sold to Nathaniel Blake and Wheeler. Soon after Mr. Wheeler sold his interest to Jacob Churchill, and he to Newton Hodges, who continued to conduct the line with Mr. Blake. At the time Mr. Withington bought of the company, Col. Jones left the line and started a two-horse coach from Brockton, running from that place on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays, in and out from Boston the same day. While Col. Jones was running his coach, Mr. John Madden, of Randolph, put on a coach to run from that place to Boston. Mr. Madden and Col. Jones soon put their teams together and ran from Brockton for two years. At the end of that time they ran their coach to Bridgewater. Messrs. Hodge and Blake continued to own and run the line, carrying the mails from Bridgewater through Brockton, they running one day, and Messrs. Jones and Madden running opposite days. Mr. Blake then sold his interest to Col. Jones, and he to John Long, who continued till the opening of the railroad.

An opposition coach was started in 1837 or 1838 by Jabez Gould, and ran to Boston daily from Brockton Village till the "Stoughton Branch Railroad" was built, when he ran in connection with the cars; he ceased to run when the "Fall River Railroad" began to run their cars, in 1846. Another line of coaches passed through the "West Shares" in the west part of the town, on the old turnpike from Taunton to Boston. The line was owned for many years by Jesse Smith, of Taunton.

S. D. Butler commenced running a line of coaches in connection with the Stoughton cars, from the Salisbury House, Campello, Oct. 2, 1854, but continued for a short time only. May 13, 1857, A. S. Porter commenced a line to Boston three times a week, and in the middle of next month commenced to run a daily line. I. Tisdale, of Stoughton, and John O. Hudson, of East Bridgewater, ran a coach from Stoughton to Plymouth for a year or more about twelve years since. There was also a line of stages connecting at Bridgewater with a coach for New Bedford, owned by Pelatiah Gould, that passed through the town to Boston tri-weekly about the same time.

Post-Offices.—The first post-office established in Brockton was in 1816. The following are the names of the postmasters from 1816 to the present time :

Charles Packard.....	Nov. 2, 1816.
Nathaniel Cross.....	July 1, 1829.
Edward Southworth, Jr.....	Sept. 16, 1836.
Aaron B. Drake.....	July 20, 1853.
Abel W. Kingman.....	Dec. 11, 1855.
Henry French.....	1861.
Augustus T. Jones.....
George H. Fullerton.....

Joseph M. Hollywood is the present postmaster. A post-office was established in the west part of the town in 1828, called Northwest Bridgewater, now "Brockton Heights," with the following appointments :

Heman Packard.....	Nov. 13, 1828.
Nathaniel H. Cross.....	July 1, 1829.
George Clark.....	Feb. 11, 1831.
Levi French.....	Sept. 5, 1840.

Previous to the establishment of a post-office in the North Parish and the running of a mail-coach, the letters and what few newspapers people had in those days were brought to town by post-riders,<sup>1</sup> market-wagons, and other private conveyances from Boston. At the time of the incorporation of the town of North Bridgewater (now Brockton), in 1821, a regular established line of mail communication having been provided by the government, there was one mail per day from the city, and since the mail has been carried by railroad there are six mails each-way daily.

Previous to 1850 the people of Campello had for some time hired the mail for that village brought down to them by a special messenger, for distribution at the store; but finding the business increasing to such an extensive amount daily, a few public-spirited individuals of that place petitioned for the establishment of a separate post-office. This was granted to them Feb. 12, 1850, at which time Mr. Nelson J. Foss was appointed postmaster.

<sup>1</sup> Maj. Hartwell, of West Bridgewater, Mass., was post-rider.

Albert Keith has held that office for several years, and is the present incumbent. The post-office at Brockton is one of the best-arranged offices in the country, having the most approved boxes, and in a fine brick block owned by George E. Bryant, Esq.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS, BLOCKS, HALLS, ETC.

Academy of Music, Main, corner Main and Creseent Streets.
 Almshouse, Almshouse Lane, west side of Thatcher Street.
 Atherton block, Main, opposite Haverhill Street.
 Avon block, Linden Street.
 Bixby building, corner Main and School Streets.
 Bryant building, corner Main and Centre Streets.
 Central block, corner Main and Centre Streets.
 City block, corner Main and Ward Streets.
 Clark's block, corner Main and Centre Streets.
 Concert Hall, corner Main and High Streets.
 Court-house, corner Main and East Elm Streets.
 Cunningham Hall, on East Elm Street.
 Forester's Hall, on East Elm Street.
 Gazette building, opposite First Church.
 Gardner's block, corner Montello and Centre Streets.
 Goodall's block, Main Street (Campello).
 Grand Army Republic Hall, Ryder's block, Main, opposite Belmont Street.
 Hibernian Hall, East Elm, near Main Street.
 Home Bank building, corner Main and Church Streets.
 Howard block, Main, opposite Church Street.
 Howard, Clark & Co., nearly opposite Church Street.
 Joslyn block, Centre Street, near Main Street.
 Keith's block, Main, corner Depot Street (Campello).
 Kingman's block, Main, near School Streets.
 Linden block, corner Main and Linden Streets.
 Lyman block, Main, near High Street.
 Masonic Hall, in city block, corner Main and High Street.
 Mechanic's Hall in Packard block, Main, corner Main and East Elm Streets.
 Mercantile building, corner Main and East Elm Streets.
 Music Hall, in Mercantile building.
 New Church Hall, basement New Jerusalem Church, Main Street, near corner Crescent Street.
 Odd-Fellows' Hall, Howard block, Main, near High Street.
 Opera House block, Mercantile building, Main, corner East Elm Street.
 Packard Block, corner Main and East Elm Streets.
 Perkins block, corner Main and Green Streets.
 Perkins Hall, in Perkins block, corner Main and Green Streets.
 Perry's block, Centre, beyond railroad crossing.
 Public Library, in Satucket block, corner Elm and Main Streets.
 Richmond building, Church Street.
 Ryder building, Main, opposite Hotel Belmont.
 Satucket block, corner Main and Elm Streets.
 Spaulding building, next south of Kingman's block.
 Star building, Main, near High Street.
 St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Society's Hall, Kingman's block, Main Street.
 Studley block, 415 Main.
 Theatre building, East Elm, near Main Street.
 Tyler Cobb's (now Curtis Bros.) building, corner Main and High Streets.

Washburn's block, corner Main and School Streets.
 Webster Hall, East Elm, near Main Street.
 White's block, Main, opposite Hotel Belmont.

CHAPTER XXIII.

SOCIETIES—MISCELLANEOUS.

Masonic.—PAUL REVERE LODGE OF FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS.—This lodge was instituted Feb. 5, 1856, and is in a flourishing condition, with a prospect of extended usefulness under its excellent officers. The original petitioners were Lucien B. Keith, George Clark, Lorenzo D. Hervey, Robert Smith, Alexander Hichborn, Jonas R. Perkins, Esq., Augustus Mitchell, David Cobb, Thomas May, Samuel Howard, and Hiram Packard.

The following were the officers at the formation of society: Lucien B. Keith, W. M.; George Clark, S. W.; Lorenzo D. Hervey, J. W.; Augustus Mitchell, S. D.; Alexander Hichborn, J. D.; Robert Smith, Treas.; Jonas R. Perkins, Sec.; Hiram Packard, S. S.; Thomas Mayhew, Tyler.

Present officers: Edward Parker, Jr., W. M.; David W. Battles, S. W.; Robert L. Williams, J. W.; Bradford E. Jones, Treas.; Frederick R. French, Sec.; Loyed E. Chamberlain, S. D.; Henry Hartwell, J. D.; Albert Manley, S. S.; James C. Tannatt, J. S.; Henry C. Gurney, Organist; George E. Bryant (2) Tyler; Rev. A. Everett Goodenough, Chap.

SATUCKET ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER.—The following persons petitioned for a chapter of Royal Arch Masons, which was granted Dec. 7, 1869: Charles C. Bixby, Baalis Sanford, Jr., Francis M. French, Enos H. Reynolds, Loring W. Puffer, Francis B. Washburn, Davis S. Packard, Francis A. Thayer, Samuel B. Hinckley, L. Bradford Howard, Alfred Laws, Rufus E. Brett, Allen Crocker, Jonas R. Perkins, Peter F. Hollywood, Francis M. Sylvester, E. I. Packard, W. S. Gurney, James H. Cooper, Henry A. Brett, Edgar E. Dean, E. Wilson Morse, William W. Cross, Benjamin R. Clapp, J. D. Mitchell.

The following is a list of the first officers: Baalis Sanford, Jr., H. P.; Charles C. Bixby, K.; Francis M. French, S.; Alfred Laws, C. of H.; Enos H. Reynolds, P. S.; E. Austin Packard, R. A. C.; James H. Cooper, M. 3d V.; Davis S. Packard, M. 2d V.; Charles A. P. Mason, M. 1st V.; Francis A. Thayer, Treas.; Jonas R. Perkins, Sec.; George G. Withington, Chap.; John Underhay, S. S.; Veranus Filoon, J. S.; Hiram D. Kendrick, Tyler.

Present officers, 1884: Veranus Filoon, M. E.

. P.; David W. Battles, K.; John Westgate, S.; bion H. Howe, C. of H.; David W. Blankinship, S.; Davis S. Packard, Treas.; Fred. R. French, Sec.; ev. Samuel Hodgkiss, Chap.; Joseph Hersey, M. 3d.; F. A. Kingman, M. 2d V.; Albert Manley, M. t V.; John A. Jackson, R. A. C.; George E. ryant (2d), Tyler.

BAY STATE COMMANDERY OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.
—A special assembly of the Grand Commandery of Massachusetts and Rhode Island was called to meet in Brockton, Mass., June 24, 1874, for the purpose of constituting the "Bay State Commandery." The day was all that could be desired, a gala day for Brockton; bright uniforms and beautiful banners made a grand display, which, together with fine music, the scene was not soon forgotten. The assembly met in Music Hall, where were the ceremonies. A banquet was served in Murray Hall, which was in the style for which the citizens of Brockton are famous. This was the first public introduction of Knights Templar Masonry into the town.

List of original members: Baalis Sanford, Jr., Davis Snow Packard, Everett Austin Packard, Henry Copeland, John O. Emerson, Joseph W. Freeman, Henry W. Gammon, John Smith Fuller, Leonard Church Stetson, George F. Coughlin, Henry B. Wood, Hiram C. Alden, William H. Alden, Jason G. Howard, Enos Hawes Reynolds, Lewis Porter, George Richardson Thompson, Albion Harrison Howe, James I. Cooper, Edward Ornan Noyes, Charles A. P. Mason, Thomas Reed, Allen Crocker, Elbridge Wilson Morse, Rufus E. Brett, Charles Chancy Bixby, Frank Morton, J. Winsor Pratt, George B. Coggswell, Henry Herbert Howard, Jonas Reynolds Perkins, Gysander Bradford Howard, Francis Mortimer French, George Edward Freeman, David Brayton, Edgar Everett Dean, Samuel Bond Hinekley, Oscar Perkins, Theodore Meyers House, A. J. Gove, George Brett, Charles Francis Porter, Fred. L. Brett, Edward Parker, Jr.

List of first officers: Edward Parker, E. C.; Baalis Sanford, Jr., Gen.; Henry H. Packard, Capt. Gen.; Theodore M. House, Prel.; Hiram C. Alden, W.; Enos H. Reynolds, J. W.; John O. Emerson, Treas.; H. Herbert Howard, Rec.; George R. Thompson, Sw. B.; Henry W. Gammons, St. B.; James H. Cooper, W.; Joseph W. Freeman, E. Austin Packard, John S. Fuller, C.'s of the G.; Albion I. Howe, Sent.

Present organization of officers: Elmer W. Walker, E. C.; A. Cranston Thompson, Gen.; Veranus Filoon, Capt. Gen.; Mirandus R. Dustiu, Prel.; Benjamin O. Caldwell, S. W.; Albion H. Howe, J. W.;

Davis S. Packard, Treas.; Baalis Sanford, Rec.; John A. Jackson, St. B.; Walter Bradford, Sw. B.; David W. Blankinship, W.; Edward S. Powers, C. of G.; F. A. Kingman, 2d G.; William H. Wade, 3d G.; George E. Bryant (2d), Tyler.

BROCKTON COUNCIL, ROYAL AND SELECT MASTERS.—Chartered April, 1884.

Veranus Filoon, T. I. M.; A. Cranston Thompson, Dep.; Edward S. Powers, P. C. W.; Davis S. Packard, Treas.; Baalis Sanford, Rec.; Charles C. Bixby, C. of G.; Edward Parker, Jr., Con.; Rev. Samuel Hodgkiss, Chap.; Enos H. Reynolds, M.; James Edgar, St.; Stephen W. Leighton, Sent. Meet on the third Friday of each month, in "Masonic Hall," City Block, Main Street.

ST. GEORGE LODGE OF FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS, CAMPELLO.—Chartered Feb. 20, 1878; meet in Goodall's Block, Main Street.

Charter members: Fred. W. Park, Damon Kingman, Thomas W. Child, Elmer L. Keith, Peter Dalton, J. E. Merchant, George A. Haven, Howard P. Keith, Charles H. Dalton, Horace B. Rogers, George M. Skinner, H. A. Monk, William Richards, H. N. P. Hubbard, George Stevens, Lyman E. Keith, William S. Green, J. M. Hyde, Flavel B. Keith, Gardner J. Kingman.

Number of members in 1884, sixty-two.

Massasoit Lodge of I. O. of O. F., No. 69.—This lodge was instituted in June, 1846. Among the members of the society were the following persons, who held some office at its beginning: Robert Smith, Waldo Bradford, James F. Packard, Cephas W. Drake, Ellis Packard, Samuel Webster, Lorenzo D. Hervey, Lorenzo Dillingham, T. S. Mitchell, and Aaron B. Drake.

In 1876, Ellis Packard, Noah Chesman, Lorenzo D. Hervey, Horatio E. Paine, Rufus E. Brett, Oakes S. Soule, and George R. Whitney petitioned for a new charter, which was granted, and they were reinstated by Rev. A. St. John Chambre, deputy, Feb. 16, 1871. The following were the first officers of the lodge: Noah Chesman, N. G.; Lorenzo D. Hervey, V. G.; Rufus E. Brett, Sec.; Oakes S. Soule, Treas.

Officers for the year 1884: Nathan T. Soule, N. G.; Daniel P. Kenney, V. G.; Daniel H. Leach, Rec. Sec.; William H. Savage, Treas.; Elmer B. Hayward, P. S.; Albert R. Wade, W.; Joshua M. Jenney, Con.; William H. Mackey, O. G.; Bradford R. Parks, I. G.

Membership, two hundred and twenty-five. Meetings every Thursday, in Odd-Fellows' Hall, Howard Block, Main Street.

Nemasket Encampment, I. O. of O. F., No. 44.—

—Chartered Aug. 2, 1871. Instituted Oct. 9, 1871.

Petitioning members: J. W. Freeman, H. F. Borden, Walter Scott, Rufus E. Brett, Sewall P. Howard, H. Herbert Howard, E. E. Packard, W. F. Stratton, George E. Minzey.

Officers at the organization, 1871: Henry F. Borden, C. P.; Walter Scott, S. W.; Rufus E. Brett, Scribe; Sewall P. Howard, Treas.; H. Herbert Howard, J. W.; E. E. Packard, Guide; W. F. Stratton, I. S.; George E. Minzey, O. S.; A. St. John Chambre, H. P.

Officers for the year 1884: Arthur P. Starrett, C. P.; Kenelm W. Shaw, H. P.; Otis Churchill, S. W.; Adelbert Belcher, J. W.; George Garland, Scribe; Henry B. Caldwell, Treas.

Membership, one hundred and twenty-five. Meetings second and fourth Mondays, monthly, in Odd-Fellows' Hall, Howard Block, Main Street.

Beatrice Lodge, No. 28, Daughters of Rebecca.—This lodge was instituted on Tuesday, Feb. 15, 1876. Officers of the Grand Lodge officiating.

The following is a list of the officers elected at the first meeting: N. G., Col. John J. Whipple; V. G., Mrs. Emeline F. Allen; R. S., Mrs. Emeline H. Gould; F. S., E. M. Shaw; Treas., Mrs. H. B. Caldwell; R. S. N. G., Mrs. Augustus B. Loring; L. S. N. G., Mrs. William H. Savage; W., H. H. Howard; C., Mrs. H. M. Bartlett; R. S. V. G., John O. Emerson; L. S. V. G., J. S. Paine; I. S., Augustus B. Loring; O. S., O. B. Hervey.

There were fifty ladies who have become members of this institution.

Knights of Honor.—BROCKTON LODGE, No. 218, instituted Jan. 27, 1876. Charter members: George R. Fullerton, Henry H. Filoon, James R. Drew, W. W. Kidder, H. N. P. Hubbard, George W. Reed, Eli A. Chase, James H. Cooper, Charles O. Wilbur, Myron H. Packard, Frederic E. French, S. B. Hinkley, Leonard C. Stetson, Augustus B. Loring, Edward O. Noyes, George C. Holmes, John S. Fuller, Charles Roundy.

Officers: George M. Copeland, D.; William E. Bird, V. D.; Ethan Allen, A. D.; Frank E. Shaw, P. D.; George R. Lyons, Chap.; Charles Hartwell, G.; David W. Blankinship, Rep.; Charles Perkins, Fin. Rep.; John McCarty, Treas.; Frederic Schroeter, G.; John Kohler, S.; Edward O. Noyes, James H. Cooper, Rufus E. Packard, trustees.

Royal Arcanum.—BROCKTON COUNCIL, No. 848, instituted August, 1884. L. Morton Packard, R.; Daniel J. Terhune, P. R.; Joseph W. Terhune, V. R.; Charles N. Swift, O.; T. G. Nye, Jr., Sec.;

David W. Blankinship, Col.; Charles Perkins, Treas.; Charles O. Bates, G.; George M. Copeland, Chap.; Allston Holbrook, W.; Alfred G. Churchill, O. S. Charter members: Charles Perkins, Daniel J. Terhune, L. Morton Packard, Allston Holbrook, Samuel J. Gruver, George M. Copeland, Joseph W. Terhune, Frank H. Wales, Charles H. Shannon, E. H. Shannon, Charles O. Bates, Charles N. Swift, T. G. Nye, Jr., Alfred G. Churchill, Fred. M. Atwood, John Barbour, Frank Plummer, J. Porter Scudder, Henry E. Adams, W. L. Draper, Luther C. Howe, Willis E. Webster, David W. Blankinship, George F. Garland, J. C. Henry, C. C. Fisher, George S. Adams, E. P. Butler, W. H. Bailey.

Ancient Order of United Workmen.—CAMPELLO LODGE, No. 30, organized July 8, 1881. Charter members: J. N. Reed, P. M. W.; Jesse H. Averill, M. W.; William H. Carpenter, F.; L. D. Doten, O.; H. F. Packard, R.; Eugene B. Estes, F.; Augustus Davenport, R.; M. L. Keene, G.; Frank W. Osborne, I. W.; J. H. Miles, O. W.; Albert P. Hardy, Frans L. Braconier.

“Eternal Truth, Justice, Honesty, and Mutual Aid.”

This organization is established “for the encouragement and support of brothers in sickness, out of employment, or on travel, to the amount of two thousand dollars. For the practice of charity, the inspiration of hope, and the protection of all good.” Constituted by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, Caleb H. Sprague, G. M. W.; Hugh Doherty, G. R.; July 8, 1881.

Junior Order United American Mechanics.—SATUCKET COUNCIL, No. 6. This council was instituted at James' Hall, by officers of the State Council, Tuesday, Feb. 1, 1881. There were about thirty members present, and others proposed to join. The following is the list of officers:

C., Morton F. Perkins; V. C., E. Bradford Southworth; R. S., Zephaniah T. Sherman; Asst. R. S., W. Herbert Morton; F. S., A. N. Ward; Treas., Edgar S. Willis; C., A. E. Davis; W., F. W. Osborne; I. S., J. A. Fisher; O. S., F. F. Horton.

United Order of the Golden Cross.—GARFIELD COMMANDERY, No. 158. This commandery was instituted by J. H. Mergan, Deputy Grand Commander of Massachusetts, on Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1881. The objects of this order are to unite fraternally all acceptable persons for social pleasure and improvement; to give moral and material aid, by encouragement in business and aid when in distress, and provide a fund for the family of a deceased member. The following were the officers for 1881: N. C., N. S.

Reed; V. C., Joseph M. Poole; P., R. H. Harlow; K. of R., L. F. Bird; Treas., Henry M. Littlefield; F. K. of R., W. A. Broderick; H., Allison Howes; W. of I. G., Mrs. L. F. Bird; W. of O. G., J. H. Jameson; P. N. C., G. A. Joy; M. E., J. E. Bacon.

Odd-Fellows' Relief Association.—The object of this society is mutual benefit and assistance in case of sickness.

The officers of this association are as follows: Joshua M. Jenney, President; Rufus E. Packard, Vice-President; George C. Holmes, Secretary; Elmer B. Hayward, Treasurer; Joshua M. Jenney, Charles M. Holbrook, George C. Holmes, Rufus E. Packard, Richard H. Aldoes, Elmer B. Hayward, William E. C. Thomas, Directors.

Knights of the Maccabees.—This order was first introduced into Canada, where it was instituted and organized Aug. 7, 1878, the object of which is "Brotherhood, and to make provision for deceased members." A "Tent" in Brockton was organized May 26, 1879, with the following officers:

F. M. Tinkham, Excellent Sir Knight Gen. Com.; Rev. S. M. Beal, S. K. Gen. Com.; A. M. Turner, S. K. Lieut. Com.; W. A. Broderick, S. K. Prelate; E. S. Willis, S. K. Record Keeper; N. J. Spinney, S. K. Finance Keeper; L. S. Hamilton, S. K. Sergt.; C. H. Saunders, S. K. M. at A.; Alva N. Ward, S. K. M. of G.; T. J. Lee, S. K. 2d M. of G.; James Foley, S. K. Sentinel; Thomas G. Palmer, S. K. Picket.

Members: George G. Whitten, E. E. Willis, H. L. Willis, C. H. Chase, C. H. Holt, L. W. Hamm, A. C. Gardiner, F. E. Osborne, I. S. Foster, E. Bradford Southworth, L. F. Champion, E. C. Holmes, W. B. Packard, Denton Crane, W. H. Rounds, G. D. Jones, Chester Peckham. This society had a short existence.

United Fellowship.—STAR COUNCIL, No. 16, organized Sept. 18, 1882. William F. Jones, P. D.; Dr. E. Arthur Dakin, D.; Dr. William P. Chisholm, V. D.; Charles W. Kingman, C.; Charles D. Fullerton, Sec.; William S. Noyes, Treas.; Mary Smith, I.; E. Bradford Jones, G.; Eunice Blanchard, W.; O. S. Sweetser, Minerva Chisholm, Mary C. Puffer, Trustees; C. S. Simpson, Hattie S. Faxon, Emma Blanchard, Jessie Crooker, Fannie D. Leonard, Mary L. Packard, W. F. Jones, Social Committee; E. E. Kent, O. S. Sweetser, N. Hayward, Committee on Hall; Dr. E. Arthur Dakin, and Dr. William P. Chisholm, Medical Examiners. The object of this society was social and mutual aid, and had but a short existence.

American Legion of Honor.—EXCELSIOR COUNCIL, No. 16, was instituted April 24, 1879. Officers:

Baalis Sanford, C.; Dr. William Richards, V. C.; Lucius F. Alden, O.; Col. John J. Whipple, P. C.; Rev. Z. T. Sullivan, C.; George T. Prince, Sec.; William Keith, Col.; Edward O. Noyes, Treas.; S. F. Cole, G.; William F. Field, W.; George R. Thompson, S.

Members: Eli A. Chase, William Keith, George C. Holmes, C. D. Fullerton, John J. Whipple, Daniel S. Tolman, Hamilton L. Gibbs, S. Frank Cole, A. Eliot Paine, Edward O. Noyes, W. J. Jenks, John B. Tobey, John O. Emerson, Baalis Sanford, Jr., Lucius M. Leach, Otis Cobb, Henry Thompson, George M. Skinner, Daniel T. Burrell, Rufus L. Thatcher, W. B. Foster, George E. Bryant, Josiah R. Drew, George T. Prince, Elmer W. Walker, Nathaniel T. Ryder, William F. Field, John Kendall, Solomon Leighton, Walter Bradford, Dr. William Richards, Horace B. Rogers, John N. Reed, Thomas W. Childs, George W. Stevens, Melotiah Tobey, Charles E. Ripley, Milliard H. Poole, Z. T. Sullivan, William H. Tobey, Lucius F. Alden, George M. Copeland, George H. Jameson, George R. Thompson, Frank L. Boyden, Rufus E. Packard, James Porter, Elijah Hamilton, Abbott W. Packard, Albert F. Small, John A. Jackson, C. Frank Copeland, Elmer Fullerton, David Brayton, Charles Tolman, Harrison C. Thomas, Metcalf B. Sumner.

Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Massachusetts.—FLETCHER WEBSTER POST, No. 13. This post was named in honor of the colonel of the Twelfth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, in which there were a large number from Brockton in the army.

It was organized July 1, 1867, with the following charter members: Uriah Macoy, James A. Packard, Amasa S. Glover, Ephraim Tinkham, E. Z. Stevens, Howard Keith, Charles L. Sproul, Asa F. Crosby, George W. Andrews, Thomas Doyle, Herbert Phillips, Clarence E. Hartwell, L. B. Andrews, William F. Robinson, J. T. Lurvey.

A. S. CUSHMAN. [L.S.]

Officers for 1884: George A. Grant, C.; Frank W. Luce, S. V. C.; John A. Hall, J. V. C.; William R. Bunker, Adjt.; Fred. Hanson, Q. M.; A. Eliot Paine, Surg.; F. M. Shaw, Chap.; Frank L. Boyden, O. D.; Elijah Thompson, O. G.

Following are the names of the executive officers of the post since its formation:

Term of Office.	Commander.	Adjutant.
1867.....	Uriah Macoy.	C. E. Hartwell.
1867.....	A. B. Holmes.	E. T. Cowell.
1868.....	A. B. Holmes.	J. P. Chipman.
1869.....	George W. Leach.	Charles W. Mitchell.
1870.....	George W. Leach.	Charles E. Osgood.
1870.....	Ezekiel Packard.	Charles E. Osgood.

Term of Office.	Commander.	Adjutant.
1871.....	George W. Leach.	Thomas Clarkson.
1872.....	George M. Skinner.	Charles E. Osgood.
1873.....	George M. Skinner.	Charles E. Osgood.
1873.....	Henry A. Willis.	Charles D. Packard.
1874.....	William H. Wade.	Charles D. Packard.
1874.....	Geo. H. Fullerton.	W. W. Kidder.
1875.....	George M. Skinner.	W. W. Kidder.
1876.....	W. W. Kidder.	Henry R. Brosing.
1877.....	W. W. Kidder.	Henry R. Brosing.
1878.....	W. W. Kidder.	Henry R. Brosing.
1879.....	Alfred C. Monroe.	Edward A. Trask.
1880.....	Alfred C. Monroe.	W. R. Bunker.
1881.....	Alfred C. Monroe.	W. R. Bunker.
1882.....	Alfred C. Monroe.	W. R. Bunker.
1883.....	George A. Grant.	W. R. Bunker.

All but four of this list are still living.

The post have assisted at the following ceremonies and celebrations: Dedication of soldiers' monument at Boston, Sept. 17, 1877; dedication of soldiers' monument at West Bridgewater, July 4, 1879; dedication of soldiers' monument at Easton, May 30, 1882; Webster centennial at Marshfield, Oct. 12, 1882.

MEMORIAL TO THE PATRIOTIC DEAD, WITH THEIR RESTING-PLACES.

UNION CEMETERY.

Charles E. Atherton.	L. F. Kingman.
George E. Allen.	Thaddeus Keith.
W. A. Allen.	M. M. Keith.
James F. Andrews.	George W. Leach.
Lyman Allen.	J. Leavitt.
John Burns.	Fred Moan.
Thomas B. Broadhurst.	R. E. Matthews.
H. A. Barnes.	H. Henry McClue.
J. N. Brett.	Charles E. Nelson.
George F. Bunker.	Henry F. Nash.
Willard Bryant.	Charles E. Osgood.
Horace Clark.	S. T. Packard.
J. W. Crosby.	Richard Packard.
—— Crapo.	Morrill Perkins.
Frank Dunbar.	W. F. Packard.
Frank Drake.	George F. Paekard.
Leander Durant.	—— Randall.
Henry Edson.	Dixon Rochester.
Josiah Edson.	Gardner Reynolds.
Walter T. Fuller.	W. F. Robinson.
Charles Faunoe.	John S. Stoddard.
Asbury Foss.	Charles Strummett.
D. F. Fullerton.	John Sanford.
B. N. Gardner.	Frank Sanford.
Albert D. Hunt.	S. A. Smith.
Harry Hunt.	A. A. Spaulding.
George E. Holmes.	William Stevens.
L. M. Hamilton.	George H. Story.
Alex. Hitchborn.	J. S. Tannatt.
L. P. Howard.	Albert Thompson.
A. S. Hamilton.	George Thompson.
John E. Hollis.	Franklin Ward.
Orrin O. Holmes.	Willis Whipple.
Walter Holmes.	Henry L. Winter.
Ellis Howard.	Richard Wilbur.
J. Johnson.	John W. Fildon.
H. M. Jackson.

St. PATRICK'S CEMETERY.

Christopher Brannigan.	David McGuire.
Philip Burns.	David Murphy.
Patrick Collins.	Patrick McIntee.
Timothy Connolly.	John McIntee.
James Donahue.	Michael McDonald.
Philip Donahue.	Edwin McGrane.
E. Duvire.	Thomas Monahan.
Michael Early.	William O'Brien.
William Flannigan.	D. O'Brien.
William Griffin.	Timothy Regan.
James Grady.	Philip Russell.
J. Hannigan.	P. Riley.
T. J. Kneeland.	John Sullivan.
Thomas Malony.

OLD BURIAL-GROUND.

Caleb Badger.	Daniel W. Ross.
---------------	-----------------

CEMETERY ACROSS THE RAILROAD.

Austin Packard.	George A. Perkins.
Charles T. Packard.

THOMPSON'S CEMETERY.

William Shepson.	Fred. Robinson.
------------------	-----------------

MELROSE CEMETERY, BROCKTON HEIGHTS.

A. G. Drake.	Augustus Hall.
A. J. Frost.	C. H. Phillips.
Frank Goodwid.	Hiram Thayer.

E. L. THAYER'S CEMETERY.

Joseph C. Estes.	Thomas Dean.
------------------	--------------

CEMETERY AT MARSHALL'S CORNER.

Clarence Calkins.	Nathan Packard.
David W. Graves.	Daniel W. Willis.
Arthur Humphries.	George H. Willis.
John R. Mills.	Galen Manley.
George W. Pope.	Stillman Dunbar.
J. H. Packard.

Sons of Veterans.—JAMES A. GARFIELD CAMP, No. 17. Original members: Frederic C. Parker, Charles A. Dustin, George L. Tilton, E. H. Tilton, Edward E. Tilton, Fred. W. Doane, Martin T. Packard, William C. Andrews, Fred. S. Alden, Linus H. Shaw, Norman B. Shaw, Rufus E. Tilton, Frank E. Shaw, Charles McElroy, C. A. Sturtevant, Samuel Shaw, Arthur P. Holmes, Harry H. Willis, George Loring. The above-named persons, together with thirty-one others, were mustered into the order of Sons of Veterans Feb. 19, 1883. Voted to surrender charter and apply for admission to the "Sons of Veterans of the United States of America," May 16, 1884. Constituted a camp of the "Sons of Veterans," to be known as Gen. James A. Garfield Camp, No. 17, located at Brockton.

Officers for 1884: S. Oscar Martland, Capt.; L. Warren Howard, First Lieut.; Charles E. Sturtevant, Second Lieut.; George Tilton, Chap.; Charles F. Cole, Surg.; George Parker, Q. M.

Rooms in Grand Army of the Republic Hall, Ryder's Block, Main Street.

Woman's State Relief Corps, Department of Massachusetts, auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic: S. Agnes Parker, A. H. Dickerman, M. Ada Pratt, Ellen F. Holmes, Margaret Hanson, Susie Trask, Bessie F. Hunt, M. Estes, Ellen Parks, Elizabeth Tribou, Augusta Hunt, Hattie A. Porter, Flora B. Palmer, Sarah E. Osborne, Minnie F. Estes, Susan E. Hall, Amy E. Hall, Mary F. Southwick, Eliza M. Holloway, Eva T. Porcheron, H. A. Grant, Hattie A. French, Phebe M. Gibbs, Sarah B. Kidder, Olive M. Henderson, Mary E. Davenport, M. T. Hollis.

MELVINA A. BEALE, Department Secretary.

FLETCHER WEBSTER RELIEF CORPS, No. 7, OF THE CITY OF BROCKTON.

By SARAH E. FULLER, Department President.

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 28, 1879.

Present officers, 1884: Mrs. Sarah W. Murdock, Pres.; Mrs. L. Annie Grant, S. V. P.; Mrs. Eva C. Porcheron, J. V. P.; Mrs. Helen R. Bird, Sec.; Mrs. Hattie A. French, Treas.; Mrs. Harriet B. Shaw, Chap.; Mrs. Bessie I. Hunt, Con.; Mrs. Emily Mayer, G.

Brockton Soldiers' Aid Society.—Agreeably to a notice previously given, the ladies of Brockton, feeling a deep interest in the welfare of those who had gone forth to fight the battles of our country, met at the chapel of the First Congregational Church, and organized themselves into a society under the name of Soldiers' Aid Society, and made choice of the following officers: Mrs. George Wilbour, president; Mrs. H. W. Robinson, vice-president; Mrs. Clara C. Wheldon, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Henry Howard, Mrs. A. Harris, Mrs. — Snow, Mrs. Elijah Tolman, Mrs. Darius Howard, Mrs. M. J. Clark, Mrs. Russell Alden, directors.

The society held its meetings every Tuesday, in the Engine Hall, on Elm Street, for the transaction of business. The object of the society was the collection of clothing and packages, such as are needed by the soldiers, and forwarding them to their proper places. Much good was accomplished by them. During the first year of this society's existence, the amount contributed in cash by the different societies was $278.43, the amount of clothing and other goods sent to the Sanitary Commission at Boston amounted to $800, making a total of $1078.43. During the year ending October, 1863, the amount of goods, clothing, supplies, etc., sent to the Sanitary Commission at Boston was $827.45, the amount of cash contributed was $176.05, making a total of $1003.50. During the year ending October, 1864, the amount sent to the Sanitary Commission at Boston was $1327.11. The amount of cash contributed in various ways, including the proceeds of the Sanitary Fair for Soldiers of $800, was $1034, making a total of $2361.11; the handsome sum of $4443.04 being contributed for the benefit and relief of the soldiers up to October, 1864.

Freedmen's Relief Association of Brockton.—July 8, 1864, an association was formed under the above name as an auxiliary to the National Freedmen's Relief Association of New York City, having for its object the improvement of the freedmen of the colored race, by raising money, clothing, and necessary material for their relief, and teaching them civilization and Christianity, to imbue their minds with correct ideas of order, industry, economy, self-reliance, and to elevate them in the scale of humanity by inspiring them with self-respect. The following was a list of the officers: Augustus T. Jones, president; A. B. Keith, vice-president; Mrs. E. L. Clark, secretary; Frances French, treasurer; J. R. Perkins, George Copeland, Capt. Henry French, Thaddeus E. Gifford, A. T. Jones, and A. B. Keith, executive committee.

Franklin Debating Association.—A society was organized during the winter of 1836, with the above name, for the promotion of useful knowledge and debating. The last question for discussion was, "Are dancing-schools, balls, cotillion parties, etc., worthy the support and encouragement of the community?" The decision has not as yet come to the writer's notice.

Pi Beta Society.—This society was established Sept. 17, 1844, and was in active operation about eight years. Its object was the mental improvement of its members, for the accomplishment of which, beside the literary exercises of its regular meetings, it had a reading-room, and a cabinet of natural history of nearly two thousand specimens, and a library of two hundred volumes, most of which were presented the first six months of its existence. The society held weekly meetings, and had addresses from distinguished speakers from time to time. During the active term this society was in existence it had gathered one thousand volumes and ten thousand specimens of cabinet curiosities of various kinds.

The Messrs. Loomis, of the academy, had the care of the society, it being connected with the Adelphian Academy.

The officers of the institution, in 1851, were Charles R. Ford, president; Jacob Emerson, Jr., of Methuen, recording secretary; John H. Bourne, of Marshfield, corresponding secretary; Caleb Howard, treasurer; Silas L. Loomis, librarian; L. F. C. Loomis, superintendent of cabinet; Jacob Emerson, Charles R.

Weeden, Lavoice N. Guild, prudential committee, besides many honorary members.

Philomathian Association.—The above is the name of an association connected with Mr. S. D. Hunt's academy, the object of which was mutual improvement. It was formed in 1855, soon after he opened his school, and was in existence till the close. Weekly meetings were held by the members, at which exercises, consisting of debates, declamations, lectures, essays, critiques, and the reading of a paper published monthly by the association, was read.

Alpha Epsilon Literary Society.—Organized April 14, 1874. This society is composed of graduates of the high school of Brockton, associated for literary exercises and as a debating club. The first five members at its organization were Frank E. Packard, Frederic R. French, Benjamin W. Cobb, Arthur E. Kendrick, and Loyed E. Chamberlain. The meetings of this society are held in the high-school room, on Tuesday evenings, and are well attended. Here follows a list of the earlier members: Frank E. Packard (1874), B. W. Cobb (1875, deceased), Fred. R. French (1874), A. E. Kendrick (1875), L. E. Chamberlain (1875), James Poyntz (1875), W. C. Keith (1875), Edgar B. Stevens (1875), E. Kingman, Jr., H. C. Severance (1876), J. E. C. Lagergreen (1876), S. E. Foss (1875), John Gilmore, Jr. (1876), George Woodward, E. L. Emerson (1877), Charles F. Jenney (1878), J. Robert McCarty (1877), C. H. Kingman (1877), W. S. Bennett (1878), Edward T. Ford (1878), Horace Richmond, H. N. Packard, E. H. Foss, H. I. Mitchell, A. C. Gill, Willie E. Porter, George H. Bryant, W. J. Keith (1878), Fred. K. Tribou, R. E. Brayton, W. F. Brooks.

In 1880 the number had reached thirty-five members. Social entertainments are held yearly.

Brockton Athenæum (organized 1884).—This society meets twice every month for literary improvement and progress of the arts, sciences, and promotion of thinking, and the consideration of current questions of the day.

Officers: Loyed E. Chamberlain, Esq., president; Charles E. Robinson, vice-president; Warren A. Reed, secretary and treasurer.

Members: E. Bradford Jones, Dr. Henry H. Filoon, Albert F. Poole, Herbert H. Chase, Henry C. Gurney, Henry T. Anglim, Waldo V. Howard, Frank G. Jaeger, William E. Beals, William F. Jones, B. Frank Simmons, B. Ellis Eaton, William J. Loheed, George C. Howard, Russell S. Beale, Frank A. Dunham, C. E. Small, Elliot L. Packard, Emil A. Lagergreen.

St. Patrick's Literary and Benevolent Society was organized in 1871 for the purpose of rendering assistance to such of its members as might be needy, and also furnish reading matter for such as desired it.

Libraries.—The first public or social library in Brockton was raised by subscription about 1781, and was kept for most of the time in private houses. The last librarian was Col. Edward Southworth, and the library was given up.

In 1842 the Legislature appropriated fifteen dollars for the use of every school district in the commonwealth that should raise an equal amount for the purchase of a school district library. With this encouragement many of the districts raised the requisite amount and purchased libraries. They are now, however, nearly laid by.

At a regular town-meeting, held March 30, 1857, the town "voted to purchase a town library, the amount not to exceed $1400, or one dollar on every poll paid in the town." For this purpose the following committee were chosen, namely, Edward Southworth, Jr., C. C. Bixby, Dr. Alexander Hichborn, David L. Cowell, Ellis Packard, Jonas R. Perkins, Lucius Gurney (2d), Jonathan White, and M. L. Keith, who proceeded in the selection and purchase of such books as were thought suitable to the wants of the community. The library was well selected, and consisted of many of the best works extant. Many persons, not wishing that the town should have any library, raised an opposition to the plan, and as the result the town "voted, May 1, 1857, that all books, effects, and appurtenances of the Town Library be placed in the hands of the selectmen, to be disposed of in the best manner for the interest of the town." And in accordance with these instructions the selectmen sold the library of books, that cost eleven hundred and eighty-three dollars, to an association called the North Bridgewater Library Association. The price for the entire lot was six hundred dollars.

North Bridgewater Library Association.—This association was formed by a few individuals for the purpose of holding a library. It was organized under a statute made for such purposes July 11, 1858. Each member paying five dollars becomes a stockholder, and an additional one dollar annually entitles him to all the rights and privileges of a member of the association. It has over two thousand volumes, and is in a flourishing condition. The officers at the organization of the association were David L. Cowell, president; Rufus L. Thatcher, vice-president; Augustus Hayward, secretary; David F. Studley, treasurer; Henry A. Ford, John L. Hunt, Alpheus Holmes, Charles B. Crocker, Darius Howard, Edward Southworth, Jr., Lorenzo D. Hervey, Charles Curtis, Jr., Washburn Paekard, directors.

Library Association.—Prior to the year 1847 the town of North Bridgewater had not enjoyed the privilege of many literary or scientific lectures or social gatherings. During the winter of that year the principals of the Adelpian Academy, feeling an interest in the matter, and the want of some elevated and improving intercourse for the multitude of young people in the town, proposed and finally arranged a series of social levees or gatherings, composed mostly of members of the school. The exercises consisted of brief essays and addresses, interspersed with music and a season of social conversation.

This association was reorganized in October, 1851, or a new one formed under the above name; and a series of useful lectures was given by able lecturers, together with excellent musical entertainments.

North Bridgewater Agricultural Library Association.—An association under the above name was formed April 3, 1859, the object of which was to obtain a library of agricultural books, papers, etc., such as would tend to the improvement of agricultural pursuits. The following persons were its officers: Chandler Sprague, Esq., president; Isaac Kingman, vice-president; Alpheus Holmes, treasurer and librarian; H. W. Robinson, secretary.

Brockton Public Library.—The city has a good public library in Sattucket Block, corner of Main and Elm Streets, containing upwards of eight thousand volumes. The committee of the library are Warren L. Copeland, David L. Cowell, Loring W. Puffer, DeWitt Clinton Paekard, Preston B. Keith, Jonathan White, Edward Parker, Jr., Alfred Laws, W. W. Wilkins. Myra F. Southworth, librarian; Lizzie H. Williams, assistant librarian.

Sabbath-Schools.—The first Sabbath-school in Brockton commenced in May, 1818, through the efforts of Mrs. Huntington, the wife of the pastor. The school consisted of one hundred and seven girls and seventy-eight boys. These were divided into classes of from four to eight persons, according to their ages, the males under the care of teachers of their own sex, and the females under the care of teachers of their sex, the whole number under the direction of the superintendent. The time allotted for the school was during the intermission between the morning and afternoon services on the Sabbath, and was usually one hour long.

The books in use during the early part of its existence were the New Testament, Emerson's "Evangelical Primer," and "Hymns for Infant Minds." Most of the scholars, during the first term, were well versed in the primer, and in addition to that, for the first sixteen Sabbaths, they had committed thirty-two thousand six hundred and seventy-four verses of Scripture, and twenty-seven thousand three hundred verses of hymns, which were recited.

The first term of the Sabbath-school closed with public religious exercises on the day of the annual meeting of the Bridgewater Evangelical Society. The sacred music on the occasion was performed principally by the scholars.

There are at the present time schools connected with all the churches in the town, together with extensive libraries of well-selected books.

Music.—According to a universal custom in early times there was nothing but congregational singing. Tunes were few, and for want of books the exercises were read a line at a time and then all would join in singing; then the good deacon would read another line, and thus the service was "deaconed" through the whole of the verses.

The first music-book in the country was brought by the Pilgrims, and entitled "Ainsworth Version of the Psalms." This gave way to the "Bay Psalm Book," the first book printed in America, which went through seventy editions, and in 1758 was revised and republished by Rev. Thomas Prince, of Boston.<sup>1</sup>

Previous to 1765 or 1770 there were no choirs in the churches, and as these were formed the custom of lining or "deaconing" the hymns grew into disuse, but not till after a great deal of determined opposition. The custom had been introduced by the Westminster Assembly of Divines, and hence could not easily be surrendered.

The first choir in now Brockton was established about 1801 under the leadership of Maj. Daniel Cary, a noted singer of that day. Previous to that time there were no seats specially provided for singers. Those persons who had thought of forming a choir in 1801 asked that seats might be provided for them.

Jan. 12, 1801, we find an article in the parish records for meetings as follows:

"To see if the parish will erect, or suffer to be erected, seats for the singers, in the front of pews in the front gallery." Jan. 19, 1801, "Voted to erect seats in the front gallery for the singers, in front of the front pews." Also, "Voted that the above seats for the singers be erected in a 'surkerler forme.'"

<sup>1</sup> In 1690 there were but six tunes known in the province, namely, "Oxford," "Litchfield," "York," "Windsor," "St. David's," and "Martyrs," and no new tunes could be introduced without a vote of the church. The first tune-book especially devoted to music was published by Rev. William Walter in 1721, and was the first music with bars printed in America.

Maj. Daniel Cary, Moses Cary, and Col. Caleb Howard were "chosen a committee to git the above seats built." The above seats were specially set apart for the use of those who had become "larned" in the rules of "music."

Oliver Bryant, Josiah Brett, Isaac Packard, John Field, John Cobb, and Luke Lincoln were "choristers" in the parish until the town was incorporated. Since that time, Thomas J. Gurney, then living in Abington, was invited to lead the choir and teach them to sing, in 1829, who was the first person that received any compensation for services in singing. Commencing in 1829, Mr. Gurney continued to lead the choir and teach singing-schools until 1840, when he removed to Abington. From that time the choir of the First Church has been led by Mr. Seth Sumner, who became celebrated for his success in teaching singing-schools in the immediate vicinity, and Messrs. Isaac T. Packard, of this town, Whiting, Brown, and Appleton, of Boston, and Edmund Packard.

When the Porter Church was formed in the town, in 1850, Mr. Gurney was invited to take charge of their choir, which he continued to do till April 1, 1864, when he resigned. Mr. T. Emerson Gurney was organist at the Porter Church from 1850 to 1855; Mr. Joshua V. Gurney from 1855 to 1858.

The First Congregational Church had the first organ, in their old church, which was exchanged for a new one in 1854, for their new house. At one time there were four organs in the churches: namely, in the First Congregational Church, Porter Evangelical Church, Second Methodist, and the Catholic Church.

There was a musical society formed in the county of Plymouth, called the Old Colony Musical Society, which was for the benefit of singers throughout the county. Bartholomew Brown, Esq., was leader; Rev. Daniel Huntington was president. This society fell through for want of support. Mr. Huntington was a man of fine musical talent, and did much to elevate the standard of church music in the first part of his ministry, when so little attention had been paid to rutable music.

The next musical club formed for the purpose of improving the singing was the Calcott Singing Society, which was about 1827 or 1828, and included the four Bridgewater. Rev. Daniel Huntington was their first president; Nathan Lazell, of Bridgewater, was leader.

Next in order was the Union Harmonic Society; that was in existence about 1835. From that time to the present it would be impossible to give a full detail of the various singing-schools, rehearsals, clubs, etc. But probably no town in the county has given more attention to music, or been more successful in the production of talented singers and highly entertaining performances than Brockton. The church music of this city is of the highest order, and much time is devoted to the improvement of the singing throughout all the societies.

This town has sent forth some excellent teachers of music and performers of instrumental music, among whom are Thomas J. Gurney, T. Emerson Gurney, George T. Atherton, and William Faxon, who have made music a profession.

Band Music.—About the year 1840, a few individuals met together for the purpose of drill and practice in music upon various brass instruments, drums, etc., under the lead of Samuel M. Holmes, under the name of the North Bridgewater Brass Band. They met every week or oftener for practice, and were very successful, so that after a time they were engaged in all the surrounding places to play upon public occasions, and their fame soon spread abroad, and it is at present one of the best bands of the kind in that section. A large delegation of this band joined the Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment in the Rebellion of 1861.

Soon after this band was formed, another was organized at Campello, under the lead of Martin L. Keith. The following persons were among the members of that band, namely: Charles P. Keith, Theodore Lilley, Sylvanus Keith, Albert Keith, Bela B. Hayward, Jarvis W. Reynolds, James C. Snell, Thomas French, Lucius Hayward, and Harrison Bryant. This company continued only about six months, when some of the number joined the Centre Band.

About the same period there was another band at the "West Shares," under the leadership of Ellis Packard, which continued about a year, and was then given up, some of its members joining the Centre Band.

The members of this band that joined the Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment received the highest praise from Gen. Sherman, and it is said that this was his favorite band, and was conducted under the leadership of William J. Martland.

Campello Brass Band.—The Campello Brass Band was organized Aug. 7, 1877, with the following seventeen members: Fred. H. Packard, D. Carey Keith, Myron L. Keith, O. Hayward, H. A. Monk, John Monk, Frank Monk, C. E. Packard, D. C. Berry, J. B. Pratt, Frank Alden, A. J. Guild, H. N. Hunt, Frank Brown, Myron Thomas, Lyman Carlson, T. H. Loring. Mr. S. C. Perkins, of Brockton, was engaged as leader and teacher, and for about two months regular meetings were held. The majority of the players were young and inexperienced, several of them knowing nothing of reading music, and meeting with unforeseen difficulties, the interest died out, and from Nov. 8, 1877, to May 17, 1878, no general gathering of members took place. About the latter date, however, Mr. George E. Kinsley was employed to direct them, and a good number of the original company, with others who were unwilling to see the experiment end in failure, commenced a second series of meetings for practice, which has been continued with pleasant results. The membership comprises the following players: William Swanson, 1st E-flat cornet; Otho Hayward, 2d E-flat cornet; Arthur Peckham, 1st B-flat cornet; Lyman Carlson, 2d B-flat cornet; Frank Alden, 1st B-flat clarionet; M. L. Keith, solo alto; John Monk, 1st alto; Wendell White, 2d alto; Daniel Berry, 1st tenor; Aug. Hellburg, 2d tenor; Andrew Guild, baritone; Frank Brown, trombone; Charles Martin, tuba; Corydon Andrews, E-flat bass; Frank Monk, E-flat bass; Melvin Washburn, bass-drum; Norman Cobb, snare-drum; William Joyce, cymbals.

Thespian Society.—In February, 1836, a company of gentlemen and ladies were organized into a society, under the above name, for the purpose of giving dramatic performances. The orchestra consisted of fifteen members, and was under the leadership of Sibon Packard. The songs, duets, and choruses were of a high order, and were performed before crowded assemblies. A slight fee was asked, to pay expenses of scenery, and expenses only.

Union Musical Association.—About the 1st of May, 1864, a new musical association was formed, under the above title, for the purpose of improvement in singing, practicing choruses, oratorios, etc. It was regularly organized, with a constitution and by-laws. The following were the officers: Henry W. Robinson, president; Charles R. Ford, vice-president; F. A. Thayer, secretary; Sumner A. Hayward, treasurer; James Porter, librarian; Charles J. F. Packard, William H. Faxon, Samuel McLaughlin, Thomas Leonard, S. Franklin Packard, D. B. Lovell, trustees; William H. Faxon, musical director.

Union Musical Society, organized April 6, 1869. Sumner A. Hayward, president; Ziba C. Keith, vice-president; Charles J. F. Packard, treasurer and librarian; Hiram Wilde, of Boston, musical director. Consisted of about two hundred members. Met Friday evenings in the vestry of the First Church.

Brockton Temperance Union.—Rev. Samuel L. Beal, Prest.; Mrs. L. B. Willis, David Seabury, Vice-Pres.; Mrs. W. W. Packard, Sec.; W. A. Broderick, Treas.; Eleazer Cole, Marshal; George W. Easton, Lewis Ford, Mrs. F. E. Osborne, F. C. Gardner, Mrs. H. L. Collier, Alpheus Holmes, N. J. Spinney, Executive Committee; Mrs. W. W. Packard, Mrs. F. E. Osborne, Mrs. G. V. Scott, Mrs. F. L. Stone, Miss Mary Anna Gardner, G. V. Scott, Frank E. Johnson, N. J. Spinney, Frank Lincoln, Entertainment Committee.

This Union was organized by Rev. C. M. Winchester, Oct. 9, 1875, who was, by its constitution, made its perpetual president, and who, until February, 1877, managed its affairs. On the 17th of that month Rev. S. L. Beal was chosen president; Rev. C. M. Winchester, vice-president; R. F. Eaton, Miss Eva M. Bates, Herbert L. Willis, secretaries; Thomas Keith, organist. Music, readings, speeches, temperance discussions, and kindred exercises formed the basis of the meetings, which attracted a large number of young people, and the signatures to the pledge amounted to three hundred and fourteen, and a membership of two hundred and fifty-five was secured under and during Mr. Winchester's management.

On the 3d of February, 1877, Mr. Winchester, being about to leave town, resigned, and on the 17th of the same month a committee consisting of Lewis Ford, Mrs. W. W. Packard, Mrs. L. B. Willis, and C. F. Woodbury, were elected, Feb. 10, 1877, to revise the constitution. On the 17th a new constitution was adopted, among which are the following articles:

"1st. The object of the Union shall be the reformation of any and all persons who sell or use intoxicating drinks, and to help each other to watch and guard against the encroachments of a common foe. We will diligently labor, using such lawful means and measures as may seem to us most effective in creating a healthful public sentiment which shall rout this monster enemy, Intemperance, from our firesides and social circles, the Church and the State. And while we deem it important to guard against any partisan or sectarian feeling or discussion in our deliberations, we believe it the right and privilege of any one to proclaim against any and everything standing in the way of the onward march of the cause we have espoused. And we invoke the help of Almighty God that we may be enabled to attack the enemy whenever or wherever we may find him, without fear or compromise.

"2d. Any person may become a member of the Union by assenting to the constitution, taking the pledge, and paying the sum of twenty-five cents, each member contributing to the funds of the Union from week to week, as his or her means will allow.

"3d. Pledge: I solemnly promise, with the help of the Lord Jesus Christ, that I will not make, buy, sell, or use any spirituous or malt liquors, wine, or cider as a beverage. And I will use my best endeavors to induce all others to form and keep the same good resolution."

At this meeting the following officers were chosen: Rev. S. L. Beal, president; William E. Houghton, Mrs. Fannie Winchester, Mrs. Clara Packard, C. F. Woodbury, treasurer; H. L. Higgins, marshal.

For some reason the Union met at Concert Hall, Nov. 30, 1879, when the Union was dissolved, as appears by the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That in view of the present condition of the Temperance cause in our midst, and in view of the importance of concentrated effort, we, as a society, disband, hoping by oneness of action in the general movement already inaugurated in Brockton to effect the more speedy triumph of our cause."

A committee, consisting of W. A. Broderick, Lewis Ford, and Mrs. W. W. Packard, were appointed to settle the affairs of the Union.

Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Brockton.—This association was organized Feb. 28, 1878. The first meeting was held in the Methodist Church. The following were the officers: Mrs. E. Bailey, president; Mrs. A. Gurney, secretary; Mrs. Alden Gushee, Mrs. E. Bailey, Mrs. H. Merritt, Mrs. E. Holmes, vice-presidents.

"The chief object of this union shall be to inaugurate effective measures whereby the traffic in intoxicants shall be banished from among us."

Meetings are held weekly in Joslyn's block.

Chrystal Rock Juvenile Templars.—Corrinne Holmes, C. T.; Herbert Dalton, V. T.; Ruth Lothrop, C.; Charles Fanning, S.; Minnie De Neves, A. S.; Walter N. Foss, F. S.; William Moors, T.; Lina Macoy, W.; Walter Packard, D. M.; Sumner Cobb, R. H. S.; Herman Davenport, L. H. S.; Leonard Stearns, P. C. T.

St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Society.—This is the title of a new organization formed in the interests of the temperance cause. The principal and leading spirit in this movement was Rev. Patrick H. Clark, an assistant curate (now in the West) in St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, of which the Rev. Thomas B. McNulty was the pastor, now a resident in the West. His earnest efforts in this direction, and in promoting the welfare of the young people of Brockton, are well remembered by all those with whom he became acquainted. The officers were Rev. Patrick H. Clark, president; Daniel Conelly, vice-president; John J. Morton, recording secretary; Matthew Morris, financial secretary; Patrick Kent, treasurer; Arthur Diamond, Charles L. McCann, Patrick Gilmore, Joseph Murphy, T. J. Smith, directors.

St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Cadets is a collection of two hundred or more boys under fifteen years of age who signed the pledge to abstain from all intoxicating liquors until they arrive to the age of twenty-one years. They were organized on Sunday, May 15, 1881, by Father Doherty.

Independent Order of Good Templars.—TEMPLE LODGE, Campello, instituted Aug. 7, 1871. First officers: William H. Rounds, W. C. T.; Elena McCoy, W. V. T.; George H. Haven, W. C.; S. Nellie Foss, W. S. E. C.; Nathan H. Washburn, W. A. S.; Joseph R. Reach, W. F. S.; Edmuod B. Fanning, W. Treas.; William H. Thayer, W. M.; Lydia C. Davenport, W. D. M.; Emily C. Wood, W. I. G.; George C. Sawyer, W. O. G.; Mary G. Washburn, W. R. H. S.; Rebecca M. Davenport, W. L. H. S.; George Churchill, P. W. C. T. George P. Hawkes, G. W. S., George S. Ball, G. W. C. T.

Good Samaritan Society.—This was an organization established October, 1876, in the interest of general reform work, particularly temperance, lectures, and entertainments, literary and musical; a reading-room was established, and regular club meetings were held in the reading-room on Wednesday evenings. The different religious societies have kindly co-operated in their efforts at reform work of every kind with this society. The society had the names of over six hundred on their pledge, very few of which have ever been violated.

A similar organization was established at Campello, doing the same kind of work, having the same object in view; viz., that of general reform work, in which political or sectarian discussion is prohibited by their constitution.

The Swedish Benevolent Society of Brockton, organized Jan. 3, 1882.—The aim and object of this society is to promote friendship and true patriotic love between all of Scandinavian birth or nationality, to encourage virtue and honesty, to promote honor for ourselves and our native and adopted countries, to advise and assist each other in need and sickness, according to circumstances governed by a code of by-laws adopted by this society Jan. 11, 1882.

The following are the officers of the society, elected March 29, 1882: Frank H. Lawson, president; Sophia Johnson, Andrew Benson, vice-presidents; G. H. Olstrom, secretary; Charles Hellberg, assistant secretary; A. J. Rydqvist, treasurer; Hugo Sletten-green, Gus. A. Hellberg, Sigrid Wennström, reception committee; Martin Löfström, musical director. Meet in Clark's block the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month, at eight o'clock P.M.

M. C. O. F. (ST. THOMAS COURT, No. 29) organized and constituted on Thursday evening, Feb. 17, 1881, in Hibernian Hall, by the Worthy High Chief Ranger Sullivan, of Boston, with the following officers: Patrick Gilmore, C. R.; Daniel Connolly, V. C. R.; James P. Conley, R. Sec.; Philip McDonald, F. Sec.; Patrick McCarthy, Treas.; Thomas J. Smith, S. C.; Thomas Nolan, J. C.; John Morton, I. S.; David Burke, O. S.; Charles L. McCann, James Dorgan, Patrick Brennan, Trustees; Benedict Donovan, M.D., Physician.

The Massachusetts Court, Order of Foresters, above named, is similar in its objects to the Knights of Honor, one thousand dollars being secured to the heirs of the deceased member or whoever is designated. There were about thirty members belonging to this organization, who met in Hibernian Hall twice every month. The name of "St. Thomas" was given in honor of Rev. Thomas B. McNulty, who has for a long time been the pastor of St. Patrick's Church.

Sanctuary Society is composed of several hundred female members, and through their personal efforts have collected a large library. Any person belonging to the Catholic Church can have the books on payment of one cent per day for each book taken.

Ancient Order of Hibernians (DIVISION No. 1) organized Jan. 9, 1875. Officers for 1884: Florence McGill, Pres.; Michael O'Neil, Vice-Pres.; John Kenny, Sec.; T. F. Connelly, Fin. Sec.; Michael Casey, Treas.

Spiritualist Society.—A society under this name has been organized in 1884, having the following officers, viz.: Rev. Samuel L. Beal, Pres.; William Osborne, Vice-Pres.; James A. Kent, Sec. and Treas.; Theodore Loring, Charles Delano, W. Dickerman, and James A. Kent, Exec. Com.; Mrs. M. A. Dickerman, Mrs. Rogers, and Mrs. Arabel Ames, Aud. Com.

Society of Progressive Spiritualists.—A society with the above name was organized on the seventh day of April, 1878, with officers as follows: H. F. Bird, Pres.; Dr. F. Webster, Vice-Pres.; E. G. Sparrow, Sec.; Nelson Huckins, Treas.; Nelson Huckins, Dr. F. Webster, and A. Ames, Trustees; L. W. Hill, Collector. Meetings in Cunningham Hall.

The Woman's Mission Society is connected with the Congregational Churches of the city. President, Mrs. Albert Keith; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. George E. Martin, Mrs. F. A. Warfield, Mrs. John T. Blades; Secretary, Mrs. George C. Cary; Treasurer, Miss Mary K. Keith; Executive Committee, Mrs. C. Bradford, Mrs. O. Crossman, Miss Cornelia Eddy, Mrs. S. Foss; Collectors, Mrs. Jane P. Reed, Mrs. Minot Niles, Mrs. Charles Curtis, Mrs. Almiron Leach, Miss Annie Moors, Miss Mary C. Keith.

Brockton Woman's Suffrage Association.—On Monday, Oct. 2, 1876, the friends of female suffrage met in Lower Music Hall, David L. Cowell, Esq., presiding, to listen to an address by Miss Matilda Hindman, after which a form of constitution was presented, which set forth the objects of this organization, whose principles may best be told in the two following articles:

"1st. Believing in the natural equality of the two sexes and their consequent right to equal elective and legal privileges, and in the wrong inflicted upon women by withholding the same, resulting in incalculable loss to society, the undersigned agree to unite in an association to be called 'The Brockton Woman's Suffrage Association.'

"2d. The object of this Association shall be to effect by moral and political effort, changes in public sentiment, resulting in the acknowledged right of suffrage for women, and placing her in all respects on an equal footing with man."

This constitution was adopted, and twenty-five names placed upon the list of members. The officers elected were Mrs. Lydia B. Willis, president; Mrs. Milley Estes, Lewis Ford, Rev. S. L. Beal, Mrs. Jason Packard, vice-presidents; Richard Humphrey, treasurer; Rev. C. M. Winchester, secretary. The president, treasurer, secretary, Edward E. Bennett, and Ellen Slade constitute the executive committee.

Enterprise Association, Campello.—This is an association of persons leagued together for the purpose of beautifying and ornamenting the village with shade and ornamental trees, and otherwise improving the appearance of that portion where they reside, and in which they have a deep interest.

Campello Sportsmen's Club.—Several parties interested in shooting and practice in glass-ball matches met together and formed a club under the above name. President, Henry F. Thayer; Treasurer, Frank P. Keith; Secretary, J. D. Fiske. The secretary, treasurer, president, Howard P. Keith, and J. E. Carr, were executive committee. Members: Henry F. Thayer, Frank P. Keith, J. D. Fiske, J. E. Carr, Howard P. Keith, Manuel P. Nevis, Charles E. Tribou, Charles E. Martin, Paul Hartwig, Henry B. Wood, Alton M. Thayer, Charles J. Turner, Walton E. Keith, Joseph A. Jennings, Harry A. Copeland, Stephen M. Thresher, W. Dexter Pierce, William F. Ryder, Japhet B. Packard, L. Sumner Packard, Warren R. Thayer, Edmund Baker, O. G. Tinkham.

The ground used for practice by the club was a lot east of the river at Campello, on land belonging to Nathan Keith.

City Bicycle Club is the largest organization of the kind in Southeastern Massachusetts. It was formed in 1881. President, William Briggs; Captain, George P. Johnson; Secretary and Treasurer, Fred.

M. Bixby. Their present headquarters is in Theatre Building, East Elm Street, which was opened to their use Jan. 1, 1883. Starting with fourteen original members, it has increased to forty, and growing in numbers.

This city has two other clubs, the "Brockton" and "Union."

Brockton Bicycle Club, organized June 1, 1879, twenty-two members. William H. Bryant, president; Fred. B. Howard, secretary and treasurer; F. H. Johnson, captain.

Brockton Fanciers' Club was formed Nov. 11, 1878. It is an association of persons interested in the improvement of poultry, pigeons, and pets, etc., and in holding exhibitions for the purpose of encouraging the special raising of the best varieties. President, William Rankin; Vice-President, J. W. Freeman; Corresponding Secretary, Abbott W. Packard; Recording Secretary, R. W. Shaw; Treasurer, W. F. Field; Executive Committee, Bradford Wild, G. T. Randall, W. H. Sylvester, L. A. Tower, of Brockton, and Ozias Millett, of South Abington.

Fire Department.—Water is the grand agent that nature has provided for the extinguishment of flames, and the different ways and means for applying it with effect have been sought for in every civilized country. In the absence of more suitable implements, buckets and other portable vessels of capacity at hand have always been seized to throw water upon fire, and when used with celerity and presence of mind in the early commencement of a fire have often been sufficient, but when a conflagration extends beyond their reach the fate of the burning pile too often resembles that of the ships of "Æneas,"—

"Nor buckets poured, nor strength of human hand,
Can the victorious element withstand."

Hence the necessity of some device by which a stream of water may be forced from a distance on flames. Ingenious men of former days were stimulated to an unusual degree to invent machines for that purpose. The first machine used for throwing water upon fire was the common syringe. Fire was the most destructive agent employed in ancient wars, hence every effort that could be made by ingenuity for protection from the assaults of pitch, oil, and fire, that were thrown from the ramparts, was made.

The introduction of fire-engines was an important event in the country, and indicates a certain degree of refinement in civilization and an advanced state of the mechanic arts. If we review the progress of fire-engines in modern times, from the syringe to the splendid engine of to-day, we cannot fail to observe that progress marks the age. At first was used the single cylinder, then the double cylinder and air-chamber, which was first used in 1825.<sup>1</sup>

Fire-Engines.—The first fire-engine in Brockton was purchased by subscription in 1827, and was owned by a private company. The following is a copy of the original subscription paper :

"This proposes a method for obtaining a fire engine, to be kept near the road betwixt the Old Meeting House and Mr. Whitman's office, for the use of the inhabitants of North Bridgewater who are liable to suffer loss by fire. And to accomplish said object, twenty-three shares, valued at twenty dollars each, are offered to those who may feel interested to become proprietors thereof. Each subscriber will annex to his name how many shares he takes, and if less than one, what part. And we, the subscribers, do severally feel under obligations to pay, agreeably to our subscription, to the proprietors, treasurer, or agent duly authorized by a majority of proprietors to receive their money, and to procure their engine.

"North Bridgewater, February 10, 1827."

Subscribers' names.	No. of Shares.	Subscribers' names.	No. of Shares.
Eliab Whitman.....	One.	Eliphalet Kingman.....	One-half.
Nathan Perry.....	"	Bela Keith.....	"
Edward Southworth.....	"	Ephraim Howard.....	"
Silas Packard.....	"	William Faxon.....	"
Jabez Field.....	"	Nathan Jones.....	"
Benjamin Kingman.....	"	David Packard.....	"
John Wales.....	"	John Packard.....	"
David Ames.....	"	Nathaniel H. Cross.....	"
Rosseter Jones.....	"	Charles Packard.....	"
Micah Faxon.....	"	Hiram Atherton.....	"
Nathan Hayward.....	"	Azor Packard.....	One-quarter.
Arza Leonard.....	"	Josiah W. Kingman.....	"
Azel Wood.....	"	Benjamin Stoddard.....	"
Lemuel French.....	"	John Crafts.....	"
Zibeon French.....	"	Thomas Wales.....	Three-quarters.
Perez Crocker.....	"	Nath. B. Harlow.....	One-quarter.
John Battles.....	"	Sidney Perkins.....	"

This engine was called the "Union, No. 1," and was a bucket-tub to be filled by hand. The machine passed out of the proprietors' hands to the town, on condition that the town would put the engine in perfect order, and keep it in order for use at fires. They also furnished a hook-and-ladder carriage, with fire-hooks, ladders, chains, etc.

The above constituted all the facilities for extinguishing fires previous to 1845. At that date the town, finding the alarms of fire growing more numerous as new buildings were erected, and were so near together, "voted to procure two new and improved suction fire-engines." This vote passed Feb. 9, 1846. The town appropriated one thousand dollars, provided the citizens would subscribe one thousand dollars more. The subscription was promptly raised, and Benjamin Kingman and Amasa Edson appointed a committee to purchase the machines. Previous to this time the management at fires was under the direction of "fire wards" appointed by the town.

The two new engines were manufactured by Messrs.

<sup>1</sup> The first fire-engine in use in this country was imported from Holland for the city of New York, in December, 1731.

T. & E. Thayer, costing seven hundred and fifty dollars each, and were completed and received Feb. 6, 1847. One of them was called "Protector," and was kept in the Centre Village; the other, called "Enterprise," was located at Campello.

The "fire department" of 1865 was organized by an act of incorporation by the Legislature of Massachusetts, March 18, 1846, and at the time of the receipt of the two new engines consisted of the following: one old engine, the "Union," Capt. Henry L. Bryant; "Protector, No. 3," Capt. B. P. Lucas,—motto, "We will endeavor;" "Enterprise, No. 2," Capt. Aaron B. Drake,—motto, "Always ready;" one hook-and-ladder carriage, with the fixtures, and one old and two new engine-houses.

In 1850 the town purchased a large engine of John Agnew, of Philadelphia, Pa., costing seventeen hundred dollars, which was called the "Protector, No. 3." The old engine of that name was changed to "Relief, No. 4,"—motto, "Our aim, the public good." In May, 1853, a new machine was purchased by private subscription, by the name of "Independence, No. 5,"—motto, "Still live." About the same time, the "Relief Engine, No. 4," was sold to the town of Randolph, and located at South Randolph. In the fall of 1853 a new engine was purchased of L. Button & Co., of Waterford, N. Y., named "Mayflower, No. 4," which name was changed to "Columbian, No. 5,"—motto, "On the alert."

In the spring of 1861 the town voted to sell "Protector, No. 3," which was done during the year, by exchange with William Jeffers, of Pawtucket, for one of his engines, using the same name and number. In 1854 "Enterprise Engine, No. 2," was transferred to the "West Shares," or Northwest Bridgewater, and the name changed to "Niagara, No. 6." During that year a new engine was purchased of L. Button & Co., of Waterford, N. Y., to take the place of the old engine, adopting the same name, and was located at Campello. In 1865 the "Niagara Engine" was sold to go to South Easton, and a new engine was purchased at Charlestown, named "Hancock, No. 1."

In 1865 the fire department of Brockton consisted of "Hancock Engine, No. 1," Capt. Isaac H. Hartwell, located at the "West Shares,"—motto, "Our aim, the public good;" "Enterprise Engine, No. 2," Capt. William Stevens, located at Campello,—motto, "Always ready;" "Protector Engine, No. 3," Capt. Henry B. Packard, located in the Centre Village,—motto, "We will endeavor;" "Columbian Engine, No. 5," Capt. E. Z. Stevens, also located in the Centre Village,—motto, "On the alert;" and one hook-and-ladder carriage and three engine-houses.

On Saturday, the 21st of October, 1865, the fire companies made a trial of fire-engines for a silver trumpet. "Protector" took the prize, playing horizontally two hundred and twenty feet.

The fire department, as constituted in 1884, consists of three steam fire engines, with fifteen men each, three extinguishers, one hook-and-ladder company, and one hand-engine.

The board of engineers are Davis R. Eldred, assisted by Nehemiah S. Holmes, Charles Eaton, Zenas L. Marston, and Alexander Fanning. Nehemiah S. Holmes, clerk.

The fire department of Brockton has ever had a good reputation for efficiency, and when it is considered how many wooden buildings are compactly located, the city has been remarkably fortunate in not having many conflagrations.

Fire-Alarm.—The city has an excellent system of fire-alarms through its territory, which facilitates the getting to fires at the earliest possible moment.

Brockton Special Fire Police.—This is an organization of persons appointed by the mayor and aldermen, whose duty it shall be, as soon as an alarm of fire is given, to repair to the spot designated by the fire-alarm, and take charge of the personal property in and around the burning buildings, subject to orders from the chief engineer.

This is a very valuable aid to the fire department, and prevents depredation and all sorts of mischief.

The force for 1883 was as follows:

David Eldred, captain; Thomas W. Kennedy, first assistant; Arthur P. Alden, second assistant; Alden W. Skinner, clerk and treasurer; Clarence Gill, David Glover, and Michael O. Neal. Members, William Brett, John Dean, George F. Tinkham, Alexander Fraser, John S. Perry, E. J. Hartford, Oliver L. Joy, Rufus E. Packard, Elmer L. Fellows, Charles N. Hudson, Melvin F. Packard, Jason H. Raymond, J. Emery Merchant.

Railroads.—March 25, 1845, the Legislature of Massachusetts granted a charter to Messrs. Artemas Hale, Nahum Stetson, Aaron Hubart, Solomon Ager, Benjamin B. Howard, Dwelly Fobes, Edward Southworth, Benjamin Kingman, Henry Blanchard, Ebenezer Alden, Royal Turner, and David Blanchard, and their associates and successors, to build a railroad from the Old Colony Railroad at South Braintree, running through Randolph, Stoughton, and Brockton, to Bridgewater, to connect with the Middleboro' and Bridgewater Railroad, under the name of the "Randolph and Bridgewater Railroad Corporation." The road was finished and commenced running cars to Brockton in 1846. Previous to this the "Fall River Branch Railroad" had been in existence for some time from Myrick's Station, on the "Taunton Branch Railroad," to Fall River. Another short road was chartered to run from Bridgewater to Myrick's Station, to connect with the "Fall River Branch Railroad," thus making a continuous route from the Old Colony Road at South Braintree to Fall River, and three different corporations. These were united in one, under the name of the "Fall River Railroad Corporation," by which it was known until by an act of the Legislature, March 25, 1854, the "Old Colony Railroad Company" and the "Fall River Railroad Company" were made into one corporation, under the name of the "Old Colony and Fall River Railroad Corporation." The road has since changed its name, upon the completion of the road to Newport, to "Old Colony and Newport Railway Company." The city has now direct communication with Boston, Fall River, Newport, Middleboro', and towns on Cape Cod, and also to Fairhaven. Mr. Joseph O. Bennett was the first station agent at the Centre, who was succeeded by George W. Bryant, Calvin Keith, and J. Herman French, who is now the superintendent.

There is another depot at Campello, one and a half miles south of the Centre. Varanes Wales was the first station agent, and he was succeeded by Isaac T. Packard and Nelson J. Foss.

During the year 1845 a charter was applied for, to build a branch road from Stoughton to North Bridgewater (now Brockton), with a capital of two hundred thousand dollars.

Brockton Gas-Light Company.—During the year 1858 several of the citizens in the thickest settled portions of the town began to discuss the subject of a better means of lighting the stores, factories, and dwelling-houses; or, in other words, the people wanted more light, and as is always the case when people wish for light it can be had. For this purpose a few public-spirited individuals were called together July 22, 1859, to see what measures it was thought best to adopt. Subscription papers were opened, and stock taken to the amount of twelve thousand dollars, divided into shares of one hundred dollars each. A company was organized Sept. 5, 1859, with the following officers: William F. Brett, president; David F. Studley, treasurer; Noah Chesman, H. W. Robinson, and Jonas R. Perkins, Esq., directors.

The present officers are Noah Chesman, president; Henry W. Robinson, treasurer; Jonas R. Perkins, clerk; David Brayton, superintendent. Office on Montello, near School Street.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company.—This company organized March 5, 1883, with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars, for the purpose of conducting business in Brockton. The following is the list of officers: President, Charles G. White, of Boston; Clerk and Treasurer, William L. Garrison; Directors, George P. Denny, James P. Tolman, Frank J. Coburn, Calvin B. Prescott, and F. G. White; Manager, W. J. Jenks.

On Monday evening, Oct. 1, 1883, at quarter-past six o'clock P.M., the above system of lighting was successfully introduced into the city of Brockton, and has now become one of the principal institutions of the city. The reputation of Brockton is second to none in introducing the best and newest of all improvements and in sustaining all well-directed enterprises. That there is a growing feeling in favor of electricity in Brockton is evident by the increased demand for its introduction into private houses and stores, and that it will come into general use we have no doubt.

The central station or headquarters of this company is at the corner of Montello and Lincoln Streets, where the company are provided with a commodious brick building and steam-power of the most approved kind.

Jenny Electric Light and Power Company, of Brockton, organized May 2, 1884, capital fifty thousand dollars, located at the corner of Montello and Crescent Streets. George E. Keith, president; Henry E. Lincoln, clerk and treasurer; George E. Keith, Henry E. Lincoln, Ziba C. Keith, Col. John J. Whipple, directors. Works in a building one hundred by thirty-five feet, on Montello, south of Crescent Street.

Lights have been placed on the streets by this company within a few weeks, and have proved highly satisfactory. There are a large number of prominent firms who have signified their intention to use this light.

Brockton Street Railway Company.—This corporation was duly organized Jan. 8, 1881, with the following officers: George F. Hall, Henry Towle, and Fred. Nourse, of Boston, Charles R. Ford and Ziba C. Keith, of Brockton, directors. George F. Hall was elected president, and Fred. Nourse clerk. The capital stock was forty thousand dollars.

The cars ran over the road for the first time on Wednesday, July 6, 1881, and commenced regular trips from the beginning, being well patronized. Cars were decorated on the occasion of opening of the road, which at first extended from Clifton Avenue, near the southerly boundary of the town in Campello, through the main thoroughfare of the city as far as the manufactory of Enos H. Reynolds, at the north end. Trips were made every twenty minutes. At first six box and three open cars, and thirty-nine horses, were required to run the road in a proper manner.

At the commencement of running the horse-cars, there was a line of large omnibuses running from Campello to Brockton, which the railroad company purchased, including the horses, coaches, harness, etc., belonging to Pendar & Rogers. The company also leased the stable of the proprietors for five years for the purposes of the new railroad. Horace B. Rogers immediately took the management of the road as superintendent, for which position he was admirably qualified, and under whose direction the road has proved a success. In the early part of 1884, the people of East Stoughton wishing for accommodations and convenient connection with Brockton, the company extended their track to the Randolph line, thus making a complete line from Randolph, through the main streets of East Stoughton and Brockton to West Bridgewater. This corporation is very judiciously managed, and has proved remunerative to the stockholders, and tends very much to equalize the different sections of the city, by opening up the vacant lands, and adding to the growth of the same.

North Bridgewater Board of Trade.—This was an organization having for its object the following: "In order to promote the efficiency and extend the usefulness of the business men of North Bridgewater, and in order to secure unity and harmony of action in reference to any initiated or prospective enterprises affecting its welfare, and especially in order to afford a fund of counsel to secure the proper consideration of all questions pertaining to the financial, commercial, and industrial interests of our community, this association on this 29th day of March, 1871, is hereby formed." Meetings were held in Mercantile Building.

At a meeting held on Wednesday evening, April 5, 1871, the following officers were elected: Ellis Packard, president; Henry W. Robinson, Albert Keith, vice-presidents; Ira Copeland, secretary; George E. Bryant, treasurer; Directors, Oakes S. Soule, E. L. Thayer, Edward Southworth, Jr., Rufus P. Kingman, Enos H. Reynolds, Eben G. Rhodes, Charles F. Porter, Nelson J. Foss, Edward Crocker, Charles R. Ford, William W. Cross, Davis S. Packard.

Independent Order of Good Templars.—FRATERNAL LODGE, No. 24.<sup>1</sup>—Many of the earliest efforts in the temperance cause were according to the methods of the Independent Order of Good Templars. Every representative of the Good Templar ideal is an apostle of temperance ideas and principles, and their influence is more widely felt than that of most any other order.

This lodge was constituted Sept. 22, 1860, by the Grand Temple of the Independent Order of Good Templars of the State of Massachusetts, who granted unto the following members to be a lodge, located at North Bridgewater (now Brockton), under the name of Fraternal Lodge, No. 24:

Charter Members.—Isaac T. Packard, George R. Whitney, Clement Ells, C. F. Sylvester, C. G. Keeney, Charles W. Gardner, H. F. Perkins, D. T. Soper, L. Preston Howard, John W. Porter, Robert Clifford, H. C. R. Sherman, Isaac Littlefield, Elizabeth F. Gardner, Catharine P. Cobb, Elizabeth Pierce, L. W. Harmon, A. P. Kingman, Charles N. Pierce, Ephraim Bailey, Hannah Bailey, Jennie Bryant, John Filoon.

Officers.—Isaac T. Packard, W. C. T.; Catharine P. Cobb, W. V. T.; H. C. R. Sherman, Chap.; C. F. Sylvester, Sec.; Hannah Bailey, A. S.; C. G. Kenney, F. S.; A. P. Kingman, Treas.; Charles W. Gardner, Mar.; Maria Fletcher, D. M.; Jennie Bryant, J. G.; John W. Porter, O. G.; Lydia Fuller, R. H. S.; Hattie E. Dealing, L. H. S.; George R. Whitney, P. W. C. T.

A new charter was granted and a new lodge constituted May 20, 1867, with the following membership: Rufus L. Thatcher, Alpheus Holmes, H. H. Filoon, Benjamin P. Lucas, Frank Hervey, N. W. Stoddard, O. B. Hervey, R. L. Thatcher, Jr., Pauline B. Whitney, Wealthy Packard, Catherine P. Cobb, George R. Whitney, Joseph M. Hyde, Julia Hyde, Charles W. Gardner, Betsy Copeland, Abigail Holmes, Hannah Bailey, E. S. Fletcher, M. K. Hayward, George M. Copeland, Nelson Marble, Elizabeth F. Gardner, L. E. Packard, George B. Dunbar, W. Lithgow, G. W. S.; E. S. Mitchell, G. W. C. T.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Brockton as a City—The Inauguration of the First Municipal Government of the City—Inauguration Proceedings—City Charter—City Seal—Wards of the City—City Government and Officers.

Brockton as a City.—In the history of Brockton we have given the incorporation of the original town of Bridgewater, the incorporation of the North <sup>1</sup> Since printing the matter in reference to this lodge on page 706, the above data have been obtained.

Parish, as well as the incorporation of the town of North Bridgewater, and, as this town and Brockton are now in common, it is proper to give a brief account of the present municipality known as the city of Brockton.

From 1821 to 1870 the territory within the limits of Brockton was known as North Bridgewater. During the year 1870 a large number of the citizens began to consider the expediency of a change of name, substituting a shorter name, and one not so easily confounded with other localities similar in their pronunciation. The reasons given were many,—some very good, others of but little account. In the early part of 1871 various names were suggested as being appropriate, among which was the Pilgrim name of "Winslow." At an informal meeting of the friends of a proposition for changing the name, held in the selectmen's room Monday evening, Jan. 23, 1871, several names were suggested, and one or two ballots were taken. The following were among the many proposed: Standish, Madison, Pyrola, Oriole, Langdon, Gaston, Aberdale, Alden, Montello, and Norwood, a decided preference being given to the last mentioned. This meeting ended without definite action.

The next move was a petition signed by nearly two hundred and fifty persons in favor of a change, headed by the name of Hon. Edward Southworth, Jr., and asking for a public meeting, which was held in Murray Hall, Friday evening, Jan. 27, 1871, for a discussion of the whole subject. The town voted February 8th to petition the Legislature to change the name to Standish, as follows:

"To the Hon. Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled:

"The undersigned, in obedience to a vote passed at a town-meeting, held on the 8th day of February, 1871, respectfully petition your honorable body to change the corporate name of our town from North Bridgewater to Standish, and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

"NELSON J. FOSS,

"ISAAC KINGMAN,

"HENRY A. FORD,

"Selectmen of North Bridgewater.

"No. BRIDGEWATER, Feb. 13, 1871."

A numerously-signed petition was also presented to the Committee on Towns of the Legislature, by Welcome H. Wales, Esq., then the representative of the town, in aid of the above petition, as follows:

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives:

"The undersigned legal voters of the town of North Bridgewater endorse the action of the town at a legal meeting held on the 8th of February, instant, in voting to petition the Legislature to change the name of the town.

"CHARLES C. BIXBY & 802 OTHERS."

And afterwards, on the 20th of March, the town reconsidered the vote, and substituted the name of "Stanton," by a vote of 136 for Stanton and 77 for "Standish." A public hearing was held before the legislative committee March 16, 1871, and at that time it seemed as though the name of "Standish" would be adopted. But at a meeting of the committee held later a new name was suggested, and a meeting was called to act upon a new name. This meeting was held March 20, 1871, and the following article (9th) was taken up and acted upon as follows:

"To see if the Town will vote to substitute, in the petition already presented to the Legislature for 'Standish,' some more simple and desirable name as the name of the Town."

"Voted, That it is the Sense of the Town to Substitute the name of 'Stanton' for 'Standish' as the corporate name of the Town."

"Voted, To instruct our Representative to present to the committee of the Legislature on Towns a copy of the previous Vote."

This action suggested another name, and the following petition was brought to the attention of the committee:

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives:

"The undersigned, Legal Voters of the Town of North Bridgewater, respectfully pray your honorable body to substitute the name of 'Amburg' in place of Stanton, in the petition already presented to the Legislature for a change in the Corporate name of North Bridgewater.

"L. D. HERVEY & 926 OTHERS."

A hearing was had, with all these petitions and the original petition of the selectmen, by vote of the town before them, and, after all parties had been heard, they took the view that as the town had originally voted for "Standish," they thought a petition from a corporate body in public town-meeting, duly notified, was of more weight than a lot of petitions handed around for signatures, and therefore reported a bill, of which the following is a copy:

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

"In the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

"An act to Change the Name of the Town of North Bridgewater.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by authority of the same, as follows:

"SECTION 1. The town of North Bridgewater shall take the name of Standish.

"SECT. 2. This shall not take effect unless accepted by a majority of the legal voters of said town, present and voting thereon by ballot, at a special meeting held upon notice given at least seven days before the time of said meeting, and the polls shall be opened at nine o'clock in the forenoon of said day, and shall not be closed before four o'clock in the afternoon of said day, nor remain open longer than six o'clock in the afternoon of said day.

"SECT. 3. It shall be the duty of the selectmen of said town to certify and return as soon as may be the number of ballots in favor of the acceptance of this act, and the number of ballots against the acceptance of the same, to the Secretary of the Commonwealth; and if it shall appear that a majority of such ballots is in favor of the acceptance of this act, the Secretary shall immediately issue and publish his certificate declaring this act to have been duly accepted.

"SECT. 4. Said meeting shall be held within ninety days from the passage of this act.

"SECT. 5. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

"House of Representatives,
"April 18, 1871.

"Passed to be enacted.

"HARVEY JEWELL, Speaker.
"In Senate, April 18, 1871.

"Passed to be enacted.

"HORACE H. COOLIDGE, President.
"April 19, 1871.

"Approved.

"WILLIAM CLAFLIN."

The citizens of the town were not a little surprised at the result of the committee's conclusions. However, at a town-meeting held on Tuesday, May 9, 1871, the number of votes passed upon the acceptance or rejection of the act, entitled "An Act to change the name of the Town of North Bridgewater," was 887, of which 460 were for acceptance and 427 for rejection.

We next find a movement to have the name of the town changed to Brockton, and this time it was successful.

Here follows a copy of the petition to the General Court of Massachusetts by the selectmen of the town by a special vote of the town:

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled:

"The undersigned Selectmen of the Town of North Bridgewater, in accordance with a vote passed by the Town at a meeting held on the sixth day of February instant, hereby petition your Honorable body to pass an Act changing the corporate name of our Town to 'Brockton.'

"ISAAC KINGMAN,
"HENRY A. FORD,
"W. H. WALES,

"Selectmen of North Bridgewater.

"NORTH BRIDGEWATER, Feb. 7, 1874."

After a hearing in the matter, during which several petitions were presented, and after much controversy, the result was as follows:

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 13, 1874.

"The Committee on Towns, to whom was committed the petition of the selectmen of North Bridgewater that the corporate name of said town may be changed from North Bridgewater to Brockton; and the petition of C. C. Bixby and 1021 others, of Isaac Kingman and 33 others, and of George H. Gurney and 102 others, in aid of said petition of the selectmen; and also the petition of F. A. Thayer and 314 others, for a change of the name of North Bridgewater to Allerton; together with the remonstrance of Alpheus Gurney and 165 others, of Lyman Clark and 162 others, against the change of the name of North Bridgewater to Brockton, have duly considered the same and report the accompanying Bill.

"Per order,

"S. S. GINNODO."

"CHAPTER cxliii. of the Acts of 1874.

"AN ACT to authorize the Town of North Bridgewater to change its Name.

"Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

"SECT. 1. The town of North Bridgewater may take the name of Brockton, Allerton, or Avon.

"SECT. 2. A special meeting of the legal voters of said town shall be held on the first Tuesday of May of the current year, for the purpose of determining which of said three names shall be the name of said town. The voting shall be by ballot, and each voter may vote for one of said names only, and any ballot having thereon any other name or more than one of said names shall not be counted. The polls shall be opened at nine o'clock in the forenoon of said day, and shall be closed at seven o'clock in the afternoon of said day.

"SECT. 3. It shall be the duty of the selectmen of said town to certify and return, as soon as may be, the number of ballots in favor of each of said three names to the secretary of the Commonwealth, who shall immediately issue and publish his certificate, declaring the name which shall be found to have the most ballots in its favor to have been adopted by said town, and the same shall thereupon become and be the name of said town.

"SECT. 4. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

"Approved March 28, 1874.

"NORTH BRIDGEWATER, May 5, 1874.

"To the Honorable Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts:

"The undersigned Selectmen of North Bridgewater hereby certify that in accordance with a recent Act of the Legislature a town meeting was held on this fifth day of May, 1874, for the purpose of choosing either 'Brockton,' 'Allerton,' or 'Avon' as the future name of the town, their choice being by ballot. And we further certify that the whole number of ballots thrown at said meeting for that purpose was 1491. Of this number ten hundred and eighty (1080) were for 'Brockton,' and four hundred and eleven (411) were for 'Avon.'

"HENRY A. FORD,
"ISAAC KINGMAN,
"WELCH H. WALES,

"Selectmen of North Bridgewater."

Filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Feb. 6, 1874.

In accordance with the act above mentioned, on the 6th day of May, 1874, the secretary issued his proclamation declaring "Brockton" to have been chosen by the town.

City of Brockton.—The first effort made in the direction of obtaining a city charter was at an informal gathering of a few of the leading citizens of the town held in the office of Elbridge L. Brown, Esq., civil engineer, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 21, 1880. Augustus T. Jones (chairman), Baalis Sanford, Jr. (secretary), Dr. Loring W. Puffer, Charles R. Ford, Lyman Clark, Charles W. Sumner, John J. Whipple, William W. Cross, Dr. Henry H. Filoon, Charles C. Bixby, Francis B. Washburn, F. B. Gardner, E. G. Rhodes, Bradford E. Jones, Lucius Richmond, O. O.

Patten, George E. Bryant, and others took the lead in expressing their views, and arrangements were made for a full meeting to be held in the Opera-House, Dec. 29, 1880, at which, after remarks by several persons, George M. Copeland offered the following motion, which was carried without opposition, viz.:

"That the selectmen of Brockton be requested to issue their warrant for a town-meeting for the purpose of formally applying in their corporate capacity to the incoming Legislature for a city charter, said meeting to be held within ten days."

Agreeably to this vote, the selectmen called a town-meeting on 10th day of January, 1881, at which it was voted that the selectmen be instructed to petition the Legislature for a city charter.

The following is a copy of the petition as presented to the Legislature:

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled:

"Respectfully represent the undersigned Selectmen of the Town of Brockton, that at a legal meeting of the inhabitants of said town, held on the tenth day of January, 1881, it was voted,—

"To instruct their Selectmen to petition the Legislature to grant to the inhabitants of the town of Brockton a City Charter.

"Wherefore, the undersigned respectfully petition your Honorable bodies to grant to said inhabitants a Charter whereby the Town of Brockton may become the City of Brockton, and establish a city form of government.

"WILLIAM W. CROSS.
 "HENRY A. FORN.
 "HENRY H. PACKARD.
 "WILLIAM S. GREEN.
 "HENRY E. LINCOLN.
 "Selectmen of Brockton.

"BROCKTON, Jan. 29, 1881."

"COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

"SECRETARY'S DEPARTMENT, Boston, Nov. 1st, 1884.

"A true copy.

"Attest,

"HENRY B. PEIRCE,
 "Secretary of the Commonwealth."

A bill was reported, Feb. 28, 1881, and the act of incorporation of the "City of Brockton" passed April 9, 1881.

Agreeably to the terms of the act, the inhabitants of the town of Brockton met in the Opera-House, on Monday, the 23d day of May, 1881, at two o'clock P.M., and voted on the acceptance of the act of the Legislature for 1881, chapter one hundred and ninety-two.

DeWitt Clinton Packard, Esq., town clerk, filed the following vote in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth, viz.:

Yes.....	729
No.....	240
Whole number of ballots.....	969

The Inauguration of the First Municipal Government of the City of Brockton.—Brockton had a splendid day for her first inauguration, the brilliant sunlight reflected on the freshly fallen snow setting everything in a glory of light, while the crisp, bracing air seemed specially designed to raise the spirits of every citizen up to the standard of the day. At half-past seven o'clock in the morning the bells of the First and Porter Congregational Churches at the north end, and the South Congregational and Methodist Churches at Campello united in merry peals for half an hour to celebrate the happy event.

The opera-house was nearly filled some time before the exercises were begun, and soon after the programme was opened all the seats of the parquet and nearly every one in the gallery were occupied, and not a few found standing-room in the outer aisles. The centre section of the parquet seats were reserved for the members of the new City Council and the invited guests of the occasion, while the stage was occupied by the out-going town officers, distinguished guests, and the band. In the foreground of the platform on the left sat chairman H. H. Packard, and his associates on the board of selectmen, Rev. Warren Goddard, Hon. Jonathan White, ex-Selectmen Whipple and Cross, Rev. H. L. Kelsey, Judge Perkins, and Bradford Kingman, Esq. On the right were ranged, as honored guests of the day, some of the venerable citizens of the town, including Father Simeon Packard, the only man present who voted at the first town-meeting held after North Bridgewater was incorporated, Josiah W. Kingman, Esq., Capt. Henry French, Augustus Jones, Deacon Galen Pratt, William Faxon, Addison Shaw, Daniel Ford, Elbridge G. Lincoln, Deacon Elbridge H. Packard, Lyman Clark, Deacon Cary Howard, Frederick Howard, Deacon Alpheus Alden; in the centre sat Governor Long and Mayor-elect Keith, who were greeted as they came upon the platform with a strain of "Hail to the Chief" from the band, and enthusiastic cheers from the audience.

Inauguration Proceedings.—Promptly at 10 o'clock Chairman H. H. Packard rose, and, calling the assemblage to order, said he held in his hand the act of the Legislature incorporating the city of Brockton, which was accepted by vote of the town on the 23d of May last, and which began a change from a town to a city form of government, which was now about to be consummated by the inauguration of the officers elected under its provisions. Before bidding adieu to the town government, the speaker said it seemed fitting to glance at some points in the history of the town which were of peculiar interest at this time. This Mr. Packard did in a very interesting manner, reviewing briefly the history of the town from its establishment, in 1821, to the election of its first city government, presenting in detail some of the most important salient events in the interval.

At the close of Mr. Packard's address the band played the overture, "L'Espoir de L'Alsace," after which Rev. H. L. Kelsey, of the First Congregational Church, offered an earnest prayer, fervently imploring the divine guidance and blessing upon the young city, and the members of the new government, to the end that the best good of the people may be conserved, and God's will be done through their ministrations.

Henry A. Ford, Esq., the clerk of the retiring Board of Selectmen, then read the record of the vote at the first city election, showing that the total vote for Ziba C. Keith, for mayor, was 1371, and for all others 1075. The votes for members of the City Council were similarly given.

Chairman Packard next called the list of aldermen and common councilmen-elect, who, as their names were called, rose to their places in the front sections of the orchestra seats. The chairman then escorted the mayor-elect to the front of the stage, and his introduction of him to the City Council as the first mayor of the first city of Plymouth County was received with cheers. He then placed in his hands the charter of the city, and with it the interests and future welfare of the young city, hoping that under his administration it might increase in prosperity and add new lustre to its name.

Judge J. R. Perkins then proceeded to administer the oath of office to the mayor first, then to the aldermen, and last to the common councilmen, the ceremony being performed in so solemn and impressive a manner as to leave a deep impression upon the audience, who listened to it with the most rapt attention. This ceremony over, the mayor and City Council resumed their seats, and after the playing of "The Flowers of Alsace," by the band, Mr. Keith proceeded to read his inaugural address, which follows in full:

MAYOR KEITH'S ADDRESS.

"Gentlemen of the City Council:

"As we are about to assume the duties imposed upon us by the suffrages of our fellow-citizens, it is befitting that we should raise our thank-offering for the prosperity of our town during these threescore years, and that we should invoke the Divine blessing for the future welfare of our city.

"As this day marks a new era in our municipal career, it may not be unprofitable to review in a brief manner the history of our town from the period of its settlement to the present time, to mark the great changes which two centuries have wrought, and thereby prepare ourselves the more fully to realize the trusts and responsibilities committed to our hands.

"On a small rocky hill, anciently called Sachem's Rock, a little south of the former site of Whitman's mill, in the present town of East Bridgewater, on the 23d of March, 1649, were assembled a party of men representing on the one side the proprietors of a plantation granted them by the Old Colony Court at Plymouth, on the other the Indian sachem Ousamequin, afterward and better known as Massasoit, who was present to execute a deed of a tract of land called Satucket, described in this instrument as 'extending in the length and breadth thereof as followeth, that is to say: from the wear [weir] at Satucket seven miles due east, and from the said wear seven miles due west, and from the said wear seven miles due north, and from the said wear seven miles due south, to have and to hold to Miles Standish, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth, in behalf of all the townsmen of the town of Duxbury, to them and their heirs forever. In consideration of this bargain and sale, Miles Standish, Samuel Nash, and Constant Southworth bind themselves to pay for the same seven coats (a yard and a half in a coat), 9 hatchets, 8 hoes, 20 knives, 4 moose skins, 10½ yards of cotton.' This, then, was the original price paid for what now constitutes Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater, Brockton, and a part of Abington.

"Eleven years later, in June, 1656, Bridgewater was incorporated into a distinct township, being the first interior town in the Old Colony. Each settler had at first a grant of a house-lot of six acres on the Town River, the first lots being taken in what is now West Bridgewater, where also the first houses were built and the first improvements made. Hardly had this settlement made a beginning when the war, known as the King Philip's, burst upon them. Being wholly an interior settlement, and remote from their friends on the seaboard, they were strongly urged to desert their dwellings and repair to the better protected towns by the coast. This, however, they resolutely refused to do, but kept their ground, defended their homes, and encouraged and assisted other towns to do the same.

"In early times the history of the church was the history of the town, hence the frequent reference in early records to parishes and precincts. Previous to 1716 Bridgewater had but one place of religious worship, but in June of that year the General Court incorporated a new parish, which was called the South. From this time the old parish took the name of the North, and comprised the territory of what is now Brockton and West Bridgewater.

"No settlements are known to have been made in the present city of Brockton prior to the year 1700, but very soon after this period settlements began to extend northward, and had increased to such an extent that in 1738 54 individuals belonging in the northerly part of the parish, feeling that 'by reason of the great distance but few of their families could attend public worship in the West Precinct,' set forth their grievances in a petition to the General Court praying that 'they might be set off as a distinct and separate township,' which petition was so far granted as to allow them the powers and privileges usually given to parishes. For fifty-five years thereafter the people of the North Parish remained apparently contented in their connection with the other parishes of the town. In 1793, however the desire to become a separate township became so strong that steps were taken looking towards the incorporation of a town, including, as was proposed in this instance, the West and North Parishes. This failed, as did similar attempts in 1814 and 1816.

"At a meeting held May 5, 1818, the question of a division of the old town of Bridgewater was practically settled by a vote of 112 in favor to 19 against, and at a meeting held March 25, 1819, the parish voted to petition 'the next session of the Legislature for a division of the town.' This petition was duly presented, and an act to establish the town of North Bridgewater was passed June 15, 1821. The first town-meeting after the incorporation was held July 4, 1821. Joseph Sylvester, Esq., was chosen moderator, and Col. Edward Southworth, town clerk. Abel Kingman, Esq., Howard Cary, Esq., and Capt. Zachariah Gurney were chosen selectmen. One at least who took part in that first town-meeting sixty years ago, and a few others who were old enough to be present, are with us to-day. Proud are we to welcome them to this platform, men whose interest in the welfare and improvement of our beloved town has ever been active, and which, in 1881, is still unabated! But how few! Many, so many, have fallen by the way until not a score remain. Yet we know these hearts thrill with pride and gratitude that a sparing mercy has permitted them to see this day and allowed them to witness these inaugural ceremonies.

"As to-day we part with all these old township associations and assume a place in the sisterhood of cities, let us renew from the heart the oath which our lips have just uttered.

"Let us retrace our steps for a moment to consider our growth in population which these years have developed. The fact that Bridgewater was an interior settlement, and her soil not the most productive, induced many families during the twenty-five years preceding 1764 to emigrate to the western part of the State, while not a few found homes in the State of Maine, then a part of Massachusetts. Notwithstanding this emigration, the census of 1764 showed a population of 838 ; that of 1810, a population of 1,354, a gain of 521

" 1820, "	1,480,	"	126
" 1830, "	1,953,	"	473
" 1840, "	2,094,	"	141
" 1850, "	3,939,	"	1845
" 1860, "	6,384,	"	2445
" 1870, "	8,007,	"	1623
" 1880, "	13,608,	"	1601

"Reference to these statistics shows that not until 1840 did there seem to be any unusual growth. Previous to this date it had been slow and steady, due doubtless to the fact that we were more an agricultural than a manufacturing people. From this point our progress and material prosperity has been more rapid and substantial.

"Of our industrial pursuits, the manufacture of boots and shoes stands pre-eminently at the head. Commencing in 1811 with the first shoes manufactured by Micah Faxon, who was wont to take a load of shoes on horseback to Boston and return with material for the manufacture of more, we find this industry had grown to such an extent that the census of 1845 showed the total number of pairs of boots and shoes manufactured in this town as being 200,187, at an estimated value of $179,716; those of 1855, 761,716, estimated value $724,827; those of 1865, 1,112,766, estimated value, $1,466,900, while those for 1875 showed a production the estimated value of which was $5,587,465. A comparison of these statistics shows that the growth of this industry has more than kept pace with our increase in population.

"A comparison of the valuation of the taxable property in 1850 (the central date in our town's history) with that of 1880, the amount raised by taxation on the same, as also some statistics in relation to our schools, may prove interesting, and are given herewith :

"Valuation of taxable property in 1850,	$1,293,000
" " " 1881,	6,876,407
"Amount raised by tax in 1850,	9,781.75
" " " 1880,	104,885.00
"Number of schools in 1854 was 16 with 1124 scholars.
" " 1881 was 48 with 2457 scholars.
"Amount appropriated for schools in 1850,	$2,000
" " " 1880,	25,500

"These comparisons show that in material wealth and school appropriations we have advanced quite as rapidly as in population and manufactures.

"North Bridgewater reviewed would be incomplete without reference to her military history,—the part she bore in the struggles through which the nation has passed, and we refer with pride to those who in times of danger rallied to their country's call, and in a measure made this growth and prosperity possible. In the old French and Indian wars the North Parish furnished her share of men and means for the defense of the settlers. In the Revolutionary war a company of fifty men, under the command of Capt. Josiah Hayden, was furnished from this part of old Bridgewater, besides many who enlisted in other organizations, for a detailed account of which I refer you to Kingman's 'History of North Bridgewater.'<sup>1</sup> In the war of the Rebellion we recall the spirit and patriotism which the attack on Fort Sumter inspired in the hearts of the people, and how, on the evening of April 21, 1861, in yonder church vestry, more than one hundred men, the very flower of our then thriving town, came forward and enlisted in the service of their country. Nor shall we soon forget with what feelings we bade the comrades of Company F, Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment, God-speed on their way to the front, from which so few returned; of Company I, First Massachusetts Regiment of Cavalry, Capt. Lucius Richmond, a company which we had so often admired on parade, then more admired because of their voluntary response to the call of duty; to the hundreds of others who under other commands and in other fields did honorable service for their country. All these we hold in grateful remembrance. Never again as a town can we allude to these heroes or do them honor for their fidelity and patriotism. And as to-day we seal her history, shall we not resolve to do all in our power to perpetuate their names and fame?

"Much might be said in a review of the ecclesiastical, the educational, and the biographical history of Brockton, but time will not permit. With the past passing in review, shall we not thereby be stimulated to zealous endeavors still to maintain for our city the name and fame she has now as a town for her business enterprise, and as zealously guard her educational and moral interests, that in them she may excel, if possible, her industrial fame? Before closing this book of the past we desire to express our thanks to the retiring Board of Selectmen for the care and pains taken in preparing the way for the election and organization of the new government, and they may well feel satisfied that in this transition the work has been so smoothly and correctly accomplished.

"Let us now consider for a moment the duties that confront us to-day. As the forthcoming report of the Board of Selectmen will present and cover the business of the past year, I shall anticipate very little in that direction, but shall in a measure defer to their judgment, which I have been allowed to avail myself of.

"In the judgment of your town officers, as expressed heretofore in their annual reports, there seems to be a necessity for increased accommodations and improved facilities for the care of the poor at the almshouse. I therefore call your attention to this subject, believing that in the duty which we owe to the unfortunate poor, sympathy should have consideration as well as economy.

"Our highways generally are in a very good condition, but by reason of recent changes in the grade of Main Street, with no suitable material at hand with which to reconstruct, it is at present in a very bad condition, and will demand prompt at-tion, which in my judgment can only be permanently done by macadamizing or paving a portion of this street. Considering the improved condition of this our main thoroughfare, the extensive improvement of Pond Street contemplated by our county commissioners, the building of streets already laid out, liberal appropriations will be required at your hands.

<sup>1</sup> A work of six hundred and ninety-six pages, published in 1866 by Bradford Kingman, Esq.

“Our schools were never, as a whole, in a more satisfactory condition than at the present time, and their high character, we believe, has contributed largely to the rapid and vigorous growth of our town. The amount appropriated in this department shows in what estimation our educational privileges are held, and a determination on the part of the people that support shall not be wanting to secure the best result attainable.

“The protection which the introduction of water affords, as well as the comfort and convenience provided for our people, in its use for domestic and other purposes, mark this enterprise as a wise and necessary measure, and notwithstanding the heavy outlay, the numerous applications for water service indicate that it will soon become self-supporting. Intimately connected with this subject is that of sewerage.

“At no very distant day the question of drainage and sewerage will force itself upon us, and I would suggest that immediate steps be taken to investigate this matter, that whatever is best may be sought out and applied, when made a necessity.

“Our fire department is in a most satisfactory condition, and is regarded by our people with honest pride, not only for efficient services rendered, but for the manly conduct of its officers and men. While we have been remarkably exempt from destructive fires in the past, no effort should be spared to keep this department in its present efficient condition.

“The position of police officer is one of great responsibility, calling for courage, judgment, sobriety, and honesty, and no such force can be made effective unless harmony prevails among its members; they should know no party, no friend, no foe; know and obey only the call of duty in the execution of all laws, firmly yet fairly and impartially. As a force it is strong, being clothed with the authority of the law, yet weak and inefficient without the support of the people.

“The position which our new city takes on the question of license for the sale of intoxicating liquors is positive and plain, and indicates not only a desire but a purpose to curtail this traffic, which has been a discredit to our people, and a reproach upon the good name of our town. I trust, with this expression of the popular will and with officers who should be in sympathy with the execution of the liquor as well as all other laws, that our first year's history as a city shall not be marred by the continuance of this evil, which now so threatens our welfare.

“The bonded debt of the city, Dec. 31, 1881, was as follows :

“School-house loan, 1871.....	$36,000.00
Water loan, 1878.....	30,000.00
Brockton water loan, 1879.....	120,000.00
Brockton water loan, 1880.....	50,009.00
Total.....	$236,000.00

“Of the water loan of 1880, about $10,000 remains unexpended. Considering the demand which a rapid growth like ours makes upon the treasury for the construction of water-works, for the building of new roads, and the widening and improving of the old, for the support and improvement of a fire department, for the building of new school-houses, and the many other expensive luxuries which a city implies, we ought to congratulate ourselves that our burden of debt is so light, and yet it ought not now to be increased unless urgent necessity requires.

“In conclusion, I congratulate you that our business interests have been prospered the past year, that in substantial growth the past has far exceeded that of any previous year in our history. Go in whatever direction you will, cosy and comfortable dwellings and business structures are to be seen in process of erection. Many have thus provided themselves with homes the past year, and doubtless many more will find homes and employment within our borders during the year to come. And now that the horizon of our city's future is clearing of the smoke of the recent municipal campaign, do we not discover rising before us interests against which those of party weigh us nothing; interests which are dear alike to every citizen of Brockton? And does not the outlook reveal to you the necessity for harmony in council, zeal for the promotion of whatever is best calculated to secure and advance the welfare of all its citizens, for economy in expenditure, and fidelity to true business principles in the management of its business affairs? Gentlemen of the City Council, to your hands do the people of this city 'commit this trust.' ”

After the conclusion of his address, the mayor, in a few fitting words, introduced Governor Long, who was greeted with enthusiastic applause, and said,—

GOVERNOR LONG'S ADDRESS.

“I should think it fitting for the governor of Massachusetts to be present in any case when a part of one of her ancient towns takes on the form of a city. But to-day I come not merely in an official capacity, representing the commonwealth, but as an Old Colony descendant, and a resident of Plymouth County, to witness the inauguration of the first mayor elected within her borders. It is an event which, transforming your town into a city of 15,000 inhabitants, with a valuation of nearly $7,000,000, marks the rapid growth and the centring of great manufacturing and business interests. It is a cause at once of pride and of solicitude—pride in the swift progress of which it is a mark, and solicitude for the welfare of those whom it will hereafter concern. A city is not a result: it is simply a means,—the means by which the convenience of its citizens, no longer promoted by the old forms, seeks new ones. For the town-meeting, in which every voter has a voice, it substitutes a system of representation, and removes the administration of affairs one step further from the people. Its risks are those of less economy, and the tendency to let the public interest drift out of the public scrutiny into the hands of selfish combinations. I congratulate you, Mr. Mayor, my former associate in the House of Representatives, upon the great honor of being the first to hold the office, which you owe to your integrity and high character, and which has just been so gracefully transferred to you by the chairman of the retiring board of selectmen; and I congratulate the city of Brockton upon starting with so excellent a government in all its branches. But the history of all cities warns us that the time is almost certain to come in future years when, with the attention of your citizens withdrawn from public affairs, they will wake to find themselves afflicted with the same evils that have befallen their older sisters. There will then be overturn and renewed popular interest and added safeguards, and all will of course be well again. All progress and perfecting come from discipline. Meantime, however, let the lessons of other municipalities warn us of the necessity of constant vigilance, of prudence in expenditure, of holding officials to sharp accountability, and of sustaining them when they assume the responsibility and do right in spite of all obstacles, of fearless independence in city affairs, of electing only true men, and of the application of business principles. Then shall we have the full benefit of the advantages of the city system,—the growth, the activity, the generous abundance, the wholesome amusements, the literary culture, the schools, the churches, the halls, the charities, the great life of a great, well-governed, and well-governing body of people. Then shall he be worthy, of the Old Colony, worthy of our ancient Plymouth County, worthy of its commonwealth, worthy of grand old Bridgewater, a town unsurpassed in the worth of its stock of men, in the character of its people, in the contributions it has made to every department of the intelligent progress of Massachusetts. In this hope, and with the most cordial interest in this occasion, and in the opening future of the new city of Brockton, I bring to it and to you and its citizens, for the commonwealth and myself, a happy New Year, and many a happy New Year following this."

The mayor then introduced Bradford Kingman, Esq., the historian, who had prepared an elaborate account of the town from its first settlement, containing much new and interesting material concerning the growth and prosperity of the old town of Bridgewater, showing its relations to the "Old Colony of Plymouth," but owing to sudden illness was unable to proceed with his address.

Hon. Matthew H. Cushing, of Middleboro', member of the Executive Council, was introduced, and made an extremely happy and pleasant speech. He said he took great pleasure in being present at the first inauguration ceremonies of the oldest city in Plymouth County, though the youngest in the commonwealth, and he extended the heartiest congratulations of himself and his town. He was glad the town had not hastened to put off the childish garments of town government and assume the dignities of a city. He loved the old town-meeting, which had fitly been termed the poor man's congress, in which he could vote as liberal a supply for the education of his children as the man who pays the largest taxes. He was glad the town had allowed itself to develop till it had grown too populous for the town system, and was obliged to take on the larger form of government. He compared Brockton with Southern towns, where abundant water privileges were running to waste, while in Brockton the people not only used all their water, but most of it to make steam, and he believed their water board had urged them not to use too much of it as a beverage! This, however, he understood to be a matter of economy. He compared the growth of Brockton with that of Middleboro', and repeated that Middleboro' sends to Brockton her kindest greetings.

The band played a lively galop, and before it was finished Congressman Harris came in, and was greeted with applause. As soon as the music was ended, Hon. Benjamin W. Harris, member of Congress, was then introduced by Mayor Keith, and said he had not come to make a speech, and if he had he couldn't very well, as he had just driven over in the cold from East Bridgewater, and had not fully thawed out. He congratulated the new city on her present prosperity and future prospects, and said that she had a right to be proud, but we on the borders must not be ignored. We were a part of the same ancient Bridgewater. Only as long ago as 1700 Brockton had not an inhabitant in her territory. She settled her first minister in 1780, over a congregation of twenty-five members. He did not want to imply that Brockton was not entitled to honor, but to show that while behind at the start, she was ahead of all her sister towns at the present time. All are proud of it. He alluded to the slow increase of population up to 1860, and showed how it had increased with rapid strides, till in 1880 it had reached thirteen thousand six hundred and eight, and was now God knows how many. It was like a city rising out of the dust, and few towns even in the West have had an equal growth in ten years. He begged the citizens of Brockton in their just pride not to forget those who are of kin and participate in the benefits of their progress. He told them that, having thrown off the form by which every individual participated in the government, they had reached a point where they could exercise a power and control over municipal affairs no less important, and even more responsible. He referred to the prosperity of the nation, and said there were a thousand municipalities rising as great and happy as Brockton in the general prosperity. The country was at peace, and had no army, no navy,—if we need one. He had a notion that when we put the navy on wheels we should bring it to Brockton, where everything on wheels goes well. He continued for some time, finally exhorting the people to be always what they are to-day,—happy, rich, prosperous; he knew that they would be distinguished for education, refinement, and intelligence, and that they would continue in the future as they have been in the past, a law-abiding, country-loving people.

The mayor then announced that the invited guests would be served to a collation in the theatre building at twelve o'clock, and the large audience dispersed to music by the band. The collation, which was served up in McLeod's best style, was partaken of by about sixty of the invited guests, including Congressman Harris and others, and was an extremely enjoyable affair.

ACT TO ESTABLISH THE CITY OF BROCKTON.

Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. The inhabitants of the town of Brockton shall continue to be a body politic and corporate under the name of the City of Brockton, and as such shall have, exercise, and enjoy all the rights, immunities, powers, and privileges, and shall be subject to all the duties and obligations, now incumbent upon and pertaining to the said town as a municipal corporation.

SECT. 2. The administration of all the fiscal, prudential, and municipal affairs of the said city, with the government thereof, shall be vested in one officer, styled the mayor, one council of seven to be called the board of aldermen, and one council of twenty-one to be called the common council, which boards, in their joint capacity, shall be denominated the city council; and the members thereof shall be sworn to the faithful performance of their respective duties. A majority of each board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and no member of either board shall receive any compensation for his services.

SECT. 3. The election of city and ward officers shall take place on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of December of each year; and the municipal year shall begin on the first Monday of January following.

SECT. 4. It shall be the duty of the selectmen of said town, as soon as may be after the passage of this act and its acceptance as herein provided, to divide said town into seven wards, so that they shall contain, as nearly as may be consistent with well defined limits to each ward, an equal number of voters in each ward, which division may be revised by the city council within four years from the passage hereof. The city council may, in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five and in every fifth year thereafter, make a new division of said wards, so that they shall contain, as nearly as may be consistent with well defined limits to each ward, an equal number of voters in each ward, according to the census to be taken in the months of May or June in said years.

SECT. 5. On the Tuesday next after the first Monday of December, annually, there shall be elected by ballot, in each of said wards, a warden, clerk, and three inspectors of elections, who shall be different persons, residents in the ward, who shall hold their offices one year, and until others are chosen and qualified in their stead. Said wardens shall preside at all ward meetings with the power of moderators in town meetings, and if at any meeting the warden is not present the clerk shall preside until a warden pro tempore is elected by ballot; if both the warden and clerk are absent, the senior in age of the inspectors present shall preside until a warden pro tempore is elected; and if all said officers are absent any legal voter in said ward may preside until a warden pro tempore is elected. When any ward officer is absent, or neglects to perform his duty, his office shall be filled pro tempore. The clerk shall record all the proceedings and certify the votes, and deliver to his successor in office all such records and journals, together with all other documents and papers held by him in his said capacity. The inspectors shall assist the warden in receiving, assorting, and counting the votes. All said officers shall be sworn to a faithful discharge of their duties; said oath to be administered by the clerk to the warden, and by the warden to the clerk, and to the inspectors, or to either of said officers by any justice of the peace; a certificate of such oath shall be made by the clerk upon the ward records. All warrants for meetings of the citizens for municipal purposes shall be issued by the mayor and aldermen, and shall be in such form, and served and returned in such manner and at such times as the city council shall direct. The compensation of the ward officers shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 6. The mayor and aldermen are authorized, when no convenient ward room for holding ward meetings of the citizens of either of the wards of the city can be had within the territorial limits of such ward, to appoint and direct, in the warrants for calling the ward meetings of such wards, the said meetings to be held in some convenient and proximate place within the limits of any other of the wards of said city; and for such purposes the place so assigned for the meeting of such ward shall be deemed and taken to be included in and part of said ward, as though the same was within the territorial limits thereof.

SECT. 7. The mayor shall be elected by and from the qualified voters of the city at large, voting in their respective wards, and shall hold his office for the municipal year next following his election, and until another shall be elected and qualified in his place.

SECT. 8. One alderman and three common councilmen shall be elected by and from the voters of each ward, and shall at the time of their election be residents of the wards respectively in which they are elected; they shall hold their offices for the municipal year next following their election, and until a majority of the new board shall be elected and qualified in their places.

SECT. 9. On the Tuesday next after the first Monday of December, annually, the qualified voters in the several wards shall give in their votes by ballot for mayor, aldermen and common councilmen, in accordance with the provisions of this act, and all the votes so given shall be assorted, counted, declared and recorded in open ward meeting, by causing the names of persons voted for, and the number given for each, to be written in the ward record at length. The clerk of the ward, within twenty-four hours thereafter, shall deliver to the persons elected members of the common council certificates of their election, respectively, signed by the warden and clerk and a majority of the inspectors of elections, and shall deliver to the city clerk a copy of the record of such elections, certified in like manner: provided, however, that if the choice of members of the common council shall not be effected on that day in any ward, the meeting in such a ward may be adjourned from time to time to complete such election. The board of aldermen shall within ten days thereafter examine the copies of the records of the several wards certified as aforesaid, and shall cause the person who shall have been elected mayor to be notified in writing of his election; but if it shall appear that there is no choice, or if the person elected shall refuse to accept the office, the board shall issue warrants for a new election, and the same proceedings shall be had in all respects as are herein before provided for the election of mayor, and from time to time shall be repeated until a mayor shall be elected and shall accept said office. In case of the decease, resignation or absence of the mayor, or of his inability to perform the duties of his office, it shall be the duty of the board of aldermen and common council, respectively, by vote, to declare that a vacancy exists, and the cause thereof; and thereupon the two boards shall meet in convention and elect a mayor to fill such vacancy; and the mayor thus elected shall hold his office until the inability causing such vacancy shall be removed, or until a new election. Each alderman shall be notified in writing of his election by the mayor and aldermen for the time being. The oath prescribed by this act shall be administered to the mayor by the city clerk, or by any justice of the peace. The aldermen and common councilmen elect shall on the first Monday of January, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, meet in convention, when the oath required by this act shall be administered to the members of the two boards present, by the mayor, or by any justice of the peace, and the certificate of such oath having been taken shall be entered on the journal of the mayor and aldermen and of the common council by their respective clerks. And whenever it shall appear that a mayor has not been elected previous to the first Monday of January aforesaid, the mayor and aldermen for the time being shall make a record of that fact, an attested copy of which the city clerk shall read at the opening of the convention to be held as aforesaid. After the oath has been administered as aforesaid, the two boards shall separate, and the common council shall be organized by the choice of a president and clerk, to hold their offices respectively during the pleasure of the common council, the clerk to be under oath faithfully to perform the duties of his said office, and his compensation shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council. In case of the absence of the mayor elect on the first Monday of January, or if the mayor shall not then have been elected, the city council shall organize itself in the manner herein before provided, and may proceed to business in the same manner, as if the mayor was present; and the oath of office may, at any time thereafter, in convention of the two boards, be administered to the mayor and any member of the city council who may have been absent at the organization. The board of aldermen may choose a president who shall preside at all meetings of the board and in joint convention of the city council in the absence of the mayor. Each board shall keep a record of its proceedings and judge of the election of its own members; and in case of failure of election, or in case of vacancy declared by either board, the mayor and aldermen shall issue their warrant for a new election.

SECT. 10. The mayor shall be the chief executive officer of the city. He shall enforce the laws and regulations of the city, and have a general supervision of all the subordinate officers. And he may, whenever in his opinion the public good may require, remove, with the consent of the appointing power, except as provided in section twelve, any officer over whose appointment he has, in accordance with the provisions of this charter, exercised the power of nomination. He may call special meetings of the boards of aldermen and common council, or either of them, when in his opinion the interests of the city require it, by causing notice to be left at the usual place of residence of each member of the board or boards to be convened. He shall, from time to time, communicate to both boards such information and recommend such measures as the business and interests of the city may in his opinion require. He shall preside in the board of aldermen, and in convention of the two boards. His salary for the first five years, under this charter, shall be fixed by the city council, but shall not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars per annum. Afterwards it shall be fixed by the concurrent vote of the city council. It shall be payable at stated periods, but shall not at any time be increased or diminished during the year for which he is chosen. He shall receive no other compensation.

SECT. 11. Every ordinance, order, resolution or vote to which the concurrence of the board of aldermen and of the common council may be necessary, except on a question of a convention of the two branches or the election of an officer, and every order of either branch of the city council involving the expenditure of money, shall be presented to the mayor. If he approves thereof he shall signify his approval by signing the same; but if he does not approve thereof, he shall return the ordinance, order, resolution or vote, with his objections in writing, to the branch of the city council in which it originated. Such branch shall enter the objections of the mayor at large on its records, and proceed to reconsider said ordinance, order, resolution or vote; and if, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that branch, present and voting, notwithstanding such objections, agree to pass such ordinance, order, resolution or vote, it shall, together with the objections of the mayor, be sent to the other branch of the city council, if it originally required concurrent action, where it shall also be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of the members present and voting, it shall be in force; but in all cases the vote shall be determined by yeas and nays; and if such ordinance, order, resolution or vote is not returned by the mayor within ten days after it has been presented to him, the same shall be in force.

SECT. 12. The executive power of said city generally and the administration, with all the powers heretofore vested in the selectmen of Brockton, shall be vested in and may be exercised by the mayor and aldermen as fully as if the same were herein specially enumerated. The mayor and aldermen shall have full and exclusive power to appoint a constable or constables, and a city marshal and assistants, with the powers and duties of constables, and all other police officers, any of whom the mayor may remove, and fill the vacancy or vacancies so made, by appointment; but at the next meeting of the board of aldermen he shall nominate as provided in this act. And the mayor and aldermen may require any person, who may be appointed marshal or constable of the city, to give bonds for the faithful discharge of the duties of the office, with such security and to such amount as they may deem reasonable and proper, upon which bonds the like proceedings and remedies may be had as are by law provided in case of constables' bonds, taken by the selectmen of towns. The compensation of the police and other subordinate officers shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 13. In all cases in which appointments are directed to be made by the mayor or aldermen, the mayor shall have the exclusive power of nomination, being subject however to confirmation or rejection by the board of aldermen; but if a person so nominated shall be rejected, the mayor shall make another nomination within one month from the time of such rejection. No person shall be eligible by appointment or election to any office of emolument the salary of which is payable out of the city treasury, who, at the time of such appointment or election, shall be a member of the board of aldermen or of the common council. All sittings of the mayor and aldermen, of the common council and of the city council, shall be public when they are not engaged in executive business.

SECT. 14. The city council shall annually, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, elect by joint ballot, in convention, a city clerk, treasurer, collector of taxes, one or more superintendents of streets, city solicitor, city physician, and city auditor, who shall hold their offices respectively for the term of one year, and until their successors shall be chosen and qualified; provided, however, that either of the officers named in this section may be removed at any time by the city council for sufficient cause. Vacancies occurring in the above named offices may be filled by joint ballot of the city council at any time. The compensation of the officers mentioned in this section shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 15. The city clerk shall be sworn to the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. He shall have charge of all journals, records, papers, and documents of the city, sign all warrants issued by the mayor and aldermen, and do such other acts in his said capacity as the city council may lawfully and reasonably require of him; and shall deliver all journals, records, papers and documents, and other things intrusted to him as city clerk, to his successor in office. He shall also perform all the duties and exercise all the powers by law incumbent upon or vested in clerks of towns of this Commonwealth. He shall be clerk of the board of aldermen; shall attend said board when the same is in session, and keep a journal of its acts, votes, and proceedings; also of the city council when in convention. He shall engross all the ordinances passed by the city council in a book provided for that purpose, and shall add proper indexes, which book shall be deemed a public record of such ordinances; and he shall perform such other duties as shall be prescribed by the board of aldermen. In case of the temporary absence of the city clerk, the mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the board of aldermen, may appoint a clerk pro tempore, who shall be duly qualified.

SECT. 16. The board of overseers of the poor in the city of Brockton shall consist of three members, residents of the city, and of the mayor and city marshal who shall be ex officio members of the board. The mayor shall be ex officio chairman of the board. The city council shall elect by joint ballot, in convention, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, three persons to be members of the board of overseers of the poor, one for one year, one for two years, and one for three years; and thereafter the city council shall annually, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, elect in the same manner one person to hold office for the term of three years. But no more than one of the three members so to be elected shall be eligible from any one ward of said city. Vacancies occurring in the board may be filled by joint ballot of the city council at any time, the members so elected to hold office only for the unexpired term of the member who has ceased to hold office. The city council may at any time remove members of said board from office for cause. The board shall be organized annually on the third Monday in January. The compensation of the overseers of the poor shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 17. The city council elected in December, in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-one, shall, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, elect by joint ballot in convention three persons to be assessors of taxes, one for three years, one for two years, and one for one year; and thereafter the city council shall annually, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, elect in the same manner one person who shall hold his office for the term of three years next ensuing, and until another shall be elected and qualified in his stead. The persons so elected shall constitute the board of assessors, and shall exercise the powers and be subject to the liabilities and duties of assessors in towns. Vacancies occurring in the board may be filled by joint ballot of the city council at any time, the members so elected to hold office only for the unexpired term of the member who had ceased to hold office. All taxes shall be assessed, apportioned, and collected in the manner prescribed by the general laws of the Commonwealth: provided, however, that the city council may establish further or additional provisions for the collection thereof. The compensation of the assessors shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 18. The qualified voters of each ward, at their respective annual ward meetings for the choice of officers, shall elect by ballot one person in each ward, who shall be a resident of said ward, to be an assistant assessor; and it shall be the duty of the persons so chosen to furnish the assessors with all necessary information relative to persons and property taxable in their respective wards; and they shall be sworn to the faithful performance of their duty. Their compensation shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 19. The city council elected in December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, shall, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, elect by joint ballot in convention three persons to act as water commissioners, one for three years, one for two years, and one for one year; and thereafter the city council shall annually, as soon after their organization as may be convenient, elect in the same manner one person who shall hold his office for the term of three years next ensuing, and until another shall be elected and qualified in his stead. Vacancies occurring in the commission may be filled by joint ballot of the city council at any time. The city council may at any time remove any member of said commission from office for cause. The compensation of the water commissioners shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 20. The city council may establish a fire department for said city, to consist of a chief engineer, and of as many assistant engineers, engine-men, hose-men, hook-and-ladder-men and assistants, as the city council by ordinance shall from time to time prescribe; and said council shall have authority to fix the time of their appointment and the term of their service, to define their office and duties, and in general to make such regulations concerning the pay, conduct, and government of such department, the management of fires, and the conduct of persons attending fires, as they may deem expedient, and may fix such penalties for any violation of such regulations, or any of them, as are provided for the breach of the ordinances of said city. The appointment of all the officers and members of such department shall be vested in the mayor and aldermen exclusively, who shall also have authority to remove from office any officer or member, for cause, in their discretion. The engineers so appointed shall be the fire wards of the city, but the mayor and aldermen may appoint additional fire wards. The compensation of the department shall be fixed by concurrent vote of the city council.

SECT. 21. The city council shall, in such manner as they shall determine, elect or appoint all other subordinate officers, for whose election or appointment other provisions are not herein made, define their duties and fix their compensation.

SECT. 22. The qualified voters of the city, voting in their respective wards, shall on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, elect by ballot, nine persons to be members of the school committee, three to be chosen for three years, three for two years, and three for one year from the first Monday in January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two; and thereafter three persons shall be chosen at each annual meeting, for the term of three years from the first Monday of January next ensuing, and the persons so chosen shall, with the mayor, constitute the school committee, and have the care and superintendence of the public schools. The mayor shall be ex officio chairman of the board, and all the rights and obligations of the town of Brockton in relation to the grant and appropriation of money to the support of the schools, and the special powers and authority heretofore conferred by law upon the inhabitants of said town, to raise money for the support of schools therein, shall be merged in the powers and obligations of the city, to be exercised in the same manner as over other subjects of taxation; and all grants and appropriations of money for the support of schools, and the erection and repair of school-houses in said city, shall be made by the city council in the same manner as grants and appropriations are made for other city purposes. Vacancies occurring in the board may be filled by the joint ballot of the city council and school committee, in convention, the members so chosen to hold office only for the remainder of the municipal year.

SECT. 23. Should there fail to be a choice of members of the school committee or assistant assessors on the day of the annual ward meeting, the meeting shall be adjourned from time to time until the election shall be completed.

SECT. 24. All city and ward officers shall be held to discharge the duties of the offices to which they have been respectively elected, notwithstanding their removal after their election out of their respective wards into any other wards of the city; but a permanent residence out of the city shall cause a vacancy to exist in the offices to which they were elected.

SECT. 25. The city council shall take care that no money shall be paid from the treasury unless granted or appropriated, and shall secure a just and proper accountability by requiring bonds, with sufficient penalties and sureties, from all persons intrusted with the receipt, custody, or disbursement of money. They shall have the care and superintendence of the city buildings and the custody and management of all city property, with power to let or to sell what may legally be let or sold, and to purchase property, real or personal, in the name and for the use of the city, whenever its interests or convenience may, in their judgment, require it. And they shall, as often as once a year, cause to be published, for the use of the inhabitants, a particular account of the receipts and expenditures and a schedule of city property and of the city debts.

SECT. 26. The city council shall have the same powers in relation to the laying out, acceptance, altering, or discontinuing of streets and ways, and the assessment of damages, which selectmen and inhabitants of towns now have by law, all petitions and questions relating to the same, however, being first acted on by the mayor and aldermen. Any person aggrieved by any proceedings of the mayor and aldermen, or of the city council, under this provision, shall have all the rights and privileges now allowed in appeals from the decisions of selectmen or the inhabitants of towns. No street or way shall hereafter be opened in the city of Brockton over any private land by the owners thereof, and dedicated to and permitted to be used by the public, of a less width than forty feet, except with the consent of said mayor and aldermen in writing, first had and obtained for that purpose.

SECT. 27. The city council may make ordinances, with suitable penalties, for the inspection and survey, measurement and sale of lumber, wood, hay, coal, and bark, brought into or exposed in the city for sale, and shall have the same powers as the town had in reference to the suspension of the laws for the protection and preservation of useful birds, and of all other laws, the operation or suspension of which is subject to the action of the towns thereon. The city council may also make all such salutary and needful by-laws as towns, by the laws of this Commonwealth, have power to make and establish, and to annex penalties, not exceeding twenty dollars, for the breach thereof, which by-laws shall take effect and be in force from and after the time therein respectively limited: provided, however, that all laws and regulations in force in the town of Brockton shall, until they expire by their own limitation, or are revised or repealed by the city council, remain in force, and all fines and forfeitures for the breach of any by-law or ordinance shall be paid into the city treasury.

SECT. 28. All elections of national, state, county, and district officers, who are voted for by the people, shall be held at meetings of the citizens qualified to vote at such elections, in their respective wards, at the time fixed by law for these elections respectively.

SECT. 29. Fifteen days prior to every election, the mayor and aldermen shall make out lists of all the citizens of each ward qualified to vote in such elections, in the manner in which selectmen of towns are required to make out lists of voters, and for that purpose they shall have full access to the assessors' books and lists, and are empowered to call for the assistance of the assessors, assistant assessors, and other city officers, and they shall deliver the lists so prepared and corrected to the clerks of the several wards, to be used at such elections, and no person shall be entitled to vote whose name is not borne on such list. A list of the voters in each ward shall be posted in one or more public places in each ward.

SECT. 30. All power and authority now vested by law in the board of health of the town of Brockton, or the selectmen thereof, shall be transferred to and vested in a board of health to be appointed by the mayor and aldermen, as provided in chapter one hundred and thirty-three of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, who shall have and exercise all the powers and duties therein granted.

SECT. 31. The power and authority vested in said town of Brockton by chapter one hundred and twenty-four of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, entitled "An Act to supply the town of Brockton with pure water," and by the vote of said town accepted, in accordance with the provisions of said act, shall continue in force. The powers thereby conferred shall be exercised by the city council.

SECT. 32. General meetings of the citizens qualified to vote may from time to time be held to consult upon the public good, to instruct their representatives, and to take all lawful means to obtain redress for any grievances, according to the right secured to the people by the constitution of this Commonwealth, and such meetings may and shall be duly warned by the mayor and aldermen, upon the request in writing, setting forth the purposes thereof, of fifty qualified voters.

SECT. 33. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed: provided, however, that the repeal of the said acts shall not affect any act done, nor any right accruing or accrued or established, nor any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil case, before the time when such repeal shall take effect; and that no offense committed, and no penalty or forfeiture incurred, under any act hereby repealed, and before the time when such repeal shall take effect, shall be affected by the repeal; and that no suit or prosecution pending at the time of the said repeal for any offense committed, or for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture incurred under said acts, shall be affected by such repeal; and provided, also, that all persons who, at the time of said repeal taking effect, shall hold any office under the said acts shall continue to hold the same until the organization of the city government contemplated by this charter shall be effected completely.

SECT. 34. For the purpose of organizing the system of government hereby established, and putting the same in operation in the first instance, the selectmen of the town of Brockton, for the time being, shall issue their warrants seven days at least previous to the Tuesday next after first Monday of December of the present year, calling meetings of the citizens of each ward on that day, at such place and hour as they may deem expedient, for the purpose of choosing a warden, clerk, and inspectors of each ward, and all other officers whose election is provided for in the preceding sections of this act; and the transcript of the records in each ward, specifying the votes given for the several officers aforesaid, certified by the warden and clerk of the ward at said first meeting, shall be returned to said selectmen, whose duty it shall be to examine and compare the same; and in case such elections should not be completed at the first meeting, then to issue new warrants until such elections shall be completed, and to give notice thereof in manner before provided to the several persons elected; and at said first meeting a list of voters in each ward, prepared and corrected by the selectmen for the time being, shall be delivered to the clerk of each ward when elected, to be used as herein before provided. After the choice of the city officers as aforesaid, or a majority of both boards, the selectmen shall appoint a place for their first meeting, and shall, by written notice left at the place of residence of each member, notify them thereof. And after this first election of city officers, and this first meeting for the organization of the city council, according to the provisions of section nine of this act, as provided for in this section, the day of holding the annual elections and the day and hour for the meeting of the city council for the purpose of organization shall remain as provided in said ninth section of this act. It shall be the duty of the city council immediately after the first organization to carry into effect the several provisions of this act.

SECT. 35. This act shall be void unless the inhabitants of the town of Brockton, at a legal meeting called for that purpose, to be held within one year from the passage of this act, shall, by a vote of a majority of the voters present and voting thereon, as hereinafter provided, determine to adopt the same. At said meeting the votes shall be taken by written or printed ballots, and the polls shall be kept open not less than six hours. The selectmen shall preside in said meeting, and in receiving said ballots shall use the check-lists in the same manner as they are used in the election of state officers.

Secr. 36. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved April 9, 1881.]

The City Seal.—The seal of the city is circular in form, within which is a ring inclosing a shield, on which is a representation of "Sachem's Rock," with Miles Standish and Massasoit treating for the purchase of the Bridgewater, and beneath which representation is the inscription, "Sachem's Rock, 1649;" across the upper and central portion of the seal, and crossing said ring and shield, the words, "Education," "Industry," "Progress;" at the top of the whole design, and crossing said ring, a keystone-shaped escutcheon bearing the device of a bee-hive; on the right, across said ring, a rectangular shield on which is represented the electric light; and on the left a similarly-placed and shaped escutcheon with the globe for a device; the upper portion of said ring having the inscription, "Settled, 1700," on the left, "A Town, 1821;" on the right, and on the lower portion of the same, the words, "City of Brockton, 1881."

Adopted by the city government July 24, 1882.

Wards of the City.—The boundaries of the several wards in this city are as follows:

Ward One.—Beginning in the west line of the Old Colony Railroad, in the middle of Court Street, thence westerly by the middle of Court Street to Main Street; thence across Main Street to the middle of Pleasant Street; thence westerly by the middle of Pleasant Street to Easton line; thence southerly by the town-line to Torrey Street; thence easterly by the middle of Torrey Street and the middle of Belmont Street to the middle of the northern terminus of Ash Street; thence northerly in a line parallel with a private way known as Byron Avenue to a point intersected by a line drawn from Arlington Street westerly through the middle of Elm Street; thence easterly from said point by the line so drawn and by the middle of West Elm Street and East Elm Street to School Street; thence easterly by the middle of School Street to the west line of the Old Colony Railroad; and thence northerly by the west line of said railroad to the point of beginning.

Ward Two.—Beginning in the west line of the Old Colony Railroad, in the middle of Lawrence Street, thence westerly by the middle of Lawrence Street to Main Street; thence southerly by the middle of Main Street to Winthrop Street; thence westerly by the middle of Winthrop Street to Pond Street; thence westerly to a point in Ash Street forty-two rods southerly from the middle of Belmont Street

(measuring by the middle of Ash Street); thence northerly by the middle of Ash Street to Belmont Street; and thence northerly by a line parallel with a private way known as Byron Avenue to a point intersected by a line drawn from Arlington Street westerly through the middle of Elm Street; thence easterly from said point by the line so drawn and by the middle of West Elm Street and East Elm Street to School Street; thence easterly by the middle of School Street to the west line of the Old Colony Railroad; and thence southerly by the west line of said railroad to the point of beginning.

Ward Three.—Beginning in the middle of Main Street at West Bridgewater line, thence northerly by the middle of Main Street to Winthrop Street; thence westerly by the middle of Winthrop Street to Pond Street; and thence westerly to a point in the middle of Ash Street forty-two rods southerly from the middle of Belmont Street (measuring by the middle of Ash Street); thence northerly by the middle of Ash Street to Belmont Street; thence westerly by the middle of Belmont Street to Torrey Street; and by the middle of Torrey Street to Easton line; and thence southerly by Easton line and easterly by West Bridgewater line to the point of beginning.

Ward Four.—Beginning in West Bridgewater line, in the middle of Main Street, thence northerly by the middle of Main Street to Lawrence Street; thence easterly by the middle of Lawrence Street to Montello Street, and across Montello Street in the same course to Salisbury River; thence southerly by the channel of the river to a point due west from the middle of the western terminus of Hammond Street; thence due east to the middle of the western terminus of Hammond Street; thence easterly by the middle of Hammond Street to Thatcher Street; thence southeasterly by the middle of Thatcher Street to East Bridgewater line; and thence southerly, westerly, northerly, and again westerly, by the town-line to the point of beginning.

Ward Five.—Beginning in the middle of Lawrence Street, in the west line of the Old Colony Railroad, thence by the west line of said railroad northerly to Centre Street; thence by the middle of Centre Street easterly to the middle of the channel of the river; thence northerly by the middle of the channel of the river or pond to Court Street; thence easterly by the middle of Court Street to Abington line; thence southerly by the town-line to Thatcher Street; thence northwesterly by the middle of Thatcher Street to Hammond Street; thence westerly by the middle of Hammond Street to East Street, and thence due west to Salisbury River; thence northerly by the channel of the river to a point intersected by a line drawn easterly through Lawrence Street; thence westerly from said point by the line so drawn, and through the middle of Lawrence Street, to the point of beginning.

Ward Six.—Beginning in the middle of Main Street in Stoughton line, thence southerly by the middle of Main Street to Court Street; thence easterly by the middle of Court Street to the west line of the Old Colony Railroad; thence southerly by the west line of said railroad to Centre Street; thence easterly by the middle of Centre Street to the middle of the channel of the river; thence northerly by the middle of the channel of the river or pond to Court Street; thence by the middle of Court Street easterly to Abington line; and thence northerly and westerly to the point of beginning.

Ward Seven.—Beginning in the middle of Main Street, in Stoughton line, thence southerly by the middle of Main Street to Pleasant Street; thence westerly by the middle of Pleasant Street to Easton line; and thence northerly and easterly by the town-line to the point of beginning.

Passed to be ordained July 24, 1882.

CITY GOVERNMENT AND OFFICERS.

1882.

Mayor, Hon. Ziba C. Keith.

Aldermen: Ward 1, Henry E. Lincoln; Ward 2, Rufus P. Kingman; Ward 3, George Churchill; Ward 4, George E. Keith; Ward 5, Ward Thompson; Ward 6, Enos H. Reynolds; Ward 7, Bradford E. Jones.

City Clerk, De Witt Clinton Packard.

Common Council: Ward 1, William H. Savage, William H. Tobey, George M. Copeland; Ward 2, Sanford Winter, William L. Douglas, Isaiah A. Beals; Ward 3, George L. Knapp, Lemuel P. Churchill, Hiram A. Monk; Ward 4, Patrick McCarty, Nathan Keith, John A. Howard; Ward 5, Martin T. Packard, Elbridge G. Hale, Daniel Connolly; Ward 6, Charles H. Cary, Henry Southworth, Elbridge L. Brown; Ward 7, George A. Packard, Augustus T. Jones, Edward Crocker. President, Augustus T. Jones; Clerk, Elbridge L. Brown.

City Treasurer, Henry A. Ford.

City Solicitor, Jonathan White.

Auditor, Baalis Sanford.

Collector of Taxes, William Keith.

Superintendent of Streets, Henry B. Packard.

Assessors, William Rankin (for three years), Ira Copeland (for two years), Noah Chesman (for one year).

Assistant Assessors: Ward 1, Francis B. Gardner; Ward 2, Thaddeus E. Gifford; Ward 3, David Hervey; Ward 4, William A. Thompson; Ward 5, Isaac Kingman; Ward 6, David Burke; Ward 7, Ellis Brett.

Overseers of the Poor, Francis B. Gardner (for three years), Henry A. Ford (for two years), Isaac Kingman (for one year).

School Committee (Hon. Ziba C. Keith, chairman ex officio), Baalis Sanford, Jonathan White, David L. Cowell (for three years), S. F. Packard, C. F. Copeland, Mrs. Martha

J. Farwell (for two years), Rev. S. L. Beal, Arthur E. Kendrick, D. W. C. Packard (for one year).

Trustees of the Public Library, Jonathan White, Edward Parker, Jr., D. W. C. Packard (for three years), David L. Cowell, Alfred Laws, Warren T. Copeland (for two years), L. W. Puffer, Preston B. Keith, William W. Wilkins (for one year).

Water Commissioners, Walter F. Cleaveland (for three years), William W. Cross (for two years), John J. Whipple (for one year).

City Messenger, Richard T. Sollis.

City Physician, Dr. E. A. Dakin.

Board of Health, Dr. E. A. Dakin, Henry M. Littlefield (for two years), Francis B. Gardner (for one year).

Fence Viewers, David Hervey, Sylvanus Packard, Charles S. Johnson.

Inspector of Milk, Henry M. Littlefield.

Sealer of Weights and Measures, George F. Perkins.

Surveyors of Lumber, Cephas Soule, Otis Cobb, Isam Mitchell.

Mesurers of Wood and Bark, Thaddeus E. Gifford, Horace Baker, Isaac Harris, Charles S. Johnson.

Engineers of the Fire Department, Davis R. Eldred, chief; Nehemiah S. Holmes, 1st asst.; Zenas L. Marston, 2d asst.; Henry A. Willis, 3d asst.; Charles Eaton, 4th asst.

City Marshal, Uriah Macey.

Keeper of Lockup, Thomas Drohan.

Assistant Marshals, Henry M. Littlefield, 1st asst.; Thomas Drohan, 2d asst.

Policemen, Peter Davis, Zenas W. Lewis, Robert W. Smith, Andrew Jackson (2d).

Constables, Ahira S. Porter, Henry S. Porter, Andrew Jackson (2d).

1883.

Mayor, Hon. Henry H. Packard.

Aldermen: Ward 1, Edgar E. Dean; Ward 2, Rufus P. Kingman; Ward 3, Preston B. Keith; Ward 4, Isaac S. Emerson; Ward 5, George G. Snow; Ward 6, Charles F. Porter; Ward 7, Abbott W. Packard.

City Clerk, D. W. C. Packard.

Common Council: Ward 1, Dexter E. Wilbur, Elmer W. Walker, Charles W. Tilton; Ward 2, William L. Douglas, Henry S. Porter, Sewall P. Howard; Ward 3, Hiram A. Monk, Lemuel P. Churchill, Jonas Reynolds; Ward 4, Patrick McCarty, John Murphy, James O'Reilly; Ward 5, Elbridge G. Hale, Martin T. Packard, Daniel Connolly; Ward 6, Charles H. Cary, Elbridge L. Brown, Frederic A. Leavitt; Ward 7, Albert R. Wade, Benjamin F. Battles, Charles E. Stone. President, Elbridge L. Brown; Clerk, Daniel Connolly.

Joint Standing Committees.

Finance: The mayor and Aldermen Keith and Kingman, the president of the Common Council, Councilmen Churchill, McCarty, Monk, and Reynolds.

Claims: The mayor and Alderman Kingman, the president of the Common Council, Councilmen Cary and Howard.

Accounts: Aldermen Emerson and Snow, Councilmen Douglas, Howard, and Battles.

Public Property: Aldermen Packard and Emerson, Councilmen Hale, O'Reilly, and Battles.

Water: Aldermen Dean and Snow, the president of the Common Council, Councilmen Connolly and Stone.

Fuel and Street Lights: Aldermen Keith and Packard, Councilmen Packard, Tilton, and O'Reilly.

Fire Department: Aldermen Emerson and Porter, Councilmen Churchill, Wilbur, and Porter.

Highways: Aldermen Packard and Keith, Councilmen Cary, Wade, and Porter.

Printing: Alderman Kingman, Councilmen Hale and Stone.

Ordinances: Aldermen Snow and Keith, Councilmen Monk, Connolly, and Walter.

Standing Committees of the Board of Aldermen.

Police: the Mayor, Aldermen Porter and Emerson.

Elections and Returns: Aldermen Porter and Dean.

Enrolled Ordinances and Resolutions: Aldermen Keith and Snow.

Licenses: Aldermen Kingman, Porter, and Snow.

Health: Aldermen Dean, Keith, and Packard.

State Aid and Soldiers' Relief: Aldermen Emerson, Snow, and Kingman.

Standing Committees of the Common Council.

Elections and Returns: Councilmen Douglas, Tilton, and Wade.

Enrolled Ordinances and Resolutions: Councilmen Walker, Leavitt, and Murphy.

City Solicitor, Hosea Kingman, Esq.

City Treasurer, Henry A. Ford.

City Auditor, Baalis Sanford.

Assessors, Noah Chesman (three years), William Rankin (two years), Ira Copeland (one year).

Assistant Assessors: Ward 1, Francis B. Gardner; Ward 2, Porter B. Hancock; Ward 3, Zina Hayward; Ward 4, William A. Thompson; Ward 5, Isaac Kingman; Ward 6, Henry Southworth; Ward 7, Ellis Brett.

Collector of Taxes, William Keith.

Water Commissioners, Charles C. Bixby (three years), Walter F. Cleaveland (two years), John J. Whipple (one year).

Superintendent of Streets, Henry B. Packard.

Overseers of the Poor, Isaac Kingman (three years), Francis B. Gardner (two years), Henry A. Ford (one year)

School Committee (Hon. Henry H. Packard, chairman ex officio), William Rankin, William A. Sanford, Arthur E. Kendrick (for three years); Baalis Sanford, Jonathan White, David L. Cowell (for two years); S. F. Packard, C. F. Copeland, Martha J. Farwell (for one year).

Trustees of the Public Library, William W. Wilkins, Loring W. Puffer, M. R. Dustin (for three years); Jonathan White, Edward Parker, Jr., D. W. C. Packard (for two years); David L. Cowell, Alfred Laws, Warren T. Copeland (for one year).

City Physician, Dr. Jonas E. Bacon.

Board of Health, Harvey F. Bird (two years); John W. Porter (one year); Dr. J. E. Bacon.

City Messenger, Richard T. Sollis.

Engineers of Fire Department, David R. Eldred, chief; Nehemiah S. Holmes, 1st asst.; Zenas L. Marston, 2d asst.; William H. Jacobs, 3d asst.; Charles Eaton, 4th asst.

Superintendent of Fire Alarm, Richard T. Sollis.

Inspector of Milk, Porter B. Hancock.

Sealer of Weights and Measures, George F. Perkins.

Measurers of Wood and Bark, Isaac Harris, Thaddens E. Gifford, Horace Baker, Hovenden L. Howard, William L. Holmes.

Surveyors of Lumber, Cephas Soule, Charles S. Johnson, Otis Cobb, Isam Mitchell.

City Marshal, David S. Brigham; First Assistant, George Thatcher; Second Assistant, George M. Tower.

Police-men, Francis E. Allen, Zenas W. Lewis, Sidney H. Packard, Peter Davis, Oliver D. Appleton, Robert W. Smith.

Constables, Ahira S. Porter, Frank F. Porter, Andrew Jackson (2d).

Keeper of Lockup, Solomon Leighton.

1884.

Mayor, Hon. Ziba C. Keith.

Aldermen: Ward 1, John J. Whipple; Ward 2, Rufus P. Kingman; Ward 3, Preston B. Keith; Ward 4, Isaac S. Emerson; Ward 5, George G. Snow; Ward 6, Charles H. Cary; Ward 7, Albert R. Wade.

City Clerk, D. W. C. Packard.

Common Council: Ward 1, Elmer W. Walker, Charles W. Tilton, Oliver O. Patten; Ward 2, Sewall P. Howard, Henry S. Porter, Lucius Richmond; Ward 3, Iiram A. Monk, Jonas Reynolds, John F. Cooper; Ward 4, James O'Reilly, George W. Cobb, Lyman E. Keith; Ward 5, Oliver F. Leach, Gideon F. Swain, Everett E. Joyce; Ward 6, John W. Porter, Harrison Morse, Edwin Sawtell; Ward 7, Benjamin F. Battles, Charles E. Stone, Eugene Lineham. President, Elmer W. Walker; Clerk, George W. Cobb.

Joint Standing Committees.

Finance: The mayor, Aldermen Kingman and Keith, the president of the Common Council, Councilmen Reynolds, Leach, Howard, and Richmond.

Claims: The mayor, Alderman Kingman, the president of the Common Council, Councilmen Monk and Patten.

Accounts: Aldermen Wade and Whipple, Councilmen H. S. Porter, Linehan, and Joyce.

Public Property: Aldermen Whipple and Cary, Councilmen Tilton, Leach, and O'Reilly.

Water: Aldermen Cary and Wade, the president of the Common Council, Councilmen Sawtell and Keith.

Fuel and Street Lights: Aldermen Keith and Emerson, Councilmen Battles, Patten, and Cooper.

Fire Department: Aldermen Emerson and Whipple, Councilmen H. S. Porter, Stone, and Tilton.

Highways: Aldermen Keith and Cary, Councilmen J. W. Porter, Morse, and Swain.

Printing: Alderman Emerson, Councilmen Battles and Cobb.

Ordinances: Aldermen Snow and Wade, Councilmen Richmond, Linehan, and Joyce.

Sewerage and Drainage: Aldermen Whipple and Kingman, Councilmen Howard, Stone, and Monk.

Standing Committees of the Board of Aldermen.

Police: The mayor and Aldermen Kingman and Cary.

Elections and Returns: Aldermen Wade and Keith.

Enrolled Ordinances: Aldermen Snow and Emerson.

Licenses: Aldermen Cary, Keith, and Kingman.

Health: Aldermen Whipple, Keith, and Kingman.

State Aid and Soldiers' Relief: Aldermen Emerson, Whipple, and Wade.

Standing Committees of the Common Council.

Elections and Returns: Councilmen Cooper, Keith, and H. S. Porter.

Enrolled Ordinances and Resolutions: Councilmen Reynolds, Sawtell, and Swain.

City Treasurer, Henry A. Ford.

Auditor, Baalis Sanford.

City Solicitor, Hosea Kingman.

City Physician, Fred. J. Ripley.

City Messenger, Charles C. Rogers.

Superintendent of Streets, Henry B. Packard.

Water Commissioners, Walter F. Cleaveland, Charles C. Bixby, Francis B. Gardner.

Engineers of Fire Department: Davis R. Eldred, chief; Zenas W. Marston, 2d asst. (for three years); Nehemiah S. Holmes, 1st asst., Charles Eaton, 3d asst. (for two years); William H. Jacobs, 4th asst., Alexander Fanning, 5th asst. (for one year).

Inspector of Milk, Petroleum, and Vinegar, Portus B. Hancock.
 Sealer of Weights and Measures, George F. Perkins.
 Measurers of Wood and Bark, Isaac Harris, Horace Baker, Hovenden L. Howard.
 Surveyors of Lumber, Cephas Soule and Charles S. Johnson.
 Assessors, William Rankin, Noah Chesman, Elbridge G. Hale.
 Assistant Assessors: Ward 1, Francis B. Washburn; Ward 2, Charles E. Lambert; Ward 3, Zina Hayward; Ward 4, Daniel Dunbar; Ward 5, Isaac Kingman; Ward 6, David Burke; Ward 7, Ellis Brett.
 City Marshal, George A. Wheeler.
 First Assistant Marshal, George M. Tower.
 Second Assistant Marshal, Uriah Macey.
 Policemen, Oliver D. Appleton, Roswell C. Amsden, Peter Davis, Zenas W. Lewis, Robert W. Smith, Oliver L. Joy, Sidney H. Packard.
 Constables, Ahira S. Porter, Frank F. Porter, Thomas Drohan.
 Overseers of the Poor, Henry A. Ford, Isaac Kingman, Francis B. Gardner (clerk).
 Board of Health, Harvey F. Bird (chairman), Elisha H. Joslyn, Fred. J. Ripley.
 School Committee, Hon. Ziba C. Keith (chairman ex officio), S. Franklin Packard, Cyrus F. Copeland, Martha J. Farwell (for three years), William Rankin, William A. Sanford, Arthur E. Kendrick (for two years), Jonathan White, Baalis Sanford, David L. Cowell (for one year).
 Trustees of the Public Library, David L. Cowell, Alfred Laws, Warren T. Copeland (for three years), William W. Wilkins, Loring W. Puffer, M. R. Dustin (for two years), Jonathan White, Edward Parker, Jr., D. W. C. Packard for one year.

Representatives from Brockton since the formation of the city :

William L. Douglas, 1882-83; Enos H. Reynolds, 1882-83.

Among those who have been instrumental in advancing the city's prosperity and in an official capacity served its interests, are Franklin Ames, Ziba C. Keith, and W. H. Wales.

No history of Brockton, or sketch of the lives of those men who have contributed to the advancement of the social and material growth of this locality would be complete with the name of the late Hon. Franklin Ames omitted.

He was born in North Bridgewater, now Brockton, Sept. 30, 1806, and with the exception of a brief absence resided in his native town during his entire life.

Mr. Ames was a man of marked prominence in this town. Possessing a genial and affable disposition, a taste and an ability for the discharge of public duties, a judgment well balanced and almost uniformly correct in its results, and an integrity of character that was never touched by whisper or reflection, it is not strange that he was selected even early in life by his fellow-citizens as one fitted to assume and administer public trusts in a variety of town relations. For nearly twenty years, commencing in 1836, he was practically the postmaster of the town, performing all the duties belonging to that position, though the office itself was held by Edward Southworth, Jr. In 1838 he was chosen town clerk and treasurer, and was re-elected almost without opposition to both offices, as also collector of taxes, until 1855, a period of sixteen years; and nowhere in the public records are evidences of greater care and accuracy than through the volumes where his broad and beautiful handwriting is found. In 1856 he was called by his fellow-townsmen to a position of still greater responsibility, being elected that year as one of the selectmen, and by vote of his colleagues as chairman of the board. By this action, and in accordance with the usages of the times, almost the entire administration of the public affairs of the town was placed in his hands, and that he proved equal to the place is shown in the fact that he was annually re-elected till 1864, when he accepted a position offered him through the intervention of Governor Andrew, as paymaster in the United States army with the rank of major.

The happy termination of the war soon after gave to him but a brief period of service, but the promptness and fidelity with which he discharged his duties in this capacity won for him the special commendations of the officers of the army with whom he was associated.

A notable incident occurred during the time he was paymaster, illustrating the confidence reposed in him by the government. He was commissioned to take $4,000,000 from New York and Philadelphia to New Orleans. He accepted the trust, and unaccompanied by an escort, conveyed this large sum of money safely to the "Crescent City." He was also United States Assessor and a member of the Governor's Council.

Returning to civil life, he became interested in a slate quarry in Pennsylvania, which promised to be of value, and in 1865 decided to remove thither with his family. The severance of social ties which bound him to his native town cost him many a struggle, and he brought himself to it only by cherishing the hope and expectation that after a temporary absence he and his might return to their old home again.

They returned to their native town in April, 1881, and three months later, August 1st, Mr. Ames passed away in the seventy-fifth year of his age, leaving a wife and two children.

He married May 20, 1832, Martha Kingman, daughter of Capt. Thomas Thompson, and their children were as follows: Thomas Franklin, born July 19, 1835, died March 8, 1854, drowned at sea; Martha Augusta, born May 12, 1844; died at the age of sixteen; Charlotte Thompson, born May 14, 1847, married Joel P. Bradford, of Fairhaven, Mass.;

Franklin Ames

Liza C. Keith

Lizzie Strawbridge, born July 22, 1851, married S. J. Gruver, M.D., and resides in Brockton.

Franklin Ames left behind him a name and record unsullied by any questionable transaction in all his public and official career, while in private life he was a citizen commanding the universal esteem and confidence of his fellow-men and a Christian whose life exemplified the principles of the gospel.

Ziba C. Keith was born in 1842, in the old homestead at the junction of Main and Plain Streets and the East Bridgewater road, Campello, under whose roof-tree six generations of the family have lived and died. His father was Capt. Ziba Keith, the well-known commander of a company of militia years ago, in the days of old-fashioned musters. In boyhood Mr. Keith attended the schools in his native town, and afterwards the Pierce Academy at Middleboro'. Entering upon a business life, he was for five years book-keeper and salesman in the office of his brother, Martin L. Keith, in Boston. In 1864 he returned to Campello, and in partnership with Embert Howard (now of the firm of Howard & Caldwell) opened a general store for the sale of everything, from groceries to dry goods. The firm was known as Howard & Keith. After a couple of years he sold out to Jonas Reynolds, buying the business back again at the end of six months. For a year or two H. N. P. Hubbard conducted the dry goods department of the business, then Mr. Keith purchased the entire control, and continued the business until 1882.

In 1875, Mr. Keith was a successful competitor with Hon. Jonathan White for the honor of being the Republican nominee for representative. The result was quite close, and intense interest shown, some eight hundred ballots being cast. Mr. Keith was elected, served his term, and was re-elected the following year. In 1879 he was elected and served as a member of the board of selectmen.

He was elected the first mayor of the city in 1881. He was renominated and defeated by six votes. He again received the nomination in 1883, and was elected by over six hundred majority, and is the present mayor.

Mr. Keith has never been a lay figure in the social or business circles of the town. He is a member of the South Congregational Church, and prominently identified with commandery, chapter, and lodge of the local Masonic fraternity. He was largely instrumental in organizing the Campello Co-operative Bank, which has done so much to build up that part of the town, and foster among workingmen an ambition to own and occupy homes of their own, and is now treasurer of the association. Mr. Keith is also vice-president of the Brockton Savings-Bank, and a director in the Brockton National Bank; also treasurer of the street railway company. He has also been largely interested in building movements at the South End.

Ziba C. Keith is as universally liked and esteemed as any man in town. No one could meet him and know him without being impressed with his sterling integrity of character, while admiring his frankness and kindly bearing towards every one, irrespective of station or nationality. Mr. Keith has acknowledged executive ability. While in the Legislature, Mr. Keith always sided with prohibitory measures. As a member of the license board of selectmen of 1879 he was one of the minority, voting against the granting of licenses. While he is in favor of all possible restrictions of the liquor traffic, he still believes that spirituous liquors should be sold at some place or places for medicinal and mechanical purposes. He favored the Gothenberg plan, during its continuance, as an improvement upon indiscriminate or general licensing. He is a temperance man, but not a radical prohibitionist.

Dec. 31, 1865, Mr. Keith united in marriage with Miss Abbie F. Jackson, and has one son, William C. Keith.

Welcome Howard Wales, son of John and Olive (Howard) Wales, was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Jan. 20, 1821, at the old Wales homestead, which was located on the site now occupied by the residence of R. P. Kingman, Esq., corner of Main and Belmont Streets. During the years which immediately followed his majority, Mr. Wales engaged in machine manufacture, and continued in this business until the year 1862. At the town election in March, 1862, he was chosen to the office of town clerk, a position for which he was especially adapted. Upon assuming control of the office he determined to discharge its duties with an eye single to the public welfare, and how faithful he was to the trust imposed is evidenced by the fact that he was re-elected annually for a period of sixteen successive years, and oftentimes by a substantially unanimous vote. His sphere of usefulness, however, was not confined to this office alone. In 1864 he was chosen collector of taxes, and held the position until his death, and so well did he discharge the delicate and difficult duties of this office that he was designated as the "model collector." He represented the town in the Legislature in 1869 and 1871, and in 1873 was chosen a selectman, and re-elected each succeeding year. He was also chairman of the selectmen several years. It was his constant aim to please those with whom he came in contact, and to perform in a conscientious manner the various trusts which devolved upon him.

In his death the town lost an experienced and valued servant, and the public one who was ardently interested in all that pertained to the advancement of the various interests of Brockton.

Oct. 16, 1845, Mr. Wales united in marriage with Lois, daughter of John W. and Almira C. Kingman, and their family consisted of one child, Abbie Penn, born Aug. 28, 1848, and died Feb. 8, 1866. Mr. Wales died July 2, 1879.

CHAPTER XXV.

BANKS.

North Bridgewater Bank—North Bridgewater Savings-Bank—Brockton Savings-Bank—Security Co-operative Bank—Campello Co-operative Bank—Home National Bank—Brockton National Bank.

THE business of the town of Brockton had increased to such an extent, and the wants of the people were such, as to induce a few public-spirited individuals to petition the Legislature for a charter to do banking business, which was granted to Messrs. Bela Keith, Benjamin Kingman, and Jesse Perkins, March 28, 1854, with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars, divided into shares of one hundred dollars each. The bank was organized under the name of the North Bridgewater Bank, with the following officers, namely: Martin Wales, of Stoughton, president; Rufus P. Kingman, cashier; Benjamin Kingman, Frederick Howard, Chandler Sprague, William F. Brett, Ebenezer Tucker, and Pardon Copeland, directors. In 1857, Mr. Brett resigned his office, and in 1860, Elijah Howard, of Easton, was elected to fill the vacancy.

The first bills were issued from this institution Sept. 4, 1854. For some years it was in successful operation, and proved a valuable addition to the business facilities of the town, and a mark of the enterprise of her citizens. Previous to the establishment of this bank the business people, wishing banking accommodations, were obliged to go out of town for the same.

This bank ceased doing business in 1866.

North Bridgewater Savings-Bank.—The beneficent spirit of the present age is in nothing more remarkably displayed than in the combined energy with which individuals of the highest rank in society are laboring to promote the welfare of the lower order. The advantages that have arisen, both to the individual contributors and the public, by these institutions have been great. The first attempt made to give effect to a plan for enabling the laboring poor to provide support for themselves in sickness, as well as old age, was in 1789. Again, in 1808, a bill was introduced in the "House of Commons" for promoting industry among the laboring classes, and for the relief of the poor, which was as follows:

"WHEREAS, such of the laboring poor as are desirous of making out of their earnings some savings, as a future provision for themselves or their families, are discouraged from so doing by the difficulty of placing out securely the small sums which they are able to save; and believing it would tend to promote habits of industry and frugality, and encourage the poor to make a provision for themselves and their families, if an establishment was formed in which they might invest their money with security and advantage."

These institutions are in general intended for that class of poor but industrious persons who deserve help by endeavoring to help themselves, the primary object not being for gain, but benevolence, and are for the benefit of the widow, the orphan, and the aged.

Many a penny that is now safely deposited in the vaults of these savings institutions in the country might have gone where the possessor would never have seen them again; for this reason savings-banks are a great blessing to the community.

In the city of Brockton there were individuals that looked to the interests of others as well as themselves, and having at the same time an eye to the interests of the community generally, they petitioned for an act of incorporation as a savings-bank, which was granted to Messrs. Franklin Ames, Edward Southworth, and George B. Dunbar, April 24, 1851, under the name of the North Bridgewater Savings-Bank. The following were the officers of the institution at the time of its organization in 1851, namely: Col. Edward Southworth, president; Franklin Ames, George B. Dunbar, vice-presidents; Edward Southworth, Jr., secretary and treasurer; Edward Southworth, Lorenzo D. Hervey, Henry V. French, Franklin Ames, Algernon S. Sylvester, Oakes S. Soule, George B. Dunbar, Edward Southworth, Jr., trustees.

By the death of Edward Southworth, Jr., March 3, 1877, Rufus P. Kingman, Esq., was elected treasurer of the above bank, and after a careful examination into the condition of affairs, it was found necessary to appoint receivers and close up the institution. On the 13th of November of that year, Rufus P.

Eng. by A.H. Fitch

W. H. Hall

Albert Keith

Kingman, Esq., of Brockton, and Ellis Ames, Esq., of Canton, were appointed by the Supreme Court to wind up the affairs, which has been done in a highly creditable manner to the receivers as well as pleasing to the depositors, resulting in a series of dividends amounting to ninety-four and forty-six hundredths per cent.

Brockton Savings-Bank.—On the third day of March, 1881, the Legislature of Massachusetts incorporated the following persons into a savings-bank, viz.: J. J. Whipple, W. W. Cross, Davis S. Packard, L. F. Severance, E. H. Joslyn, D. S. Volman, Henry A. Ford, Henry E. Lincoln, George E. Freeman, Ziba C. Keith, George E. Keith, Loring W. Puffer, B. O. Caldwell, Sanford Winter, H. H. Packard, their associates and successors, were made a corporation by the name of the Brockton Savings-Bank, located in the city of Brockton. They commenced business May 1, 1881, with the following officers: President, Sanford Winter; Vice-Presidents, John J. Whipple, Ziba C. Keith; Treasurer, Clarence R. Fillebrown; Trustees, Sanford Winter, John J. Whipple, Ziba C. Keith, William W. Cross, Henry A. Ford, George E. Keith, George E. Freeman, Lorenzo F. Severance, Patrick Gilmore, Rev. Thomas B. McNulty, David S. Packard, Sumner A. Hayward, Gardner J. Kingman, Bradford E. Jones, Charles W. Sumner, Elisha H. Joslyn, Henry H. Packard; Board of Investment, Davis S. Packard, Sumner A. Hayward, Bradford E. Jones, Gardner J. Kingman, John J. Whipple.

The officers for 1884 are John J. Whipple, president; Ziba C. Keith and Bradford E. Jones, vice-presidents; Enos H. Reynolds, in place of Sumner A. Hayward, deceased,—otherwise the same as at the commencement.

Security Co-operative Bank.—This organization was chartered as the "Security Savings Fund and Loan Association of Brockton." The title was changed by law in 1883. The original officers were as follows: Baalis Sanford, Jr., president; Henry H. Packard, Francis B. Washburn, and Otis F. Curtis, vice-presidents; Daniel S. Howard, Lorenzo F. Severance, Bradford E. Jones, William H. Tobey, H. Herbert Howard, Embert Howard, William H. Savage, Leonard C. Stetson, Sanford Winter, Emerson Goldthwait, John O. Emerson, John J. Whipple, Benjamin O. Caldwell, James H. Cooper, Augustus B. Loring, Harry O. Thomas, directors. William W. Cross, secretary; Charles D. Fullerton, treasurer; Gorham B. Howard, George H. Fullerton, Albert H. Fuller, auditors; Hamilton L. Gibbs, attorney.

Campello Co-operative Bank (formerly Campello Co-operative Saving Fund and Loan Association), organized Sept. 21, 1877; chartered Oct. 3, 1877; authorized capital, $100,000. Albert Keith, pres.; Daniel Dunbar, vice-pres.; Warren T. Copeland, sec.; Ziba C. Keith, treas. Charter members: Charles Henry Cole, Ziba Cary Keith, Minot Leonard Danforth, John Henderson, Hiram Alexander Monk, George Mortimer Skinner, Fred. Herbert Packard, Lucas Wales Alden, Lewis Delmar Stinchfield, Joshua Reed, Austin Cary Packard, Edmund Barclay Fanning, Albert Keith, Nathan Henry Washburn, Benjamin Loring Boomer, Stephen Merick Thrasher, Daniel Dunbar, Sylvanus Keith, Walter Chamberlain, Simeon Franklin Packard, William Snow Green, George Elden Keith, William Henry Southworth, Warren Turner Copeland, Charles Augustus Dunbar, William Dexter Pierce, Preston Bond Keith, Gardner Josiah Kingman, William Richards, Isaac Stevens Emerson, Lyman Carlson, Howard Warren Reynolds, George Sawyer, Rufus Perkins Keith, Flavel Bailey Keith, John Harvey Cole, Edgar S. Putnam, Ernest Everett Emerson, Joseph Emery Merchant, Damon Kingman, Thomas Webber Child, Otis Cobb, Nathan Keith.

Present officers: George Elden Keith, pres.; Preston Bond Keith, vice-pres.; Warren Turner Copeland, sec.; Ziba Cary Keith, treas.

The president of this association from its organization to 1883, Albert Keith, one of the leading and honored citizens of Campello, was born in that village Dec. 31, 1823. He is the son of Arza and Marcia (Kingman) Keith. His mother was the daughter of Abel Kingman, Esq., who was commissioned justice of the peace Feb. 22, 1811. The subject of this sketch is descended from Rev. James Keith, the first ordained minister of Bridgewater, the line of descent being as follows: Timothy<sup>1</sup>, Timothy<sup>2</sup>, Levi<sup>3</sup>, Benj.<sup>4</sup>, Arza<sup>5</sup>, Albert<sup>6</sup>.

Arza Keith was one of the first shoe manufacturers in this town, and with him young Albert worked until about seventeen years of age, when he went to Foxboro', and entered the store of Otis Cary as clerk, where he remained five years. He then went into the mercantile business on his own account at Attleboro', which he conducted until 1851, when he sold out, and, returning to his native town, formed a copartnership with his brother, Arza B., in the shoe manufacture, and in the following year their factory was erected. Mr. Keith continued in this branch of business until 1871, when he disposed of his interest to his brother, and from that time until 1882 was engaged in the coal and grain trade. Mr. Keith's success has been largely due to his energy, industry, and determination, coupled with good judgment and clear business foresight. He has been especially active in advancing the interests of Campello, and has labored industriously to that end. He was appointed postmaster at Campello in 1873, and has held the office to the present time. He was selectman one year, member of the school board seven years, assessor two years, and was commissioned justice of the peace in 1874, a position he still holds. He also represented the town in the General Court in 1880 and 1881. Upon the organization of the Co-operative Bank at Campello, in 1877, Mr. Keith was chosen its president, and continued in that capacity until 1883. He is Republican in politics.

In 1842 he became a member of the South Congregational Church, and has been prominently identified with it since, serving on the committee twelve years, and for ten years officiated as superintendent of the Sunday-school.

April 1, 1847, Mr. Keith united in marriage with Charlotte Pearce, of Attleboro', and their family consisted of five children,—Marcia Adelaide (deceased), Alice Maria, Herbert (deceased), Charlotte R., and Lillian M. Mrs. Keith died May 29, 1874; and July 14, 1875, he married Cynthia Bonney, of Hadley, Mass., who died Feb. 12, 1876. March 13, 1878, Mr. Keith united in marriage with his present wife, Mrs. Susan J. Allen, of Springville, N. Y.

Home National Bank.—Prior to 1874 there had been no National Bank in the city. Feeling the necessity of increased facilities for banking accommodations, the Home National Bank was chartered, and its existence authorized on June 8th of that year. Its first officers were Rufus P. Kingman, president, C. D. Fullerton, cashier. Its authorized capital was placed at $200,000. There have been, but few changes in its officers, Mr. Kingman retaining the presidency to the present time (1884). Fred B. Howard is its cashier. Its location is corner Main and Church Streets.

Probably no living resident has been more active in contributing to the advancement of the interests of Brockton, or more closely connected with its success, than Rufus P. Kingman, Esq., the president of the Home National Bank.

Rufus Packard Kingman is the son of Benjamin and Rebecca (Packard) Kingman, born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass., Nov. 4, 1821, and is in the seventh generation in a direct line from Henry and Joanna Kingman, who came from Weymouth, England, in 1635, and settled in Weymouth, Mass. His education was in the schools of his native town, and under the private instruction of Mrs. Nathan Jones, Miss Julia Perry, Deacon Heman

Packard, and Jonathan Coe. At the age of twelve years he entered upon the duties incident to life in a hotel, his father then being the only hotel-keeper in the town, which was from 1833 to 1837. Soon after this time, upon the retirement of his father from the hotel, he assisted in conducting his father's farm till he arrived at the age of eighteen. In 1840 he entered the dry-goods and variety store of William F. Brett, then the leading store in the town, which was in the hotel building, where "Washburn's block" now stands. Here he remained till 1846, when he became a partner in the business, under the firm-name of Brett & Kingman, giving his entire time and energy to the business till 1854, at which time he retired on account of feeble health.

It was while engaged in the above business, in 1850, that Mr. Kingman erected the first brick block in the city, on the lot adjoining the hotel on Main Street, known as "Kingman's block."

During the year 1854, shortly after his retirement from the store, the first bank in the town was organized, and Mr. Kingman was called to the position of cashier. In this he remained till the new banking law of the United States came into operation, which required a two-thirds vote of the stockholders to change it into a national bank. Failing to obtain the required vote, the bank closed its doors in 1866.

While acting as cashier, the town showed their confidence in Mr. Kingman by electing him to the office of treasurer in 1856, and their confidence in him was renewed for nine successive years, when he retired. In 1872 he was elected assessor of town taxes, and re-elected in 1873-74. In 1874 the business of the town had become so extensive that the wants of her many merchants and manufacturers were such that they felt a pressing need of banking facilities, and a new bank was chartered under the national banking law by the name of the Home National Bank, and Mr. Kingman was elected its first president, which position he now fills with honor to himself and for the interest of the stockholders.

Upon the death of Hon. Edward Southworth, in 1876, Mr. Kingman was appointed treasurer of the North Bridgewater Savings-Bank, and after a careful examination into the condition of the affairs of the bank, it was thought best to wind up its business. Accordingly Mr. Kingman and Ellis Ames, Esq., of Canton, were appointed by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts as receivers to close the same, which, under their judicious management, has been able to pay the depositors 94 $\frac{1}{10}$ % per cent.

In 1881, the last year of the town's existence, Mr. Kingman was elected one of the selectmen of the town, and was prominent in arranging the affairs for the incoming of the new city government. During the year 1881, when the town of Brockton took on the robes of a city, Mr. Kingman was elected alderman of Ward Two, and upon the organization of that board he was made president of the same, which position he now holds, very much to his credit; and his having been elected from the first to the same position, without opposition, speaks for itself. Upon the death of his father, April 13, 1870, Mr. Kingman was immediately appointed to succeed him as the agent of the Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and afterwards, in 1871, was elected a director of the same.

R. Kingman

Davis S. Packard

Upon the establishment of the North Bridgewater Board of Trade, Mr. Kingman was elected director, and in 1874 he was one of the corporate members of Brockton Agricultural Society, and was chosen one of the first directors, and for two years treasurer of the society, and is now vice-president of the same.

At the organization of the Commercial Club, in January, 1883, he was elected its president.

As a man, Mr. Kingman is plain, honest, straightforward, firm, and decided when decision is needed; a person of excellent judgment in all matters of business, and his large experience in financial affairs in which he has been so successful for himself has shown him to be the right kind of a man to be in the councils of the city government. He has no ambition for public honor nor notoriety, and never active in the strifes of political life, although he is ever ready by his vote to promote the public good. In politics he has been a firm Whig as well as Republican, and belongs to a family well known for their being prominent in all affairs of a local nature. Mr. Kingman has often been intrusted with matters of great importance, where honesty and integrity is needed, and has never been found wanting.

In his private life he is most genial and interesting, fond of company, possessing no small share of wit, always cheerful and buoyant, and is quick at repartee; naturally fond of home, he is the life of the social circle, tender and affectionate.

Mr. Kingman married Abby, only child of Capt. Winthrop Sears and Sally (Hawes) Baker, of Yarmouth, Mass., Aug. 30, 1852.

Brockton National Bank.—The Brockton National Bank was organized in 1881, and was incorporated with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars. Davis S. Packard was its first president, and C. R. Fillebrown its first cashier. They are the present incumbents of their respective offices. The first board of directors were Davis S. Packard, president; William W. Cross, vice-president; Henry E. Lincoln, John J. Whipple, Sumner A. Hayward, George E. Keith, Ziba C. Keith, Charles W. Sumner, James C. Leach, I. N. Nutter, Gardner J. Kingman. Its location is in the City Block on Main Street.

The president of the Brockton National Bank is Davis S. Packard, one of the leading manufacturers and business men of Brockton, and was born here June 24, 1826. He attended the common schools of his native town, and at an early age commenced the business of a boot-maker, which honorable vocation he followed with close application until 1858, when, in company with Aberdeen Keith, he commenced the manufacture of boot- and shoe-counters under the firm-name of Keith & Packard. This copartnership continued until 1876, when Mr. Packard purchased the interest of Mr. Keith, and conducted the business as sole proprietor until 1879, when he associated with him Veramus Filoon and Abbott W. Packard, under the firm-name of D. S. Packard & Co. The growth of this manufacture, of which Mr. Packard has ever been the moving spirit, has been almost phenomenal. From a product the first year amounting to about ten thousand dollars, the business has increased until at the present time the annual product amounts to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and where only about five persons were employed in the beginning, the pay-roll now shows twenty-five. This is one of the representative institutions of Brockton, and its success is largely due to the clear business foresight and executive ability of Davis S. Packard. Other interests also have received Mr. Packard's attention, and profited by his excellent judgment. Upon the organization of the Brockton National Bank, in February, 1881, he was made its president, and has remained in that capacity to the present time. He is also a trustee in the Brockton Savings-Bank, and president of the Board of Investment.

While Mr. Packard has been actively engaged in the management of large business interests, he has never shrank from the duties of citizenship, and has served his town and city faithfully and well, and discharged the duties of the various positions to which he has been called to the entire satisfaction of his fellow-citizens. He was selectman in 1875, 1876, 1878, and represented the city in the State Legislature in 1881 and 1882; and on April 8, 1884, was elected a commissioner of the sinking fund.

Oct. 1, 1849, Mr. Packard united in marriage with Minerva Bradford, a native of Plympton, and they had one child, Alice May, who married James T. Sherman, M.D., of Dorchester, Mass., and died April 13, 1878. Mrs. Packard died Sept. 11, 1857.

In 1870, Mr. Packard married Emma S. Gurney, a native of Arlington, Mass., and their children are as follows: Sumner T., born July 4, 1874; Ruth B., born March 9, 1876; and Emma S., born May 16, 1880. Mrs. Packard died June 4, 1880.

The Packard family is one of the most ancient and honorable in the commonwealth. Davis S. Packard traces his ancestry to Samuel Packard, who came from Windham near Hingham, England, in the ship "Diligence." He first settled in Hingham, Mass., in 1638, and from thence removed to West Bridgewater. All of this name who have gone from the Bridgewater were doubtless descendants of his, and nearly all of the name in this country can be traced to that place. The line of descent from Samuel is as follows: Zaccheus, Capt. Abiel, Thomas, Capt. Parmenas, Appollos, and Davis S.

CHAPTER XXVI.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

Rev. James Thompson—Rev. John Porter, Jr.—Rev. Huntington Porter—Rev. Eliphalet Porter—Rev. Thomas Crafts—Rev. Asa Packard—Rev. Hezekiah Packard—Rev. Joshua Cushman—Rev. Naptali Shaw—Rev. Theophilus Packard, D.D.—Rev. Jonas Perkins—Rev. Eliphalet P. Crafts—Rev. Levi Packard—Rev. Austin Cary—Rev. Zachariah Howard—Rev. Nathaniel Wales—Rev. Mathew Kingman—Thomas Jefferson Snow—Samuel Fuller Dike—Frederic Crafts, A.M.—Deacon Heman Packard—Rev. Abel Kingman Packard—Rev. Lysander Dickerman—Rev. Zenas P. Wild—Rev. Azariah B. Wheeler—Rev. Adelbert Franklin Keith—Professor Henry B. Nason—Hon. Otis Cary—Augustus T. Jones, A.M.—Rev. Heman Packard De Forest—S. D. Hunt.

REV. JAMES THOMPSON was the son of Archibald Thompson, who came from Ireland to America in 1724; graduated at the New Jersey College, Princeton, N. J., in 1761; became a clergyman; preached only a short time; was a preceptor of an academy at Charleston, S. C.

REV. JOHN PORTER, JR., was the son of Rev. John and Mary (Huntington) Porter; was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Feb. 27, 1752; graduated at Yale College, New Haven, Conn., in 1770; studied divinity, and became a minister. Soon after the war broke out between England and America, in 1775, he received a captain's commission and went into the army, where he is said to have been a superior officer. From captain he was promoted to major; left the army but a short time before peace was declared. He afterward went to the West Indies, and there died.

REV. HUNTINGTON PORTER was the son of Rev.

John and Mary (Huntington) Porter; was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), March 27, 1755; graduated at Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass., in 1777; married Susannah Sargent, of Haverhill, Mass.; commenced preaching at Rye, N. H., in August, 1784, supplying the pulpit till Dec. 29, 1784; he was ordained a colleague pastor with Rev. Samuel Parsons. He continued to preach in that place for upwards of fifty years. The people of this society were for a long series of years remarkable for their unanimity in their religious as well as civil concerns, and for more than thirty years there was no division. All attended his church; union and peace was the prevailing sentiment among the people. After that time other denominations sprang up; still he continued to labor until 1828, when the civil contract between him and his society was dissolved. He continued to preach occasionally for several years after that time, till near the close of his life.

REV. ELIPHALET PORTER, D.D., was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), June 11, 1758; was son of Rev. John and Mary (Huntington) Porter; graduated at Harvard College, 1777; was settled as pastor of the "First Church" in Roxbury, Mass., Oct. 2, 1782. He was called to supply a vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Amos Adams, who died in 1775. Of his pastoral labors, we may say they were well suited to the times in which he lived. Frequent visits for social intercourse were not expected, and for these he had neither taste nor fitness; his manners were grave and did not encourage familiarity, nor had he that easy flow of language so essential to sustain a conversation on the familiar topics of the day. But in the chamber of the sick, or wherever there was affliction which the sympathies of a pastor could alleviate, he was a constant and welcome visitor. Says one who knew him well, "Few men ever spoke with more meaning or to so good a purpose. He did not dazzle, but he enlightened; and the weight of his influence and character, and the remarkable purity and uprightness of his life, gave an influence and interest to whatever he said, and impressed his sententious remarks deeply on the mind." As a citizen, his influence was widely and beneficially felt; he had frequent calls for assistance and counsel in the secular affairs of the town. In the various offices of trust to which he was often called, whether for objects of charity or for the promotion of education or religion, they were fulfilled with a characteristic caution, prudence, and fidelity, which obtained and justified unlimited confidence. In 1818 he was elected Fellow of Harvard College. The period of his connection with this institution was one of great difficulty, yet he took his full share of the labors and responsibilities incident to his official position. He was a warm, constant friend of the college, and the notices of his death on the records of the corporation manifest the strong sense of "the great loss our literary and religious community have sustained by the death of this learned divine and exemplary Christian, whose intelligence, fidelity, and zeal in support of the interests of literature, and especially of those connected with the prosperity of Harvard University, they have had uniform occasion to witness during the many years he has been one of the members of this board." As a preacher, Dr. Porter exhibited few, if any, of the characteristics of a popular preacher of the present day, although few modern preachers of to-day are listened to more attentively or regarded with more reverence than he was. He was not excitable; therefore he was not likely to produce excitement in others. There was a calmness and solemnity in his manner which gave to his discourses a peculiar impressiveness. He never was dogmatical or bigoted; he had clear and settled opinions on the controverted points of theology, and was always ready to sustain them; but he had no taste for controversy, and therefore rarely preached on subjects which occasioned it. He regarded the religious opinions of others without prejudice, and never allowed a difference of opinion to interrupt Christian fellowship. Dr. Porter died at Roxbury, Dec. 7, 1833, aged seventy-six years. The funeral was held in his church Dec. 11, 1833, Rev. Dr. Lowell offering the funeral prayer. Rev. George Putnam, D.D., preached the funeral sermon from Genesis xxv. 8: "He died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people." Rev. John Pierce, D.D., of Brookline, made the concluding prayer.

REV. THOMAS CRAFTS was the son of Dr. John Staples Crafts (from Newton); was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton); graduated at Harvard College, 1783; married Polly, daughter of Rev. John Porter, Dec. 28, 1786; settled at Princeton, Mass., 1786, and dismissed in 1791, and settled at Middleboro'. After remaining at Princeton several years, his physicians decided that his life depended on his leaving the ministry and engaging in more active or some out-of-door pursuit. He consequently removed to Weymouth, Mass., where he entered into commercial business, and was quite successful. After his health had become somewhat improved he received a call to preach from the Middleboro' and Taunton Precinct, and was installed in 1802, where he enjoyed a happy ministry for many years, and there died, Feb. 27, 1819, aged sixty years. His family then removed to North Bridgewater.

REV. ASA PACKARD was the son of Jacob and Dorothy (Perkins) Packard; was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), May 3, 1758. His life was a very eventful one. At the age of sixteen he entered the Revolutionary service as a fifer. In an engagement near Harlem Heights, in 1776, a companion who had made great boasts of his bravery seized Mr. Packard's fife, and, handing him his musket in return, fled to a place of safety, preferring, it would seem, the music he could make with a stolen fife to that made by the balls of the enemy. Mr. Packard, thus armed, engaged in the conflict, but soon received a wound which nearly proved fatal. The ball entered his back just above the hip, and though an attempt was made to extract it, yet so severe was the operation that the surgeon feared he would die in his hands, and so was induced to desist. A severe illness followed in consequence, and when sufficiently recovered he left the army and returned home, and commenced a course of studies preparatory to entering college. The ball he received was never extracted, but remained in his back during his life. Mr. Packard was a man of great facetiousness, and often alluded in pleasantry to the circumstance of his having fought and bled for his country. Once in a merry circle he said, "I bear about in my body a weighty testimonial of my bravery." To which a jovial companion replied, "I think from the position of the wound our hero must have been playing a retreat."

"Playing a retreat!" said Mr. Packard; "I had a musket in my hand, and was found skillful as a grenadier."

"I think," rejoined the other, "our friend must have been skilled in the motion 'to the right about face!' and must have performed it well when he received his wound."

The joke was appreciated by Mr. Packard and the rest of the company. Mr. Packard graduated at Harvard University in 1783; received a call, and settled in Marlboro', March 23, 1785,—a day long to be remembered, from the fact that the snow was so deep as to cover the tops of the fences, notwithstanding there had been a thaw which settled the snow, so that, in freezing, it became sufficiently solid to bear up a team. The people went to the ordination in their sleighs upon the crust across lots, over the tops of fences and walls without difficulty. The depth of snow was so remarkable that it became and continued for a long time a standard of comparison. He was settled on a salary of one hundred pounds "and twenty cords of good marketable oak wood, cut and brought to the door annually, so long as he remains our minister." They also voted him a settlement of three hundred pounds,—one half to be paid in one year, the other half in two years from his ordination. Mr. Packard was a man of sprightly talent, and was noted for his readiness rather than for his profundity. He had great conversational powers, and was remarkable for his eccentricity. His sermons were practical rather than doctrinal, and more distinguished for happy descriptions of life and manners than for connected views of gospel truths. He was liberal in his theological opinions, belonging to what is denominated the Arminian school. As Unitarianism developed itself in Massachusetts, he was considered as coinciding with that class of his brethren, though later in life his sentiments are supposed to have undergone some change. "Perhaps it will be more correct to say that he never formed for himself any definite system of doctrinal belief; his mind was more distinguished for its readiness than for its method, and seemed to have held opinions in regard to different doctrines which were not consistent with each other, and which could not have been blended into a logical system. Different persons who knew him well have, for this reason, claimed him with different denominations, since on some points his views seemed to coincide with Unitarians, and on others with the Orthodox standard of doctrine." These are the views entertained by one of the most distinguished preachers of New England on his theological opinions. Mr. Packard remained pastor of the first and the only parish in Marlboro' for about twenty years, and the people were happy under his ministry. In the year 1805 an unpleasant controversy arose in regard to the subject of locating a meeting-house, which ended in the erection of two houses, and ultimately in two parishes. During this controversy he remained neutral, both parties anxious to retain him; but he continued to remain in the old church, and being unwilling to take part in the dedication of the new house, and realizing that a majority had a right to command his services while he remained their pastor, he wisely asked a dismissal from the church and society as the best way of avoiding a public approval of the removal of the meeting-house, which was the sole cause of the unhappy feeling. On March 6, 1806, the matter was brought before the Marlboro' Association, and after due consideration it was decided by them that the town had a claim to Mr. Packard in the new house. "The association, while they lament the occasion for it, both on their own and the people's account, cannot but acquiesce in his determination to be dismissed." After much opposition, the West Parish in Marlboro' received an act of incorporation, Feb.

23, 1808, by the name of the Second Parish in Marlboro'; on the 23d of March, the same year, Rev. Asa Packard, who had labored with the society since his dismissal from the town, was installed over the West Parish, and retained his pastoral relation until May 12, 1819, when he took a dismissal and removed to Lancaster, where he resided till his death, which took place March 20, 1843, in the eighty-fifth year of his age. He was in his usual health in the morning, and on coming into the house, he sat down to listen to a letter from a distant brother; while it was being read he sunk back, and immediately expired.

REV. HEZEKIAH PACKARD, D.D., was born in North Bridgewater (now Brockton), Mass., Dec. 6, 1761, son of Jacob and Dorothy (Perkins) Packard, and was the youngest of ten children; and of his parents and their influence he used to speak with pleasure, affection, and respect. Being the youngest of the family, he, no doubt, experienced the indulgence common to the youngest of a large family. The humble circumstances of his father's family accustomed him to habits of active industry, rigid economy, and self-reliance. Their narrow means, together with their discretion, restrained him from associating with other lads. One amusement his parents indulged him in had an influence they little thought of. He says, "At what precise period I procured a fife I do not distinctly remember; but the acquisition was to me very gratifying and delightful. Martial music was very animating to me, and I soon learned several martial airs. The tunes sung and played during the incipient state of the Revolution had a wonderful influence. The exciting remarks made in favor of the Revolution had a thrilling effect upon my mind. I became anxious to attend musters and meetings for enlisting soldiers. The battle of Bunker Hill had an exciting influence. It seemed to electrify the whole community. On that memorable day I was in a neighbor's field, hoeing corn, and heard the roaring of the cannon. I was then in my fourteenth year. The captain of the militia lived near my father's, and as he knew the family were high Whigs, and that I had some skill with the fife, he appointed me a fifer in the company under his command. Soon after this he was drafted for five months, and solicited me to go with him as fifer, promising to use me as a son, which promise he always kept. Although young and fond of home, I never had any scruples or hesitation about enlisting, nor do I recollect that my parents opened their lips in the way of discouragement.

"Distinctly do I remember when my mother took my hand, and said, 'Hezekiah, remember, praying will make thee leave sinning, and sinning will make thee leave praying.' These words were to me full of meaning and of practical truth. Indeed, the devout desires and earnest prayers of my affectionate and pious parents were, as it appeared to me, preserved as memorials before God on my behalf; for, though I neglected prayer when a soldier, my moral habits were in other respects correct. I was averse to vices in the army to which youth are exposed; no profane word escaped my lips from the time I left my father's house till I returned to it again. I was more and more disgusted at the profaneness common among the soldiers, and even the officers, of the Revolution. My brother (the late Rev. Asa Packard, of Marlboro', Mass.) had already become a soldier in the eight months' service, and was stationed at Roxbury. The regiment to which I belonged was ordered to Cambridge, and we dwelt in tents near Cambridgeport. Soon after we pitched our tents and drew our provisions from College Hall, where beef, pork, etc., were kept for our army, and other arrangements were made for a campaign, and I felt myself a soldier in camp, I had a furlough for a day or two to visit my brother at Roxbury. From the time we marched into Boston, late in autumn, until the following June, Col. Sargent's regiment, in which my name was enrolled, was destined to occupy several stations. After being in Boston a few weeks we were ordered to Bunker Hill. In the spring of 1776 we were stationed at Castle William (now Fort Independence). Here we remained till June, when orders were given for us to march to New York. We went to New London by land, and from thence by water to New York. The regiment was stationed near Hurlgate.

"Six miles below the city, upon the banks of East River, opposite to our fort, on the other side of the river, the enemy built a fort to annoy us, the distance between the two forts being a little over a mile. A soldier, soon after the balls and bombs began to fly into our camp, walking proudly upon the parapet, boastfully exclaimed that the ball had not been made that was to kill him. Not many minutes after a ball came and almost cut him asunder, thus warning others not to expose themselves needlessly. This cannonading and bombarding continued for several weeks, killing some and wounding some. I remember an old man belonging to our camp who, seeing a bomb fall and bury itself in the ground a few rods from him, started hastily toward the spot hoping to save the powder, for which he would get a dollar; but just before he reached the place there was a tremendous explosion, and he was covered with dirt and nearly suffocated. He received, however, no serious injury, and was for a time the subject of facetious remark.

About the same time two young men belonging to the same mess found a bomb, the fuse of which had been somehow extinguished, and thoughtlessly attempted to open the vent with a pickaxe. This rash and inconsiderate attempt was fatal to both. A spark from the axe reached the powder, and these young men were awfully mangled by the explosion. One expired immediately, the other survived a few days. Soon after this there was a general excitement. Intelligence reached us that troops were leaving Long Island, and that the British were pressing upon them, orders being given for retreat, and New York was evacuated. It was the Sabbath, in the last of August or the first of September. The heat was extreme, the roads were crowded with troops, with men, women, and children, together with cattle, goods, and chattels, overspread with thick clouds of dust. The night following was dark and rainy. I slept under a blanket with my captain, who had always treated me like a son, according to the promise he made when I enlisted.

"The next morning, while the cooks were preparing breakfast and the soldiers were adjusting their packs and cleaning their guns, etc., after the rain, alarm-guns were heard; our army was aroused; the enemy were at hand. A detachment of one hundred and thirty-six in number, among them my brother, was sent out to check the enemy, and in a few hours he was on his way to the hospital at West Chester. On the same day was the battle of Harlaem Heights. Our regiment was near the centre of the line, extending from Hudson to East River. The line of battle was not far from King's bridge. The number of killed and wounded I do not remember. The sick and wounded were taken to the hospital. I visited my brother several times. His wound became alarming, and his surgeons gave no encouragement. We both nearly despaired of his restoration. At the second or third visit I took charge of a letter to our parents, in which he took leave of them and of the family, and we took leave of each other. I afterward went to the hospital, not knowing whether he was among the living, and found him somewhat relieved. His body was less swollen; his hopes of recovery revived. After this, as far as my memory serves, we did not see each other till we met at home in our father's house. In the autumn of that year I was sick, and destined to breathe the polluting, infectious air of the hospital, and suffered much for want of things comfortable. Having the itch shockingly, without the means of getting rid of that loathsome disease, and being reduced by other complaints without the medical aid I required, I thought much of home and a mother's cares; but I was a stranger in a strange land. The hospital was extremely filthy, its atmosphere pestilential. My case was so much neglected and my whole frame so diseased and shattered that I had serious apprehensions I should not long survive. My term of service expired at the end of the year; I was no longer a soldier.

